Pb.7.18

MANY COMMENTARIES IN ONE:

UPON,

Joſhuah. 1 and 2 of Samuel. Ezra.
Judges. 1 and 2 of Kings. Nehemiah.
Ruth. 1 and 2 of Chronicles. Eſther.

Setting forth,

The literall ſenſe (according to the Hebrew) and therby correcting Tranſlations where need requires, and clearing all obſcure paſſages; reconciling differences, and diving into the myſteries: The further fetcht, and leſſe uſefull, being rejected; the divers Expoſitions of divers being examined; the beſt preferred, and others confuted; and where none ſatiſfieth, new propounded.

Here are alſo many Obſervations for the uſe of edifying in Grace, all along inſerted.

Being for all this, inſtar omnium, for the ſingular benefit of all that be ſtudious of the Holy Scriptures.

Whereunto is added,

A Continuation of the Hiſtory of things moſt memorable (after NEHEMIAH his Principality) amongſt the Jews, and the Monarchs of the world, till the time of our SAVIOURS Paſſion, and Jeruſalems deſtruction.

Being both profitable for the underſtanding of divers Propheſies, and the manifold examples of Gods judgements occurring in thoſe times, upon the notoriouſly wicked: And delightfull for the variety of matters.

By John Mayer, Doctor of Divinity.

LONDON,
Printed by John Legatt, and Richard Cotes; and are to be ſold by William Leak, at his ſhop, the ſigne of the Crown in Fleetſtreet, between the two Temple Gates. MDCXLVII.

Collegium Sancti Iohannis Evangelistæ
in Academia Cantabrigiensi 1700

TO THE HIGH AND HONOVRABLE COVRT OF PARLIAMENT

And by Name

(As to them, to whom he is most obliged)

TO

Sir Herbottle Grimſtone , Knight and Baronet.
M^r. Maurice Barrovv, Eſquire, his ever honoured patron.
And M^r. Herbottle Grimſtone, Eſquire.

JOHN MAYER, doth in all humility, dedicate this his labour in the Lord.

THat ſaying is true (Right Honourable) in divine things, of that which is good we cannot have too much, and if a light in a dark room be good, the acceſſion of more light is better and more delightfull. My hope therefore is, this to you who have expreſſed your deſire to have the Church of England furniſhed with Books in this kinde, the addition of another will not be unacceptable. This work of mine, both in this part and another that ſhould have come out before it from the beginning of the Bible hitherto was well nigh, if not altogether finiſhed, before any other ſpeaking in the Engliſh tongue in this kinde, upon ſo many Books of Scripture together: but there were enemies like Tobiah and Sanballat, who envied the coming out of any thing,

whereby

whereby the Laitie might attain too much light of knowledge, that hindered it, till ſome years expired under worthy Darius, who ſet his minde more upon the building of the Temple, then any of his predeceſſours the Kings of Perſia. For although under your auſpicious government, the Preſſes have been open for publiſhing any good Books for illumination and edification, yet the times have been troublous almoſt hitherto, ſo that there hath been little encouragement to publiſh Volumes in this kinde, however they have ſwarmed with Pamphlets of all ſorts. Therefore having now by Your meanes through Gods bleſſing, more tranquilitie, which he for his mercies ſake eſtabliſh and perpetuate, and through tranquilitie, opportunitie to ſet up our lights before hid under a buſhell, how can I, but in gratitude for ſo great a benefit, through which mine comes now forth, inſcribe it to ſo Honourable and worthy a Senate; and ſo devote it firſt to your uſe and ſervice, and then of all well-affected Chriſtians, who I know upon your approbation, will be excited the rather to look after it for their own good. Be pleaſed then (Right Honourable and Worſhipfull) at your vacant times to reade it, as a piece, wherein haply yee may ſee more into the Oracles of God, then in any one Book yet extant, and if Kings muſt by Gods precept be daily in reading the Book of God: whereupon David made it his continuall meditation, and Alphonſus King of Aragon and Sicilia, read the whole Bible with the ordinarie Gloſſe 14. times over; Yee muſt not think it beneath your greatneſſe, but that it ſtands well with it, to ſequeſter ſome time daily, to reade both the text and gloſſes, which ye have as helps to more illumination, that Ye may the better know, how all things ought to go according to Gods will in Church, and Common-wealth, and order them accordingly. Wherein if this of mine may be any help unto You, or to build You up, or any of Gods people in knowledge and grace, I ſhall much rejoyce, and that it may be ſo, ſhall not ceaſe to pray to Him who is able to make you abound in all wiſedome and ſpirituall knowledge more and more.

Deut. 17.

Your honours moſt humbly devoted in all duty and ſervice, IOHN MAYER.

TO THE READER.

IF any that make account of my unworthy labours, (as many I know do) ſhall marvell, why after ſo long expectation of a more full body, only one part is at length brought forth, and that a Pharez, Zarah, who made offer to come forth, firſt plucking in his hand again. This is come ſo to paſſe, becauſe they to whom the Midwives office belonged to help to bring forth theſe children of the minde, into the world, were unwilling for the greatneſſe of the charge and inſtability of the times, to do their office herein. So that unleſſe I had met with a kinde friend, who moſt willingly ſupplyed their defect, it had ſtuck in the birth, and not come into the light to this day, either in whole or in part. Moreover, it is by ſome doubted, that as in time of plenty even the pooreſt buyers are ſcornfull, and taking up in their hands very good wheat, caſt it down again and depart, letting it ſtand as not good enough for their uſe, ſo there being now plenty of books of this kinde, Readers will do, by ſuch as are publiſhed more, as counting them ſuperfluous So that I thought it not good by bringing too much into the Market at once, to cauſe a nauſea and ſcornfull diſdain, but by bringing ſome of my grain forth at once, and that not ordinary, but moſt ſcarce in our Book-markets, to whet buyers on hereby; intending, as I ſhall ſee this to take amongſt them, either to bring forth the other upon the Pentateuch, or to reſerve it for my own particular uſe. For I hear ſome ſaying, that they will buy no Engliſh Cõmentaries, becauſe there be enough Latin ones upon all parts of the holy Scriptures, and they count it ſome diſparagement to have Engliſh in their Libraries. To ſuch I ſay, it is to bee granted indeed, that for a theologue to have none but Engliſh books is a diſparagement, as arguing one that knowes none other but his mother tongue, and therefore illiterate, and an intruder into the miniſteriall office, ſith as Ierome hath it, he cannot be counted learned, that doth not callere Lin-

guam Latinam, Grecam & Hebraicam, as not being able to ſee into the ſenſe of the letter of the Word with his own but with others eyes, and therefore he muſt be forced to take up things of greateſt moment, committed to his diſpenſation upon truſt, which for any ſeer is a ſhame to do. Yet to reject Bookes written upon the Word, hoc nomine, becauſe they are Engliſh, is as an intimation to the people of diſlike, that they ſhould know Eſa.38.12. what is written, as not being ſafe for them, as Eliakim, and Shebnah were grieved at Rabſhakeh his blaſphemies uttered in a language underſtood by all men, whereas Act.2. they do moſt Apoſtlelike, who open divine myſteries ſo as that every one may hear, and read them in their own language. Therefore in avoiding diſparagement to themſelves, they diſparage the holy Word of God, and the opening of it, as being of matters dangerous, and of evill conſequence for the common ſort to know, yea they hereby bring upon themſelves the thing feared, ſeeing there cannot be a greater diſparagement to a proteſtant Miniſter, then to ſeem to ſide with Hoſius and Harding, & other popiſh Doctors, in averring that it is dangerous for the people to read the Scriptures, or to have them in their mother tongue, who yet for matter of annotations hereupon, come ſomewhat ſhort of ſuch, as appears by the Rhemes Teſtament, being common in their Libraries. And whereas they ſay, there are Commentaries enough in Latin and Greek, there are not ſo many though Hebrew of the Rabbins be added alſo, but that the writing of more in any language, may be uſefull both to the learned and unlearned, if they be not idem per idem, as indeed the manner of many Expoſitours is, one to follow another; as Oecumenius, Theophilact; and he Chryſoſtom, Gorran, Thomas Aquinas; and all the ancients almoſt, Ierom; and the new Writers, Calvin. But who ſo ſhall pleaſe to peruſe this of mine, ſhal finde beſides the light ſet up by Commentatours ancient and modern, of which I confeſſe, I have alſo made great uſe, ſome new light, enabling to judge and chuſe the beſt, and in many particulars, leaving them all to go a new way more right, hitherto untraced, to his more full ſatisfaction and enlightening, by more diligent taking heed to the originall, and avoiding all ſeducement by Tranſlations. Some others there are that ſay, we have already Bookes lately come out upon all the Bible, and therefore they ſhall ſuffice us. And I deny not, but that ſome good light is given by them, as writing in ſuch brevity can do, yet whoſoever would read to fill himſelf with more perfect knowledge of the divine myſteries, and to gather moſt comfort from them, hath need to read others alſo, which are preſented in this to ſpare the Readers paines, and improved in fine to bolt out the truth in all things, ſo as hath not yet by any one been done. Laſtly, there be others that content themſelves with the Bible, not caring for any other light, then what they can finde by the reading thereof. But in thus doing, there is danger either of reading and not underſtanding, and ſo not profiting, for legere & non intelligere eſt negligere, or elſe of perverting the holy Scriptures for want of a right knowledge, to damnation. Wherefore let us all reade the Scriptures with all aſsiduity, according to Ioh. 5.39. Revel. 1.3. and to improve our reading to our moſt illumination and comfort, and ſetling in the truth againſt errours, ſo abounding in theſe times, labour to underſtand what we reade, by the help of Annotations or Commentaries, ſuch as whoſe means and leiſure will afford it, furniſhing themſelves with and reading more, although abundantly ſupplied already; they of leſſe meanes who cannot have variety, with one, which may be unto them equivalent to all, in which name I do, non jactando, ſed veritatem dicendo, humbly commend this unto thee, as Luke his to Theophilact, after many written by others. And I doubt not, but whoſoever thou art, who ſhalt purchaſe and make uſe of it, thou wilt receive ſo full ſatisfaction hereby, that thou wilt ſay, as he who hath drunken new wine, I will drink no more old, for the new is better.

Vale.

Act. 8.

2 Pet. 3.16.

A Ca-

A Catalogue of Commentatours and other Authours cited upon Joſhuah, Judges, Ruth, and 1 and 2 Sam. &c.

AVguſtine.
Ambroſius.
Anaſtaſius.
Appianus.
Arrianus.
Ariſtotle.
Adricomius.
Arius Montanus.
Aulus Gelius.
Angelomus.
Atheneus.
Ammianus.
R. Abraham.
T. Aquinas.
Bernardus.
Beda.
Beroſus.
Bonfrerius.
Brocardus.
Burgenſis.
Borrhaus.
Beniamin. Iud.
Comeſtor.
Calvin.
Chryſoſt ome
Cald. paraph.
Catullus.
Cajetan.
Cicero.
Clemens Alexand.
Cyprian.
Cteſias.
Sethus Calviſius.
Q. Curtius.
Damaſcen.
Dionyſ. Carthuſ.
Dion.
Dorotheus.
Diodorus Sicul.
Dymianus.
Euſebius.
Ælianus.
Eſtius.
Eutropius.
Epiphanius.
Ferus.
Freculphus.
Funccius.
Florus.
Gloſſ. Ordin.
Gratian.
Ben. Gerſon.
Gregorius.
Genebrard.
Genev. Notes.
Fr. Georgius.
Gorion.
Georg. Geniſt.
Hugo de ſant. vict.
Herodotus.
Hieronym.
Hugo Cardin.
Iunius.
Ioſephus.
Iſidorus.
Ionathas Syrus.
Iohannes Hieroſol.
Inſtinus.
R. Ionathan.
R. Kimhi.
Lyra.
R. Levi.
Livius.
Maſius.
Magellianus.
Melchior Canus.
Mercerus.
P. Marty.
Macrobius.
Munſteri Coſm.
Mercator.
Menande.
Nazianzen.
Nauclerus.
Origen.
Paulus Oroſius.
Oſiander.
Pagninus.
Plato.
Pierius.
Pineda.
Plutarch.
Procopius.
Patriarkstravels.
Proſper.
Plinius.
Philaſtrius.
Pellicanus.
Pauſanias.
Polybius.
Rabanus.
Rabbini.
Rupertus.
Quinquarboreus.
Sallianus.
Saluſtius.
Serrarius.
Septuagint.
Seneca.
Sigonius.
Sulpitius.
Stephanus.
Rab. Solomon.
Rab. Samuel.
Strabo.
Suetonius.
Tacitus.
Theodoret.
Tertullian.
Toſtatus.
Turpinus.
Tigur. interp.
Torniellus.
Tranquillus.
Traditione Hebr.
Thucidides.
Vaſquez.
Vatablus.
Valeſius.
Velleius.
Willet.
Wolphius.
Xenophon.
Zonaras.

A Co-

A COMMENTARY UPON THE BOOKE OF IOSHUAH.

The PREFACE.

ACcording to the title of this Book, the Hebrewes hold, that Joſhuah was the Author of it, ſo likewiſe Comeſtor, Lyranus, and many other Learned men. And this is proved, Firſt, from Chap. 24.26. where Ioſhuah is expreſſely ſaid to have written all theſe words. Secondly, from Eccleſiaſticus 46.1. where Joſhuah is ſaid to have been the ſucceſſor of Moſes in prophecies, and to write the ſacred Hiſtory is a kind of prophecying; wherefore by the Hebrewes, this Book of his is numbred amongſt the Prophets; of whoſe Books they number eight, Joſhuah, Judges, Samuel, Kings, Iſaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the Booke of the twelve ſmaller Prophets. For they diſtinguiſh the Canonicall Scriptures, as Comeſtor hath it, into three rankes, 1. Of the Law, by which name they call the five Books of Moſes. 2. Of the Prophets before-named. 3. Of the Hagiographa, or holy Writings, which are nine, Daniel, David, Heſter, Eſdras, Job, Chronicles, and three Books of Solomon. Hereupon, and upon the Apocryphall Books, Hugo hath theſe Verſes following:

Schol. Hiſt.

Hugo Card.

Quinque libros Moſis, Joſhua, Judicum, Samuelem, Et Malachim, tres præcipuos, bis ſexque Prophetas, Hebræus cenſet reliquis præcellere libris.
Quinque vocat Legem, reliquos vult eſſe Prophetas.
Poſt Hagiographa ſunt Daniel, David, Heſter, & Eſdras, Job, Paralipomenôn, & tres libri Solomonis.
Lex vetus his libris perfectè tota tenetur.
Reſtant Apocrypha, Ieſus, Sapientia, Paſtor, Et Machabæorum libri, Judith atque Tobiah.
Hi quia ſunt dubii, ſub Canone non numerantur;
Sed quia vera canunt eccleſia ſuſcipit illos.

But here, unleſſe Ruth be underſtood under the Iudges, and Ezra and Nehemiah by Eſdras, this will be no perfect enumeration: but Ruth is by Ierome reckoned with Iudges, who numbreth as many Books in the old Teſtament, as there be Letters in the Hebrew Alphabet, viz. 22. Prolog. in Sam. And as for Eſdras, hereby are commonly underſtood Ezra and Nehemiah, and the two Books of Eſdras, wch are amongſt the Apocryphal, being called the firſt, ſecond, third, & fourth books of Eſdras; but the two latter are juſtly put amongſt the Apocryphall, and not amongſt the Canonical books, as being not found, as Iunius hath it, either in Hebrew or Greek; and the one of them almoſt nothing elſe, but a repetition of that ſet forth in Ezra; & the other erreth ſo far in the very entrance in ſetting down the Genealogie of Ezra ſo diverſly from that in Ezra, that any man may eaſily perceive that not to be the true, but a ſuppoſititious Eſdras that wrote it. But to return again to Ioſhuah, why ſhould not he moſt probably bee thought the Author of this Book, ſeeing he was a moſt godly Judge, and ſet up in the roome of Moſes, who ſo carefully had written the geſts of God before for the people of Iſrael, and therefore it might well be expected, that he ſhould doe the like for the famous things wrought in his time. Calvin contrariwiſe thinketh, that Eleazar wrote this book, and not Ioſhuah; becauſe, Chap. 15. there is ſomewhat ſet down of the expugnation of Hebron, which was not done till after the death of Ioſhuah, and the death of Ioſhuah, Chap. 24. But the inſerting of this, and ſupplying of that by ſome other holy Writer, is no argument, that the book was not written by Ioſhuah, no more then the ſupplying of ſome things by others in the Books of Moſes.

Iunius.

Calvin.

CHAP. I.

V. 1. After the death of Moſes the Servant of the Lord, it came to paſſe, that the Lord ſpake to Joſhua the ſon of Nun, &c.

Ioſhuah was otherwiſe called Oſheah, Numb. 13. 8. 16. Moſes called him Ioſhuah, he was of the Tribe of Ephraim, the Septuagint call him Ieſus the ſon of Naue; and it is to be underſtood that Ioſhuah and Ieſus are all one, theſe two names come of the ſame Hebrew Radix, ſignifying to ſave, and Naue and Nun, ſaith Comeſtor, are one. It is noted by Lyra, that he was the firſt that ever was called by this name, and likewiſe by Ferus, the providence of God being ſingular herein, that a Jeſus, a figure of our Jeſus and Saviour ſhould bring the people of Iſrael into the Land of promiſe. He was a figure of Jeſus, ſaith Ferus, 1. In ſubduing the Amalekites. 2. In bringing the people into Canaan. 3. In dividing that Land amongſt them. There was another Ieſus afterwards the ſon of Sirach, a figure of Chriſt for his learning and wiſdom; and Ieſus the ſon of Ioſedek the High Prieſt, a figure of his Prieſthood: Of others alſo thus called, ſee 1 Chron. 24. 11. 2 Chron. 31. 15. and my notes upon Numb. 13. 16. This Ioſhuah was alſo a figure of Chriſts victorious riſing and ruling over all his Enemies; as his death and paſſion had been in the books of Moſes figured out ſeven times. 1. In Cains killing Abel. 2. In the troubles of Noah. 3. In the ſacrificing of Iſaac. 4. In the afflictions of Ioſeph. 5. In the killing of the Paſchall Lamb. 6. In the ſtriking of the rock to bring out waters. 7. In the brazen Serpent, ſo Ferus. And Origen noteth, that the name of Ioſhua, or Ieſus, is firſt mentioned, Exod. 17. when Moſes ſent him to fight againſt the Amalekites whom he overcame, and not Moſes; Ieſus, and not the Law ſubduing ſpirituall enemies, being noted hereby. And he admireth the Divine Providence, in that none of the holy ones that lived before, was called by this name, but he firſt of all others, that brought the Iſraelites into Canaan, evidently ſhewing both him and his geſts here related in this book to be myſticall, figuring out our Jeſus and his acts. At the beginning of this verſe is a conjunction copulative, rendred [now] to ſhew this to be a continuation of the former Hiſtory of Moſes by his ſucceſſor Ioſhuah. For the time when this was ſpoken, Lyra will have it to be before the dayes of mourning were ended; but Hugo, the mourning for Moſes being now ended, which ſeemeth the moſt probable, be-

Scholaſt. Hiſt.
Lyra.
Ferus.

Lyra.
Hugo Cardin.

cauſe Deut. 34.8. Before this it is ſaid, the dayes of mourning for Moſes were ended. And if we compare the time of Moſes his death, which I have there ſhewed, according to the Hebrews, was the ſeventh day of the moneth Adar, which was their laſt moneth; with the time of the peoples comming over Jordan, which was the tenth day of the firſt moneth, Ioſh. 4.19. we ſhall find that there were paſſed 30 dayes of mourning, and 3 dayes for their preparing and paſſing over Iordan, according to the time ſet, Chap. 1. 11. [The Lord ſpake to Ioſhua] twice before this Ioſhua was appointed to this Office of ruling and leading the people, Numb. 27. 18. and Deut. 31.7. and to incourage him the more, the Lord ſpeaketh to him again; and as Ferus hath it, that the people Ferus. might the more readily obey him; and laſtly, that hee might the more diligently goe about this his office; and in that hee the Miniſter of Moſes is thus preferred, he noteth myſtically, that onely ſuch as ſubject themſelves to the law Note. of God, are fit to rule: and therefore Jeſus himſelf firſt ſerved and waſhed his Diſciples feet. And herein Ioſhuah figured Chriſt, who was the Miniſter of Moſes, when he was made ſubject to the law, Gal. 4 4. for the law is called Moſes, Luke 16.31. ſo Origen.

V. 2. Moſes my ſervant is dead: now therefore ariſe, &c.

Lyra. Here both Lyra and Hugo take occaſion to confute thoſe that ſay Moſes was damned for his ſin at the waters of Meribah, becauſe we read not of his repen- Hugo Card. tance; for the contrary appeareth by this honorable teſtimony which the Lord giveth of him, calling him his Servant. And Auguſt. Qu. 1. gathereth hereupon, that God puniſheth with death his deare ſervants corporally, and yet taketh them to himſelf as veſſels of honour. Likewiſe Comeſtor confuteth both Schol. Hiſt. them, and thoſe that held Moſes not to be dead, but tranſlated, as Enoch, and Elias; for the Lord ſaith, he is dead. And unto theſe Ferus addeth a third error, Ferus. which is alſo here confuted, viz. that the law was not of God, but of the Devill; for the Lord himſelfe teſtifieth, that Moſes who gave it, was his ſervant. Myſtically by Moſes, underſtand the law of Moſes, which is as an husband dead, Rom. 7.1. under the Goſpel, and now Jeſus commeth in his place. [Ariſe, paſſe over this Jordan, thou and all the people.] Some thinke that Ioſhuah was now humbled in prayer, and ſo God biddeth him [ariſe,] which is not improbable; but by this ſpeech he quickneth him to a diligent care in executing the weighty Office whereunto he called him. By all the people, are not meant all without exception, for ſome had their poſſeſſions on this ſide Iordan, Numb. 32. but all the reſt were now to go over, & al the men of War of thoſe Tribes, that remain as hereafter followeth, v. 12, 13, &c.

V. 3. Every place that the ſole of your foot ſhall tread upon, have I given unto you, &c.

The very words of this verſe, and the next are had before, Deut. 11. 24, 25. where Moſes ſpeaketh unto the people, as the Lord here to Joſhuah. And he ſaith, I have given you, to note the certainty, as if they were already in poſſeſſion thereof. The Hebrews, (ſaith Lyra) by all places that they ſhould tread upon, un- Lyra. derſtand all Countreys of the world; and this was in part fulfilled in Solomon, when he reigned over all, and ſhall perfectly be fulfilled in the dayes of the King Chriſt, of whoſe earthly Kingdome they dreame; but how falſe this is, the next words declare, From Libanon and the wilderneſſe to the great River, &c. of which V. 4. bounds, ſee Deut 11.2.

V. 6. Be ſtrong and of a good courage, &c.

The Lord knew that the people now to be led by Ioſhuah, were very perverſe, and the enemies to be ſubdued many and mighty; and therefore he confirmeth Ioſhuah with many words, and moſt ample promiſes; and the rather, becauſe Moſes ſo holy a man, yet in the time of provocation by the people had ſhewed great weakneſſe. The Lord ſaith, that none ſhould be able to ſtand before him all the dayes of his life; for after his death, the people ſinned, and then their enemies prevailed, as is ſhewed ſundry times in the book of Judges.

V. 7. That thou mayeſt obſerve to doe according to all the law that Moſes my ſervant commanded thee, &c.

That Ioſhuah might not be puſillanimous, but courageous, he hath a ſpeciall charge given him to attend to the law of God, and to do it in all things with all care and diligence. And hereby obedience to God, and ſubjection to his law, is ſhewed to be the ground of all true fortitude, the adventures that are made without this, being nothing but temerity & raſhneſſe; which howſoever it may prevaile at the beginning, yet it ſhall never be able finally to bring any thing to Calvin. good effect, as Calvin noteth. And to the end, that the law of God may bee V. 8. obſerved by him, he is charged to read and to meditate thereupon day and night, and ſo it is promiſed that he ſhould proſper in all his undertakings: See the like charge given to Kings, *Deut.*17.18,19.

V. 9. Bee ſtrong and of a good courage, have not I commanded thee?
When God is the Author of any expedition, men may be courageous indeed, and feare nothing, as being ſure to prevaile. For the words and phraſes here uſed; [that thou maiſt obſerve to doe:] ſome diſtinguiſh betwixt theſe two words expounding [obſerve] of abſtaining from the evill forbidden, and to doe of Maſius. performing things commanded; but Maſius better underſtandeth the firſt word of that ſtudy and care, which maketh way to performance; and the ſecond of the due execution thereof. Turne not from it to the right hand or to the Hebræi. left; By turning to [the right hand,] the Hebrews underſtand any adding to the Word of God; and by turning to the left, any taking away therefrom. Ser- Serrarius. rarius by the firſt underſtandeth any going out of the way of Gods commandements for gaine; by the ſecond any going out for feare of danger or adverſity Hugo. Carpin ſuffered: So likewiſe Hugo, for proſperity or adverſity, the firſt ſeemeth to be grounded upon Deut.4.2. and therefore is rather to be approved, [that thou maiſt proſper;] the Vulgar Latine for this hath, that thou maiſt underſtand all that thou doſt, or doe wiſely in all things; thus alſo the Septuagint, and the word תַשְׂכִיל here uſed, ſignifieth firſt and chiefly to underſtand; and it is uſed alſo Calvin, Iunius. for to proſper, as 1 Sam. 18.14,30. Calvin and Junius are rather for proſpering, but becauſe there is another word for proſperous, v. 8. then thou ſhalt make thy way proſperous, אז תַּצְלִיחַ this is better expounded of underſtanding; and there, that thou maiſt make thy way proſperous, and be wiſe, or doe wiſely; and to keep the law, and to cleave to it, is ſaid to bee wiſdome and underſtanding, Maſius, Pagnin. Deut.4.6. thus alſo Maſius and the Tygurine interpreters, and Pagnine, but the Chald. Chaldee is for proſpering. This booke ſhall not depart from thy mouth; that is, thou ſhalt be frequent in reading and ſpeaking thereof, and in inſtructing others therein. And this duty, as it is firſt and chiefly commended to Rulers, ſo it is to all people, Deut.13.9,16. Exod.6.6. Deut.11.18, &c.

V. 10, 11. Then Ioſhuah commanded the Officers of the people, ſaying, Paſſe through the Hoſt, and command the people that they prepare Victualls, for within three dayes yee ſhall paſſe over this Jordan, &c.

The word שׁוֹטְרֵי here rendred Officers, is in the Vulgar Latine Princes, Auguſtine calleth them Scribes, and ſo doe the Septuagint, but of this enough before upon Exod. 18. they were ſome ſet to rule over the reſt; and therefore are bidden to command them. St. Auguſtine underſtanding this to have been be-Auguſt. qu. 2. in fore the ſending out of the Spyes to Iericho, moveth a queſtion how they could Joſh. within three dayes from hence goe over Jordan, when as the ſpyes muſt have ſome time to goe and ſearch, and returne, and it is expreſly ſaid before their return, that they hid themſelves three dayes in the mountaines, Chap. 2.
22. and three dayes after this, the people have direction to paſſe over, Chap.
3.2. And he anſwereth, that Joſhuah thought happily, that the ſpyes would have returned ſooner; and preſuming upon this, hee ſet three dayes, and not by direction from the Lord, but it fell out that the dayes before their paſſing over, were many more. And Moſes he ſaith, in like manner erred once, doing as a man, when he took the burthen of hearing all cauſes upon himſelfe, untill that he had better direction; and this is followed by Hugo and many others. But Lyra, Calvin Lyra and Calvin more ſoundly weighing the premiſſes, how ſeriouſly the Lord promiſed to be with Joſhuah in all things, hold that hee would not now ſuffer him

him to erre in the beginning of his rule, leſt his credit ſhould hereby bee infringed amongſt the people, and therefore that this of his appointing the people to be ready againſt the third day to paſſe over Jordan, is here ſet downe by anticipation, the ſpyes being ſent out ſix or ſeven dayes before this, even whilſt the dayes of mourning for Moſes laſted, and at their returne, and not before, this preparation was commanded againſt the third day; and ſo all things done, Chap. 2. come in by a parentheſis, that which was done before, being ſet down after, and accordingly it may be read, Joſhuah the ſon of Nun, had ſent out of Shittim two men,&c. Chap. 2. 1. and the number of three dayes ſpoken of againe, Chap. 3. 2. thus agreeth excellently with this, as a repetition hereof, and a more diſtinct declaration of his proceedings; and being thus underſtood, the former count of the time ſpoken of from the death of Moſes till their comming over Jordan will hold, which otherwiſe cannot. Moreover, it had been a point of temerity, and of no wiſdome in Joſhuah, to ſet a time of paſſing over into the land of Canaan, before the way prepared by ſending out ſpyes; an error, that a man ſo full of the ſpirit of wiſdome could not poſſibly fall into. [Prepare you victualls,] ſeeing they were fed with Manna from day to nay, even till the fifth day after that they had paſſed over Jordan, Chap. 5. 12. it may be doubted what victualls Joſhuah would have them to prepare; for if Manna, that might not be kept all night; if any other ſuſtenance, where ſhould they have it, or what need had they of it, when as they were fed with Manna? Maſius ſaith that they might buy ſome other victualls of the Edomites or Moabites. Bonfrerius, that they had taken the ſpoiles of two Kings of the Amorites, amongſt which doubtleſſe they found good ſtore of corne and cattell for food, and of theſe victualls he ſpeaketh. The firſt is moſt improbable, becauſe Edom and Moab were moſt inſenſe againſt them: the next cannot be diſliked, for by reaſon of their paſſage, they had no time that day to gather Manna, and therefore they muſt be otherwiſe ſupplyed. If it be ſaid, ſeeing they had other victualls now, what needed Manna ſtill? I anſwer, it is likely that they had not ſufficient of the prey taken for ſo great a multitude, but onely for a ſhort time, for ſo ſoone as they came where they might have enough, the Manna ceaſed, Chap. 5. 12, 13.

Qu.

And. Maſius.
Bonfrerius.

V. 12. And to the Reubenites, Gadites, and to the half tribe of Manaſſeh, ſpake Joſhua,&c.

Here is nothing but a commemoration of the condition ſet by Moſes before to theſe Tribes, and by them yeelded to, viz. that they ſhould goe armed over Jordan before their brethren, all the men of warre amongſt them, their wives, children and cattell being left in the land already given them for an inheritance. But whereas Moſes required that they ſhould all goe to theſe Warres, Numb. 32. 20, 21. to which they yeelded, Joſhuah here requireth onely all the mighty men of valour to goe, and Chap. 4. 13. there went but about 40000; whereas of the tribe of Gad alone there were numbred of able men to beare Armes 40000, of Reuben 43000, and of halfe Manaſſeh 26000: ſo that the greater part went not, herein Joſhuah did according to the meaning, which was, that a ſufficient company of the moſt able ſhould go, the reſt ſtaying at home to defend the Countrey newly conquered againſt their enemies, who might otherwiſe ſoon have gathered together, and ſubdued thoſe parts againe, and have made a prey of their wives, children, and cattel, as was touched before upon Numb. 26.

V. 14. Ye ſhall paſſe before your brethren armed.

Calvin.

He requireth them not to follow, but to goe before the reſt to the warre to ſhew their alacrity, as Calvin hath it. The words בִּפְנֵי אחיכם ſignifie in the ſight of your brethren, but the event Chap. 4. 12. ſheweth, that it was meant in the forefront, and that they ſhould bee the firſt to aſſault the enemy. And to this doe they aſſent, and to whatſoever Joſhuah ſhould command them, promiſing to obey him in all things as they obeyed Moſes. If this ſhall ſeem, ſaith Calvin, to have been a point of vain-glory in them, and not true, for they had often rebelled againſt Moſes; hee anſwereth well, that they were their Fathers who had been rebellious, and were conſumed in the wilderneſſe; but they their children being taught by their example were made more obedient:

V. 16. 17.

neither is this a vain-glorious oſtentation of their obedience to Moſes, but a declaration of their readineſſe to ſubject themſelves to Joſhuah, whom they thus acknowledged to bee his ſucceſſor appointed by the Lord; and therefore worthy of all praiſe. And they conclude moſt piouſly, praying the Lord to V. 18. be with Joſhuah, as he had been with Moſes, and exhorting him to bee of a good courage, and menacing ſuch amongſt them as would not obey him, with death. Of all this an excellent Allegory is made thus by Lyra. Joſhuah or Je- Nic. de Lyra. ſus was a figure of our Jeſus, both in his name and geſts, as hee muſt paſſe over
The myſtery. Jordan; ſo Jeſus was baptized of John in Jordan; and as all the people muſt paſſe over with him, ſo all the people of Jeſus are baptized: the victualls which they muſt prepare, are the rudiments of faith, wherein all that are adulti, muſt be inſtructed before their baptiſme; the third day ſetteth forth the time of grace, for the time of the Law of nature, and of the Moſaicall Law, were the two firſt dayes, upon this third all are baptized, and ſo paſſe into the heavenly Canaan, in hope here, and in ſoul, being delivered from all guilt and puniſhment at the time of death, and the whole compoſitum of ſoule and body at the end of the world. By the Reubenites, ſignifying Seers, are ſet forth the Prophets; by the Gadites, the Patriarchs; and by the Manaſſites, other ſaints under the Old Teſtament, who all paſſed through Baptiſme in a figure, 1 Cor. 10.
Note here, that Lyra held no paines to bee ſuffered in Purgatory after death.
Ferus. Ferus will have the three times of inſtituting Joſhuah to his Dukedome, to figure out, 1. The conception of Jeſus by the holy Ghoſt. 2. His Baptiſme with the holy Ghoſt. 3. His reſurrection, when all things were put under his feet, and none were able to reſiſt him.

CHAP. II.

V. 1. AND Joſhua ſent two men out of Shittim, to ſpy ſecretly, ſaying, Go view the Land, even Jericho, &c.

The Rabbins ſay, that theſe two were Caleb and Phinees, but that is uncer-taine, the place, from whence, is otherwiſe called the plaines of Moab. At what time this was done, hath been already ſhewed upon Ch. 1. v. 10, 11. [to ſpy ſecretly] here, becauſe the word חרש put for ſecretly, ſignifieth alſo to feigne Rabbini. ones ſelfe dumb, the Rabbins expound it ſome of them thus, ſaying, that hee biddeth them feigne themſelves dumbe, leſt by their language they ſhould bee diſcovered: ſome becauſe חרש ſignifieth an earthen veſſell, that they ſhould carry ſuch, pretending to come to ſell them; and ſome otherwiſe; but the moſt Hieronym. received expoſition, which is beſt, is ſecretly, or ſilently, ſo Jerome, Toſtatus, Va- Toſtatus. tablus, &c. But whether is it meant that he ſent them ſecretly, the people not knowing of it, or that they ſhould conceale themſelves, that they might not be known by the men of Jericho, whence they were? The Hebrew Text will reſolve this preſently, where it is ſaid thus, he ſent two men ſearchers ſecretly: He did it therefore cloſely, and not openly, as when twelve men were ſent before to ſearch the land, Numb. 13. all the congregation conſenting to it: for ſeeing that ſucceeded ſo ill, he thought it better now to take another courſe, of which there might come no ſcandall; and ſo it is moſt probable, that the ſpyes retur-
And. Maſius. ning, certified Joſhua alone what they had done, thus alſo Maſius: Yet it is not to be doubted, but that they went alſo ſecretly about Iericho. Comeſtor ſaith they feigned themſelves fooles, but there is no ground for that. But what went they to eſpy? Anſw. Onely the way into Iericho, whether it were open or not, and whether the people of Iericho were fearefull, and what preparations they made againſt the Iſraelites comming. If it ſhall ſeeme that Io- ſhuah ſhewed himſelfe too cautelous herein, ſeeing the Lord had ſo greatly in-Calvin. couraged him? Calvin anſwereth well, that it is not likely but he had direction from the Lord thus to doe, although it bee not expreſſed; for neither is it expreſſed that the Lord directed him about the proviſion of victualls, and appoin-pointing the third day to paſſe over Iordan, C, 1. v. 10, 11. And this ſending out to ſpy *Ierich*o tended further to the encouraging of Ioſhuah and of all the people, when it was made knowne unto them, what the ſpyes related of their timerouſneſſe, as Gedeon was incouraged by doing the like afterwards about the Hoſt of Midian, Judg. 7. 9, 10. Ferus ſaith, that although God had made him ſo gracious promiſes of prevailing, yet he knew, that meanes muſt be uſed, and that he muſt not proceed raſhly in theſe Warres; and therefore hee doth as any provident Captaine would doe in the like caſe. And they came into an har-lots houſe named Rahab, and lodged there. The Chaldee for [harlot] hath an Innekeeper or victualler, and ſo Jonathan in Targum. But the word זונה here uſed, is every where put for an harlot, and the Septuagint render it an harlot, and ſo all the Fathers expound it, and Jam. 2. 25. wherefore the Rabbins in ſeeking to avoid this expoſition, as tending to the diſcredit of their nation, vent but their owne imagination, as they are bold to doe in many other things.

Some, becauſe they thinke it infamous to our Lord, that ſuch a woman ſhould be put in his line, ſay, that it was not this Rahab, but ſome other, which is named in that Genealogie, Mat. 1. but the time agreeth ſo unto her being marryed afterward to Salmon, the ſon of Naaſſon, which was the Prince of the Tribe of Judah, Numb. 2. 3. as that ſhe cannot be held to be any other woman, and there is none other named in all the Bible by this name: & laſtly, if there be any infamy by this Rahab, why not by Thamar and Bathſhebah alſo? Now although Rahab was a wicked harlot, yet happily ſhe might be one that ſold victualls alſo, that under this colour men might reſort unto her; and therefore it is moſt probable that the ſpyes came to her houſe, ſtanding alſo in an outer place upon the wall of the City, as is noted, Verſe 15. where there was leaſt frequency of people, and ſo they thought themſelves moſt out of danger of being ſeen and diſcovered. Lyranus and Ferus hold that ſhee was no harlot, but a victualler. Hugo is indifferent for either, or that ſhe had been an harlot, but now was not; yet becauſe the houſes of ſuch are open to commers in the night, hee finally thinketh her to have been an harlot now.

And it was told the King of Jericho, ſaying, There came men in hither in the night V. 2.
of the children of Iſrael, &c.

This maketh for that which was noted before out of Hugo, viz. that this was the cauſe of their comming to Rahabs houſe, becauſe harlots have their houſes open for men to reſort unto in the night, when as the doores of others are ſhut. They therefore having been about the City in the day, at night come hither to lodge, not ſeeking to her, as other wicked men, becauſe ſhee was an harlot, but for their neceſſity to have harbour till the morning. Here is not then, as Ferus noteth, any colour for lewd men in their frequenting of whore- Ferus.
houſes, but the wonderfull mercy of God is ſet forth in converting and ſaving Note.
ſuch an one onely in all that City, that none touched with a ſenſe of their ſins might deſpaire.

Theſe men could not be long at Rahabs houſe, but the King of Jericho hath in- V. 3.
telligence of it, and ſendeth to have them brought forth; but it is ſaid that ſhe hid them, and ſaid, there came men unto me indeed, & I wiſt not whence they were; V. 4, 5.
And when it was darke, they went out, &c. Thus ſhe ſaid, but ſhe had brought V. 6.
them up to the roofe of the houſe, and hid them with ſtalkes of flax. Here, whereas ſhe is ſaid to hide them, when the men came from the King to inquire for them, before ſhe anſwered, it is to be underſtood, that ſhe had done that before, ſuſpecting what would follow, as is expreſſed, v. 6. where the ſame thing is again repeated for further explication, v. 4. where this is firſt ſpoken of, it is ſaid ſhe tooke and hid him, not them, for it is ותצפנו but it is ſaid thus, per enallagen numeri: now leſt there ſhould be ſome errour in the Reader finding it thus ſet down, it is more fully declared againe, v. 6. Shee had brought them up and hid them, &c. Yet ſome of the Rabbins hereupon gather, that ſhee hid onely one Rabbini.
of them, viz. Caleb, and not Phinees, who was an Angel in a bodily ſhape; and therefore could ſtand before them and not be ſeene, when he would. Others
of

of them,yet more tolerably,that the place was ſo little,that onely one of them could bee hidden there, and not the other, to ſignifie which the ſingular number is uſed [Shee hid him.] Laſtly, others ſay with us, that the ſingular number is put for the plurall, as is uſuall in the Hebrew tongue: as, Exod. 8. It is ſaid, God brought the fly upon Egypt, when as a great multitude were brought; this is recited by Lyra. Here it may be demanded, 1. Whether Rabab may be excuſed in her lying to ſave theſe ſpyes? 2. Whether ſhee ſinned not againſt nature in concealing them that came to betray her native Countrey?

Lyra.

Qu. 1.
Hieronym. Orig. Chryſoſt. &c. Toſtat. qu. 30.
Aug. ad Conſentium. lib. de Mendacio, c. 20.
C.21. Quiſquis eſſe aliquod genus mendacii, quod non ſit peccatum putaverit, decipit ſeipſum turpiter, cum honeſtum ſe putat eſſe deceptorem aliorum.
Plato lib. 3. de Repub.
Calvin.

To the firſt, many Learned Writers hold, that to make an officious lye to ſave life, is no ſinne; as, Jerome, Origen, Chryſoſtome, Theodoret, Theophylact, Oecumenius, Caſſianus, and Toſtatus goeth further, that to ſave the life of the innocent, a man is bound to lie, if hee ſeeth no other meanes; and that God ſometime moveth the minde hereunto. S. Auguſtine diſputeth much about the lawfulneſſe of ſome kind of lying, and at length determineth, that a lye may be made which doth not violate the doctrine of piety, nor piety it ſelfe, nor innocency, nor benevolence for the chaſtity of the body. But drawing nearer to a concluſion of this tract, he numbreth eight kinds of lyes which are ſinfull bringing in even that which is to preſerve chaſtity, or the bodily life: and then concludeth, if any man thinketh any kind of lye lawfull, he doth fully deceive himſelfe, whilſt hee thinketh that hee may honeſtly deceive others. And then comming to that which Toſtatus ſpeaketh, hee ſaith, ſuch is the blindneſſe of ſome, that they doe not onely maintaine ſome kind of lying to be lawfull, but that it is a ſin in ſome caſe not to lye. Plato ſaith, ſometime it is profitable to lye, and that it is to be uſed as a Medicine. But of lying, whether it bee in any caſe tolerable, I have already treated at large upon Gen. 27, 6,7. upon the diſſimulation uſed by Jacob. Calvin, as he cenſureth that, ſo hee doth this alſo; but becauſe of Rahabs faith, hee ſaith, that her lying was not imputed to her; whereas for proofe, that any kind of lying is a ſinne, he ſaith, that it is contrary to the nature of God, who is truth: it may bee ſaid as he is truth, ſo he is love; and therefore love being alſo commended to be the moſt eminent of all graces, when truth and love cannot ſtand together, truth muſt rather give place in our ſpeaking to love, then love to truth. Wherefore Ferus ſaith well, if any man ſhall object that Rahab lyed, charity excuſeth her, which covereth a multitude of ſinnes. Againe, it is Juſtice not to betray them, that have committed themſelves to our cuſtody. Shee ſhewed alſo great faith in that, which ſhee ſpake of their God, and repentance in ſaying your terrour hath falne upon us, which was upon her to repentance, and providence both for her owne ſafety and ſalvation, and the ſafety of her kindred, and in ſo wiſely adviſing the ſpyes to fly and hide themſelves three days in the mountaines, for which ſhee was worthy to bee marryed to a Prince amongſt the people of God, Salmon the ſonne of Naaſſon, and to bee a mother of our Lord Jeſus; thus he. And both Paul and James do highly commend her for this fact, and lay no blame at all upon her; and therefore it ſhould be farre from us to cenſure her whom God juſtifieth, as I have alſo touched in my Praxis upon James.

Ferus:
Matth. 1.
Heb. 11.31.
Jam. 2.25.

Qu. 2.

For her favouring of thoſe, that went about to betray her Countrey, it is to be granted that every one is bound in nature to ſeeke the preſervation of his native Countrey, but for ſo much as Rahab through faith, which God wrought wonderfully now in her heart, was by a ſpirituall calling ſegregated from Jericho, and joyned unto Iſrael, ſhee did nothing unnaturall, or blame-worthy in ſeeking the preſervation of thoſe to whom ſhe was more nearly allyed in the Lord, although againſt her native Countrey, which ſhee beleeved was before by the Lord appointed to deſtruction, and to bee given to Iſrael for a poſſeſſion for the ſinnes of the preſent inhabitants, ſeeing the Lord is over all Countreys and people to diſpoſe of them according to the good pleaſure of his own will. Thus alſo Calvin and Bonfrerius a Jeſuite,&c. Moreover the laſt named ſaith, that happily ſhee was directed by God thus to doe, and

Calvin.

and if not, yet knowing by faith that God had adjudged her people to deſtruction, to have ſought by betraying the ſpyes to ſave her City; ſhe ſhould both have oppoſed God, and gone about a worke which could never have beene effected. Note. By this example wee may learne, that although a man may not do any thing poſitively, as ſhee did not, againſt thoſe that be moſt deare and near unto him; yet if he knoweth certainly that it is the will of God that they ſhould bee put to death, he ought not to ſeeke to hinder, but permit it.

V. 6. But ſhee had brought them up to the roofe of the houſe, and hid them with the ſtalkes of flax, which ſhee had laid in order upon the roofe.

Hebr. Here for roof is גג, which the Vulgar Latine rendreth ſolarium, a place open to the Sun, for ſuch was the roofe of every houſe there, plaine, and fit to ſtand or walk upon, for which cauſe to prevent the danger of falling, a battlement is commanded to be ſet round about it, Deut. 22. 8. and here ſhee laid ſtalkes of flax to dry, wherewith they might well bee hidden.

V. 7. And the men purſued after them to Jordan, in the way to the foords; and aſſoon as they were gone, they ſhut the gate.

Why they purſued them to the Foords of Jordan, may eaſily be conceived, becauſe they were places to come and goe over the River by ferrying, although God afterwards, to ſhew his power, divided the River for the whole Army, and all their retinue to paſſe through; and becauſe otherwiſe it would have required too long a time for ſo great a company to paſſe over. This way that the purſuers went, was about ſix miles. They ſhut the gate, that is doubtleſſe the Gate of the City, the time of night requiring it, eſpecially this being a time of danger; and that if the ſpyes were yet about the City, they might not get out, as Calvin hath it; and Lyra, to keepe the purſuers out, that thus they might be forced to follow after them: Yet Lyra ſaith alſo, ſome will have the ſhutting of Rahabs doore meant, but without all reaſon. Lyra.

V. 8. But before they were laid downe, ſhee came up unto them, &c.

The Vulgar Latine [before they were aſleep] according to the ſenſe, hereby it appeareth, that they were not long placed there to reſt that night, but that ſhee gave them this advice following, to haſten away to the mountaines. Lyra. Lyra ſaith, it was through feare that they ſlept not.

V. 9. And ſhe ſaid unto the men, I know that the Lord hath given you the Land, and that the terour of you is falne upon us, &c.

Here Rahab ſheweth her faith, for which ſhee is ſo much commended, and which made her to hide the ſpyes, and with ſuch a courage to ſtand for the protecting of them. Shee ſaith, that ſhee knew, that the Lord had delivered, not would deliver, to expreſſe the certainty of her faith. But how came ſhee to know this? becauſe their terrour was fallen upon that people, and their hearts fainted. They feared, and fainted, and yet prepared to reſiſt, but ſhee onely humbleth her ſelfe, and ſueth for mercy, whereby wee may note, how infidelity worketh, and how a true faith, ſo Calvin; Calvin. Note. that maketh obſtinate, and to ruſh on deſperately in ſin to deſtruction, this humble and ſubmiſſe, and to flee to prayer and other good meanes of preſervation. If it be demanded, how Rahab attained to ſuch certaine and ſaving faith, when as ſhee heard no more but a rumour of things done by the Lord for Iſrael, and ſaw with what feare they of Jericho were ſmitten, which were onely naturall meanes, which all had as well as ſhee? I anſwer, God wrought grace ſupernaturally in her heart, by theſe meanes to know and beleeve in him, as hee hath done divers times in whom hee pleaſeth. The terrour which ſhee ſpeaketh of, came upon them doubtleſſe, not onely by a naturall apprehenſion of the danger, wherein they were, but being in judgement ſent of God into their hearts, to make the ſubduing of them the more eaſie to the Iſraelites, according to his promiſe made Exod. 23. 27. Deut. 11. 25. and the like is threatned to the Iſraelites for ſin, Levit. 26. 36. If a queſtion be made how they could underſtand the language wherein ſhee ſpake? it is anſwered, that in all likelihood the Canaanites ſpake the ſame language with the Hebrewes, which is implyed, in that their names were Hebrew, as Rahab, Adonibezek, Abimelech, &c. And the names of their Cities, as Iericho, Salem, Sichem, Bethlehem, &c. and therefore the Hebrew tongue is called the language of Canaan, *Eſa.*19.18.

V.10,11. Here R*ahab* ſheweth, how their hearts were made to tremble and melt becauſe of them, viz. they had heard of the drying up of the red Sea, and of the deſtruction of the two Kings on the other ſide of Iordan, concluding with a moſt excellent confeſſion, The Lord your God, he is God in heaven above, and in the earth beneath; and ſhe giveth God his title J*ehovah*.

V.12,13,14. Next R*abab* requireth them to ſweare unto her, that they will ſave her and her Fathers houſe, and all that they had, and give her a true token, to which they willingly agree, conditioning that ſhee ſhould ſtill conceale their buſineſſe.
The forme of words uſed by them, is, Our life for yours, and thus they ſware unto her; as if they had ſaid, God ſtrike us with death, if wee be not truly carefull of your preſervation, ſo that by our neglect, any of you periſh;
but they give her warning againe and again not to utter this matter, leſt, Calvin. as Calvin hath it, by ſpeaking of this pact, ſhee ſhould put her ſelfe into danger from her owne people. But what need was there that they ſhould ſweare?
For her greater aſſurance, becauſe otherwiſe being buſied in the fight, they might have forgotten her, and their promiſe to her.

V. 15. Then ſhee let them down by a cord through the window, for ſhee dwelt upon the Town wall, &c.

Lyra. Lyra ſaith that ſome of the Hebrewes, who hold, that R*abab* was an harlot, ſay, that by this cord men went downe and came up, that uſed in time paſt to reſort unto her to ſatisfie their wicked luſts: but now ſhee uſed the ſame to ſave both theſe ſpyes and her ſelfe, by tying it upon the window, as Note. they appointed: And if ſo, this ſerved notably to ſet forth, that one converted, uſeth that now as an inſtrument of good, which before hee uſed as an inſtrument of evill, as is ſpoken of our members, R*om.*6.16. In this manner, *Act.*9.25. S. Paul is ſaid afterwards to have beene let downe to ſave his life. Whereas Calvin. ſome, ſaith Calvin, hold the going over City walls to be ſhameful & unlawfull:
he anſwereth well, that it is not ſo in the caſe of neceſſity, but in contempt, or deceit, or tumultuouſly, alledging Cicero himſelfe, who granteth that the walls of Cities are ſacred for the defence of the Citizens, but yet no man counteth it a fault, to goe up unto them for the defence of the City.

V. 16. And ſhee ſaid unto them, Go and hide your ſelves three dayes in the mountaines, till the purſuers bee returned, &c.

Maſius. Theſe ſpeeches had betwixt R*abab* and the ſpyes, ſaith Maſius, moſt probably were before her letting them downe, for after that was no time or place to ſtand to parley further; whereas the ſpeech uſed by them, v. 18. The cord whereby thou didſt let us downe, may ſeeme to make for the contrary; it is anſwered, that they may bee underſtood ſpeaking ſo before this was done, making account that it was as good as done already, when they were now about to bee let downe hereby. And in holding thus, although theſe ſpeeches are ſet downe after, nothing is held touching this place, but that which is uſuall in many other, viz. that the order of the Hiſtory is a little inverted.
Adricomius. Touching the mountaines, Adricomius ſaith, that the field of Iericho was compaſſed in with mountaines like a Theater, ſo that they might ſoone get behinde one of them and be hidden. For food, it is not unlikely but that they carryed ſo much with them as might ſerve for their ſuſtenance that time. But why ſhould they hide themſelves ſo long, ſeeing Iericho was not above 2 or 3 houres journey from Iordan; and therefore the purſuers might well returne the ſame day? Anſw. It was likely, that going about a buſineſſe of ſo great moment, they would ſtay ſome time there, to obſerve the comming of paſſengers to thoſe Foords, if happily they might find out theſe men: or as Lyra hath it, ſearch about the lurking places for them. The Rabbins ſay it was revealed to Rahab, that the purſuers would not returne till the end of 3 dayes, and V.17,18,19. this was revealed for the ſafety of the ſpyes. The men ſeeing R*ababs* care of their ſafety here appoint her for a ſigne, the ſcarlet line wherewith ſhee had let them downe, which ſhee muſt tye upon the window: and then they pro-

V. 20, 21.

propound two conditions, wherein if there were a faile, they would not bee bound by their oath: 1. If any were at their comming out of her houſe, and not within it. 2. If ſhee uttered this matter abroad, wherein ſhee reſteth, and tyeth the line or cord upon the window, as they had appointed. The cord here ſpoken of, as it is mentioned three times, ſo every time with ſome diverſity in the Hebrew, v. 15. the word חבל is uſed, V. 18. תקות חוטחשני a line of ſcarlet thred. V. 21. חקות-חשני the word חוט being left out, whereupon ſome have thought that the ſame cord was not tyed to the window, with which ſhee had let them downe, but another; and therefore theſe words, by which thou didſt let us downe, are both by the Septuagint and Jerome, referred not to the line, but to the window, per quam demiſiſti nos. But the demonſtrative ח, that line, maketh it plaine that it is meant of the ſame, although divers words are uſed to expreſſe it, and a cord is a little line, and ſuch had this need to bee, that it might bee of ſtrength ſufficient to hold them, whileſt they deſcended by it.

Qu.

Toſtatus qu. 55, 56.

Here a queſtion is further moved, whom they doe promiſe to ſave alive, when they enumerate her father and mother, brethren and ſiſters, and all her fathers houſhold? To this Toſtatus anſwereth, that all even Grandſathers, and great Grandfathers, and Mothers, if any of them were living, were alſo underſtood, but not any other kindred, as Uncles and Ants, and their children. But the Vulgar Latine, for fathers houſhold, hath omnem cognatiomem tuam, all thy kindred. And Chap. 6. v. 22. beſides father and mother, brethren and ſiſters, all her families כל משפחות are ſaid alſo to have been brought out and ſaved, which implyeth all her kindred. Shee indeed requeſted but for her father and mother, brethren and ſiſters; but who knoweth not that under the name of brethren, are comprehended all the kindred, although two or three degrees removed, according to the uſe of the word in thoſe times?

Qu.

Qu.

But why did ſhe tye a ſcarlet line to her window rather then any other? This was doubtleſſe done by a ſingular providence for the myſtery that lay hid herein, as by and by ſhall be ſhewed. But when did ſhe tye it to the window? Moſt probably at this time, or being faſtened there to let them downe, ſhe let it hang till Jericho was taken: For ſhee knew not the time when the Campe would come thither, and if ſhe had deferred it, it might have been forgotten, and therefore the ſureſt way was to doe it inſtantly.

V. 23, 24.

The ſpyes after three days lurking in the mountaines, return to Ioſhuah with joyfull newes of the fearfulneſſe of the people of Canaan, gathering hence, as Rabab had told them, the deliverance of all into their hands. A farre different iſſue of their going out to ſearch, from that of the 12 ſent out by Moſes, Numb. 13. for they brought news of diſcouragement, theſe of incouragement to all that heard it, that if any were faint hearted and feared, they might now be full of courage: thus God in his providence ordered it, providing hereby for the ſtrengthening of the weakeſt faith.

The Myſterie.

Myſtically by Rabab, the Church of the Gentiles may bee underſtood, which before committed fornication with Idols; but the Apoſtles being ſent out two and two, as here were two ſpyes ſent out; and comming into the world of the Gentiles, ſet forth by Jericho, which ſignifieth the Moone, being before mutable as it, a Church is built unto God, Rabab receiveth them. But the Devill, ſet forth by the King of Jericho, by and by perſecuteth them, but ſhee, that is, the Church of the converted ſeeke to preſerve and ſave them, and they ſave her, by bringing her to Chriſt. Thus Lyra, the Ordin. Gloſſe following Origen, by the ſpyes ſent out, underſtandeth John the Baptiſt, in whoſe dayes Publicans and Harlots are ſaid to enter into the Kingdome of heaven. Rabab ſignifieth dilatation, for ſo the Church is now inlarged; the ſpyes being placed above ſhewed, that the Apoſtles ſent out, were lifted up in their hearts to heavenly things, and the like is ſhewed in their going to the mountaines. The ſcarlet red cord figured out the blood of Chriſt, by which both Paſtors and people are ſaved. But who ſo goeth out of the houſe, that is, the Church, is not ſaved, but onely ſuch as abide therein. The window where the cord was tyed, ſet forth the light in the Church, whereby wee ſee the Lord, but through a window as it were, and not ſo fully, as wee ſhall hereafter. Ferus. All this alſo almoſt hath Ferus, but by the ſpyes he underſtandeth the Apoſtles, and in fine addeth, the return of the ſpyes with joyfull news, figured the good news told by Paul at Ieruſalem, of the great things God that had done by him amongſt the Gentiles. Acts 21. But as Rahab ſhould not bee ſaved but by keeping the cord in the window, and her ſelfe in the houſe, ſo we are not ſaved, but by having the blood of Chriſt continually in our hearts, and cleaving to the Church to the end. And in Paul the Apoſtle the like was done, that here, by the care of the Church he was let downe at a window.

Lyra.

Gloſſe Ordin.

Eſa 54 2 Dilata locum tentorii tui, &c.

CHAP. III.

V. 1. AND Joſhuah roſe early in the morning, and they returned from Shittim, and came to Jordan, &c.

For [early in the morning] the Vulgar Latine hath, [in the night,] but againſt both the Hebrew, Septuagint, and Chaldee, all which have it in the morning. It ſheweth Joſhuah his diligence and forwardneſſe in the execution of his office. At what time this remove to Jordan was made, I have ſhewed upon *Ch.*1.11.

V. 2, 3. And after three dayes, the officers went through the Hoſt, and commanded the people, ſaying, When ye ſee the Arke, &c.

Hereby it is not meant three dayes after they came to Iordan, but after the warning given before, *Ch.*1.11. and therefore it is to be underſtood, that in one of thoſe dayes they came to Jordan, and ſo went over in the time before limited by Joſhua. The Vulgar Latine, for theſe words, *they lodged there, v.*1. hath theſe, they tarryed there three dayes, and of this ſtay, ſaith Lyra, Lyra. ſome yeeld this reaſon, becauſe the waters did then overflow, that they might be ſomewhat abated, before they paſſed; but he rejecteth this, and yeeldeth another, becauſe God had not yet revealed to Joſhuah, how they ſhould paſſe over, but this was done after 3 days. But there being no mention of three dayes ſtay in the Hebrew, but onely that they lodged there, it is rather to be held, that they paſſed over the next day, even when the waters of Iordan were at the higheſt, as is ſhewed, v. 15. which ſerved the more to magnifie the miracle here following. The Officers that had before, *Ch.*1.11. warned them of this paſſage within three days, the time being now come, direct them in their marching, to goe after the Arke carryed V. 4. by the Prieſts, keeping yet a diſtance of 2000 Cubits from it, that ſeeing it afarre off, they might hereby be directed in the way. This marching on, as Lyra noteth, was different from others in former times, becauſe then ſome of the Numb.10.2,17 Tribes went before, and ſome followed after, the Arke going in the midſt; but now all muſt follow after it: whereby it ſeemeth that the cloud went before them no more, as in times paſt to direct them, *Exod.*13. but the Arke ſupplyed Aug. Qu 3. Toſt. Qu. 1. 6. Maſius Qu. that office; and it is generally held, that the cloud vaniſhed at the death of Moſes, ſo Auguſtine, Toſtatus, Maſius, Ferus, &c. But why do the Prieſts carry the Ark, when as that Office was before aſſigned to the Cohathites, Levites, Numb. 4.15? Anſw. Becauſe of the miracle that was now to be wrought: Ordinarily the Levites carryed it, but when any thing extraordinary was to bee done, the Prieſts, as more holy and nearer to God, bare it themſelves, and thus the peoples eyes were drawn to be more attent to ſome great worke to bee wrought. So likewiſe at the deſtruction of Jericho the Prieſts againe bare it, Ch. 6. and into Solomons Temple, 1 Kings 8. The diſtance of 2000 Cubits was, as to bee the better directed in the way, ſo for reverence to the Arke, the ſigne of Gods preſence; thus alſo it was appointed, Numb. 2.2. that they ſhould keepe farre off from the Tabernacle, which moſt probably was the diſtance here named, 2000 Cubits, that is, a mile, *v.*5. Some hold this diſtance myſtically to ſet forth 2000 years to the time of Chriſt. Calvin, beſides the reverence for which this diſtance was ſet, will have another end to be, that they might hereby underſtand that Gods preſence is not limited within ſuch ſtrait bounds, but that it is with his people, even when he ſeemeth to be farre off. And by this meanes the way was made by the Arke going ſo farre before them through Jordan before their entrance, and they had time to ſee and conſider, and admire and believe the power and preſence of God with them.

V. 5. And Joſhua ſaid unto the people, Sanctifie your ſelves, for to morrow the Lord will doe wonders amongſt you.

How the people were to ſanctifie themſelves, we may ſee before, upon Exod. 19. where the like command is given, viz. according to the rites of thoſe times, by waſhing and abſtaining from their wives. The word rendred [ſanctifie] ſaith Calvin, doth as well ſignifie [prepare] but that of ſanctifying is more proper, and by ſanctifying themſelves men are prepared for God by his miraculous power to come neare unto them, which otherwiſe might turne to their deſtruction; ſee alſo, *Joſh.*12. Some, he ſaith, too reſtrainedly underſtand the putting away of all filthineſſe, that there might be nothing to hinder their paſſage; Yet by their outward ſanctifying the purging of the conſcience from ſin, the opening of the heart, and putting away all things that might hinder the work of grace, was ſet forth, as Ferus hath it, ſhewing the like in John the Baptiſts preparing the way of the Lord, and *Iam.*1 21. 1 *Pet.*2, 1, 2. For to morrow will the Lord doe wonders amongſt you. The Lord holdeth them ſtill in ſuſpence, and doth not particularly declare what he would doe, that they might reverently expect his good pleaſure. Yet it is moſt probable that hee had before revealed it to Ioſhua. Ferus.

V. 6. Then Joſhua ſpake to the Prieſts, ſaying, Take up the Arke of the Covenant, and paſſe over before the people.

Bonfrerius. Bonfrerius the Jeſuite here maketh a queſtion how Ioſhuah could command the Prieſts, ſeeing they are not under the ſecular power, but onely under the High Prieſt: and anſwereth that Ioſhuah was not onely a Prince, but a Prophet; and therefore all were to be directed by him. But he ſpeaketh thus becauſe of that Popiſh Tenet, that Prieſts are not ſubject to the King, but onely to the Pope, which is contrary to *Rom.*13, 1. where every ſoule is bidden to be ſubject to the King. Becauſe Joſhua was now Ruler over all next under God, he was directed by God, and ſo commanded all both Prieſts and People. For his bidding them to take up the Arke, and paſſe over, but not declaring how they ſhould doe this, it is to be underſtood that Joſhua privately communicated unto them, what the Lord would doe, as he doth by and by to all the people, v. 9. 10, 13.

V. 7. And the Lord ſaid to Joſhua, This day will I begin to magnifie thee before the people, &c.

That is, by the great miracle, which I will now worke in dividing the waters of Iordan, as for Moſes the red Sea was divided, that thus Joſhua might bee known to be gracious with the Lord, as Moſes had been. That by his conduct the people ſhould paſſe over Jordan, it is not to bee doubted but Joſhua was before certified, but particularly by what meanes, it is not probable, that it was revealed till this morning.

V. 8. Command the Prieſts, ſaying, When ye are come to the brinke of the waters of Jordan, ye ſhall ſtand ſtill in Jordan, &c.

Here becauſe it is ordered, that the Prieſts bearing the Arke ſhould ſtand ſtill when they came at the brink of Jordan, but *v.*17 they are ſaid to have ſtood in the midſt of Jordan, whilſt all the people paſſed over, ſo likewiſe Chap. 4. 10. a great queſtion ariſeth, how the act done, anſwereth to the precept here given? Maſius ſaith that by the word קצה rendred brinke, the further part of the River is to be underſtood, becauſe it ſignifieth either extreame, and ſo the Prieſts came thither, before the people entred, there being betwixt the entrance and it 2000 Cubits. And. Maſius. But Serrarius will have the entrance meant, and therefore determineth that they made two ſtations, one at the brinke of the River, where they ſtayed a while till the waters wee gone away, which was not done inſtantly, but by degrees, and the other, when removing further, they came into the midſt. Serrarius. The Hebrewes, ſaith Lyra, hold, that they ſtood at the entrance, till all Lyra.

the people were gone over, but this he ſaith, is againſt the Text, ſeeing they ſtood in the midſt. That of Serrarius is moſt probable of all theſe, and in making another ſtand in the midſt, they followed a further direction from the Lord ſo to doe, although it bee not expreſſed. And this direction to ſtand ſtill in the midſt, till all things were done, ſeemeth to have beene given long before by Moſes to Joſhua, by that which is ſaid, Chap. 4. 10. according to all that Moſes commanded Joſhua. He therefore moſt probably firſt informed Joſhua of this miraculous dividing of the waters to come, and directed him about the Prieſts bearing of the Arke in this way, and ſtanding ſtill in the midſt of the River, and the ſetting up of 12 ſtones for a monument hereof, which becauſe it was not hitherto mentioned, as being ſpoken to Joſhua in private, and not yet to bee divulged, it is there commemorated. Thus, if wee hold two ſtands, but the words inforce Toſtatus. us not to hold any more then one, and that in the midſt of Jordan; for hee ſaith not, yee ſhall ſtand ſtill upon the brinke, but, when yee are come to the brinke, yee ſhall ſtand ſtill [in Jordan*:*] that is, when yee bee come to the brinke, and the waters giving way, yee deſcend into the bottome of the River, yee ſhall ſtand ſtill there: wherefore both Lyra and Toſtatus acknowledge but one ſtand in the midſt of Jordan. For the diſtance of 2000 Cubits before appointed to bee kept from the Arke, if it bee doubted how it could be kept, ſeeing the Arke ſtood ſtill, and they paſſed by? That of Maſius, ſaying, that the River was thus much over, ſatisfieth not, for neither is it probable that in the greateſt overflowing it was 2000 Cubits over, ſeeing ordinarily it is reported by ſuch as have ſeen it in that place, not to be above 30 Cubits over, and if it were ſo many at this time, yet the people when they came by it, were nearer. It is therefore to be held, that the ſpace being great, that was now dry-ed by the falling of the waters downward, from which the waters upward were cut off, as is ſhewed, v. 16. That they went this diſtance from the Arke on that ſide, the Arke ſtanding towards that part of the River which was gathered on heapes, as a bulwarke to keep them from flowing all the time that they paſſed through.

V. 9. And Ioſhua ſaid to the children of Iſrael, Come hither and heare the words of the Lord your God, &c.

Lyra. That is, ſaith Lyra, to their Rulers, for he could not ſpeake to all the people to be heard. Hereby wee may ſee, that Joſhua went in all things according to the direction which he had from the Lord, although it be not before expreſſed.

V. 10. Hereby yee ſhall know, that the Lord will drive out before you the Canaanites, Hivites, &c.

V. 11,12. The thing, that he calleth them here to attend unto, is the miracle now to be wrought, ſo ſoon as the Prieſts feet that bare the Arke, ſhould touch the waters
V. 13. of Jordan, he ſaith, they ſhould be divided, thoſe below being cut off, and thoſe higher in the River being gathered into heapes, and hereby they ſhould bee aſſured of the expulſion of the ſeven Nations by Gods almighty power from before them. And he biddeth them to have 12 men in a readineſſe, of each Tribe a man, not telling them here for what cauſe, but meaning, that they ſhould take up each one a ſtone out of Jordan, to be ſet up for a monument, as he leaveth it to be expreſſed, untill *Chap.*4.2. In numbring the 7 Nations, hee mentioneth the Amorites for one, but they with their two Kings were already ſubdued; wherefore it is to be underſtood that there were others of them which dwelt together with the Canaanites, who are here meant; for they dwelt in Jericho, *Joſh.*24.11. For theſe words, v. 11. Behold the Arke of the Covenant of the Lord of the whole earth goeth before you. Hebr. the word הברית ſignifying Covenant, hath two pricks above it, which is a note of diſtinction; and therefore
A. Maſius. Maſius hath, The Arke of the Covenant, the Lord goeth before you. But the Chaldee, Septuagint, and Jerome render it, the Arke of the Covenant of the Lord:
ſo likewiſe Pagnine, Arias Montanus, Tigurini interpretes, &c. not regarding thoſe pricks of the Maſoreths: yet if that reading be followed, it may carry a good ſenſe, thus, The Arke of the Covenant, and with it the Lord of the whole earth

earth goeth before you, a ſigne of whoſe preſence it is. Joſhua telling them of the miracle that God would now doe upon Jordan, laboureth to confirme their faith about his expelling of the heathen before them; for if they ſhould ſee his power to be ſo great, as that he could ſtay the courſe of that great River, the waters being now at the higheſt, and that hee did it for their ſakes; what doubt could they make of his expelling the heathen, and putting them in poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan, which hee had alſo promiſed? And hereby we are taught upon the marvailous things done by the Lord for us, to build our confidence touching his promiſes of things to come.

Note.

V. 14, 15, 16

As Joſhua had foretold, ſo it commeth here to paſſe, when the Prieſts bearing the Arke touched the brink of the River, The waters that came downe from above, ſtood and roſe up upon an heape, very farre from the City Adam, which is beſide Zaretan; and thoſe that came downe towards the Sea of the plaine, even the ſalt Sea failed, and were cut off. And to increaſe the miracle, it is inſerted, v. 15. For Jordan overfloweth all his banks in the time of harveſt.

Aug. Qu. 3.

This may ſeem ſtrange, ſaith Auguſtine, ſeeing our harveſt is not till long after this time, & harveſt time commonly is no time for waters ſo much to abound in. But it is to be underſtood, that in thoſe parts corn was ſo forward, that it began even in that month, which was the firſt to be ripe, witnes their bringing the morrow after the Paſſeover, which was the 16 day of this moneth, a ſheafe of firſt fruits of their Corne to the Lord, ſo that this time there was a time of waters abounding by the falling of the latter raine, which uſually fell plenteouſly but twice in a yeer, after the Corne ſown, and towards the ripening thereof. For the time of harveſt, here the Septuagint have θερισμοῦ πυρῶν, the harveſt of wheat; but the Hebrew, Chaldee, and all others, ſpeake of the harveſt onely; and it is certain that in thoſe parts the barley harveſt was long before the wheat harveſt, as hath beene noted in ſpeaking of the ſheafe of firſt fruits, Deut. 16. and πυρὸς ſignifieth not onely wheate, but all kinde of bread corne.

Levit. 22.
Deut. 16.

There is beſide the cauſe forementioned, another cauſe by ſome ſpoken of, why the waters of Jordan overflowed at the ſpring time, viz. the melting of the ſnow upon mount Libanus, which lay there in great quantity, and now being melted, fell into this River, and from the whiteneſſe of the ſnow lying there, it was called Libanus, ſignifying white, according to Jerome, and the ſnow of Libanus is ſpoken of, Jer. 18. 14. For the waters riſing up upon an heape, this was a wonderfull worke of God, not onely ſtaying them from their courſe, but keeping them ſtill within their bounds, when ſuch an huge quantity came flowing continually downe, all the time that the children of Iſrael paſſed over: for had a ſtop onely of their current been made, it might have been thought that this was done by diverting the ſtreame ſome other way, which might bee by the labour of men, or the flood would have ſpread it ſelfe all over the plains thereabouts, to the great detriment of that Countrey, it being now harveſt time almoſt. But they being made to riſe up upon an heap, like an huge mountaine, they daring not, as it were, for reverence to come nigh the Arke, the immediate and mercifull hand of God appeared herein, and all the people, before they came nigh, could not but ſee and be affected at ſo great a wonder. Very far off from the City Adam, beſide Zaretan: this reading [from Adam,] is in the margin, it being in the line in Adam; but the meaning is, that the ſwelling of Jordan up like a mountaine, extended from Adam to the place where the waters were cut off, and ſo it is indifferent whether it be read from, or in, or by Adam. This City is little ſpoken of, and therefore ſo obſcure, that it is deſcribed by another, Zaretan neare unto it. Adami is mentioned, Joſh. 19. 33. in the Tribe of Nephthali, and by this name it is rendred here by ſome Copies of the Septuagints Tranſlation, but that is ſo farre from Jordan, being on the north of Canaan, that it cannot be meant. Adricomius ſaith, that this City was in the Tribe of Reuben, a little above Bethabara, and againe, that Bethabara was between it and Zaretan, Adam being more north and Zaretan more ſouth, but both upon the eaſt banks of Jordan. Of a City called Zartanah by Jezreel, we read 1 King. 4.

Adricomius.

12. and of Zartan in the plaines of Jordan by Succoth, 1 Kings 7.46. which laſt, although rejected by Adricomius, ſeemeth to bee the City here meant, and not another no where named in the Scriptures, for ſo obſcurum ſhould be deſcribed per obſcurius. How farre off this City was from the place of the peoples paſſing over, I cannot find, but ſure we are, that it was very farre by the words of the Text, and ſo the ſwelling of J*ordan* very great, and extended in a great length, ſo that many more might to their terrour ſee this miraculous thing, and not the Iſraelites onely, for whom it was wrought.

The Myſterie. Ferus.

1 Cor. 13.

Origen. Hom 4.

Ferus.

Ferus.

The ſalt Sea, this is otherwiſe called the dead Sea, the Sea of Sodome, into which the waters of Iordan did run, for nothing lived in this Sea; and if any fiſhes were brought out of Iordan in hither, they dyed. It is thought by ſome that the place thus dryed for the people to paſſe over, was that where Bethabara afterwards ſtood, ſignifying the houſe of paſſage, in which place Iohn was baptizing when Ieſus came to him. Myſtically by the cloud now vaniſhed, which before, in the time of Moſes was ſet to guide the people in their way, but now the Arke went before them, was ſet forth that in the time of the Law all things were obſcure; but under the Goſpel, when Ieſus came, they were made manifeſt, to be beheld with open face. And morally, that whilſt we live here, wee are as it were under a cloud, and ſee but darkly, in compariſon of that wee ſhall doe after death, for then we ſhall ſee face to face: And as the Arke went into Iordan before them, ſo Ieſus goeth before us in Baptiſme and in death, that wee might not feare. Againe, as they were bidden to looke at the Arke, and follow it; ſo we muſt not looke at the examples of men, for they may erre, but altogether at Chriſt his Word, our moſt ſure direction: And therefore as the Ark was ſo placed that all might ſee it; and not the foremoſt onely; ſo the Word muſt be handled, that all may underſtand it. Laſtly, as for reverence to the Arke all kept farre off from it; ſo Chriſt and his Word muſt bee reverenced, neither may we over-curiouſly pry into his Myſteries; Thus Ferus. Gods ſaying to Ioſhua, This day I will begin to magnifie thee, figured out his magnifying of Ieſus, when he went into Iordan to be baptized by the voyce comming from heaven, and the Spirit upon him, after which he was alſo magnified by many miracles. The Prieſts going before and bearing the Ark, which had three things in it, the Teſtament, the Pot of Manna, and Aarons Rod, did figuratively teach, that Miniſters ſhould goe before the people in teaching the Law, adminiſtring the bread of life, and directing them through the holineſſe of their owne lives. Laſtly, their paſſing through water into Canaan, figured out the afflictions through which the faithfull muſt paſſe into the heavenly Canaan, in the way, eſpecially when they are neareſt the entrance, they ſeeing the huge floods of temptations ready to overwhelme them, but then we muſt ſpecially fixe our eyes upon the Arke Chriſt by faith, and ſo wee ſhall bee preſerved.

CHAP. IV.

V. 2,3.

Take you 12 Men, out of every Tribe a man, and command them, ſaying, Take ye hence out of the place, where the Prieſts feet ſtood firme, 12 ſtones, and yee ſhall carry them over with you, and leave them in the lodging place, where yee ſhall lodge this night, &c.

Exod. 12. 26. & 13. 14.

The Lord having done this great miracle for Iſrael, now taketh order that it might never be forgotten by them or their poſterity afterwards by commanding 12 ſtones to bee erected for a monnment hereof, and they ſhould tell their children of it, that all might bee excited from generation to generation to feare and ſerve him, and to put their truſt in him, as the like charge was given before touching the Paſſeover and firſt borne. The 12 men appointed to carry theſe 12 ſtones were doubtleſſe choſen of the ſtrongeſt, that each man might carry a great ſtone, out of the place, where the Prieſts feet ſtood: that is, as all underſtand it, neare their feet, as the 12 ſtones ſet up by Ioſhua in the midſt of Iordan, Jordan, v.9. were ſet up neare the place of their feet, for it is not likely that the Prieſts removed, that they might take up the ſtones under their feet, but ſtood ſtill till all things were done, v. 10. That of telling their children afterwards, is againe repeated, v. 21,22,23.24. and this is ſet forth to bee the end, the glorifying of God amongſt all people of the earth, and that Iſrael might feare him.

V.7. Auguſt. qu. 4.

And theſe ſtones ſhall be a memoriall to the children of Iſrael for ever. This is not to be underſtood ſimply, world without end, as Auguſtine ſheweth; for both the heaven and the earth paſſe away; but a long time, the end of which is unknown to men, for that with the Hebrews is לעולם for ever.

V.9.

And Joſhua ſet up 12 ſtones in the midſt of Jordan, where the feet of the Prieſts ſtood, &c. The Vulgar Latin for further explication hath it 12 other ſtones, the 12 ſtones before ſpoken of were ſet up in Gilgal by the 12 men that carryed them; but theſe were other, as Lyra hath it, moſt probably farre greater ſtones, in the ſetting up of which Joſhua uſed the helpe of others; that although they ſtood in the river, yet ſometimes when the water was at the loweſt, they might be ſeen of men; and of theſe ſtones, he ſaith, it is commonly held, that the ſpeech of John the Baptiſt is to be underſtood, Matth. 3. God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children unto Abraham, for hee was baptizing there. Calvin thinketh, that being even under the water and not ſeen, but talked of from generation to generation, they might be a memoriall, as the things in the Arke, which were covered, and hidden from the ſight of the people. But I preferre the former, becauſe there was not the like reaſon of hiding theſe from the ſight of the people, that there was of hiding the Arke, which was done for reverence to God repreſented hereby. And there they are till this day: Hence ſome doe argue, that Joſhua wrote not this Booke, but ſome other holy man long after; but this proveth not the contrary, for this clauſe might bee afterwards added, they appearing to be there ſtill many yeares after, that men might bee ſtirred up to goe and ſee them, and make uſe of it, as a thing not fained, but really in being.

Lyra.

Calvin.

V.10.

Bonfrerius.

For the Prieſts which bare the Arke, ſtood in the midſt of Iordan, till every thing was finiſht, that the Lord commanded Ioſhua to ſpeake to the people, as Moſes commanded Ioſhua, &c. Becauſe for [every thing] here ſpoken of, Hebr. it is every word, ſome will have it preciſely to bee expounded ſo, till Joſhua had commanded the 12 ſtones to be taken up out of Iordan, and 12 more to be brought in. But who knoweth not, that by דבר a thing is meant, as well as a word? and how abſurd were it, that the Prieſts ſhould ſtay no longer, but till the words were ſpoken, and not till it was done accordingly, ſeeing that ſo ſoone as they were come out of Iordan, the waters returned to their naturall courſe immediately againe? Maſius therefore and David Kimchi are rather herein to be followed, who ſtand for the doing of all things commanded. But why is it added, as Moſes commanded Ioſhua? Calvin, and ſome others thinke, that it is onely meant, as he commanded him, when hee charged him to attend diligently to the Word of the Lord in generall: But for ſo much as we read not of any word of the Lord in particular to Ioſhua for the ſetting up of 12 ſtones in Iordan, or of the Prieſts ſtanding in the midſt of Iordan till all things were done: it is probable that hee had direction herein from Moſes, before his death; and that we might not thinke that he did this of his owne head, theſe words are here added, as Moſes commanded Ioſhua. Ferus from the ſetting up of theſe ſtones gathereth, that they doe ill that are againſt images, which bee ſet up in Churches for a memoriall; onely willing that Paſtors ſhould teach the people the right uſe of them, and to keep them from being abuſed: For the ſtones ſet up in Gilgal were afterwards abuſed by the peoples comming and ſacrificing upon them, as alſo was the brazen Serpent ſet up by Moſes. Thus he. But Images in Churches are not like unto theſe ſtones, and they are by Gods commandment forbidden for the errors which cannot but bee in them; and therefore the onely way to keep men from ſinning hereby, is to pluck them downe as Hezekiah did the brazen Serpent.

Maſius.
R. David Kimchi
Calvin.

Ferus.

Heb.2.18.

V. 11. And when all the people were cleane paſſed over, the Arke of the Lord paſſed over, &c.
This was not done till the Lord commanded it, as is expreſſed, v. 16. which ſheweth the great faith of the Prieſts bearing the Arke, although they ſaw the waters ready to overwhelme them, and all the people were gone out of the danger, but they remained alone, yet they ſtirred not from their place, till they were directed by the Lord to paſſe over.

V. 12. And the children of Reuben and of Gad, &c. paſſed over armed before the children of Iſrael, as Moſes commanded, &c. Of this order taken before by Moſes for their going over before the reſt, and that the 40000 here ſaid to have gone over, were not all the men of Warre in theſe two Tribes and an half, ſee upon V. 14. Chap. 1. 12, 13. and the Myſtery of this, v. 14, 15, 16. Here it is noted, that by this miracle God magnified Joſhua, as he had ſaid, Ch. 3. 7. and ſo the V. 16, 17. people were moved to reverence him, as they had done Moſes. Here the Lord biddeth Joſhua to command the Prieſts to come up out of Jordan, &c. The Lyra. Hebrews, ſaith Lyra, hereupon faigne, that they ſtanding upon the further brinke of the River, went up upon that ſide, becauſe he ſaith not, paſſe over, and then Iordan returning to his wonted courſe, they were miraculouſly tranſported
V. 19. upon the Ark, and ſet beyond all the people. But to let paſſe ſo groſſe a fiction; this comming over Iordan is noted, v. 19. to have been the 10 day of the firſt moneth, the ſingular providence of God appearing herein, to bring the people of Iſrael into Canaan at the beſt time of the year, when the harveſt was now at hand, thus granting them immediately to reape that which others had ſowed, and this was 40 full yeares within 5 dayes, after their comming out of Egypt; ſo that they could no ſooner be prepared after this by circumciſing, but the time came of eating the Paſſeover, viz. the 15 day of this month.
And they pitched in Gilgal, on the eaſt border of Iericho; that is, in a place, which was afterwards called Gilgal, Ch. 5. 9. but here it is ſo called by anticipation.
This place was famous for the Circumciſion made there, for the firſt Paſſeover kept there, for Ioſhua his abode there at ſundry times afterwards, and the 1 Sam. 11. remaining of the Arke long there, and Sauls inauguration there to the Kingdome.
Ioſeph. lib. 5. de bell. Iudai. c. 1. It was directly between Iordan and Iericho, ſaith Ioſephus, but within 10 furlongs of Iericho, and 50 from Iordan: and Ierom ſaith it was 2 miles from Hieron. in loc. Hebr. Iericho. But Adricomius, that it was nearer to Iordan then to Iericho, and that to goe from Bethabara to Iericho, a man muſt decline to Gilgal to come thither.

V. 20. Here Ioſhua is ſaid to pitch the 12 ſtones, that is, appointed them to be pitched
V. 21, 22. by the 12 men that brought them out of Iordan; and now he ſheweth the uſe of them to all the people, as he had done before to the 12 bearers, v. 6, 7. hereupon they muſt from time to time take occaſion to tell their children of the dividing of Iordan for them to goe through on dry ground, and alſo of the Red ſea, that all the world might know the power of the Lord, although Note. they profit little by it, but Iſrael might learne hence to feare him. And this Calvin. is the different effect of the marvailous workes of God in the wicked of the world, and his faithfull people; they are onely moved to wonder, and ſo paſſe them over without further profiting; but theſe are edified in the feare and grace of God hereby; to this effect Calvin.

The myſtery. Myſtically by the 12 ſtones ſet up in Gilgal, ſaith Ferus, are ſet forth the 12
Apoſtles, and their preaching, manifeſting all things, by thoſe in Iordan, the Prophets, in whoſe writings they are more obſcurely contained, as it were under the water, but both tend to the ſetting forth of the ſame, as both theſe monuments did. And as the Iſraelites came not empty out of the water of Iordan, but brought up ſtones with them; ſo the truly baptized come up out of the water of Baptiſme, laden with the fruits of the Spirit. The Prieſts bearing the Arke going in before all the people, and then comming up and going againe before them, when they were to fight againſt their enemies, ſhewed, that the Miniſters of Gods Word are a defence unto his people, who ſo ſoone as they are baptized ſhall be aſſaulted with ſpirituall enemies. Their comming up the 10 day of the firſt moneth, which was the day that the Paſchall Lamb

Origen. Iſidor.

Lamb was taken, Exo. 12. ſhewed, that when we are baptized, we muſt ſtraightway prepare to fight under Chriſts banner, who is the true Paſchall Lambe, againſt the world, the fleſh, and Devill. And as Origen hath it, be exerciſed in vertue, which is the very entring into the promiſed Land. Iſidor by the ſtones carryed out, will have the examples of the Apoſtles underſtood, which wee muſt carry in our minds, that we may imitate them in their vertuous actions. The 12 ſtones ſet in Jordan, ſaith Lyra, are the 12 fruits of the Spirit in the truly baptized recited *Gal.*5.19.

CHAP. V.

Ferus. 1 Cor.9.

HEre ſaith Ferus, beginneth the ſecond part of Joſhua, wherein is ſhewed how the people of Iſrael were put in poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan, not by their owne, but by the power of God, who did all for them. Yet hee would have them to fight: to ſhew, that onely through his grace wee attaine the heavenly Canaan, and not by our owne workes, yet wee muſt labour and fight, and run, that we may obtaine, but it is God that fighteth in us, and by us, and from whom all our ſtrength commeth, and which crowneth at the laſt his gifts in us.

V. 1. Note. Rom.8. Jam.4 7. 1 Pet.5.9. Lyra.

And when the Kings of the Amorites heard, &c. their hearts melted, neither was there ſpirit any more in them. In this example we may ſee the caſe of all the wicked, who have an evill conſcience, before judgement, they feare nothing, but encourage one another in their evill wayes, but then their hearts utterly faile, and they ſee that all their multitudes, and munitions, and riches are of no force to defend them. But as for the people of God, their very confidence in him, is their victory againſt all their ſpirituall enemies. If hee bee on our ſide, who can be againſt us? The Devill himſelfe quaileth and fleeth, if we by faith in God reſiſt him. And the ſingular providence of God herein appeared, as Lyra noteth, to ſtrike ſuch terrour at this time into the people of the Land, that they durſt not come forth to fight with Iſrael, when as they were to be circumciſed, and ſo made unfit for battell, as we may ſee in the Sechemites, *Gen.*34. Of the melting of their hearts, ſee before *Chap.*2.11.

V. 2. V. 4,5. Qu.

Make thee ſharp knives, and circumciſe againe the ſecond time the children of Iſrael, &c. The reaſon why this was now done, is rendred in the verſes following, viz. becauſe all they that had been born ſince their comming out of Egypt, which was 40 yeares, were hitherto uncircumciſed, and theſe were now the greater part of the people, for all that came out of Egypt from 20 yeares old and upward, were dead, except two, as was threatned, Numb. 14.29. and noted to be accompliſhed, *Numb.*26.64,65. and except the men of the Tribe of Levi, as Lyra noteth upon Numb. 14. But what meaneth hee by ſaying, Circumciſe them the ſecond time? Lyra anſwereth well, not that the ſame men who had been circumciſed before, ſhould now againe bee circumciſed; but that there ſhould now be a ſolemne circumciſing of many together the ſecond time, as there had been a firſt in the dayes of Abraham, *Gen.*17. Auguſtine more fully, the children of Iſrael are conſidered as one people, of which ſome were hitherto uncircumciſed; wherefore hee biddeth here, Circumciſe the children of Iſrael the ſecond time, that is, in them, who had not yet beene circumciſed, ſo that here is no ground for baptizing any twice over, Qu. 6. in Joſh. The Rabbins fondly imagine, that the firſt circumciſing, in regard of which, this is called the ſecond, was of many other people that came with them out of Egypt at the time of their departing thence, but this is ſo abſurd, both for that no ſuch thing is mentioned, and becauſe there was no time to doe it, and being done, it would have made them unfit for travaile, that it falleth in the very naming.

Calvin.

For the reaſon why they remained uncircumciſed, it is generally held, ſaith Calvin, that they circumciſed not all the time of their travaile in the wilderneſſe, becauſe circumciſing maketh unfit for travaile; and although they ſtayed long in ſome places, yet they were alwayes uncertaine when they ſhould remove, but hee rejecteth this, as not being a reaſon ſufficient to neglect ſo holy an ordinance ſo ſtrictly injoyned, and rendreth another; viz. becauſe upon their murmuring, *Numb.*14. the Lord was ſo offended with them, that hee had in a manner caſt them off from being his people; and therefore they durſt not all this while uſe the ſigne of his Covenant, till that they had againe an expreſſe command from him ſo to do. Whereas it is ſaid againſt this, that the time of their remaning uncircumciſed did not then firſt begin when they murmured, but immediately upon their comming out of Egypt; hee anſwereth, when it is ſaid, all the people that were borne after their comming out of Egypt by the way, they had not circumciſed. It is not to be underſtood but of them that were borne after that murmuring, becauſe they are ſaid to bee the children whom God raiſed up in the ſtead of thoſe Rebels: wherefore he affirmeth them that were borne in the way till that time, to have beene circumciſed; but this is plainly againſt the Text, ſaying, All that were borne after their comming out, were not circumciſed. Whereas it is further ſaid, that this could not bee a reaſon of withholding Circumciſion from them; becauſe although their Fathers were rejected, yet they were the people to whom the Lord promiſed, after the deſtruction of their Fathers, that hee would give them the land of Canaan; hee ſaith it was done for a chaſtiſement to their parents, the ſigne of Gods Covenant being onely ſuſpended from their children for a time, being afterwards brought forth, and other pledges of his Grace being in the meane ſeaſon ſupplyed unto them. With Calvin agreeth Vaſquez herein, and Maſius and Pererius upon *Gen.*17. ſaying, that their being in travaile upon the way continually, could be no reaſon of deferring, becauſe H*ippora* circumciſed the ſonne of Moſes upon the way, *Exod.*4. and ſtayed not for his healing. St. Auguſtine and Comeſtor ſay, that the men that periſhed in the wilderneſſe, were rebellious & diſobedient, and would not circumciſe their children. But if ſo, Moſes would certainly have reproved them therefore, which we do not read that he did. Jerome, Theodoret, and Damaſcen ſay, that the reaſon why they circumciſed not in this time, was becauſe Circumciſion was a note of diſtinction to diſtinguiſh the Iſraelites from other peoples of the World; wherefore in Egypt, when there was danger of mingling with others, they diligently circumciſed all their children, and when they came now into Canaan; but in the wilderneſſe there being no ſuch danger, they circumciſed not any of them. Lyra, Toſtatus, Maſius, & Tho. Aquinas render the firſt reaſon, becauſe of their travail, againſt which Calvin and Vaſquez doe argue ſo earneſtly, ſhewing, that the offence taken by the Lord at the rebellion, could not bee the reaſon.

Vaſquez in 3 Part. Diſp. 164. *c.*2. A. Maſius.

Auguſt. qu. 6. Schol. Hiſtoria.

*Hieron. in Gal.*6 Theod. qu. 2. in Joſh. Damaſ. lib. 4. *de fide, c.*26.

Lyra, Toſtatus, Maſius, Tho. Aquin. part 3. qu. 7. art. 4.

1. Becauſe they being all conſumed, their poſterity ſhould then doubtleſſe have been circumciſed, which was four or five months before this.

2. Becauſe the Levites were not in that rebellion, and therefore it could bee no cauſe why their children ſhould not be circumciſed.

3. The children of all that were under 20 yeares of age at the time of that rebellion, ſhould not have been ſuſpended from Circumciſion all this time, if that had been the reaſon, becauſe God was not ſo offended with them for their minority; but when he threatned their Fathers with conſumption in the wilderneſſe, he promiſed that they ſhould poſſeſſe the land of Canaan. Rejecting then this reaſon, I hold, that neither their being in travaile was the ſole cauſe, nor becauſe Circumciſion was not neceſſary for a note of diſtinction all this time, becauſe there was more in Circumciſion then to diſtinguiſh, viz. to ſignifie Gods Covenant of Grace, and to ſeale it unto them. But partly for this reaſon, and partly out of a Fatherly indulgence towards them, that the children borne in the time of their travaile, might not bee put in danger of their lives; but chiefly becauſe all this time they were under the cloud, a new pledge of Gods favour, ſo that whilſt that remained, they had no need of any other outward right to ſeale it up unto them, but ſo ſoone as it was taken away, then Circumciſion muſt be uſed againe. Their being under the conduct of that cloud, is by Saint Paul called a being baptized in the cloud; wherefore to ſhew that Baptiſm comming, circumciſion ſhould give place unto it, and then ceaſe, It ceaſed now all the time of this baptizing. Burgeni, ſaith Lyra, objecteth againſt the former determination, that this is called the ſecond times circumciſing, with reference to Abrahams circumciſing, becauſe it is ſaid, Circumciſe the children of Iſrael the ſecond time, whereas then there were no children of Iſrael; and ſaith, that there were many out of an inordinate love to their children, fearing leſt death ſhould enſue, that did not circumciſe them in Egypt, as is intimated in Moſes, who circumciſed not his Son till hee was forced to it; therefore before the Paſſeover kept in Egypt they were all circumciſed, and in reſpect of that is this called the ſecond time. But Lyra anſwereth well, that this is but an imagination, and that Iſrael was in Abraham when he circumciſed.

1 Cor. 10. 1,2.

But to returne to the matter in hand: Ferus rendreth the two former of theſe reaſons, and approveth alſo of that of Auguſtine, taken from the pertinacy of their parents; and finally addeth another, viz. to beate downe the glorying of the Jewes in their Circumciſion, and to commend Gods grace towards the uncircumciſed: For what were they, when God ſhewed ſo many favours unto them, and gave them victory over the Midianites, and the two Kings of the Amorites, and brought them miraculouſly through Jordan into the very land of Canaan, but an uncircumciſed people? Wherefore it was hereby taught, that Circumciſion is nothing, neither were they hereby commended, as deſerving any thing, but grace alone is that from which all favours flow, and which bringeth to the heavenly Canaan. When Joſhua is ſaid to circumciſe the people, it is to be underſtood, that it was done by his direction; for he alone could not poſſibly in this time circumciſe ſo many, being moſt probably 1000000, and the time to doe it but one day, for they came up out of Jordan the 10 day, and three dayes they muſt have to heale them againe before the Paſſeover, and the 14 day they kept the Paſſeover, v. 10. before the eating of which they muſt needs be circumciſed, for no uncircumciſed perſon might eate thereof. Once onely doe we read of their keeping of it, ſince their comming out of Egypt, viz. Numb. 9. which was within one yeare, but never after, till this time, and then there were none uncircumciſed to eat of it, for ſuch as had been born ſince their comming out of Egypt, till that time, were but ſucking Infants: and this may be another reaſon of the delay of their Circumciſion hitherto: viz. becauſe Circumciſion was a preparative to the Paſſeover, to make men fit to eate it, but in this regard there was no need of it all that time. If it ſhall ſeeme that there was all that time then a great defect in the Church, they being without a Paſſeover 39 years, it is to be underſtood that they had a more divine Sacrament in ſtead of it, viz. the Manna which came from heaven, and the waters flowing out of the Rock, touching which it is ſaid, they did all eate of the ſame ſpirituall meat, and dranke of the ſame ſpirituall drinke, 1 Cor. 10. 2,3. If a queſtion be made, how ſo many thouſands could be circumciſed all in one day? It is eaſily anſwered, ſome circumciſing themſelves, as Abraham, and all, both men and women helping to circumciſe the reſt, the women, infants, and men thoſe of a greater age.

[r] Ferus.

Touching the ſharpe Knives which he is bidden to take to circumciſe withall, enough hath been ſpoken upon Exod. 4.25. whether they were ſharp ſtones, as the Septuagint have it, or ſharpe knives, as in our Tranſlation. The words here uſed are חרבות-צורים, gladios acierum, or gladios petrinos, and for knives made of ſharpe ſtones out of the rock, Theodoret rendreth 2 reaſons. 1. Becauſe the Hebrews after this long travaile, had but few knives amongſt them, but ſharpe ſtones were obvious every where in the wilderneſſe. 2. Becauſe Chriſt our rock was moſt aptly ſet forth hereby, in whom we are circumciſed with a circumciſion not made with hands. But his literall reaſon is of no force, becauſe if there had been ſuch a ſcarcity of Swords at this time, how ſhould they have armed themſelves to fight? And it is of as little force, which is brought by Bonfrerius the Jeſuite, that although wee are ignorant of knives of ſtone, yet amongſt the Americans they are altogether uſed, and Catullus maketh mention of gelding with a flint. Devolvit ipſe acuto ſibi pudera ſilice, and

Theod.

Catul. Carm. de Berecinthia.

Juvenalis with a ſhell; Mollia qui rupta ſecuit genitalia teſta; and Pliny likewiſe lib.35.c.11. de Gallis Sacerdotibus; and Arnobius, lib.5. contra gentes, and in the Epigrams of the Greeks we read of Pens to write withall, made with ſharpe ſtones. For ſeeing the Jews uſed not ſtones, but raſors to circumciſe withall, as appeareth by their practice at this day, nothing can bee inferred upon thoſe teſtimonies for circumciſing with flints. Touching the time of their circumciſing, when they were now entred into Canaan, and their enemies were neare unto them, to prepare them to battell, by making them unfit to defend themſelves if they had beene aſſaulted, is ſtrange. But thus God Calvin. would prove their faith, ſaith Calvin, and teach them to truſt in his aide onely, and not in their owne ſtrength. Wherefore hee let all the time of their being in the plaines of Moab paſſe without circumciſing, and now calleth them to it; neither did they diſobey, for feare of being thus expoſed as a prey to their enemies, but through faith ſubmitted themſelves to his Note. command; which ſhewes that they had well profited by the judgements of God upon their rebellious parents; and we are taught by their example, not to conſult with fleſh and blood, but in all things to obey God commanding us, Ferus. as being the ſafeſt for us. Ferus ſaith that they were now circumciſed for three Reaſons: 1. To ſhew that they held, and would continue in the ſame faith with their Father Abraham, to whom this ſigne was firſt given. 2. That they would be ſeparated from the wicked manners of the heathen Canaanites, into whoſe Land they were now come, and would have nothing common with them. 3. For the myſtery which was chiefly reſpected herein, viz. our Jeſus his bringing of us into the Land of life, by our drawing the ſword, and fighting as it were with our ſelves. For as they firſt cut their owne bodies, and ſhed their owne blood, and then the blood of their enemies; ſo muſt we fight Col. 3. 5. againſt our ſelves, and mortifie our members upon earth; for there lurk within us moſt wicked enemies, pride, luſt, covetouſneſſe, hatred, and luxury, theſe muſt firſt be mortified, or elſe we ſhall never get the victory over the Devill, and come into the poſſeſſion of the promiſed Land. It is true, it is painfull by penitency thus to ſubdue our ſelves, ſo it was painfull to be circumciſed, but it is thus irrecoverably decreed, either the paine of circumciſing thus the heart muſt bee indured with the Iſraelites, or elſe we muſt periſh with the Canaanites. And this ſecond circumciſing, ſhewed a ſecond waſhing to be neceſſary for every Joh. 13. one that would be ſaved, of which the Lord ſpeaketh, ſaying, He that is waſhed, needeth not ſave to waſh his feet. We muſt not waſh by being againe baptized, but by cleanſing us from the filthineſſe of ſinne by repentance from time to time continually. And this circumciſing cannot be made but by Chriſt, and his Word and Spirit, ſet forth in the ſharpe ſtones now prepared to circumciſe withall; thus Ferus; following that tranſlation, Take thee ſharpe ſtones.

V. 9. And the Lord ſaid, This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you: wherefore the name of the place is called Gilgal.

What is meant here by the reproach of Egypt divers conjecture diverſly. Lyra. Lyra having mentioned ſome, goeth with the Hebrews, ſaying, that before the going of the people out of Egypt, the Aſtrologers of Egypt ſaid unto them, Miſerable people, whither will ye goe from us? for we doe find, that if yee goe, your blood ſhall bee ſhed: ſo that hereupon they were condemned as doing fooliſhly to bring themſelves to deſtruction by their going out: but now their blood was ſhed in Circumciſion to their honour, and ſo they could no more be Hugo Cardin. caſt in the teeth herewith. Hugo by the reproach underſtandeth originall ſin, a remedy againſt which was Circumciſion, which the Egyptians wanted, and therfore it was their reproch. Or their ſervitude under the Egyptians, from which they were not fully delivered, til they were circumciſed; and therefore the place is called Galgal, ſignifying liberty. But this of expounding Galgal, liberty, is rejected both by Lyra and Calvin, although taken from Joſephus, ſeeing it ſignifieth Ferus. no ſuch thing, witneſſe both Jerom and Remigius. Ferus hath none other expoſition but myſticall, I have taken away ſin from you, which is the reproach of the wicked: who ſhall be upbraided hereby, but the truly circumciſed not,

be-

Calvin. becauſe none of their ſinnes are imputed unto them. Calvin ſaith, that ſome hold their uncircumciſion hitherto to be meant by the reproach of Egypt, and of other Gentiles, becauſe this was by the Hebrews held to be ignominious in them and others, that the Egyptians hitherto might object unto them, that they went not out to ſerve the Lord, but other Gods, which reproach was now done away, by this their ſo ready ſubmitting to Gods ordinance. But he preferreth another; viz. That it was held by the Egyptians to be reproachfull to them, to goe rebelliouſly away from under their King, this reproach was done away by renewing the old ſigne of their ſubjection to the Lord, it being hereby declared that they were not Pharaohs ſervants, but wrongfully by him ſubjected, and that of old, long before their comming into Egypt, they were the Lords inheritance, and his peculiar people; ſo that this ſigne hereof being againe renewed at this time, the ſame was publiquely teſtified, and none could henceforth any more impute rebellion unto them, and juſtly blame them thereby. To mee it ſeemeth rather, that by this reproach was meant the Egyptians traducing them, that howſoever they pretended piety to their God in their going out of Egypt, yet this was but a pretext, and that by conjuration Moſes wrought thoſe wonders to deliver them, as appeared hitherto by the ſequel: for when they were gone forth, they ſacrificed not to God, as they pretended, but to other Gods, as is teſtified Acts 7.42. Neither did they now any more circumciſe their children, as they ſaid before they had commandment from him to doe; and therefore the Lord accordingly dealt with them, conſuming them in the Wilderneſſe, and not bringing them to the promiſed land, which they boaſted of. For theſe things might all this while ſeem moſt ignominious to Iſrael; but now they being brought through Jordan miraculouſly into Canaan, when Moſes was dead, and religiouſly circumciſing themſelves and their children, this reproach was taken away. As for that of the Hebrewes and Lyra, it is grounded upon a fable; The ſecond of Hugo hath been already confuted, and his firſt, as that of Ferus is rather allegoricall then literall. For the firſt mentioned by Calvin, uncircumciſion could not bee meant by the reproach of Egypt, becauſe, as Herodotus hath it, and Origen, they alſo circumciſed, as I have ſhewed upon Gen. 17. The ſecond is the ſame briefly with this of mine. The laſt, which is Calvins owne, is not ſo probable, becauſe their bringing out of Egypt with ſo mighty an hand, ringing in the eares of all men, did ſufficiently vindicate them from the imputation of a rebellious revolt, that being not their act, but the act of the Almighty. For the name [Gilgal] given to this place, it is ſo plainely taken from גלותי I have rolled, that it is a marvaile that any ſhould ſeeke out any other derivation, as from גלגל a Spheare, or a wheel, for the round figure of the foreskins cut off, or from liberty, as was before noted. This name Gilgal was the ſecond name of this place, being called, Verſe 3. the hill of Foreskins.

V. 10. And the children of Iſrael encamped in Gilgal, and kept the Paſſeover the 14 day of the moneth at even in the plaines of Jericho. This was the time appointed at the firſt inſtitution, Exod. 12. and that they ſhould eate it with unleavened bread, as here it was done. Qu. Some inquire here whether the people left on the other ſide of Jordan did now alſo eate the Paſſeover, and whether they were circumciſed before as theſe were, becauſe nothing is ſaid of them? And it is anſwered, that they did not, neither was it yet required of them, becauſe it muſt be eaten onely in the place which the Lord ſhould chooſe, after the ſtate of the Church ſetled in Canaan, that they might know whither to reſort to eate it. And for circumciſing, that it is not to bee doubted, but that now, or ſoone after, order was taken that they alſo ſhould be circumciſed, as their brethren had been.

Qu. Further, it is inquired with what bread the Paſſeover was now eaten? Toſtatus anſwereth, they might eate it with Manna; but the Text ſaith expreſly, V. 11. That they eate unleavened bread, and parched corne, of the old corne of the Land the morrow after the Paſſeover: And therefore moſt probably they wanted not ſuch corne at this time to make unleavened bread. If they did, it was celebrated with ſuch as they had, as before at Mount Sinai, Numb.9.

V. 12. And the Manna ceaſed on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corne of the Land,&c. That is, the 16 day of that moneth, for the Paſſeover was kept the 14 day at even. They erre then, who will have this ceſſation of Manna, to be the 15 day, when as indeed the 15 day was the day of eating the Paſſeover, the even at the end of the 14 day being the beginning thereof, as hath been Note. ſhewed upon Exod. 12. And herein the great mercy of God appeared, that howſoever they were rebellious againſt him, yet as long as need required, he ſupplyed them with bread from Heaven; and therefore hee will much more provide for all that put their truſt in him. And by the ceſſation of Manna at Calvin. this very time, ſaith Calvin, the Lord taught them, that Manna fell not by any naturall meanes from the clouds, but that he by his ſingular providence gave it them.

V. 13. And when Joſhua was by Jericho, he lift up his eyes, and looked, and behold there ſtood a man over againſt him with a ſword drawne in his hand, &c. Joſhua, ſaith Ferus. Ferus, now expecting further direction from God what to doe, this Angel with a drawne ſword appeareth unto him for his comfort, by the very apparition ſhewing that it was not the ſword of man, but of God, whereby the Canaanites ſhould be deſtroyed; as it is not ours, but the power of God, whereby the Devill is ſubdued. And he noteth, that the Lord at divers times appeared diverſly, as the condition of his people required. 1. When they were in Egypt, in a flame of fire to Moſes. 2. In the Wilderneſſe in a cloud
3. In this place with a ſword. Joſhua goeth to him, and asketh, Art thou for us, or for our adverſaries. Wherein the boldneſſe of the juſt appeareth, and that 1 John 4. 1. they feare nothing; and in his example we are taught to try the Spirits, whether V.14. they be of God or no. He anſwered, As a Captaine of the Lords Hoſt am I come: teaching both that the Angels of God are over Countreys and peoples to defend them, and that they are Warriers to fight for them, and that all Epheſ. 6.12. the faithfull are Souldiers under them, and to fight againſt their ſpirituall enemies.
And Joſhua fell on his face to the earth and worſhipped. Thus the ſervants of God, ſeeing his great care over them, ought in thankfulneſſe to humble Gen. 17. themſelves, and worſhip before him, ſo Abraham did before, and David. And 2 Sam. 7. not onely to worſhip, but to be ready to obey, as Joſhua was; wherefore hee ſaith, What ſaith my Lord unto his Servant?

V. 15. And the Captain of the Lords Hoſt ſaid, Looſe thy ſhooe from off thy foot, &c. Of this ſee before, Exod.3.4. This is commanded for reverence, and as a ſigne of humility, and reſigning a mans ſelfe to the will of God, to be guided by him.
Calvin. Calvin thinketh that Joſhua now went out alone to view Jericho, and to ſee in what part he might beſt aſſault it, but not unprepared to fight if he ſhould meet with any enemy: At this time Chriſt appeared unto him in the ſhape of a man, for otherwiſe he could not have called himſelfe a Captaine of the Lords Hoſt, which is both in heaven and in earth. And this apparition was not onely for the preſent, but ever after to teach the people, that they gat the poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan, not by their owne ſword, but the Lord fighting for them. His bidding Joſhua to put off his ſhooes was for reverence, and in ſaying, that the ground whereupon hee ſtood was holy ground, hee commended that Land in ſpeciall, as ſanctified to the pure Worſhipping of God there. And he ſaith, that Joſhua lifted up his eyes and ſaw a man, to note the certainty of the Viſion, Joſhua being herein graced, as Moſes had been, with familiarly conferring with the Lord, to procure more honour to him before the people.

Lyra. This Angel, ſay the Hebrews, was Michael, Dan. 10. called their Prince; and his affirming of that ground to be holy, ſaith Lyra, was in reſpect of the apparition of the Angel in the likeneſſe of a man. I hold with Calvin that he was the Sonne of God; and his appearing now like a man, was a præludium of his future incarnation, for otherwiſe he would not have ſuffered Joſhua to worſhip him, as an Angel appearing to Daniel, and to John, ſtraightly Maſius forbade it: Thus alſo Maſius, and Origen. And Chap. 6. 2. hee is called יהוה by

by a name proper to God; when being demanded whether he were on Joſhua his ſide, or his enemies, he anſwered, nay, it is commonly expounded, I am not on your enemies ſide; but by Calvin and ſome others, I am not either of the Hebrews or Canaanites, for I am no mortall man. But the common expoſition agreeth better, ſeeing the queſtion was not, whether hee were of them, or of their enemies, but of what ſide he was. For theſe words, When Joſhua was by Jericho,. Hebr. is in Jericho, which Jerome expreſſeth thus, in the field of Jericho, which is called Jericho, as the ground belonging to any other City is called by the name of the City.

The Myſterie. Ferus.

Myſtically, the terrour ſtricken into the Amorites and Canaanites, when Joſhua had led the people through Jordan, ſhewed the weakneſſe of our ſpirituall enemies before us through Jeſus, who is more mighty then they all, ſo that we may confidently fight againſt the Devill, being ſure through him our leader of the victory. The Lords appointing Circumciſion before they fight with their enemies, ſhewed, as hath been already noted, that we muſt fight firſt with our ſelves, and cut off our evill luſts, the enemies within us. Joſhua his circumciſing of them, that Jeſus onely by his ſpirit can doe this, and by his Word, that we may ſeek to him. The ſecond time of circumciſing, before the promiſed Land could be poſſeſſed, a ſecond waſhing after Baptiſme by repentance Their ſtaying in Gilgal till they were healed, ſhewed the weakneſſe of Chriſtian people at the firſt, for which cauſe they muſt ſeek to be more confirmed, and not till then put themſelves upon any great attempts, as the Apoſtles were bidden to ſtay at Jeruſalem, till they had received the holy Ghoſt; and the Lord told Peter, thou canſt not follow me now, but thou ſhalt follow me hereafter. The rolling away from them the reproach of Egypt ſhewed our deliverance from ſinne, and the ignominy thereof, when we are circumciſed in heart. The keeping of the Paſſeover before they proceed to battell, our ſeeking to God and for his favour, before we goe upon any great enterprize. And this Paſſeover was the third, which they kept, for they kept one in Egypt, when they were delivered from the bondage of Pharaoh. 2. At Mount Sinai, when they had received the Law. 3. Being now entred into Canaan, to ſhew that we muſt praiſe God; 1. For our deliverance by the blood of Chriſt. 2. For the holy Ghoſt ſent downe to inſtruct us. 3. For the heavenly Canaan now made our poſſeſſion. The ceaſing of Manna when they had eaten of the Corne of Canaan, ſhewed the ceaſing of the meanes of grace when we come to heaven. The Iſraelites were fed with three kinds of food; 1. With that which they brought out of Egypt. 2. With bread from heaven. 3. With the fruit of Canaan: and that which they brought out of Egypt failed, when they had Manna from heaven, and Manna failed when they had the fruits of Canaan: ſo wee are fed at the firſt with worldly wiſdome, but this bringeth not to life, wee feed thus no more, when Manna commeth, then with the VVord of God, all the time of our being in the Wilderneſſe of this World; laſtly, with heavenly light and joy, when that which is in part, ceaſeth, faith and hope vaniſh, and charity onely continueth.

Numb. 9.

1 Cor. 13.

The appearing of a man to Joſhua with a ſword did ſet forth Chriſt, the Captain of the Lords Armies, who being with us, we ſhal not need to fear who can be againſt us; his bidding Joſhua to looſe his ſhooes from off his feet, the charge given unto us, not to live after the manner of other Gentiles, as formerly we have done, and to humble our ſelves before God, and to reſign our ſelves to his government, being hereunto moved, becauſe the Church, of which we are is holy; otherwiſe as the polluters of his houſe, the Lord will whip us out, and this Land will prove a Land unto us devouring the Inhabitants thereof, if we live wickedly, as it was ſaid of the Land of Canaan; thus Ferus. By circumciſing the ſecond time, the Ordin. Gloſſe underſtandeth the Gentiles converſion unto Chriſt, as the firſt, of their forſaking of Idols, and now truly is the reproach of Egypt removed; ſinne, which is ſhamefull, is no more imputed; but if thou returneſt to ſinning againe, a farre greater reproach commeth upon thee, viz. the crucifying againe of the Lord of Life, and the taking of his member, and making it the member of an harlot. Their keeping of the Paſſeover after Circumciſion and the reproach of Egypt removed, ſaith Origen. Origen, ſhewed, that no uncleane perſon can keep a feaſt unto the Lord, or come to his Supper. Their feeding upon bread brought with them out of Egypt, he alſo underſtandeth of the knowledge gotten by humane learning, which helpeth a little at the firſt towards Divine knowledge.

Matth. 21.

Numb. 13.

Gloſſe Ordin.

CHAP. VI.

V. 1,2. NOw Jericho was ſhut up ſtraitly, becauſe of the children of Iſrael, &c. And the Lord ſaid to Joſhua, ſee, I have given into thine hand Jericho, &c.

Jericho was two miles from Gilgal, being otherwiſe called the City of Palms for the abundance that grew there. It is ſaid, that none went in or out. They durſt not, ſaith Lyra, either goe in to defend Jericho, or they that were within V. 3,4. flee out to ſave themſelves. But the Lord now appearing to Joſhua, inſtructed him how he ſhould ſubdue it. He and all the men of Warre muſt goe about the City once a day, ſix dayes together, and ſeven times upon the ſeventh day, ſeven Prieſts blowing with Trumpets of Rams hornes before the Arke, promiſing that thus the walls ſhould fall downe.

The men of Jericho, ſaith Ferus, omitted no worldly meanes to defend Ferus. themſelves, but all in vaine, ſeing God was againſt them, againſt whoſe judgements they could not bee fenced, although they were fenced againſt men. And Note. thus doe all carnall men, in the time of danger, they flee to carnall meanes, but that which ſhould chiefly be intended, is by them neglected, viz. the pacifying of Gods wrath by repentance; and therefore all their preparations are in vaine. To expugne this City, no Warlike preparation is appointed, but onely to compaſſe it about, that the Victory might bee acknowledged to come of the Lord, and ſo we muſt confeſſe doth every good thing. For theſe words Jericho was ſtraitly ſhut up, Hebr. is סוגרת ומסגרת ſhutting, and ſhut up, that is, Maſius as Maſius hath it, ſhutting up thoſe that were within, that none could goe Chal. paraphra. out, and ſhut up againſt all others, that none could enter. The Chaldee, ſhut Calvin. up with Iron doores, and ſtrengthened with brazen barres. This, ſaith Calvin, is thus exactly ſet downe: that the miracle in opening the way, the walls being caſt downe, might be the more magnified, and that the ſtupidity of that people might appeare, thinking that gates and barres could defend them againſt his power which dryed up the waters of Jordan.

In compaſſing the City, the men of Warre went before, then the Prieſts with Trumpets, and after them the Arke, which all the people followed, v. 9, 10. and every of the ſix dayes they did thus once, the Prieſts onely ſounding, but no voice elſe being uttered by any; but upon the ſeventh, having compaſſed the City ſeven times, at the laſt ſounding with Trumpets, all the people ſhouted, and the walls fell downe. In mans reaſon this was no way to ſubdue a ſtrong City, for what could going about it doe, and ſounding with Trumpets, all the reſt being ſilent, as though they were affraid; and the ſeventh day going ſeven times about, being a meanes to weary them, and to make them unfit for the aſſault? But herein God both tryed their faith and obedience, and provided the more for the glorifying of his owne power. The Hebrews, ſaith Lyra. Lyra, by the men of War, underſtand only thoſe of the two Tribes and an half; but the Text ſaith, All yee men of Warre; and therefore that aſſertion is without ground. Some others, becauſe it is ſaid, v. 9. The rereward came after the Arke, ſay that the Danites, Aſher, and Nephthalim are meant; and therefore all the armed men went not before, but Judah, Iſſachar, and Zebulun, according to the order preſcribed, when they marched in the Wilderneſſe, Numb. 10.15. halfe the Army going before the Arke, and the other halfe after, which half that followed, is ſet forth by the ſame word that is here uſed מאסם. But becauſe this word ſignifieth the gathering, or Congregation ſhutting up the whole troope behinde, it may better here be underſtood of all the people; becauſe it is expreſſely ſaid, that all the armed, or Warriers ſhould goe before. And whereas, *Numb.*10. that part of the Army which followed the Arke, is ſet forth by this Word, it is becauſe together with them went all the weaker ſort, the aged, women and children. And therefore מאסף is here rendred by Jerome, reliquum vulgus. Yet Lyra argueth againſt this, holding, that onely the Tribe of Dan, and the reſt of the rereward of ſouldiers, are hereby meant; becauſe the Lord biddeth that all the armed men ſhould compaſſe the City, and not the Women, &c. Let the Reader follow which of theſe he pleaſeth. Whereas it is added in our Tranſlation, The Prieſts going on and blowing with Trumpets, Hebr. it is, The rereward followed the Arke, going on, and blowing with Trumpets. But becauſe it is certaine that none blew with Trumpets but the Prieſts, the word Prieſts is inſerted for more expreſſion; or it may be rendred, The Arke going on, and the blowing with Trumpets, which was by the Prieſts going before it. For Trumpets of Rams horns wherwith they ſounded, Hebr. is שופרות·וכלים Trumpets of Jubilees, of which, that they were of Rams hornes, ſee Levit. 25. Note here, how eaſie it is with the Lord to beat downe the Walls of any City, ſo that there is no reſiſtance to be made againſt him. And when he cauſed ſuch weake meanes to be uſed, the Inhabitants, when this was done from day to day, and nothing elſe, waxed now ſecure when their deſtruction was neareſt, and ſo it is with all the wicked, when they thinke the evill day furtheſt off, it ſhall ſuddenly come upon them. Note.

*V.*20. The people ſhouted with a great ſhout, and the wall fell downe flat. For theſe words fall downe flat, Hebr. is fall downe under it; and ſo it is rendred by the Septuagint and Chaldee, fell downe, and was ſwallowed up under it. Hereupon the Rabbins hold, that it ſunke into the ground: But rather it is meant, that it fell, the foundation under it being diſſolved, and falling away, or it fell into the ditch without it, ſaid to be under it becauſe it was much lower, and ſo the ditch being filled up with the wall, the paſſage into the City was made plaine. Now when the wall is ſaid to have falne downe, it muſt not be imagined that every part of it fell, but ſo much as whereby a ſufficient way was made for all the men of Warre immediately to enter in, for Rababs houſe ſtood upon the wall, which muſt needs be excepted from this ruine. And this was upon the ſeventh day, but whether upon the Sabbath day or no, as the Rabbins hold, is uncertaine, but in one of theſe ſeven dayes of compaſſing the City, it is certaine that there was a Sabbath, upon which no man might travaile; but God, who is above his owne laws, could at this time diſpenſe with the reſt of the Sabbath at his pleaſure. For the ſeven Prieſts, ſeven Trumpets, ſeven dayes compaſſing Jericho, and ſeven times blowing with Trumpets upon the ſeventh day; this was all done to make the number of ſeven the more famous, that the day of this number ſanctified from the beginning, might ſtill be had in more honour. Rabbini.

*V.*17. When Joſhua had taken order for this great ſhout making, by all the people at the laſt ſounding, he withall told them that the City of Jericho with all in it, ſhould be accurſed to the Lord, onely Rahab and her company excepted, warning them to take heed that they tooke not any accurſed thing upon paine of making themſelves accurſed, and the whole Campe, and troubling it. *V.*18.

*V.*19. But all the ſilver and gold, and Veſſels of braſſe and iron are conſecrated to the Lord, and they ſhall come into the Lords treaſury. Ioſhua could not ſpeake to be heard, ſaith Lyra, when it is ſaid he bade them ſhout, becauſe the people were ſo many, and the Trumpets continually ſounded; therefore it is to be underſtood, that he ſpake unto them by giving ſome ſignes. The word rendred accurſed here, is חרם, cut off, ſo that the meaning is, it ſhould be deſtroyed to the glory of God, the glory of his juſtice in taking revenge upon ſo ſinfull a place, to the utter deſtruction thereof for ever; and if any preſumed to take any thing in it to his owne uſe, it ſhould bee a חרם, or cutting off to him. Of this word ſee more, *Levit.*27.28. and *Deut.*13.17. For the mettall, ſilver and gold, braſſe and iron reſerved for the Lords Treaſury, the meaning is, that they ſhould be brought into the Tabernacle to bee uſed for the ſervice therein, or to be laid up as Monuments of this miraculous victory, and that none ſhould convert any of them to their private uſe, no not the Prieſts themſelves, as they might doe other devoted things called by this name of חרם, Numb. 18. 14. Beſides theſe mettalls, Tinne and Lead are mentioned, as reſerved out of the ſpoiles of the Midianites, Numb. 31. 22. but that which was then reſerved was for common uſe, this for the Tabernacle onely; and therefore there being herein, or in the Temple built afterwards no uſe of theſe mettals, they are not reſerved. The word חרם ſaith Lyra, ſignifieth both accurſed and conſecrated, and ſo it is here to be taken; for the beſt and moſt precious things were conſecrated to God, the reſt devoted to deſtruction.

V. 21. And they utterly deſtroyed all that was in the City, both men and women, young and old, &c. They did not thus to other Cities of the Canaanites which they tooke afterwards, but preſerved them for their owne habitation; why then was this Ferus. ſeverity uſed againſt Jericho above all other Cities? Anſw. Becauſe it is moſt probable that this place was the moſt wicked of all others; and here it ſeemeth were a miſcellany multitude of all the peoples to deſtroyed, ready firſt of all others to reſiſt the Iſraelites, as appeareth Joſh. 24. 11. and becauſe this was the firſt City of Canaan ſubdued, it was neceſſary that the richeſt ſpoiles thereof ſhould be conſecrated to the Lord, before they tooke any for themſelves; and that all things that had life ſhould bee killed, and the reſt burnt with fire for the greater terrour of the reſt; ſo Ferus. Here was a great temptation, ſaith Calvin, to the Iſraelites, in that expecting now to bee inriched with the ſpoiles of Jericho, they are thus prevented, and likewiſe when they were made to goe about the City ſeven dayes, and to doe nothing but blow, and that not with the ſilver Trumpets, but Trumpets of Rams hornes, wherein they might thinke themſelves mocked, but they obeyed in all things to prevaile.

V. 26. And Joſhua adjured them at that time, ſaying, Curſed be the man before the Lord, that riſeth up, and buildeth Jericho, he ſhal lay the foundation thereof in his firſt born, and in his youngeſt he ſhall ſet up the gates thereof. This City was thus ſeverely proceeded againſt, as for the reaſons before rendered, ſo that herein the utter deſtruction of the wicked world for ever at the laſt day might be figured out. This propheſie is noted to have taken effect in Hiel, 1 King. 16. 34. who was deprived of his children, when hee preſumed to build Jericho againe, both eldeſt and youngeſt, and ſo moſt probably had his name put out in Iſrael therefore, according to the meaning of this curſe againſt ſuch a builder. To this effect Calvin. Calvin ſaith, he ſhall lay the foundation in his firſt borne, being overwhelmed with the ſtones of this building, ſo audaciouſly erected without regard to ſo ſolemne a curſe, &c. and thus he ſhall be deprived of his iſſue, and thus all others underſtand it alſo: For God would have Jericho to lye in the ruines for a monument of this miraculous overthrow, that his people might always hereby be put in minde of that which he had done for them, and bee accordingly thankfull. And touching Rahab and all hers now preſerved according to the oath taken by the ſearchers, he ſaith that Joſhua did nothing herein contrary to the will of God, for he acknowledged God moderating in all that buſineſſe, and ſo although he was not ſworne, yet that hee was bound by that oath to ſhew this humanity to her, in whom ſuch faith had appeared: Whereas ſhee and her kindred being brought out from this deſtruction are ſaid, v. 23, to be left without the Campe of Iſrael, this was becauſe of their uncleanneſſe, they being yet Gentiles, till they ſhould by being made Proſelytes bee fit to come into the Aſſembly of Gods people, and bee made one with them.

The myſtery. Myſtically by Jericho the world is ſet forth, as both Lyra, Origen, Iſidor, and Ferus: for Jericho ſignifieth the Moone, like unto which the World is, for the mutability thereof, and therefore Chriſt reſtored to ſight the blind in Jericho, and called Zacheus the Publican there, and hereby he inſtituteth that parable of one travailing from Jeruſalem to Jericho. This Jericho is ſtrongly fenced with riches, power and glory, and hath for King, the Devill, for he is the God of this world. To ſubdue this Jericho, Jeſus ſendeth ſeven Prieſts to ſound with Trumpets of the Jubilee, that is, baſe ones of Rammes hornes, and not with ſilver ones inſtituted Numb. 10. which was done, when the Apoſtles were ſent out to Preach the Goſpel to all Nations, which was the ſounding with Trumpets of a Jubilee indeed, but this was counted as poore and ridiculous a meanes to ſubdue Nations to the Goſpel, as going about Jericho with ſuch blowing to overthrow the walls thereof, and after the Trumpets the Arke is carryed, when Chriſt figured hereby is preſent to his faithfull Miniſters, and is born by them in heart and mouth: Laſtly, a ſhouting of all the people is added, when Prayers are made unto God by his people with one conſent, and ſo the walls of this Jericho fall down, the pride, and pompe and errours of the world. That Preaching may well bee underſtood by blowing with Trumpets, wee may ſee in Eſa. Cry aloud, lift up thy voyce as a Trumpet. The people following the Arke muſt make no noiſe to bee heard, that is, no tumultuating noiſe, but in ſhouting the ſeventh day, that is, in Prayer; or they muſt not break out through zeale in any action, but by direction from the Word of God. as Calvin hath it. When the walls of Jericho fall down, all are deſtroyed, but Rahab and her houſe, becauſe ſhee received the Spyes, ſo when at the ſounding of the laſt Trumpet the world ſhall fall, all ſhall bee deſtroyed, but the Church converted from ſpirituall whoredome with divers luſts to the true Faith, and theſe are ſuch as receive the Miniſters of the Word, they being ſometime of the city of the devill are now joyned unto and inherit with the Iſrael of God. Jericho is made an Anathema to God, by killing all things living, and burning the reſt, but dedicating the beſt things unto him, to ſhew, that whatſoever evill liveth in us muſt bee mortifyed, whatſoever is dead, muſt have the fire of the ſpirit put to it, and whatſoever is good, muſt bee offered to God. Nothing of Jericho is taken by us, when wee have no communion with the wicked world in the evill manners and faſhions thereof. And laſtly, the builder of Jericho again, is accurſed, God would never have it built again, as neither Sodome nor Babylon, to ſet forth hereby the periſhing of the wicked for ever in hell fire, as their ſudden deſtruction, by the ſudden falling of theſe walls. And morally hee is accurſed, ſaith Ferus, that bringeth in Idolatry, cheriſheth ſuperſtition, nouriſheth impiety, defends injuſtice, or brings in carnall living. And in ſpeaking of their compaſſing Jericho ſeven dayes, he ſaith alſo it is morally taught, how wee ſhould compaſſe the world to deſtroy it in our ſelves. 1. By meditating upon the vanity of worldly things. 2. Upon their inſtability. 3. Their brevity. 4. Their taking of us from God. 5. From a bleſſed life. 6. Upon the labour in getting them, and care in keeping. 7. By hearing the Word of God and Prayer.

CHAP. VII.

V. 1. BUT the children of Iſrael committed a treſpaſſe in the accurſed thing: for Achan the ſon of Carmi, the ſon of Zabdi, &c. took of the accurſed thing, and the anger of the Lord was kindled againſt the children of Iſrael. Here was fulfilled, that which was threatned Ch. 6. 18. if any man ſhould take of the accurſed or conſecrated thing, the whole Army ſhould bee troubled. But how juſtly the ſin of one is imputed to all, and all ſuffer for it, is the queſtion; Qu. eſpecially ſeeing in the Law it is determined, every one ſhall bee put to death for his own ſin, and not the children for the Fathers, &c. Deut. 24. 16. Auguſtine anſwereth, that thoſe Laws was made for men that are judges, Auguſt qu. 8. in Joſh. the Lord reſerving ſtill a Liberty to himſelf, to extend his puniſhments further, as hee in his divine wiſdome ſeeth cauſe, who ſeeth into all ſecrets, which are hidden from men. Hee knoweth by his high and inviſible counſell, how farre to extend his temporall puniſhments, and wholſome terrour. For in the generall adminiſtration nothing hard befalleth mortall men, if they bee ſmitten with a bodily death, but through terrour thus ſtricken into them; Diſcipline is eſtabliſhed, that one may ſeek to prevent ſin in another, and as Members of one body, bee diligent and ſoli-

Calvin.

Ferus.

Note.

ſolicitous one for another. It ſhall not bee ſo in reſpect of everlaſting damnation, none ſhall ſuffer this for another. 2. There is a community amongſt men that are of the ſame Society, every one being a part of the body, and ſo what evill hee doth, hee doth not as one alone by himſelf, but as a part of the body whereof hee is a Member. Calvin ſaith, both the ſame with Auguſtine, touching Achans being a member of the body, and happily that they were not ſo carefull to prevent this ſin, as they ſhould have been, which made Achan bold to commit it, and thus became guilty; or if wee cannot perceive how, yet wee muſt beleeve that they were guilty, becauſe the Lord hath ſo pronounced of them. Laſtly, by this example ſingularly hee would teach, that one mans ſin maketh all guilty, that wee might all bee the more watchfull over one another. And, as Ferus hath it, that ſinners may not bee ſpared, but diligently ſearched out and taken away from amongſt us, that wrath come not upon us all therefore. It is cruelty and no pity to hide or to ſpare an offender, as to ſpare one member to the indangering of the whole body; for if the right hand offend, it muſt bee cut off, &c. wherefore Rulers and Magiſtrates ought to conſider this, and to doe juſtice to every one, that this evill may bee rooted out from amongſt us. Beſides this, Ferus rendreth alſo two other reaſons. 1. That it might appear, how heinous a known ſin is, when any one preſumeth to doe that which is expreſly forbidden him. For this one thing only was given in charge, to take heed of the accurſed thing, and therefore herein to tranſgreſſe, this charge being ſo freſh in every ones memory was moſt abominable. 2. That ſinne committed in the Church of God, doth draw a farre greater puniſhment, then committed by any without. It is to bee noted here and admired, that amongſt ſuch a multitude all reſiſted the temptation of covetouſneſſe ſo, as that but onely one man was led hereby, and that to the ſhame of theſe times, wherein ſo many defile themſelves with ſacriledge.

Qu.

Joh.12.
Lyra.
Matth.27.44.

But how are the children of Iſrael ſaid to have committed a treſpaſſe, when as but one onely ſinned? Anſw. It is a phraſe common in the Scriptures, when one doth evill, who is of a ſociety, to attribute it to that ſociety in common, ſo when Judas onely envies at the coſtly ointment powred upon the head of Jeſus, it is ſaid, that the Diſciples murmured at it, Matth. 26. 8. and when one Theef onely railed upon our Lord, that the theeves railed upon him, &c. ſo Lyra. But here more is implyed, viz. that the guilt of this ſin, overſpread all the Congregation, and all were ſubject to wrath therefore, for the reaſons before rendred, eſpecially becauſe they were no more vigilant one over another in a matter of ſo great moment.

Calvin.

Achan, that ſinned, is deſcribed by his pedegree and Tribe Judah, the principall Tribe to aggravate the fault the more, and to humble them of his conſanguinity, to whom hee was a blot and blemiſh eſpecially, as Calvin hath it.

V. 2.

Lyra.

And Joſhua ſent men from Jericho to Ai, which is beſide Bethaven, on the Eaſt of Bethel, &c. One place, ſaith Lyra, is thought by ſome to bee called by both theſe names, Bethel ſo named by Jacob, when God appeared there unto him, and Bethaven, for the calves of Jeroboam afterwards ſet up there, for Bethaven ſignifieth the houſe of wickedneſſe, as it was then made by Idolatry, and Bethel the houſe of God, as it was before. But hee rejecteth this, becauſe the Bethel, where God appeared to Iacob, was not here, but at Jeruſalem, and Jeroboam was long after Joſhua his time, ſo that from his fact no place could have the name of Bethaven in his dayes. Wherefore hee determineth, that this Bethel was the place, where Abraham had worſhipped, ſaid to bee between Bethel and Ai, from his worſhipping towards the Weſt, to which part it ſtood, having this name, and the ſame place had the name of Bethaven, from the Idolatry committed by the Canaanites there, and therefore Hoſ. 10.5. the Calves of Bethaven are ſpoken of, which Jeroboam is ſaid to have put, the one in Bethel, and the other in Dan, implying both theſe to bee one. But this queſtion touching Bethel by Ai, hath been before handled, Gen. 28. 11. and that opinion of Bethel and Jeruſalem being all one confuted. Of the Wilderneſſe of Bethaven, and Bethel it is ſpoken, Joſh. 18. 12, 13. as being upon the borders of Benjamin, ſaid to bee extended from Jericho thither, whereby it appeareth, that they were two places, but one a Wilderneſſe, the other a City, and Bethel was that ſo called by Jacob, but the name Bethaven is afterwards applyed unto it for the ſin there committed, *Hoſ.*10.5. The dwelling of Abraham and ſerving God here, could bee no reaſon of the name Bethel: for hee dwelt not in Bethel, but between it and Ai, neither had it the name of Bethel then, but being written of Moſes after Jacobs time, hee called it ſo according to the name given it by Jacob, by anticipation. Gen.12.8. Ai, to view which, Joſhua ſent men now from Jericho, was foure miles from Jericho, For Joſhua to ſend to view the paſſage to Ai, ſaith Calvin, was a point of good policy, that thus hee might know, how the more ſafely to lead his Army thither, but to ſend only 3000 men, when the whole Army was by & by to paſſe on, was no policy, but a preparative to an overthrow, the enemies being by their paucity imboldned to come againſt them, which they durſt not have done, if many thouſands more had ſhewed themſelves. But this doubtleſſe came of God, for the caſtigation of the ſin committed, and to drive him to ſearch it out. Calvin. Ferus having commended the policy of Joſhua alſo in ſending, and in his example circumſpection to all Captaines, and the uſe of meanes to ſubdue their wicked Enemies, and not to caſt themſelves upon miraculous Victories, diſcommendeth the preſumption of the men, that were ſent by him, in that truſting to the power of man, they would have 3000 only ſent, as deemed by them enough to have ſubdued Ai, and in their example hee condemneth mens preſuming upon their own ſtrength, which it is juſt with God to puniſh with making them to flee before their Enemies. Ferus. For preſumption upon their own ſtrength was ſhewed in that they went without the Prieſts and the Arke. The 10 Tribes alſo going againſt Benjamin in this vain confidence were overthrown, and Sennacherib the proud King of Aſhur. Judg.20.

V.5. And the men of Ai ſmote of them about 36 men, for they chaſed them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and ſmote them in the going down, &c. In ſmiting the Innocent for wicked Achan God did nothing unjuſtly, for none are innocent before him. It was a great mercy in him, that no more were ſlain, and by this puniſhment of ſome to benefit them and us all, in making it an admonition to us to bee carefull to prevent ſin both in our ſelves and others. Unto Shebarim, that is, as Lyra hath it, following the Hebrews ad confractionem, becauſe either they were weary of purſuing, or the children of Iſrael fell down through faintneſſe, as they fled before them. Lyra. But hee ſaith, Expoſitours commonly holds Shebarim, to bee the proper name of a place. The Septuagint for theſe words, Unto Shebarim, have ϗ συνέτριψαν αὐτοὺς, they brak them. But it is more probable, that the place, where this was done, had the name from breaking, becauſe their hearts were by this defeat broken. And they are ſaid to have ſmiten them in the going down, becauſe, as Adricomius hath it, Ai ſtood upon a Mountain, whereby they fleeing down were ſmiten. Adricomius.

V.6.7.8 And Joſhuah rent his cloathes and fell upon his face before the Arke, untill the eventide, hee, and the Elders of Iſrael, &c. a right godly part, and the onely way to obtain help in the time of diſtreſſe, to humble our ſelves in Prayer, and to perſevere, as they did untill the evening, and that in Faith, and being ſolicitous for Gods glory, as Joſhua his Prayer ſhewed that hee was. Ferus.

V.9. And what wilt thou doe unto thy great Name? Thus Ferus. But Calvin although hee praiſeth Joſhua for making the Arke his refuge, humbling himſelf in Prayer, and adding, as the manner amongſt the people of God was, renting of his garments, and putting duſt upon his head, in token of ſorrow and repentance, and for his Faith beleeving, that this overthrow came not to paſſe without God, and for his ſolicitude about the glory of his name: yet hee ſaith, there was ſomewhat herein to bee taxed, viz. his expoſtulating with God out of troubled affections: Why haſt thou brought us over Jordan, to deliver us into the hands of the Amorites to deſtroy us? when as only a few had yet been beaten back, and God had made ſuch ample promiſes to bee with him, and his thwarting of God in his proceedings, ſaying, Would to God wee had been content, and dwelt on the other ſide of Jordan. Whereby it appeareth with what infirmities Calvin.

the Prayers of the beſt are ſometimes accompanyed, but for his ſaith and zeale Lyra. for Gods glory, all this is paſſed over, and his prayer is heard. Lyra likewiſe ſaith, that Joſhua ſpake ill out of paſſion, as he would not have done otherwiſe, being ſo greatly favoured by the Lord. And hee feared that the name of God would be expoſed to ignominy, the heathen objecting that he could not bring his people any further into that Land. Of rending garments ſee before, Levit. 10.6. *Numb.*14.6. and of putting duſt upon their heads, 1 Sam. 4. 12. Job 2. 12. *Eſa.*47.1. Joſhua in praying thus, did no otherwiſe then Moſes had done before, *Exod.*32.12. *Numb.*14.13. *Deut.*9.28. and what he ſaid may bee interpreted ſo, as to free him from ſinning herein, which is the rather to bee held, becauſe he was heard, and is not taxed therefore. His expoſtulating with the Lord is onely to move him not to deliver them into their enemies hands, but as he had done mightily in bringing them over Jordan, to ſtill to ſhew his power by defending them; it is the voice of one ſeeking counſell and helpe from the Lord. And whereas hee wiſheth that they had been content rather to have dwelt on the other ſide of Jordan, the meaning is, rather then he ſhould now withdraw his helpe from them, they would have preferred to have been pent up there in narrow bounds, and rather then any ignominy ſhould come to his great and glorious name.

V. 10. And the Lord ſaid to Joſhua, Get thee up, wherefore lyeſt thou thus upon thy face? Iſrael hath ſinned, and they have alſo treſpaſſed my Covenant, &c. for they have even taken of the accurſed thing, &c. The Lord biddeth Joſhua twice to get him up here, and v. 13. becauſe, as is moſt probable, he lay ſtill proſtrate for reverence to Ferus. heare the words of the Lord. And he greatly aggravateth the ſinne, ſaying 1. They have ſinned. 2. They have treſpaſſed my Covenant. 3. They have taken of the accurſed thing. 4. Stolne. 5. Diſſembled. 6. Hid it amongſt Note. the ſtuffe. So that when God commeth to lay open our ſinnes, we may ſee how many wayes ſinfull hee will make any one of them to be. Wherefore the ſafeſt way is for us to confeſſe our owne ſinnes, and to crave pardon that wee may eſcape his ſevere cenſure. But wherein did they diſſemble. Anſw. In that, when they were all ſo ſtraitly charged not to take ought of the accurſed thing, to which they ſeemed to conſent, yet the contrary was now done, and happily being asked at the bringing in of the treaſure for the Tabernacle, whether no man Lyra. had taken ought, they all avouched their innocency herein. Lyra ſaith, they diſſembled, becauſe they had promiſed to obey the Lord in all things, wherein they were now proved diſſemblers. And this promiſe is implyed in that hee ſaith, They have treſpaſſed my Covenant, intimating that they had Covenanted, that the ſpoiles of this City, as the firſt fruits of their prey in that Land, ſhould be holy to the Lord. The word rendred ſtuffe, Hebr. is veſſels, and ſo the Vulgar Latine hath it, but hereby all the inſtruments and ſtuffe in their houſes are Note. commonly ſignified. This was the cauſe why they could not prevaile, but fell before their enemies, even their robbing of God of his dues, whereby we may ſee what an hainous ſinne Sacriledge is, they muſt never looke to proſper that are tainted with it. And no cloſe carrying of the matter can hide it from Gods all-ſeeing eyes, *Gal.*6.7. God is not mocked.

V. 13. Up, ſanctifie the people, and ſay, Sanctifie your ſelves againſt to morrow, &c. When Exo.19.10,15 the Lord was to come downe upon mount Sinai to give the Law, Moſes is commanded to ſanctifie the people, the manner is there declared, the like is commanded, Joſh. 3.5. before the working of that miracle for them in drying up the waters of Iordan; ſo now becauſe a miraculous diſcovery of ſacriledge was to be made, they muſt ſanctifie themſelves, as to whom the moſt holy God meant to come neare by his power, and by whoſe approach they ſhould bee indangered, unleſſe they were ſanctified. Beſides the ſanctifying by waſhing and ab- Lyra. ſtaining from their wives: Lyra nameth two more, 1. By faſting, as 1 Kings 21. 2. By Prayer, as Acts 1. and which of theſe wayes they were ſanctified at this time, hee ſaith, is uncertaine. Some becauſe the word uſed for ſanctifying may as well be rendred prepare, underſtand it ſo, but this is worthily rejected by Calvin, holding, that becauſe a guiltineſſe was laid upon them all, they ſhould by a legall luſtration, waſhing with water, &c. purge themſelves. But Calvin. this purging was rather, that they might bee fit to heare God ſpeaking by lots, who it was that committed this execrable ſinne. The tryall which the Lord V.14. ſaith hee would make, was firſt by the Tribe, then by the family, after that by the houſhold, and laſtly by the man, and hee that ſhould bee found to have V.15. ſtoln the accurſed thing, ſhould bee burnt with fire, both hee, and all that hee had. For the meanes of finding this out, R. Solomon ſaith, that the 12 Tribes R. Solomon. were brought before the breſtplate of the High Prieſt, in which were 12 precious ſtones, with their names, and the ſtone of that Tribe which was guilty ſhined not, but waxed dimme, but after this the families, houſholds, and perſons were tryed by lots. This ſaith Lyra cannot ſtand, becauſe of the Tribes, Lyra. it is ſaid, The Tribe which the lot ſhall finde out: but although the Vulgar Latine Tranſlation hath it thus, yet Hebr. it is The Tribe whom the Lord ſhall take: ſo that Lyra his reaſon againſt that of R. Solomon is of no force, and with the Hebrew agreeth both the Chaldee and the Septuagint: yet I ſay not this, as juſtifying that of R. Solomon; for the common received opinion is, that Tribes as well as families were tryed by lots, there being no reaſon why there ſhould bee divers wayes of tryall about the ſame thing, but one and the ſame, and lots have commonly beene uſed to finde out a particular perſon whom the Lord would have found out, thus Jonathan was found out by Saul, and Jonah 1 Sam. 14. by thoſe in the ſhip with him, and Saul that hee might be made King, and Matthias, Jon. 1.7. that he might bee taken into the number of the Apoſtles. And of lots it is 1 Sam. 10. Acts 1. ſaid, the whole diſpoſition thereof is from the Lord, and that the lot appeaſeth Prov. 16.33. controverſies, and therefore lots muſt bee uſed in dividing the Land of Canaan, Prov. 18.18. as hath bin ſhewed upon Num.26. and the manner of proceeding herein. There is another invention of ſome of the Rabbins about the meanes now uſed, viz. that the Tribes being brought before the Urim and Thummim, that Tribe which was guilty comming, was made by a Divine power to ſtand ſtill, ſo that they could not goe away, then the guilty family, and houſhold, and perſon likewiſe, the reſt going on, was made faſt. But whether thus, or by lot, or any other way, God diſcovered the ſacrilegious, it is uncertaine, for ſo much as the way is not revealed, and therefore I determine nothing herein.

So Joſhua roſe up early in the morning, and brought Iſrael by their Tribes, and the V.16. Tribe of Judah was taken, &c. Joſhua being commanded to ſift out the ſacrilegious, is not ſlacke, but goeth about it with all diligence, noted in this, that he roſe up early in the morning. Whereas it is ſaid, V. 17. The Zarbites were V.17. brought man by man, it is meant every mans houſhold of that family, as was be- Hugo Cardin. fore ordered; and Zabdi his houſhold was taken, and of that houſhold Achan, V.18. who is ſaid, V. 1. To be the ſonne of Carmi, the ſonne of Zabdi.

And Joſhua ſaid to Achan, My ſonne, give glory now, I pray thee, to the Lord God V.19. of Iſrael, and make confeſſion unto him, and tell me now what thou haſt done, &c. It was a wonderfull ſtupidity in Achan, that he was not moved in Conſcience before to come forth and confeſſe, when he could not but perceive that he ſhould by and by be found out. But this is the ſenſeleſneſſe of wicked men, they goe on in their ſinnes, and have no remorſe therefore, till judgement commeth. And thus certainly ſhall every wicked perſon bee found out when God com- Note. meth to Judgement, although he lurketh amongſt many thouſands. Joſhua Jer. 23. his handling of him to finde out the truth, is moſt remarkable for Judges and Kings, hee putteth him not to torment to make him confeſſe, but ſpeaketh Ferus. gently unto him, having herein a care of his ſoule. For happily if hee had terrified him, hee would have denyed it, and ſo have added ſinne to ſinne, as Ferus noteth, hereupon condemning that other way of extorting confeſſions by paine, as tyrannicall, and cauſing miſerable men oftentimes to confeſſe what they would have them, although moſt falſely.

Give glory to God, thou haſt greatly diſhonoured him, now confeſſe, that his Power, Juſtice, and Omniſcience may bee known to all, and hee may have glory hereby. And that it may appear, ſaith Lyra, that the Hoaſt of Iſrael was juſtly ſmiten, and according to others, that men might hereafter fear God, and the very ſpeaking of the truth is a giving of glory to God, as lying to the devill, and confeſſions of ſins are to the praiſe of God. In calling him ſon Calvin. hee ſhewed a Fatherly affection, ſaith Calvin, even to a condemned man, that Judges might learn, when they condemn malefactours to death, yet not to put away the affections of humanity towards them, wherby they may bee won to repentance; Some, ſaith hee, ſpeak kindly, and promiſe impunity to draw the offender to confeſſe, but having confeſſed, hee is ſtraightway delivered to the hangman; but this is an unlawfull way, contrary to the courſe here taken by Joſhua, for hee onely exhorts him, but promiſed no impunity unto him.

V. 21. And Achan anſwered, indeed I have ſinned againſt the Lord, &c. When I ſaw V. 22. amongſt the ſpoiles a goodly Babyloniſh garment, and 200 ſhekels of ſilver, and a wedge of gold of 50 ſhekels, I coveted it, &c. Babyloniſh garments were the garments of Kings in time of warre, moſt curiouſly wrought, and of great price, And. Maſius. Maſius ſaith, the words may bee underſtood of a rich carpet of Tapeſtry. The words rendred a wedge of gold, Hebrew, is a tongue of gold, ſo called for the form thereof. Theſe, hee ſaith, hee took and hid in the ground, in the midſt of his Tent, moſt probably putting them in a box, becauſe otherwiſe the garment would have been marred. What a ſhekel is, ſee before, Gen. 23.15. Achan in confeſſing readily, and not hiding, but aggravating his ſin againſt himſelfe, may bee an example to us, ſaith Ferus, of confeſſing our ſins, not fearing Ferus. the puniſhment, but praiſing God, if our eternall puniſhments may bee chan- Calvin. ged into temporall. Yet Calvin ſaith, it may bee doubted, whether hee confeſſed out of penitency, or being aſtoniſhed and terrifyed at his being thus taken, ſeeing it vain for him to deny it: for ſo even Reprobates ſometimes doe, being urged by their own conſciences, thus laying themſelves open to deſerved puniſhments. But the more charitable opinion is, that hee repented truely, becauſe hee ſpeaketh ſo reverently of the Lord, and telleth by what degrees hee proceeded to ſin; 1 hee did ſee; 2 hee coveted; 3 hee took; 4 hid it, and as willing to bee convicted, and to have his puniſhment by death, hee de- Nott. clareth, where the things ſtolne might bee found. And by theſe degrees are wee drawn to ſin, about theſe worldly things; 1 the eye ſeeth; 2 the heart coveteth; 3 the hand acteth. Wherfore with Job let us make a covenant with our eyes. And to bee fenced againſt temptations in this kinde, let us think, that the beſt garment is innocency, the beſt riches Grace, and the moſt precious gold Faith.

V.22,23. After that Achan had confeſſed, Joſhua haſtned not the execution by and by, but ſent to his tent, and the ſtoln things were brought forth, thus ſhewing, that hee proceeded not in wrath to ſhed his blood, but at the command of the Lord, the caſe being firſt made moſt plain, and ſo ought all Judges to doe, that by not being over haſty or wrathfull, they make not themſelves guilty of murther, and much leſſe by adjudging men to death at their own wills.

V.24. And Joſhua and all Iſrael with him, took Achan and his ſons and daughters, his V.25,26. Oxen, Aſſes and Sheep, and tent, and all that hee had, and the ſilver, the garment, and the gold, and brought them to the valley of Achor. Now followeth Achans puniſhment, hee was ſtoned, and burnt, both hee and all that hee had, and a great heap of ſtones laid upon him, was made a monument of this judgement for ever. The Valley of Achor is ſo called, firſt, by anticipation, for now it had this name firſt given unto it, as is ſhewed v. 26. and the reaſon is rendred, becauſe Achan, who was executed there, had troubled Iſrael, and was troubled in that place therefore: for עכר Achar ſignifieth to trouble, and hereupon ſome call Achan, Achar, and ſome by both theſe names, but erroneouſly, as Lyra ſheweth upon *v.*1. There is indeed an alluſion to his name in the word Achor, but it is not the ſame.

Whereas his ſons and daughters are ſaid alſo to bee taken with him, the Hebrewes ſay that they were onely taken to behold this judgement, that they might be terrified, for which cauſe it is ſaid, not that they ſtoned them, but him, and burnt them, that is, his goods before recited. But this is overthrowne, becauſe it is added, they burnt them with fire, after that they had ſtoned them, and the Lord adjudged all that hee had to death, v. 16. If this ſhall ſeem to bee againſt that, Ezech, 18. The ſon ſhall not dye for the ſin of the Father, &c. It is eaſily anſwered, as before, this is a rule to bee followed by earthly Judges, and it is alſo to bee underſtood of everlaſting death, which no man ſhall ſuffer meerly for the ſin of another; ſee more upon v. 1. If any of his children, ſaith Calvin, were elect, their being put to death was but a caſtigation to them; if reprobate, they dyed worthily. The judgement extended thus generally to all that he had, made it the greater to him, and the cutting off of the dumb beaſts for their Maſters ſin, was no cruelty, ſeeing they were made for the ſervice of man, who being deſtroyed, it is not unjuſt to deſtroy them alſo. And all the Congregation ſtoned him, to ſhew their generall deteſtation of this impious fact. But why did they bring him out of the Campe to bee put to death? Anſwer. 1 That they might thus remove from amongſt them the execrable thing. 2 That the Campe might not bee defiled by the dead. And the gold and ſilver ſtolne are alſo burnt, becauſe God would not have any ſtoln thing brought into his Sanctuary to pollute it. But forſomuch as the Lord appointed onely burning, why were they both ſtoned and burnt? Lyra ſaith, that ſome anſwer, burning ſetteth forth any kinde of ſevere puniſhment, and ſome his burning in hell; and therefore it is not ſaid, yee ſhall burn him, but hee ſhall bee burnt. But hee rejecteth both theſe, and determineth, that hee was double puniſhed for his double ſin. 1 of breaking the Sabbath, for which hee was ſtoned; 2 of Sacriledge, for which hee was burnt. Hugo following the Hebrews ſaith, that the things, which could not feel ſtoning were burnt, but the living ſtoned to death; others better, they were firſt burned, and then ſtones were caſt upon them, even unto a great heap, that the judgement might never bee forgotten, and if ſo, here is an Hyſteron proteron. And that it was ſo done, the words in Hebrew doe not obſcurely declare, for having ſaid, they ſtoned him with ſtones, hee addeth, and they burnt them, and ſtoned them; herein declaring the order, burning them all firſt, as God had commanded, and then caſting ſtones at them in deteſtation, wherein they exceeded ſo, that the ſtones caſt by them grew into a great heap, and remained as a monument of that judgement for ever. And this caſting upon them of ſuch a multitude of ſtones, ſhewed, that the people both did and would alwayes abhorre and keep themſelves clear from ſuch a foule wickedneſſe, as Calvin noteth. The tranſlation commonly followed, They burned them after they had ſtoned them; is indeed againſt the Expoſition brought, but it differeth from the Hebrew, as hath been already ſhewed, and from the Septuagint, following the Hebrew in this paſſage verbatim. Some think, that the fire being put to, hee was ſtoned, not to aggravate his puniſhment, but to put him the ſooner out of his pain, certain it is, as Auguſtine hath it, that Joſhua would not goe one jot from the Lords ſentence, and hee beſt underſtood his meaning. Whereas Ioſhua ſaith to Achan, Becauſe thou haſt troubled us, God ſhall trouble thee this day, ſome gather that becauſe hee humbled himſelf and confeſſed his ſin, it was pardoned unto him, and hee ſuffered not in hell therefore, but all his ſufferings were finiſhed that day: But Calvin, who thinketh more hardly of him, that Ioſhua ſpake thus roughly to him to pull down his ſtout ſtomach, which was moved, in that his confeſſion was not accepted of for a ſatisfaction, but they proceeded notwithſtanding to this moſt ſevere puniſhment againſt him. But I have already ſhewed, that it is more probable, that hee truely repented and was ſaved in the world to come, and therefore I think that this paſſage may not unfitly bee applyed for the further illuſtrating thereof. And that Achan was ſaved eternally, Ferus ſaith, is the generall opinion of Expoſitours: Wherefore Ioſhua ſpeaketh thus ſharply unto him, not as inſulting over him, as a caſt-away, but as was neceſſary, that being caſtigated throughly, both in word and deed here, hee might eſcape hereafter, and others hearing it might fear.

Calvin.

Qu.

Qu. Lyra.

Hugo Card.

Calvin.

Ferus.

Hee was burnt and his children, becauſe happily they conſented to his ſin, and if not, that his judgement might bee the greater, and his beaſts ſuffered, and all that hee had, becauſe his ſin was about worldly goods, to ſhew, what Note. a man getteth, that through covetouſneſſe is tempted to commit ſacriledge, is no gain, but loſſe, all that hee hath being hereby eaten as with a canker, and conſumed as with fire, as experience hath ſhewed in many Church-robbers.

Hee doth greatly againſt himſelf and his poſterity, that thus ſeeketh to bee inriched, as Achan, and Heliodorus, Antiochus, and Craſſus, who after the robbing of the Temple fell into much miſery. Wherefore the Romans, if any V. 26. thing were taken from Churches, have ſometime reſtored it double. This judgement being executed, it is ſaid, that God turned from the fierceneſſe of his wrath againſt Iſrael, to ſhew, that as long as ſin goeth unpuniſhed, God is angry with all the congregation, becauſe evill, that provoketh his wrath, is amongſt them, and by puniſhment inflicted upon the Malefactour it is removed,
The Myſterie. Origen. but not otherwiſe. Myſtically by Achans ſtealing of the tongue or wedge of gold, &c. ſaith Origen, wee may underſtand the golden ſayings of Philoſophers and Heathen Poets, to ſet forth ſuperſtition, theſe hee ſtealeth and hideth in the midſt of his tent, that in reading of them hath his heart taken with ſuch vanities, this is to the troubling of the whole Church, and Iſidor. therefore muſt bee ſharpely puniſhed. Or elſe by this wedge of gold, &c. is ſet forth the eloquence and doctrine of hereticks. Or according to Iſidor, the evill manners of the world brought into the Church.

CHAP. VIII.

V. 1,2. THe Hoſt being purged by the deſtruction of Achan, Joſhua is now incouraged to fight againſt Ai, being promiſed, that hee ſhould take it, and bidden to doe to it, as to Jericho, but onely the ſpoile here is permitted to Calvin. the people. They had burnt Jericho, and ſo they muſt doe to Ai in way of revenge for the loſſe and ſhame ſuſtained by the men of Ai, that by burning the City the memory of that defeat might bee blotted out, and the ſpoile is granted to the Souldiers for their greater incouragement, ſo Calvin.

Lay thee an ambuſh for the City behind it. The Lord condeſcending to their weakneſſe, they being ſo much diſheartned by their late overthrow, and becauſe hee would not alwayes work by miracle, directeth Joſhua here to uſe Qu. warlike policy, the more eaſily to overcome the men of Ai. And whereas a queſtion is made, whether Treaſon againſt enemies bee lawfull, ſeeing it is Lyra. not without diſſimulation? Lyra anſwereth well, that lying is not lawfull, no not to an Enemy, for the Faith given to them muſt bee kept, but wee may for an advantage conceale our purpoſes from them, and by ſhewes deceive them, if wee can, it being alike lawfull in a juſt warre to overcome by open Auguſt. ſi quis warre, or by ſecret ſtratagems of Warre, as Auguſtine hath it, for this is no bellum juſtum vicious diſſimulation, but military policy and commended in this place as ſuſceperit, utrum taught by God. Ferus ſaith, that God taught them thus to proceed, that they aperta pugna might no more truſt in their own ſtrength, as they had done, and that the vincat, an ex Enemies ſeeing them not onely to have ſtrength, but policy alſo in making inſidiis, non refert ad juſtitiã. warre, might bee the more terrifyed. And juſt war, hee ſaith, is that which Ferus. is made at Gods command, or to recover things unjuſtly taken away, and detained, or for great injuries offered. Other warres made out of covetouſneſſe to get more ample dominion or riches, or for vain-glory, are rather to bee called Bonfrerius. robberies. Bonfrerius moveth and anſwereth another queſtion upon the firſt words, Take all the people and goe up againſt Ai, why all the people muſt goe up againſt ſo ſmall a City, hereof the moſt probable reaſon was, partly that all their mindes before languiſhing, might bee erected with comfort through this victory, and partly that all having abſtained from the ſpoiles of
V. 3,4. Jericho might have part in this prey. According to the Lords direction, Joſhua
V. 9. proceedeth with all the men of warre, and out of them chooſeth 30000 to goe by night, and to lye in ambuſh on the Weſt ſide, behinde the City, v. 9. telling them that hee with all the Army would come before the City, and by fai-

ning

V. 12. Qu.

R. Solomon. Calvin, Maſius.

Scholaſt. Hiſt. Lyra.

ning a flight, draw the people of Ai out of the City, and then they ſhould ariſe and come into the City and ſet it on fire. And v. 12. hee is ſaid to lay 5000 in ambuſh on the weſt ſide, &c. hereupon a queſtion is made, whether two ambuſhes were laid, as it ſeemeth by the words, one of 30000, and another of 5000? R. Solomon ſaith, there were two. Calvin and Maſius, that there was but one, of 5000 onely; that Company of 30000 being the Army appointed to aſſault the City. Comeſtor, and Lyra, and others, that 30000 were ſent at the firſt to lye in ambuſh, but becauſe ſo many could not bee hidden, 25000 returned, and 5000 onely remained; and this ſaith Lyra, is the common tenet of our Expoſitors. And it is not improbable, becauſe they are expreſſely ſaid to have been ſet in the ſame place; and the number of 5000 was ſufficient. Yet if it bee held that there were two Companies ſet, the Hiſtory agreeth, and it may bee conceived that the laſt ambuſh was ſet to meet with ſuch as ſhould flee, when the firſt entred the City, that none might eſcape. The ſecond is directly againſt the Text, which ſaith, Joſhua with all the men of Warre went up againſt the City, therefore not 30000 onely. In that ſuch a multitude could paſſe and not be perceived by the noiſe of their motion, although in the night, was a point of Gods ſingular providence, making the men of Ai ſo ſecure, as not to ſet any ſcouts to eſpy them.

V. 14, 15, 16. &c.

V. 18.

Calvin.

V. 26.

All things being thus ordered, the King of Ai with all his men commeth out againſt Iſrael, who fled, and by flying, draw all the men out of the City to purſue them; the ambuſh then entreth at a ſigne given by Joſhua by ſtretching out his Speare, and burneth the City, then they that fled, returned and gat the Victory; the King being taken alive, and hanged till evening, and all both men, women, and children being deſtroyed, &c. In that God biddeth Joſhua to ſtretch out his ſpeare, ſaying, that hee would now give the City into his hands. Calvin gathereth, that it was a matter of great difficulty to winne this City, either becauſe the Iſraelites were yet fearfull, or the City ſo ſtrongly fenced, and therefore God appointeth the ſtretching out of Joſhua his ſpeare for a ſigne of his help, that they might not doubt, but fight confidently, and the ſpeare held up towards Ai, was as a ſign of triumph, as if the victory were already gotten, ſo certainly did the Lord by this ſigne or ſymbole aſſure him thereof, for which cauſe he continued ſtretching it out, till all were ſubdued. But that the ſtretching out of this ſpeare was a ſigne to the men lying in ambuſh to ariſe and take the City, he denyeth, becauſe it could not bee ſeene ſo farre off, eſpecially Joſhua being in a valley; whereas they are noted then to ariſe, this was, becauſe by the clamour and noiſe made, they now perceived that the former propounded ſtratagem had taken effect; thus Calvin; who is alſo ſeconded by ſome others, who ſay, that the ſounding of the Trumpets, was a ſigne to the ambuſh to ariſe, and not Joſhua his ſpeare which could not be ſeen by them ſo farre off, and God alſo, who ſpake to Joſhua to hold out his ſpeare, could at the ſame time bring them of the ambuſh by a Divine inſtinct out of their lurking place into the City. And that the holding out of this ſpeare appointed by God was the cauſe, when the Iſraelites fought, of their getting the victory over the men of Ai, God ſecretly working therewith by his almighty power, as by the hands of Moſes lifted up againſt Amalek. And therefore it is noted that theſe words, Into thy hand I have given it, may otherwiſe be rendred, by thy hand I have given it, that is, not fighting, but holding up thy ſpeare. Moreover, no ſuch ſigne being formerly given to the men laid in ambuſh, how could they know it? and if it had been held out for a ſigne to them when they had taken the City, he would not certainly have held it out ſtill as hee did, v. 26. yet Ioſephus, Lyranus, Theodoret, and Toſtatus will have the holding out of this ſpeare to be for a ſign to the ambuſh; and as Lyra hath it, ſome Banner to bee put upon the top of it, that might be ſeen. But I reſt in the former as moſt probable, although the Rabbins are for this alſo. The word כידון rendred a ſpeare, is ſometime uſed for a ſhield, and ſometime for a ſpeare or javelin, and for a ſpeare it is moſt commonly taken in this place, as by the Chaldee and Septuagint, but by the Vulgar Latine for a ſhield, yet even Jerome rendreth the ſame word, a ſpeare, Job 41. 20. and here both Arias Montanus, Pagninus, and Tigurini interpretes, and a ſpeare was fitteſt to be lifted up in the view of all about it, and not a ſhield; unleſſe as Lyra hath it, a ſhield were put upon the top of a ſpeare or pole, that it might be ſeen. But the words uſed to Joſhua, intimate no ſuch thing, but onely a ſtretching out of that in his hand towards Ai to deſtroy it. V.17. The people drawne out upon the feigned flight of the Iſraelites to purſue after them, are ſaid to be not onely all the men of Ai, but of Bethel alſo; but it may bee doubted how this could bee, the ambuſh lying between Bethel and Ai? Anſw. It is moſt probable, that the men of Bethel were before this come into Ai to helpe to defend it, as being under the King of Ai, and ſo it is not meant that they came now out of Bethel to purſue, but out of Ai, being before ſet there in a readineſſe when the Enemy ſhould come. And whereas all are ſaid to have come out, and that a man was not left in Bethel or Ai, it is to bee underſtood of ſuch as were able to beare armes: for all the weaker ſort were ſlaine afterwards in the City, v. 24.

Exod 17.

Ioſeph. Theod. Lyra.

V. 19. They entred into the City and tooke it, and haſted, and ſet it on fire. This is not to be underſtood of all the City, but the north part onely, which the enemies ſeeing, might quaile in their courage, and the Iſraelites ſeeing, might be incouraged. For Ai was all burnt, v. 28. and the ſpoiles were firſt taken, v. 27. after the deſtruction of all the people, which could not have been if much of the City had been burnt before. They ſet on fire then ſome houſe onely that ſtood moſt fit to ſhew by the flame, or ſmoke thereof, their taking of the City, and ſo went out on the back of their enemies to fight againſt them, ſome happily being left to carry out and preſerve the ſtuffe and goods therein from burning.

V. 20. The men of Ai ſeeing the ſmoke, had no power to flee any way, which happened through their ſudden great amazement.

V. 25. Maſius. Toſtatus. All the men and women of Ai now ſmitten were 12000, which was the whole company in all that City, whereby the ſmalneſſe of it appeareth. Maſius will have the men of Bethel alſo to be numbred amongſt them; but Toſtatus that the people of Ai onely fell, and they eſcaped; but this laſt is improbable, ſeeing that in the warre they were mixed together, and ſo fell together, or elſe more would have been ſpoken of Bethel afterwards, which is not; ſo that it is moſt likely that they all periſhed together, and are all called the people of Ai, when they are ſummed up, becauſe under the ſame King.

V. 28. And Joſhua burnt Ai, and made it an heap for ever, &c. This ſeemeth not to have been ſo, for Ezra 2.28. wee read of the men of Bethel, and Ai, and Nehem. 7.32. Wherefore it is to be underſtood that it remained deſolate a long time; and his meaning was, that it ſhould ſo continue alwayes, as J*ericho*, but as that City was built againe many yeares after; ſo it ſeemeth that Ai was rebuilt alſo.

V. 29. And the King of Ai bee hanged on a tree till eventide, &c. Becauſe the King was the chiefe in fighting againſt the people of God; hee hath a more ſhamefull death then any of his ſubjects, being firſt hanged and then taken downe, and ſtones caſt upon him unto a great heape at the entring of the gate, as Achan in the valley of Achor. Hee and his ſubjects had put the children of Iſrael to ignominy by their overthrow, to the imboldening of the Canaanites againſt them, therfore now he is thus ignominiouſly dealt withall, that it being ſpoken of amongſt the Canaanites, they might bee terrified, as indeed they were, Joſh. 9. 3. and Ch. 10.1. But his body is not ſuffered to hang any longer then till even, according to the law, Deut. 21. 23.

The Myſterie. Ferus. Myſtically, ſaith Ferus, by J*oſhua* his fighting againſt Ai, we may underſtand Jeſus his fighting againſt the Devill, for hee aſſaulteth him by open Warre, when as he caſts Devills out of the poſſeſſed, and cloſely hee laid an ambuſh againſt him and his kingdome, when hee fled from the Jewes perſecuting him, and fled into Egypt, and ſuffered himſelfe to bee taken and crucified, but his Deity that lay hid, returned upon him, and deſtroyed all his power, and his whole City of the wicked world ſhall bee by him adjudged to bee burnt with fire. The world indeed is ſecure, and goeth on in fighting againſt his Saints, even till the judgement commeth, but then they ſhall ſee the ſmoke of their torment aſcending, but none of them ſhall eſcape, or have any power to flee away, becauſe as this City, ſo the world their City, ſhall be ſuddenly ſet on fire, when they promiſe to themſelves moſt proſperity and peace.

V. 30.

Then Joſhua built an Altar, &c in Mount Ebal, as Moſes the ſervant of the Lord commanded, &c. Mount Ebal was over againſt Gilgal, Deut. 11.30. wherefore Joſhua now went back againe from Ai 4 miles to build an Altar there, ſo H. Bunting, Patriarchs travailes. Of the charge hereabout given by Moſes, ſee Deut. 11.29. and Deut. 27. at large, where all things concerning this paſſage have been already explained. Onely whereas Joſhua may ſeeme not to have done altogether according to the direction of Moſes, becauſe hee appointed the Levites to pronounce the curſes, and generally the Prieſts were to bleſſe the people, but Joſhua is ſaid here to have bleſſed them, and to have read the curſes: Lyra and others anſwer well, that Joſhua did it by the Miniſtery of the Levites. This building of an Altar and ſacrificing at this time, was for thankſgiving for the former victories, and to conſecrate the Land now entred upon, unto the Lord.

Deut. 27. 14.
Numb. 6. 23.
V. 33, 34.

CHAP. IX.

V. 1, 2.

AND it came to paſſe, when all the Kings on this ſide Jordan, in the hills and the valleys, &c. heard thereof, they gathered themſelves together, &c. In this chapter the divers effects of the preceding judgements are ſet forth in divers peoples, ſome hearing of them, harden themſelves, and come to fight againſt Joſhua, others come and ſubject themſelves to the Lord, but they are deſtroyed, theſe preſerved. And ſo it falleth out ſtill, ſome are made worſe by hearing, and ſome yeeld, the one ſort to their certaine perdition, the other to their ſalvation. It is ſtrange that all ſhould not bee made to yeeld, hearing of ſuch an unreſiſtable power, againſt which there was no ſtriving. But their eyes were blinded, and their hearts hardened by a juſt judgement, this being in them the forerunner of ruine, and ſo likewiſe it is in all others, both Princes and common people. Calvin here obſerveth the ſingular providence of God in holding theſe great Forces hitherto from comming againſt Iſrael, and that they ſent no ſuccours to Jericho, or to Ai, for which they had time enough, ſince their arriving in that land: but herein hee ſhewed great favour to his people, not being yet ſo couragious till they had gotten heart, and ſuch is his providence over his Church in diſſipating oftentime the great Forces of their enemies, and infatuating their counſells, that his ſervants may bee the better able to reſiſt them, and leſſe indangered by them. In the hills and the valleys, this land was full of hills, eſpecially where the lot of Judah lay, Deut. 1. 24. Judg. 1. 19. And by the coaſt of the great Sea, that is, the Mediterranean ſea, which was on the Weſt, where the Zidonians, Tyrians, and Phenicians dwelt, being of the Canaanite kind, and the Philiſtims, over againſt Lebanon, which was on the North, ſo that here is deſcribed a generall uniting of their forces all over the Land to come againſt Joſhua; but how, and in what order this was done, is further declared, Chap. 10.1. Ch. 11.1.

Note.
Note.
Calvin.

V. 3.

And when the inhabitants of Gibeon heard what Joſhua had done to Jericho, and Ai, they did worke wilily, and made as if they had been Ambaſſadors, &c. Gibeon, ſaith one, was 12 miles from Gilgal, where Joſhua now was, and 4 miles from Jeruſalem, it was a great City, Ch. 10.2. and ſeated upon an hill from whence it had the name, for Gibeah, or Gibeon ſignifieth a curled hill. It was within the lot of the tribe of Benjamin, Ch. 18.25. and was given to the Prieſts, Ch. 21.17. it ſtood upon the hill Siloe, ſaith Borchardus and Adricomius, ſo that all the memorable things ſaid to have been done in Shilo, were done in this City, here the Tabernacle continued a long time, and here Saul was made King, &c. In the Gibeonites the wonderfull mercy of God appeared even towards ſome that were condemned to die, ſaith Ferus, ſo that ſome, even in Countreys that are

H. Bunt. Patriarchs Trav.
Borchard.
Adricomius.
Ferus.

moſt wicked, are made veſſels of mercy, as Rahab alſo before in Jericho. And he doubteth no[illegible]t they were brought by the Spirit of God to ſubmit themſelves to Ioſhua. And whereas they lyed to ſave themſelves, hee ſaith, that being Gentiles, this was eaſily forgiven them. Calvin both derideth the device Calvin. of the Gibeonites, as needleſſe and vain, to come in this diſſembling manner: needleſſe, becauſe the Iſraelites, before that they aſſaulted any City, were to offer conditions of peace, and vain, becauſe it could not bee thought that Ioſhua could by ſuch poore meanes bee deceived, becauſe they had mouldy bread, &c. to beleeve, that they came from afarre, becauſe they might have ſuch things, although not by accident in a long journey, and the device having taken effect, the Oath obtained was fruſtrate, becauſe made to a people that had no being in the world, but as it were, to a Phantaſma. But it was Deut.20 15. 16. onely to Cities afarre off, and not to any of the Canaanites, that conditions of peace ſhould bee offered: and their caſe being deſperate, it was not vain for them to uſe the pooreſt meanes of eſcape, referring the ſucceſſe to God, and becauſe this policy ſprung from the fear and terrour of the Lord, hee made it ſucceſſefull for their preſervation, when all others were deſtroyed. And they beleeved that Ioſhua made ſuch conſcience of an Oath, that being once taken, hee durſt not breake it, although taken to them under the name of farre dwellers, ſeeing they were the men, to whom hee was bound. Again, Calvin condemneth Joſhua for his credulity, when as hee might eaſily divers wayes have found out the deceit, and for his groſſe neglect of Gods Ordinance, in that before hee gave them any reſolution, hee went not to the High Prieſt, with the Vrim and Thummim, to enquire of him what hee ſhould doe. This Lyra. laſt indeed is ſpoken of by way of taxation, v. 14. but Lyra ſaith, that the Gibeonites came thus to ſubmit themſelves, not onely through fear, but in Faith, as hee gathered from theſe words, v. 9. In the name of the Lord thy God are wee come, that is, to bee joyned with his people, and to learn how to worſhip and ſerve him aright. So likewiſe Ferus, they knew that all in that Coun-Ferus. try were adjudged to dye, yet they againſt hope beleeved, that thus ſeeking peace, and ſubmitting themſelves, they ſhould eſcape with their lives, and therfore happily if Joſhua had conſulted with the Oracle, the like reſolution ſhould have been given, ſeeing God rejecteth none that humbly ſeeke unto him for mercy, and hee confirmed what was now done, when for their blood unjuſtly ſhed in blinde zeal by Saul, hee ſent a famine, and declared this to bee the cauſe, 2 Sam. 21. And therefore God now wrought ſo for them, that they being brought by his fear and Faith ſhould not periſh, and ſo the temerity and imprudence of Joſhua was the more excuſable, this thing being noted Ch. 11. 19. to have come of the Lord. Whereas the Gibeonites are ſaid there to bee a remnant of the Amorites, but Joſh. 11. 19. of the Hivites; the word Amorites is to bee underſtood at large for all the people of Canaan, being of divers ſorts, and ſo the Hivites were comprehended under it.

Two queſtions here offer themſelves; 1 How Joſhua could lawfully ſave Deut.20.16,17 theſe Hivites alive, ſeeing the charge given by God was utterly to deſtroy them all? 2 Whether Joſhua were bound by his Oath, to which hee was by them drawn through fraud, to ſave them? To the firſt it is anſwered, that it was not unlawfull to ſave ſuch as ſubmitted themſelves, and yeelded to become pro-Qu. 1. ſelytes, as Rahab and her houſe, and theſe Gibeonites did: for the charge of de-ſtroying all was doubtleſſe to bee underſtood with this condition, except in ſome extraordinary caſe, when any of them ſhould voluntarily yeeld from their poſſeſſions and religion, and bee at their diſpoſing, which caſe God fore-Ch.11.19. ſaw would bee very rare, for by his ſpirituall judgement hee hardned all others, that none yeelded, that hee might bring their deſerved puniſhments upon them. For the reaſon why the Lord would not have them to ſave any Exod. 23.22. alive, was, leſt the children of Iſrael ſhould bee intangled with Idolatry by their meanes, but when any ſhewed themſelves to bee taken with the fear of God, and ready to turn from this wickedneſſe, there was not in preſerving them the like danger, and this was the caſe of the Gibeonites. Yet I doe not think, that if they had come directly to ſue for mercy, they ſhould have been ſaved, but the tye of an oath concurring. For the ſecond queſtion, divers hold diverſly: Auguſtine, Toſtatus, Maſius, Magallianus, &c. That Joſhua was not bound by this oath, as alſo Calvin; of whom before their reaſons, 1 Becauſe the oath was made about a thing unlawfull, and contrary to the expreſſe charge of the Lord. 2 Becauſe the Oath was no more in effect, but if yee bee ſuch farre dwellers, as yee ſay, yee ſhall live; yet the Oath was kept, both becauſe they took themſelves to bee bound hereby, viz. Joſhua and the Princes, and it was afterwards allowed by the Lord. The firſt of theſe reaſons falleth by that, which hath been already ſaid: and the ſecond, becauſe although Joſhua being deceived took them to bee farre dwellers, yet this condition was not expreſſed in the oath, but it was made to them there preſent, and therefore hereby Joſhua was bound unto them, whatſoever they were, as a man that marryeth a woman, which ſaith ſhee is Engliſh, although ſhee bee French, is bound to her, and hee that promiſeth money to a Spaniard, who to draw him to it, affirmeth himſelf to bee an Engliſh man. And that they were bound by this Oath appeareth both becauſe Joſhua, who had the ſpirit of God, took himſelf and them to bee bound hereby, and God afterwards ſhewed, that it was an Oath that bound, when hee ſent a judgement upon the Land for Sauls breaking of it. Wherefore others hold better, that it was a validous oath, as Ambroſius, Lyra, Dioniſius. Carthuſ. Gratianus. If it bee demanded then, whether an Oath touching a thing unlawfull bindeth? It is anſwered no, by no meanes, for when David had ſworn to deſtroy Nabal, having met with Abigail, hee repented and did it not. Wherefore to ſpare any of this Country was not abſolutely unlawfull, whatſoever the caſe ſhould be, but generally. In this caſe Joſhua knew, that it would bee more pleaſing to God to ſpare then to kill, 1 Becauſe God is more inclining to mercy to ſuch as ask mercy, then to judgement, although his ſentence bee paſt for judgement, as in the caſe of the Ninevites. 2. For the avoiding of ſcandall after this Oath made; for if Joſhua had not kept it, the Nations round about would have thought vilely of Iſrael, as not regarding an Oath, and ſo that their God cared not, whether Oathes taken were kept or not. If it bee ſaid, this was an incouragement to others to deceive. Anſw. It was not for their deceit, that they were ſaved, but becauſe they feared God, and for other reaſons already rendred, thus Hugo.

Qu. 2.
Auguſt. qu. 13. Joſh Toſtat. Maſius.

Ambroſ offic. li. 3. c. 10. Lyra, Gratian. qu. 22. c. 4.
1 Sam. 25.
Hugo Cardin.

V. 14. And the men took of their victuals, this is thought by ſome to have been done to eate thereof, and in eating to make a Covenant, as the manner hath in ſome places been, but it is more probable, that they onely took and beheld, and ſmelt unto them, to ſee whether they were indeed ſo old or no, uſing no other means of tryall, either by conſulting with the Lord, or queſtioning with Rahab about them, or obſerving their manner of ſpeech, as they might have done.

V. 23. Joſhua and the Princes having ſworn unto them here, within three dayes, that they had deceived them, wherefore hee called them, and accurſeth them to ſervitude, and to bee hewers of wood and drawers of water for all the Congregation. When the Iſraelites came to their Cities, the Princes could hardly keep them from ſmiting the Gibeonites, v. 17, 18. but they were pacified by telling them, that they ſhould all bee their ſervants. If it bee demanded, how juſtly they could after the oath, bee condemned to ſervitude? It is commonly anſwered, that the League barred not Joſhua from this, for they offered themſelves, as ſervants, v. 11. Their Land and Houſes then, might notwithſtanding bee taken from them, and all their poſſeſſions, their lives onely being ſpared, and they might bee put to any ſervice appointed them. And if the Oath had been taken otherwiſe, it had been unlawfull, becauſe that whole Land was given to the children of Iſrael for an inheritance. And accordingly their Cities were given Gibeon, Chaphira, Beeroth to Benjamin, Joſh. 18. and Chireathiearim to Judah, Joſh. 21. and theſe are ſaid to bee their Cities, v. 17. And this ſentence of being ſervants was juſt for their former ſins

Qu.

and the fraud now uſed. Calvin ſaith that the oath was kept but in part, their lives being ſpared, but their liberty which was dearer then life, being for ever taken from them, that they might have little benefit by their fraud, and mockage, yet they quietly ſubmitted themſelves, there being no remedy. But it is plain by that, which hath been already ſaid, that the Oath, was not broken in any part, neither durſt Joſhua certainly have done againſt it in any thing, for fear of Gods wrath, before whom an Oath is moſt ſacred. But

Qu. what was their ſervice? Anſw. Joſhua ſaith, None of you ſhall bee freed from being bondmen, and hewers of wood and drawers of water, for the houſe of my God, thus explaining that v. 21. they ſhall bee hewers of wood, and drawers of water to all the Congregation. For hereby it was not meant that they ſhould bee ſervants to particular men to doe common works, but to the Tabernacle, providing and bringing wood for the ſacrifices, by all the congregation there offered, and water to waſh the Prieſts and ſacrifices, and to ſeeth the fleſh brought thither, and whatſoever ſervile work elſe they ſhould bee put unto about the Tabernacle and Temple, when that was built, as cutting and ſawing ſtone, &c. ſo that their bondage was to the Levites, to ſerve under them continually. Wherefore the ſtrangers appointed by Solomon to doe theſe works about the Temple, 2 Chron. 2. 17, 18. being 153600 were moſt probably a great part of them Gibeonites. Whereas at the end of this Chapter, v. 27. it is ſaid, they ſhould bee hewers of wood and drawers of water for all the Congregation, and for the Altar of the Lord, the laſt words ſerve to explaine the former, herein, they ſhould ſerve all the Congregation by doing thoſe publick works, which concerned all. And becauſe their ſervice was about the Temple, they are ſpoken of amongſt the Levites, Porters and ſingers, by the name of Nethinims, Ezra 7. 24. which by the Kings Decree were made free from toll and tribute, the word Nethinim comming of Nathan, to give, which word is uſed here, v. 27. Joſhua gave them, &c. for theſe were the men given for this ſervice; and of this name wee read again, Ezra 2. 58. Nehem. 7. 60. and that they could not ſhew their Genealogies to bee of the children of Iſrael, whereas Joſhua doth not

Calvin. onely condemn them to ſervitude, but ſaith that they were accurſed, it implyeth nothing elſe here, as Calvin noteth, but this temporall judgement upon their perſons, as contrariwiſe it was a bleſſing to bee free, and to inherit in that Land, or as Junius, yee are accurſed, that is, yee are of the people who are accurſed, and appointed to deſtruction, ſo that if your lives bee ſpared, yee may think your ſelves well dealt withall, though yee bee made ſervants.

Qu. If it bee demanded how they were maintained, and how ſo many could bee placed for habitation and ſervice about the Tabernacle onely, ſeeing they were foure Cities? It is anſwered, that all were not continually at all times imployed at once, but onely ſo many as were neceſſary, one company comming to ſerve after another by courſe, as the Prieſts growing numerous were diſtributed in Davids time into 24 courſes. For their habitations, they might have them ſparſedly amongſt the children of Iſrael, that dwelt near about the Tabernacle, and their maintenance, when they ſerved, muſt needs come from the Temple, out of the contributions of all the Congregation, or out of the Levites meanes, to whom they immediately miniſtred, and amongſt whom it ſeemeth that they dwelt, Ezr. 2. 70. and ſome of them in Ophel, Nehem. 11. 21.

Ferus. Wherefore Ferus was miſtaken in writing, that when Joſhua might juſtly have taken away theſe foure Cities of the Gibeonites, and the ſpoile of them, yet hee did none of theſe things for his Oathes ſake; for although hee took not happily their goods, yet their Cities were taken, as was before ſhewed.

The Myſtery. Myſtically the combining of all the Kings againſt Joſhua, ſhewed the ſeeking of the Kings of the Earth, by a joynt conſent to overthrow the Goſpel of Jeſus, by ſtirring up moſt hot perſecutions againſt Chriſtians: but as Iſrael is increaſed even at this time by the acceſſion of many of that Land unto them, and all their combining againſt Joſhua was vain; ſo the more Chriſtians were perſecuted, the more they increaſed, gaining ſome in thoſe tyrants Countries, and all their attempts againſt Jeſus and his Goſpel are fruſtrated, for they fall at length before him, and hee by his people poſſeſſeth their lands. Thus Origen, who alſo thinketh, that by the Gibeonites were figured out ſome that Origen.

live in the Church, and are kinde and ſerviceable to the Saints of God, but they have old garments, and ſhooes, &c. that is, live ſtill according to the old man, theſe ſhall bee ſaved, but not without ſome note of diſgrace. But Iſi-dor, better, they injoy a temporall life in the Church, but not eternall. But I Iſidor.
rather follow Ferus, who by the Gibeonites in their old cloathes comming to Joſhua, underſtandeth penitent ſinners, that come to Jeſus, there is nothing Ferus.
in them to commend them, but vileneſſe by reaſon of ſin, yet hee ſaveth them, and onely impoſeth the croſſe upon them, which they muſt bear and ſerve in the houſe of God, this is called a curſe, but is turned to the faithfull into a bleſſing, in which Paul gloryed above all things: Thus hee upon Chap 9. Gal. 6. 14.
but upon Ch. 10 hee maketh them a figure of ſuch as living in the Church, yet continue in their old ſins, they ſerve others but neglect themſelves: Theſe are permitted to live, but are not taken into the ſociety of the faithfull as Rahab was: Theſe are moſt miſerable, labouring onely for things temporall, but loſing the eternall.

CHAP. X.

IN this Chapter Adonizedek King of Jeruſalem, having heard that Gibeon had made peace with Joſhua, and that Jericho and Ai were deſtroyed, hee feared V. 1, 2. greatly, and ſent to call Hoham King of Hebron, Piram King of Jarmoth, and Japhin King of Lachiſh, and Debir King of Eglon, to goe with him againſt Gi- V. 3. beon, which they did. But the Gibeonites ſend to call Joſhua from Gilgal to V. 5.
their ſuccour, who haſteneth thither, and is incouraged by the Lord, promi-ſing to deliver them into his hands, and ſo he ſmote them and chaſed them, and V. 8, 9, 10, 11.
the Lord caſt hailſtones upon them fleeing, whereby more periſhed then by the ſword. Adonizedek ſignifieth the Lord of righteouſneſſe, as Melchizedek, Gen. 14. King of Righteouſneſſe. This is thought by ſome to have been the common Title of the Kings of that City, as Pharaoh of the Kings of Egypt; Comeſtor Hyrcanus, &c.
Abimelech of the Philiſtims; and Cæſar of the Roman Emperours. Which if it were ſo, the preſent King was much degenerated from the vertues of his An-ceſtours, having nothing in him but the bare Title, which yet hee gloryed in as a Title of honour, as the Kings of Spain in the Title of Catholick; and the French Kings of Chriſtianiſſimi. It was ſaid Ch. 9. 1. that all the Kings about combined themſelves againſt Joſhua, now the Hiſtory proceedeth to Calvin.
ſhew how this was done. 1 By the inſtigation of the King of Jeruſalem, as being neareſt the danger, theſe foure Kings are called together; firſt, to take revenge upon the Gibeonites as Traitours to their Countrey, and hereby terrour being ſtricken into others, to proceed with the more courage againſt Iſ-rael, as Calvin noteth. 2 Their overthrow being heard of, by the inſtigation of Jabin King of Hazor; all the reſt of the Kings were gathered together from all parts, Ch. 11. 1, 2, 3. And God ſuffered theſe five Kings firſt to come againſt Gibeon, that being the ſecond time delivered out of danger, they might the more willingly bear the yoke impoſed upon them. This is by Ferus well turned into this Morall; So ſoon as any ſubmit themſelves to God and to his Ferus. Note.
ſervice, they ſhall bee ſure to have Enemies, the devill and his inſtruments, that will attempt their deſtruction, but let us not fear in this caſe, but ſeek 2 Tim. 3. 12.
for help of our Joſhua, Jeſus, who will undoubtedly ſave us. v. 2. Gibeon is ſaid to have been A great City, as one of the Royall Cities, and all the men thereof to bee mighty. That is, although it had no King, yet it was not inferiour to a City that had a King. This is added, to ſhew that the forces of the Enemies Note.
were not a little impaired by the revolt of this people. In that no King yeelded to Joſhua, but this people only, that had no King: Ferus noteth, that Kings, Pſal. 82.
who have no feare of God in them, are proud, and think their power to bee ſo great, that none are able to withſtand it, no not God himſelf, as Pharaoh, Sennacherib, and Nebuchadnezzar, but they ſhall fall like men. And herein The myſtery. was not obſcurely figured out the reſiſtance made by all Kings and Emperours at the firſt going out of the Goſpel, againſt Jeſus, was propheſied *Pſal.*2. for the common people onely ſubmitted themſelves, and ſuffered cruell perſecutions therefore, for the ſpace of 300 yeers.

Of the foure Cities under theſe foure Kings, wee ſhall read more afterwards, *Ch.*14. 15. they fell to the lot of Judah, and ſo were not farre off from Jeruſalem. Of Lachiſh, where that ſtood, ſee in this Chap. upon *v.*31. Of Eglon, *v.*34. And of Hebron, *v.*36.

Whereas the Enemies comming againſt Gibeon, is firſt ſet down, and then Calvin. their ſending to Joſhua for aid, Calvin thinketh that the order is inverted, and that they ſtayed not ſo long, before they ſent; but ſo ſoon as they heard of their preparations againſt them, which is not improbable. But whereas hee ſaith, that Joſhua was three dayes in comming to their ſuccour, it both ſeemeth contrary to the Text, which ſaith, that hee came ſuddenly, and went all night, v. 9. and againſt reaſon, ſeeing Gilgal was but 12 miles diſtant from Gibeon, as was ſhewed *Ch.*9.3. yet I hold with him, that Joſhua firſt conſulted with the Lord, as is intimated, v. 8. when God bade him not to fear, for this implyed his ſeeking to God for direction herein, that hee might erre no more, as formerly hee had done, when theſe Gibeonites firſt ſought unto him for peace; Yet Auguſtine ſaith, that God unconſulted, ſpake to him, intimating that if it had been his will that the Gibeonites ſhould not have been preſerved before, hee would have told Joſhua who they were, although hee asked him not.

V. 10. And the Lord diſcomfitted them before Iſrael, Hebr. ויהמם, in the Vulgar Latine, hee troubled them, and the word המה ſignifieth to trouble, from which it may bee derived, the affixt ם ſignifying them, but if the word them bee underſtood, it commeth of המם Conterere, but becauſe it is added, and ſmote them with a great ſlaughter: The firſt word may better bee underſtood of the feare and trouble cauſed amongſt them, by Joſhua his ſudden comming with his Army, God working herewith, that the Iſraelites might the more eaſily overcome them; for fear taketh away all courage to reſiſt. And chaſed them along the way that goeth to Bethoron. There were two Bethorons, the neather and the upper, both built by Sherah, the Daughter of Ephraim the Patriarch, 1 *Chron.*7.24. but they were not yet built: for how could ſhee come to build H.B. Patriarchs Travailes. there, before the Land was conquered, this place therefore was called Bethoron, as ſome think, by anticipation, or rather being now an obſcure Village and decayed, but called by this name, ſhee inlarged and new built it, the ſame name being ſtill retained. It was eight miles from Jeruſalem, Northweſt, not farre from the Caſtle of Emmaus the upper, 16 miles further towards the North. But if wee conſult with Joſh. 16. 5. wee ſhall finde that Bethoron the 2 Chron. 8.5. upper lay Eaſtward. Both theſe are ſaid again to have been built by Solomon, and fenced with walls and gates. See more of Bethoron the neather, Joſh. 16.3. And of the upper, *v.*5. And ſmote them to Azekah, and to Makkedah. Azekah was a City eight miles alſo from Jeruſalem Weſtward, and near this, ſtood the City Makkedah, both which fell afterwards to the lot of Judah, Joſh. 15. 35. 41. ſo that the Enemies fled, ſome one way and ſome another, to ſave V. 11. themſelves, but all in vain: for the Lord caſt down great ſtones upon them, as they went to Bethoron, and as they fled from thence to Azekah, and with theſe hailſtones more dyed then with the ſword. That theſe hailſtones were not ordinary, comming of naturall cauſes, but extraordinary and miraculous, appeareth both by the effect and the directing of them upon the heads of the Enemies, the Iſraelites eſcaping, who were ſo near unto them, even at their heeles, eagerly purſuing them, and killing them. Joſephus ſaith, that it thundered and lightened alſo, *Exod.*9.24. There was haile and fire mingled with it, ſent upon Egypt by the ſame divine power, at the word of Moſes. Alſo thunder and lightning is ſaid to have been ſent againſt the Enemies of Marcus Aurelius, a Roman Emperour, at the Prayers of a Chriſtian Legion in his Army, when all the Army was ready to periſh for thirſt, and for their comfort a gracious raine. And thoſe hailſtones are ſaid to have been ſent at the prayer of Joſhua, Eccleſ. 46. 5, 6 of ſtrange ſtones falling out of the aire at ſundry times, ſome of iron, ſome of brick, ſome of chalke, and ſome fiery, write Pliny, lib. 2. c. 56. Livy, lib. 1. Decad. 1. and lib. 10. Decad. 3. and Plutarch in Fabio. But many ſuch relations are fabulous, this moſt true and certain.

Euſeb. Hiſt. lib. 5 c. 5. Tertull. apol. c. 5.

V. 12.

Then ſpake Joſhua to the Lord, &c. and hee ſaid in the ſight of Iſrael, Sunne ſtand thou ſtill upon Gibeon, and thou Moon in the valley of Aialon; &c. It may be thought, ſaith Calvin, that by Joſhua his ſpeaking to the Lord, is meant his ſpeaking before him; becauſe when a man prayeth to God, hee is not ſaid to ſpeake unto him, for this were too unreverent, but to pray or to call upon him; but by his ſpeaking here, is undoubtedly meant his praying to him, and hee is ſaid herein to ſpeake to the Lord, becauſe hee propounded what hee deſired of him power to doe; and after this being certified of his grant, hee ſpeaketh before Iſrael to the Sun to ſtand ſtill, nothing doubting, but that both Sun and Moone ſhould now obey his command. For if hee had not firſt ſought to the Lord, and been made privie to his will, it had been temerity in him thus boldly to ſpeake to the Sun and Moone before all men, and being able to effect nothing, it would have been to his great diſgrace. Lyra ſaith, hee ſpake to the Lord by thankſgiving for the favour already ſhewed, and then being confident, ſeeing God had given one ſigne out of the aerian Heaven, hee deſired another in the ſtarry Heaven. The Chaldee Paraphraſt, and the Rabbins ſpeake to the ſame effect with Lyra. But I rather ſubſcribe herein to Calvin; and Auguſtine acknowledgeth a wiſh and a prayer in this his ſpeaking to be implyed: and Ferus ſaith, it is as if hee had ſaid, I thanke thee O Lord that thou haſt already thus ſhewed thy power, I would to God that all the world might ſee thy power. When it is therefore ſaid, he ſpake to the Lord, the meaning is, that he ſpake ſecretly, praying in his heart for this thing, & then by faith believing it, in zeal for Gods glory, he ſaith before Iſrael, Sun ſtand thou ſtil, &c for whatſoever, ſaith our Lord, yee ſhall aske in faith it ſhall be done for you, & who ſo ſhall in faith ſay to this mountain be removed, it ſhall be done. The word rendred here, ſtand ſtil, is דום dum, be ſilent; but metaphorically it is put for move not, becauſe when a man is ſilent, he moveth not his tongue to ſpeak; and to ſhew that ſtanding ſtill is meant, the word is varyed, v. 13. into עמד ſtood, in ſpeaking of the Moone, that ſtood ſtill in Aialon; wherefore the Septuagint render it ſtand, and Jerome, move not. The Rabbins are over-bold here, to vent their one imaginations, ſaying, that the Sunne ſtood not ſtill, but moved with a very ſlow motion, that could not bee perceived; but the text ſaith, it ſtood, which was by a ſtrange and miraculous ſtay, the like to which was never heard of but onely in Hezekiah his time it went backward ten degrees upon the diall of Ahaz at the word of Iſaiah. But a queſtion is here moved, at what time of the day Joſhua ſpake thus? Comeſtor anſwereth, when hee ſaw the Sunne now ready to goe downe. Lyranus and Serrarius, when the Sun was now in the Meridionall point, becauſe it is ſaid, v. 13. that the Sun ſtood in the midſt of heaven: Unleſſe, ſaith Lyra, by the midſt of heaven wee may underſtand whatſoever is above the horizon. And ſo Toſtatus and Magalianus will have the midſt here to bee underſtood of any part of the heaven ſomewhat above the horizon. But Bonfrerius confuteth this, becauſe the word חצי chetſi here put for midſt, ſignifieth preciſely that part which hath two equall portions on either ſide thereof, although the word תוך upon which Toſtatus inſiſteth, bee of a more large ſignification. And yet going from this, hee determineth, that this was ſpoken ſoon after the Sun riſing, becauſe it was too hot at noone time to labour in the purſute of the enemies; and becauſe Gibeon was eaſtward from the place where Joſhua now was, ſeeing Bethoron & Azekah were weſt & ſouth from Gibeon. And for the taking away of that, which may ſeeme to make againſt his opinion, viz. the Suns ſtanding ſtill in the midſt of the heaven, he ſaith, that by the midſt may be underſtood the midſt betwixt the horizon and the verticall point, to which hee would have the Sun now to be come; and to confirme this, hee ſaith, that

Calvin.

Lyra.

Auguſt. lib. 22 de Civit. c. 8.
Ferus.

Iſai. 38. 8.

Qu.
Schol. Hiſtor.
Lyra. Serrarius

Toſtatus.
Magalianus.
Bonfrerius.

Euſeb. de locis Hebr.

that Aialon where the Moon ſtood, was weſtward in the tribe of Dan, Joſh. 19. 42. But Euſebius ſaith, it was eaſtward from Bethel, and the Author of the Book called the Patriarchs travailes, ſoutheaſt; but Borchardus and Adricomius, make it weſt and ſouth. The reaſon of this difference may bee, becauſe there were two Aialons; and this, as Euſeb. hath it, being but a little village, is not elſewhere named. That the Sun was not yet come to the noon point, is moſt improbable, becauſe ſo much had been done that day; and it is againſt reaſon, that Joſhua ſhould ſo ſoone deſire a ſtay of the courſe of the Sun, when as there was ſtill day enough to follow the chaſe; and the like may be ſaid againſt thoſe that hold it now to have been about noon. I reſt therefore in that of Comeſtor, the Sun was declining, and the Moone being at the full, riſing, and ſo the night comming on, which might hinder the purſuit, therefore Joſhua deſired this ſtay, that hee might have the more time to make a perfect victory, and obtained it. And it is not abſurd to hold, that the Sun being now declining, ſhould bee ſaid to bee in the midſt of heaven, ſeeing all the heaven appearing to our ſight above the horizon, is the midſt in regard of all thoſe parts hidden from us by the vaſt body of the earth. I determin then, that the Sun ſeemed now to ſtand over Gibeon weſtward, and the Moone eaſtward over Aialon, and here they were fixed an whole day more.

Qu.

But it is inquired here further, how long the day of this ſolſtice was? It is moſt commonly held to have been as long as the ſpace of time from the riſing of the Sunne, to the Sunne ſetting in thoſe parts, about the time of the ſummer ſolſtice, when the days be at the longeſt, for about that time was this battell fought, and that was much longer then the longeſt of our dayes, viz. about 18 houres.

Obj.

Whereas it is further added, v. 14. There was no day like this neither before nor after it. If the day in Hezekiah his time be objected, when the Sun went 10 degrees backward; for if each degree was an houre, that day was lengthened 20 houres. It is anſwered, happily the days were at that time of the year ſhorter, viz. but 8 houres, and if ſo, it was not ſo long a day as this. 2. The motion of the Sun might then bee much ſwifter then ordinary, and ſo notwithſtanding its going backward, the day little increaſed, to which I rather aſſent, becauſe no annotation is made, as here, of the extraordinary length of that day.

Turpin. de vita Caroli magni, c. 28.
Lib. 2. de vitis patrum.
Lib. 6.

Turpinus in the life of Charles the Great, ſaith, that one day was made as long as three, whilſt he was perſecuting his enemies. Mutius is ſaid, when hee went farre to viſit one being ſick, to have prayed, when hee ſaw the Sun ready to goe downe, that it might ſtand ſtill, and it ſtood till hee came to his journeys end; and the like is ſaid of Beſſarion. But theſe and the like may well bee ſuſpected to bee fabulous. That the Lord hearkened to the voice of a man; or it may bee rendred, for the Lords hearing of the voice of a man; that is, to doe ſuch a miracle, in ſtaying the two great lights of the world, contrary to the courſe of nature, for the like was never heard of before, nor after, neither hath any man ever deſired it, that we read of, but Joſhua, and therefore when the Sun went backward in Hezekiahs time, it was a ſigne voluntarily given by the Lord, and not deſired by him.

V. 13.

For the words inſerted, v. 13. Is not this written in the booke of Jaſher? Touching this booke, ſomething hath been ſaid already upon Numb. 21. 14. out of Toſtatus, affirming it and the book of the Warres of the Lord there ſpoken of to be one and the ſame.

Toſtatus.
Iunius.

Junius & Tremelius render it liber recti, according to the ſignification of the word Jaſher, expounding it of the book of Annals, which is loſt.

Calvin.
Deut. 32. 15.
Ch. 33. 26.
Lyra.

Calvin not much differing underſtandeth by the juſt, Iſrael, ſometime before called Ieſhurun, here Iaſher, holding it to have been a book ſetting forth the geſts of Iſrael that is not now extant. Lyra calling it liber juſtorum, reciteth the opinions of others, and rejecteth them; As 1. That it was a book never tranſlated, and ſo came not to us. 2. The book of the ſmall Prophets, becauſe Hab. 3. it is ſaid, that the Sunne and Moone ſtood ſtill; and then hee followeth the Hebrews, holding that it was the book of Geneſis, ſo called for the juſt ones, Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob there written of, wherein Chap. 48. 19. Iacob in bleſſing Ephraim, ſaith, a multitude of Nations ſhall come of thee, therein pointing at Ioſhua that came of Ephraim. But all this, and whatſoever elſe can bee ſaid,

is

A. Maſius

is but a conjecturing about that which cannot certainly bee known. Maſius thinketh, that there was ſome Propheticall Book, like the Apocalyps, thus called, wherein theſe things were before ſpoken of; this book of Jaſher, is againe cited, 2 Sam. 1. 18. ſome think, that it was a book in Meeter, ſetting forth the moſt notable things in the ſacred hiſtory, becauſe in Hebrew, here are three ſentences that ſeem to bee Metricall. And ſo although it bee not now extant, yet wee have no want in the ſacred hiſtory, becauſe that was but a ſetting forth in Meeter of the ſame things which are here and there contained in the Bookes that wee have. To mee it ſeemeth to have been a Book of the annalls of Iſrael, begun happily in the time of Moſes, and continued in Davids time, &c.

The Myſtic. Origen.

Myſtically by the Suns ſtanding ſtill, that the day might bee prolonged by the meanes of Ioſhua, Origen underſtandeth the prolonging of the time to the end of the world at the requeſt of Jeſus, that the Nations might bee ſubdued unto him. For when the Goſpel was firſt preached, it is ſaid, this is the laſt time, but ask of mee, ſaith God to his Son, and I will give thee the Heathen for thine inheritance, &c. Pſal. 2. Whileſt then the fulneſſe of the Gentiles bee come in, hee asked and obtained a prolonging of the time, for ſtill the Sun ſhineth, light is in the world, and goeth not out. Onely let us make uſe of it, and bee ſubdued by this Jeſus to our Salvation, as the Canaanites were to Joſhua to their deſtruction.

V. 15. Lyra.

And Joſhua returned and all Iſrael with him to the Campe to Gilgal. This, ſaith Lyra, is put down here by anticipation, for Joſhua was yet encouraging his Souldiers to purſue his Enemies, and returned not till the Victory perfected, and many Cities taken, v. 43. till which time the Campe was at Makkedah, v. 21. The Septuagint, becauſe it ſeemeth to bee ſuperfluouſly ſet down here, leave it quite out. Maſius ſaith, hee returned, that is, prepared to return; but that cannot ſtand, becauſe they went on in the fight long after this. Others hold that this verſe crept in here by the fault of the Scribe. But there is no need, neither is it ſafe to grant that. The meaning is, hee returned with all Iſrael to Gilgal, but firſt, as followeth v. 16. hearing of the five Kings hid in a Cave, hee took order about them, and proſecuted his Victories to the full, and then returned thither, v. 43. To make this yet more plain, wee may thus conceive of the relation here made. 1 It is done briefly, the Sun ſtood ſtill till the people had avenged themſelves upon their enemies, after which, ſome Annotation being made upon that day, it is ſaid, Joſhua returned, &c. V. 13. 2 More largely, as if hee had ſaid, I have given you the briefe of the geſts of Iſrael, and Joſhua at that time againſt their Enemies, after which they returned to Gilgal, V. 14,15. now I will relate all things in order, before their return, v. 16,17,18. &c. And then finally hee telleth of his return, v 43. Here tidings are brought to Joſhua, that the five Kings were hid in a Cave at Makkedah, V. 16,17.&c then hee biddeth to ſtop them in with great ſtones, and to goe on in the purſuite of their men, which they did, and ſmote many of them, but ſome eſcaped into fenced Cities.

V. 21.

Then all the people returned to the Campe to Joſhua at Makkedah in peace, none moved his tongue againſt any of the children of Iſrael. This Cave was nigh unto Makkedah, not in the City, which was not yet taken, till v. 28. By rolling great ſtones to the mouth of it, they impriſoned the five Kings, that they might afterward bee brought forth to execution. Whereas they are ſaid to return to the Campe at Makkedah, it is to bee underſtood, that there was a pitcht Campe there, for that was at Gilgal, but here was the place appointed by Joſhua for them to return unto when they had done ſmiting their enemies, that they could come unto, that from thence they might proceed together againſt their Cities. And all the people of Iſrael are ſaid to have come hither againe in peace, to intimate that none of them was ſlain in this battail, ſo that it was rather a going out to kill men condemned and diſarmed, then a fighting againſt the Armed. And to ſhew a perfect Victory now obtained, all their Enemies in the way being deſtroyed, it is added, None moved his tongue, that is, there was none left to attempt the leaſt hurt againſt any of Iſrael. A like ſpeech to this is had, Exod. 11.7. Jud. 11.15.

V.22,23,24. J*oſhua* and all the Army being again at the Cave at Makkedah, the five Kings are brought out, and the Captains put their feet upon their necks, and they V.25,26. are ſlain and hanged upon five trees. J*oſhua* would have them to ſet their feet upon theſe Kings necks, not out of inſolency, but in token of ſubjecting likewiſe all their Enemies unto them, that they might bee the more courageous Calvin. againſt the reſt. They triumphed thus, ſaith Calvin, over all the reſt, as if they had been already ſubdued. This putting of their feet upon their necks may ſeem to bee propheſied of Deut. 33.29. where the Septuagint have it, Thou ſhalt aſcend upon their necks, and the Vulgar Latine, Thou ſhalt tread upon their necks, but Hebr. it is Upon their high places, ſee Expoſ. Thus Tamerlane, but with more pride, made Bajazet his footſtool, when hee took horſe, and J*uſtinian* having recovered his *E*mpire again, from which hee had been put by Tiberius Zonar. tom. 3. and Leontius, ſet his foot upon their necks, and having made them a publick ſpectacle, cauſed their heads to bee cut off in hunting. Hee killed them, Calvin. and then hanged them up, ſaith Calvin, for greater ignominy, that other Kings of the Countrey being inraged at it, might come againſt him, and ſo bring deſtruction upon themſelves the ſooner. For his commanding, that they ſhould bee taken down at the Sun going down, ſee the like before, J*oſh.* 8 29. but this is not ſo to bee underſtood, as if J*oſhua* ſtayed their taking down, but only appointed it to bee thus done by ſome left for the purpoſe, for hee went the ſame day and took Makkedah, and deſtroyed the people, and from thence to V.28,29. Libnah, and ſerved it likewiſe, v. 28, 29. For on the ſecond day Lachiſh was V.32. taken, *v.*32. and other Cities, from whence moſt probably this Army was raiſed.

The Myſtery. Myſtically by the treading of theſe Kings under their feet, was ſet forth our Origen. treading of our ſpiritual enemies, which, before Faith commeth, reign as Kings, under our Feet; and accordingly the phraſe is uſed, Rom. 16.20. God ſhall tread Satan under your feet. For this is done by the power of Jeſus, when ſin is mortified Rom.6 12,14. in us, and doth not reign in our mortall bodies: to this effect Origen. And morally the mightieſt of the wicked, ſhall bee moſt mightily tormented. Libnah
H. B. Patriarchs travailes. was a City within the lot of the Tribe of J*udah*, it fell to the Prieſts, Ch.
21.13. And lay between Makkedah and Eglon, 10 miles from J*eruſalem*, but two from Makkedah, Libnah ſignifieth white Frankincenſe, whereof plenty was found there, and from hence it is thought to have taken the name. Theſe Cities were doubtleſſe fenced with walls and gates, wherefore it was no leſſe miracle, that they were both in the latter part of a day ſubdued, then that the Enemies were before deſtroyed with ſtones caſt upon them. J*oſhua* did but come and Conquer, for God preſently opened the way, and took away all power of reſiſtance, and the like is to bee held for the Cities here following, all are ſaid to have been ſubdued at one time, for God fought for Iſrael, *v.*42.
they returned not to the Campe at Gilgal, till they had finiſhed all theſe expeditions.
Note. Morally the wicked, whoſe puniſhments are deferred, are in no better caſe then they that are preſently cut off, but rather in a worſe; they are reſerved for greater judgements, as theſe in fenced Cities, not onely to bee ſlain, but to ſee the deſtruction of their wives and children, neither is any defence of force to reſiſt, when God will judge.

Lachiſh the firſt City taken the ſecond day, was within the lot of J*udah* alſo,
*Ch.*15.39. and was eight miles from Libnah, and lay Northweſt; of both V.33. theſe Cities, ſee 2 King. 19.8. Here Horam, the King of Gezer was alſo ſmiten with his people, for hee came hither to help the King of Lachiſh.

V.34. From Lachiſh, J*oſhua* went to Eglon, and ſmote it the ſame day. This was alſo in the lot of J*udah*, *Ch.*15:39. and was eight miles from Lachiſh, ſtanding Southward from J*eruſalem*.

V.36. From Eglon they went to Hebron and ſmote it, and the King thereof: this was done another day; it ſtood 16 miles from Eglon, and was alſo in the lot of J*udah*, *Ch.*15.54. and was given to the Prieſts, *Ch.*21.11. of Hebron ſee before, Gen. 13.18.

Here

Qu. 1.
Lyra.
Qu. 2.

Here two queſtions are moved; 1 How the King of Hebron could now bee ſaid to bee ſlain, ſeeing hee was one of the five Kings that were ſlain and hanged, v. 26? To this Lyra anſwereth well. It was another new King, either ſucceeding his Father, or preſently elected. 2 How it can bee juſtified, that Joſhua now ſmote it, and all the ſoules therein, when as Ch. 15. 14. Caleb is ſaid to have taken it, and likewiſe Judg. 1. 10. Judah is ſaid to have ſmiten it, after Ioſhua his death? Anſw. Lyra ſaith, that Joſhua took the nether Hebron, and Caleb the upper, held ſtill by Giants, the Sons of Anak, there being happily a Caſtle, which hee haſtening to other places would not ſtay to take. But this is both againſt the Text, hee left none remaining, but ſmote all the Cities thereof, and all the ſoules thereof, and againſt that, Ch. 11. 21. Joſhua cut off all the Anakims in Hebron, Debir, &c. and left none remaining, ſaving in the Philiſtims Countrey. It is therefore to bee held rather, that Hebron being ſubdued at this time, was repoſſeſſed again by Anakims, comming out of the Philiſtims Countrey, againſt whom Caleb fought. For it was not one work onely to ſubdue all thoſe Cities, but the Enemy entring into ſome of them again, cauſed more expeditions againſt the ſame.

V. 38.

From Hebron Joſhua and all Iſrael returned to Debir, and ſmote it likewiſe. This City lay Northweſt from Hebron about a mile, and it is alſo ſaid to have been taken by Othniel, Joſh. 15. 17. and Judg. 1. but that was likewiſe upon a repoſſeſſing of it again by the Enemies. It was alſo called Kiriathſephar, the City of Scribes, becauſe ſuch as ſtudied the Law dwelt there, and Debir commeth of Daber, hath ſpoken, it ſignifieth an Oracle. It ſtood in the lot of Judah, Joſh. 15. 49. and was a City of Prieſts and Levites.

V. 40.

So Joſhua ſmote all the Country of the Hills, and of the South, of the Vales and of the Springs, and hee ſmote all their Kings, and deſtroyed all that breathed, &c. Here for brevities ſake, other particulars being omitted, it is ſhewed in generall, what a large tract of ground Joſhua ran over, deſtroying all, before his return again to the Campe at Gilgal, wherefore v. 41. it is ſaid, all theſe Kings, and all their Land did Joſhua take at one time, that is, proſecuting his Victories begun from day to day, till that hee had fully ſubdued all that tract of ground which lay from Kadeſh-Barnea to Gaza, and from Goſhen to Gibeon, that is, from the South to the Weſt; for Kadeſh-Barnea lay Southward, being the limit of the lot of Judah that way, and Gaza of the Philiſtims, was the utmoſt limit of the land of Canaan Weſtward towards the Sea. Goſhen alſo was a large Countrey lying Southward. All this tract is thus deſcribed by H. B. It lay towards the South, bordering Eaſtward upon the dead Sea, South: upon Kadeſh, Weſt: upon Gaza, North: upon Gibeon and Gilgal, containing in circuit 156 miles. And becauſe thoſe parts were ſome Mountainous, ſome barren, through the parching heat of the Sun, ſome plain, and ſome watery, hee diſtributeth the parts conquered accordingly into foure. For towards the South, the Sun lying hot upon it parched the ground, and made it more barren. For Vales, and Springs, the vulgar Latine hath Campeſtrem, & Aſedoth; ſo likewiſe the Septuagint; But אשדות ſignifieth the flowings down of Waters, and therefore may well bee rendred Springs, and by the other word, all plain places are meant. By every thing that breathed, underſtand with Lyra all mankind, for the beaſts they were permitted to take for a prey, Ch. 11. 14. All this being done, Joſhua and all Iſrael with him returned to the Campe at Gilgal, v. 43. Thus they did becauſe here they had left, as in a place before ſubdued, their wives and children, for their ſafeguard, with ſome company doubtleſſe to keep the Campe.

Numb. 34. 4.
Joſh. 15. 3.
Joſh. 15. 51.

CHAP. XI.

V. 1, 2.

THE Enemies on the South being ſubdued, and their Cities taken, now is ſhewed, how thoſe on the North, and on all ſides from thence, Eaſt, Weſt, combined together againſt Joſhua by the inſtigation of Jabin, King of Hazor, but with as ill ſucceſſe as the former five Kings, for they were all deſtroyed and their people, none being ſpared throughout all their Lands. Ferus. If this ſhall bee thought cruelty, ſaith Ferus, that ſo much blood ſhould bee ſhed, it is but as all ſinners, when they come to bee puniſhed, are ready to object that God is cruell towards them. But they truely were worthy of theſe ſevere proceedings; for when as Nebuchadnezzar was moved at one miracle to give glory to God, they were nothing moved by divers, unto the dividing of Jordan, and the falling of the walls of Jericho, the ſtanding ſtill of the Sun being added in the ſight of all men, wherefore they were moſt deſperately wicked, and worthy to bee all cut off, for that ſtill they banded themſelves together againſt the Lord.

The Myſtery. Myſtically hereby was figured out how the Enemies of Jeſus ſhould joyn againſt him, firſt the Jews, and they being overcome, heathen perſecuters, and they alſo being put down, Hereticks in greater numbers, but none ſhall ever bee able to prevaile againſt his Church, but finally bring ruine upon themſelves, as theſe did. Thus Ferus; but whereas in ſpeaking of the Kings, that now combined againſt Joſhua, hee ſaith, that they were 24 and Comeſtor likewiſe, and that ſeven onely were ſlain before, according to the capitulation made *Ch.*12. of 31 Kings, the contrary appeareth, becauſe 11 periſhed before, and moreover *Ch.*10.40. ſome others, whoſe number is not particularly there ſet down, but if 11 onely, here could bee no more then 20.

Hazor was a great and Metropolitan City, within the lot of Nephtalim, *Ch.*19.36. towards Mount Libanus, and not farre from Ceſarea Philippi. And here another King J*abin* reigned afterwards, Judg. 4. much afflicting the Iſraelites with his Canaanites. H. B. Patriarchs travailes. It lay 80 miles from J*eruſalem* towards the North, and the ruines of it are to bee ſeen at this day. J*abin* the King of this City, was over all the other Kings, *v.*10. and therefore by his authority might call together the reſt to this warre. J*obab the King of Madon*; where this Madon lay, it cannot bee ſaid by any thing ſpoken in the ſacred Hiſtory; but J*oſephus* calleth theſe the inhabitants of Libanus: This was the firſt King for whom J*abin* ſent; the ſecond was the King of Shimron, this hath an addition, v. 20. Shimron Meron; this was in the Tribe of Zebulun, *Ch.*19.15. neare to the lot of Nephtalim, towards the ſouth. The third was the King of Achſaph, which Achſaph lay in the lot of A*ſher*, *Ch.*19.25.

V. 2. And hee ſent to the Kings that were on the north of the mountaines, and of the plains, ſouth of Cinneroth, and in the borders of Dor, &c. For the Kings on the north, the Septuagint have the Kings towards Sidon, happily taking צפון for צידון, as Maſius conjectureth, or rather becauſe Zidon is mentioned, *v.*8. as the place towards which Joſhua chaſed them. Cinneroth was the ſame, that was afterward called Genneſareth, and ſo the Chaldee paraphr: rendreth it in this place. Dor was a City in the lot of the halfe tribe of Manaſſeh, neare the Sea, *Chap.*17.11. J*udg.*1.27.

V. 3. And to the Canaanite on the weſt and the eaſt, and the Amorite, Hittite, and Perizzite, &c. This ſeemeth to bee an enumeration of divers others ſent for, beſides the forenamed; beeauſe it is ſaid, and the Canaanite, &c. but in Hebr. there is no and, whereby it ſeemeth rather that the people hitherto ſent for, before deſcribed by their Cities and coaſts, are here onely further ſhewed to bee Canaanites, Amorites, Hittites, &c. onely the J*ebuſites* in the mountaines, which were towards J*eruſalem*, are added; and the Hivites under Hermon in the Land of Mizpeh. Hermon was a mountaine neare to Libanus, 122 miles from Ieruſalem towards the northeaſt, it bounded all the north part of that Countrey, the ſame is called Mount Baal Hermon, Iudg. 3.3. Beſides this, there was another Hermon on the other ſide of Iordan, called alſo Shenir, *Deut.*3.9. of the former this here is to be underſtood. Mizpeh ſignifieth a Watch-tower, whereby is intimated, that it ſtood upon a high place. One Mizpeh was in the Tribe of Iudah, *Ch.*15.38. another in the tribe of Benjamin, *Ch.*18.26. Adricomius. But Adricomius will have both theſe to be one, ſtanding upon the border of theſe two tribes. This Mizpeh was famous for the peoples aſſembling thither together againſt

Benjamin, Iudg. 20.1. and for Samuels aſſembling them to make Saul King, 1 Sam. 10.17. Another Mizpeh was on the other ſide of Iordan in the tribe of Gad, Ch. 13.26. Of the firſt of theſe, the City here named muſt needs bee underſtood, becauſe that Mizpeh where Gad dwelt in Gilead, was before conquered; the Land about, even to Hermon, ſeemeth to have taken the name from this Mizpeh, being therefore called the land of Mizpeh: in the other Iephthah the Gileadite dwelt, Iudg. 11.

V. 4.

And they went out, and all the hoſts of them, much people, as the ſand upon the Sea ſhore, and their Chariots and horſes. This ſpeech is hyperbolicall, and ſetteth forth a very great Hoſt; and the addition of Horſes and Chariots muſt needs bee the more terrible to the Iſraelites, who were all on foot. Ioſephus ſaith, that the horſemen were 10000, the chariots 20000, and the footmen 300000.

Joſephus.

V. 5.

H.B. Patriarkes travailes.

Ioſeph. lib. 3. c. 1 de Bell. Iud.

Ioſeph. lib. 5. c. 6. Antiq.

They came and pitched together at the waters of Merom, &c. This was a lake not farre from Dothan, 44 miles from Ieruſalem towards the north; from Gilgal above 22 miles. This Lake is made a great part of it by the overflowings of Iordan, being 60 furlongs long, and 30 furlongs broad, but when Iordan overfloweth not, it ſoon waxeth almoſt dry; it is alſo called Samaconitis, neare to this was Hazor, where the great King Iabin reigned, to whom the reſt here aſſembled; but Ioſephus calleth the place of their meeting the City Berotha. Lyra ſaith, that Merom was between the head of Iordan, and the ſea of Cinneroth.

V. 6.

Lyra.

Calvin.

Ferus.

And the Lord ſaid to Ioſhua, Bee not afraid of them, for to morrow by this time I will deliver them into thy hands all ſlaine; and thou ſhalt hough their horſes, and burne their chariots with fire. The Vulgar Latine, tradam omnes in manus tuas vulnerandos. The word חלילים chalilim, here uſed, ſignifieth either wounded, or ſlaine; but this laſt is to bee preferred, for it is ſhewed immediately after, that Ioſhua ſlew them all, v. 8. that is, as Lyra hath it, all that ſaved not themſelves by flying into fenced Cities: but this was a long time in doing, v. 18. that is, as ſhall bee further ſhewed there, five or ſix yeares; for the eſcape of Iabin into Hazor, and of other Kings, is intimated, v. 10, 11, 12. Wherefore theſe words, To morrow by this time, are not to be underſtood, as if they ſhould all bee ſlaine in one day, but they ſhould then bee all diſcomfited, and begin to fall; neither would the Lord ceaſe fighting for Iſrael, till they were all ſlaine that they could meet withall. From hence Calvin gathereth, that Merom was not farre from Gilgal; or that theſe Forces were comming againſt Ioſhua in Gilgal, and were now not farre off. And becauſe God biddeth him againe, not to bee affraid, that notwithſtanding the like encouragements formerly given him at divers times, hee needed now to have the ſame repeated againe. Ioſephus ſaith, that the people of Iſrael hearing of their mighty Forces deſpaired through feare, till the Lord againe gave them this incouragement. For the charge of houghing their horſes, and burning their chariots with fire; this ſaith Ferus, was, leſt if they ſhould have kept theſe horſes and chariots, they ſhould afterwards have truſted in them, and not in God onely; for the Heathen that were thus furniſht, truſted in them, Pſal. 20.8. but Gods Angels are about his as Horſemen and Chariots of fire, and God is as a fiery wall about them. 2. To ſhew the greater indignation againſt the wicked in making all their pompe and pride to fall together with them. 3. To teach them that Horſes and Chariots are of no power in Warre againſt God. 4. To prefigure how Jeſus ſhould deſtroy all his enemies, as the Jewes by taking away their Temple, and Land, and his Word from them, which were as their Horſes, whereby they were puffed up with pride, and perſecuting Kings, by deſtroying their power and greatneſſe, which were as their Horſes; and Heretiques by confounding their wit and eloquence by his Word, for theſe were as their horſes wherewith they warred againſt the truth. 5. To ſhew how wee ſhould warre againſt the devill to overcome him, viz. by houghing his horſe, which is the fleſh, and ſubduing it by faſting, praying, and labouring. Lyra yeeldeth none other reaſon of this charge, but that it muſt be done in token of a perfect victory obtained by the Lord; but others generally ſay the ſame with the firſt reaſon of Fe-

2 King 6.

Zechar. 2.

The Myſterie.

Lyra.

rus, and Deut. 4. 17. 16. the King is forbidden to multiply horſes to himſelfe. Calvin. Calvin beſides this addeth another reaſon, viz. that not being furniſht with horſes, they might containe themſelves within their owne bounds, and not ſeek out to inlarge their dominions; farther then they were allowed. 2 Chron. 18. And wee read not, that the Iſraelites went to the Wars after this with Horſes and Chariots, but if ſometimes they did, it was with ill ſucceſſe.

V. 7. 8. Here is fulfilled what was promiſed, the enemies were cut off by Iſrael and chaſed to great Zidon and to Miſrephothmaim, and to the valley of Mizpeh. Ioſeph. lib. c. 6. Antiq. Zidon, ſaith Joſephus, was a great City of the Phœnicians, built by Zidon the firſt born of Canaan, lying by the Sea, and not lying farre from Antilibanus, H.B. Patriarkes travailes. ſay Adricom. and Borchardus. This Antilibanus, ſaith H. Bunting, was one part of the ſame mountain, called Libanus, for that part towards the Weſt, near Zidon, was called Antilibanus, the other upon the Eaſt towards Damaſcus, Libanus. Touching this chaſing of the Enemy, hee ſaith, that it was to Zidon 612 miles, and yet hee maketh Zidon from Jeruſalem but 16 miles, ſo that herein was a great eſcape, and in that hee addeth, from Zidon, hee returned again to Hazor 32 miles. It is more probable, that the way which hee chaſed them, was 62 miles to the furtheſt part of the land of Canaan Northward, at the end of the Land of Zebulon and Naphtalim. Touching Miſrephothmaim, in the Vulgar Latine, the waters of Mazerephoth, it is a name compounded of Lyra. burning and waters: which Lyra following the Hebrews, thinketh to have been ſo called, becauſe being alſo near the Sea, and ſalt waters flowing thence Vatablus. Pagninus. Maſius. into it; Salt, which is of an hot burning quality was there made: but Vatablus and Pagninus more probably, becauſe thoſe waters were hot, as the waters of Bathes. Maſius becauſe glaſſe was made there by a long decoction of ſand. Of Mizpeh ſee before v. 3. the meaning is, that ſome of them fled Eaſtward, to the valley of Mizpeh, and ſome Northward and Weſtward towards Zidon and Miſrephothmaim, and were purſued all theſe wayes.

V. 9. And Joſhua did unto them, as the Lord bad him, hee boughed their horſes, &c. Hee conſidered not, that their horſes and chariots might bee now uſefull for him in his Warres, but neglecting all worldly benefit, hee was altogether led Note. by Gods commandement, herein giving example to every of us, that the love of temporall gaine ſway us not againſt Gods precepts, for hee is able to give us much more.

V. 10, 11, 12. The enemies being deſtroyed all that had not eſcaped into Cities, now Joſhua returneth to deale with them, and firſt he beginneth with Hazor the head City of all the reſt, to which it ſeemeth that Jabin the King had eſcaped, for having taken this City, hee killeth the King and all the people, and burneth the City with fire: which execution was done upon it ſingularly, becauſe the King thereof had made the greateſt reſiſtance. For the Cities of the other Kings under him, he deſtroyed both Kings and people therein, ſparing none, young or old, but he burns not any more of them, but let them ſtand ſtill and took all their goods and cattell for a prey to the children of Iſrael. Of Hazor and Jabin, a King thereof wee read againe, Judg. 4. againſt whom Barak Toſtatus fought; which although Toſtatus would have it to be another Hazor in the ſouth part of Judah, yet it is rather to be held that it was this ſame City re*Ioſeph. lib. 5. c. 6. Antiq.* built; becauſe as Joſephus ſaith, it ſtood in Galilee neare the lake Samachonitis, and that it was the ſame; and Thabour where the battell was then fought, was V. 15. in Galilee. And all this Joſhua is ſaid to have done, as God commanded Moſes, and Moſes commanded him. Then reckoning up the Countreys ſubdued V. 16. by him, it is ſaid, He tooke all that land, the hills, and all the South Countrey, and all the Land of Goſhen, and the valley, and the plaine, and the mountaine of Iſrael, and the valley thereof, &c. Here is a capitulation made, not onely of the Countreys now ſubdued at their going out againſt Hazors King and his confederates, but alſo before, as we may ſee, Ch. 10. 40, 41. Onely in this verſe the mountaine of Iſrael, and the valley thereof are more added. But what place this was, Bonfrerius. divers conjecture diverſly. Some thinke that it was Bethel, becauſe Jacob who was called Iſrael worſhipped there, both at his going into Meſopotamia, and at his

Cajetan. Salianus.

his returne, *Gen.*35. ſome, that it was mount Gerizim, neare Samaria, where Jacob bought a piece of ground, and where he dwelt and worſhipped, of which the woman of Samaria ſaid, Our Fathers worſhipped upon this mountaine: Joh. 4. and to this doe I aſſent, becauſe it muſt bee a place called by this name when Joſhua lived, which could not be, but from Iſrael the Father of this people, and no place can ſo probably bee thought to have the name from him, as this which he bought, and ſo was his proper poſſeſſion. Thus Rab. Kimchi ſaith alſo in generall, that it was ſome place where Iſrael dwelt: and Maſius a mountaine by Samaria, but he will have it ſo called from the ten Tribes, going afterwards by the name of Iſrael, who held this mountaine; but then it ſhould not have been ſo called at the writing of this book, but long after onely. Of the mountaine of the height of Iſrael wee read afterwards, Ezek. 17. 23. and 20.40. but that is nothing to the giving of light into this. Calvin. Calvin rejecting all particular explications here, holdeth that nothing elſe but the mountaines in generall now poſſeſſed by the Iſraelites are meant, by a word collective, being called together the mountaine of Iſrael. But becauſe the mountaines are here reckoned apart, and then this mountaine of Iſrael, that cannot ſtand; yet becauſe, v. 21. wee read of all the mountaines of Judah, and the mountaines of Iſrael, the mountaine of Iſrael may be here ſo called by anticipation, the mountaines being meant, which were afterwards proper to the ten Tribes, as by the mountaines firſt named thoſe in the lot of Judah and Benjamin.

V. 17. Even from mount Halak that goeth up to Seir, unto Baalgad in the valley of Lebanon under Hermon. For mount Halak, the Vulg. Latine hath, part of the mountaine, becauſe חלק ſignifieth a part; and Aquila hath it, a monte dividente, the Chaldee and Tygurine interpr. a monte diviſionis; Symmachus a monte Levi; Vatablus and Maſius, a monte glabro; the Septuagint, as if it were a proper name, ἀπὸ ὄρους ἀαλαχ. Junius. That rendring it glaber, ſmooth, is followed by Junius, and ſeemeth to be beſt, as anſwering to Seir, rough, abounding with buſhes and trees, whereas this beginning of it was without them, and ſo ſmooth, neither doe I any where find Halak, put for a proper name. Seir was on the South where the Edomites dwelt; and Baalgad Northward, being a City beneath mount Libanus, ſee *Ch.*13.5. of Hermon ſee before, *v.*3. So that here is ſet forth the longitude of the Countrey taken from the South to the North, as before the latitude from the Eaſt to the Weſt, *v.*16. the circuit of this conqueſt, ſaith H. Bunting was 280 miles. But all theſe parts were not ſubdued at once, for it V. 18. is added, Joſhua made warre a long time with theſe Kings. How long a time this was, may be gathered from the age of Caleb, Ch.14.6,7. For hee was 46 years old when hee was ſent to view the Land, and the Warres being ended, 85 years old. Now before his going out at that time, one yeer, and ſomewhat more was ſpent of the 40, which they wandred in the wilderneſſe, which being added to the 5 above 80, maketh 6 yeares and upward; ſo that the Warres laſted 6 yeares and ſomewhat more. Calvin. This delay was not made for want of power in God to give them the whole Land inſtantly, but partly to exerciſe their faith, and to make it the more evident that God fought for them; and that the Countrey being long in ſubduing, they might be more affected with the benefit; and partly, leſt all being ſubdued at once, the wilde beaſts ſhould multiply upon them in ſuch places as they had not yet people enough to inhabit, as was ſaid before, *Deut.*7.22. to this effect Calvin. V. 19,20. But at length all theſe Kings and their Cities were deſtroyed: for it is noted that none of them made peace with Joſhua, ſaving the Gibeonites, but were hardened to come to fight againſt him, that they might all bee cut off. Obj. If it be objected here, their ſeeking of peace had been vaine, ſeeing they were all deſtined to the ſword for their abominable ſinnes: and therefore hardening ſeemeth not rightly to be imputed to them as a fault. To this Calvin anſwereth, that the ſcope of this place is not to taxe them, but to ſhew how the Lord by his ſingular providence tooke away all impediment, and ſo made way for the execution of his judgement appointed. For if any had ſubmitted themſelves, this muſt needs have bred ſome demurre in the Iſraelites what to doe, but they all contrariwiſe comming madly to War againſt them; and ſo being deſtroyed, there was no ſhew of cruelty, but a moſt juſt execution done upon them. But I thinke rather, as was ſaid before touching the Gibeonites, if any City elſe had ſubmitted it ſelfe, and turned to God as the Gibeonites did, it might have been preſerved. And therefore their not yeelding is noted, as comming from a juſt judgement, God giving them over for their ſins to this obduration, and ſo to deſtruction, as he had done to Pharaoh and his Egyptians.

V. 21. Then came Joſhua and cut off the Anakims from the mountaines, from Hebron, Debir, and Anab, and all the mountaines of Judah and Iſrael, &c. Of the Anakims ſee before, Numb. 13.23. They were Gyants, which in the taking of theſe Cities, Ch. 10. happily ſaved themſelves hitherto in ſome Forts which could not ſo eaſily be overcome; and therefore to avoid delayes, being hitherto let alone, whilſt Joſhua was buſied in his Warres in the North parts; now they being ended, hee commeth againſt them, and cutteth them all off alſo: ſo that thoſe words, Ch. 10.37. Hee left none remaining, are to bee underſtood, not as if all without exception had been deſtroyed at the firſt, but partly then, and partly now. Of Anab nothing was ſaid before, but it was a City not farre from the other two in the lot of Judah, Ch. 15.50. Out of all theſe Cities, and out of the mountaines of Iſrael all the Anakims were deſtroyed, that is, out of all the Land, called henceforth the Land of Iſrael, as is expreſſed, v.
V. 22. 22. There were none of the Anakims left in all the Land of Iſrael, onely in Gaza, Gath, and Aſhdod there remained: theſe were Cities in the Philiſtims Countrey neare the Sea, which the Iſraelites could never ſubdue.

V. 23. Qu. Calvin. So Joſhua tooke the whole Land, &c. How can this bee verified, ſeeing Ch. 13. it is ſaid, much Land yet remained to be poſſeſſed, and Judg. 3.2. Anſw. Calvin reſolveth this, by ſaying, according to the next words, as the Lord had ſaid unto Moſes; that is, not all the Land promiſed without exception, but all which was needfull for the preſent, that the people of Iſrael which then were, might have competent poſſeſſions for their uſe; for to this effect the Lord had ſpoken Exod. 23.29. Moreover, it may bee ſaid, according to others, that Joſhua tooke all the Land which hee attempted to take; and the forces of the enemies were ſo broken by him, that in the places remaining untaken, there was no ſuch power to reſiſt, but that they might eaſily have been taken afterwards, if the people had perſiſted in obedience to God. The reaſons why ſome parts ſtill remained unconquered, beſides that before going of the beaſts multiplying, were two, Judg. 3.2,4. 1 That they might bee exerciſed with Warre in after times. 2 That by them the Iſraelites ſinning might be ſcourged, and living amongſt them proved, whether they would bee drawn to idolatry. And the Land reſted from Warre; that is, as Lyra hath it, from generall Warres, but particular Tribes, and men made Wars, as is afterwards ſhewed.

CHAP. XII.

V. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. HEre is 1. a capitulation made of the Kings, and their Cities and borders on the other ſide of Iordan ſubdued by the Iſraelites under the leading of Moſes, of which ſee before, Deut. 2. & Ch. 3. For there bee the ſame bounds of both their Lands in generall, Deut. 3.8. From the river Arnon to mount Hermon. And in particular of the Kingdom of Sihon, Numb. 21.24. From Aroer upon Arnon to the river Jabbok: But here it is a little more fully deſcribed, From the middle of the River, that is, the river Arnon, and half Gilead, and the parts given in poſſeſſion to the Reubenites and Gadites, Deut. 3.16,17. are here ſhewed to have been of the Kingdom of Sihon. The plain alſo, and Jordan, and the coaſt thereof from Cinneroth to the ſea of the plain, even the ſalt Sea under Aſhdoth Piſgah eaſtward; of all which ſee upon that place. Touching the other Kingdom, viz. of Og, he is ſaid to have dwelt in Aſhteroth and Edrei, Deut. 1.4. at Aſhteroth in Edrei, Joſh. 13.12. he reigned alſo in Baſhan and Salcah, and Mount Hermon to the border of the Geſhunites, and of the Maachathites,and half Gilead,&c. Of all theſe, ſee before upon Deut. 3. 10. 14. but onely Mount Hermon, in part of which onely it ſeemeth that hee reigned, it being the bound of his Kingdome, and part being poſſeſſed by the Canaanites was taken by Joſhua, *Joſh.*11.17. thus ſome: But by that which is ſaid *Joſh.*11.17. and v. 3. The Canaanites that dwelt under Mount Hermon; it appeareth rather that they poſſeſſed no part of this Mount, but the valley near unto it; and that all Hermon was taken and given away by Moſes, is plainly affirmed, *Ch.*13.12. All this being taken by Moſes, was given to the Reubenites, Gadites, &c. as is further ſhewed, *Deut.*3.14,15,&c. Now all theſe Conqueſts, and thoſe of Joſhua are here briefly propounded in one view together, ſaith Ferus, that the people of Iſrael might the better take notice of the mighty Acts which the Lord had done for them, according to his promiſe long before made to Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and after to Moſes and Joſhua, and the more confidently beleeve in him, and obey and ſerve him for all time to come. For it ſeemed ſometime impoſſible to the children of Iſrael, that ſo many, and ſo ſtrong Cities and people ſhould bee ſubdued unto them; wherefore this being now done, there was great reaſon why they ſhould not bee doubtfull, but confident touching the performance of all other promiſes for ever hereafter. And the ſame ground of faith ſhould wee build upon for all promiſes of the Churches prevailing at laſt, of Chriſts ſecond comming, &c. becauſe all things hitherto promiſed, which were as hard to be beleeved, have been accompliſhed in their due times.

Ferus. Not.

V.7,8,9,10. Here 2 is a capitulation made of the Kings on this ſide Jordan ſmitten by Joſhua, whoſe Countreys are deſcribed and bounded, as before, Ch.10.40.& Ch.11.16 The King of Jericho one, the King of Ai one, &c. This tract of ground taken by Joſhua, ſaith H.Bunt. was 160 miles long, from Baalgad to mount Seir, & 28, or 32 miles broad. And touching the fifth King of Jarmoth here numbred, he ſaith, that his name was Perkam, and that Jarmoth was 20 miles from Jeruſalem weſtward, but he is called Piram, Ch.10.3. The 8 King of Gezer, hee calleth Horam, ſo alſo Ch.10.33. hee is called: Gezer was 16 miles from Ieruſalem weſtward, in the tribe of Dan. Gedar the ſeat of the 10 King, was 14 miles Weſtward from Ieruſalem, in Iudah. Harmah of the 11 King, 40 miles from Ieruſalem, upon the borders of Arabia deſerta Southweſt, in Iudah alſo. Arad of the 12 King, 22 miles from Ieruſalem Southward. Tappuah the ſeat of the 17 King, not farre from Iordan and Iericho. Hepher the ſeat of the 18 King, 6 miles Northward from Ieruſalem. Aphek the ſeat of the 19 King, 44 miles from Ieruſalem Northward, within 2 miles of Iezreel. Lazaron of the 20 King, 18 miles Northweſt from Ieruſalem. Nadan of the 21 King, 14 miles Northweſt. Simron of the 23 King, 68 miles from Ieruſalem Northward, and neare Nazareth. Achſaph of the 24 King, 88 miles Northward in the tribe of Aſher. Taanach of the 25 King, 44 miles from Ieruſalem, and 6 from Iezreel. Megiddo of the 26 King, 4 miles from Taanach. Iokneam of the 28 King, 27 miles from Ieruſalem Northward in the tribe of Zebulun. Dor of the 29 King, 48 miles from Ieruſalem North: upon the Sea coaſt, between the hill Carmel, and Ceſarea Stratonis. Gilgal of the 31 King, was neare Iordan. Tirzah of the 31 King, 24 miles from Ieruſalem in Manaſſeh. Thus hee of moſt of theſe Kings, of the reſt hee ſaith no more then is in the Hiſtory of Ioſhua, Ch. 10. Ch. 11. and Ch. 12. But whereas hee ſaith, the Gilgal of the 30 King was that neare Jordan, between it and Jericho, this is moſt improbable, becauſe there was no City thus called before, but upon occaſion of the foreskins there cut away, as is ſhewed upon *Joſh.*5. neither doe wee read of any King there to be cut off, but of the people of Iſraels comming to it the ſame day that they paſſed over Jordan, and pitching there, which they could not have done ſo quietly, if it had been before inhabited by the enemy. Moreover, this King is called the King of the Nations of Gilgal, arguing, that he had divers peoples under his dominion. Maſius following one Copy of the Sept. for Gilgal hath Galilee. But although Galilee bee called גליל it is no where called גלגל; that expoſition therefore falleth, and ſo muſt remain uncertain where this Gilgal was.

H. Bunt. Patriarchs Trav.

Maſius.

CHAP. XIII.

V.1,2,3,4,5,6,7. HEre the Lord biddeth Joſhua to divide the Land of Canaan to the 9 tribes and an halfe, and to deferre no longer, although all that was to be divided, was not yet conquered and taken, becauſe hee was now old and had not long to live, and by him the Land was to be divided before his death; and the parts yet untaken are reckoned up. In that God telleth Joſhua that hee was old, and Abraham is ſingularly ſpoken of before, that he was an old man, Gen. 25.
Ferus. 8. Ferus noteth Joſhua to have been hence commended, but not ſimply becauſe he was old in yeares, but in wiſdome and good manners. How old he was at this time, is not ſaid, but Ch. 24. when hee dyed, that he was 110 yeares old, happily he was now 100. It ſeemeth, that after the Land conquered, and a quiet abode there obtained, Joſhua went not by and by to dividing the Land, but waited till he had direction from the Lord ſo to do. In all things hee was guided by the Word of God, as every of us alſo ought to be.

V. 2. The Land not yet taken, is ſaid to be all the borders of the Philiſtims, and all Geſhuri, &c. For all the borders, the Vulgar Latine hath all Galilee; but this is Bonfrerius. plainly an errour, as the Jeſuite himſelfe confeſſeth, becauſe the word ſignifying borders, is גלילות, and גליל is Galilee, whereupon ſome have thought Galilee to bee here meant, and ſo have written it. But Galilee was taken before Ch. 10. for Hazor and Kadeſh there ſpoken of, were in the lot of Naphtali, and Simron in that of Zebulun, both which tribes were placed in Galilee, Ch. 19. &
V. 3. Ch. 20.7. In deſcribing the borders of the Philiſtims he ſaith, there were five Lords of them, viz. of the Gazathites, Ekronites, Aſhdothites, Eſhkalonites, Gittites; these laſt having their name from Gath, of a King whereof we read afterwards, 1 Sam. 27.2. Of moſt of theſe places, and where they lay, ſee before, Ch. 11.22. Touching Geſhuri, ſee Ch. 12.5. and Deut. 3.14. From Sihor which is before Egypt, to the borders of Ekron northward. This is not the deſcription of the land of Geſhuri, as it may ſeem, but of the Philiſtims Countrey, the Lords whereof are immediately after numbred. For Sihor, the Vulgar Latine hath a troubled River, according to the ſignification of the word; but what River is hereby meant, divers think diverſly; ſome, that it is not Nilus, but another River Schol. Hiſt. Cajetan. Iunius. mentioned, Gen. 15.18. lying nearer to the Land of Canaan, and Amos 6.14.
called the River of the Wilderneſſe. Junius ſaith, it is thought by ſome to bee a River, which comming through Arabia Petræa, floweth into the mariſh Sirbonis, and divideth Egypt from the promiſed Land: but hee following Epiphanius, Calvin, Lyra, Maſius, Tigurini interpr. R. Solom. Chimchi, &c. judgeth it to be the River Rinocorura. Calvin rendreth it Nilus, and for Nilus it is taken by many others; not that the land of Canaan extended to Egypt where Nilus lay; but becauſe there was nothing but a vaſt and unhabitable Wilderneſſe between it and Canaan Southward, ſo that it may be ſaid, from this River, becauſe there was no more land habitable between Canaan and it; their reaſon, becauſe Nilus is the moſt noted troubled River, for the black ſlimie ſtuffe which it bringeth with it, and Jer. 2.18. it is plainely called by this name Sihor: and becauſe according to the phraſe here uſed in Hebrew, upon the face of Egypt, Nilus overfloweth that Land. And to this doe I ſubſcribe.
This is the length of the Philiſtims Countrey, lying from the South to the North, as the land already conquered, lay from Jordan on the Eaſt, to the Weſt. Whereas it is added, which is counted to the Canaanite, whereby it may ſeeme not to bee of the Philiſtims Countrey. It is anſwered, this approveth it rather to bee out of the Canaanites poſſeſſion at this time, but counted their Countrey, although poſſeſſed by the Philiſtims, becauſe otherwiſe it would rather have been ſaid, this was alſo the Canaanites Countrey: But it is ſaid to be counted to the Canaanite, to intimate the right that the Iſraelites had to it, to whom God had promiſed onely the land of Canaan, that is, of his children, and not the land of any of Hams other Sonnes. Although then the Philiſtims now held this tract of ground, yet it was firſt the Canaanites, and by the Philiſtims taken from them, as is ſhewed, Deut. 2. 23. to the borders of Ekron on
the

the North; for this was the furtheſt Northward of all the Philiſtims dominions, as Gaza was the moſt ſoutherly, which is firſt numbred, ſo Calvin, who Calvin.
rendreth it Aza, by ע in עזתי is not pronounced, ſo likewiſe Junius. Five Lords Iunius.
of the Philiſtims; Hebr. five Lordſhips, and thus Calvin and Iunius alſo tranſlate it, and this reading ſtandeth with better ſenſe: and for Gazathites, in the ſingular number is the Gazathite, that is, the Gazathite Lordſhip, and likewiſe of the reſt. But beſides theſe, the Avites are added, theſe were the old inhabitants of this Countrey, Deut. 2.23 and it ſeemeth hereby, that ſome of them dwelt ſtill therein, although they had no rule, as the Philiſtims had, but were under them. Theſe words, and the Avites, are by the Vulgar Latine left out here, and placed in the next verſe thus, But to the South are the Evites, all the Land of Canaan. This is againſt the Hebrew verity, wherein it followeth and on the V.4.
South all the Land of the Canaanites; the Avites being added, *v.*3. as in our Tranſlation. The Septuagint for further explication have all the Land of the Canaanite from Gaza. For the South, Hebr. is תימן teman, which word the Septuagint retaine, and Teman was a Royall City in Idumea, South from Canaan, which is the reaſon why it is rendred South. And Mera that is beſide the Sidonians unto Aphek: Hebr. Marah of the Sidonians, or Meara, which is of the Sidonians, as Calvin rendreth it word for word. מערה ſignifieth a denne, and ſo it is rendred by the Chaldee, and Arias Montanus, and not as a proper name;
but Ierome and Pagninus make a proper name of it; and Iunius calleth it Magorab, Iunius.
ſaying, that it is a River lying under Libanus, between Zidon and Berytum, Adricomius.
referring for this to Pliny, lib. 5. c. 20. Adricomius ſaith, that there was an admirable, and inexpugnable den in Sidon, which ſeemeth to bee moſt probably here meant, this denne, as a place of greateſt ſtrength, being put for the whole Countrey of Sidon. Aphek was a City where the lot of the tribe of Aſher lay,
*Ch.*19.30. but the Aſherites could not expell the inhabitants thereof, *Iudg.*1.31
There was alſo another Aphek in the tribe of Iudah, *Ch.*15.53. and of this it is ſpoken againe, 1 *Sam.*4.13 of one of theſe the King was ſlaine, Ch. 12. 18.
but if it were of this, the City held out ſtill, and was not taken. Unto Aphek is added alſo to the borders of the Amorites, which borders, what they were, is uncertaine. Maſius will have them to bee thoſe on the other ſide of Iordan.
Toſtatus the Philiſtims, but without all colour of reaſon. Bonfrerius, ſome Amorites Maſius. Toſtatus.
dwelling Weſtward, but uncertaine where: to me it ſeemeth, that it was Bonfrerius.
ſome place beyond Aphek, held ſtill by the Amorites, becauſe it is ſaid, unto Aphek unto the borders of the Amorites.

And the land of the Giblets; the Vulg: annexing this to the former hath it, and V.5.
the confines thereof, but erroneouſly; for although גבול ſignifieth a confine, yet that word is not here uſed, but גבלי, of גבל the name of a City, *Pſal.*8.3. from whence the inhabitants are called גבלי Giblites, 1 Kings 5.ult. Ezek. 27. 9. and if it be rendred confines, here were a redundancy, becauſe the borders were mentioned before. It was a City then from whence this name commeth, and that in Phœnicia, neare to Tyrus and Sidon, called Gebal, as both Jerome and Adricomius conſent, and may be gathered in the places forecited. And all Lebanon towards the Sun riſing, from Baalgad under mount Hermon, to the entring in of Hamath:
unto Libanus Ioſhua had taken, *Ch.*11.17 and to Baalgad under Hermon;
but Libanus it ſelfe remained yet untaken to Hamath, which Hamath was a City northward from Libanus, inhabited by the Canaanites, even in Davids time, 2 *Sam.*8.9. This ſame is repeated againe, *Iudg.*3.3. with the reaſons why they were left untaken.

All the Inhabitants of the hill Countrey from Lebanon to Miſrephothmaim, and V.6.
the Sidonians, &c. Of Miſrephothmaim, ſee before, *Ch.*11.8. There was beyond Libanus to this place, Antilibanus, having divers mountaines, even to the Sea, and a Countrey called Abylene, Luke 3. 2. The Sidonians are here againe named, that it might not be thought, that no more belonging to them was untaken, then Mearab their ſtrong denne. All theſe parts hitherto holding out, God promiſeth to cleare, ſaying, Them will I drive out before the children of Iſrael onely divide thou it by lot, &c. This promiſe was conditionall, if the people ſhould continue in obedience, Exod. 23,22.23, &c. but becauſe they did not,

this was never performed, for the Countrey of the Philiſtims, and Phœnicians, and Libanus were never poſſeſſed by the Iſraelites, although in the time of David and of Solomon they were made Tributaries; yet Joſhua muſt divide them V.7,8,9. to the nine Tribes, and a halfe of Manaſſeh, the other halfe with the two of the Reubenites and Gadities, having their parts already on the other ſide of Jordan from Aroer, that is upon the banke of the River Arnon, &c. of theſe limits ſee before Ch. 12.2. and all the plaine of Medeba unto Dibon, of theſe two ſee Numb. 21.30.

V. 10. And all the Cities of Sihon which Reigned in Heſhbon, to the border of the Children of Ammon; that is, to the River Iabbok, Ch. 12. 2. for that was their border of Heſhbon, ſee Numb. 21. 30.

V. 11. And Gilead, Ch. 12. 2. halfe Gilead unto Iabbok, for Gilead was not onely that under Sihon, but alſo beyond Iabbok, the limit of his Kingdom, to the border of the Geſhurites and Maacathites, ſee Ch. 12.5 and all mount Hermon, Baſhon, and Salcah, ſee alſo Ch. 12.5.

V. 12. And all the Kingdom of Og, &c. ſee Ch. 12.4.

V. 13. But the children of Iſrael expelled not the Geſhurites and Maachathites, &c.
this is added becauſe it is ſaid before, that they poſſeſſed to their borders, leſt
V. 14. it ſhould bee thought that they were now deſtroyed. Only to the Tribe of Levi hee gave no inheritance, &c. This is added that the Levites might bee content, although they were neglected in this diviſion, partly becauſe it was done, as Moſes had appointed, who was of their owne Tribe; & partly becauſe they had a better part, viz. the ſacrifices of the Lord, the tenths and other offerings being alſo un-V. 15,16. derſtood, from Numb. 18. and other places in the Books of Moſes. After the deſcription of the Land in generall, given to the two Tribes and an halfe, now V. 17. follow their parts in particular. Firſt, to Reuben from Aroer, and the City in the midſt of the River, and all the plaine by Medeba. And Heſhbon, Dibon, Qu. Bamoth-Baal, &c. Of Dibon it is ſaid, Numb. 32. 34. that it was built by Gad, Iunius. how then is it here aſcribed to Reuben? To this Iunius and others anſwer, that it Maſius. was a bordering City between Reuben and Gad, and ſo common to them both.
In like manner Heſhbon, which is here reckoned to Reuben, and Numb. 32. 37. is ſaid to bee of Gad, Ch. 21.39. becauſe in the confines of either Tribe. Of the other Cities, or moſt of them, it was ſpoken before, Numb. 32 35,36,37.
&c. and Ioſh. 12. 3.

V. 21. All the Kingdom of Sihon, whom Moſes ſmote with the Princes of Midian, &c.
This was not done all at one time, but firſt Sihon was ſlaine, Numb. 21. and after, Ch. 31. theſe Princes of Midian, there called Kings, but here Princes and Dukes of Sihon, happily becauſe they were Tributaries to him.

V. 22. Balaam alſo, &c. Of whom, ſee Numb. 31.8.

V. 24,25,26. Here the part of Gad is deſcribed, their coaſt was Jazer, and all the Land of Gilead, &c. Of Iazer, ſee Numb. 21. But whereas all Gilead is here reckoned to Gad, v. 31. halfe of it is reckoned to Manaſſeh, and likewiſe Numb. 32.40. To this, I know not what better may bee ſaid, then that divers Regions were called Gilead, ſo the tribe of Gad may bee ſaid to have had all one Gilead, and Ma-naſſeh another. For Sihon, whoſe Land Gad poſſeſſed, had not all which was called Gilead, but half of it, Ch. 12.2. the other part, or the other Gilead which the Manaſſites poſſeſſed, was of the kingdom of Og, as is expreſſed, v. 30. The Ga-dites then held all the Land of Gilead that was Sihons, and the Manaſſites all that of Og. And half the Land of the children of Ammon, &c. That is, which Sihon King of the Amorites had before taken from them, Numb. 21. 26. for with the Ammonites land they were forbidden to meddle, Deut. 2. 16. neither did they take ought thereof, Iudg. 11.15. Unto Aroer that is before Rabbah. Aroer was Hieronym. de lo- upon the River Arnon; Rabbah the chief City of the Ammonites, ſtill in their cis Hebr. poſſeſſion, but afterwards ſubdued by David, 2 Sam. 12.

V. 26. From Heſhbon to Ramoth Mizpeh, otherwiſe called Ramoth Gilead, Ch. 20.8.
as Debir is alſo called Kiriathſepher, Ch. 15. 15. Of other Cities, ſee Numb. 32.
V. 27. This part alſo extended to Iordan eaſtward, where it met with the part of Reuben, and to the Sea of Cinneroth.

Here the part of the halfe Tribe of Manaſſeh is deſcribed, From Mahana- V. 29.
im all Baſhan, all the Kingdome of Og, and all the Townes of Jair, &c. Of this V.30.
Kingdom, ſee *Deut.*3.13,14,15 and how it was given to half Manaſſeh, and of the Towns of Jair, *Num.*32.40. Whereas, *v.*31. it is ſaid, to the children of Machir V. 31.
the ſon of Manaſſeh, even to the one half of them; it is to be underſtood, that the children of Machir alone made all the Tribe of Manaſſeh; for he had none other ſonne; ſee *Numb.*26.29. ſo Bonfrerius. But who ſo ſhall ſee into 1 *Chron.*7.14. Bonfrerius.
may thinke that there were more ſonnes of Manaſſeh, and Deut. 3. 15. Numb.
32.40. Gilead onely is given to Machir, and therefore that there were other families of Manaſſeh to poſſeſſe the reſt of Ogs Kingdome, viz. Baſhan and Argob. But here Gilead, Aſhteroth and Edrei are ſaid to bee given to the children of Machir, to half of them, becauſe many Families came of him, a part of which received poſſeſſions on this ſide Jordan, ſee Joſh. 17. 1. but there it is commemorated, that Machir had Gilead and Baſhan given him, and therefore not Gilead alone, as it might ſeem by the places before cited. To conclude then, if Machirs children, yea, halfe of them, had all the kingdome of Og, and yet a lot remained to be received by them on this ſide Jordan, either they were all that came of Manaſſeh, or ſo many, that the reſt in compariſon of them were very few. And if they were all, theſe other ſonnes ſaid to be of Ma-naſſeh, Joſh. 17. 2. and 1 Chron. 7. 14 were not his immediate ſonnes, but Grandchildren by Machir. And indeed Joſhua ſaith, that they came of Gile- V.33.
ad, Machirs ſon, for the names differ not from Numb. 26. 31. but onely for Jeezer, Joſhua hath Abiezer. Here it is remembred againe, that to Levi, Moſes gave none inheritance, but a new reaſon is added, for the Lord was their inheritance, yet more abundantly to ſatisfie them, as was ſaid, *Numb.*18.

Myſtically, Joſhuah dividing inheritances to the children of Iſrael, figured The Myſterie.
out Jeſus, who diſtributeth gifts to his faithfull people, both which now they Ferus.
poſſeſſe, and which yet they attaine not unto, but ſhall afterwards inherit in Heaven, gifts of grace here, and of glory hereafter. Secondly, as thoſe Lands yet untaken, were not to bee poſſeſſed, but upon condition of perſevering in obedience; ſo hee onely that endureth to the end ſhall bee ſaved. Thirdly, as Joſhua tooke not this honour to himſelfe, but being called to it; ſo Jeſus.
Fourthly, as all the Tribes had not inheritances in Canaan, but ſome being taken with the love of Baſhan and Jaazer, on the other ſide of Jordan; ſo all Chriſtian people have not inheritances in the heavenly Canaan, for they that love the world, have their portion onely in this life. Fifthly, as ſome had greater parts then others, for Judahs portion exceeded any of the other Tribes;
ſo in heaven there be divers degrees of glory.

CHAP. XIV.

HEre Joſhua proceedeth to declare, how the Land of Canaan was divided to the 9 Tribes and halfe, ſaying, Theſe are the Countreys which the children V. 1.
of Iſrael inherited in the Land of Canaan, &c. but by and by ſpeaking ſomething that was neceſſary for preparation to this diviſion, as who were the dividers, and how there could be 9 Tribes and an halfe, when as two and an halfe had received their parts on the other ſide Iordan, and there were but 12 in all, and the Tribe of Levi had no part; viz. by ſaying, that the children of Ioſeph were two Tribes, Manaſſeh and Ephraim, *v.*14. After this hee interrupteth the courſe of his Hiſtory, till the 15 Chap. by telling of Caleb, how he came in for Hebron, and then proſecuteth this Hiſtory of the Diviſion againe, Ch. 15. The firſt words then, Theſe are the Countreys, &c. are to be underſtood of the Coun-treys, the Diviſion whereof followeth, Ch. 15. and all that followeth in this Chapter, as comming in by a Parentheſis. Wherefore Bonfrerius is in an er- Bonfrerius.
rour, in taking them to be ſpoken of the Countreys divided to the two Tribes and an halfe, *Ch.*13. as an Epilogue of all that is ſaid there. And Lyra and Calvin are rather to be followed, who referre them to the Diviſion following, as I have here done. Whereas Eleazar the High Prieſt is joyned with Joſhua, and the Princes in dividing the Land, this was done, as God had appointed, *Numb.*34.37. and as here, ſo there Eleazar is named before Joſhua. Touching the reaſon rendred, *v.*4. why the tribe of Levi had no part; For the ſonnes of Joſeph were two Tribes; the Vulgar Latine hath, in eorum locum ſucceſſerunt filii Maſius. Joſeph in duas tribus diviſi, and is therefore excepted againſt by Maſius; but the meaning is nothing elſe but that theſe two Tribes comming of Joſeph, made up the number of 12, although Levi were left out in the partition, and amongſt 12 and no more, all muſt be divided, therefore Levi could have no part, ſeeing Lyra. Manaſſeh and Ephraim, the two ſonnes of Joſeph were expreſly conſtituted two Calvin. Tribes by Jacob, Gen. 48. ſo Lyranus. Calvin moveth a queſtion touching the men appointed to divide the Land, ſeeing the diviſion was to bee made by lot, how they could be ſaid to divide it? and anſwereth, that when the lot had aſſigned the Countrey to each Tribe, where it ſhould be, theſe men were to conſider the number of people in the Tribe, if the part falling to any were too little, to inlarge it, if too great, to take ſome away, and to give it to another that wanted, ſee *Numb.*26.52.

V.6. Then came the children of Judah to Joſhua in Gilgal; and Caleb the ſonne of Jephunneh the Kenezite ſaid to him, Thou knoweſt the thing that the Lord ſaid to Moſes, &c. Here, before the diviſion amongſt the Tribes made by lot, Joſhua breaketh off the courſe of that Hiſtory a while, and telleth firſt of Calebs comming, and the men of Judah in his behalfe, to require Hebron, as Moſes had long agoe promiſed unto him. This promiſe is not any where ſo particularly ſet forth, but *Numb.*14.24. it is ſaid by the Lord in generall, Him will I bring into the Land Lyra. whereinto hee went, and his ſeed ſhall poſſeſſe it: and *Deut.*1.36. Lyra following the Hebrews, that are ready to vent their owne imaginations, ſaith, that Caleb being in Canaan with the other ſearchers, perceived that they would diſſwade the people from attempting the conqueſt of that Land, went alone into Hebron, and prayed that God would ſtrengthen his heart, that he might not conſent with them in that wickedneſſe, wherefore at his returne, hee conſtantly cleaving to the Lord, Moſes ſware unto him that it ſhould bee his inheritance. But it is more probable, that Hebron being a place of note for the Gyants inhabiting there, by the ſight of whom the other ſearchers were terrified, but Caleb truſting in God, doubted not but to prevaile againſt them; Moſes hereupon ſware to him in private, no more being preſent to heare it but Joſhua, that hee ſhould have it for a poſſeſſion: and therefore he ſaith to Joſhua, Thou knoweſt what the Lord ſaid to Moſes concerning me and thee in Kadeſh barnea. And v. 9. Moſes ſware on that day, Surely the Land whereon thy feet have troden ſhall be thine inheritance and thy childrens for ever; expreſſing doubtleſſe this Hebron to be the land Gen. 23.19. in particular, being famous for the buriall of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob there. And now Caleb and the men of Judah come with him to deſire the performance Ferus. of this promiſe, not out of ambition, as Ferus noteth, but that the truth of God in his promiſes might the more notably appeare, that others might bee incouraged conſtantly to follow the Lord, as Caleb had done. For two things he declareth here, had been promiſed unto him; the one, that hee ſhould live, and come into the promiſed Land, all others from 20 yeares old and upward being cut off before that time for their rebellion; the other, that he ſhould have Hebron for an inheritance. The firſt, he ſheweth, was abundantly performed, for he did not onely live, but being now 85 yeares old, was as able to goe to Warre as at 40, which availed not a little to Gods glory. The other he now deſireth to have performed unto him, that God might appeare to bee true in every thing. And to ſhew his ability ſtill for the Warre, and that hee had yet the ſame confidence in God to overcome the mightieſt Gyants, he ſaith, v. 12. Thou heardeſt in that day, that the ſonnes of Anak were there: if ſo bee the Lord will bee with me, then I ſhall bee able to drive them out. And this hee is ſhewed to have done, *Ch.*15.14. for although the Anakims that held it before, were cut off by Joſhua, *Ch.*11.21. yet others remained in the mountaines hitherto unexpelled, or came thither againe out of the Philiſtims Countrey, wherein onely it is ſaid that that ſome of them were, *Ch.*11.22. Touching the name of Caleb, the ſonne of Iephunneh the Kenezite: Iephone, ſaith Lyra, ſome expound divertens, holding it to bee an Appellative, and not a proper name; and that hee was ſo called, becauſe hee turned himſelfe from the evill counſell of the other ſearchers; ſome prudent, and ſeeing, from פנה; but Jephunneh certainly was the proper name of Calebs father, 1 *Chron.*4.15. Indeed hee is not mentioned, 1 *Chron.*2.9. where Chelubai, which probably was this Caleb, is numbred amongſt the immediate ſonnes of Hezron, the ſonne of Pharez, the ſonne of Judah. But Caleb by the very name uſed, is mentioned both *v.*18. and *v.*42. here he is ſaid to be the brother of Jerhameel, who is ſaid to bee the firſt borne of Ezron, *v.*25. and this Chaleb is ſaid to have had a daughter called Achſah, v. 49. of which daughter of this Caleb in queſtion, ſee Joſh. 15.16. Of Caleb the ſonne of Jephunneh yet we read not, till 1 *Chron.*4.15. which maketh it queſtionable, whether there were not more Calebs; and touching this man, the ſonne of Jephunneh, whether hee came of Hezron, or no; although Lyra ſaith, that it is conſtantly to be held that he came of Hezron, who had alſo another name, Jephunneh. But becauſe Calebs age doth not agree, this muſt be left as uncertain, yet not ſo much for that, as for the name Jephunneh, becauſe Pharez being very young when they came into Egypt, might beget Hezron 80 yeares after, and he at 80 might beget Caleb, unto which Calebs age of 40 at the going out of Egypt being added all together, make 200 yeares. Moreover, why Caleb is called the Kenezite, is a great queſtion, but Lyra alſo reſolveth it, according to the Hebrews, thus; Jephunneh being dead, the mother of Caleb, his widow, maried with Kenez, from whom, becauſe he brought him up, he was thus called. Some thinke that Kenez was the father of Jephunneh, and ſo one brother of his was properly thus called, *Joſh.*15.17. Some that he was ſo called from ſome exploit that he did. But nothing can herein be ſaid certainly.

Calvin.

Bonfrerius.
Calvin.

V.13.

And Joſhua bleſſed Caleb, and gave him Hebron, &c. Hee bleſſed, both by publiſhing his deſerved praiſes; and as a man of God, praying for his good ſucceſſe in attempting to take this place againe, and to expell the Anakims thence. But becauſe Hebron was one of the Cities given to the Levites, *Joſh.*21.11,13. it may be demanded, how Caleb had it to him and his for a poſſeſſion? They had onely the houſes to inhabit in, and the Suburbs, but hee all the lands about; his goodneſſe in this appearing, that when he had obtained it, as a ſingular reward of his faith and proweſſe, yet he was content to give part back againe to the Prieſts, and to be a City of refuge, *Ch.*20.7.

Qu.

Joſh. 21. 12.

V.15.

And the name of Hebron before was Kiriath-arba, who was a great man amongſt the Anakims. Kiriath-arba, ſignifieth the City of Arba, the father of Anak, *Ch.*15.13. The Vulgar Latine for theſe words, who was a great man, hath Adam maximus inter Anakim ibi ſitus eſt. Whereupon many have held it to be called Kiriath-arbah, for the buriall of foure there, Adam, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob; but this is a moſt erroneous reading, as the Jeſuites themſelves acknowledg; but of this conceit ſee more, *Gen.*23.2. And the Land reſted from Warre: this is repeated againe, from Ch.11.23. to ſhew, that they might now freely goe about this diviſion of the land, becauſe the enemies were now quiet, and none durſt make head againſt them, to interrupt them herein.

The Myſterie.
Origen.

Myſtically, ſaith Origen, by Caleb, who had a poſſeſſion given him before all others, underſtand the heart, for Caleb ſignifieth, as the heart: and Jephunneh, whoſe ſonne he is ſaid to be, converting himſelf, the heart then turned from evill to good, ſhall ſurely have a poſſeſſion in the heavenly Canaan, and bee bleſſed.

CHAP. XV.

Gen. 49.

HEre is ſhewed, that by a ſingular providence of God, the lot came firſt up for Judah, and that in a moſt eminent and fruitfull place, and very large, that the propheſie of Jacob touching Judah his preference might appeare to come from God, this his prelation in his part, being a preludium of his future eminency in the Kingdom.

Amongſt all the Tribes, Judah hath his part in the Land of Canaan firſt, Lyra. ſaith Lyra, becauſe that was the Kingly Tribe, and Joſeph next, Ch. 16. becauſe he came into the place of the firſtborne Reuben, who was diſ-inherited, Gen.
49. Touching Judah, his part is deſcribed by the 4 ſides, the ſouth, the eaſt, V. 1. the north, and the weſt. For the firſt, it is ſaid, The wilderneſſe of Zin, was his uttermoſt part ſouthward; to ſhew, that his lot lay moſt ſoutherly of all the land of Canaan, ſee Numb. 34. 3. and this was neareſt to Egypt where this tribe was V. 2. placed, as being moſt warlike to reſiſt the Enemy. And the South border was from the ſhoare of the ſalt Sea, &c. This was the dead Sea, lying in a corner, where the South and the Eaſt part met, and hence they began to meaſure to the weſt, all the coaſts by which they went along, being ſaid to be ſouthward. For the ſecond
V. 5. ſide, viz. the eaſt, The Eaſt border was the ſalt Sea, even to the end of Jordan, &c.
that is, where Jordan entreth into the ſalt, or dead Sea: and here it is to bee conceived, that the line of meaſuring went northward, this being a deſcription of all the eaſt ſide, even to the north. For the third, viz. the north ſide, v. 7.
V. 7. And the border went up toward Debir, and from the valley of Achor, and ſo northward, &c. and the goings out thereof were at Enrogel. This En, or fountaine of 2 King. 18. 17. Rogell, was neare Jeruſalem, 2 Kings 18. being a fountaine, or water where Fullers waſhed their cloaths, from whence it had this name Enrogel, the Fullers pool, or well; ſo the Hebrews.

V. 8. And the border went up by the valley of the ſon of Hinnom, unto the ſouthſide of the Jebuſite, the ſame is Jeruſalem. In this part on the north, the lot of Judah was divided from the lot of Benjamin, for it came home to Jeruſalem, but Jeruſalem it ſelfe fell to the lot of Benjamin, where the Temple was afterwards built, but by it went up the northſide of Judah from eaſt to weſt.

V. 12. And the Weſt border was to the great Sea, &c. This was the Mediterranean Sea, where the weſt ſide, and the north met, and this was the utmoſt part of the Land of Canaan weſtward; ſo that the whole length of that Land, from the V. 13, 14. ſouth to the weſt, fell to Judah. Here againe the gift of Hebron to Caleb is repeated, being ſhewed to lye within the lot of Iudah; and hee is ſaid to have
V. 16, 17. expelled the three ſonnes of Anak thence. But this is not to bee conceived now to have been done; for both this, and that of Othniel taking Kiriath-ſepher, &c. were done after the death of Joſhua, Iudg. 1. 9. and therefore they are here put downe by anticipation, as Expoſitors generally agree, being inſerted by ſome other man; that Calebs faith in God to drive out the Anakims, and to take this place, might ſoon appeare to the Reader not to have been vaine, and hee might not be left to ſeek farre off for the fulfilling of the thing given and hoped for, as touching the actuall enjoying thereof, Ch. 14. But there it is ſaid, that the tribe of Iudah went up againſt Hebron, and ſlew the 3 ſonnes of Anak, this being aſcribed here to Caleb, with whom they went, as the chief in that expedition.

V. 21. Here the Cities of Iudah lying ſouth, and ſo about Hebron the poſſeſſion of V. 32. Caleb, are firſt reckoned up by name, and then are ſummed up, v. 32. twenty and nine; but if wee count them one by one, we ſhall finde 37, the reaſon of Rabbini. this difference yeelded by the Rabbins, is, becauſe eight of them were againe taken away and given to the Simeonites, as may bee ſeen, Ch. 19. and ſo 29 onely Maſius. remained to Iudah. Maſius and Serrarius thinke, that the walled Cities onely Serrarius. are put in to the ſumme; but together with them Villages alſo are reckoned, when they are counted one by one. But this laſt ſeemeth not to bee ſo probable, becauſe Villages are ſpoken of, as pertaining to theſe Cities.

V. 33. The ſecond numeration of their Cities here followeth in the valleys, about which alſo the ſumme differeth from the number mentioned, for they are 15; but are ſummed up 14, v. 36. this, ſaith Lyra, was, becauſe one was called by Lyra. two names, Tappuah and Enam, v. 34. The third numeration of 16 Cities, and the fourth of 9 Cities, v. 44. and the fifth of 11 Cities, v. 51. and the ſixth of 9 Cities, v. 54. and the ſeventh of 10 Cities, v. 57. and the eighth of 6 Cities,
v. 59.

v.59. and the ninth of 2 Cities, v.60. and the tenth of 6 Cities, v.62. doe all agree. But out of theſe were ſubtracted to the Danites, Eſhtaol and Garea in the ſecond numeration, and to the Simeonites, Ether, and Aſan in the third, Ch.19. So that the whole number reckoned up, beſides thoſe deducted, was of 118 Cities with their Villages, and yet theſe were not all, for Ekron, Aſhdod, and Gaza of the Philiſtims, *v.*45,46. under which the other two Lordſhips alſo are to bee underſtood, are not ſummed up, becauſe in the enemies hands. But Ekron was given afterwards to the Danites; and as Ioſephus hath it, Gath and Azotus, Aſcalon and Gaza onely remaining to Iudah. Moreover, Ch.21.14,15,16. Eſtemo, Holon, and Bethſhemeſh given to Levites are omitted here; and Bethlehem ſaid to be of Iudah, *Iudg.*19.1. and unto it, upon *v.*59. ten Cities more are added in the Septuagint Tranſlation, Theco, Phagor, Etham, Culon, Tamai, Soris, Carim, Gallim, Bather and Manocho, all which are here left out, which Ierome conjectureth to have been done through the malice of the Jewes, razing them out of the Hebrew, that it might not appeare, that Ieſus came of the Tribe of Iudah.

Ch. 19. Joſephus.

Hieron. in Mich. 5.

V.39. Touching Lachiſh, *v.*39. Lyra noteth noteth, that it was a diverſe City from Lachiſh taken by the Danites, *Iudg.*18. for this ſtood ſouthward, that north, and differed in the name being called Laiſh.

V.49. Touching Kiriath-Sannath, which is Debir: this was the City before called Kiriath-ſepher, that is, Civitas literarum, and Debir, verbum vel eloquentia. Kiriath-Sannath, civitas acuminis, becauſe שנן ſignifieth acuere, to ſharpen, and in the Syriack tongue שנן docte, vel acute dicere. It is thought to have had this name, becauſe it was an Academy of the Canaanites, wherein were Schooles of Learning.

V.62. Touching the City of Salt, v.62. it was neare the Sea, moſt probably having the name from Salt made there, and not the ſame with Bethſhemeſh, civitas ſolis, as ſome have thought.

V.63. As for the Iebuſites, the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, the children of Judah could not drive them out, &c. Jeruſalem is called alſo Jebus, Judg. 19.10. from whence, ſaith Lyra, the Iebuſites had their name, being of the poſterity of Abimelech King of Gerar, with whom Abraham had made a Covenant, Gen. 21. the time of which was not yet expired. Wherefore they held their one Fort ſtill, even till Davids time, who expelled them, but by reaſon of that Covenant, they could not yet be expelled. Calvin aſcribeth the not expelling of the Iebuſites, to the ſloath of the Iſraelites, although Jeruſalem was the moſt holy place of all the Land, and the moſt excellent, that ſanctified all the reſt, and was the glory of all, yet they through their owne negligence, and love of eaſe, forbeare to fight with the Iebuſites, in the ſtrong Fort of Zion therein: ſo that this is ſpoken to their reproach, they could not expell them, becauſe they laboured not to doe it, being content with ſome part of the City, and leaving the reſt to the Enemy: for which cauſe it is ſaid, That the Jebuſites dwelt in this city with the children of Judah to this day; that is, the men of Iudah in one part, and they in another. For there being nothing yet to hinder Gods favour and help from them, if they had attempted the expulſion of theſe Iebuſites, they ſhould certainly have effected it. But I can ſee no reaſon why the not poſſeſſing yet of all parts of Ieruſalem, ſhould be aſcribed to the negligence of Iudah, for then ſome ſuch thing ſhould have been intimated, and it would not have been ſaid, they could not expell them. The Fort of Zion, which they held was high, and moſt ſtrong by nature, and unacceſſible; and therefore it is rather to be held, that God would not yet help them in the expelling of it, reſerving that ſo difficult a worke to another Worthy, even David, whom hee would raiſe up afterwards, and make famous by this exploit, permitting the Iebuſites to live here ſtill, as other of the Iſraelites enemies in other places for their tryall, as is ſaid, *Iudg.*3.1,6. eſpecially, ſeeing they had for the preſent houſes and land enough to dwell comfortably in, till they ſhould bee more multiplyed. For that of Lyra, aſcribing the Iebuſites dwelling here ſtill, to an old Covenant made by Abraham, as hee hath it from the Rabbins, ſo it may well be ſuſpected as a tale

Lyra.

2 Sam.5.7.

Calvin.

of their owne coyning: for how may it appeare that they came of Abimelech, ſith the Jebuſites are commonly reckoned as one of the ſeven Peoples deſtined to deſtruction? and if they were included in the Covenant, and this Covenant w as not yet expired, how ſhal we know that it expired ſo ſoon as David was King? Iudg. 1. 21. and that which is ſaid here of the children of Iudah, is ſaid of the Benjamites, but before that, *v.*8. The children of Judah had fought againſt Jeruſalem, and taken it, and ſmitten it with the edge of the ſword, and ſet the Qu. City on fire. If it be here demanded, how could the men of Iudah dwell here, and the Benjamites alſo? Anſw. The ſouth part of the City was within the lot of Iudah, but the north part belonged to Benjamin, and herein the Temple Qu. ſtood, and it was the farre greater part, ſee Ch. 18. 28. If it bee further demanded, how it it ſaid here, the children of Iudah could not expell the Iebuſites out of Ieruſalem, when as Iudg. 1. 8. it is ſaid, they had taken the City, &c.
Anſw. In part they had taken it, and deſtroyed the inhabitants, but in part Ioſeph lib. 5. Antiq c. 2. they had not, viz. in that part, where the Fort of Zion ſtood. And this taking of it, ſaith Joſephus, was after the death of Joſhua. But happily being taken as Hebron and Debir in Joſhua his time, the enemies re-poſſeſſed it againe, and were afterwards againe deſtroyed.

The Myſterie. Origen. Myſtically, by the Iebuſite dwelling ſtill in Ieruſalem, ſaith Origen, underſtand the wicked in the Church; for the Tares cannot be ſeparated from the Wheat til the laſt day. The Iebuſite ſignifieth one treading under foot, they then, that with dogs and ſwine tread holy things under their feet, be the Iebuſites in the Church, to expell whom, we muſt endeavour more and more unto the end.

CHAP. XVI.

V. 1, 2, 3. 4. HEre is deſcribed the lot of the children of Ioſeph: firſt, in generall, and then Ephraims part in particular. Their eaſt limit was Iordan, and their weſt Bethoron and Gezer, to the Mediterranean Sea. Whereas it is ſaid, v. 2. And goeth out from Bethel to Luz; it may be demanded how this could be, ſeeing the ſame City which was Bethel, was before called Luz, Ch. 18. 13. Anſw. Bethel where Iacob lodged, Gen. 28. was neare unto the City of Luz, and was built after it, and then both being joyned together, had the name of Bethel; the going out then from one to the other, was from one part of the City to the other, V. 5. distinguiſhed by theſe two names. Touching the part of Ephraim in particular, the border thereof was Ataroth-Addar, unto Bethoron the upper, eaſtward, &c.
V. 9. And the ſeparate Cities of the children of Ephraim, were amongſt the inheritance of the children of Manaſſeh, &c. that is, as Lyra hath it, the line of the diviſion Lyra. reaching ſometimes into the lot of Manaſſeh, and fetching a compaſſe to include here a City, and there a City, lying within Manaſſehs lot, if the line of V. 10. his lot be carryed ſtraight from eaſt to weſt, ſee Chap. 17. 8, 9, 10. Laſtly, it is noted, that they drave not out the Canaanites in Gezer, one of their bordering Cities, but they ſerved them under Tribute, which is generally held to have been a blemiſh to Ephraim, in that they would bee compounded withall for gaine, and not deſtroy all who were appointed to the ſword, when as the Lord had given ſo ſtrait a charge to make no Covenant with them, but utterly to root them out. The ſame fault is noted to have been in the children of Origen. Manaſſeh, Ch. 17. 13. This is by Origen Allegorically applyed thus; the Canaan ſetteth forth the Fleſh, the Iſraelite the Spirit, which when it commeth to bee ſtrong, bringeth the Fleſh under, but cannot utterly expell it in this life.

CHAP. XVII.

HEre is ſet forth the part of the halfe Tribe of Manaſſeh, in which, although it were leſſe, more is written: 1. Becauſe the lot of the other halfe on the other ſide of Jordan is again re-counted. 2 The families comming of Manaſſeh, V. 2.

which had poſſeſſions on this ſide Jordan are numbred, firſt the males who were ſix; then the females, the daughters of Zelophehad, who had no ſons, V. 3.
and they were five. 3. Their requeſt, according to the order made by Moſes, V. 4, 5, 6.
is recited from Numb. 27. 4. Their lot is deſcribed, v. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. V. 7, 8. together with the Lands of Ephraim, where they lay within it. 5. Both theſe Tribes doe jointly complaine that their lot was too little for them, and Joſhua V. 14, 15.
alloweth them to take in the woods of the Canaanites and Perizzites, and to cut them downe, adding words of incouragement againſt the feare of the Enemies power. For the firſt of theſe, Manaſſeh is ſaid to be the firſt born of Joſeph, V. 1.
to intimate the reaſon why he being none of the ſons of Jacob, yet had the lot of a Tribe, as alſo Ephraim his other ſon, for Jacob had made both theſe Gen. 48.
as his owne ſons, two Tribes, as was touched before, Ch. 14. 4. And although Ephraim was by Jacob preferred before Manaſſeh, the younger before the elder; yet becauſe Manaſſeh was the firſt borne, he had an inheritance in part firſt on the other ſide Jordan. Moreover, it is added, For Machir the firſt borne of Manaſſeh, but Ch. 13. 31. he is mentioned as the onely ſonne of Manaſſeh, and halfe his children are put for the halfe Tribe of Manaſſeh, of which ſee upon that place. And Machir is called the father of Gilead, whoſe children onely are recited, v. 2. as the children of Manaſſeh; whereby it ſeemeth, that as Manaſſeh had onely Machir to his ſonne, that had iſſue living till now, ſo Machir had onely Gilead. Touching Jair ſaid to be the ſon of Manaſſeh, Numb. 32. 41. it is to be underſtood, that he came of a daughter of Machir by Ezrom, of the tribe of Judah, 1 Chron. 2 21. and thus onely hee is called his ſon, as all that come of a mans children, are called his children.

But it is added, Becauſe Machir was a man of Warre, therefore hee had Gilead Qu.
and Baſhan. In what Warre could he ſhew his valour, ſeeing hee muſt needs bee dead long before that the children of Iſrael came to make any Warres?
Anſw. It is moſt probable, that he fought manfully againſt the men of Gath, who are ſaid to have come downe to take away their cattell whilſt they lived in Egypt, 1 Chron. 7. 21. and for that he had this commendation. Or by Machir we may underſtand the Machirites comming of him, who had done worthy ſervice in the Warres on the other ſide of Jordan: for thus Machir is ſpoken of, Numb. 32. 40. when the Machirites are meant. Touching Gilead, the ſonne of Machir, although all the other families reckoned up, v. 2. came of him; yet thoſe on the other ſide of Iordan were peculiarly called Gileadites, becauſe they inhabited Gilead, and were the children of Gilead alſo; wherein the Divine providence is to be noted, as directing it ſo, that Gilead ſhould have the land of Gilead.

Touching the ſecond and third, enough hath been ſaid already, upon Numb.
26. 30, 31. and Numb. 27. onely, v. 5. becauſe it is ſaid, there fell ten portions V. 5.
to the ſonnes of Manaſſeh: it may bee demanded how this could bee, ſeeing Qu.
they were but ſix families? Anſw. They had but ſix greater portions onely, for each family one: but of that part which fell to the family of Hepher, whoſe ſon Zelophehad, had no ſons, but five daughters, five leſſer parts being made, they were all together ten. If it be ſaid, thus by ſubdiviſions in other families alſo theſe portions were not ten onely, but twenty or thirty. It is anſwered, the Princes that were over the diviſions, made not ſubdiviſions for others, but onely for theſe women who were not ſo able to manage ſuch a buſineſſe, others, that came of other families, who were men, being left to agree amongſt themſelves in their ſubdiviſions, becauſe God had ſet downe a ſpeciall order for thoſe women in the time of Moſes. And therefore theſe portions, although but parts of a portion, are numbred here together with the whole portions, ſet out by Joſhua, Eleazar, &c. and not any other afterwards divided by others.

And the reſt of Manaſſehs ſonnes had the Land of Gilead: that is, on the other V. 6.
ſide of Jordan. For the fourth, viz. the deſcription of the lot of this halfe tribe of Manaſſeh. Firſt, it is ſhewed, how it went on the right hand, V. 7, 8.

that is, ſouth to Entappuah, that is, the fountaine of Tappuah, but the City of Tappuah went to Ephraim, being taken out of the lot of Iudah, as was noted upon Ch.14.34. But before this, it is ſaid, the coaſt of Manaſſeh was from Aſher to Michmetha, where by Aſher the tribe is not to be underſtood, but a City Bonfrerius. ſo called, as Bonfrerius ſaith: but becauſe, v.10. Manaſſeh and Ephraim are ſaid to meet together in Aſher on the north, and in Iſſachar on the eaſt; it is rather to bee held, that by Aſher here the tribe is meant, for the meaſure proceeded to the ſouth, and therefore began at the north, towards the lot of Aſher.
Yet Aſher is put downe here by anticipation, becauſe he had no lot, till afterwards in Shiloh, Ch.19. Next the River dividing Manaſſeh from the Cities of
V. 6. Ephraim, is ſpoken of, the River Kana, on the ſouth of which lay the ſeparate Cities of Ephraim before ſpoken of, Ch.16. and Manaſſeh on the north, both being bounded by the Sea and by Aſher and Iſſachar, north and eaſt. Laſtly, it is
V. 11. ſhewed that Manaſſeh had Cities within the lot of both thoſe Tribes, Bethſhean, Ibleam, Dor, Endor, Taanach, and Megiddo, that is, being contiguous to both Lyra. theſe Tribes, his lot extended in divers places into them, ſo Lyra. Whereas in concluding, it is added, after this capitulation of ſix Cities, even three Countreys, the Vulgar Latine hath, and the third part of the City Nopheth: ſo alſo the Sept.
and Hebr. it is שלשת-הנפת being rendred verbatim, the third of a Province: and it ſeemeth to me, that the meaning is, theſe ſix Cities were the third part of a Countrey, and not three Countreys; nor, that Manaſſeh had beſides them the third part of another City or Countrey, becauſe in the Hebr. it is not, and the third part, but the third, &c. Theſe words being added for further explication, how much the foreſaid Cities and their Villages amounted to, being conſidered together. And it agreeth not, when ſix Cities have been mentioned, to adde, even three Countreys, for why ſhould the three laſt be ſummed up more then the former?

V. 14, 15. Touching the fifth, the children of Joſeph complaine that their lot was too little for them, ſaying to Joſhua, That hee had given them but one part, and yet they were ſo increaſed by Gods bleſſing, that one would not ſuffice them.
The meaning is, that they had too ſmall a part, conſidering their multitude, for even the halfe Tribe of Manaſſeh alone, is ſaid to have ten parts, v.5. And this part containing many more by ſubdiviſions; it is not meant, was too little for quantity of ground, but becauſe much of it was Woody, and held by the Canaanites. Wherefore Ioſhua biddeth them, according to the power that they had through their multitude, to take courage to them, and to cut downe the Woods, and to expell the Canaanites, Perizzites, &c. and ſo to inlarge their habitations, not meaning yet, that they ſhould cleare the ground, and take in poſſeſſion any more then that allotted unto them. Some think that there is Bonfrerius. an Allegory in the word Woods, the Canaanites, Perizzites, and Gyants poſſeſſing thoſe parts, being meant hereby, who as woods overgrowne, made them horrid and unhabitable for them: and that by cutting downe, is meant the cutting of them off by little: But I ſee no reaſon to goe from the literall ſenſe. He addeth, If mount Ephraim be too little for thee: that is, the Countrey aſſigned now to Ephraim, and already poſſeſſed, which was full of mountaines; whereby it ſhould ſeeme, that the tribe of Ephraim was the chiefe in this complaint:
but both tribes are ſpoken of, as comming together, and complaining of a wrong, as if they had been unjuſtly dealt withall; ſaying, that they had but Calvin. one part, that is, as Calvin hath it, the lot but of one Tribe, when as they were one and an halfe. But this complaint was unjuſt; for although their parts lay together, yet by the deſcriptions going before it appeareth, that they had two, onely they made account, that the Land yet poſſeſſed by the enemy was nothing to them; whereas in the dividing of it to them, it was meant, that they ſhould by military prowesse ſubdue the enemies, and take in that alſo, as others of their brethren did. Wherefore Joſhua ſhapeth them an anſwer accordingly, to ſtir them up from this ſloath and puſillanimity, taking advantage of their own words, that they were much people.

V. 16. They reply, that mount Ephraim was not ſufficient, and that the Canaanites dweldwelling in the valleys, had Chariots of iron, both in Bethſhean and Jezreel. Bethſhean was within the lot of Manaſſeh, v. 11. but Iezreel a valley inhabited by the Canaanites, in the lot of Iſſachar, Ch. 19. 18. and becauſe Bethſhean lay into Iſſachar; it may be conceived, that the valley of Iezreel was upon the border, and ſo neare at hand to oppoſe and fight againſt them, if they ſhould goe up to the woods, for theſe valleys lay about in their paſſage, and here were the iron Chariots which they ſo much feared. Theſe Chariots were thus called, becauſe they had ſharp irons fixed to them before, and on the ſides, upward and downward like ſpeares, and ſwords, and hookes; ſo that the horſes running with them, all that ſtood or lay in the way were cut in pieces and ſlaughtered hereby: Thus Q. Curtius and Livie and others deſcribe the iron Chariots of Antiochus and Darius, which they uſed in their Warres; and it is moſt probable, that theſe of the Canaanites were like unto them; ſo that one man driving ſuch a Chariot, could fight herewith, and deſtroy many. But againſt theſe Joſhua encourageth them, promiſing that they ſhould have power to drive them out, and poſſeſſe their mountaines, and the out goings thereof, that is, the plaine places in the way, notwithſtanding their power and preparations.

V. 17, 18.

CHAP. XVIII.

V. 1.
H. B. Patriarchs travailes.
Lyra.

Here firſt is recorded the ſetting up of the Tabernacle in Shiloh. Whereas hitherto it had remained in Gilgal, and ſo the Campe lay about it: this remove was 12 miles, and almoſt within 4 miles of Jeruſalem. Shiloh, ſay Lyra and others, was in the Tribe of Ephraim, of which tribe Joſhua was. But how this may be gathered, I cannot tell, ſeeing it is no where ſet downe in what tribe it ſtood. Onely upon Ch. 9. 3. it hath been already ſhewed to have beene the ſame with Gibeon, which was in the lot of Benjamin, v. 25. and a City given to the Levites, Ch. 21. 17. as it is ſaid of Shiloh. And if ſo, the Gibeonites that were to ſerve about the wood and water for the Tabernacle, might moſt conveniently performe this office. Touching the direction that Joſhua now had to remove the Tabernacle hither, although it bee not expreſſed, yet doubtleſſe hee did it not without direction from the Lord, becauſe this was a thing often ſpoken of, that it ſhould bee ſet in the place that the Lord ſhould chooſe. And here it ſtood till Samuels time, 1 Sam. 4. which was above 300 years: Lyra ſaith, till it was removed from thence to Nob. But we read no where of any ſuch remove, but onely that Nob was a City of Prieſts, and that David came to Abimelech the High Prieſt there. The onely thing that we read of the remove of the Arke from Shiloh, is, that it was carryed from thence againſt the Philiſtims, 1 Sam. 4. and there taken by the Philiſtims and carryed away, and afterwards ſent back againe to Bethſhemeſh, Ch. 6. and from thence to Kiriath-jearim, Ch. 7. to the houſe of Abinadab, where it remained 20 yeares, then David is ſaid to have fetcht it from the houſe of Abinadab in Gibeah, 2 Sam. 6. and Vzzah being ſmitten for touching it, hee durſt not carry it any further, but left it at the houſe of Obed-Edom three months, and then fetcht it into Zion. In all which removes, no mention is made of Nob; but Lyra upon 1 Sam. 7. ſaith, that from Bethſhemeſh the Arke was carryed to Kiriath-jearim, and not immediately thence to the houſe of Abinadab in Gibeah, but firſt to Mizpeh, then to Gilgal againe, after that to Nob, and from thence to the houſe of Abinadab, as hee gathereth out of the Hebraic. quæſtion. and all this not without ſome ground in the ſacred Hiſtory; for Kiriath-jearim was a City of the Gibeonites, and Samuel judged the people in Mizpeh, and in Gilgal the Kingdom was renued, 1 Sam. 11. 15. and in Nob was the High Prieſt and Ephod, and Shewbread, although no mention bee made of theſe removes. For the time when they removed the Tabernacle from Gilgal to Shiloh, here is nothing expreſly ſaid, but it is generally held to have been ſeven yeares after their comming into the land of Canaan, becauſe it is ſaid, The Land was ſubdued before them, which was not in leſſe time; but the Rabbins ſay, that it was done 14 yeares after their entrance, but this agree-

Lyra.

1 Sam. 21. & 22

greeth not with Calebs age, and the account made before hereby.

V. 2, 3. The Tabernacle being ſet up, Joſhua reproving the ſeven Tribes that had not yet received their parts for their ſlackneſſe in going about it, and to expell
the Canaanites, who yet, though ſubdued, lived there, where they ſhould inherit, exciteth them to ſend out men to deſcribe and part it, that hee might there before the Lord caſt lots for them. Whereby is intimated, that their remiſneſſe Calvin. and backwardneſſe in going not to take their lots, but to drive out the enemies was the cauſe of this delay, and that the diviſion begun in Gilgal went not forward, but was intermitted, till this comming to Shiloh, which ſome thinke was a yeare, but the Rabbins 7 yeares, although againſt all probability. By this ſending out of new meaſures, three of a Tribe, it may ſeeme, that ſome cauſe of their delay was, for that they did not think the former meaſurers to have ſufficiently done their office, wherefore others are ſent to view all things better, and to make a new deſcription of thoſe Lands where they ſhould have their parts; and the cauſe of this ſuſpition might be, for that in the lot of Judah already taken, there was ſo much land more then ſufficed, that the Simeonites had V. 4. divers Cities out of it, &c. Now then Joſhua alloweth them to chooſe three men out of each Tribe, and to ſend them to deſcribe it anew, that is, as is moſt probable, and the words ſound, out of the ſeven Tribes onely, being all together
V. 5, 6. in number 21. Theſe are appointed to divide the Land into ſeven parts, and to returne to Joſhua, that lots might be caſt for them; Judah, and the children of Joſeph, that had received their parts, the one ſouthward, and the other northward being confirmed therein. The Vulg. Latine, for theſe words, v.6. Ye ſhall deſcribe the Land into ſeven parts, hath it, the middle Land betwixt theſe yee ſhall divide into ſeven parts: as if the ſeven Tribes that were yet to receive their parts, ſhould all lye in the middle betwixt Judah, Ephraim, and Manaſſeh, whereas it is certaine, that a great part of that Land lay more north; therefore that tranſlation Bonfrerius. is corrupt, as the Jeſuite himſelf acknowledgeth, and that hee hath nothing to ſay in the defence thereof.

V. 7, 8. Here the reaſon is further expreſſed, why the diviſion ſhould bee made but into ſeven parts, viz. becauſe the Levites were to have no part; and as two Tribes and an halfe already ſpoken of had received their parts on this ſide Jordan, ſo two Tribes and an halfe had received theirs on the other ſide.

Whereas it is ſaid of the Levites, The Prieſthood of the Lord is their inheritance:
hereby is meant, that the profits belonging to the Prieſts and Levites were V. 11. theirs. *V.*11. The diviſions being made by thoſe that were ſent, and ſet down in a Book, now lots are caſt before the Tabernacle, and Benjamin hath the firſt between Judah and Joſeph. How long the meaſurers were in ſurveying, before their returne, is not recorded, but Ioſephus ſaith that they were ſeven moneths.
Ch. 16. 7, 8. The north border of Benjamin was the ſame with that of Ephraim, from Iordan eaſtward, to the Sea weſt. Here, beſide Luz or Bethel, v. 13. mention is made of Bethaven, a City neare unto it, by which name, for the idolatry ſet up V. 15. there afterwards by Ieroboam, Bethel was inveighed againſt, Hoſ. 4. 5, 10. Here the ſouth border followeth, which was the north of Iudah, of which ſee Ch. 15.
V. 21. And then the Cities of this lot are numbred, firſt twelve, then fourteen, ſo that it was very ſmall, whereupon it is ſometime called little Benjamin; although the quantity of ground was little, yet it was moſt fruitfull, and lay moſt ſafely; and this Tribe had the honour of the firſt lot amongſt ſeven, and of the holy City Ieruſalem, and Temple, and lay neare to his brother Joſeph. But neither were theſe all the Cities of Benjamin, for Chap. 21.18. mention is made of two more, Anathoth and Almon. The double numeration firſt of 12 Cities, then of 14, ſeemeth to be, becauſe the former lay eaſtward, and the latter weſt.

CHAP. XIX.

V. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. THE ſecond lot here is ſhewed to have been of the children of Simeon, and this was within the lot of Iudah, which had too much. Thus the propheſie of Iacob was verified, I will ſcatter them in Iacob and divide them in Iſrael. Calvin.

Wherefore it was not without a ſingular providence, that the firſt dividers Gen 49.7.
were ſuffered to erre ſo farre as to make the part of Judah ſo much more, then would ſuffice for them, and the deſire of doing according to equity, appeared in the Princes ſet over the diviſion, in that they ſo readily yeelded to correct this errour being manifeſted, and of the men of Judah, that they withſtood it not, having already the poſſeſſion, but readily yeelded a part to their Brethren, neceſſity requiring it, for ſo much as the Land remaining would not otherwiſe have ſufficed for the reſt of the Tribes. The Rabbins Rabbins.
ſay, that the men of Judah tooke it ill, that Simeon had ſo many of their Cities, and therefore in Davids time they were againe expelled, which they gather from 1 Chron. 4.31. where it is ſaid, they dwelt in theſe Cities, till Davids time. But it is not ſaid that then they were driven out, neither would it have ſtood with Davids piety herein to have gone againſt Gods decree.
Whereas their inheritance is ſaid to be within the inheritance of Judah, the vulgar Latine hath it in the midſt of the inheritance. But it was rather in their confines, for Beerſhebah here firſt named was furtheſt ſouth, for which cauſe when the length of the land is ſet forth by the extreme parts, it is commonly ſaid, from Dan to Beerſhebah. Beerſhebah and Shebah, which may ſeem to be two, V. 2.
are but one City, named by both theſe names, otherwiſe they were not 13 only, as they are ſummed v. 6. but 14. Wherefore 1 Chron. 4.28. when the Cities of the Simeonites are counted over again, Beerſhebah onely is named. Of theſe Cities of the Simeonites, there are two numerations. Firſt, of 13. to v. 6. Secondly, of foure, v. 7. Which are thus diſtinguiſhed from the other, becauſe thoſe V. 7.
had wals, but theſe not, as may be gathered from 1 Chron. 4. 32. where V. 8.
they are called עצרם villages. And all this lot is ſaid to have lyen ſouth. V. 10.
The third lot was of Zabulun, who came of the ſame Mother Leah, with Iſſachar, and was the yonger brother, yet here he is placed in his poſſeſſion before him. Of this Tribe Jacob had ſaid before, that hee ſhould dwell at the ha- Gen. 49.13.
ven of the Sea, and towards Sidon, and accordingly here it is ſaid, their border went up towards the Sea, v. 11. and reached to the river, which is before Jokneam.
Which is thought to be towards the border of the Sidonians, and the Rivers Maſius.
name is by Geographers, called Pagis or Belus, having ſand, of which glaſſe was made. But this lot could not goe cloſe up to the Sea, but neare it, becauſe part of Aſher lay betweene, but it is held to have extended to the Sea of Genneſareth. For the Cities of this Tribe, they are ſummed up 12, but it V. 15.
is hard to determine which they were, becauſe 16 or 17 are named, out of which the reſt muſt be caſt, as to which this lot reached onely, but included them not.

The fourth lot was of Iſſachar, whoſe Cities are ſaid to be 16, but no di- V. 17, 18.
ſcription of this lot is made by the quarters of the World, happily becauſe it lay betweene Zabulun and Manaſſeh. Iezreel the firſt City here named is by Adricomius placed in Manaſſeh, becauſe Ch. 17.16. it is mentioned in deſcribing Adricomius.
that lot, but as was there ſhewed, it is not ſpoken as lying therein, but onely very neare it. In Jezreel the Kings of Iſrael afterwards dwelt ſometime, 1 King. 21. 1. Although in Samaria was their chiefe ſeat. Thabor here aſcribed to Iſſachar, is ſaid to be in Zabulun, 1 Chron. 6.77. wherefore it ſeemeth to have been betweene them both; one Tribe holding one part, and another the other part. Bethſhemeſh is alſo aſcribed to Judah, Ch. 21.16. but it was another City of the ſame name. The Cities here named ſeemed not to be all, that fell to Iſſachar, for Dabereth, and Jaramoth are alſo aſcribed to Iſſachar Ch. 21.28. and Avem; 1 Chron. 6.73. But Jaramoth is ſuppoſed by ſome to be the ſame with Ramoth; and Avem-Engannim.

The fift lot was of Aſher, conſiſting of 22 Cities, this lot lay furtheſt north- V. 24.
ward of all others to the ſea; and ſouthward extended to Manaſſeh, as was touched, Ch. 17.10. It is deſcribed firſt by the weſt which way it reached to V. 26.
Carmel, and to Sihor-Libnah, this Carmel was a mountain by the Sea, and not the City Carmel before aſcribed to Judah of which mention is made

1 Sam. 25. 2. Nabal had poſſeſſions there. Sibor-Libnah, the Septuagint call Sibor & Labanah, and ſome contend that they were two Cities; becauſe Sibor ſignifieth black, and Libnah white. Many hold it to be one City, otherwiſe V. 27. called Ptolemais. Secondly, this lot is deſcribed by the eaſt, and turneth towards the Sun riſing to Bethdagon, that is, the houſe of Dagon, the idoll of the Philiſtims, which had the name from a fiſh; it had the face of a young man, but downward it was like a Fiſh. Thirdly, by the north, and reacheth to Zebulun, and to the valley of Jephtahel towards the north, &c. Of Jephtahel ſee before, v. 14.
Here alſo Chabul on the left hand ſetteth forth the north.

V. 28. Hamon here mentioned to Aſher is ſaid to belong to Nephtali, 1 Chron. 6. 76.
and Rahab, v. 75. but they were other Cities of the ſame name. Kana, was Kana the great in Aſher, for there was another Kana in Zebulun, called the leſſer, where Chriſt turned water into wine. For the number of 22 Cities, it is V. 30. to be thought that they were not all which Iſſachar had, for Abdon is alſo aſcribed to Iſſachar. Ch. 21.30.

V. 32, 33. The ſixth lot was of Nephtali, and here the meaſure beginneth againe eaſtward at Iordan, and then it proceedeth weſtward, and ſouthward. On the eaſt were five Cities, Heleph, Allon, Adami-Nekeb, Iabneel, and Lakum: So Maſius, Magallianus, and Adricomius. But Bonfrerius will have them to lye in the north, and to reach to Iordan on the eaſt; becauſe their goings out are ſaid to be at Iordan, and the north ſhould otherwiſe alone bee left undeſcribed. 2. It V. 34. proceedeth to the weſt and ſouth, Zebulun lying on the ſouth, and Aſher on the
V. 38. weſt, and Iudah. Their Cities were 19, but all the names in this deſcription are 23; but ſome either were no Cities, but other places of note, or elſe foure of them were but Villages.

V. 40. The ſeventh Lot was of Dan, deſcribed only by his Cities, wherof ſome are famous;
Judg. 18. 2 as, Zorah & Eſhtaol, where Samſon lived, and Timnathah, from whence Samſon
V. 41, 43. took a wiſe of the Philiſtims, & Ekron held by the Philiſtims being one of their five Lordſhips, which foure were within the lot of Judah, but taken out for the
V. 45. Danites. Gath-rimmon alſo, if hereby Gath be meant, as Maſius thinketh, was another Lordſhip of the Philiſtims. Laſtly, Iapho, ſince called Ioppe, is a Sea town of great note to this day, for here they arrive, that travaile from hence to the holy Land, ſo that this lot lay neare the Sea, and was much diſquieted by the Philiſtims, their neare neighbours, who held much of their Land from them.

V. 47. And the coaſt of the children of Dan went out too little for them; therefore they went to fight againſt Leſhem, &c. The words here are thus rendred in the Vulgar Latine, & ipſo fine concluditur, this being referred to Iapho before ſpoken of.
But Hebr. it is, The coaſt of the children of Dan went out from them; that Maſius. is, ſaith Maſius, they going out and conquering further then this their lot, as Vatablus. is immediately ſhewed. Vatablus, a part of the lot aſſigned to them was held from them; therefore they went out and fought againſt Leſhem. And this is rather to be approved.

Lyra. Leſhem, ſaith Lyra, according to the Hebrews, was the ſame with Laiſh, Judg.
18. where the taking of it, and the new naming of it Dan, is ſet forth, but here it is ſpoken of by anticipation, as that of Calebs taking Hebron before, Ch. 15.

V. 50. Joſhua, after all theſe diviſions ended, hath Timnath-Serah in mount Ephraim given to him, as he deſired; and this is ſaid to have been done according to the Word of the Lord. But it is no where expreſſed that the Lord made any ſuch order; onely whereas Caleb ſaid before, Chap. 15. Thou knoweſt what the Lord ſaid to Moſes concerning mee and thee in Kadeſh-barnea; it may be gathered, that as Hebron was appointed then to Caleb, ſo it was promiſed, that Joſhua for his conſtant cleaving to the Lord, ſhould chooſe him a poſſeſſion.

And herein the modeſty of Joſhua appeared, that hee diſtributed poſſeſſions to all the people, before that he demanded a poſſeſſion for himſelfe, when as hee was the Prince over all: wherein, he may be an example to other Princes and Rulers, to intend more the welfare of the people under them, then their owne private benefit; and he did notably typifie our Ieſus, who neglected himſelfe to inrich us with poſſeſſions in the Kingdome of Heaven. Timnath-Serah is alſo called Timnath-Cheres, Iudg.2.9. the firſt is by ſome rendred the image of ſuperfluity, by ſome, the image of corruption: The ſecond, the image of the Sunne; Ierome ſaith, that Paula admired, that Ioſhua, who diſtributed to all their poſſeſſions, choſe unto himſelfe ſo rough and mountainous a place; wherby it ſeemeth, that he was not led by covetouſneſſe in this his choice, but contented himſelfe to have a City in any place amongſt thoſe of his Tribe, and that not ready built, but in the ruines, for hee built a City here. This City was but ſix miles from Ieruſalem, and was not that Timnath before mentioned in Dan, as ſome have erroneouſly held, ſaying, that it was that Timnath from whence Samſon took a wife.

Hieron. Epitaph Paulæ.

H. B. Patriarchs travailes.

V. 51.

Here is the Epilogue of all the diviſions, which is added, the more to ratifie them, as being made by Eleazar and Ioſhua, &c. before the Lord in Shiloh, that there might never more bee any contention amongſt the Tribes about their bounds.

CHAP. XX.

V. 1, 2, 3, 4.

HEre Ioſhua is commanded to put in execution what was before ordained, Numb.35 and Deut.19. viz. to ſeparate three Cities of Refuge on this ſide Iordan; as three had been before ſeparated on the other ſide, which are named, Deut.4.41. Calvin gathereth from hence, becauſe Ioſhua was called upon by the Lord, and ſo ſtimulated to doe this, before hee did it, that there was a faulty remiſneſſe in him about ſo neceſſary a duty for the keeping of the land from the pollution of bloud. But I thinke rather, that Ioſhua who did all things at the word of the Lord, ſtayed onely till God ſhould appoint the time, and then hee did it with all readineſſe, which was rather to bee commended then taxed in him. Moreover, it is here againe briefly repeated, who ſhould have the benefit of fleeing to theſe Cities, and in what manner: all which hath been already more largely ſet forth and treated upon, Numb.35. and Deut.19. ſo that I ſhall not need to adde any more here, either for expoſition, or collections, morall or myſticall, becauſe the Reader may find theſe things abundantly performed there.

Calvin.

V. 7.

The three Cities appointed on this ſide Jordan, were, Kedeſh in Galilee in mount Naphtali, Sechem in mount Ephraim, and Kiriath-arba, that is Hebron, in Judah. The firſt in the north, and the laſt in the ſouth part of the Land, and the middle City between them both, that in what part ſoever blood ſhould be ſhed unawares, the manſlayer might have a City of Refuge not farre off to flee unto: thus graciouſly the Lord provided for the protection of the unwitting offender, although in the caſe of bloudſhed, which otherwiſe hee ſo much abhorred. Of Calebs goodneſſe in yeelding his Hebron to bee one, I have already ſpoken upon, Chap.18.6,7.

CHAP. XXI.

HEre the children of Levi come and require Cities to be given unto them, as the Lord had appointed by Moſes, and have 48 Cities with their Suburbs out of all the Tribes, as was appointed, Numb.35. ſix of which, were the Cities of Refuge before mentioned. So that the Levites had not Cities, as the other Tribes all together, but in every part of the Land, that there might bee ſome in every Tribe to teach the laws of God, and to judge righteouſly: and that it might not be thought, that the Worſhip of God, and the maintenance of his Miniſters pertained to one place onely, but to them all. For no Kingdom or County can proſper and ſtand, unleſſe the Worſhip of God be therein maintained.

Ferus.

Myſtically, by the diſperſing of theſe into all the Tribes, Jeſus his ſending out of his Apoſtles into all the world was ſet forth; ſo Ferus. In that 48 Cities with

Calvin. with their Suburbs were given to Levi alone, it appeareth that all the Cities of each tribe in the Catalogues before going were not mentioned, but many omitted, becauſe otherwiſe there had been no due proportion kept in taking out thus many for one ſmall tribe, ſeeing Zebulun had but 12 Cities, Iſſachar but 16, and Nephtali but 19. Thus Calvin, who alſo thinketh that no due order is obſerved in ſetting down this done to the Levites; but that it was before the Cities of Refuge ſet out, ſeeing they were ſome of the Levites Cities; and hee alſo taxeth it as a fault, that the tribe of Levi had no Cities given them, till they required them, and urged the commandement of God for it; but he ſaith it was a fault of neglect, not of wilfulneſſe, for being put in mind of the Word of the Lord, they preſently yeeld them Cities, as was appointed. I thinke rather, as Joſhua had no poſſeſſion given him till he required it, and Caleb before that, ſo it was by courſe expected that the Levites ſhould require Cities, before that they were given to them, and this they could not doe, till the foregoing diviſions finiſhed; neither doe I ſee any reaſon why this relation ſhould be thought to bee ſet downe out of order. For all the lots of tribes being ſet out the what was more neceſſary immediately to bee next done, then to provide for the preſervation of the innocent, by appointing Cities of Refuge? which if it had been delayed till all the Cities of the Levites had been ſet out, happily ſome might, before this could have been done, have periſhed unjuſtly by the revenger of bloud, for want of a city of Refuge.

V.4,5. In diſtributing theſe 48 cities of the Levites, a fourfold diſtinction is made. 1 Of the ſonnes of Aaron. 2 Of the reſt of the ſonnes of Kobath. 3 Of the ſonnes of Gerſhom. 4 Of the ſonnes of Merari. For of Levi came three families, of the Kobathites, Gerſhonites, and Merarites; and the Kobathites were againe divided into two, the ſonnes of Aaron who were the Prieſts, and the reſt of the ſonnes of Kobath, who were Levites, ſee *Numb.*3, and 4. Aarons ſonnes had 13 cities in Judah, Simeon, and Benjamin, which fell to them by lot, by a ſingular providence, that they might be near to the place where they ſhould doe their ſervice. Qu. If it bee demanded, why they had not Jeruſalem, where the Temple was afterwards built? Anſw. That was the chiefe city, and to be the ſeat of the Kingdom; and therefore muſt needs be reſerved for other inhabitants, and God would have his Miniſters content with meaner and ſmaller cities.

V.36. This verſe ſetting forth the cities given out of Reuben is wanting in the Maſoreths Bible, and in ſome Latine copies, but it is in all other Hebrew copies; and if it be out, the number of 48 cities would not bee compleat. How great the Suburbs of the Levites cities were, ſee *Numb.*35.

V.43. And the Lord gave to Iſrael all the Land which he ſware to their Fathers and they poſſeſſed it, &c. This may ſeem not to have been ſo, becauſe it is ſaid before, Ch. 13.1. there remained very much Land yet to bee poſſeſſed; and of Ephraim, and Manaſſeh, and Judah, &c. that they could not expell the enemy out of their poſſeſſions, ſo likewiſe *Judg.*4.1. But it is to bee underſtood that although much was held ſtill by the enemy, yet all was given to them, and divided amongſt them, and they poſſeſſed ſo much as they yet needed, neither doe wee read that they attempted to take any more, but God was alwayes ſtill aſſiſtant unto them, ſo as that they tooke it, and drave out their enemies ſo long as they perſiſted in obedience. Some hee would not yet have them to take in poſſeſſion, becauſe they were not yet able to people it, as is expreſſed, Exod. 23. and ſome they tooke not through their owne default, becauſe either they were ſlack and timerous to goe and fight for it, or led by covetouſneſſe to bee compounded with for Tribute, againſt the expreſſe charge divers times given unto them.
V.44. And thus the 44 verſe is alſo to bee underſtood, there ſtood not an enemy before them, but the Lord delivered them into their hands; that is, of all that they went againſt, and they had reſt round about: becauſe the enemies ſtill remaining durſt not riſe up to warre againſt them in that Land; and the Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites about them were taken with ſuch feare of them, that none invaded them. Here was then a notable type indeed of the everlaſting reſt to come to all the people of God, to which Jeſus ſhall bring them, all their enemies being ſubdued, and they being put in poſſeſſion of the manſions provided for them in their Fathers houſe.

V.45. Auguſtine.

For the laſt words, there failed not ought of any good thing which the Lord had ſpoken, &c. St. Auguſtine ſaith, it is to be underſtood, that although all was not now performed, yet it failed not, becauſe in Solomons dayes, not onely ſeven, but eleven Nations ſpoken of, *Gen.*15. were all brought under, from the River of Egypt to the great River Euphrates. And againe, nothing failed of all that was ſpoken, becauſe all the promiſes of good were conditionall, if they continued in obedience, which they not doing, although they could never extend their bounds ſo farre, yet nothing failed. Moreover, in ſpeaking upon that, There was not a man that could ſtand before them: hee ſaith, it may bee underſtood, whilſt they made Warres jointly together, before the diviſions were made to the ſeverall Tribes.

CHAP. XXII.

V.1, 2, 3, 4. &c. Schol. Hiſt. Ferus. Lyra. V.7. V.8. Calvin. Toſtatus. Maſius.

HEre is ſhewed firſt how Joſhua diſmiſſed the two Tribes and an halfe to their poſſeſſions on the other ſide of Jordan, praiſing them for their obedience, and doing hitherto as they had promiſed, in helping their brethren conſtantly ſo long a time in the conqueſt of Canaan, till all was ſubdued; and he adjoyneth exhortations to feare God, and bleſſeth them at their departure, remembring the rich ſpoiles of the enemies, that they now went home laden withall, willing them to divide them amongſt their brethren. The time when this was done, is not ſet downe but onely in generall, when their brethren had reſt; and the foreſaid diviſions of the Land were made amongſt them; but by that which was ſaid before upon Joſh 11.18. it may be gathered that it was after ſeven yeares ſince their comming over Jordan. Comeſtor ſaith, fourteen years, but without all ground. Their love and conſtancy in doing for their brethren, is worthy our imitation, ſaith Ferus, who are every man for himſelfe, and regard not the good of one another. Whereas Joſhua chargeth them to walke in the commandements of the Lord, and in his Law: Lyra diſtinguiſheth betwixt them, ſaying, the firſt ſetteth forth precepts morall, and the ſecond judiciall and ceremoniall. And he bleſſed them by a ſolemne praying for good unto them, as Aaron was appointed to bleſſe the people, Numb. 6. 23. Whereas *v.*7. a commemoration is made of the half Tribe of Manaſſeh receiving their inheritance on the other ſide of Jordan, and halfe in Canaan, this was done becauſe, *v.*1. mention was made of the half tribe diſmiſſed; if any man ſhould aske why halfe a tribe was ſent away, and what became of the other halfe? here the reaſon is rendred. Touching the charge of dividing the ſpoiles amongſt their brethren, ſome think that this was no command, but an exhorting of them ſo to doe, to prevent envie; thus Calvin. But herein I prefer Toſtatus, Maſius, &c. affirming it to bee a command: For although they that were left at home, fought not, as theſe did, yet they ſtood to defend their Confines, if any enemies ſhould in the meane ſeaſon have come againſt them. And Moſes had before given an example of dividing with thoſe that ſtayed by the ſtuffe, *Numb.*31. and this was alwayes followed afterwards, they that went to the Warre had one halfe, and the reſt, although many more, the other halfe amongſt them; wherein conſideration was had of the labour and hazard of the one more then of the other.

V.9. 10.

The two tribes and an halfe being returned, ſet up an Altar neare Jordan, at which the other Tribes hearing of it, were through zeale moved to great indignation againſt them, ſuppoſing that it had been made to offer Sacrifices thereupon, and aſſembled together to goe to warre againſt them. But firſt they ſend Phinees and ten Princes with him, to ſee what they had done. Theſe firſt reprove them as falling away from the Lord; but the two Tribes and an half anſwering, that it was not made for Sacrifice, but for a witneſſe, that although they were ſeparated by the River Jordan from the other Tribes where the Tabernacle was, yet they alſo belonged to the Lord, leſt their children in time to come, ſhould be diſcouraged by their children from following the Lord: they were fully ſatisfied, and ſo was the whole Congregation, when at their returne this was related unto them, and they praiſed God for their Ferus. good intention. This fact of the two Tribes and halfe is praiſed by Ferus, for the care herein ſhewed of their poſterity, that they might be upheld in Calvin. the true Religion. But Calvin cenſureth it, becauſe they did it without firſt conſulting with the High Prieſt, and the reſt of the Congregation on this ſide Jordan, whoſe advice they ſhould have uſed herein: and becauſe, howſoever their intention was good, yet they knew not what an occaſion of ſcandall it might be afterwards. But their care of their poſterity certainly was commendable, and would be imitated by all Chriſtian people: howſoever the circumſtance of doing this, no conſultation being before had, is no way juſtifiable. This Altar is ſaid to have been ſet up in the borders of Jordan, in Canaan, and that it was very great to ſee to, the vulgar Latine of infinite greatneſſe, hyperbolically. Hereby it appeareth that it was not built Lyra. on the other ſide Jordan, but on this ſide, which was the Land of Canaan, Joſephus. wherefore Joſephus erred in ſaying, that they ſet it up, when they had paſſed over Jordan, for they did it before, when they were now come to Jordan.

And they made it of ſuch a vaſt greatneſſe, that it might be ſeen afarre off, on both ſides of the River.

V. 11, 12. For the peoples aſſembling themſelves together to fight againſt them, for this, it was out of zeal to Gods Commandements, whereby it was provided, that there ſhould be but one Altar for all Iſrael, Exod. 20. 24. Deut. 12. 5, 6.
Lyra. for they thought that they would offer ſacrifice here-upon to the Lord, or elſe leaving him, ſerve Idols here. And if a City revolted to Idolatry, they Calvin. were commanded to deſtroy it, Deut. 13. This zeale of theirs was partly com-Note. mendable, and by us to be imitated, in that they would not indure in any, although moſt deare unto them, and to whom they had beene obliеged ſo much for their conſtant helping them in their warres ſo long a time, any corruption in religion: for ſuch zeale ſhould every of us have for God, as our places and callings will permit. And partly it was prepoſterous, becauſe they ſhould firſt have ſent to know the truth, and not ſo tumultuouſly firſt come together, the intent not being known, ſee Deut. 13. 14. Thou ſhalt ſcearch and make diligent inquiry.

V. 13, 14. For the Princes ſent, Phinees is particularly named, becauſe of his zeale for God ſhewed Numb. 25. and for this Moſes had ſent him as chiefe before againſt the Midianites; the ten Princes ſent with him were according V. 15. to the number of the nine Tribes and halfe. Theſe come together unto them, and begin with reproofe, as if they had certainly built this Altar with a minde to rebell againſt God. And they put them in minde of the ſinne not
V. 17. long agoe committed in Peor, ſaying, Is the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which wee are not cleanſed, untill this day, &c? The vulgar Latine, Is it a little matter, that ye have ſinned in Bethpeor, the ſtaine of which remaineth in Lyra. you unto this day? But in the Hebrew it is as before, as Lyra alſo noteth, arguing againſt the Latin Tranſlation: for that the Prince ſlaine then Numb. 25.
was not of the Reubenites or Gadites, but of Simeon. From which wee are not cleanſed to this day, that is, ſo as not to have more judgements executed upon us anew for it, if wee provoke God anew by ſinning againe in like manner.
For although Phinees is ſaid then to have turned Gods wrath away, yet it is not meant ſo, but being provoked againe, hee would bee ready againe to puniſh that ſinne over againe together with this. Or, wee are not cleanſed, is Calvin. to bee underſtood with Calvin both in reſpect of judgements, and the ſtaine V. 19. thereof yet remaining, becauſe it was ſo freſh in memory. Againe, they offer unto them, if they thought the Land of their poſſeſſion uncleane without an Altar, to give them Land out of their poſſeſſions, where the Lords V. 10. Tabernacle was, alledging the example of Achan, who alone ſinned, but wrath came upon all the Congregation, ſo that they might much more feare, if for the ſinne of one ſecretly committed there came wrath upon all, that if they ſhould ſuffer this, which was a ſinne of many, and that openly committed: wrath ſhould much more burne againſt them all. Hereby it appeareth Note.

how well they profited by former corrections, wee being by their example taught to have Gods judgements likewiſe in minde, to make us the more watchfull againſt ſinne, for all time to come. The Rubenites and Gadites, &c. V. 21.
hearing what was laid to their charge, anſwer with much paſſion, and for the clearing of themſelves from this foule imputation: appeale to God, and then tell the true cauſe of their ſetting up this Altar, as is aforeſaid;
whereas v. 22. it is ſaid, ſave us not this day, as if they ſpake thus V.22.
to the Iſraelites, it is plainly in the Hebr. of the Lord, let not him ſave us.
This their anſwer being heard by all the Congregation, they praiſed God, V. 32, 33.
that theſe two Tribes and halfe were cleare from the ſinne, of which they had thought them guilty. And in token, that this Altar was built for no V. 34.
other end, but to be a witneſſe, that they which dwelt beyond Jordan, had right to bring their ſacrifices to the Altar in Canaan, they called it Ed, that is witneſſe. Ferus hereupon gathereth, that things done to a good end in Ferus.
the Church of God ought not to be aboliſhed, but if they be abuſed, the abuſe is to be corrected, and they ſuffered ſtill to remain, and ſuch he ſaith, are ſingings, feſtivals, and images, and faſts, which were ordained for a good end. But when the Image of the Brazen Serpent, which at the firſt was ſet up for an excellent end, was abuſed to Idolatry, Hezekiah uttery aboliſht it and is commended therefore.

CHAP. XXIII.

Here Joſhua being grown old, and ſo making account, that the time of his departure was at hand, aſſembleth all Iſrael, and warneth them to feare God and to ſerve him conſtantly, promiſing, that if they did ſo, hee would expell the reſt of their enemies from before them, and give them the lands, which were already divided unto them; but if not, no more of them ſhould be driven out, but they ſhould remaine, as ſnares and trappes unto them, and ſcourges in their ſides, and thornes in their eyes, if they had any familiarity with them, or made any marriages with them, or ſerved their gods.
And this ſpeach was had after a long time of peace, whereupon Ferus noteth well, that as warre is dangerous to the body, ſo is peace to the ſoule, and Ferus.
this Joſhua prudently ſeeing into, ſeeketh to preſerve them here-from by this admonition. And thus ought the Miniſters of Gods Word to warne the people, Note.
and to ſeeke to keepe them in the right way by promiſes and threatnings from time to time. And it is the part of a good Governour, as Calvin noteth Calvin.
to take care, as Joſhua did of the good of his Subjects, that they may Note.
doe well and proſper after his death, wherefore Moſes alſo did thus before, and Peter likewiſe, 2 Pet. 1, 15. whereas Joſhua is ſaid to have called all Iſrael, and then the Heads and Elders are mentioned in particular, this laſt ſeemeth to bee exegeticall, the meaning being, that theſe were all Iſrael repreſentative, whom hee called together. and ſuch voluntaries, as would come with them, for he could not aſſemble and ſpeake to all together. To what place they were called, is not expreſſed, but the next aſſembling of them was in Shechem, Ch. 24. 1. Some conjecture the place to be Timnath-ſerah, Rabbini.
where he dwelt, and ſome Shiloh, where the Tabernacle was, which is the moſt Maſius.
probable, becauſe ſuch holy exhortations were wont to be before the Lord, who is ſaid to have dwelt in his Tabernacle. For the time, it is uncertain, onely it is ſaid when Iſrael had reſt now a long time, and Joſhua was very aged, the number of whoſe yeares are ſaid to be an 100, Ch. 24. 29. but at what age he entred into Canaan, and ſo what yeare after this hee dyed, is not expreſſed, but in the Hebrewes Chronicle, called Seder-Olam, it is ſaid 28 yeares, Joſephus 25. yeares, and Euſeb. 27 yeares, and Adrichomius 7, and o-

*Ioſeph.Antiq. lib.*5.*c.*1. Euſeb. in Chronico. thers make ſome more, ſome fewer. And it is no marvaile that Writers are ſo diverſe hereabout, ſeeing the yeares that onely give light into this matter, be thoſe 480 mentioned 1 Kings 6. 1. which are ſaid to have paſſed ſince the comming of the Iſraelites out of Egypt, to the fourth yeare of Solomons reigne; and it cannot certainely bee found out, how theſe yeares are to be reckoned to make an exact account to a yeare, that other ſeverall ſummes being deducted, the remainder may bee counted to Ioſhua his government, becauſe that before any Judge aroſe after Ioſhua, it Judg. 2 7. is ſaid, that the people ſerved God all the dayes of the Elders that overlived Ioſhua; but afterwards, they ſinning, were ſpoyled by their Enemies; and then crying to God, Othniel was raiſed up to ſave them, and V.8. how long it was after Ioſhua his death to this, is uncertaine. Whereas, V.8. they are forbidden to mention the names of their Gods, the meaning is, that they ſhould make no honourable mention of them, by calling them to witneſſe in ſwearing, or by calling upon them, as is here further expreſſed.

CHAP. XXIV.

Here againe Ioſhua yet living, to ſhew his ſollicitude for the peoples good, aſſembleth them in Sechem before the Lord, and maketh his laſt exhortation to them. Calvin. Calvin thinketh this aſſembling of them, to bee the ſame with that, *Ch.*23. and that here is onely ſet forth how he dealt with them more at Schol. Hiſtor. Lyra, Ferus. large. And Comeſtor joyneth this and that together as one. But Lyra and Ferus, and others hold it to have been done at another time, when Ioſhua was yet nearer the time of his death, and the Hiſtory ſeemeth to make it plaine that it was Qu. ſo. But why did he aſſemble them in Sechem, ſeeing the Tabernacle was in Shiloh? Anſw. The Arke was at this time brought thither, that the people ſtanding before it, might be moved with the more reverence, and the more carefully keep the Covenant now to be renewed. For the ſtanding place of it was in Shiloh, where the Tabernacle was, but now it ſeemeth that the Arke was in Sechem; for when a great ſtone was ſet up there for a remembrance of this renewed Covenant, it is ſaid to have been ſet up by the Sanctuary, v. 26. and Ioſhua wrote this Covenant there in the book of the Law, which book was kept in the ſide of the Arke, *Deut.*31 26. One Sept. Copy for Sechem here hath Shiloh, but all others Sechem. Some thinke Sechem and Shiloh to be all one, but H. B. Patriarchs travailes. they are deceived; for Sechem was 36 miles from Ieruſalem, and Shiloh but 4, ſee *Ch.*18. Sechem was neare to mount Ephraim, where Ioſhua dwelt and in mount Gerizim, where the bleſſings and curſes had been read, *Ioſh.*8.33. wherefore they are in this place now ſpecially aſſembled.

V.2. Your Father dwelt on the other ſide of the flood, &c. that is, of Euphrates in Chaldea, and they ſerved other Gods, of this ſee *Gen.*11, & 12. To move them the more to obedience, hee recounteth Gods benefits towards them, and beginneth with Terah and Abraham, ſhewing what they were, and what his ſingular favour was V.3. to Abraham, I multiplyed his ſeed, ſaith he, and gave him Iſaac; that is, firſt cauſing Iſaac to come of him, and of Iſaac Jacob, whoſe ſeed was ſo multiplyed. The benefits recounted are 13, as Ferus numbreth them. But how is it ſaid, *v.*11. V.11. The men of Jericho fought againſt you, when as they kept within their walls, till that they were miraculouſly throwne downe? Anſw. Becauſe they prepared to fight, and fortified their City againſt them.

V.12. And I ſent the hornet before you, which drave them out; of this promiſed, ſee Exod. 23.28. and how it is to be underſtood. This thing, although we read not of it before, as performed according to the Letter, when they ſubdued the Kings of the Amorites, Numb. 21. yet here it is ſhewed to have been done, and that they ſubdued them not with their ſword and their bow.

V.14. The foundation of remembring Gods benefits being laid, he now exhorteth them therefore to feare God, and to ſerve him, and to put away the ſtrange

Gods which their Fathers ſerved beyond the flood, and in Egypt, whereby hee diſcovereth a thing not hitherto touched, that they ſinned by idolatry in Egypt, whereby the grace of God is yet more magnified towards them. In bidding them to put away the ſtrange Gods, it may ſeem to be intimated, that they had ſuch ſtill amongſt them, and much more, *v.*23. But their former zeale ſhewed, *Ch.*22. and the commendation given them, *Ch.*23.8. make to the contrary, as Auguſtine reaſoneth at large. *Aug. Qu.*29. in Ioſh. And if ſo, the meaning then is, turn not to ſtrange Gods any more, for they which turne not to them, but abhorre them, put them from them. So likewiſe Calvin. Calvin. Yet ſome hold, ſaith Lyra, Lyra. that ſome of them had idols at that time, which they brought with them out of Egypt, applying hither to that of Amos 5.26. recounted againe by Stephen, Acts 7. But this ſeemeth not to be ſo, becauſe then upon this Covenant making, there would have been ſome mention of their putting away of theſe Gods. Wherefore Auguſtine concludeth, that their erroneous imaginations touching God in their hearts, were their falſe Gods, which hee would have them to put away, and to conceive rightly of him, which who ſo doth not, ſerveth falſe Gods, although hee hath no idols made with hands.

V.15. If it ſeemeth evill to you to ſerve the Lord, chooſe you this day whom yee will ſerve, &c. This is not ſpoken to ſet them at liberty to ſerve God or idols, but knowing that yet they were generally bent to ſerve the Lord, hee uſeth this rhetoricall paſſage to draw from them a voluntary profeſſion to ſerve God, that having publikely profeſſed this, they might be the more obliged, and ſo moved thus to doe with perſeverance. Moreover, he addeth his own example to move them, ſaying, I and my houſe will ſerve the Lord: and it worketh with them accordingly, *v.*16, 17. He gave them their free choice, ſaith Ferus, Ferus. to ſhew that the ſervice of God ſhould not bee coact, but free and voluntary. Hee did it but as Moſes, ſet before them the way of life and of death, that they might chooſe which to enter into. Hee ſaith, If it ſeemeth evill, &c. becauſe of the great charge of Sacrifices, and the many Rites about the ſervice of God, as Lyra hath it.

V.19. And Joſhua ſaid to the people, Ye cannot ſerve the Lord, for hee is an holy God, &c. Neither was this ſpoken to diſcourage them, but that reſolving to ſerve God, they might the more ſeriouſly conſider of it, and ſo ſerve him, as to put away all ſinne and idolatry, which no way agree, but are intolerable in his ſervants. For Joſhua knew well enough, as Moſes before him, the perverſeneſſe of their diſpoſition, and therefore hee ſeeketh all wayes to ſtimulate them to their duty, and ſo he bringeth them the ſecond time to profeſſe his ſervice, *v.*21. and the third time, *v.*24 and then hee maketh a Covenant with them, *v.*25. V.21. V.24, 25. Note. Whence note, that it is no eaſie matter to ſerve the Lord reſolvedly indeed, without mingling the ſervice of ſinne with his ſervice, which hee will by no meanes endure. In making this Covenant, there is no mention made of any ſolemne Rites uſed, as Exod. 24. yet Comeſtor ſaith, that water was poured out to intimate, that God would ſo ſpill them, Schol.Hiſtor. that they ſhould never bee gathered up again if they brake this Covenant; but ſeeing the Scripture ſaith nothing of any Rite, it is beſt to leave this undetermined: it is moſt probable that the Old Covenant being now onely renewed, there were none but ſolemne proteſtations onely, and the writing hereof in the booke of the Law, and the ſetting up of a ſtone there for a monument, as followeth, *v.*26. V.26. The booke of the Law was Deuteronomie, which was written by Moſes, and kept in the ſide of the Arke, *Deut.*31.24. The ſtone is ſaid to bee ſet up for a witneſſe, under an Oake by the Sanctuary, that is, neare the place where the Arke ſtood for the preſent, for the planting of trees by the Sanctuary, where the ſtanding place of it was, is forbidden, *Deut.*16.21. A great ſtone is a moſt durable thing, and therefore this is ſet up to continue for many ages, as before upon mount Ebal, the Law was written upon ſtones, *Joſh.*8.32, 33. and the Chaldee Paraphraſt ſpeaketh of this ſtone, Chal.paraphr. as having theſe things written upon it for a memoriall, being therefore called a witneſſe, *v.*27. V.27. and ſaid to have heard all theſe words, which ſome apply to them, ſaying, yee have heard: whereas it is Hebr. it hath heard, becauſe they thought it abſurd that hearing ſhould be applyed to a ſtone. But it is thus ſpoken by a Proſopopeia, as Moſes biddeth the Heaven and the Earth to heare, Deut. 32. and Eſa. 1. 2. Jer. 2. 12. And all things have hearing and ſpeech for God, and againſt his rebells.

Auguſt. qu. 30. in Joſh.
The Myſterie.

Auguſtine thinking it unreaſonable, that hee ſhould ſay, that ſtone heard, expoundeth it Allegorically of Chriſt the chiefe ſtone in the ſpirituall building; for hee heard, and ſhall teſtifie againſt the rebellious Jewes; and this ſtone, ſaith hee, was under a tree, although hanged upon a tree, becauſe through his humility he ſubmitted himſelfe to this, and hee calleth the tree terebinthus, from whence an humor commeth that is ſanative, ſhewing the vertue that floweth from Chriſt hanged upon a tree. Jerome and the Septuagint alſo call it terebinthus. Laſtly, Auguſtine examining the reaſon why Joſhua amongſt all his admonitions, ſaith nothing in reproving them for permitting the Canaanites to dwell amongſt them, whom they were ſo ſtrictly charged to deſtroy utterly, yet they ſuffered them to live, and tooke tribute of them; Hee reſolveth, that it was a ſinne of infirmity, the people not being of courage enough to proſecute their Victories begun under Joſhua his government, or becauſe they were weary of ſo long continued Warres; wherefore, as Paul ſaith, At my firſt defence no man ſtood to me, the Lord lay it not to their charge: ſo this was not imputed to them, but in mercy pardoned.

V. 29, 30. Here Joſhua dyeth, and is buryed in his inheritance of Timnath-ſerah, on the north ſide of the hill Gaaſh. This is againe commemorated, Judg. 2. 9. but for Timnath-ſerah, there is Timnath-heres, ſee what was noted upon this before, Chap. 19. 50. his age is ſet downe alſo, 110 years. The hill Gaaſh moſt probably was an hill upon mount Ephraim, and not a diſtinct place from it, ſo Jerome and Adricomius;

Hyeronym.
The Myſtery.

Jerome noteth here, that Joſhua being dead, no mention is made of mourning for him, as when Moſes dyed, to intimate myſtically, that under the Goſpel, the happineſſe to come to the faithfull being more clearely opened, wee ſhould not mourne, but rejoyce when the faithfull ſervants of God dye. And it may bee added, in that no man knew of the Sepulchre of Moſes, but Joſhua his Sepulchre is notified, that wee might hereby bee admoniſhed to ſeeke to Jeſus for juſtification, but not to the Law, which if wee doe, wee ſhall ſurely never finde it, as the body of Moſes, who gave the Law, could never bee found by any after his death.

V. 31. And Iſrael ſerved the Lord all the dayes of Joſhua, and all the dayes of the Elders that overlived Joſhua, &c. Here is the great commendation of the ſervant of God, Joſhua, by his godly care the people were contained in obedience, an example worthy the imitation of all Chriſtian Princes. The Elders overliving Joſhua were Caleb and Eleazar, and divers of the Levites; for all the other Elders dyed in the wilderneſſe, this ſame is repeated, Judg. 2. 7. and v. 10. and alſo all that generation was gathered to their fathers, and another generation roſe after them, which knew not the Lord, &c. How long theſe Elders who are called that generation, lived after Joſhua, it is uncertaine, but by computing the times following unto Solomon, it appeareth that it was not many yeares.

1 Kings 6. 1.

For Solomon began to build the Temple 480 yeares after their comming out of Egypt, the 4 yeare of his reigne, unto which time, if we reckon to Othniel the firſt Judge after Joſhua, 40 yeares, Judg. 3. 11. to Ehud 80 yeares, v. 30. to which Shamgars time may alſo be counted; to Deborah 40 yeares, Judg. 5. ult. to Gedeon 40, Judg. 8. 28. to Abimelech 3, Ch. 9. 22. to Tolah 23, Ch. 10. 2. to Jair 22, v. 3. to Iephthah 6, Ch. 12. 7. to Ibzan 7, v. 9. to Elon 10, v. 11. to Abdon 8, v. 14. to Samſon 20, Ch. 15. ult. to Eli 40, 1 Sam. 4. 18. to Samnel and Saul 40, for they are put together, Acts 13. 21. to David 40, 1 King. 2. 12. to Solomon 4. all together make 423, unto theſe adde Moſes 40, and the whole is 463: ſo that here were but 17 yeares for Joſhua and the Elders that overlived him. I have followed, I confeſſe, another reckoning, Acts 13. 21. making the yeares of the Judges many more, as Melchior Canus doth, adding to the yeares of the Judges, the yeares of their oppreſſions by divers enemies; but now ſee-ing that that account can no way be reconciled with 1 Kings 6. 1. I rather ſub-ſcribe to them that bring thoſe oppreſſion times under the years of the Judges, for although thus counted they make but 377, yet 17 of Joſhua and the Elders being added, and 40 of Moſes, the whole is 434 to the end of the Iudges, ſo that it might well bee ſaid about 450 yeares. V. 32. The bones of Joſeph V. 32.

carryed from Egypt, Gen. 50. Exod. 13. are buryed in Sechem, bought by Jacob, Gen. 33. 19. and given to Joſeph, Gen. 48. 22. This moſt probably is ſpoken of here, out of time, for it was done before, but is now mentioned, becauſe Shechem was laſt ſpoken of, ver. 33. Eleazar dyeth, and is buryed in an hill belonging to Phinees his ſonne, that was given him in mount Ephraim.
It is ſaid now to belong to Phinees, becauſe it was his when his Father was dead. It is ſaid to have been given him, becauſe the High Prieſt had that place extraordinary, for the Prieſts had nothing in Ephraim, ſee Chap. 21.

A COMMENTARY UPON THE BOOKE OF IUDGES.

The PREFACE.

WHo wrote this Booke it is uncertaine, ſome thinke it was Samuel, ſome Ezra, ſome divers writers ſucceſſively, as the time, that this Hiſtory goeth through, is very long, viz. of 299 yeares, in which God ſtirred up 13 Iudges, whoſe yeares if they bee ſummed up together, amount to ſo many. If it bee demanded, what a Judge differed from a King, and what the Office of a Judge was? it is eaſily determined. The Judges Office was firſt to fight againſt the enemy, and to deliver the people of Iſrael from their oppreſſion. Secondly, to judge the cauſes brought before them, as did Deborah, Eli and Samuel. Wherefore they had the ſupreame place and Authority over others in civill things, and a coactive power to call the people after them to warre, and to puniſh offendors, and to inforce to the execution of their judgements. The difference betwixt a Judge and a King yet was great: becauſe the Judge ruled onely by the Laws of God, and made none other Laws, or conſtitutions, but in weightier matters ſtood to the decrees of the great Synedrion or councell of 72: but Kings had power to make other new Ordinances, yet not repugnant to the Laws of God, ſo that in the time of the Judges God and his Laws were as the onely King, 1 Sam. 12.12. but when they deſired to have a King, they 2 Sam. 8.7. are cenſured, as rejecting the Lord, that hee ſhould no longer raigne over them, becauſe although all good Kings would rule according to Gods Laws, yet hee knew, that being puffed up by ſo high a dignity, they would for the moſt part play the tyrants and doe contrary to Gods Laws, and ſo bring the people to a more miſerable condition, as is foretold, 1 Sam. 8. 11. 13. &c. to v. 18. Secondly, Kings were anointed, ware Crownes, of gold, and went forth, and lived in great pompe, having a guard of men and Officers about them, but Judges not. Thirdly, many Kings came to their Kingdome, as the inheritance of their Fathers, but Judges not, but by election, God ſetting up one of one Tribe, and then another of another, as ſeemed good unto him: 1 Othniel of Judah, 2 Ehud of Benjamin, Barak of Nephtali, Gedeon of Manaſſeh, Tholah of Iſſachar, Elon of Zebulun, Abdon of Ephraim, Samſon of Dan, Eli of the Tribe Levi. Fourthly, Kings tooke tribute bute of their Subjects, 2 Sam. 20.24. 1 Kings 4. 6. but Iudges not. And yet as the word King may be taken in a large ſenſe for the ſupreame Magiſtrate, a Judge may bee called a kinde of King, as Moſes is, Deut. 33 5. Ferus ſheweth the differences in briefe thus, Judges were not ſet over the people, Emperor-like, but as deliverers, directors, & counſellours, wherefore Gedeon refuſed this kinde of Rule being offered unto him, ſaying, I will not rule over you, but the Lord ſhall. And he onely was made a Judge, that was by God ſet up by miracles to deliver the people & to containe them in the obedience of Gods laws, ſo that the ſtate of the people of Iſrael then was a free and golden eſtate to that it was afterwards in the time of the moſt flouriſhing King, becauſe then they were made ſervants, and were greatly exacted upon. Judges ruled, ſaith Lyra, non per modum imperii, ſeu [illegible] dominii, ſed tantum per modum miniſterii, exhortationis & conſilii, Deo ſibi iſtud Dominium retinente, ut patet per iſtud Gedeonis, c.8. The ſcope of this Booke is to ſhew, how the tranſgreſſours of Gods Laws were not threatned with judgements in vaine, nor the obedient fed with gracious promiſes without effect: for here are both theſe exemplified at large, ſinners not being then eſpecially ſuffered to goe unpuniſhed, leſt the threatnings of tranſgreſſours againſt the Law lately given ſhould have beene contemned, as being without effect. For at the firſt it was neceſſary for the confirmation of Gods Laws, that Iſrael offending ſhould bee ſeverely judged, and repenting againe, received to mercy, that all living in after ages might be aſſured, that although judgements have not ſince beene ſo frequent, yet at laſt all the wicked ſhall beare their puniſhments, and repentant ſinners ſhall be received to mercy. For this Booke of Judges, although the Authour be unknown, yet it being a part of Canonicall Scriptures, wee are ſure that the Spirit of God was the prime & the cheife Authour of it, and therefore we learn reverently to read and attend unto it.

Ferus.

Judg. 8.

2 Tim. 3. 16.

CHAP. I.

V. 1.

NOw after the death of Joſhua, the children of Iſrael asked the Lord, ſaying, Who ſhall firſt goe up for us againſt the Canaanites, &c. Joſhua being dead, there was no one ſupreame Magiſtrate for the ſpace of 17 yeares, as the Hebrewes have it, or 18 yeares, as Joſephus, but the great Synedrion or councell of 72 governed, and the High Prieſt directed in all caſes of difficulty. And this ſeemeth not unprobable, becauſe Othniel was the firſt Judge, Ch. 3. 9. and hee was not raiſed up, till that the people of Iſrael had revolted from their obedience to God, and were therefore delivered into the hands of their enemies, and greatly oppreſſed by them; and this revolt was not made till after the death of all the Elders, that over-lived Joſhua. If this ſhall ſeeme to make againſt the former account of yeares caſt up to make the ſumme ſet downe, 1 King. 6.1. wherein onely 17 yeares are reckoned to Joſhua his government, and the Elders that overlived him. It may be anſwered that the 40 yeares reckoned to Othniel, Judg. 3. 11. include theſe 17, the Land had reſt 40 yeares accounting to the time from Joſhua his death, to the 40 yeares after. Whilſt Joſhua lived, it is ſaid, the land had reſt, Joſh. 22.4. becauſe ſo much was ſubdued as was ſufficient for them for the preſent, neither durſt any enemy ſtirre againſt them, wherefore Joſhua ceaſed from warre, only permitting ſuch Tribes, as found themſelves grieved with the ſtraitneſſe of their bounds by reaſon of the enemies ſtill dwelling therein, to fight againſt them and expell them, as to Ephraim and Manaſſeh, Joſh. 17.17. But Joſhua being dead, and the people increaſed after a time of reſt, they thinking it high time now to goe about the clearing of more Land for their inlargement; firſt conſult with the Lord, who ſhould begin in theſe warres againſt the Canaanites, that is, which Tribe ſhould firſt attempt the driving of them out of his coaſts, that by the happy proceedings of one, the enemies might generally be the more terrified, and the other Tribes the more incouraged to doe the like in their parts. If it be demanded, how they conſulted

Judg 2. 7, 8, 9, 10.

ſulted with the Lord? Anſw. By the Urim and Thummim, as hath beene ſhewed upon Exod. 28. ſee alſo 1 Sam. 28. 6. and Ch. 23. 9. And this inquiring and ſeeking direction and ſucceſſe from the Lord, was a moſt ſure way to proceede in their wayes proſperouſly, thus alſo they did, Ch. 18. 5, c. 20. 18.
2 Chron. 14. and Aſa and Jehoſhaphat being to fight with their enemies, firſt ſought un-
2 Chron. 20. to God, and then obtained wonderfull victories. Thus alſo Judas Mac-cabeus, 1 Maccab. 3. 46. And Theodoſius being about to fight with the tyrant Maximus ſought unto God by the prayers of the godly monks of Egypt, and pre-Lyra. vailed wonderfully. The Iſraelites, ſaith Lyra, remembring what ill ſucceſſe they Ioſh. 7. had againſt Ai under Joſhua, who ſent them forth, the Lord not being conſulted with, to prevent this danger, firſt aske counſell. Touching the High-Schol. Hiſt. Prieſt, by whom they conſulted with the Lord, Comeſtor ſaith it was Phinees, Ioseph. Antiq. who now was promoted to that Office, Eleazar being dead, ſo likewiſe Jo-
5. c. 1. ſephus Their inquiry is not, what captaine ſhall goe up as ſome ſuppoſe, but
V. 2. what Tribe ſhould firſt begin this warre, as is expreſſed, Who ſhall goe up for us a- Scholaſt. Hiſt. gainſt the Canaanites firſt to fight againſt them? And the Lord ſaid, Judah ſhall go up,
&c. that is, not any man ſo called, but the Tribe of Judah, over which yet, ſaith Comeſtor, Caleb happily was ſet as leader, but is not numbred amongſt the Judges for the ſhortneſſe of his time, but this is onely a conjecture, and if hee were Captaine of this Tribe, yet this maketh him not to have beene a Judge of all Iſ-rael, that hee ſhould, if he had continued long, be numbred amongſt the Judges.
Lyra. Some hereby conceive, ſaith Lyra, that Judah the Tribe was now ſet up generally to be leader to all the reſt in their warres, and thus he ſaith it is commonly expounded. But that, which here followeth, ſheweth that it is not ſo meant, becauſe Judah goeth not up upon this anſwer to fight with the enemy, but in his owne lot, and men of other Tribes were afterwards made Captaines of ge-V. 3. nerall warres, and not of the Tribe of Judah onely. Judah being appointed firſt to begin the warre, calleth Simeon to go with him into his lot, promiſing to doe the like for him, and thus theſe two Tribes go to warre together, but not without ſome man choſen to be their general Captaine, who moſt probably was Caleb, as being moſt famous: for without a Captaine Generall the Armies going forth would have been ſubject to confuſion. The reaſon why Judah tooke his brother Simeon to him was, becauſe Simeons lot lay within that of Judah, as was ſhewed upon Joſh. 19. 1. It may ſeeme that the Tribe of Judah had no need ſo to do, conſidering the promiſe of God, I have delivered the Land into his hand, v. 2.
but when God promiſeth any thing, the beſt meanes and helpe for atcheiving of Ferus. it are to be uſed, and ſo Judah joyneth Simeon unto him, not out of diſtruſt, or truſting to Simeons helpe, but in great obedience & charity to that his brother, that hee might helpe him againe, for one brother being holpen by another is as a ſtrong City, for ſo is that, Prov. 18. 19. rendred in Jeroms tranſlation. Thus Ferus, who alſo applyeth their conſulting with the Lord after the death of The Myſterie. Joſhua, to the Apoſtles ſeeking together to the Lord in prayer for the direction after the death of Jeſus, before their going out to preach to all Nations.

This application hee maketh myſtically, and morally as Judah was appointed firſt to goe up, ſo the Chriſtian that would prevaile, muſt go out by Judah; Iſidor. that is, by confeſſing the Faith, and hereunto joyne Simeon, that is, obedience to the commandement: for to theſe two the Victory is promiſed. Iſidor will have the Judges ſucceeding of Joſhua to ſet forth the Apoſtles ſucceeding Ieſus, and the peoples, ſinning and ſuffering therefore, but upon their repentance, the raiſing up of Judges to deliver them, to ſet forth the ſinning of Chriſtians and their perſecutions, and the ſtirring up of Princes and Doctors of the Church, for their helpe and comfort.

V. 4. And Judah went up, and the Lord delivered the Canaanites and Perizzites into his hands, &c. Here it appeareth, that God did not make ſo gracious a promiſe of Victory unto them in vain, and they ſlew of them in Bezek, 10000 men.
Adrichomius. This City ſaith Adrichomius was in the Tribe of Iudah, neare Bethlehem, and H. B. Patriarchs Ieruſalem, having Bethlehem on the eaſt, and Ieruſalem on the north. But H.
travailes. Bunting placeth it 44 miles from Ieruſalem, by the waters of Merom ſpoken
of

of Joſh. 11.5. whereſoever it ſtood, it muſt needs bee within the lot of Judah, becauſe Judah made no warre here, but within his owne lot, as appeareth, v. 3. Adonibezek alſo the King of Bezek was taken Priſoner, and had his thumbes and great toes cut off; whereupon hee confeſſeth his owne cruell and barbarous dealing with 70 other Kings, who, he ſaith, being thus mutilated, gathered their meat under his Table. For the reaſon of dealing thus with him, and of his dealing ſo with other Kings; it is to bee underſtood, that the thumbs being cut off, a man was made unfit for Warre, and the great toes being cut off unfit for ſlight, becauſe Adonibezek had before fought againſt them, and being overcome, fled away. That hee might therefore neither fight nor flee away any more, he was thus uſed: Pierius in his Hieroglyphicks, to ſet forth a man unfit for Warre, made an Embleme of an hand with the thumbe cut off, and of an hand ſhut with the thumb erected, to ſet forth ſtrength and fortitude, becauſe pollex, the thumb, hath the name a pollendo, as Iſidore hath it, becauſe inter cæteros digitus virtute pollet & poteſtate. And for this cauſe of old the Athenians cut off the thumbs of Ægines, that he might not goe forth with the Navie, of which he was Captain; ſo Valer. Maximus and Ælianus; and ſome, ſaith the ſame Val. Max. having cut off their owne thumbs that they might not bee taken for Souldiers, have been ſeverely puniſhed by the Senate. The like is related by Suetonius of a Roman Knight that cut off the thumbs of his two ſonnes, that they might not goe to Warre, being therefore ſeverely puniſhed by Auguſtus. And Ammianus Marcellinus praiſeth the French, that none of them did cut off their thumbs to decline the terrour of Warre, as many in Italy had done. But there was a ſecret reaſon in reſpect of Gods juſt judgements, why Adonibezek was now ſerved thus, becauſe hee had dealt ſo with 70 other petty Kings before, many of them happily being Kings under him over particular Cities, as the King of Hazor is ſaid to have had many Kings under him, Joſh. 11.10. but hereby it appeareth that Adonibezek was of no ſmall power, whom God yet ſubdued unto Judah. Hence note the juſtice of God, to pay wicked men with their own coin: ſo Valerius the Emperour, who cauſed 80 Prieſts, who were ſent upon an Ambaſſage to him, to be put into a Ship and burnt, was a little while after burnt in a thatcht Cottage by the enemies, who put fire to it. Juſtinian being alſo expelled from his Empire by Leontius, and his noſe cut off, the ſaid Leontius was uſed in like manner by Apſimarus; ſo Zonaras, who alſo in the ſame place ſaith, that Conſtantinus the ſon of Irene, who had put out the eyes of Nicephorus his Vncle, and of Alexius Moſolus, for ſuſpition of affecting the Empire, had his eyes put out five yeares after, upon the ſame day, by Irene his mother.

V. 5, 6.

V. 7.

Pierius.

Iſidor.

Val. Maxim. c. de Crudel.
Ælian. l 2. variæ Hiſtor.
Val. Maxim. c. de Severit.
Sueton. c. 24.

Ammian. Marcellin. l. 15.

Note.
Glycas Annal. par. 4.
Zonaras tom. 3.

In that Adonibezek did not onely cut off the thumbs, &c. but made thoſe Kings to gather meat under his Table; this ſhewed the pride and cruelty of a wicked man; there is no mercy in him towards ſuch as hee hath ſubdued, but he uſeth them as dogs and beaſts; as Sapores the King of the Perſians having overcome Valerianus the Emperor, uſed him for a ſtool to ſet his foot upon when hee went up to his Horſe, as Eutropius relateth: and Tamerlane having overcome Bajazet the Emperour of the Turks ſerved him likewiſe, and carryed him about in an iron cage for a ſpectacle. But ſuch cruelty uſed even by the wicked to the wicked, God will not ſuffer to goe unrevenged, as we may ſee in this example, ſee alſo Eſa. 33. Amos 2. Laſtly, as Ferus noteth, here is a notable example of the mutability of worldly things, in that ſo many who were Kings, were thus abaſed.

Eutropius.

Ferus.
Note.

Adonibezek ſuffering by this judgement, acknowledgeth that God had dealt with him juſtly, as hee had done to others, now cauſing the like to be done unto him; whereby we may ſee, that even the wickedeſt heathen were not without the knowledge of God, as is alſo taught, Rom. 1. but they had no ſenſe of this but in their miſery, and not then neither to call upon him for mercy, but to juſtifie him in his proceedings againſt them. And they brought him to Jeruſalem, and hee dyed there. The reaſon of their carrying him to Jeruſalem is ſet downe in the next verſe, that was the next City they ſubdued and burnt; ſo that Adonibezek was carryed thither as a priſoner onely taken along with them in the way that they marched. Touching Jeruſalem, we read before of the king of Jeruſalem ſlaine by Joſhua, *Ch.*10 and *Ch.*12. and of Jeruſalem inhabited by the men of Judah, together with the Jebuſites, *Ioſh.*15.63. but no where of the taking of it till this time; yet, as hath been ſhewed upon *Ioſh.*15. 63. it is moſt probable that it was taken in the dayes of Ioſhua, but repoſſeſſed againe by the enemies, whilſt they were buſied in other Warres, and that now it was taken the ſecond time by Iudah and burnt, as Iericho and Ai had been for the greater terrour of the enemies, and in deteſtation of the abominations therein formerly committed, that it being thus purged and rebuilt, might be fit to be the Metropolis of the whole Kingdome, and the ſeat of the Temple of God. Whereas this was done by the men of Iudah, and yet the farre greater part of the City was in the lot of Benjamin, as hath been ſhewed upon Ioſh. 15. 63. and accordingly they are ſaid to have dwelt here, v. 21. of this Chapter: it may bee conceived that the Benjamites were alſo with the men of Judah in this Warre, although not hitherto ſpoken of, becauſe their going out to fight is not afterwards ſpoken of, as of all the other Tribes, *v.*22,23,24, &c. but onely it is ſaid that they dwelt in Jeruſalem, and the Iebuſites with them unexpelled, v. 21. but becauſe Iudah was the chiefe in this expedition, he onely is named, and not Simeon or Benjamin ſo nearly joyned unto him. Whereas the City is ſaid now to have been burnt, Hebr. to bee caſt into the fire, a phraſe amongſt the Hebrews, to expreſſe the utter deſtruction of a place by fire, it is yet to bee underſtood that all without exception was not burnt, but all that was taken onely; the Fort of Zion held by the Jebuſites even till Davids dayes eſcaping, as hath been before ſhewed upon *Ioſh.*15.63.

V. 9. Here are other expeditions of Iudah ſet forth againſt the Canaanites in the mountaines, and in the ſouth, and in the valleys, in generall, the particular places, and their ſucceſſe being further declared in the verſes following to *v.*20.
V.10,11. And firſt againſt thoſe in the mountaines, Hebron and Debir, of which ſee Ioſh.
14.12,13. and *Ch.*15.15,16. and of Debir, or Kiriath-ſepher againe, *v.*49. where enough hath been ſpoken of the names of theſe Cities, and of the gift of Hebron to Caleb again repeated, *v.*20. and of his expelling the three ſonnes of Anak by the help of Iudah. Onely that which was done about Debir, and the taking thereof by Othniel the ſon of Kenaz, Calebs younger brother, and having his daughter Achſah therefore given him to wiſe, &c. all which is in the ſame words ſet forth, *Ioſh.*15.15,16,17, &c. remaineth here to bee ſpoken of, as moſt proper to this place, this being the time when theſe things were done.
V.12. And Caleb ſaid, Hee that ſmiteth Kiriath-ſepher, and taketh it, I will give him
V.13. Achſah my daughter to wife; and Othniel the ſonne of Kenaz, the younger brother of
Qu. Caleb tooke it, &c. Here a queſtion is made, whether this marriage were lawfull Levit. 18. or not, ſeeing that Othniel being brother to Caleb, was Uncle to Achſah, and a Nephew is expreſly forbidden to marry his Aunt, therefore by the like reaſon Lyra. the Uncle may not marry his Neece. Lyra ſcanneth this diverſly; firſt, ſaying, that ſome hold it to have been againſt the Law, but Caleb having made a vow at large, and not knowing that his brother ſhould take that City, when it was done, held it not to ſtand with his magnificence to goe back from that which he had promiſed, and therefore preferring the tye of a vow before that of the Law, performed it, as Iephthah afterward performed his vow in offering Hugo Card. his daughter. Thus Hugo Cardin. hee had rather keep his vow, then the Law about marriages. But Lyra rejecteth this, becauſe Caleb & Othniel were both godly men, and ſo it is not probable that they would agree to doe any thing againſt the Law of God. Secondly, he therefore ſaith, that ſome hold Kenaz the father of Othniel to have been Calebs brother, and ſo hee was Calebs Nephew, and called his brother onely, as Lot was called Abrahams brother, *Gen.*13. Laſtly, he ſaith, that although he were Calebs brother, yet hee did nothing againſt the Law in marrying his daughter, for Abraham marryed Sarah, his brother Harams daughter, and onely the marriage of a Nephew with his Aunt, and not of an Vncle with his Neece is by the Law forbidden, Levit. 18. And although the

caſe may ſeem to be alike for the ſame degree of conſanguinity, yet there is this difference, it is againſt nature for the Nephew to bring the Ant, his ſuperiour, into ſubjection to him, as he doth, if he marrieth her, but it is not ſo for the Vncle to marry the Neece. Thus hee, who addeth alſo more touching the liberty of the man above that which is granted to the woman, for the further confirmation hereof. But ſee the contrary to this proved upon Levit. 18. 18. and Othniel determined to be a brother to Caleb, not properly ſo called, but according to the appellation uſed amongſt the Hebrews, becauſe hee was his kinſman; therefore Junius for brother here, hath agnatus Calebi, but the word in Hebrew is brother, and if that be true which hath been before alledged out of Lyra, that Kenaz the father of Othniel, took to wife the mother of Caleb, Joſh. 14. then this controverſie will thus be ſoon at an end. Ferus from hence praiſeth Caleb, in that he ſought a ſon in law rather vertuous then rich; and Themiſtocles gave his daughter to a man poore indeed, but honeſt, ſaying, I had rather have a man wanting money, then money wanting a man. Achſah being given to wife to Othniel, ſhee moves him to ask of her father a field, and then ſhee lighting off her Aſſe, asked him a bleſſing, ſaying, Thou haſt given mee a dry land, give me alſo ſprings of water, and he gave her the upper ſprings and the nether. The Septuagint and Vulgar Latine have it, he moved her, to which the words following anſwer beſt: but Hebr. it is ſhee moved him; both are true, ſaith Lyra, ſhee moved him, but he thinking it fitteſt that ſhee ſhould make this requeſt to her owne father, bade her doe it. For theſe words, And ſhee lighted from off her Aſſe, the Septuagint and Vulg. Latine have it, Shee murmured & cryed, or ſighed upon her Aſſe; but Jun. Pagninus, Vatablus, Tygurini interpreters and divers more, and ſome Rabbins, as David Kimchi, R. Solomon, Chaldee Paraphr. expound it, ſhee lighted from her Aſſe, Hebr. it is ותצנח מעל חמור, the word תצנח is not found elſewhere but in this ſame relation, Joſh. 15. and Judg. 4. 21. where it is put for ſmiting to the ground: Polanus rendreth צנח cum impetu demittere ſe, deſilire, or defigere, but for ingemiſcere, or to ſigh, it cannot bee taken. Wherefore Bonfrerius laboureth in vain to juſtifie the Vulg. Latine herein. Serrarius better thinketh it a miſtaking of צנח for אנח to ſigh or groane. Caleb perceiving by his daughters comming downe and proſtrating her ſelfe, as it is likely, before him, that ſhee would ask him ſomewhat, asked her what ſhee would, ſhee anſwered, give me a bleſſing, &c. as before. Here by a bleſſing ſhee meaneth not onely a wiſhing well; but a performance of good unto her, as Caleb her father was able. So likewiſe the word bleſſing is uſed, Gen. 33. 11. 1 Sam. 25 27. 2 Cor. 9. 5. thou haſt given mee a ſouth land, or dry land, Hebr. it is ſouth, but becauſe the ſouth in Canaan was moſt dry, it may be termed a dry land. And herein Canaan was contrary to all our Countreys in Europe, wherein the ſouth is moiſteſt and fruitfulleſt, but in Canaan the weſt was the part from which the raine came, Luke 12. 1 Kings 18. the reaſon, becauſe the weſt was to the Sea, but the ſouth to the vaſt wilderneſſe of Arabia, which was dry. Give mee alſo Springs of water, the Septuagint λύτρωσιν ὕδατος, the redemption of water; and whereas it followeth, Hee gave her the upper Springs and the nether, the Septuagint have λύτρωσιν μετεώρων, ϗ λύτρωσιν ταπίνων, which Augustine, who followed that tranſlation, comming to explaine after that hee had ſaid, ſhee cryed out upon her Aſſe, give me a bleſſing, &c. hee ſaith, ſhee being adviſed by her husband to ask a field, asked the redemption of water, but what this ſhould meane I know not, unleſſe a fruitfull field wherewith water might be bought, becauſe the place to which ſhee was going with her husband was dry, and Caleb gave her ſuch a field, as that ſhee might with the fruit thereof buy waters, that came from the mountaines above, and ſpringing from the valleys beneath. Symmachus rendreth it, poſſeſſionem in ſuperioribus & poſſeſſionem in inferioribus, but Theodotion, irrigationem aquarum, Hebr. it is גלות מים fluctus aquarum. But what is meant by the Springs, or flowings of water, the upper and the nether, it is not agreed. Cajetan ſaith, that nothing but the Springs are meant in the higher and lower grounds neare to the ſouth land already given her, which was dry, that being derived thither by channels, it might bee

Junius.

Ferus.
Themiſt. Malo virum pecunia, quam pecuniam, viro indigentem
V. 12, 15.

Lyra.

Polanus.

Bonfrerius
Serrarius.

Aug. Qu. 4 in Judg.

Cajetan.

Lyra Toſtatus. made fruitfull. Lyra ſaith, it was a field, having Springs both in the upper and in the nether part. Toſtatus, that two fields are meant, one above the ſouth land already given, lying more north, and the other lower then it, lying more ſouth, both well watered with Springs. It is not likely, that it being agreed before betwixt her husband and her, that ſhe ſhould aske a field, that ſhee asked Springs onely, without the ground wherein they lay, but rather ſuch a ground, and Caleb to ſhew his bounty to Othniel, ſo well deſerving, granted more then was deſired, a field lying higher, and another lower, accommodated with Springs or Rivers. Bonfrerius Bonfrerius ſtandeth for one field onely, and for the upper Springs to be the raine of Heaven; but this is abſurd, ſeeing it was not in Calebs power to give any ſuch Springs, but of God alone at his pleaſure, and yet it is ſaid, that he gave his daughter the upper Springs and the nether. Qu. If it be demanded how lands could bee given to a daughter by one that had ſons, as Caleb, 1 Chron. 4. ſeeing the land was the inheritance of ſons onely, but in caſe of the want of ſuch iſſue. It is anſwered, that daughters were to have dowries, and the father was not herein tyed, but he might, if it pleaſed him, give ſome of his land for a dowry to them, to bee enjoyed till the yeare of Jubilee. Ferus. This paſſage, ſaith Ferus, might ſeem unworthy the ſacred Hiſtory, but that Achſahs practice may well bee a pattern for other women, ſhee deſired not coſtly apparell, or gold, or ſilver, but neceſſaries for hers and her families ſuſtenance. The Myſtery. And there is herein a myſtery, Caleb ſetteth forth God the Father, Othniel Chriſt, Achſah the Chriſtian ſoule, the ſouth or dry land given her, this earth, wherein we live, or the fleſh, which is dry and barren in reſpect of all ſpirituall good things; wherefore Chriſt adviſeth, and the true Chriſtian asketh the upper Springs of grace, to be devout and heavenly, and the nether of contrition and teares for ſinnes and miſeries, which who ſo hath, hath a rich poſſeſſion indeed.

Dialog. l. 3. Gregorius. Prius enim timore ſe lachrymis afficit, quia dum mala ſua recolit pro his æterna ſupplicia pertimeſcit. Cum vero longo mærore fuit formido conſumpta, quadam de præſumptione veniæ ſecuritas naſcitur, in que amorem cœleſtium gaudiorum animus inflammatur. Et qua prius flebat, ne duceretur in ſupplicium, poſt flere incipit, quia differtur a regno. Dat ergo ei pater cœleſtis irrigmum ſuperius, cum ſe lachrymis cœleſtis regni deſiderio affligit; irriguum vero inferius, cum inferni ſupplicia timendo flet. Prius autem inferius datur, poſt ſuperius, ſed quia compunctio amore cœli præeminet, irriguum ſuperius prius ponitur, & poſt inferius.

Gregory by the ſouth land, underſtandeth the gift to ſpeake freely for the truth, to give almes, to relieve the oppreſſed, to be zealous for the faith; ſo that he which hath theſe graces, but not the grace of teares, hath a dry land, but yet wanteth Springs: This is therefore alſo to bee deſired, that through the love of heaven, and the feare of hell, he may bee contrite, and weep for his ſinnes, which exclude him from the one, and indanger him in reſpect of the other. Theſe are the upper and the nether Springs; but becauſe the heart is firſt affected with ſorrow for feare of hell, and then, a confidence towards God being wrought, for being delayed in comming to the bleſſedneſſe expected; the nether Springs are firſt in Nature, but becauſe ſorrowing and groaning out of a deſire of heaven is the more worthy, this is firſt placed here, the upper Springs, and then the nether, as not being of ſo great dignity. And this myſticall application is rather to be preferred, becauſe a gift given after eſpouſalls is ſpoken of, which cannot be earthly, but ſpirituall, although defective, till true ſorrow to repentance be added. Wherefore Ferus alſo goeth from his firſt, ſaying, or by the ſouth land the gifts of grace may be underſtood, by the ſprings of water, the gifts of eternall life.

V. 16. And the children of the Kenite, Moſes Father in law, went up out of the City of Palme trees with the children of Judah, into the wilderneſſe of Judah, &c. Numb. 10. 29. Raguel is ſaid to be the Father in law of Moſes, and Hobab to bee his ſonne, he is alſo called Revel and Jethro, Exod. 2. 16, 17. Ch. 18. 1. and here the Kenite, of which name ſee againe, Judg. 4. 11. and Numb. 24. 21. Hee was deſired by Moſes to ſtay with him, Numb. 10. 29. promiſing that he ſhould dwell amongſt the people of Iſrael in the beſt of the Land. And hereby it ſeemeth that this was performed after the death of Moſes, for his children abode hitherto in the City of Palme trees, that is, Jericho, Deut. 34. 3. Judg. 3. 13. which Joſephus deſcribeth to be the moſt pleaſant and fruitfull part of all the Land. But now they goe up into the wilderneſſe of Judah. Whereas it is by their going up out of Jericho implyed, that they dwelt therein, it is to be underſtood, that this they could not doe, becauſe Jericho was all burnt down to the ground, and not built yet againe; wherefore they abode onely in Tents within the confines of Jericho. But why did they now remove? Lyra ſaith, that they might be neare unto Othniel, to learne of him the knowledge of the Law, 2 Chron. 2. 55. the Kenites are ſaid to have come of Hemath, the father of the houſe of Rechab, celebrated Jer. 35. for their abdicating of the world and worldly profits and pleaſures: If theſe were the ſame with thoſe Kenites, this might bee a reaſon of their remove from a pleaſant place to a wilderneſſe, that they might bee the more free to Divine contemplations, and not corrupted with the affluence of worldly delights. Yet Junius thinketh that they went to joine themſelves with the children of Judah in their Warres.

Joſeph. lib. 5. Bel. Iud c. 4.

Lyra.

Qu.

Iunii annotat.

Arad, by lying neare which the Wilderneſſe of Judah is deſcribed, was on the border of the land of Canaan, next unto the Idumæans and Amalekites, as it were a corner eaſt and ſouth, ſee Numb. 21.

V. 17. And Judah went with his brother Simeon, and they ſlew the Canaanites that dwelt in Zephath, &c. Simeon having holpen Judah in his lot, now is holpen by Judah in his lot: Zephath was 16 miles from Debir, the City laſt taken by Othniel. It is thought to have been a City of the Region Arad, of which ſee Numb. 21. how it was devoted to hormah, or deſtruction, which is here executed; but onely there it is ſaid, Iſrael deſtroyed them and their Cities, here onely one City is ſaid to be deſtroyed, which happily was the chiefe, and the appurtenances to it are not named.

H. B Patriarks travailes.

V. 18. Alſo Judah tooke Gaza with the coaſt thereof, and Askelon and Ekron. Theſe were Cities of the Philiſtims, about which it may be doubted how Judah is ſaid to have taken them, ſeeing Ch. 3. 3. five Lords of the Philiſtims remained unpoſſeſſed; and theſe were three of them, and alwayes after the Philiſtims continued infeſt enemies to the Jews, and unſubdued, even unto the dayes of Eli, 1 Sam. 5. Lyra anſwereth, that either it is meant, Judah took ſomething belonging to theſe three Cities, or having taken them, poſſeſſed them not, and ſo they were againe recovered by the Philiſtims. Ioſephus ſaith that Gaza and Ekron were not taken, but Askelon and Azotus, and the Septuagint Roman. edition, they poſſeſſed neither, Gaza, Askelon, Ekron, nor Azotus. But both erroneouſly; yet this laſt is true, they poſſeſſed none of theſe, although they tooke them.

Qu.

Lyra.

Ioſeph. Antiq. lib. 5. c. 2.

V. 19. And the Lord was with Iudah, and he drave out the inhabitants of the mountaines, but he could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, &c. It may ſeeme ſtrange if God were with them, that they ſhould not be able to expell any enemies; ſo that this ſeemeth to be a reaſon of no force, which is added, becauſe they had Chariots of iron: of which kind of Chariots, ſee Ioſh. 17. 16. But it is to be underſtood, that God permitted them for theſe Chariots to be timerous of them, that ſo the expelling of ſome enemies might be deferred, they being left ſtill to try the children of Iſrael, as is ſaid, Judg. 3. But why had they in the valleys Chariots of iron, more then they in the mountaines? Anſw. Becauſe theſe kind of Warlike Engines were not to be weilded, but in plain places, where they might run every way with force and great violence.

Qu.

V. 20. Here Hebron is given to Caleb, and hee expelleth the three ſonnes of Anak, ſee before, v. 10. and Joſh. 14.

V. 21. And the children of Benjamin could not expell the Jebuſites out of Jeruſalem, &c. ſee the ſame ſaid before of Iudah, Ioſh. 15. 63.

V. 22. And Ioſeph went up againſt Bethel, and the Lord was with him, &c. Bethel lay nigh unto Ai, Ioſh. 8. 9. at the taking of which the men of Bethel moſt probably fell alſo. But now it ſeemeth that it was again re-peopled, and Ephraim meant here by the houſe of Ioſeph went againſt it; for Manaſſeh another Tribe of that houſe is ſpoken of, v. 27. ſo Lyra. But as Manaſſeh, ſo Ephraim is ſpoken of ſeverally, v. 29. and therefore by Joſeph here, both together are meant.

Lyra.

V. 24. For their comming into Bethel, it is ſaid, that they found a man that came out of the City, and prayed him to ſhew them the way into it. Whereupon the Rabbins ſay, that there was no entrance in but under the ground, ſo that without a guide they could not come in: but this ſeemeth to be fabulous. It is more probable that there were many windings & turnings to come in it, ſo that the way was hard to find. This man for his kindneſſe in ſhewing them the way they ſaved, with his family, as Rahab in Jericho had been ſaved before, Joſh 6. and he went amongſt the Hittites, and built a City, calling it Luz, as the old name of Bethel is ſaid to have been, v. 23. of which ſee Gen. 28. Touching the fact of this man of Bethel, betraying his owne native Countrey, ſomething hath been ſpoken before of Rahabs, Ch. 2. which was not much unlike unto it. This may ſeem to have been an hainous thing in this man, and unnaturall, becauſe all are bound by the law of nature to ſeek the preſervation of their owne Countrey as much as they can, and therefore when any man hath been treacherous to his Countrey to betray it, hee hath been hated in all nations. Philip, or as ſome have it, Antigonus of Greece was wont to ſay, I love them greatly that are about to betray, but when they have betrayed, I hate them moſt of all. When Rhimitalces the King of the Thracians fell away from Anthony to Auguſtus the Roman Emperour, and thought therefore that he was worthy of great favour, hee ſaid likewiſe, I love prodition, but praiſe not proditors. When Camillus the Roman beſieged the Faliſti, a certaine Schoolmaſter led out the children of the Lords which he taught, into the Tents of the Romans, pretending that he went out onely to walke with them for recreation, hoping by this treachery to get a great reward; but the Romans contrariwiſe, to ſhew their hatred of this fact, delivered the Schoolmaſter bound to thoſe Boyes to be beaten with rods, and ſo ſent them back to their parents. Mahomet the Turkiſh Emperor having taken Conſtantinople by the treachery of one Gercula, to whom Paleologus the Emperor that then was ſlaine, had been very beneficiall; in hatred of ſo foule a treachery, laid cruell puniſhments upon him. And the Dolphin of France in King Johns time, vowed, that if hee attained the Crown of England, hee would kill all the Lords that had been Traytors to their own King, in bringing him in againſt him. But this man is not to be ranked amongſt ſuch; for when it is made known, that it is the will of God, that any City or Countrey ſhould bee deſtroyed, it is now no longer treachery, but piety, even for a native of that Countrey, although not to be an agent in deſtroying it, yet to further thoſe herein that are appointed to deſtroy it. And this was the caſe of all the Cities in Canaan, as was commonly known to the inhabitants.

Antigon. prodituros imprimis amo, at eoſdem cum prodiderunt maxime odi. Plutarch in Roman. apophtheg. mat.

Qu. But ſeeing this man was one of them, how could hee lawfully be diſmiſſed, when as every one of them was adjudged to the ſword? Anſw. They were not all ſo adjudged to the ſword, but that upon juſt occaſion ſome might be ſpared, as Rahab was, and the Gibeonites alſo. But herein was the difference betwixt them and this man, they were ſpared, and lived amongſt the children of Iſrael, becauſe moſt probably they turned to the true Religion, but this man happily not being converted, was not permitted to dwell amongſt them, but ſent away into another Countrey. And they could not in way of gratitude for the good turn hee did them, but let him and his goe in ſafety. What the land of the Hittites was, to which hee went, is uncertain, but it ſeemeth to have been ſome other Countrey near, and no part of the Land of Canaan given to Iſrael.

V. 27, 28. Having ſhewed the victory of the houſe of Joſeph, now it is ſhewed in what Cities they could not prevaile, either Manaſſeh or Ephraim, v. 29. But herein ſome think that their negligence is blamed. Of theſe Cities ſee before, Joſh. 17. 11. & Joſh. 16. 10. And the like is ſaid of Zebulun, v. 30. of Aſher, v. 31. of Naphtali, v. 33. and of Dan, v. 34. touching all which it is to be held that they ſinned, in that for the love of the gaine of tribute they expelled not the Canaanites, as they were ſtraitly charged, Numb. 33. Deut. 7. ſo Lyra.

V. 34. V. 35.

Touching Dan, his condition is ſet forth as different from the reſt, the Amorites forced him into the mountaines, themſelves holding the vallies, and ſome mountaines alſo, as Heres, Aialon, and Shaalbim, which was doubtleſſe for their ſins, for otherwiſe God was able, and would have given them more power alſo againſt them. This ſtraitning of the tribe of Dan was ſpoken of before Joſh. 19. 47. which cauſed them to goe out and ſubdue other places, ſo likewiſe Judg. 18. The Septuagint for theſe three mountaines have it, ἐν τῷ ὄρει τοῦ μυρσινῶνος, οὗ αἱ ἄρκοι καὶ ἀλώπεκες where there were Beares and Foxes, ἐν τῷ μυρσινῶνι, καὶ ἐν θαλαβὶν, by Aialon underſtanding Beares, and by Shaalbim Foxes, for which yet they are no where taken, but Aialon for a wilde beaſt, called an Hart, and Shangnalim for Foxes. Heres is thought to have the name from the Sun, for the dryneſſe, as the word ſignifieth, by ſome from ſhells or potſheards. Of Aialon, ſee Joſh. 10. 12. Of Shalabim, Joſh. 19. 42. 1 King. 4. 9. This was the ſtate of the Danites, but the houſe of Ioſeph made theſe Amorites tributaries, that is, the Ephramites who bordered upon the Danites, as the Septuagint have it expreſly, And the hand of the houſe of Joſeph was heavy upon the Amorite: Hebr. there is nothing but, And the hand of Joſeph was heavie, and hee put him to tribute, it not being expreſſed who was put to tribute, whether the Amorite by the houſe of Joſeph, or the houſe of Joſeph by the Amorite, but becauſe wee read not yet of any tribe of Iſrael put to tribute, but contrariwiſe, that of the Septuagint is to bee preferred, although Lyra leaveth it doubtfull.

V. 36.

And the coaſt of the Amorites was from the going up to Akrabbim, from the rock, and upward. Of this place ſee Numb. 34. 4. it was the bound of the tribe of Judah ſouthward, unto which ſeeing the Amorite extended from Dan, it appeareth, that he was ſtill of great power, ſo that this may be taken, as added to ſhew a reaſon why Dan was ſo ſtraitned by them: The rock, Hebr. סלע is ſaid by Joſephus to have been a City of the Amalekites; by Jerome a City in the confines of the Amalekites and Philiſtims.

Ioſeph. Antiq; lib 3. c. 2 Hieron in Eſa. 42. 11.

CHAP. II.

V. 1.

AND an Angel of the Lord came from Gilgal to Bochim, and ſaid, I made you to goe up out of Egypt, &c. The ſin of the Iſraelites being ſet forth before, that they expelled not the Canaanites, but covenanted with them for tribute, now they are reproved for it, and threatned. Touching the Angel of the Lord ſaid to come unto them, the Rabbins ſay it was Phinees who is called an Angel, becauſe a meſſenger from God is ἄγγελος, an Angel, as the word ſignifieth. Chriſtian Expoſitors generally, that it was an Angel indeed; becauſe he ſpeaketh not like a Prophet, Thus ſaith the Lord, but as an Angel, I made you to goe out of Egypt, and when a Prophet is ſpoken of, he is ſo mentioned, as that it may certainly be known that ſuch an one was ſent. But why is hee ſaid then to come from Gilgal, and not rather from heaven? Junius hereupon inferreth, that it was not an Angel, but a man who is ſaid to paſſe from one place to another, as an Angel is not, and becauſe his vaniſhing away again is not ſpoken of, but the laſt of theſe reaſons is of no force, ſeeing although ſometime an Angel appearing is ſaid to vaniſh againe, as Judg. 13. 19. yet at other times not, as Joſh. 5. 13. Gen. 18. 33. Ch. 19. 22. And for that reaſon taken from his comming from Gilgal, it may well be underſtood to have been thus ſaid, becauſe hee appeared there before to Joſhua, Ch 5. when hee ſaid, that hee came as a Captain of the Lords Hoſt. Wherefore mention is here made of that place, as wherein he had before ſo graciouſly ſhewed himſelf in their aide, that their ingratitude in falling from God might the more appeare. But for the place [Bochim] to which hee now came, if it bee demanded where that was? Divers conjecture diverſly. Adrichomius ſaith, it was within the lot of Benjamin neare unto Gilgal, calling it Clautomon, weeping: ſome at Shiloh, becauſe the Tabernacle was there, and Sacrifices were here offered, v. 5. but it was unlawfull to offer in any other place then where the Tabernacle was. And at Shiloh, be-

Lyra.

Qu. Junius

Qu. Adrichomius.

Junius.

cauſe of the Tabernacle the people uſed to aſſemble together three times in the yeare, ſo that the whole Aſſembly of them might here be ſpoken unto. Laſtly, others, that it was a Wood neare to Jeruſalem, where David afterwards lay hid, and a ſign being given by the moving of the tops of the trees, iſſued out againſt the Philiſtims; becauſe the Septuagint for Mulberry trees, have it πλησίον τοῦ κλαυθμῶνος, neare the place of weeping, as Bochim in Hebr. ſignifieth. And Joſephus ſaith, the High Prieſt propheſied in the Woods, which were called the place of weeping. And againſt the former opinion, that it was Shiloh, it is alledged, that Shiloh was never called Bochim after this, as it ſhould have been, if the apparition had been there, according to v. 5. yet I think it moſt probable, that Shiloh was the place for the reaſons brought before. For the reaſon objected, then the name ſhould hereupon have been changed, it is eaſily anſwered, it was enough for a part of that place where the Aſſembly was held, to bee called Bochim, although the old name of the whole in generall were retained ſtill. Lyra taking it for granted that this place was not Shiloh, draweth an argument from hence to prove, that hee was an Angel that appeared, becauſe otherwiſe it was unlawfull to have ſacrificed here; but an Angel appeared to Manoah, hee likewiſe ſacrificed in the place where hee appeared unto him. And they that ſtand for another place beſides Shiloh, hereby anſwer the reaſon brought before to prove it Shiloh, becauſe otherwiſe they could not have ſacrificed here, becauſe howſoever ordinarily they might not ſacrifice but at the place which the Lord choſe for his Tabernacle, yet in extraordinary caſes they might, as David in the threſhing floore of Araunah, 2 Sam. 24. and Elias, 1 King. 18. But to theſe places alledged it may bee ſaid, that Manoah and David had ſpeciall direction, and Elijah was a Prophet inſpired, but here without any ſuch direction they offered ſacrifices, which implyeth, that it was done in the ordinary place.

2 Sam. 5. 23.

Ioſeph. Antiq. lib. 7. c. 4.

Lyra.

Judg. 13.

Toſtatus, Tornielius, Sallianus, Iunius. Auguſt. qu. 12. in Iud. Procopius, Cajetan.

For the time when this Angel appeared, there is alſo a difference, ſome thinking that it was before Joſhua his death, becauſe v. 6. Joſhua is ſpoken of as diſmiſſing the people from this Aſſembly, and then dying. Others, after his death, becauſe the people are ſaid to have ſerved the Lord all the dayes of Joſhua, and of the Elders that over-lived Joſhua, v. 7. but this reprehenſion of them by the Angel was after their falling away, when they had made Leagues with the inhabitants of the Land, and ſuffered their Idolls and Altars to ſtand, which was, when for tribute they ſuffered them to live, Ch. 1. It cannot bee, that during Joſhua his life any ſuch thing ſhould be tolerated, or if againſt his will it had been done, hee would doubtleſſe have reproved them for it in his laſt ſpeeches, Joſh. 23 and 24. Moreover, Joſhua was by the Lord called off from warring any more with the enemy, to divide the Land, Joſh. 13. 1. 7. and ſo there was an intermiſſion of Warre the reſt of his dayes; wherefore the Conqueſts made after, and putting of ſome to tribute, muſt needs be after his death, when the Iſraelites were more multiplyed, and this apparition was after that. And thus much is expreſſed, Judg. 1. 1. where it is ſaid, After the death of Joſhua, &c. As for Joſhua his dying mentioned after this, it is done, ſaith Auguſtine, by recapitulation, to begin the Story from the firſt, and in the book of Joſhua, their putting of the Canaanites to tribute, is mentioned by pre-occupation. It ſeemeth plainly to be a repetition of that, Joſh. 24. 28, 29, 30. where it is ſpoken to the ſame effect, as if it had been ſaid, becauſe v. 3. the Angel threatened, that the enemies left by their negligence, ſhould bee as thornes in their ſides; and their Gods ſuffered to remain, as ſnares unto them.

Auguſt. qu. 13. in Iudic.

Lyra.

I will now ſhew from the beginning the order of theſe things fulfilled. Firſt, they were diſmiſſed by Joſhua after a Covenant made to their inheritances, and poſſeſſed them, and in this good caſe they ſtood all his dayes, and of the Elders overliving him, becauſe they yet ſerved the Lord, and were not inſnared by Idolls; but after this iniquity began to work upon the ground laid in ſparing the Canaanites, &c.

V. 2. Touching Gods prohibiting them to make Covenants with them, and command to throw down their Altars, the tranſgreſſing againſt which they are here charged with, ſee Exod. 23. 32, 33. Exod. 34. 12, 15, 16. Deut. 7. 2, 3. Joſh. 23. 12. alſo Exod. 23. 24. & 34. 13. Deut. 7. 25.

V. 3. Wherefore I ſaid, I will not drive them out from before you, but they ſhall be thornes in your ſides, and their Gods ſhall be a ſnare unto you; to this effect it was ſaid, Joſh. 23.13. to which this hath reference.

V. 4, 5. Theſe things being ſpoken by the Angel, the people wept, and hence the place was called Bochim, weeping; ſo that it was called ſo before by anticipation, becauſe, as Auguſtine hath it, this Book was written after this thing done, and this name upon that place impoſed. and they ſacrificed there unto the Lord. They wept, ſaith Ferus, out of compunction for their ſins, and ſacrificed, to ſhew their faith in Chriſt, that was to come, who was figured out in thoſe ſacrifices, ſo that here were two things required in true repentance, but the third, viz. the workes of faith, was wanting, and thus their repentance was fruſtrated, becauſe that after this they amended not their lives. Wherefore wee muſt learn to doe all three, that God may forgive us. Sacrificing was ſometime by peace-offerings in way of thankfulneſſe for benefits received, and ſometime by ſin-offerings for the expiating thereof, and of this kind their ſacrifices at this time doubtleſſe were.

Auguſtine.

Ferus.

V. 6, 7, 8, 9. Joſhua his diſmiſſing of the people is repeated from Joſh. 24.28. and his dying and being buryed, and the peoples perſevering in the ſervice of God, &c. of all which enough upon that place.

V. 10. And there aroſe another generation, which knew not the Lord, nor the workes that he had done for Iſrael. Here is ſet downe the Originall of all the evills that followed, related in this Book, godly men were taken away, and an ignorant generation remained: intimating how neceſſary godly Governours and Paſtors are for the people; when ſuch fail, godlineſſe, and the knowledge of God faileth in the land, and all things tend to ruine. They are ſaid not to have known the Lord, becauſe they had not ſeen thoſe famous and wonderful works wch he did in former times, ſo Auguſtine; and for the relation made hereof either they beleeved it not, or were unaffected herewith, ſo that they knew not the Lord to be better and more worthy to be ſerved then the Gods of the Heathen.

Note.

Auguſt. qu. 15.

V. 11, 12. And hereupon they did evill, and ſerved other Gods, for which they were given over to divers oppreſſions by their enemies, but then God in mercy raiſed them up Judges to deliver them, and the Judge being dead, they ſinned in like manner againe, which is the ſumme of all the relations following in this Book. Wherefore it is to bee underſtood that what is here ſaid to v. 20. is the generall ſumme, after which follow the particulars in the reſidue of this book.

V. 13. They ſerved Baal and Aſhteroth. Baal ſignifieth a Lord, and was the common name of the chief God amongſt the Heathen, who was Jupiter Belus, being ſet forth in divers Countreys with divers additions; and Baalim in the plurall number were all other heathen Gods called that were males, and the females Aſhteroth, and when it is in the ſingular number Aſtarthe, Juno the chiefe Goddeſſe is ſet forth hereby; ſo Auguſtine, who will have Baal to be a Punick word, and ſaith, that Juno was ſet forth in the plurall number Aſhteroth, becauſe there were many images of the ſame Juno, called together Aſhteroth, or Junoes. Others think, that by Aſtarte and Aſhteroth Venus was ſet forth, the Goddeſſe of the Sidonians, as Aſhteroth is ſaid to be, 1 Kings 11. 5. 33. 2 King. 23. 13. being ſo called from Aſtron the morning Starre, in the ſimilitude whereof ſhee was worſhipped. Plutarch is doubtfull whether it be Venus or Juno. Lucianus thinketh that it was the Moon. The word עשתר, from whence Aſhteroth commeth, ſignifieth a flock of ſheep being Ewes, in ſimilitude of which this Idol was made, and worſhipped by the Sidonians, ſo Pagninus out of R. D. and Jupiter of a Ramme.

Aug. qu. 16. in Iudic.

Cicero lib. 3. de nat. Deorum. Theophilus. Plautus, Philo, Phavorinus, &c.

V. 14. And hee ſold them into the hands of their enemies: If hee ſold them, ſaith Auguſtine, what price took he for them? and anſwereth by that, Pſal. 44.12. hee toook no money for them. Wherefore he is ſaid to ſell them, when hee gave them into their hands who were wicked, and returned no thankes or Worſhip unto God as a price therefore. The Vulg. Latine hath it, they ſold them, Auguſt. qu. 17.

which

Lyra. which Lyra expoundeth of their enemies, who tooke them and ſpoiled them of their goods, and then ſold them for ſlaves, but both Hebrew and Septuagint have it, hee ſold them, referring it to God.

V.15. The Lords hand was againſt them as hee had ſaid, and as hee had ſworne unto them. To bee againſt them, if they tranſgreſſed, hee had threatned, Levit. 26. and Deut. 28. but wee read not any where that hee ſware it, wherefore it is to be held that this was done, but not hitherto expreſſed, but the expreſſion of it reſerved to this place.

V.17. But the Lord raiſed them up Judges to deliver them, but they would not hearken to their Judges, that is, conſtantly to leave their ſinnes; for ſtill when any Judge was dead, they returned to their old wickedneſſe, v. 19. whereby is implyed, that they were contained in ſome obedience to God, whilſt the Judge lived, by whom they were delivered; but afterwards they fell away againe.

V. 20, 21. For theſe their ſinnes the anger of the Lord waxed hot againſt them, and he ſaid, I will not henceforth drive out any of the nations which Joſhua left, when hee dyed. This ſeemeth to make for that opinion, that the victories obtained, Judg. 1. and their inability to expell any more enemies out of their particular lots, and the reproofe of the Angel, Judg. 2. were before the death of Joſhua. But it hath already beene plainly proved, that all this was done after Joſhua his death; the meaning therefore is, that hee would not drive out any more of them, that were left, when Joſhua dyed, then had beene already driven out. V.22. That Iſrael might by them bee proved, &c. V.23. which hee ſaith was the end of his not driving them out, but leaving them unſubdued in Joſhua his dayes. Whereas David and Solomon afterwards brought and held them in ſubjection, it was not contrary to this threatning, for they remained even ſtill in their dayes, although as a people brought under, but ready, when they ſhould ſin againe, to be a ſcourge unto Iſrael. For their being reſerved to prove Iſrael, it is not meant, that the Lord might know, what they would doe, for hee knew all things from the beginning, but that it might appeare experimentally Lyra. to themſelves and to all men, whether they would doe good or evill by their ſtanding in a proſperous eſtate, or falling into miſery, which ſhould be a certaine proofe of their ſinning.

CHAP. III.

V. 1, 2, 3, 4. HEre firſt it is ſhewed, what enemies were left unexpelled, five Lords of the Philiſtims, all the Canaanites, the Sidonians, and Hivites of mount Lebanon, and from mount Baal Hermon, to the entring in of Hamath. And theſe are ſaid to be left to prove Iſrael, and that they might know warre. Of theſe nations, ſee before Joſh. 13. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. and the notes thereupon, and why they were not driven out as the Lord had promiſed, Ch. 2. 20, 21. they by their wickedneſſe were the cauſe hereof. Ferus. Theſe enemies, ſaith Ferus, were left to prove them, that is, that being in continuall danger of them they might feare to offend God, as upon whoſe protection they alwayes depended. And to teach them warre, that is, that they might have need to apply themſelves to military exerciſes, when their enemies ſhould infeſt them for their ſinnes, and not lye downe in ſloatgh and idleneſſe. Non fœlicitatis, ſed neceſſitatis refugium eſt diſcere bellare. Warre is not then hereby commended, it is the refuge not of felicity, but of neceſſity, to learne to warre; it were much more happy to bee ignorant of warre, and to have God for our protector, thus he. Theſe enemies then were left in their fathers times; whilſt Joſhua lived, before that they had provoked the Lord by their ſinnes for theſe reaſons, another reaſon alſo being rendred, Exod. 23. 29. leſt the land ſhould be left deſolate, and the beaſts of the field ſhould be multiplyed againſt them. And where as one reaſon here rendred is, that they might learne to warre, it appeareth, that although peace be moſt deſirable, yet for the vices that accompany it, ſloathfulneſſe, luxury and pride, warres are neceſſary, and leſt through continuall peace men ſhould grow altogether ignorant, how to proceede in warre, when they are by their enemies aſſaulted. It is true indeed, that God can protect his, although they know not how to fight, but hee will have them ſo to depend upon his protection, as to uſe the meanes of warlike preparation, whereas all the Canaanites are ſaid to be left, and Joſh. 13. 4. all the land of the Canaanites, this is not to be underſtood, as if none of them were deſtroyed, for Numb. 21. thoſe in the ſouth were rooted out, and Joſh. 9. many Canaanites more, Joſh. 12. 8. but that ſtill many of them remained in divers parts of the land, Joſh. 16. and 17. all which onely are ment here.

The Myſtery
Ferus.

Myſtically by the enemies left, underſtand our ſpirituall enemies, that yet remain, now that our Jeſus hath brought us into the land of Chriſtianity: the five ſenſes ſet forth by the five Lords of the Philiſtims, and the world, fleſh and Devill, ſet forth by the Canaanites, Sidonians, and Hivites; theſe remaine ſtill to prove us, whether wee will be drawn hereby to evill, or follow the Lord, and that the greatneſſe of our corruption might appeare, and ſo the greatneſſe of Gods mercy in delivering of us, which otherwiſe would not ſo readily have beene acknowledged. And laſtly, that wee might not live in ſecurity, which produceth many vices, as it is ſaid, Exod 23. 29. leſt the beaſts of the field multiply againſt thee, but learne and exerciſe the ſpirituall warfare, all the dayes of our lives.

V. 5, 6, 7.

The enemies that were left to prove them, being hitherto particularized, now the effect hereof through their corruption is ſhewed. They take their daughters to bee their wives, and gave them their daughters and ſerved their Gods. The beginning of their wickedneſſe was in preſuming to doe contrary to Gods expreſſe command, Deut. 7. whereby is ſhewed what horrible evils come of ſinning in any thing, that we may not preſume upon our owne ſtrength to offend in any kinde.

Note.

And they forgat the Lord and ſerved Baalim, and the groves. The vulgar Latin hath Baalim and Aſhteroth, but the word אשרות groves, and ſo the Septuagint render it alſo, where by groves underſtand the Idolls worſhipped in groves. Forget the Lord, ſaith Ferus, they could not, but becauſe they contemned his word and neglected his precepts, they are ſaid to have forgotten him: neither is it to bee thought that they ſerved other gods, but that they ſerved God with the worſhip uſed unto Idols, as when they worſhipped the golden calfe, they could not be ſo groſſe as to thinke that calfe a god, or that Aaron could make them a god, wherefore it was proclaimed, To morrow is a holy day to the Lord, implying that they exhibited that worſhip to the Lord. Hee that doth any thing then contrary to the word of God, although hee intendeth his worſhip, committeth Idolatry, and likewiſe hee that ſetteth up any other worſhip, omitting that which he hath commanded. Wherefore let us looke to it, leſt it bee objected to us, Yee have forgotten God and ſerved other gods. Thus that Fryer aiming doubtleſſe at the Popiſh worſhip by images, and at their ſuperſtitious rites.

Ferus.

V. 8.

And hee ſold them into the hand of Cuſhan-riſhathaim, King of Meſopotamia, &c. For Meſopotamia Hebr. is Aram Naharaim, and Aram alone, v. 10. which is Syria, and ſo the vulgar Latin there rendreth it. But Aram is rendred Meſopotamia, becauſe it ſtood within two rivers, as Naharaim ſignifieth. The Septuagint have Meſopotamia of Syria, for Meſopotamia was the chiefe City of Syria, and then the Metropolis of that Kingdome. Aram Naharaim ſignifyeth Syria of the Rivers, it was betweene two famous Rivers, Euphrates and Tygris, and lay farre from the land of Canaan, yet from thence God brought enemies to chaſtiſe the rebellious Iſralites, as Ferus noteth, even 400 miles. For it was not Cuſhan-riſhathaims power, that could ſubdue Iſrael, but God ſold them into his hands: wherefore God, and not man, is to be feared. Joſephus calleth this King the King of Aſſyria, but erroniouſly, and here hee placeth the hiſtory of the Levites concubine, which followed long after

Lyra

Ferus.

Math. 10. 28.

ter

Hugo Card. Lyra.

ter *Iudg.*19. They ſerved this king 8. yeares,according to the time, ſaith Hugo and Lyra,that they had ſerved idols.

V. 9. Auguſt. Bonfrerius.

And when they cried to the Lord, hee raiſed them up a deliverer, Othniel, &c.of Othniels deſcription ſee before Ch. 1.13. for deliverer,Hebr. is a Saviour; a man, ſaith Auguſtine, is called a Saviour,becauſe God ſaved them by him, and by the ſame name are other Judges afterwards alſo called. Wherefore both the Sept. and vulgar Latine, render it a Saviour. Bonfrerius, the Jeſuite, becauſe wee in our tranſlations decline this word, and put for it a deliverer, falleth very foule upon us ſaying, that theſe Novatores will make new the Scriptures and all,and inferreth that the Virgin Mary, and the Saints departed, may well be called Saviours,and Mediators alſo, without derogating from God and his Sonne Jeſus Chriſt, becauſe as theſe Iudges ſaved by the helpe of God, as ſubordinate inſtruments and meanes, ſo Ieſus being our chiefe Saviour, yet uſeth them as helpes under him to ſave the faithfull. But wee contend not ſo much for the word, but onely oppoſe that doctrine and practiſe whereby it is derogated from Chriſt, our onely Mediator, for they doe not onely thus ſtile the Saints, but pray, unto them, and aſcribe merit to them, which are incommunicable properties of our Lord onely. Wee acknowledge that preachers ſave, according to that, 1 Tim. 4.16. but as inſtruments by whoſe preaching and praying God worketh grace and ſaveth, and therefore that they are to be ſought unto, whilſt they live, but that the moſt excellent amongſt them, the very Apoſtles ſhould bee prayed unto, when they are dead, or their merits relyed upon in any part, wee doe utterly deny as being a thing, for which wee have no precept, or precedent in all the word of God, but divers paſſages to the contrary.

Qu. Ioſeph. Chal. paraphr.

But how was Othniel and other Iudges ſtirred up to be Saviours? An. Joſephus and the Chalde Paraphraſt ſay, that hee was bidden by divine oracle to goe againſt the king of Meſopotamia, and that by the Spirit coming upon him was meant the Spirit of prophecy, whereby it was revealed to him, that hee leading forth the people to this warre ſhould prevaile. Thus the Spirit is ſaid to have come upon the Prophets to prophecy, Ezek. 2. 2. c. 3. 24. c. 11. 5. &c. But I do not think, that the Spirit came upon Othniel thus onely, but to indue him with courage, wiſedome, and extraordinary force alſo to ſubdue the enemie and to governe the people aright, and to make him a ſufficient Judge over them all his dayes, for his proceedings were miraculous and extraordinary through that Spirit coming upon him, cauſing terrour in the enemies, and an awfull regard in the people of Iſrael, whereby they were kept in obedience, whilſt hee lived.

H. Bunt. patriar. travailes

The time of his being ſtirred,ſaith one,was anno mundi,2512. and 9 yeares after the death of Joſhua, his name ſignifying the God of Time, ſo that he was a type of Chriſt, that ſaved his people in the fulneſſe of time. And if ſo, then the children of Iſrael fell away ſoone after the death of Joſhua, viz. one yeare after, but a longer time hath beene already aſſigned upon Ch. 1. 1.

V. 11. Bonfrerius.

And the land had reſt 40. yeares. If this ſhould bee underſtood meerely of the time, that they lived under Othniel, after their deliverance from their 8 yeaaes ſervitude, the time would not agree with the yeares mentioned, 1 *King.*6.1. and therefore the meaning muſt bee, the land had reſt 40 yeares from the time, wherein they were firſt brought into ſervitude by Cuſhanriſhathaim, and ſo the times of their oppreſſions afterwards are to be reckoned to the yeeres of their Judges, ſee Joſh. 24.32. and Judg. 1. 1. If this ſhall ſeeme abſurd, that the land ſhould be ſaid to have had reſt 40 yeares, when as 8 of them were ſpent in ſervitudes and oppreſſions: Bonfrerius anſwereth two things, firſt that the greater number of yeares of Peace carry the name of the whole time of 40 yeares, as the time that the children of Iſrael lived in Egypt, carried the name of 430 yeares, although many of thoſe yeares were ſpent elſewhere. 2. That there is a reſt from ſinning as well as from being oppreſſed, and of this the reſt of 40 yeares may be underſtood, they reſted from entring upon the way of ſinning ſo abominably 40 yeares. But either of theſe wayes ſeem to mee to be forced, and the moſt genuine to be this;the land had reſt, till 40 yeares were expired from the death of Joſhua and the Elders that over-lived him. For before, the time, ſince their coming out of Egypt, was counted firſt by their travailes in the wilderneſſe, and then by Joſhua his time, and the time of that generation, now a new way of reckoning is ſollowed throughout the reſt of this booke, viz. by the yeares of Judges ſucceeding one another, each ones time beginning at the death of his predeceſſor, although he was not raiſed up, till many yeares after, and ſo Othniels time of 40 yeares began immediately after the death of the Elders, and becauſe when that was, is uncertaine, and ſo how long time is to be reckoned to Joſhua his government, and to the Elders overliving him, that wee might not erre in the generall, the whole ſumme of yeares from their coming out of Egypt, till Solomons beginning to builde the Temple is preciſely ſet downe, 1 King. 6. 1.

The Myſtery.
Origen
1 Cor.5.5.
V.12,13,14.
Gloſ. Ordin.
Ferus.
Lyra.
Qu.
Ferus.

Myſtically by Cuſhanriſhathaim, ſignifying their humiliation according to Origen, wee may underſtand the Devill to whom the wicked are delivered for their humiliation, when they are excommunicated, but when they are throughly humbled and cry to God, they are delivered, and injoy peace a farre longer time then they ſuffered, even for ever and ever, unleſſe they doe wickedly againe, for then they ſhall be humbled againe, as the Iſraelites were by Eglon, the king of Moab, as it followeth, v. 12, 13. &c. where it is ſaid, they did evill againe, and God ſtrengthned Eglon againſt them, and hee came with the Ammonites, and Amalekites, and poſſeſſed the City of Palme-trees, and ſmote the Iſraelites, and made them ſerve him 18 yeares. Here againe ſinne giveth power to the enemy, and ſo to the ſpirituall enemy, as the gloſſe noteth. The Moabites could doe nothing againſt Iſrael before, and Amalek was eaſily overcome by them, but the ſinnes of Iſrael now make theſe mighty to overcome them. The City of Palme-trees was Jericho, as hath beene before ſhewed, and by the City, the limits where it ſtood and that belonged to it are to be underſtood, for Jericho it remained unbuilt. The enemy came hither then ſaith Lyra, and having ſubdued thus farre, the whole Countrey yeelded and became tributary. In that God is ſaid to have ſtrengthned Eglon againſt his people, it may be demanded how hee did it, and whether the act of Eglon in oppreſſing Iſrael were juſt? To this Ferus anſwereth, that God made him his inſtrument juſtly to puniſh the Iſraelites for their ſinnes, and gave him ſtrength and courage to ſubdue them, but for ſo much as hee came againſt them, not with any ſuch intention, but in tyranny, pride and covetouſneſſe, in wrath and hatred, the fact was wicked in him, and therefore he was ſlain by one raiſed up of God, as hee deſerved. And the ſame is to be held touching Nebuchadnezzar, Senacherib, and other heathen tyrants. But how is God ſaid then to ſtrenghen him? Anſw. Not as a godly judge directly ſending him, but ſupplying him with power, courage and inſtruments of warre, and ſtriking terrour into the Iſraelites, and infatuating their counſells, and ſo occaſion being miniſtred of quarrell, he out of a milacious minde came againſt them and brought them under.

V.15.

And when the children of Iſrael cryed out to the Lord, hee raiſed them up a deliverer, Ehud the ſonne of Gera, a Benjamite, a man left-handed, &c. For Ehud the Vulgar Latin hath Ajoth, qui utraq; manu pro dextra utebatur; the Septuagint Αωδ ἀμφοτεροδέξιον Hebr. Ehud אש אטר יד ימנו renbred by the Tygurin interpreters, qui vir fuit clauſa manu dextra, becauſe אטר ſignifyeth claudere, Pſal. 69. 16. as Pagninus hath it, ſo likewiſe Amandus Polanus, Arias Montanus, Vatablus, Robertus, Stephanus, Rabbini. He was then a man whoſe right hand was ſhut up, and therefore ſaid to be left handed, as being not able to uſe the right hand with ſuch force. Elder interpreters generally follow Jeroms tranſlation, and ſome reaſon ſtifly for it, both becauſe the word אטר is uſed but once more in all the Scriptures, viz. *Pſal.*69.16. where it may be as well expounded to open, as to ſhut, and becauſe the men of Benjamin are celebrated for this, that they could uſe their left hands as their right, Judg. 20. 16. and Ehud was of that tribe, and laſtly, becauſe a man lame on his right hand was unfit for this imployment.

In that place Judg. 20. 16. the ſame phraſe is uſed, that in this place, and therefore they are doubtleſſe to bee expounded alike, Ehud was left handed, and ſo were they, but not lame on the right, as ſome ſuppoſe Ehud to have been, but yet if he had beene ſo, the miracle had been the greater. But a man left handed, is as apt and able for any ſervice, as one right handed. The phraſe ſeemeth to be an Hebraiſme, his right hand ſhut, becauſe hee uſed not that, as men commonly doe, but his left hand for it, and therefore it is rightly rendred by our Interpreters, a man left handed, whether yee expound the word to open or to ſhut, for if, to open, then he uſed it not to hold his weapon, or to fight with it. For this word, a Benjamite, Hebr. is a ſon of Jemini, but by Jemini Benjamin is meant, who had his name from Jamin a right hand, and Ben a ſon, and hereunto Ehuds fathers name Gera agreeth, ſee Gen. 46. 21. but it is to be underſtood, that he was not the immediate ſonne of Gera, for hee
H. Bunting Patria. travailes dyed too long before, but of that family, whereof hee was the father. So that
H. Bunting, in his Patriarchs travailes was wide in this, when he ſet him forth to be a man of Judah, that dwelt in Jericho, and lame on his right hand. But for his being lame on his right hand, Ferus alſo ſtandeth, ſaying that the power of God herein appeared in delivering them by ſuch an infirme inſtrument, but becauſe the ſame is ſaid of 700 of Benjamin, Judg. 20. 16. who, it is not probable, were all lame on their right hand, this phraſe muſt needs have another expoſition, as before.

V. 16. By Ehud the Iſraelites ſent a gift unto Eglon, and he prepared him a dagger, which he girded to his right ſide under his looſe garment, & herewith, after the the preſent delivered, having obtained privacy with him hee ſtabd him into the belly, and ſlew him &c. If it be doubted, whether Ehuds fact herein be juſtifiable, becauſe Eg*lon* now was his Lord, and every ſoule muſt be ſubject to the higher Ferus. powers; To this Ferus anſwereth well, that for any ſubject of his owne private motion to riſe up againſt his King, although a tyrant, is a great ſinne, but Ehud was ſtirred up by God, as Jehu was afterwards, & therefore is not to be condemned, but commended: this example then is not in any caſe to be imitated, but when God likewiſe giveth authority. St. Auguſtine queſtioneth, whether Auguſt Qu. 21. Ehud did not lye, when to cauſe him to put all men forth, he ſaid, that hee had a ſecret word unto him, but yet ſaid nothing but ſtab'd him? and anſwereth that by word in the Hebrew Phraſe, an act may alſo be underſtood, as is uſuall in many places, and to doe this act God ſtirred him up, wherefore he ſaid, that hee had a word from God unto him. Lyra ſaith that he cannot bee excuſed from lying, but it was an officious, not a pernicious lye, becauſe it tended to the killing of a tyrant, which was commendable, but not his lying.
The place where this was done was about Jericho, where the king of Moab kept his court, as is intimated in v. 19. where he is ſaid to have returned from the Ferus. quarries at Gilgal, which was neare unto Iericho, Joſh. 5. The word is הפסילים and is rendred by the Sept. and in the Vulgar Latin, idols in Gilgal, and Feru ſaith, that ſeeing the idols ſet up there by the king of Moab, it being a place of great eſteeme in divers reſpects, his zeale ſo wrought with him, that hee returned and killed the king. But it is plaine, that E*hud* prepared to doe this before, and therefore was not hereby moved. Moreover the word פסל ſignifieth to carve wood or ſtone, and although פסלים ſometimes ſignifieth carved images, yet it may alſo be taken for any hewed or carved ſtones, and for the places where this is done, as Pagninus ſheweth, and Junius rendreth it, Lapicidinis, Arias Montanus, dolaturis. But becauſe the word is commonly put for images, I thinke the Vulgar Latin of Jerom is herein to be preferred.

Ehud accompanyed thoſe, that came with him to bring the preſent thus farre, that they might be out of danger, and then returned to doe that which God by his ſpirit had moved him unto. And happily he made a ſhew, as if he had beene at Gilgal to worſhip before the kings idols ſet up there, & had ſomething touching the king revealed unto him, that he might the better get an opportunity of being alone with him. Howſoever, his plot tooke effect, for the king cauſed all men

V. 20. men to goe out, and then Ehud told him, that hee had a word unto him from God, at which hee aroſe out of his chaire, and Ehud ſtabd him not being aware of it. The Inſtrument wherewith is ſaid to have beene a dagger with two edges, a cubit long, v. 16. the Vulgar Latin, Qui fecit tibi gladium ancipitem habentem in medio capulum longitudine palmæ manus, but although the word חרב here uſed, ſignifieth a ſword or a dagger, yet theſe words, habentem in medio Capulum, are neither in the Hebr. Sept. or Chald. and the word גמר ſignifieth not the palme of an hand, but a cubit, as reaſon alſo evinceth that this muſt needs be the length of it, that it might pierce through his fat belly, and if it had beene but as long as the palme of a mans hand, hee ſhould not have needed to hang it by his ſide, but in his pocket. The word rendred here from God, is plurall, from the gods, ſo that it may be applied, as before, to Eglons idols, that hee had ſet up in Gilgal, which was a great indignity, becauſe there the arke had remained divers yeares, circumciſion was made, and the firſt paſſeover was kept, Joſh. 5. but the plurall word אלוהים is alſo put commonly for the true God. Eglons riſing up when he heard of a meſſage from God, ſhewed his reverence, which was a thing commendable in him, if it were to the true God: So Conſtantine the great, alwayes ſtood up to heare the word of God; and Carolus Borromeus, is ſaid to have read it alwayes kneeling, as Joſhua fell upon his face to heare the Lord ſpeaking to him. Ioſh. 5, 14. The dagger being thruſt into the belly of Eglon, the haft went in alſo, and was cloſed ſo faſt in his fat, that Ehud could not plucke it out, that is, without delaying the time to labour about it, which was not neceſſary, and might have beene dangerous to him: and therefore he left it ſticking there ſtill, and the dirt came out, that is, his dung, as the word properly ſignifieth.

V. 23. Ehud having diſpatcht the King, haſtneth out by the porch, and locketh the doore, &c. The Hebr. word המסדרונה here uſed cometh of סדר ordo, and is expounded by Pagninus, a gallery, where they ſat, that attended upon the king, amongſt whom hee came forth, as having done nothing amiſſe, and ſo paſſed away, that the Courtiers might have no ſuſpition of him, ſo Cajetan, Arias Montanus, R. David. Cajetan. Arias Montan. The Vulgar Latin hath it, by a back doore, but herein ſaith Lyra, Lyra it is corrupted, and it is not likely by that which followeth that hee went out by a back doore, becauſe the Kings ſervants came by and by to the doore, and finding it locked, ſuſpected, that the king did his eaſement in his Summer Parlour, whereas if they had not ſeene Ehud come forth, they would not yet have dared to offer to enter in againe, or finding the doore faſt, they would rather have thought, that the King had not done talking yet in private with Ehud. V. 26. Whilſt they delay the time about the parlour doore, Ehud came againe to the place of the Idols, and from thence to Seirath: where this place was, it is not particularly knowne, but all agree, that it was in the tribe of Ephraim, not farre off, from whence hee might ſoone call ſome company together to ſurpriſe the Moabites, having now loſt their head; which he did, and tooke the foords of Jordan, that the Moabites about Jericho might not be ſuffered to paſſe that way into their owne countrey, and ſo 10000 of them were ſlaine; For v. 27. V. 27. hee blew the trumpet in mount Ephraim, the men of Moab, V. 29. ſlaine at this time, are ſaid all to have beene luſty men and men of valour, Hebr כל־שמן all fat, ſo likewiſe the Sept. but fat is put for luſty or wealthy.

V. 30. So Moab was brought downe, and the land had reſt 80. yeares, that is reckning from the death of Othniel, the firſt Judge, the time of their ſinning, being oppreſſed 18 yeares, and living under Ehud, and Shamgar, the third Judge, being all put together, for unto Shamgar no yeares are reckoned, neither were they brought in ſubjection to any betwixt Ehud and him.

V. 31. After him was Shamgar, the Sonne of Anath, which ſlew of the Philiſtims 600. men with an oxe goad &c. It is doubted by many, whether hee were a Judge or a private perſon, ſtirred up to doe one act onely againſt the enemy, becauſe hee hath no time aſſigned him, as all other Judges have; 2. becauſe Ch. 4. 1. Ehud is ſpoken of, as unto whom Deborah was next; 3. becauſe Euſebius

Euſeb. in chronico.

Joſephus.

Lyra.

omitteth him, and ſo doth Clem. Alexand. Iſidor, and Beda. But hee was certainly a Judge, becauſe he is ſaid to have beene after Ehud, and to have ſaved Iſrael, as was ſaid of him and Othniel. Wherefore Joſephus ſaith, he was choſen Emperour next after Ehud, who dyed in the 80. yeare before ſpoken of, and Shamgar ſucceeding him, lived but to fulfill that yeare, and if ſo, it is no marvaile, that his time was not counted, and that by and by it is ſaid, the children of Iſrael ſinned againe after the death of Ehud, and for the ſhortneſſe of his time hee was omitted by Euſebius and others. Touching his exploit, which was ſo wonderfull, for oxe goad, the Vulgar Latine, and Sept. have, cum vomere boum; Auguſt. following a corrupt copie readeth it, præter vitulos boum, whereupon hee moveth a needeleſſe queſtion, whether hee killed their cattell alſo: The Hebrew word is מלמד comming of למד to learn, wherefore it is taken for an oxe goad, becauſe hereby the husband-man learneth his oxen to worke, ſo R. David, Pagninus, Junius, &c. and Lyra ſaith, for vomer, Hebr. is an oxe goad of which hee thinketh, that he made a ſpeare, and others did likewiſe, and ſo together they ſlew herewith 600 Philiſtims, ſo that by an oxe goad in the ſingular number hee thinketh oxe goads are to bee underſtood, becauſe it is improbable, that one man with one of them ſhould ſlay ſo many. But this were to extenuate the miracle, as if when Samſon is ſaid with the jaw-bone of an Aſſe to have ſlain 1000. men, to make it the more probable, it ſhould be feigned, that hee and others with many jaw-bones did it. Shamgar is rather therefore hereby ſet forth, as an extraordinary Champion inabled by God to make this great ſlaughter with ſuch a poore inſtrument, if it were an oxe goad or a plow ſhare, for the word is no where elſe uſed, whereby wee may have ſome light, how beſt to underſtand it, and the authority of the Sept. is very great. I ſhould think, that Ehud being dead, the Philiſtims began now in troopes to come and rob the Iſraelites, intending happily, after ſome miſchiefe done to the neareſt, to raiſe a greater power, and to invade the land to ſubdue it. But Shamgar, a plaine man being the firſt that they lighted upon, being with his oxen at plough or cart, the Spirit of God comming upon him, went againſt them, ſnatching up his coulter, or having nothing in his hand but his oxe goad, went with it againſt them, and made this great ſlaughter of them, and ſo was taken for their Judge and deliverer, becauſe the Philiſtims were hereby ſo quelled, that they durſt not aſſault them any more. There is no neede hereupon, ſaith Ferus, of any great preparation for warre to thoſe, that ſerve God, any weak inſtrument will ſerve the turne, as for David a ſling, and for Samſon the jawbone of an Aſſe, but to the wicked high walls, as thoſe of Jericho, are of no force.

Myſtery.
Ferus.
Origen.

By Ehud myſtically Ferus underſtandeth Chriſt, who firſt ſubdueth the Devill, and then calleth his forth to fight againſt ſpirituall wickedneſſes. Origen by him killing with the ſword, underſtandeth the eccleſiaſticall Judge killing with the ſword of diſcipline and ſeverity of correction; by Shamgar killing with a plough Share, the Miniſter deſtroying ſinne by preaching, as by the ſpirituall plough, in plainly ſetting forth the doctrine of the word. So that by theſe two is ſhewed, that ſeverity and ſharpe puniſhments are not alwayes to bee uſed, but ſometimes, and ſometime preaching without this rigour hath the ſame effect.

CHAP. IIII.

V. 1, 2, 3.

HEre is ſhewed, how the Iſraelites ſinning againe they were brought under by Iabin King of Canaan 20. yeares, hee raigned in Hazor, and the Captaine of his Hoaſt was Siſera, who dwelt in Haroſheth of the Gentiles, and had 900 Charriots of Iron. All their former oppreſſions by the Meſopotamians, and Moabites did them no good any longer then Ehud lived, and ſeeing the Philiſtims alſo ſubdued by Shamgar, they thought themſelves ſafe from all Enemies, and now having enjoyed 80. yeares of peace, they abuſe this great mercy, turning it into an occaſion of renewing their idolatry. But another Jabin, King of Hazor, of the race happily of that Jabin, Joſh. 11.1. whom Joſhua ſlew and burnt his City, v. 10. who therefore might not ſeeme formidable to them, now ſubdueth them, and that longer then any enemy before, even 20 yeares; and God is ſaid to have ſold them into his hand: whereby Ferus noteth, that their miſerable caſe is intimated, that they were uſed like beaſts, which are bought and ſold, to carry burthens, and are preſſed intolerably. And it is not likely, that it could be otherwiſe conſidering his great power, and inveterate malice, that muſt needs bee in him and his people, remembring how cruelly in times paſt the Iſraelites had deſtroyed their King, city and people; wherefore to expreſſe this, it is added, hee mightily oppreſſed them. Thus far ſome enemies before ſubdued and made contemptible, are made ſtrong againſt their conquerers, and ſubdue them, and make them ſlaves, then which nothing can be more grievous. Some referre this, He dwelt in Haroſheth, to Jabin and not to Siſera, becauſe Hazor was burnt downe to the ground; but who knoweth not, that it might long before this be built againe, it being ſince that time above 120 yeares? And in that he is ſaid to have reigned in Hazor, it is plainly intimated that he dwelt there, but his Captaine for the defence of his Kingdome, in Haroſheth, a place happily more convenient to iſſue from againſt the enemy. Haroſheth of the Gentiles was ſo called, becauſe people of divers nations dwelt there, ſo Lyra, ſee the like, Joſh. 12.23.

Ferus.

Note.

Theodoret.

Joſh.11.10.

Lyra.

V. 4.

R.Solomon.

Now Deborah a Prophetеſſe, the wife of Lapidoth, judged Iſrael at that time, &c. For theſe words, the wife of Lapidoth, Rab. Solomon, hath it, a woman of lights, becauſe ſhee either made lights for the Temple, or was full of heavenly light by the Spirit, taking the word Lapidoth appellatively, and not properly, and the word אישה here uſed for a woman, and not for a wife, and thus many other Rabbins after him of latter times. But both the Sept. and Jerom render it, the wife of Lapidoth, and R. David, and other Rabbins of old, and the Fathers generally. But it is queſtioned, who this Lapidoth was, and whether ſhee were his wife at this time? Some hold that Lapidoth was Barak, of whom it is ſpoken immediately after. But their divers dwelling ſheweth the contrary, hers in Mount Ephraim, and his in Nephtali, and if Barak had beene hee, the name Lapidoth would ſometime have beene uſed againe after this, and not Barak onely. To the next ſome ſay that her husband was dead, and ſhee was now a widow: But Jerom ſaith that they teach unskilfully, that ſay ſhee was a widow, becauſe ſhee is called the wife of Lapidoth, intimating that ſhee was then a wife, which is moſt probable; and Ferus hereupon noteth not onely that the ſex of the woman is in Gods favour as well as the mans, but the marryed, as well as the ſingle, ſeeing the ſpirit of propheſie was given to a marryed woman. But how is ſhee ſaid to have judged Iſrael? Anſw. Not as other Iudges, giving ſentence in publike places, and providing for the execution thereof, for ſo ſhee could not, whilſt they were under Jabin, ſeeing hee being ſo bitter an enemy would never have permitted that, for feare of rebellion, when they ſhould have aſſembled together to her judgement ſeat, but ſhee judged Iſrael, that is, delivered Iſrael at that time, the manner whereof here followeth, ſhee by the ſpirit of propheſie ſtirred up Barak to gather an army, and went with him, and ſo the Canaanites were deſtroyed, and Iſrael delivered.

R. David.
Hugo de ſancto Victore.

Ambroſi de viduis.
Hieronym. ad Furiam de viduitate.
Ferus.

V. 5.

And ſhee dwelt under the Palme tree of Deborah, betweene Ramah and Bethel, in Mount Ephraim, and the children of Iſrael came up to her for judgement. The word rendred dwelt, ſignifieth either dwelt, or ſat, the latter of which is followed by the Sept. and Jerom, and it ſeemeth beſt, becauſe Judges uſed to ſit to heare and judge of cauſes; and a ſetled dwelling could not ſo well be under a tree, but there ſhee might ſit in the fields and bee reſorted to for judgement more ſecretly, which could not bee without danger in a City in thoſe dayes, when they were ſervants to a ſtranger, that tyranniſed over them, or being indued with the ſpirit of propheſie, the fame whereof was ſoone ſpread amongſt the children of Iſrael, they hoping now to have reliefe by her in this their miſery came to her by ſtealth, as they might, to the tree, where ſhee for a time had taken up her abode to be directed what to doe, that Gods favour might bee reſtored unto them, and they delivered from this grievous oppreſſion. And this was done in Mount Ephraim, that is, ſome one mountaine in that tribe, the lot whereof was all mountainous. Of the Mountaine Ephraim, and Ehuds blowing the trumpet there, ſee alſo before, Judg. 3. 7.

The palme-tree was called the palme-tree of Deborah, becauſe ſhee ſo famous a woman aboad there to judge the people. From hence ſhee ſent for Barak, V. 6. the ſonne of Abinoam, out of Kedeſh Naphtali, and ſtirred him up to take 10000 men out of Naphtali and Zebulun, and to goe to Mount Tabor, &c. Kedeſh
H. B Patriarks travailes. Naphtali was 84. miles from this palme tree, and in the tribe of Naphtali ſtood Hazor, the chiefe City of Jabin, wherefore a Naphtalite is ſtirred up against him, where hee moſt oppreſſed. Zebulun is joyned with Naphtali, becauſe that tribe lay next to him. From Kedeſh Naphtali to Tabor, to which place hee muſt goe with his men, was 36. miles; this was a fruitfull hill in the north upon the borders of Iſſachar and Zebulun, extending it ſelfe to the river Kiſhon on the ſouth: here Chriſt was transfigured, Math. 17. As there was a Kedeſh in Naphtali, ſo there was a City of the ſame name in Iſſachar, 1 Chro. 6. and another in Judah, Joſh. 13. 15. and therefore to diſtinguiſh this from them it is called Kedeſh Naphtali; Jerom ſaith it was in Hieron. in Lo. Hebr. the upper Galilee, being in his time called Cidiſſum. Touching Barak wee finde no more, but that he was of this tribe, and the Sonne of Abinoam, although Ambroſe thinketh him to have beene the ſonne of Deborah, but wihout all ground or probability, and therefore Jerom ſaith, that ſic inſcite opinatur.

V. 8. Barak ſaith to Deborah, if thou wilt goe up with me, I will goe up, but if thou wilt not, I will not goe up. It may bee doubted here, whether Barak ſinned not by timerouſneſſe and unbeleife, ſeeing Deborah ſpake not to him in her owne name, but in the name of the Lord God of Iſrael, v. 6. Ferus bringeth Ferus. divers things to excuſe him at the firſt, then taketh away theſe excuſes, and laſtly commendeth his faith. For firſt it was a woman, that ſpake unto him, which ſex is variable and inconſtant. 2. Shee confirmed him not by ſhewing any miracle. 3. The thing commanded him ſeemed to be impoſſible. To all which hee anſwereth, that ſhee was known to be a propheteſſe, which was not at the firſt without ſome miracles, whereby ſhee was inaugurated to that office, and therefore hee ſhould preſently have obeyed, ſhee ſpeaking to him from the Lord: and as for the impoſſibility pretended, hee could not bee ignorant, that God had given as great overthrowes, to as mighty enemies before, when his people cryed unto him.
Therefore, ſaith hee, it was not out of diffidence or timerouſneſſe, that hee anſwered her thus, but becauſe ſhee had the ſpirit of propheſie, and it ſeemed neceſſary to him, that ſhe ſhould goe along with him, ſtill more to confirme his faith by her preſence in ſo dangerous an expedition. 2. That ſhe might in all things direct him, that he might not erre, but goe according to the word of God by which hee onely is deſired to bee guided, for this time and manner of the fight. 3. That by her preſence the more authority might be purchaſed unto him, that no man might thinke that hee attempted the great worke of his owne head, but by direction from the Lord. And therefore he is commended, Heb. 11. 32. for his faith. Thus he. But Barak cannot bee excuſed from all fault, ſeeing hee was for this threatned by Deborah, that this expedition ſhould not bee for his honour, yet his fault was not great, and his faith was ſo great, that it was not imputed unto him.
Hee denyed not to goe, as hee was commanded, but hee deſired to have Deborah along with him for his further direction, and to move her to this onely, hee ſaid, I will not goe, unleſſe thou goeſt with mee. To expreſſe this the Sept. have this clauſe, which the Hebr. text hath not, ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα τὴν ἡμέραν ἐν ᾗ εὐοδοῖ κύριος τὸν ἄγγελον μετ᾽ ἐμοῦ, becauſe I knew not the day, that the Lord will ſend his Angell with mee. And anſwerabl eto this, it is ſaid v. 14. This is the day, &c.

V. 9. God ſhall ſell Siſera into the hands of a woman: how this is meant ſee v. 12. this woman was J*ael*, who killed him, although ſome thinke it was Deborah, under whom the victory was obtained.

V. 10. Barak having Deborah with him, cometh to K*edeſh*, and calleth together 10000. men, as hee was directed, and marcheth on with them: a poore company, as Ferus noteth, and that out of two of the meaneſt tribes, in compariſon of the army with Siſera, which conſiſted, as J*oſephus* hath it, of 100000 foot, and 10000. horſe, beſides 900 Chariots of iron. What could others thinke of this, but as of a raſh attempt, rather to provoke the enemy to tyrannize more, then to ſubdue him? but Barak truſted in the word of God and prevailed.

V. 11. Before any thing more ſet downe touchig Barak, to prepare to the Hiſtory of Jaels exploit, the wife of Heber, which followeth v. 18. ſomething is here interpoſed touching him; hee had ſevered himſelfe from the K*enites*, of whom hee was one, and pitched his tent in the plaine of Zanaim, neare K*edeſh*. This is ſet downe becauſe Ch. 16. the K*enites*, that came of Hobab Moſes his Father in Law, are ſaid to have gone and dwelt in the wilderneſſe of Judah, that it might not ſeeme ſtrange, that one of them dwelt here in Naphtali, at this time For after their remove from J*ericho* to J*udah*, it ſeemeth, that Heber, by a ſingular providence was ſeparated from the reſt, that his wife might doe ſuch a noble act, as this, the killing of Siſera. But ſtill he followed their orders, hee dwelt not in a towne, but abroad in a tent; ſee my notes upon Ch. 1. 16. For a plain, where he is ſaid to have pitched his tent, Hebr. is, אלון an oake, or grove, as the Sept. render it, and Pagninus, Cajetan, and others; and it is moſt likely, that it was a ſolitary place, and ſo fit for contemplation, amongſt the trees, in which kinde of places the K*enites* choſe to dwell; and here Siſera might well thinke to lye hid, when being overcome afterwards he fled away to ſave his life. Iunius. J*unius* alſo rendereth it, quercetum. Sanaim, is alſo called Saananim, J*oſh.* 19 33. being placed in the tribe of Naphtali, and ſo it is in the margin. V. 12, 13. Barak being come to Tabor, Siſera cometh out againſt him with a mighty army, and his 900 chariots of iron. Tabor was an high hill, and round, ſituated upon the borders of Iſſachar and Z*abulon*, from whence they might ſee afarre off. Adrichomius. It was 30. furlongs high, ſaith Adrichomius, and had upon the top of it a plaine, 26 furlongs over, being unacceſſible on the north; and it was a moſt fit place for Barak to gather his men unto, as being neare the tribes, out of which, and not far from Haraſheth, ſo that Siſera could not but ſoone heare of them. It hath the name from Bor, ſignifying purity and ſerenity, and Adrichomius accordingly deſcribeth it to bee moſt delightfull for the ſweet aire, trees, fruits, flowers and all varieties of delights. V. 14, 15, 16 When Siſera was come, Deborah incourageth Barak, telling him, that was the day, and that the Lord was gone out before him; whereupon hee deſcendeth with his men from the mount, and diſcomfiteth all Siſera his army: &c. Lyra. For this word, diſcomfited them, the Vulgar Latin hath, terrified them, and this ſaith Lyra after J*oſephus*, was done as J*oſh.* 10. 10. by thunder and haileſtones caſt downe from heaven, which deſtroyed them, and 1 Sam. 7. 10. for in both theſe places the ſame word יהם is uſed, that in this place in our tranſlation is rendred alwayes, diſcomfited, in the Vulgar Latin terrified. How God diſcomfited Siſera, is not here expreſſed, and therefore is uncertaine, whether by thunder and haile, or by cauſing a noiſe to be heard, as afterward by the Aramites. But ſomething was certainly done from heaven, as appeareth, Ch. 5. 20. whereby the enemies were put to flight, and many of them for feare run into the river K*iſhon*, and were drowned, as v. 21. V. 17, 18. And the ſlaughter was ſo generall, that not one of them eſcaped, ſaving Siſera, who fled on foot to the tent of Heber, whoſe wife Iael kindely invited him to come in; for there was peace betwixt Iabin and Heber, &c. Here a queſtion may bee moved, whether Jaels fact in killing Siſera, may bee juſtified, or not; both becauſe there was a league betwixt her husband and Iabin, and their houſes, and ſhee promiſed him a ſecure being there, ſo that her dealing ſeemeth to bee moſt perfidious and worthy to bee condemned, Lyra. as being againſt the law of nature, and of all nations. To this Lyra anſwereth, that yet it is certaine, that Jael herein did well, becauſe ſhee is commended by Deborah a propheteſſe, Ch. 5. 24. Jabin was a tyrant, and Siſera under him oppreſſed the people of God, of whom Jael was one by religion, and God did now miraculouſly ſhew, that it was his will, that hee and his Army ſhould periſh by fighting againſt him from heaven, therefore ſhee ſeeing this, did but apply her ſelfe to the will of God in doing execution upon the wicked, for which ſhe is rather to be praiſed, as doing a worke meritorious, then condemned, as ſinning herein. For the covenant objected, haply it was but peace granted to Heber her husband for tribute, and if otherwiſe, and hee had bound himſelſe by Covenant, yet the woman was not bound. Laſtly it may be thought, that as Deborah ſpake by the Spirit of Siſera falling by the hands of a woman, ſo Jael did this act againſt him by the inſtinct of the ſame Spirit. Thus he, who yet acknowledgeth, that there was fault in Iael, in that ſhee lyed and diſſembled with Siſera, as the midwifes of Egypt had done before, and Judith after; wherfore this was not commended in her, Ferus. but her love to the people of God, and deſire of their deliverance. And Ferus ſpeaketh to the ſame effect, ſaying, that God had before authorized Jael to kill Siſera, when hee ſaid, I will ſell him into the hand of a woman; ſo that it was her duty thus to doe, as having one in her power now, that God had proſcribed, and out-lawed as it were. Even as when the Emperour hath proſcribed and condemned any man to death, it is the duty of every Subject to kill him, if he can, notwithſtanding any former league. Yet hee taxeth her diſſembling alſo, but praiſeth her great faith and wonderfull love, in that againſt the timerous nature of her ſex ſhee durſt attempt ſuch a mighty man as Siſera. I hold with theſe and all other expoſitors, that Jaels fact was warrantable and laudable: but whereas lying is imputed to her, I can ſee no ground for that, ſeeing ſhe ſpake nothing falſly, but onely made a ſhew of friendſhip, and did the contrary, as one enemy in the time of warre may deale with another in policy to circuvment him. As for any former league, Ferus ſaith well, the Emperour of the whole world had diſannulled now that, and therefore ſhee was not bound hereby; The Lord having now made it known, that hee ſhould be deſtroyed, and that by a woman.

V. 20. 21. Siſera having entred the tent, lay downe and ſhee covered him, and hee asking water of her to drinke, ſhe gave him milke, as which was more apt to bring him to a ſleep, then he being faſt aſleep, ſhe tooke a naile of the tent, & an hammer and ſmote it into his temple, and ſo through to the ground. The Sept. for naile have a wooden pin, which ſerved to faſten the tent to the ground, τὸν πάσσαλον, but Joſephus calleth it σιδήρεον ἧλον, and ſuch rather it muſt needs be to pierce his skul, that it might be ſharpe enough, and it muſt be of a good length to pierce through to the ground.

V. 22, 23, 24. Siſira being thus ſlaine by Jael, Barak cometh to ſeeke him, and Jael bringeth him in, and ſheweth him his dead body: and touching Iabin the king, it is ſaid that the Iſraelites prevailed againſt him, till they had deſtroyed him. Myſtically, ſaith Ferus, hee that will overcome the Devill, ſet forth by Siſera, muſt doe it by nailes and hammer, that is, by Chriſt pierced with nailes driven with hammer, when hee was faſtened to the croſſe, and by faith in him.

CHAP. V.

HEre after the victory obtained, is ſung by Deborah and Barak a ſong of thankſgiving unto God, wherein firſt they that had obtained the victory are excited to praiſe God, and Kings and Princes to hearken to it; and Deborah exciteth herſelf to praiſe God in particular. 2. God is praiſed, and they that fought in this warre commended, the imployments of other tribes in the meane ſeaſon being commemorated from v. 4. to v. 19. 3. It is declared how God fought againſt the Canaanites, v. 19, 29. &c. 4. Jael is praiſed, v. 24. 25. 5. The mother of Siſera is derided for her vaine hopes, v. 28, 29. &c. Laſtly it is concluded with an imprecation againſt Gods enemies, and a prayer for ſuch as love him, v. 31. And this ſong, as Ferus noteth, is the third; for two were made before by Moſes, Exod. 15. and Deut. 32. and it was made as thoſe, to be learned and ſung publikely by the children of Iſrael, that it might remain as a monument of Gods merciful and miraculous dealing in confounding their moſt potent enemies to the generations to come, that they might therefore fear and ſerve the Lord, and fly to him for ſuccour in all times of miſery. And herein an example is given to us to be highly thankfull, and continually to praiſe God for great benefits and deliverances, and not for the preſent onely; and herein the Prophet and the Captaine ſhould joyne, and goe before others, the chieſe in Church and Common-wealth ſhould be chieſe in glorifying God. For even the heathen, that knew not the true God, have given praiſe to their falſe gods, in the like caſes. And this is in Hebrew in meeter. Ferus.

V. 2. Praiſe the Lord for the avenging of Iſrael: when the people willingly offered themſelves, the vulgar latin rendreth this, qui ſponte obtuliſtis animas veſtras ad periculum de Iſrael, benedicite domino. But this doth greatly differ from the Hebrew, the firſt words for revenging revenges in Iſrael, as it is in Hebr. word for word, are quite left out, and the ſpeach is turned to thoſe that fought in the battle, whereas they are ſpoken of onely, and not unto, and there is no mention of ſoules or of danger in the Hebrew; but the next words are, for the peoples willing offering themſelves. Vatablus expreſſeth this by a ſtrange paraphraſe thus, whilſt God puniſheth Iſrael for ſinne, whilſt the people doe voluntarily take armes to defend themſelves againſt their enemies, at what time God gave them ſtrength and courage, when he would deliver them, that is, in the time of affliction and of deliverance, of calamity and felicity, praiſe the Lord. For although in all things wee ought to give thankes, yet deliverance onely from miſery is here mentioned to excite to this duty. Vatablus.

V. 3. Heare (O yee Kings) give eare (O yee Princes) &c. Here Deborah by an Apoſtrophe turneth herſelfe to foraine kings, and men of greateſt might in this world, that they might not be proud of their greatneſſe and power, ſeeing how eaſily God had brought downe ſo mighty a King as Jabin, but humble themſelves therefore before him, and not deſpiſe inferiour perſons, ſeeing that when God will, a few, and they not ſo well armed, can overthrow many more, and better furniſhed. For ſuch thinke themſelves worthy to bee praiſed and magnified, and through haughtineſſe of ſpirit are furtheſt from giving praiſe to God, and therefore they are ſpecially invited to it, as the men, that ſhould be moſt forward herein. Ferus.

V. 4. V. 5. Lord when thou wenteſt out of Seir, when thou marchedſt out of the field of Edom, the earth trembled and the heavens dropped, &c. the mountaines melted, even that Sinai, &c. Deborah being about to praiſe God for the great deliverance from Jabin and Siſera, pitcheth not at the firſt upon that, but beginneth higher, hence taking occaſion to remember things done long before, thus inlarging herſelf in praiſing God, as we alſo ſhould do, recounting all his benefits, as Pſal. 103. This beginning with the Lords comming from Seir, is taken from the ſpeach of Moſes, Deut. 33. 2. The Lord came from Sinai, and roſe from Seir to them. Seir and the field of Edom were both one, about which place the children of Iſrael continued long, next before their comming to paſſe into the land of Canaan to poſſeſſe it, Deut. 2. 1. 3. Now the Lord is ſaid to goe out of the field of Edom, when he led the people forth from thence, and accompanied them with the ſigne of his preſence, then the earth trembled, that is, the inhabitants of the earth round about, the Edomites, Moabites, and Amorites, &c. as in an earth-quake, both the earth and mountaines ſhake, and in horrible tempeſts of winde and raine all men are afraid, ſo the Lord now going

Deut. 2. 4.
Numb. 22.
Exod. 15. 14. 15.

forth with his people, all were terrified, as when a generall moſt grievous tempeſt threatneth deſtruction to the whole world;to expreſſe which,this Metaphor is here uſed, *the earth trembled,the heavens dropped,the cloulds dropped water, the mountaines melted,&c.*and to expreſſe this yet more,the ſtate of Mount Sinai is added,where God appeared with ſuch terrour to give the law;ſee a like place to this, *Pſal.68.*7,8. Thus Ferus holding,that two moſt memorable apparitions of the Lord are herein pointed at;in Sinai,and in Mount Seir; by the melting of the mountaines,that the melting of the hearts of the Kings of the Amorites was meant,for they were moſt high of al others.But ſome will have al properly to be underſtood of thoſe things, that happened at the giving of the Law upon Mount Sinai, when the earth trembled, and thunder and lightening appeared, and a thicke cloud, from whence rain might come, although it be not there expreſſed, and the mountaine was all on fire, ſo that it might ſeeme even to melt with the ardent heat thereof. Lyra therefore delivereth this, as the common expoſition of our Doctors: when thou wenteſt from Seir, that is, thou lefteſt the Edomites dwelling there in their errours, not vouchſafing to give thy laws unto them, thou ſpakeſt from Mount Sinai to thy people Iſrael, being accompanied with all theſe terrible ſignes, which ſhould cauſe all men to feare and tremble before thee. But I cannot ſee, how Gods going from Seir, and marching out of the field of Edom ſhould be underſtood of his leaving the Edomites in their wickedneſſe, but of his going from thence in the Iſraelitiſh Army towards the land of Canaan, where this famous Victory was now obtained. And that paſſing of his from Edom is here begun withall, whereupon ſo much trouble followed amongſt the nations,and they were ſo miraculouſly overthrowne, as if the earth had beene moved, and the mountaines melted,becauſe another moſt notable exploit,was now done in the ſame countrey againſt the King of Canaan. Wherefore I ſubſcribe rather to Ferus, and whereas it is added at the laſt, this Sinai, I underſtand it, as if it had beene ſaid, as this Sinai, or that Sinai where the Law was given, ſo thoſe mountaines melted,the mighty Kings of Canaan, that were as mountaines, melted in their hearts, when God came neare amongſt his people.

Lyranus, Arias Montanus, Cajetanus.

V. 6. In the dayes of Shamgar, &c. in the dayes of Jael, the high wayes were unoccupied &c. Here the dangers paſt are recounted,when the people for feare of enemies, that were ready to rob and ſpoile them, durſt not goe in the uſuall wayes, but in by-pathes, that the preſent ſtate being herewith compared, might be the more extolled and God the author of it therefore. The meaning is, that although Shamgar greatly quelled the Philiſtims,enemies to the people of Iſrael, who robbed and ſpoiled them, when with an oxe goad he ſlew ſo many together, yet the Iſraelites were ſtill afraid, and durſt not travaile ſo freely for fear of being robbed, even to the time of Iael, who did execution upon Siſera,and ſo all fear of enemies was now taken away. Ferus underſtandeth it either thus, or by the high-wayes civill Ordinances, by the travailers the magiſtrates,that ſhould ſee to the keeping hereof, but then the courſe of executing juſtice ceaſed through the tyranny of the Canaanites: a deſcription truely of a very miſerable ſtate, when neither husbandmen could goe about their husbandry for feare of danger, nor magiſtrates doe juſtice betwixt one man and another: and this continued from the death of Ehud unto this fact of Jael, who, although ſhee were a woman and ſo of the weaker ſex, yet ſhewed to have the courage of a man in her in cutting off the head of that grievous oppreſſion, and therefore ſhe is named as moſt famous for this next unto Shamgar.

Lyra.

Ferus.

V. 7. The Villages ceaſed, they ceaſed in Iſrael; the Vulgar Latin for Villages hath fortes, the valiant, but the word פרזות here uſed ſignifieth an unwalled town,and the inhabitants of it, according to Pagninus,Vatablus, Arias Montanus, Tygurini Interpretes, and all others skilfull in the Hebrew, and ſo it is elſewhere rendred by Jerom himſelfe, as Eſter, 9. 19. where it is, פרזות comming of the ſame radix,and Deut.3.5.and 1 Sam.6.18.where it is פרזי.The Sept.have it οἱ κρατοῦντες, the Chald. the Cities of Townes were deſolate, which were ſeated in Iſrael, and their inhabitants were driven out and diſperſed: by this paraphraſe ſhewing

ing the meaning of the words, for then Townes ceaſe and are ſtill, when all being fled out of them into walled Cities for feare of the enemy, there is no ſtirring any more in them. Yet there may bee ſome reaſon of rendring it the valiant, becauſe to inhabit ſuch Townes doth argue valour; as Lycurgus forbad Townes to bee fenced with walls, ſaying, that valiant Citizens are walls unto them. And Ageſilaus King of the Spartans, when one asked him why Sparta was not compaſſed with walls, anſwered, pointing to his armed Men, theſe are the walls of my City. Untill I Deborah aroſe a mother in Iſrael; this is not ſpoken vauntingly by Deborah to extoll her ſelf, but to the praiſe of God, who had raiſed her up by his Spirit to excite Barak to goe againſt Siſera, the great oppreſſor of thoſe times; and ſhee calleth her ſelfe a mother, for her motherlike affection to the people to ſeeke their good. The Vulg. Latine rendreth it in the third perſon, untill that Deborah aroſe; but it is the firſt in the Hebrew.

Plutarch in Laconicis.

V. 8.

They choſe new Gods, then was Warre in the gates, &c. The Vulgar Latine, the Lord choſe new Warres, and hee overthrew the gates of the enemies. The Hebrew is יבחר אלוהים חדשים אז לחם שערים, where because it is doubtfull to whom the firſt word יבחר ſhould bee referred, whether to God, or to Iſrael, this diverſity in expounding that clauſe ariſeth; for if it bee referred to Iſrael, then it muſt bee rendred thus, he choſe, that is, Iſrael choſe new Gods, this being ſet forth as the cauſe of all their troubles; if to God, then it is thus, God choſe new, and becauſe new muſt have reference to ſomewhat, it is not amiſſe to ſupply it, as Jerome hath done, with this word Warres, God choſe new Warres, that is, when Deborah aroſe, hee tooke warres in hand, in a different manner from all the warres made before; for hee warred now by weaker meanes, a woman, that went to the battell, as the chiefe ſtay of all the reſt; and an unarmed company, without ſhield or ſword, as followeth in the next words; and a woman, a ſtranger that ſlew Siſera their great terrour. For the next clauſe, then was war in the gates, becauſe it is not expreſſed in whoſe gates, Jerome hath ſupplyed it, in the enemies gates; the Septuagint, then the Cities of the Princes made warre; and for the firſt clauſe, the Septuagint have, they choſe new Gods, ſo likewiſe the Chaldee, the Rabbins, Vatablus, &c. onely Arias Montanus amongſt new Expoſitors, and almoſt all the Ancients amongſt Chriſtian Expoſitors cleave to Jerome. By the moſt common received expoſition, the gates muſt be underſtood of Iſraels gates, and in ſaying, here warres were made, that this followed as a puniſhment upon their chooſing them new Gods, not onely their unwalled Townes, as was ſhewed before, were made deſolate; but they that were fenced with walls and gates, were not ſufficient to keep the enemy out from raging therein; the reaſon whereof followeth, there was neither ſhield nor ſpeare ſeen amongſt 40000 of Iſrael, all their weapons were by the enemies taken from them, and they were diſarmed, and ſo unable to reſiſt their violence. According to the other expoſition, the gates of Haroſheth and Hazor, and other Cities held by the Canaanites muſt bee meant, they were now expugned by the Iſraelites getting the victory, and yet theſe expugners were unarmed, they had neither ſhield nor ſpeare, ſo that the thing was the more miraculous. Whereas 40000 are ſpoken of, and yet the people going to the warre with Barak were onely 10000; Lyra ſaith well, that being at the firſt but 10000, when the victory began to fall to their ſides, their number greatly increaſed, till that they were come to 40000. Another way of expounding this, Lyra hath more forced, was there a ſhield or ſpeare ſeene when 40000 enemies were fighting in Iſrael? Ferus by theſe 40000, either underſtandeth others in Iſrael that durſt not lift up a ſpeare againſt the enemy, or bee ſeene in theſe warres, yet by the 10000 onely following Barak the enemies were deſtroyed.

Lyra.

Ferus.

St. Auguſtine reading the firſt words thus, They choſe, at barley bread, new Gods; then they expugned the Cities of the Princes, troubleth himſelfe in vaine, both in finding out a reaſon why falſe Gods ſhould bee compared to barley bread, and how it could aptly bee ſaid, Then they expugned, &c. And to the laſt hee ſaith, here is an Hyperbaton, which hee reduceth thus into order, beginning at the

Auguſt. qu. 29.

verſe before going, Inhabitants failed in Iſrael, they choſe them new Gods, till Deborah aroſe, then they expugned, &c. But all this is loſt labour, ſeeing this verſe carryeth a good ſenſe in it ſelfe, as hath been already ſhewed. And for my part, I doe in this place preferre Jeromes Tranſlation, becauſe the calamities of the people were done withall in the former verſe, at the riſing up of Deborah; ſo that here in the next place muſt come in moſt aptly, how the Lord proceeded by Deborah to worke an alteration, viz. by making a new kind of War, whereby the enemies gates, which were the ſtrongeſt places, were expugned, the people that did it being alſo unfurniſhed with ſuch weapons as were uſed in War. For the number ſpoken of, beſides that which hath been hitherto ſaid, there ſeemeth to be a better way to explaine it thus; this Victory was obtained when as there was a generall want of weapons offenſive in Iſrael, a certaine number of 40000, being put for an uncertaine of a very great Company, it being probable hereby, that the Canaanites to reigne over them the more ſecurely, had taken their weapons from them in all places, as the Philiſtims did afterwards, 1 Sam. 13. 19, 20. And if it bee taken thus, there needeth to bee no trouble about the difference of the number here ſpoken, and the number of 10000 following Barak; for not onely they, but all others generally in Iſrael are here meant, they had very great want of weapons.

V. 9. My heart is towards the Governours of the people, that offered themſelves willingly, &c. Here Deborah beginneth to praiſe the inſtruments of this victory, under God, the Governors of the people, Hebr. the Law-givers or Judges, who by right were ſuch, although at this time ſuſpended from executing their office by the tyranny of Jabin; and herein their forwardneſſe in ſpeciall is intimated, to lead forth the people to this Battail, that as hers, ſo the hearts of others might be affected towards them, and bleſſe God for them.

V. 10. Lyra. Speake ye that ride on white Aſſes, that ſit in Judgment, &c. A further deſcription of Judges, who now might ride upon white Aſſes, or Aſſes ſhining with fat, taken from the enemy, and walke upon the way ſecurely, which they could not doe before without deadly danger. And Judges are thus deſcribed, becauſe of old in Iſrael, they uſed not to ride upon Horſes, but Aſſes, as all honourable Perſons did. Judg. 10. 4. Ch. 12. 14. By theſe words following, and walke by the way, Junius will have Merchants to be underſtood, who uſed to travaile further; ſo that they alſo, and all travailers that were now delivered from dangers, are excited to ſpeake together the praiſes of God. Junius.

V. 11. They that are delivered from the noiſe of Archers, in the place of drawing water, &c. that is, as Junius alſo hath it, Boyes and Wenches that were in continuall danger of the enemies arrowes when they went to draw water. This place is very obſcure, by reaſon of the words here uſed, which may bee drawne divers wayes. Theſe words, They that are delivered, are not in the Hebrew, but ſupplyed by the Tranſlators; For Hebr. the verſe beginneth thus, מקול מחצצים בין משאבים שם יתנו being rendred word for word, from the voice of the ſhooters of arrowes, or of lightening and hailſtones in the places of drawing water, or amongſt the drawers of water, there they ſhall ſpeake, &c. The Vulgar Latine hath it, Ubi colliſi ſunt currus, & hoſtium ſuffocatus eſt exercitus, by מחצצים thoſe that ſhot and fought out of the Chariots being underſtood, but the Chariots being now overthrowne, and they caſt upon the ground maimed, and troden under the horſes feet, they uttered a moſt lamentable voice, from which voice the Iſraelites are exhorted here to fetch matter of praiſe; and by משאבים they that fell into the River Kiſhon, and were there choaked with water, being underſtood. The Septuagint joyne theſe words to the laſt word of the former verſe, thus, φθέγξαϑε φωνὴν ἀνακρουομένων ἀνὰ μέσον εὐφραινομένων, edite vocem pulſantium in medio gaudentium; but this goeth altogether from the ſignification of the words, as may bee ſeen before; and Arias Montanus hath it, a voce ſagittantium inter haurientes aquas, as having reference to שיחו ſpeake yee, being the laſt word of the former verſe. And ſo I take it to bee one continued ſentence, thus, Yee that walke by the way now ſafely, which yee could not doe before, ſpeake from the voice, or utter the voice of dividers, for ſo חצצ alſo ſignifieth, that is, of thoſe that divide the ſpoiles of the enemy, and doe this amongſt the drawers of waters, who alſo have cauſe now to rejoyce, becauſe they are out of the enemies danger in going out and comming in about this ſervice, and ſo doe this amongſt them, is as much as doe yee it, and let them utter the voice of joy alſo. It ſeemeth then to be an excitation of all, even to the drawers of water in Iſrael, which were the meaneſt of all others to praiſe God: And it is ſaid amongſt the drawers of water in particular to denote the place where this victory was gotten, even by the waters of the River Kiſhon, v. 21. There let them ſpeake of the righteous acts of the Lord, towards the inhabitants of his villages, &c. Becauſe now men might adventure to inhabit even ſuch weake places, which in times paſt they durſt not doe, ver. 7. The Vulgar Latine hath it as before, towards the valiant in Iſrael; and unto the next words, Then ſhall the people of the Lord goe downe to the gates; it addeth, and obtained principality; for further explication of what is meant by their going downe to the gates, viz. the Judges to ſit there, and judge in Iſrael, and to ſee Juſtice executed, or to goe freely in and out at the gates without feare, for buſineſſe or recreation, as Junius hath it.

Junius.

V.12. V.13.

Awake Deborah, awake, awake, utter a ſong, &c. V. 13. Then hee made him that remaineth to have dominion over the Nobles of the people, the Lord hath made mee to have dominion over the mighty. The Vulg. Latine, Salvatæ ſunt reliquiæ populi, Dominus in fortibus dimicavit. Junius, Ex quo dominium reſidui tradit magnificis in populo, Jehovah dominium mihi in fortiſſimos tradit; and by the Princes to whom the dominion was given, he underſtandeth the Iſraelites, by the reſidue, the Canaanites remaining, by the time, ſince which the time, the time that Barak carryed the Canaanites captive; by the mighty, over whom Deborah was ſet, the Iſraelites recited in the verſes following, Ephraim, Judah, Simeon, &c. The Septuagint, Then was his fortitude magnified, the people of the Lord (ô Lord) humbled before me thoſe that are mightier then I. Of all theſe Expoſitions our Tranſlation is moſt agreeable to the originall Hebrew, as expreſſing it word for word, and the meaning is, when Barak led the Canaanites captive, the people of Iſrael that remained, after ſo great oppreſſions and deſtruction of them made before by the Canaanites, which were weake and deſpicable, had the mightieſt of them in ſubjection; and Deborah in ſpeciall had them under by the Lord, who did all this. Wherefore as Hugo hath it, either the people are brought in ſtirring her up and Barak to praiſe God, or elſe ſhee exciteth her ſelfe and him, ſaying, Awake, awake, awake, three times, or, Ariſe, ariſe, ariſe, to intimate that who ſo will perfectly praiſe God, muſt doe it with heart, word, and work, or by faith, work, and perſeverance.

Junius.

Septuag.

Hugo Card.

V.14.

Ferus.

Lyra, Hugo Cardin. Toſtatus.

Out of Ephraim was there a root of them againſt Amalek, after thee Benjamin among thy people, &c. Here, ſaith Ferus, are commemorated the Tribes, out of every of which, ſome went to theſe Wars after Barak, ſo likewiſe Junius. But Lyra, Hugo, Toſtatus, and others, generally referre the firſt words here to Joſhua, who was of the tribe of Ephraim, holding them to bee a commemoration of the fight which hee had againſt the Amalekites, Exod. 17. and the next to Saul, who was of the tribe of Benjamin, taking them to bee a Propheſie of his going againſt them, which was done, 1 Sam. 15. This place is ſo obſcure, that it is moſt difficult to give the right ſenſe thereof. The Vulg. Latine hath it, Out of Ephraim deſtroyed hee them in Amalek; and after him, out of Benjamin thy people, ô Amalek: the laſt words [ô Amalek] being ſupplyed for further expreſſion. The reaſon of the firſt difference here, is, becauſe the word שָׁרְשָׁם may either ſignifie their root, or hee planted them; or the pricks being altered, thus, שֵׁרְשָׁם hee extirped, or rooted them out: And when the Scriptures were firſt written, till the dayes of the Maſoreth, who invented the pricks, it might indifferently be read either way. Wherefore if it bee read now, hee rooted them out, or deſtroyed them, as Jerome hath it, there will bee no violence done to the originall Hebrew, but a corruption onely acknowledged in the Maſoreths pointing. And then the ſenſe will bee cleare, God out of Ephraim, or ſtirring up men out of Ephraim, when the Canaanites being diſcomfited, fled ſome of them that way to Amalek, purſued and deſtroyed them there, for the word is not, againſt Amalek, but in Amalek; and Joſhua fought not before in Amalek, but with the Amalekites in the wilderneſſe; ſo that it cannot bee underſtood of that fight, Exod. 17. neither can there bee any good reaſon rendred, why that fight with the Amalekites ſhould here bee mentioned; but that the Amalekites dwelt not farre from Ephraim and Benjamin, and ſo that the Canaanites might bee chaſed by them thither, and ſlaine, it appeareth, becauſe the Kenites dwelt ſome of them amongſt the Amalekites, 1 Sam. 15. 6. and yet Judg. 1. 16. they are ſaid to have gone and dwelt in the Wilderneſſe of Judah, neare to which Ephraim and Benjamin lay. For the other words in the Vulg. Latine, I cannot ſo eaſily bee drawne to ſubſcribe unto them, for they are Hebr. word for word, Thy remainders, Benjamin, in thy people, or with thy people; the meaning being, that Benjamin, although now a ſmall tribe, not worthy therefore to bee called otherwiſe, but by the name of a remnant, did alſo helpe with his people in deſtroying the Canaanites. And then here is nothing to be underſtood but theſe words, and out of, and hee deſtroyed; For that Benjamin received that great blow remembred, Judg. 20. before this time, and ſo that a remnant onely of that tribe now remained, Junius proveth in his Notes upon that place. The Chald Paraphraſt maketh all this place plaine, according to the moſt common received ſenſe before mentioned, thus, Out of the houſe of Ephraim aroſe Joſhua the ſonne of Nun in former times, and made warre with the houſe of Amalek; and after him roſe up Saul of the houſe of Benjamin, &c. One Septuagint Tranſlation hath it, Ephraim rooted them out in Amalek, &c. The Rabbins generally follow the Chaldee, but the ſenſe already approved is beſt, and moſt agreeable to the words, and the Septuagint maketh notably for it.

Iunius.

Chald. Paraphr.

Out of Machir came Governours, and out of Zebulun they that handle the pen of the Writer. Machir was the moſt noted, if not the onely ſonne of Manaſſeh; and therefore in ſaying, out of Machir came Governours, ſhee meant, out of the halfe tribe of Manaſſeh placed in the land of Canaan, neare to mount Tabor, where the battaile was fought, came downe Princes and chiefe men to helpe in this war. The next words Hebr. are, משכים בשבט סופר word for word, drawing out, or ſuch as draw out with the Scepter, Rod, or Pen of a Scribe; and the meaning ſeemeth to bee, that as out of Manaſſeh, ſo out of Zebulun came primary men alſo, as many others (for the Army conſiſted chiefly of Zebulun and Naphtali) that led others forth, carrying in their hands the ſigne of their authority, a Scepter or a Rod; or as Junius hath it, leading them forth by Letters, which they wrote to ſummon them to come after them to this War. The Vulg. Latine hath it, Which led an Army to the Warre, not reſpecting the words, but the ſenſe onely. Ferus taketh this to bee a deſcription of Doctors of the Law, whom hee ſaith Barak had in his Army, as well as Souldiers, and by ſuch God ſubdued the Enemy. But becauſe the word שבט is moſt commonly put for a Scepter, or ſigne of Principality; the word סופר a Writer, and מחוקקים Law-givers, before uſed in this verſe, ſeem to ſet forth men of a like condition, Law-writers, or Law-makers, Princes of Families.

Ioſh. 17. 1.

Junius.

Ferus.

V. 15. The Princes of Iſſachar were with Deborah, even Iſſachar and alſo Barak, hee was ſent on foot into the valley, for the diviſions of Reuben there were great thoughts of heart. The Vulgar Latin agreeing with ours in the firſt words rendreth the next thus, and they followed the ſteps of Barak, who gave himſelfe to danger, as it were headlong and into a gulf. The Sept. and Barak, ſo Barak: in the valley hee ſent his footmen into the valley. Junius, as Iſſachar, ſo Barak, and he that was ſent into the valley at her footſteps. Hebr. And Iſſachar, ſo Barak ſent into the valley with his feet, or with his footmen, the meaning is, as Iſſachar with his Princes, ſo Barak was with Deborah, and was ſent by her downe from Tabor with his footmen into the valley againſt the Canaanites, and there fell upon them by the river Kiſhon and ſlew them. Lyra and others that follow the Vulgar Latin, expound theſe words, as ſhewing, that ſome of Iſſachar remained with Debo-

Lyra.

nah to praiſe God, and ſome went after Barak to chaſe the enemy downe the hill, with ſuch violence as if they would have caſt themſelves downe headlong into the valley and river. But here is nothing ſignifying to danger, headlong, or gulfe, but into the valley, ſo that if the words be otherwiſe placed, the neareſt that they will come to Jerom is by rendring them thus: And Iſſa-char ſo followed Barak at his feet caſt into the valley. For the next words, for the diviſions of Reuben, &c. it is moſt generally held, that here Deborah begin- Lyra, Ferus, Hugo Card.
neth to tax: thoſe tribes that did not helpe in theſe wars, and firſt Reuben hindred by diviſions amongſt the Princes aſſembled to conſult, whether they ſhould ſend aide or not, which diviſions came from their pride, and ſo no helpe ſending could bee agreed upon. And therefore by great thoughts of heart, pride is to bee underſtood, they were ſo proud, ſaith Hugo, that they ſcorned to goe with ſuch meane perſons, as they of Zabulun and Naphtali: and beſides pride and contention, Ferus taxeth them for covetuouſneſſe. But Junius con- Junius. trariwiſe rendring the words thus, magni inſtitutis animi in partibus Reubenis, ſaith, that the notable faith of Reuben, Gad and the halfe tribe of Manaſſeh on this ſide Jordan is here commended, in that they went up armed over Jordan before their brethren, ſhewing the great courage that was in their hearts, and that they are excited to acknowledge Deborah to bee ſent of God to worke this great deliverance. I ſubſcribe to the former expoſition, the words being in Hebr. In the diviſions of Reuben great thoughts of heart, that is, pride and highmindedneſſe, which was the cauſe thereof; and the next words ſhew this to be ſpoken in way of blaming Reuben, v. 16. Why abodeſt thou amongſt the V.16.
ſheepfoolds to heare the bleatings of the flocks? as if it had beene ſaid, was this time, when thy brethren were labouring to atcheive ſo great a victory, a time for thee to ſit ſtill and tend thy flocks? and of this it is ſpoken in particular, becauſe Reuben and Gad, &c. were before noted to abound with cattle; and ſo it is concluded with a repetition of the ſame, as is uſuall in ſongs, for the diviſions of Reuben there were great ſearchings of heart, the word rendred ſearchings differing but in one letter from that before rendred thoughts, for חקקי here being חקרי. Thus then the Reubenites are taxed, and in like manner the Gileadites who were of Manaſſeh, and Gad who are ſaid to have abode, or to have ſitten V.17.
ſtill alſo beyond Jordan, and of Dan, that hee remained in Ships, that is, followed his merchandize, according to the ſcituation of his countrey, and Aſher by the Sea ſhore, &c. why any thing ſhould here be ſpoken in way of commending Reuben, Gad, &c. for their valour ſhewed in times paſt, I can ſee no colour of reaſon. Aſher is not onely ſaid to abide on the ſea ſhore, but alſo to continue in his breaches, the Vulgar Latin in his havens, but the Hebrew word ſignifyeth breaches, and ſo the havens of the ſea may well be called, becauſe in them the violence of the waves is broken and determined: and his continuing here ſetteth forth his attending to his merchandize, this warre being neglected.
Here Zabulun and Naphtali are againe commended for adventuring their lives, V.18.
and the manner of the fight is deſcribed. The Kings came and fought, then fought V.19.
the Kings of Canaan, &c. whereas Zabulun and Naphtali are ſaid to have jeoparded their lives in the high places of the fields: the Vulgar Latin hath it, in regio-ne Merome, מרומי שדה in the field of Merome, if it bee taken for a proper name, if appellatively, in the high places of the field, and this is preferred both by Lyra and Hugo, and others, for there was a plaine upon the top of the hill Lyra, Hugo Cardin.
Tabor, from whence this battaile was begun, being therefore called the field of high places. The Kings of Canaan were the Kings confederated with Jabin;
theſe are ſaid to have come and fought, and tooke no gaine of money or of ſilver, that is, after the manner of thoſe, that goe to warre and conquer, they tooke not the ſpoyle of the enemy, but they themſelves were ſpoiled and deſtroyed, and their goods were made a prey to the Iſraelites, their enemy. The Vulgar Latin to expreſſe this hath it, nihil tulere prædantes. And this battaile is ſaid to have beene fought in Taanach, which was a City belonging to the Levites in the halfe tribe of Manaſſeh, Joſh. 21. 25. to which tribe alſo the City of Megiddo pertained, the waters whereof are here ſpoken of Judg. 1. 27. but that halfe tribe had both theſe Cities out of Iſſachar, Joſh. 17. 11. for Iſſachar lay next to the tribe of Zebulun, where Mount Tabor was. Here I cannot but marvaile, what Hugo meaneth to ſay that for Taanach Hebr. is Romoſbache, the high places of the field, when as it is תענך Taanach, as all read it.

Hugo Car.

V. 20.

Lyra

Hugo Cardin.

Schol.Hiſtor.
Hugo de Sancto victore.
Toſtatus.
Rupertus.

Dionyſ.Carthuſian.
Cajetan.

They fought from heaven, the ſtarres in their courſes fought againſt Siſ. Here is ſhewed, from whence this great victory came, viz. from god, who from heaven ſent lightening and haileſtones upon the enemy, but the Sun and Moone did not now ſtand ſtill, as in the dayes of Joſhua, but they and all the ſtarres went on in their courſe, wherefore it is added, the ſtarres in their courſes fought, the Vulgar Latin, the ſtarres remaining in order and in their courſe fought: So Lyra: who will not have this to be underſtood of the ſtarres fighting, but continuing in their courſe, whilſt the tempeſt coming from heaven beat downe and deſtroyed the Canaanites. But Hugo by the ſtarres underſtandeth lightenings comming from heaven againſt them, like unto ſtarres, as if they had flowne from thence upon them; or caſt out ſparklings of fire againſt them, thus alſo Petrus Comeſtor, taking it to be ſpoken hyperbolically. Hugo de Sancto Victore is for God, the ruler over the ſtarres fighting againſt them. Toſtatus ſaith, meteors are meant, which are like ſtarres called comets. Rupertus by the ſtarres underſtandeth Angels, becauſe Angels are called morning ſtarres, Iob 38. and ſtarres, Revel. 12. ſo likewiſe Gloſſa interlin. Vatablus, Mariana, and Eſthius. Dionyſius Carthuſianus ſaith, the ſtarres fought by ſtirring up tempeſts by their influences, God at this time ſpecially augmenting them for the deſtruction of the enemies, ſo likewiſe Cajetan; and this laſt I hold to be the beſt, and to intimate, that the ſtarres doe fight in their kinde, when God will have them, they are often called the hoaſt of heaven.

V. 21.

Lyra.

Hugo Cardin.

Serrarius.

Bonfrerius.

Arias Montan.

The river of Kiſhon ſwept them away, &c. they fleeing thither and thinking by ſwimming over to eſcape, were by the violence of the ſtreame carryed away and drowned: The ancient river, the Vulgar Latin and Sept. the river K*adumim*, by Lyra thought to bee another river neare to K*iſhon*. But by that, which goeth before and followeth after, it is plaine, that one and the ſame river onely is meant, and ſo Hugo, by Cadumim the red ſea is ſet forth, the word ſignifying antiquorum, becauſe of old the Egyptians were miraculouſly drowned there, it is then meant here that K*iſhon* was now become to the Canaanites, as the Red ſea to the Egyptians, becauſe hereby they were ſwept away. Serrarius thinketh, that the more eaſterly part of the river K*iſhon* was called Cadumim, becauſe Chedem ſignifyeth the eaſt. Bonfrerius, becauſe קדם ſignifyeth praeoccupare, that it was called the river Cadumim, for preventing and carrying away the Canaanites, that thought to ſwimme over it: Arias Montanus, the river of antiquity, becauſe it was of old ordained of God, that the Canaanites ſhould bee drowned here: of all theſe I like that beſt, which holding this to bee another name of the river K*iſhon* or of ſome part of it, deriveth it from the eaſt, becauſe it muſt bee a name not now firſt impoſed, but whereby it was alſo known long before this time. O my ſoule thou haſt trodden downe ſtrength, this is a clauſe of the victourer exulting for this mighty Kingdome of the Canaanites now ſubdued.

V. 22.

Then were the horſe hooſes broken by reaſon of the pranſings, &c. the Vulgar Latin, ungulæ equorum ceciderunt fugientibus impetu et per præceps ruentibus fortiſſimis hoſtium: in our tranſlation the reſt of the verſe endeth thus, the pranſings of their mighty ones, Hebr. it is מדהרות·דהרות were ſmitten or ſhaken with haſty treadings אביריו of his mighty ones, the meaning whereof can bee nothing elſe, but that the mightieſt and ſtrongeſt of the Canaanites made ſuch haſte to flee in their charriots before the Iſraelites, that their very horſe hooſes were broken, and bruiſed wonderfully, ſo that Jerom in his tranſlation reſpected more the ſenſe, then the words.

V. 23.
Schol. Hiſt.

Curſe yee Meroz, ſaid the Angel of the Lord, curſe yee bitterly the inhabitants thereof, becauſe they came not to the helpe of the Lord, &c. Comeſtor for Meroz hath Meroth, and ſaith, it was one of the Princes of Canaan, and that Deborah meaneth herſelfe by the Angel, or Michael Meroth, ſignifyeth arcanum, and hereby was meant an evill Angel in arcano, that is, in ſecret fighting againſt Iſrael. Lyra having alſo mentioned this expoſition, as the common expoſition of our Doctors, that Michael was the Angel of the Lord here meant, and Meroz the name of an evill Angel, who with his company did not onely not helpe, but oppoſe the people of Iſrael, preferreth yet another of the Hebrewes, who ſay, that Meroz was a mighty man dwelling neare the place, where this battaile was fought, but would not come forth with his men to helpe the Iſraelites, wherefore, the Angel of the Lord, Barak curſeth him and his people, for Barak may well be underſtood by an Angel, becauſe hee was ſent, according to the ſignification of the word Malach, an Angel, one ſent. It ſeemeth to mee, that an Angel properly may beſt be underſtood, and moſt probably Michael, the Prince of the Jews, Dan. 10. and by Meroz ſome City or Towne neare to the place where the battaile was fought, becauſe the inhabitants thereof are alſo named, although there be now no memory left of it either in Jerom or Adrichomius or any other, becauſe happily by the force of this curſe, it periſhed long agoe. Others, that came not to helpe, are not curſed, becauſe they dwelt further off, but Meroz being ſo neare was without excuſe. It is curſed and the inhabitants thereof, becauſe they came not to helpe the Lord, that is, his people fighting againſt Siſera, for the Lord taketh that which is done to his people, as done to himſelfe. Let rich men marke this, ſaith Ferus, who helpe not the poore by relieving, and ſuch, as ſtand againſt any good cauſe, ſo farre are they from helping it, and laſtly, all that ſtand not for the glory of God, they are accurſed. But how can the Angel of the Lord bee ſaid to curſe, ſeeing Jude epiſt. Michael curſed not the Devill, neither durſt he? Hugo anſwereth, it is true, the Devill himſelfe muſt not be curſed with ſome kinde of curſing, for the wicked curſing the Devill curſeth his owne ſoule, Eccleſ. 21. that is, by wiſhing evill to him, becauſe hee is the creature of God, but by ſaying, that he is evill, and by abhorring from his preſence, as evill, he may be curſed. Thus he, but Michael is onely ſaid, Jude, v. 9. not to have dared to bring forth the judgement of evill ſpeaking againſt the Devill, but hee ſaid, the Lord rebuke thee, Satan; which may better be expounded thus, as in my notes upon Jude, hee of himſelfe durſt not by word take revenge upon the very Devill; becauſe this belongeth to the Lord onely, but having commiſſion from God to curſe, as in this place, he might curſe and bid others curſe, as other holy ſervants of God have curſed Gods enemies, which was not their curſing, but the Spirits ſpeaking by them, and denouncing all evill.

Lyra.

Ferus.

Hugo Card.

V. 24. Bleſſed ſhall Jael the wiſe of Heber bee above women, &c. In commending Iael, ſaith Ferus, all that labour for the good of the Church, are commended and bleſſed, and the falling of Siſera is ſet forth in many words the more to ſet forth his ſhamefull end. For what can be more ſhamefull to a Generall of a great Army, then to be ſlaine and to fall at the foot of a woman? And ſuch confuſion and ſhamefull ends ſhall all the wicked which are Gods enemies come unto, according to the Epiphonema uſed, v. 31. But the godly who love God ſhall become glorious as the Sun in his might; in the tent, that is, for that which ſhe did in the tent, in ſo valiantly aſſaulting and ſlaying Siſera: above other women in the tent, that is, ſaith Lyra, above all that dwell in tents, for none of them ever did ſo valiantly and warily, as ſhee before. Hugo alſo ſtraineth this higher: bleſſed be Jael above other women, in the heavenly tent or tabernacle.

Ferus.

Hugo Card.

V. 25. Hee asked her water, ſhee gave him milk, ſhee brought forth butter in a Lordly diſh. By this it ſeemeth, that ſhee gave him not onely to drinke, but to eate alſo, which was not before expreſſed, Ch. 4. 19. but onely that ſhee gave him milke, and the veſſell, out of which, is ſaid to be בנאוך a bottle: but here כספל· אדירים in a diſh of the mighty or of Princes ſhee gave him butter. Junius rendreth it, ſimpulo magnificorum obtulit lac pingue, and ſaith, that Simpulum was in the form of Cyathus a cup, and was uſed either about holy things, as Ch. 6. 38. or in marriage feaſts. The Sept. diſtinguiſh the ſentence thus, ſhee gave him milke in a bowle of potentates or of the mighty, ſhee brought forth butter. And this is verbatim according to the Hebrew. And כספל whereby a bowle is here ſet forth, is uſed onely againe, Ch. 6. 38. where not a diſh, but a bowle muſt needs bee underſtood by it, and that of great capacity, for which cauſe it is called here a bowle of Princes, containing a ſufficient quantity of milke, and not a little, as in the cup of the poore, ſo that Siſera might drinke his fill: For otherwiſe it could not bee called a bowle of Lords, becauſe Lordly for price, ſeeing the Kenites uſed no ſuch coſtly Veſſells in their Tents. Now if a diſtinction bee made, as by the Septuagint referring the milke to the bowle, and not the butter; there needs no queſtion to be moved, as otherwiſe there may, how butter could aptly be brought in a cup or bowle? wherefore I prefer that Tranſlation as beſt.

Junius.

V. 26. And with the hammer ſhee ſmote Siſera, ſhee ſmote off his head, when ſhee had pierced and ſtricken through his temples. The word here rendred, ſhee ſmote off, is מחקה uſed, as ſome note, no where elſe, and therefore of uncertaine ſignification. The Septuagint render it διήλωσε κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ, ſhee boared through or pierced his head. Some Hebrews will have it to ſignifie, ſhee ſmote, or cut off, as in our new Tranſlation, but the Septuagint is to be preferred, becauſe the inſtrument that ſhe uſed was an hammer, and therefore unfit to cut off his head. Junius hath it, abraſit caput ejus. The Vulg. Latine, quærens in capite vulneri locum, going altogether from the Hebrew, & tempus validè perforans, having but one Participle and an Adverbe, for two Verbes Synonymies, and diſtinguiſhed by two Conjunctions ומחצה·וחלפה and ſhee transfixed and pierced: Wherefore I would rather read the whole thus, according to the Hebrew thus, Shee hammered Siſera, and perforated his head, ſhee transfixed and pierced his temple.

V. 27. Where hee bowed, there hee fell downe dead. The Hebrew word for dead here, is שדוד waſted or ſpoiled; by the Septuagint rendred ταλαίπωρος, miſerabilis, and accordingly the Vulg. Latine, exanimis & miſerabilis; but the meaning is beſt expreſſed by the word dead.

V. 28. The mother of Siſera looked out at the window, and cryed out through the latteſſe, &c. Here beginneth the deriſion of Siſera his friends, who expected a farre other event of this War. The Vulg. Latine hath it, per feneſtram reſpiciens ululabat mater ejus, & de cœnaculo loquebatur, underſtanding the place where ſhee ſtood looking, to bee an upper room, having windowes narrow without, and broad within.

V. 29. Her wiſe Ladies anſwered her, yea, ſhee anſwered her ſelfe; thus the Hebr. word for word, and the Septuagint; yet the Vulg. Latine in words that are neither in the Hebrew nor Greek, hath it thus, Una ſapientèr cæteris uxoribus ejus hæc ſocrui verba reſpondit. The next words,

V. 30. V. 30. Have they not ſped, have they not divided the prey, to every one a damoſell or two, &c. in the Hebrew are ſo defective, that they muſt needs be thus ſupplyed, for the words are theſe, Have they not found and divided the ſpoile, a damoſell, two damoſells to the head of a man; a ſpoile of divers colours to Siſera, &c. a ſpoile of two divers colours for the neck of the ſpoile.

Iunius. V. 31. And the Land had reſt 40 years, that is, counting from the 80 years mentioned, Chap. 3. 30.

CHAP. VI.

V. 1. AND the children of Iſrael did evill in the ſight of the Lord, and the Lord delivered them into the hand of Midian ſeven yeares. Here is ſet forth the fourth oppreſſion of Iſrael by the Midianites, by whom they were ſpoyled of their goods, and brought to a moſt poore and miſerable eſtate. Lyra here noteth a difference between that, which is ſaid of their ſinning here, and Chap. 4. and Chap. 3. for there it is ſaid, they ſinned againe, here onely, they ſinned, or did evill; the reaſon whereof, according to the Hebrewes, was, becauſe by the ſong of Deborah, as by a moſt pleaſing ſacrifice all their former ſinnes were done away: but now after this atonement they ſin, as formerly they had done, and are ſcourged. And therefore it is not ſaid, as before, they added to ſinne, their for-

Lyra.

Ferm. mer ſinnes ſtill remaining unexpiated. The evill that they did, ſaith Ferus, was idolatry, as alſo may bee gathered from the following part of this Hiſtory, which was evill enough alone to bring upon them this heavie judgement, as being againſt the firſt and chiefe Commandement of the Law, and it was the ground of all wickedneſſe. Touching the Midianites, into whoſe hands they were delivered, it is to be underſtood, that there was a twofold Midian, one neare the Red Sea, where Moſes his Father in law dwelt, and another neare the Moabites Countrey, Numb. 25. but they were all deſtroyed, Numb. 31. ſo that it ſhould ſeeme that it could not bee this Midian that now oppreſſed them. But the deſcription of Gedeons purſuing them over Jordan, Chap. 7. 24. and Ch. 8. 4. and of their aſſociates Amalekites, and the children of the eaſt, v. 3. and Ch. 6. 33. evinceth plainly, that this Midian is meant, which was not farre from them eaſtward, and not the other which was ſouthward. And although all that they could find before were deſtroyed, yet many doubtleſſe fled, and ſo ſaved themſelves, and afterwards returning to their Countrey, might well increaſe by this time to a great multitude.

V. 2. Lyra. Becauſe of the Midianites, the children of Iſrael made them dennes in the mountains, and caves and ſtrong holds; that is, ſaith Lyra, dennes and caves for the poorer ſort, and ſtrong holds for the greater; thus pending themſelves up in ſtrait places, to be hidden from the fury of the enemy.

V. 3. And ſo it was, that when the Iſraelites had ſowne, the Midianites came up, and the Amalekites, and the children of the Eaſt, &c. Of the Amalekites ſee before, Exod. 17. the children of the Eaſt are afterwards ſaid to bee Iſmaelites, Chap. 8. 24. Joſephus calleth them Arabians. They were, as the Midianites, of the poſterity of Abraham, ſent by him to dwell in the Eaſt, Gen. 25. 6. and the Midianites with theſe their auxiliary Forces, are ſaid to have deſtroyed and waſted all the increaſe of the Countrey, unto Gaza, that is, to the furtheſt part of all, for Gaza was a City of the Philiſtims, bounding the land of Iſrael ſouthward. They paſſed then with their cattell from place to place all the Summer time, feeding up both corne and graſſe, and robbing them of all their cattell, from Jordan where they entred, to Gaza, ſo that no place eſcaped them, and this they did eight yeares together.

Ferus. The Myſtery. By theſe Midianites, Ferus myſtically underſtandeth our ſpirituall enemies, who labour quite to exterminate the Church in like manner by all ſorts of perſecutions ſtirring up. 2. At once to ſpoile us of all the good things, that we have been long gathering, by drawing us to ſinne, and from righteouſneſſe: For when a righteous man turneth from his righteouſneſſe, and committeth iniquity, all his former righteouſneſſe ſhall not bee remembred. (Ezek. 18.) 3. To beat downe all beginnings of good in youth, ſet forth by their treading downe of the Corne newly ſprung up.

V. 8. Lyra. Schol. Hiſt. And the Lord ſent a Prophet to the children of Iſrael, who ſaid, &c. This Prophet, ſaith Lyra, is commonly held by our Expoſitors to have been an Angel; and Comeſtor ſaith, that the Angel ſent to Gedeon, v. 11. was this Prophet. The Hebrewes ſay it was Phinees, but hee muſt needs by the courſe of nature, bee dead long before this, and all that generation of which hee was, is expreſly ſaid to have been dead before the firſt Judge Othniel; (Judg. 2. 10.) yet that opinion that hee was an Angel, is as much to bee diſliked as this, becauſe an Angel is no where called a Prophet, as St. Auguſtine himſelfe confeſſeth, (Auguſt. in Iudic. 6. qu. 31.) who yet is for this opinion, becauſe an Angel foretelleth things to come, and reproveth ſinne, and herein acteth the part of a Prophet, for which in reaſon hee may bee ſo called, as well as a Prophet an Angel, becauſe ſent by the Lord, which is a thing not unuſuall. But becauſe a Prophet, as Lyra hath it, hath things revealed to him in enigmate, but an Angel plainly, and every where elſe, when an Angel is meant, it is ſaid an Angel, and not a Prophet, it is rather to bee held, that this Prophet was a man, and ſo the Vulg. Latine hath it, virum Prophetam, and likewiſe the Hebrew. When the people cryed unto the Lord, this Prophet was ſent firſt, and then an Angel to ſtirre up Gedeon to become a deliverer; whereupon Ferus well noteth, that becauſe this Prophet reproved the people for their

Note. ſins, to heare and to profit by reproofe unto repentance for our ſins in the time of miſery, is to lay a foundation of deliverance. The ſending of a Prophet now unto them might ſeem ridiculous, and that to doe nothing, but reprove them for their ſins; but becauſe God will not deliver but the penitent, and to ſtirre up to repentance, preaching, and reproving of ſinne is neceſſary, a Prophet is now ſent, teaching us by Preaching to ſeeke the welfare of our State.

V.11. And there came an Angel of the Lord, and ſate under an Oake in Ophrah, that pertained to Joaſh the Abiezrite, and his ſonne Gedeon threſhed Wheate by the Winepreſſe, to hide it from the Midianites. Wee may gather hereby, that the people being penitent at the reproofe of the Prophet, the Lord was moved to take compaſſion upon them, and ſent this his Angel to ſtirre up Gedeon, and to helpe him in their deliverance. Ephra was a City where Gedeon dwelt, as wee may ſee, Chap, 8. 27. There was another City called Ephrata, in the tribe of Judah, otherwiſe called Bethlehem, but this Ephra was in the halfe tribe of Manaſſeh, and here the Angel ſate under an Oake, having taken to him the ſhape of a Man. Whereas it is added, this Oake pertained to Joaſh the Abiezrite, the Vulg. Latine hath it, to Joaſh the father of the family of Ezri; but in Hebr. and in Greeke there is no mention made of a family, but onely it is ſaid, Joaſh Abiezri, being expounded the father of Ezri; but it is beſt rendred as a proper name, the Abiezrite, for Abiezer was a ſon of Machir, the head of a family in Manaſſeh, Joſh. 17. 2. from whom they of that family were called Abiezrites, ſee v. 34. and Chap. 8. 2. Gedeon is ſpoken of, as being of Abiezer. For, by the winepreſſe, the Vulg. Latine hath, in the winepreſſe, and ſo the Hebrew word moſt properly ſignifieth; and Gedeon is noted by ſome to have threſhed corne here, becauſe it was a more ſecret place then a threſhing floore, and becauſe hee durſt not for feare of the Midianites doe it more openly. If it bee ſaid, how was it ſecret, when as hee could thence ſee and talke unto the Angel ſitting abroad under an Oake? Anſw. It was more ſecret notwithſtanding then a threſhing floor, which being the proper place to threſh in, the enemies would moſt probably have an eye unto, when a place of Winepreſſes might paſſe unſuſpected. If it be doubted, conſidering the enemies waſting of all, how Gedeon could now have any corne to threſh? It is to bee thought, that in their generall waſting of all, ſome particular places eſcaped. But why did the Angel come to ſend Gedeon to be a deliverer, when as the Angel himſelfe could have deſtroyed the enemies, and delivered his people? Anſw. An Angel indeed deſtroyed the Aſſyrians in Hezekiahs time, but now God tooke another order, firſt to ſend a Prophet to reprove, then an Angel to point out the man that ſhould be the Deliverer, laſtly, this man Gedeon to fight againſt the enemies, and to ſave Iſrael: hereby ſaith Ferus, figuring out three, Moſes, John the Baptiſt, and Chriſt; the firſt being ſent to reprove and threaten, the ſecond to point out the Saviour, and the third to ſave us from our ſinnes.

Joſephus, Procopius, Toſtatus, Cajetan.

1 Kings 19.

Ferus.

V.12. The Angel appearing to Gedeon, ſaid unto him, The Lord is with thee thou mighty man of valour. This is ſpoken to comfort and incourage him, becauſe he was now threſhing in feare, to hide it from the Midianites; neither had hee hitherto ſhewed any ſuch valour, but by this ſpeech it was portended, that hee ſhould ſhew it, ſo Lyra, and that through the Spirit of God comming upon him, and filling him with magnanimity and courage. St. Auguſtine rendreth theſe words, The Lord is with thee mighty in fortitude; holding, that Gedeons fortitude is not commended here, but the Lords, who was with him. I ſee not but that it may bee taken either way; yet becauſe the word גבר here uſed, is often put for a man; it may beſt be read ſo, Thou mighty man of valour.

Lyra. Auguſt.qu. 32.

V.13. And Gedeon ſaid, If the Lord bee with us, why then is all this befaln us, &c. Hee complaineth here of miſeries, and how that nothing was miraculouſly done for their deliverance. Becauſe they ſuffered ſuch things, hee ſpake as if the Lord were not with them, as the Angel ſaid, and as if hee could not or would not doe ſo for them, as they had heard hee did in times paſt for their Fathers. But this was a fault, ſaith Ferus, ſeeing the Lords hand is not ſhortened, but ſin ſeparateth betwixt him and his people.

Ferus. Eſa. 59.1, 2.

V. 14. And the Lord looked upon him, and ſaid, Goe in this thy might, and thou ſhalt ſave Iſrael, &c. that is, the Lord repreſented by the Angel, looked upon him. Goe in this thy might, that is, not bodily, but ſpirituall by faith, in the might which the Spirit of God now indueth thee with to fight againſt Midian.

V. 15. Behold my family is poore in Manaſſeh, and I am the leaſt in my Fathers houſe. Gedeon in humility here excuſeth himſelfe, as unfit for this high office of a Deliverer. For theſe words, My family is poore, Hebr. is, אלפי חדל my thouſand is poore, which Procopius and Auguſtine expound, as if Gedeon were a Chiliarke, or Captain over a thouſand; but nothing elſe is meant, but the family conſiſting of a thouſand, of which hee was, ſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt, Theodoret, Pagninus, &c. Joſephus underſtandeth his tribe, Vatablus and Cajetan his Chiliad, or the company of a thouſand, within which his family was included, according to the diſtinction made, Exod. 18.

Procopius. Auguſtine.

V. 16. And the Lord ſaid, Surely I will bee with thee and thou ſhalt ſmite the Midianites as one man. The more Gedeon humbled himſelfe, as unworthy, the more the Lord graceth him, who chooſeth the pooreſt and moſt deſpicable oft times to confound the mightieſt, but not by their owne, but by his power; for, I will bee with thee, ſaith hee, and thou ſhalt ſmite the Midianites as one man, that is, as eaſily, as if they were all but one man, and they had but one head to be cut off.

Ferus.

V. 17, 18. V. 19, 20. Then Gedeon deſired a ſigne, and that the Angel would ſtay, till hee had prepared a ſacrifice, and ſo hee went in and made ready and brought forth a kid and unleavened cakes and broath, and at the command of the Lord powred them out upon the rock, and the Angel put forth the end of his ſtaffe and touched them, and a fire comming out of the rock conſumed them, and the Angel vaniſhed out of his ſight. V. 21. It was not out of unbeliefe, that Gedeon asked a ſigne, but out of prudence, that he might prove, whether hee ſpake unto him by Gods Spirit, for wee muſt try the Spirits, whether they be of God or not: yet it is not lawfull alwayes to aske a ſigne, for to the confirming of old doctrine ſignes are not to be asked, but only of new revelations. The old doctrines of truth have beene already ſufficiently confirmed by miracles, and therefore the Jews asking a ſigne are called an evill and adulterous generation, and the rich man in hell craving that one might bee ſent from the dead to his five brethren, is rejected: thus Ferus, ſo likewiſe Hugo, for the Devill can transforme himſelfe into an Angel of light. For the ſacrifice brought forth by Gedeon to the Angel, in our tranſlation it is called a preſent, but in the Vulgar Latin a ſacrifice, and in the Sept. tranſl. till I bring forth a ſacrifice and ſacrifice before thee, and accordingly it is held by Auguſtine, Theodoret, Lyranus, Toſtatus, Mariana, &c. that Gedeon prepared a ſacrifice to bee offered unto God by the Angel. And whereas the place did not agree, for all ſacrifices ought to be offered in the tabernacle, Lyra ſaith, this was extraordinary, and therefore by divine diſpenſation might bee offered in a place extraordinary. The Hebr. word is, מנחתי, my offering, but it may as well ſet forth any other gift offered to one as a ſacrifice, as Judg. 3. 15. 17, 18. 2 King. 8. 8, 9. and the manner of preparing it by ſeething the Kid and bringing it thus ſodden and the broath ſheweth, that it was a dinner prepared for him, whom hee yet knew not, whether he were a man or an Angel, but the Angel made a ſacrifice of it, doing wonderfully in his ſight for his aſſurance that hee came from the Lord: unleavened bread was prepared now, becauſe it might more readily be done, as in the like caſe, Gen. 18. and not becauſe it was a time of the Paſſeover, as the Rabbins doe hence fondly gather. V. 22, 23. Gedeon ſeeing the miraculous burning of the meat and cakes cryed out, as being afraid, becauſe hee had ſeene an Angel, but the Lord comforted him, telling him that he ſhould not dye. The like feare was afterwards in Manoah Samſons Father, Ch. 13. and it ſeemeth to have beene generally grounded in the mindes of the Jews by reaſon of that ſaying, Exod 30. 20. No man ſhall ſee my face and live. The Angel of the Lord is ſaid before to have gone out of his ſight, ſo that when Gedeon expreſſed this great feare, he ſaw him not but, onely heard him ſpeaking unto him.

Ferus. 1 Ioh. 4. 1. Hugo Card. 2 Cor. 11. Auguſt. Theod. Toſtatus. Lyra

24. Then Gedeon built an Altar there unto the Lord, and called it Jehovah Shalom, lom &c. This, ſaith Lyra, is ſpoken by anticipation, for hee built it not, till that the Lord had bidden him, v. 26. ſo likewiſe Ferus and Cajetan; and that 26. verſe ſeemeth to make for it, becauſe he is bidden to build an Altar upon the rock in the ordered place, and v. 20. it was ſaid before, that the meat and the cakes were laid upon the rocke, that is, as muſt needs Toſtatus. bee underſtood, in order. Yet Toſtatus will have an Altar meant here, which was built before that, but ſo two Altars muſt bee yeelded to have beene built in one place which cannot bee. For the ſetting up of an Altar for ſacrifice, beſides the ſtanding Altar, it might doubtleſſe lawfully bee done by ſpeciall command from God, and an Altar might be built for a monument of Gods ſingular mercy to his people in their diſtreſſe, as there were both theſe uſes of this Altar. Jehovah Shalom, ſignifieth the peace of the Lord, becauſe there he V. 25. ſpake peace to Gedeon, being afraid. The ſame night the Lord bad Gedeon take his Fathers bullocke and the ſecond bullocke, and having firſt deſtroyed

V. 26. the Altar of Baal, to build an Altar upon that rock, and to offer that ſecond bullocke upon it. In our new tranſlation it is, thy fathers bullock, even the ſecond bullocke of ſeven yeares old, but Hebr. it is, and the ſecond Bullock, &c. being Lyra. ſpoken, as if two bullocks were meant: ſo likewiſe in the Vulgar Latin, and in Ferus. the Sept. take thy Fathers fatted bullock and the ſecond bullock, and ſo it hath anciently beene moſt commonly underſtood, that hee was bidden to take two bullocks: but ſeeing wee read but of one only, that was offered upon the new erected Altar, it may bee demanded, for what cauſe hee was bidden Bonfrerius. to take the other? Some thinke, that although the offering of one onely is ſpoken of, yet the offering of the other alſo is implyed, becauſe that, which hee is expreſly bidden to offer, is called the ſecond. But if the Lord had meant, that hee ſhould offer them both, it ſhould certainly have beene ſo expreſly commanded, whereas it is onely ſaid, thou ſhalt offer the ſecond bullock, &c. If it be demanded, then, to what other end he was to take the firſt bullock? I ſuppoſe, that becauſe it was a bullock prepared to be offered to Baal and fatted for that purpoſe, the meaning of the Lord was, that hee ſhould take it as an abominable thing and deſtroy it, as the Altar of Baal in deteſtation of that idol, and then take a ſecond bullock and offer that up to the Lord, that having done ſo great an act of zeale againſt idolatry and made an atonement for ſinne by ſacrifice, hee might the more auſpiciouſly proceed in his warres Toſtatus. againſt the Midianites. For that queſtion moved and anſwered by Toſtatus, Schol. Hiſtor. Comeſtor and others, whoſe this ſecond bullock was, they holding that it was not his fathers, but the congregations, prepared alſo for Baal by fatting it 7 yeares, I ſee no probability of that, and therefore I think rather it was a bullock of his owne, ſeeing God accepteth not of ſacrifices taken by ſtealth from others, but would have his ſervants offer to him, as David did, of their owne coſt. And throw downe the Altar, that thy father hath. Hereby it appeareth that the Father of Gedeon was an idolater, yet God choſe the ſonne, who happily ſtill worſhipped the true God, to doe this great worke, as hee Joſh. 24. 2. had before choſen Abraham, the ſonne of Terah an idolater. But this Altar, which is ſaid to bee of Joaſh, Gedeons father, ſeemeth to have been common to the people of that City, and not his peculiarly, becauſe they contend about it when it was broken downe, v. 28, 29. And hereby we may ſee the greatneſſe of the ſins that the Iſraelites lived in, for which they were now ſo grievouſly puniſhed.

V. 27. Gedeon, as he was commanded, brake downe Baals Altar, and cut downe the grove, &c. but becauſe hee durſt not doe it by day, hee did it by night, taking ten men of his Servants to helpe him in this worke; but in the morning the
V. 28, 29, 30. men of the City ſeeing what was done, require Joaſh to bring forth his ſonne
31. Gedeon that he might be put to death, who taketh his part, and biddeth, Let Baal plead for himſelfe if hee bee a God; at which anſwer they were appeaſed, Ferus. ſaith Ferus, expecting what Baal would doe againſt him, and when they ſaw that he did nothing, they thought that Gedeon was ſtirred up by God thus to do, Lyra. and called him Jerubbaal, that is, as Lyra hath it, ſtronger then Baal, becauſe Baal
was

was not able to take any revenge upon him for breaking downe his Altar. But the name is compoſed out of the words uſed by Joaſh, If he be a God, let him plead for himſelfe, Hebr. ירב·לו whence commeth Jerubbaal, an adverſary to Baal, or one againſt whom Baal may contend or plead, as it is expounded,
v. 32. 2 Sam. 11. 21. he is called Jurubeſheth, an adverſary to ſhame or confuſion, that is, to a moſt vile and ſhamefull Idol. Joaſh, Gedeons father, in thus taking his ſonnes part, ſeemeth ſo to have ſerved an Idol, as that hee was eaſie to be inclined again to ſerve the true God, the Idol being deſtroyed; and happily his ſonne had diſcloſed to him by what authority hee had done ſuch things, whereby he was moved thus to ſtand for him.

But what meane theſe words, Hee that will plead for him, let him bee put to death whilſt it is yet morning? Junius ſaith, that Joaſh uſeth three Arguments Junius.
againſt the men of his City. 1. Becauſe it was a bold attempt in them to take upon them to patronize a God, and to offer themſelves as revengers of his wrongs. 2. Becauſe God would bee avenged and ſtrike with death ſuch as pleaded for Baal. 3. Becauſe if Baal were a God, hee could eaſily bee avenged upon ſuch as wronged him; ſo that hee taketh theſe words as threatening death by Gods juſt judgement to ſuch as ſtood for Baal, and that forthwith; and according to this, the words may properly bee rendred, Hee ſhall die yet this morning. The Vulgar Latine rendreth the whole ſentence thus, Hee that is an adverſary to him, let him die before the next mornings light commeth, that is, ſaith Lyra, let him bee ſtricken dead by the power of the God Baal: which Joaſh Lyra ſpake to ſtay them from execution, in expectation of ſome judgement to come from Baal upon Gedeon. But becauſe the word here uſed is לו for him, and not, againſt him; I preferre that of Junius, followed in our new tranſlation;
and the next words ſeeme to make for it; If he bee a God, let him plead for himſelfe; and if not, but an abominable Idol, let him feare death and deſtruction from God that contendeth for him.

Then all the Midianites, and the Amalekites, and the children of the Eaſt were V.33.
gathered together, and went over, and pitched in the valley of Jezreel. Gedeon being prepared by God, as hath been ſaid, to ſmite the Amalekites, &c. now the providence of God worketh to bring them on with ſpeed to their owne deſtruction.
They came maliciouſly to prey upon the Iſraelites, and to ſpoile them, as in times paſt they had uſed to doe, as was noted, v. 3, 4, 5. but God had another end at this time, viz. to bring them thither to be all cut off by Gedeon, as they had deſerved. And therefore the very name Gedeon was not given him Gedeons name.
without a ſpeciall inſtinct from above, for גדע from whence it commeth, ſignifieth to cut downe, or to cut off, according to which hee had cut downe the Grove of Baal, and ſhould ſoon cut off theſe Barbarians. Jezreel where they pitched, was a City where the Kings of Iſrael had afterwards a Palace to retire unto for their pleaſure, 1 King. 21. 1. when the head City of their Kingdome was Samaria, as both Jerome, Borcardus, and Adrichomius agree, it was ſituated at Adrichomius.
the foot of mount Gelboe weſtward, and was the boundary of Manaſſeh and Iſſachar, having a Watch-tower, from whence, ſeeing the comming of the enemies, they might give notice by fire to all the Countrey about; ſo that this place was not farre from Gedeons houſe in Manaſſeh, v. 15. And from hence there was a proſpect throughout all Galilee to Carmel, and the mountaines of Phenicia, and Tabor, and to Gilead beyond J*ordan*. One ſaith, that it was 48 H. B. Patriarks miles from J*eruſalem* northward, and Ophrah where Gedeon dwelt 44 miles from travailes.
Jeruſalem northeaſt, wherefore Toſtatus erreth, in that he ſaith it was in the tribe of J*udah*, for that was another J*ezreel*, Joſh. 15. 34.

And the Spirit of God came upon Gedeon, and he blew a trumpet, and Abiezer was gathered unto him &c. What Abiezer was, ſee v. 11. and not onely the Abiezrites, V.35.
which were of the ſame family with him, but the tribe of Manaſſeh, Aſher, Zebulun, and Naphtali came unto him, ſo that hee had ſpeedily a great Army, even of 32000. as wee may ſee Ch. 7. 3. yet God ſpake not of an Army, when he promiſed that hee ſhould ſmite the Midianites, but Gedeon knew that the meanes were not to be neglected, and therefore he gathereth theſe together. Perus.

Whether

whereas the Spirit of God is ſaid to have come upon him, Ferus noteth well, that this was done to make him fit for his high office and calling, that hee might have courage, wiſedome and ſtrength accordingly, it being hereby intimated, that God is ready likewiſe at all times to give every man gifts needefull for the calling, whereunto he hath called him, that none may be diſcouraged by reaſon of the weighty workes required at their hands, in the ſaid callings.

V.36,37,38. Gedeon having gathered together ſo great an Army, yet feared the enemy, as it ſeemeth, and therefore for his further confirmation asked a ſigne of the Lord, firſt, that the dew might bee upon the fleece of wool in the floore onely and not upon the ground; ſecondly, another night, that the dew might be upon the ground and not upon the fleece, both which were done accordingly. And Qu. about this it is queſtioned, whether Gedeon ſinned not in asking theſe ſignes? Toſtaius, Tho. Aquinas, 22. qu. 97. Artic. 2. Lyra, Origen, Eſtius, &c. Some ſay, that he did, becauſe God had given him a ſigne before, and made it manifeſtly known unto him, that it was an angel that talked with him, wherefore he ought not after this to have doubted or feared any more: but others better, that hee ſinned not, becauſe he might be moved of God to aske this ſigne for his owne further confirmation and the confirmation of the people gathered unto him, that they might know, that hee was called of God. Origen ſaith, that hee asked it for a myſtery, Lyra, bearing himſelfe upon ſome familiarity attained with the Lord. And it is certaine, that a man in ſome extraordinary caſe may aske a ſigne without ſinne, as Abraham after that God had appeared unto him, and aſſured him of his favour before, Gen. 15. and Hezekiah, Eſa. 38. and Ahaz is cenſured, becauſe hee would not aske a ſigne. And Gods granting his asking, and no where reproving him therefore doth ſufficiently juſtifie him againſt all oppugners.

The Myſtery of all. Myſtically by Gedeon, wee may underſtand Chriſt, of whom hee was a type in his delivering and ſaving of the people from their enemies: 1. As hee threſhed and winnowed Corne, ſo Chriſt had his Fanne in his hand. 2. The Lord was with Chriſt the moſt valiant of men. 3. Hee was comforted by the Angels before his paſſion, as Gedeon before his battail. 4. Chriſt deſtroyed idolatry, and ſet up the true Religion, as he built an Altar to the Lord, Baals Altar being caſt down. 5. As Gedeons Fleece was firſt wet, and the ground dry, then the ground about wet, and it dry; ſo Chriſt comming, the Jewes firſt had all Ferus. the dew of grace, and the Gentiles, as the ground about, were altogether without; but ſince the Jewes are without this heavenly dew, and the Gentiles have Origen. it, ſo Ferus. And Origen long before maketh the ſame Allegory of the Fleece in more words, applying that of Gedeons wringing out of the dew into a bowle, to our Lords taking water in a baſon, and waſhing his Diſciples feet; but this doth nothing agree, and therefore not worthy the naming, yet doctrine or grace is well compared to dew, ſee Deut. 32. and to dew comming upon a fleece, Pſal. 72. and of grace under this name, wee may read, Eſa. 35. Chap. 41. Chap. 43. &c. and both Auguſtine, Theodoret, Procopius, Jerome, Ambroſe, and Chryſoſtome, are for this Allegory of Gedeons Fleece.

CHAP. VII.

V.1. THen Gedeon, and all the people with him, roſe up early, and pitched by the well Harod; ſo the hoſt of the Midianites were on the north of them, by the hill of Moreh, &c. Where this well Harod was, is uncertaine, but one ſaith it was in H.Bunt.patriar. travailes. the tribe of Manaſſeh, 16 miles from Jezreel, in the valley whereof the Enemies lay by the hill Moreh, ſuppoſed to bee the high hill Gilboe, and therefore the hill Moreh, or a moſt high hill, as the Vulg. Latine rendreth it. Harod ſeemeth to have had the name from that which happened here, the fearfulneſſe of many, for חרד ſignifieth to feare, as it is uſed, v. 3. when they that were fear- V.2,3. full were commanded to depart. And here the Lord cauſeth Gedeon firſt to diſmiſſe all ſuch as were timerous and fearfull, for the people with him were too many to deliver Midian into their hands, leſt they ſhould vaunt that by their owne power they had gotten the victory, and ſo 22000 depart from the Army. And all this was done, as Ferus noteth well, that the victory might plainly appeare to come of the Lord onely, and not of any humane power, that he onely may be truſted in and praiſed, and that wee might learne to flee to him in the time of danger. And herein Gods wayes appeare to be wonderfull, and not like unto mans; for man in the time of War gathereth as great Forces as he can, but God contrariwiſe diminiſheth the number; and finally leaveth Gedeon almoſt alone, that helping, when things are moſt deſperate, hee may have the greater glory. That the fearfull ſhould depart, was given as a generall Ordinance, Deut. 20. 8. becauſe ſuch may doe more hurt in the battail then good, by diſcouraging others. But it is a marvaile that ſo many after ſuch a ſigne for confirmation, ſhould bee found fearfull; and why were they fearfull, but becauſe they yet beleeved not? ſo that faith is but of a few, even in Gedeons Army, in Chriſts congregation. But what meaneth this, Let him depart early from Mount Gilead. Moſt hold, that this was a mountaine in the tribe of Manaſſeh, ſo called from the generall name of the Manaſſites, becauſe they came of Gilead the ſonne of Machir, the ſon of Manaſſeh. There was indeed a Gilead on the other ſide of Jordan, where the other halfe of this Tribe dwelt, ſo called from the heape of ſtones placed there, and the Covenant made by it betwixt Jacob and Laban, Gen. 37. but the mount Gilead from whence theſe men departed, was on this ſide Jordan, neare the place where Gedeon dwelt.

Ferus.
Note.

V. 4,5,6.

When ſo great a number of the people were gone for feare, the Lord uſed another way to diſtinguiſh betwixt the 10000 remaining, becauſe they were yet too many, viz. by cauſing them to bee brought to the water to drinke, for moſt of them kneeled downe and dranke, but 300 of them lapped the water like dogs, and by theſe onely God would ſave Iſrael, the reſt being diſmiſſed. For the manner of their lapping, it was by taking up water with their hands, and ſo drinking it a little at once out of the hollow of their hand, as appeareth, v. 6. as a dog drinketh a little at once by lapping. For the reaſon why God would have them againe thus tryed, Joſephus and Theodoret ſay, that hereby it would appeare yet further, who were moſt baſely and timerouſly minded, that durſt not ſtay to kneele downe and drinke for feare of the enemy, but catcht up now a little and then a little, as the dogges about Nilus, who ſtay not to drinke as they paſſe by that River, for feare of Crocodiles and other hideous Serpents, but drinke a little and then run away againe and again. And by ſuch, and a few ſuch would God deſtroy the Midianites, that the greater glory might be to his name. But how this expoſition may bee received, I cannot ſee, forſomuch as all the fearefull were ſent away before. Wherefore Lyran. and Ferus, and others better ſay, that God tryed thoſe whom hee would uſe in this Warre two wayes: 1 By the ſtrength and ſtability of the minde, as before v. 3. 2 Of the body at this time; for they that are faint and weary lye down, when they come to take refreſhing; but the unweariable ſtand, and onely ſtooping put their hands downe to take up a little water for their refreſhing, and theſe are the men whom God chooſeth, and not the other. And the myſtery hereof is excellent; Out of thoſe that are gathered together to fight under Chriſts banner, the farre greater company ſhall bee rejected, for many are called, but few choſen. The rejected are of two ſorts: 1 The fearfull and unbeleeving, who in time of danger fall away, that is, when the heate of perſecution ariſeth. Wherefore our Lord warneth all that will bee his Diſciples, to deny themſelves, and not to feare men; Paſtors then that feare to reprove ſinne in great ones: Subjects that feare their Princes more then God; and Children and Servants, that thus feare Parents and Maſters, ſhall bee diſmiſſed and ſeparated from Chriſts elect Company. 2 Such as kneel downe to drinke of the water, that is, have their hearts taken up with the pleaſures and profits of this life, as the covetous and the voluptuous, who are moſt eagerly ſet upon theſe things, and lye downe, as it were, at theſe waters to take their fill of them; but

Joſephus, Theodoret.

Lyra. Ferus.

The Myſtery.

Matth. 13.

but if any thing adverſe happeneth to them in the world, they are moſt impatient and diſcontented. Theſe are rejected as unfit for the ſpirituall warfare; but they that onely lap theſe waters, that is, uſe worldly things moderately, are received. Ferus. To this effect Ferus, who alſo applyeth it two wayes more: 1. To adverſities and ſufferings, wherewith they that are wearyed and faint fall downe at the waters, and are rejected. 2. To doctrine and life, they that lapped the water, taking it up in their hands, ſetting forth ſuch as are inlightened with the knowledge of heavenly doctrine, and ſhew it in the piety of their lives; but they that kneeled downe to drinke, ſuch as have onely knowledge but no piety in their lives. But leaving theſe as not ſo apt, I embrace the former, becauſe waters in thirſt and wearineſſe are a refreſhing to the body. And here I cannot omit one good paſſage more of Ferus, Note. if they that kneeled down to drinke their fill of water were rejected, what ſhall they bee that continue drinking wine and ſtrong drinke from time to time, till it inflameth and intoxicateth their braines? But beſides the former myſticall application to pleaſures, I thinke, that ſuch as faint and are weary in any good way, and perſevere not to the end, may well be underſtood by thoſe that kneeled downe to drinke, Gal. 6. 9. Matth. 24. 14. for wee ſhall reape in due time if wee faint not, and hee that indureth to the end ſhall be ſaved. Auguſt. Laſtly, becauſe they that were choſen, are ſaid to have lapped like dogges, it was hereby ſet forth, as Auguſtine hath it, that the godly whom God chooſeth, ſhould bee accounted vile and baſe in this world, as a dogge is commonly put for that which is baſe and vile: 1 Cor. 1. 27, 28, 29. And ſo it is ſaid, God hath choſen the baſe and vile things of this world to confound the noble. Origen. Origen by thoſe that come to the waters, underſtandeth ſuch as come to Baptiſme; Others, that feare perſecution, and ſo never take upon them the Chriſtian profeſſion; or becauſe they feare damnation, if they ſhould ſinne after Baptiſme, being ſet forth by thoſe that departed through feare. But ſuch as come to the water of Baptiſme by theſe, amongſt whom ſuch as fall to the ground to drinke, are the earthly minded, and ſuch as are bent by temptations, as languiſhing and feeble, for wee muſt ſtand faſt and ſtrengthen our feeble knees: Others, that ſtand and lappe, putting their hands to their mouths, are the conſtant followers of Chriſt, who glorifie God with the workes of their hands, and the words of their mouths, and they are aſſimilated to dogges in their lapping, becauſe the dogge is of all beaſts moſt loving to his Maſter, and ſo are they to the Lord, not ſhrinking from him, howſoever they are attempted.

V. 8. So the people tooke victualls in their hands, and Trumpets, and hee ſent away all the reſt of Iſrael, every one to his Tent, and retained theſe 300 men, &c. Theſe 300 men tooke victualls to feed upon, whilſt they ſhould bee fighting againſt, and purſuing their enemies, their Trumpets were not of braſſe, but of hornes, as the word שופרות here uſed, ſignifieth, ſee Levit. 23. 24. and therefore Joſephus. Joſephus plainly ſaith, that they took Trumpets of Rams-hornes; and the Septuagint have it, τὰς κερατίνας, other Trumpets are called חצצרות Numb. 31. 6. Numb. 11. 1. and there were but two of them blowne by the Prieſts onely.

V. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. The people with Gedeon being thus prepared, the Lord biddeth him in the night to goe downe to the hoſt of Midian, lying in the valley of Jezreel, not farre from which hee then was in mount Gilead; and that he might goe againſt them the more confidently hee firſt biddeth him to goe with his ſervant Phuah to heare what the Midianites ſaid, which hee did; and heard a Souldier telling his fellow, that hee dreamed, that a cake of barley came tumbling into the hoſt of Midian, and overthrew a Tent, which hee by and by interpreted to bee the ſword of Gedeon, for into his hands God would deliver that whole Army. Becauſe the Lord would now give another ſigne to Gedeon for his confirmation: Ferus. Ferus gathereth, that hee was yet weake in his faith, and timerous after the other ſignes; but hee ſaith thus without ground, for the Lord having cauſed him to diſmiſſe all his Army but 300, added this ſigne for his further confirmation, now that hee had ſo weak a company about him, of his great grace towards wards him, not being requeſted by him, ſhewing indeed hereby, that the ſtrongeſt faith needeth ſtill to bee more ſtrengthened, according to that, I beleeve, Lord, helpe mine unbeliefe: In the dreame, which Gedeon heard related, hee was ſet forth by a barly cake, to ſhew, how vile and contemptible hee was in the eyes of the Midianites, and yet by him God made ſome of them know, that they ſhould be all overthrowne, but not for any good to themſelves, but for his comfort, as Balaam propheſied for the good of the Church, and afterwards Caiaphas the High-prieſt of the Jewes. They knew they ſhould bee deſtroyed, but had no power by repentance to ſeek the preventing of it, as the wicked now know what judgements ſhall befall them at the laſt day, but yet goe on in ſin, and ſo, as it were, to meet their doome.

Numb. 23.
Ioh. 11. 50.

V. 12. The Army of Midianites, Amalekites, &c. is ſaid to have lyen, as the graſſehoppers for number, but how great a number of men were in this Army is not ſet downe, onely Ch. 8. 10. it may be gathered, that they were above 135000. unto whom what were 300. with Gedeon? even as a barly cake trundled downe an hill againſt a tent to overthrow it, & therefore by the ſimilitude hereof they are ſet forth. For the dreame, it is no doubt, but that both it and the interpretation came of God, becauſe Gedeon was directed by God to come downe and heare ſomewhat for his incouragement, and therefore Gedeon hearing it worſhipped God, and animateth his men, as being now aſſured of the victory forthwith.

V. 15.

V. 16, 17, 18. Then hee divided the 300 into three companies, and giving every one a pitcher with a lampe in it, he bade them ſound, when he ſounded, and doe as they that were with him, and hee did, crying out, The ſword of the Lord and of Gedon. Hee divided them into three, ſaith Lyra, that they might come upon the Midianites Army in three parts at once, and ſo terrifie them, as if they had beene beſet with three great Armies together. And for the lamps in the pitchers, hee ſaith, that they were ſuch, as could not eaſily be put out, but burned ſtill when the pitchers were broken, that ſhewing no light before and now ſuddenly appearing about them, accompanyed with a ſtrange noiſe of breaking pitchers, the enemies might bee the more diſmayed and confounded. All things were here done, ſaith Ferus, moſt politickly, that the enemies being amazed might think upon nothing, but immediately to flee away; for the very comming upon them in the night could not but bee a terrour, but much more the noiſe and the lights accompanyed with that cry, The ſword of the Lord and of Gedeon, might make them feare, that the Lord was come againſt them, of whom there was no reſiſting. And ſuch meanes Gedeon uſed, although he was certaine of the victory, to teach us to uſe the meanes of attaining the things which God hath promiſed.

Lyra.

Ferus.

Note.

V. 19. The time, that Gedeon and his men came to the Midianites campe, was at the middle watch, that is, at midnight, for the watches of the night are three, being each one of three houres.

V. 20, 21. And they being come about the campe ſtood ſtill and blew with their trumpets, &c. which was done, that they might ſeeme onely to be ſuch as went before others to light them to this warre, and ſo the enemies thinking the warriours already to be come amongſt them, might fight one againſt another inſtead of an enemy, as they did indeed, and fled away as overcome.

The Myſtery. Myſtically by Gedeon overcoming his enemies by blowing the trumpet, breaking a pitcher, ſhewing a light and crying out, The ſword of God and of Gedeon, we may underſtand Chriſt overcoming our ſpirituall enemies by the ſound of the Word, giving his body to be broken, ſhewing a light of miracles and by prayer; and by the followers of Gedeon that did likewiſe, the Apoſtles and Martyrs of Chriſt, who were inſtructed with a light of miracles, and preached, prayed and ſuffered alſo in their bodies. And therefore Chriſts victory being ſpoken of Eſa. 9. 4. this compariſon is made, as in the day of Midian. And thus muſt every Chriſtian overcome, by confeſſing the truth, mortification of the fleſh, the light of a good life and prayer. In that the trumpet was carryed in the right hand and the pitcher in the left, it was ſignifyed nified, that the word and ſpirituall things are firſt and chiefely to be cared for, and then the body. And the victory begun againſt our ſpirituall enemies in baptiſme muſt bee proſecuted, till all bee deſtroyed, as Gedeon ceaſed not purſuing the Midianites; thus Origen, Gregory, Auguſtine, Jerom, and Ferus.

Eſa. 81.
Pſal. 19.

V. 22. The places to which the enemies fled, were Bethſhittath, Zererath, and the border of Abelmeholah, unto Tabbath. All theſe places are unknowne unto us, but onely Abelmeholah, becauſe not ſpoken of elſewhere in the ſacred Hiſtory. 1 King. 4. 12. Hieronym. Abelmeholah is mentioned together with Bethſhean, and other places knowne to bee in the halfe tribe of Manaſſeh, and therefore by Jerome counted in that halfe of Manaſſeh on this ſide Jordan; and hence it may bee gathered, that the other places were not far off from this.

V. 23. Here the men of Iſrael purſue the Midianites thus fleeing, both Naphtali, Aſher, and Manaſſeh, out of which tribes, and Zebulun they had before aſſembled unto Gedeon, Chap. 6. 35. V. 24. Then he ſent to the men of mount Ephraim to ſtop the Midianites paſſage at Bethbarah and Jordan, V. 25. and ſo the two Princes of Midian, Oreb and Zeeb were taken and ſlaine, Oreb at the rock Oreb, and Zeeb at the winepreſſe of Zeeb; Places thus named from the falling of theſe two Princes in them, as is generally conjectured. Exod. 17. 6. Lyra. There was a rock Oreb, out of which Moſes brought water, but that was in the Wilderneſſe, this place on this ſide of Jordan, ſo that it could not be the ſame, as Lyra noteth. Bethbarah where the Ephraimites tooke the paſſage, is not certainly knowne where it was, but ſome hold it to be the ſame with Bethabara, where John afterwards baptized, a City by Jordan, called Bethabarah, the houſe of paſſage, becauſe here the children of Iſrael paſſed over Jordan on dry land. But the name is diverſe, that being compounded of בית and עבר, this of בות and ברה and ſo ſignifying the houſe of eating, but the ſame place might be called by both theſe names, by the one for the paſſing over Jordan miraculouſly; by the other, becauſe there they firſt ate of the fruits of the land of Canaan.

CHAP. VIII.

V. 1, 2, 3. HERE the men of Ephraim, who were laſt called againſt the Midianites fleeing, quarrell with Gedeon, becauſe they were not called to the battell at the firſt. But hee by magnifying them and their facts, and extenuating his owne, pacifieth them. What have I done now in compariſon of you? Is not the gleaning of Ephraim, better then the vintage of Abiezer, &c? that is, as hee further expreſſeth, the victory gotten by them againſt two Princes Oreb and Zeeb, although they came after, was greater then all the ſlaughter made by him and Note. his Abiezrites of thouſands of the common Souldiers of Midian. Thus a ſoft anſwer put away ſtrife, as pride in the Ephraimites made it. They durſt not, Ferus. ſaith Ferus, appeare whilſt the enemies Army was ſtrong, but now they being put to flight, they pretend great magnanimity; and whereas they ſhould have Note. greatly thanked Gedeon as a deliverer of their Country, they contrariwiſe accuſe him; and ſo it is the manner of this wicked world, to blame them moſt that have done beſt, through envie. But Gedeon wiſely foreſeeing the danger, if now the Iſraelites ſhould bee divided amongſt themſelves, is not moved at this indignity, but appeaſeth the Ephraimites with good words. And the like did Jephthah attempt, Ch. 12. but they were then ſo ſwolne with pride, that they would not bee pacified, but fought againſt him to their owne ruine. The things that puffed them up, was, firſt, their preference by Jacob before Manaſſeh their elder brother: ſecondly, that famous Captaine Joſhua was of Ephraim: thirdly, they had their lot next unto Judah, and were moſt populous. Lyra. And of theſe ſpeaketh Ferus, and Lyra of the firſt, Gedeon being of Manaſſeh, the Ephraimites who had been preferred by their father Iacob, diſdained that a Manaſſite ſhould goe away with the glory of a great victory without them.

V. 4. And Gideon came to Iordan, hee, and the 300 men that were with him faint, and paſſed over yet purſuing them. In the former Chap. v. 25. it is ſaid, that the men of Ephraim brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb unto Gedeon on the other ſide of Iordan; but here Gedeons comming to Iordan, and going over is firſt ſpoken Qu.

of; and if hee were not before this come to Jordan, how could they bring theſe heads to him on the other ſide of Jordan? To this Lyra anſwereth well, that their bringing of the heads to Gedeon, is related Chap. 7. 25. by anticipation; for it was not done till after Gedeons paſſing over with his 300 men, that all the relation touching the Ephraimites might bee abſolved together, and then the proceedings of Gedeon with others, might bee proſecuted together.

Then hee deſired ſome refreſhing of the men of Succoth for his fainting Souldiers, V. 5, 6, 7.
but the Princes of Succoth made a mock of his purſuing the Kings of Midian; whereupon hee threatened, when God had delivered them into his hands, to teare their fleſh with briars and thornes. Succoth ſignifieth tabernacles, or tents, and had the name in Iacobs time, from his pitching of his tents Gen, 33.
there, when he returned out of Meſopotamia. It was a City of the tribe of Gad, and therefore their inhumanity the greater, in that they denyed reliefe to their brethren; and that having ſo well deſerved of all Iſrael, and wearyed themſelves, and jeoparded their lives in the common cauſe of the whole Kingdom:
wherefore it was no injuſtice in Gedeon to threaten, and to inflict ſo ſore a puniſhment upon them.

From Succoth hee goeth with his men to Penuel, but could get no relief, but V. 8, 9.
the like ſcoffing anſwer, wherefore hee threateneth to pull downe their Tower.
This place had the name from the ſeeing of God, for here Iacob wreſtled Gen 32. 30.
with God and prevailed, from whence it was thus called. Theſe men of Succoth and Penuel, ſaith Ferus, doe moſt aptly ſet forth ſuch as deride men outwardly Ferus.
appearing meane and contemptible, of what excellent parts ſoever they bee, eſpecially if they need their helpe. But as Gedeon and his men did not therefore deſiſt from their calling to which God had called them, ſo muſt not wee, but truſt in God where humane helpe faileth. And let ſuch deriders and diſcouragers of the good, expect a Gedeon to come one day, and to take ſharp revenge upon them for their contempt.

And Zeba and Zalmunna were in Karkor, and their hoſts with them, &c. Two V. 10, 11.
Princes of Midian being ſlaine, Oreb and Zeeb, theſe two yet remained, and with them an Army of 15000 men, for 120000 had been before cut off, and this Army being fled beyond Jordan, is ſaid now to have been ſecure, becauſe they verily beleeved that Gedeon would never come over Jordan to purſue them. But hee commeth upon them and diſcomfiteth all the hoſt, and taketh theſe two V. 12.
Kings of Midian. Here againe it ſeemeth that Gedeon and his 300 men by a ſpeciall providence came upon the Midianites in the night, leſt being ſo few, if the enemies had ſeen them, they ſhould have beene animated, truſting to their farre greater numbers, to have made head againſt them, and ſo have made the victory more difficult. That this onſet was made alſo in the night, appeareth,
v. 13. for Gedeon returned early in the morning before the Sunne: wherefore his expeditions were admirable, after one nights travaile, when they firſt routed the Midianites Army, they purſued them all the next day, and being faint and weary, and wanting victualls, yet ſet upon them againe the night following;
and immediately, the victory being obtained, returned to Succoth and Penuel, to ſhew the Midianitiſh Kings in Gedeons hands, and to take revenge upon them. It is to bee held then that God, who was author of this Victory, did extraordinarily ſupport them in all this, that hee might have the greater praiſe.
For the place Karkor, it is not mentioned in the Vulgar Latine, but both in the Hebr. Chald. and Sept. it is; Ierome ſaith, there is a Caſtle at this day called Hieronym. in loc. Hebr.
Carcaria, a dayes journey diſtant from the rock, that is, from Arabia Petræa, as moſt probably he meant. One ſaith, that Karkar is a City in the halfe tribe of H.Bunt.patriar. travailes.
Manaſſeh beyond Jordan, from Jeruſalem 40 miles eaſtward. The way whereby Gedeon went was by Nobah and Iokbehah, the firſt in the halfe tribe of Manaſſeh alſo, Numb. 32. 40. and the other in Gad, Numb. 32. 35. beyond Iordan.

Gedeon returning with victory, ſheweth to the Elders of Succoth being 77 V. 14, 15.

men, the Kings of Midian, by whom they had upbraided him. And then hee V. 16. tooke bryers and thornes, and with them taught theſe men of Succoth. The Vulgar Latine hath it, Contrivit cum iis atque comminuit; and the Hebrew word וירע may bee rendred as well, hee tore them, as Pagnin hath it, as, hee taught them. And ſo it anſwereth beſt unto his threatning, v. 7. although another Chald. Paraphr. word ודשתי, and I will threſh, bee uſed, and ſo the Chaldee rendreth it, expreſſing the meaning to bee, that hee would lay bryars and thornes upon their naked bodies, and ſo drawing heavie threſhing inſtruments over them; not ceaſe tearing them till they were deſtroyed. If wee follow this reading, hee taught them, the meaning muſt bee, hee taught them, that his threatenings were not vaine.

V. 17. And he beat downe the tower of Penuel, and ſlew the men of the City, becauſe happily they fled to the Tower to defend it againſt him.

V. 18. Then he ſaid to Zeba and Zalmunna, What manner of men were they whom yee ſlew at Tabor, &c. Chap. 6. 2. it is ſaid, that the Iſraelites made them dennes in mountaines, &c. for feare of the Midianites: wherefore it is moſt probable that at this comming up of the Midianites, the brethren of Gedeon dwelling neare mount Tabor, fled thither to hide themſelves, but being eſpyed, were taken and ſlaine; and the newes hereof comming to Gedeons eares, hee now ma-keth this inquiry, that hee might the more juſtly take revenge upon theſe two Kings for their death. They anſwered, that they were like him, and each one reſembled the children of a King; and hereby he knew that they were his brethren. Hebr. each one as the forme of a Kings children; whereby it appeareth that Gedeon was a goodly man of perſon, and ſo ſeeming fit for that high dignity to which God had called him. Then Gedeon having firſt proteſted, that if V. 19, 20, 21. they had not ſlaine them, hee would have ſpared their lives, biddeth his firſt borne Jether to fall upon them, but hee fearing to doe it, hee himſelfe ſlew Lyra. them, as they rather deſired: accounting it, as Lyra noteth, both a greater diſhonour to die by the hand of a youth, and a more painfull death, becauſe hee could not ſlay them by reaſon of his weakneſſe for his tender age, but with Hugo Cardin. many blowes. This was done, ſaith Hugo, when hee was come againe to his Ferus. owne City Ophrah. And Ferus here noteth, that it was then no vile or baſe Note. office to put evill men to death, becauſe Gedeon aſſigned this office to his eldeſt ſonne; and in the books of the Kings wee read, that the chiefe about the King did executions, and by the Law of God, the hands of the witneſſes which were honeſt men, muſt bee firſt upon malefactors worthy of death. But now it is counted baſe out of ſuperſtition, partly, becauſe it belongeth to the ſecular Power, and partly, becauſe they are baſe perſons to whom it is now adayes committed.

Then the children of Iſrael for this great benefit of deliverance from the
V. 22, 23. Midianites, offer Gedeon and his poſterity to reigne over them, but hee refuſeth, Hugo Card. ſaying, The Lord ſhall reigne over them. So ſaith Hugo, Biſhops ſhould not rule as Lords, but labour and goe before the flock in a good example and doctrine, therefore thoſe flatterers lye, that ſay, the Lord Biſhop, &c. ſo Hugo.
But Gedeon in refuſing to rule over them, refuſed not to execute the office of a Judge, which all Deliverers had of courſe, but to exerciſe abſolute authority as a King, which might bee a foundation of much evill, when as the Subjects for feare of ſo great a power ſhould bee drawne to any evill. But of the difference between the rule of a King and of a Judge, ſee at the beginning of this Ferus. Booke. This offer of the people to Gedeon, ſaith Ferus, was not without great ſinne, and no leſſe modeſty did ſhine in him in refuſing it. For God had uſed all meanes to have the glory of this Victory aſcribed to him onely, but they give it to Gedeon, as if by his power they had been delivered, making no mention of God. But Gedeons modeſt refuſall of ſuch honour unjuſtly offered, is to bee followed by us, in not accepting honours unlawfully put upon us, but rejecting them.

V. 24, 25, 26. Gedeon having rejected the Kingdom offered, deſireth the ear-rings of their prey, which they willingly gave unto him, the weight whereof was 1700 ſhe-kels

kels of gold, beſides ornaments and chaines, and purple rayment, and the chaines about their Camels necks. And hereof Gedeon made an Ephod, &c. What an Ephod is, ſee Exod. 28. 6. it was a robe for the High-Prieſt, made of gold, blew, skarlet, purple, and fine twined linnen, girt unto him with a girdle of like matter. St. Auguſtine here inquireth how ſo much gold could be imployed about ſo little a worke, and anſwereth, either that there is a ſynecdoche in the words, part being put for the whole, Thereof hee made an Ephod, that is, of ſo much thereof as would ſuffice; or elſe he made not onely an Ephod, but a Tabernacle, Ark, and other Prieſtly garments, to miniſter in about the Tabernacle, which was a ſinne in him, ſeeing one place onely which the Lord ſhould chooſe was appointed, in which they ſhould ſacrifice. And as Lyra and Ferus have it, Gedeon did this out of a good intent, becauſe the Lord had there appeared unto him, and accepted an offering before at his hands, and there hee had built an Altar, and offered ſacrifice by Gods owne Command, Chap. 6. Wherefore it is moſt probable that hee himſelfe was the Prieſt here, and miniſtred in the Prieſts garments in Ophrah, as the Prieſts comming of Aaron did in Shiloh; ſo Hugo, who alſo ſaith, that hee made all Prieſtly garments, and ſet up a Tabernacle and Altar in Ophrah, beſides that in Shiloh; ſo likewiſe Comeſtor, Toſtatus, Theodoret, and others. But theſe are onely mens conjectures, nothing being written more, but that hee made an Ephod, happily making no uſe of it, no more then of the Altar, but onely keeping it for a monument of ſo famous a victory, out of a gratefull minde to God, who was the author of it. But Procopius thinketh that this Ephod made by Gedeon was an Idol, becauſe hee is ſaid to have put it, or, as it is in Hebrew, made it to ſtand in Ophrah, and all Iſrael went a whoring after it; but an Ephod, ſuch as the High-prieſt uſed, could not ſtand. But this argument is of little force, for the fleece of wool, Chap. 6. is alſo ſaid by the ſame word to bee put in the floore. And an Ephod is never put for an Idol, but for a garment either uſed by the High-prieſt, which was moſt rich and coſtly; or one uſed by the other Prieſts or Levites, or by other Perſons about holy things, as, 2 Sam. 6. 14. and theſe were made of fine Linnen, and the word commeth of אפד ſuperinduere. For the peoples going a whoring after it, that was, as Lyra noteth, according to both Hebrew and Chriſtian Writers, by uſing it in the ſervice of Idols after the death of Gedeon, who had uſed it onely in the worſhip and ſervice of God. And herein ſome labour to excuſe Gedeon from ſinne, as Toſtatus, Serrarius, Sallianus, and Bonfrerius, both becauſe hee is ſaid to have dyed in a good old age, v. 32. and Hebr. 11. hee is numbred amongſt thoſe that were famous for their faith and ſanctity; And laſtly, becauſe the children of Iſrael are ſaid immediately after his death to have ſerved Baalim, but during his life they ſerved the Lord, v. 33. But becauſe it turned to the ruine of his houſe, and was an occaſion of ſinning to many more, it is plaine that hee ſinned herein; ſo likewiſe hold Auguſtine, Theodoret, Lyra, Ferus, &c. Hee had a good intention indeed by thus inſtituting the ſervice of God in his owne City, to ſet up a monument of Gods gracious favours towards him and all Iſrael, who had there appeared unto him, and cauſed him to ſet up an Altar, and initiated him, as it were, into the Prieſtly Office, by commanding him to offer ſacrifice there, and becauſe for this ſervice Prieſtly robes and garments were neceſſary, hee thought it fit to provide a glorious Ephod, and girdle and breſtplate, with the Urim and Thummim, whereby to conſult with the Lord; and to this end gathered together this great maſſe of Gold, amounting, as one hath counted it, to 1275 l. But becauſe it was againſt that charge Deut. 12. 5. 16. 5. it was a ſinne in him, and turned afterwards to a greater ſinne to all Iſrael, through the idolatry upon this occaſion here ſet up. Wherefore Ferus hence giveth warning to all men to take heed that they fall not, ſith Gedeon, and other ſuch holy men have not bin free. And we may note moreover, that a good intention doth not juſtifie our actions, if they bee in any thing againſt the revealed will and command of God. For thoſe arguments that are brought for his juſtification. Hee is commended at his death, notwithſtanding this fact, be-

Aug. Qu. 41. in Jud.

Deut. 12. 5.
Deut. 16. 5, 6.

Lyra
Ferus.

Hugo Cardin.

Schol. Hiſt.

Procopius.

Lyra

Toſtatus.
Serrarius, &c.

Auguſt. Theod.
Ferus.

H. B Patriarks travailes.

Note.

cauſe it proceeded from weakneſſe, and was not imputed to him; neither doth his being ranked amongſt the moſt worthy, free him from all ſinne, becauſe no man liveth and ſinneth not. And for the laſt thing alledged, it doth not follow that hee ſinned not, becauſe the people are ſaid after his death to have ſerved Baal; but onely, that neither hee nor they ſinned ſo groſſely whilſt hee lived, but onely about the place, and perſon miniſtring in this Ephod, wherein all the errour yet lay. But becauſe this was an occaſion of ſtumbling, and without any direction from God, yea, contrary to the generall Law given, it cannot poſſibly bee excuſed from ſinne, although the braſen Serpent ſet up by Moſes, and afterwards turned into an occaſion of ſin, was no ſin in him, becauſe it was appointed by God.

V. 28. Lyra. Then was Midian ſubdued, &c. and the Countrey was in quietneſſe 40 yeares, in the dayes of Gedeon. This, though added after the ruine of Gedeon and his houſe, ſpoken of, v. 7. yet is to bee underſtood as the concluſion of his victorious proceeding before related: For his houſe did not firſt come to ruine, and then the Midianites ſubdued, but after this long time of tranquillity hee died, and then all his houſe came to ruine, as is after declared, by occaſion of this ſtumbling blocke by him put in Ophrah. Wherefore that ſaying, v. 27. This turned to the ruine of Gedeon, and of all his houſe, is not to bee underſtood, as though Gedeon in his perſon were hereby brought to ruine; but the words added, and all his houſe, are exegeticall, ſhew, what is meant by Gedeon, viz. his houſe and poſterity, for hee is ſaid to have died in a good old age, v. 32. which is never ſpoken of any that came to ruine, but dyed in peace, and in the favour of God. For the peace of 40 years in his dayes, it is to bee underſtood as that which hath been before ſpoken in concluding the Hiſtories of other Judges, the time of ſeven yeares wherein they were oppreſſed by the Midianites, ſince Baraks time, being counted into this number.

V. 29, 30, 31. Lyra. Ferus. See Ch. 9. 18. Gen. 25. 6. Here is ſhewed, how the Midianites being ſubdued, Gedeon dwelt in his owne houſe and lived to beget 70. ſonnes of his wives, who were many, and one Abimelech of his concubine. It was a thing then not unuſuall amongſt the beſt to have many wives, and concubines alſo, which were, as Lyra ſheweth, wives alſo, and not ſuch, as they did unlawfully lye withall, as whores, ſo that, as Ferus noteth, here is nothing to patronize ſuch impure and wicked living. For concubines were wives, that were ſervants, and they onely were called wives, that were free women, and had the priviledge of wives in reſpect of dowry and their childrens inheriting, whereas the children of concubines inherited not, but had onely ſuch gifts, as their father would give them, as it is ſaid of the concubines of Abraham, that he gave them gifts, and ſent them away from his ſonne Iſaac.

Note. For the number of Gedeons ſonnes being ſo many, and Abimelech in particular, theſe things are here ſet downe to prepare to the hiſtory following Ch. 9. of their deſtruction, that their ruine for his one fault about the Ephod might be the more remarkable, and that their houſes ſhall now continue long without doubt, when they have a very numerous iſſue, for they may all be ſoone cut off.

V. 32, 33, 34 Ferus. Here Gedeon dyeth, and after his death, the children of Iſrael fall to idolatry and forſake God againe, and ill requite Gedeon in his children for all his kindeneſſe and good deſerts towards them. Gedeon had beaten downe the Altar of Baal, but they now ſet it up againe, and maketh Baalberith their god, the Vulgar Latin hath it, made a covenant with Baal that hee ſhould be their God: according to which, as ſome note, they did not onely ſerve Baal, as in times paſt, but growing now more mad upon that groſſe idolatry they bound themſelves by covenant, that this Baal ſhould be their god for ever. The Sept. have it, they made Baalberith a teſtament, that he ſhould be their god. And indeed Berith ſignifieth a covenant, and Baalberith, the Lord of the covenant, and happily it was ſo called, becauſe an idoll, that who ſo ſerved bound themſelves ſolemnly by covenant to ſerve him for ever, which other tranſlatours reſpecting rendred the words not verbatim, but according to this ſenſe. And how ill they requited Gedeon, the chapter following doth declare.

Myſtically by Gedeon chacing his enemies, and comming to Succoth, and being mocked, and then to Penuel, and mocked there alſo and deſpiſed as a man of no might, wee may underſtand Chriſt derided both by the common ſort of Jews, and by the Prieſts and Scribes. But as Gedeon went manfully on and ſubdued his enemies and then came againe and deſtroyed thoſe mockers, ſo Chriſt conquered over all helliſh powers in his death, and then returning with his juſt judgement deſtroyed the Jews and brake downe their Tower in Panuel, that is, their temple, the place of Gods preſence, as the word penuel ſignifieth, the face of God.

The Myſtery Lyra.

CHAP. IX.

V.1. AFter the death of Gedeon, his ſonne Abimelech, whom hee had by his Con-
V.2. cubine of Schechem, ſought ambitiouſly by the helpe of the Schechemites
V.3. to be King over Iſrael, and prevailed ſo farre that he obtained money out of the V.4. houſe of Baalberith to hire a band of men, and with them went and ſlew all his brethren at Ophrah, except Jotham, that hid himſelfe, and then by the men of Shechem and of Millo he was made King. A wicked ſonne moſt unlike unto his godly Father both in ſeeking the Kingdome, which hee refuſed, and in ſo cruelly murthering his brethren. Hee uſeth two arguments to move the Schechemites. 1. Becauſe it was better, that one ſhould reigne over them, then 70. brethren all together, which would breed a great confuſion. 2. Becauſe hee was their bone and their fleſh, ſo that his honour would be their honour, being ſo neerely allyed unto them, and they ſhould be ſure, as in nature hee was bound, that hee would chiefly ſeeke to promote their welfare, eſpecially if by their meanes hee obtained the Kingdome.

V. 4. And they gave him 70 pieces of Silver out of the houſe of Baalberith, wherewith Abimelech hired light and vaine perſons. It ſeemeth by this, that the houſe of their Idol was their common Treaſury, ſo greatly were they already addicted to Idolatry, and ſo great confidence did they put in this falſe God. For 70 pieces of ſilver, the Vulg. Latine hath, 70 pondo argenti, but Hebr. it is onely 70 of ſilver, and likewiſe in the Sept. and Chald. which are commonly underſtood to bee 70 ſhekels of ſilver. But becauſe this may ſeem to be too ſmall a ſumme to hire a ſufficient number of men to obtaine a Kingdome, ſome thinke, that ſo many pounds of ſilver are rather meant, and ſome ſo many Talents. The Rabbins ſay, that by ſuch a number of ſilver ſhekels are meant in the Pentateuch, pounds in the Prophets, and talents in the Hagiographa; and that the booke of Judges is one of the bookes of the Prophets: which if it were ſo, 70 pounds muſt bee meant here. But becauſe this rule is uncertaine, it is beſt to underſtand ſhekels here, and if it ſhall ſeeme too ſmall a ſumme to hire Souldiers, it is to bee underſtood, both that a little money was more by farre in thoſe dayes for the hiring of men, then a great deale now; and the men hired by Abimelech muſt bee conſidered, they were vaine perſons, and needy, and therefore ſuch as might bee hired for ſmall wages, in hope of better preferment, and ſome booty to bee gotten at the intended execution; and that they were drawne as well by a deſire of innovation, as by ſilver. For vain and light perſons, whom Abimelech is ſaid with this money to hire, the Vulg. Latine hath, inopes & vagos; and the firſt word in Heb. properly ſignifieth empty, and the other light, that is, either poore men empty of money, or of grace, and inconſtant, lightly drawn any way, and ſo fit for ſuch a wicked deſigne.

Vatablus Arias Montanus, Sa. Sallianus.

V.5. With theſe men Abimelech went to Ophrah, and ſlew his 70 Brethren all upon one ſtone; moſt probably ſtriking off their heads, their necks being laid downe upon it. Thus in the moſt horrible ſinne of fratricide hee began his Kingdome, as the barbarous Turkes have long done, that there might bee no competitors of the Kingdome. But as he begun in blood, ſo hee miſerably died, v. 54.

Then the Shechemites and the houſe of Millo made him King, By the plaine of the the pillar in Shechem. The Vulg. Latine by the Oake that ſtood in Shechem; ſo likewiſe the Sept. and Hebr. it is עם אלון מצב אשר בשכם by the ſtanding Oake, or Plain which is in Shechem. For the word אלון ſignifieth an Oake or a Plaine indifferently; and מצב any ſtanding thing as well as a Pillar. But becauſe we read no where of any Pillar in Shechem, and it agreeth not ſo well to ſay, they made him King by the Plain, as by an Oake ſtanding in Shechem; I rather ſubſcribe to the Vulgar Latine herein. But whereas, for all the houſe of Millo, it hath, all the families of the City of Millo, there is more ſupplyed then in the Hebrew, and it is a queſtion whether Millo were a City, or ſome particular place about Shechem, becauſe we read no where of any ſuch City, but onely of a very deep and low place between Mount Sion and Moriah, called Millo, 1 King. but that could not bee this Millo, becauſe it was in Jeruſalem, this neare Shechem, and by ſome thought to bee a place where many people Serrarius. dwelt, called the Tower of Shechem, hereafter in this Chapter, v. 47. for it was not in Shechem, as appeareth, becauſe Shechem was firſt deſtroyed and ſowne with ſalt, and then the news of it comming to them of this Tower, who are ſaid to have been a thouſand men and women, they fled to an hold of Baalberith, and there were by Abimelech and his men burnt to death, according to the judgement called for againſt the men of Shechem and of Millo by Jotham Gedeons youngeſt ſonne, v. 20. Wherefore the event anſwering his imprecation in the inhabitants of this place called the Tower, being a diſtinct place from Shechem, although under the juriſdiction thereof, as the name implyeth, maketh it moſt probable that it was the ſame with Millo, which becauſe it ſignifieth fulneſſe, might be ſo called from its being ſo full of inhabitants.

V. 7, 8. When Jotham the onely ſonne of Gedeon (who had eſcaped, v. 5. when all his brethren were put to death) heard that they had made Abimelech King, hee went and ſtood upon mount Gerizim, and cryed out to the men of Shechem, V. 9, 10, 11, &c. ſaying, The trees went to anoint a King over them, and they ſaid to the Olive, Come and reign over us, &c. Mount Gerizim was neare to Shechem, ſo that the men of Shechem might hear him ſpeaking, but could not eaſily come to him, by reaſon of the ſteepneſſe of the Mount on that ſide. The thing pronounced by him with ſo high and lowd a voice, was a tale or fable of the trees that would needs ſet a King over them; by trees the men of Iſrael being underſtood. The firſt deſired for a King was the Olive, the ſecond the Fig-tree, the third the Vine, who all refuſed, the fourth the Bramble, who accepted of Ferus. this offer. By the Olive full of fatneſſe were ſet forth Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, &c. full of the riches of grace; by the Fig-tree Moſes, Joſhua, and other Judges, ſweet for their meekneſſe, charity, and beneficence; by the Vine, Gedeon, through his faith and vertue chearing God and men; laſtly, by the Bramble, Abimelech, the worſt, and the moſt unworthy of all, for hee, as the Bramble, yeelded no good fruit, but was worthy to bee cut downe and caſt into the fire. Yet when as all the reſt in humility refuſed to bee Kings, and Gedeon in particular, to whom it had been offered, Abimelech ambitiouſly ſought it, and attained to it, being unquiet, prickle, and cruell. And this hath been the manner of wiſe men, both amongſt the people of God, and the Heathen, by invented Fables or Parables, the more ſignificantly to expreſſe other things, that the deeper impreſſion might thus be made in the minds; of the rude and ignorant, and they might be taught wiſdome, out of whoſe minds the ſayings of the wiſe would otherwiſe ſoone depart, neither could they bee ſo capable of The Morall. inſtruction. For the Morall of this, it ſheweth, 1. That the godly are like unto fruitfull trees, the wicked like briars that bear no fruit, but tear and ſcratch thoſe that come neare them. 2. That men naturally deſire things hurtfull for them, of which they have no need, as the trees had no need of a King. 3. That the beſt men are moſt humble and content with that eſtate in which God hath ſet them, neither doe they ſeeke worldly honours, unto which they are not called: and the worſe and more wicked any are, the more ambitious, bold, and preſumptuous they bee. 4. That ſuch onely as be wiſe, faithfull, and milde ought to have domination; hitherto Ferus. Lyra following ing the Hebrews, underſtandeth by the three former, Othniel, Deborah, and Gedeon, Lyra.

to all which the Kingdom had been offered, although it be not expreſſed, but onely touching Gedeon; and others hee ſaith, underſtand the other ſonnes of Gedeon, ſome of which were as the Olive, fat in riches; ſome as the Fig-tree, ſweet in conditions; and others as the Vine, fruitfull in children; but none of them was made King, although more noble by birth, for they came of free women; but the bramble Abimelech, the moſt baſe of all, was advanced by the Shechemites, becauſe hee was their fleſh and their bone. But becauſe the brethren of Abimelech were all cut off by the help of the Shechemites, it agreeth not ſo well to underſtand them by the Olive, Fig-tree, and Vine, to which the Kingdom was offered, but rather the three to whom it is applyed by Lyra. For the ſaying of the Vine, Shall I leave my Wine, wherewith I cheare God and man? V. 13.
this of the Wines chearing of God, ſaith R. Solomon is ſo ſpoken, becauſe the R. Solomon.
Levites did not at the time of ſacrificing ſing the praiſes of God, untill that the drinke-offering, which was of Wine, was powred out upon the Altar. Or, as Ferus hath it, to ſet forth the great refreſhing that is in Wine, ſo that not onely man drinketh of it and is cheared, but God, as it were, in his drink-offerings, when by his holy fire he conſumeth it, being well pleaſed herewith. Other Expoſitions are alſo brought by ſome, as that by God Chriſt might be meant;
or the falſe Gods which they worſhipped, who were thought by Idolaters to eat, and to drink Wine, as Bel was; but I reſt in the former.

And if not, let fire come out of the bramble and devoure the Cedars of Lebanon; V. 15.
that is, if the bramble Abimelech being made King, yee doe not quietly ſubmit unto him, but ſtirre againſt him, this ſhall turne to the deſtruction of the very Cedars, that is, of the Princes and Elders of Shechem. Iſidore ſaith, that Iſidor.
rhamnus a bramble, the word here uſed is parvus dumus, which being much ſhaken with the winde, a fire commeth out of it. And this is accordingly applyed by way of imprecation.

Let fire come out from Abimelech and devoure the men of Shechem and Millo, V. 20.
and a fire come from the men of Shechem and devoure Abimelech. Of fire comming from the bramble, many others write alſo, as Toſtatus, Mercerus, Forſterus, Carthuſianus ex Joſepho, &c.

When Abimelech had reigned three yeares over Iſrael, God ſent an evill Spirit V. 22. between Abimelech and the men of Shechem, &c. For Jotham hee is ſaid in the meane ſeaſon to have run away and dwelt in Bera, that is, ſaith Adrichomius, in V. 21.
the tribe of Dan; but Bonfrerius, in Judah; Junius, in Simeon, citing Joſh. 19. 8. Adrichomius.
H. Bunt. Patriarchs travailes, ſaith it was in Judah, 10 miles from Jeruſalem weſtward; whereſoever, it ſeemeth that in this place he was ſafe from Abimelechs tyranny; and therefore although he be ſaid to have reigned three years over Iſrael, yet it was not over all Iſrael, but a part of Iſrael, viz. Shechem and ſome other bordering places. For the evill Spirit ſent, Hugo ſaith that it was the Hugo Gard.
Devill, now permitted by God to diſturbe the Peace between Abimelech and the Shechemites, that they might all come to deſtruction, as they had deſerved, by their ingratitude towards Gedeon, and the ſhedding of ſo much innocent blood of his children. For God hath the Devill tyed up, as a Shepheard a dogge, that hee may not runne amongſt the Sheep to devoure them, but for horrible wickedneſſes hee letteth him looſe, as at this time, and ſo hee ſoweth the ſeeds of diſcord amongſt them. St. Auguſtine moveth a queſtion whether this evill Auguſt. Qu. 45.
Spirit were ſent by God, or onely permitted, and concludeth that it is not abſurd to hold, that hee was ſent to take revenge upon ſinne. And it ſeemeth indeed to bee no more then a bare permiſſion, even an effectuall ſending of the evill Spirit, who is the Spirit of contention, to ſtirre up this ſtriſe amongſt them to their ruine. And this was juſt in God, the revenger of wrongs, at whoſe ?
liberty it is to take what way hee pleaſeth to puniſh the wicked. Or by this evill Spirit wee may underſtand the Spirit of hatred againſt Abimelech, in conſideration of his fore-paſſed tyranny and unworthineſſe, making them now to ſeeke his depoſing; whereupon a malignant Spirit againſt them was ſtirred up in him, and ſo they attempted on both ſides mutually their owne deſtruction, that

V. 24. that the blood of the 70 ſonnes of Gedeon might come upon them all, where his ſons ſlaine are called 70, as alſo v. 18. although Jotham, who was one of them eſcaped, and ſo there wanted one of this number; and this is thus ſaid, for the rotundity of the number, as is uſuall in other like paſſages of Scripture, the one that eſcaped their hands, being as it were none, and their purpoſe was to have killed him alſo.

V. 25. And the men of Shechem ſet lyers in waite for him on the tops of the mountaines
, and they robbed all that came by that way, &c. They repenting that they had made Abimelech King, now worke treaſon againſt him, ſeeking by Forces placed for the purpoſe to cut him off: ſo mutable are the mindes of the Note. people, and therefore ſuch as are carryed by their honouring of them, do build upon a moſt fickle foundation, that all wiſe men will take heed of. Theſe Forces thus ſet to waite for Abimelechs comming, whilſt hee delayed, as all unruly Souldiers doe, make a prey of the Paſſengers.

V. 26. And Gaal the ſonne of Ebed came with his brethren to Shechem, &c. Who this Gaal was, it is not known, but certainly he was a man ambitious of honour, and one that by his comming made them the more confidently to proceed in their rebellion, for it is ſaid, that they put their truſt in him; and now it being their Vintage time, they went boldly out, and gathered their grapes, and made Wine, and were merry in the houſe of their God Baal, eating and drinking, and curſing Abimelech; ſhewing hereby, now that they had gotten them ſuch a Captaine, how light they ſet by him: the Vulg. Latine hath it, They went Lyra. out into the fields, waſting the Vinyards; that is, ſaith Lyra, the Vineyards of Abimelech in contempt of him; but Hebr. there is no word ſignifying waſting, but the cutting downe of grapes, and that not in his, but in their Vineyards.
Bonfrerius. Wherefore the Latine tranſlation is not right herein, as the Jeſuite himſelfe confeſſeth. And as erroneous is it, v. 24. before-going, To requite the wickedneſſe in killing the 70 ſonnes of Jerubbaal upon Abimelech their brother, and the reſt of the Princes of Shechem which holpe him: whereby it may ſeeme, that this was the thing which the Shechemites aimed at in their revolting from Abimelech, whereas indeed according to the Hebrew verity, it was a Divine providence, that aimed in this revolt at the paying home both of Abimelech and of the
V. 28. Shechemites according to their deſerts. And v. 28. whereas Hebr. it is, Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that wee ſhould ſerve him? is not hee the ſonne of Jerubbaal?
and is not Zebul his Officer? ſerve the men of Hamor the father of Shechem.
The Vulg. Latine hath it, Is not hee the ſonne of Jerubbaal? and hath ſet Zebul his ſervant Prince over the men of Hamor the father of Shechem? But in this difference the Septuagint agreeth with the Latine, and a better ſenſe ſeemeth to make for it, then can be in the other. For is it likely that Gaal in diſſwading them from ſerving Abimelech, would move them to ſerve the men of Hamor, when as, v. 29.
hee plainly ſheweth that he would have the dominion himſelf? And who were the men of Hamor but the Shechemites, and how could they be exhorted to ſerve Junius. themſelves? Junius in reſolving this, ſaith, the ſcope of his exhortation is, that they ſhould not ſuffer themſelves to bee in a worſe condition then the inhabitants of that City of old were in the dayes of Hamor, who was as a father to them. But then it ſhould have been ſaid, ſerve as the men of Hamor, and not ſerve the men of Hamor. Wherefore I muſt needs rather ſubſcribe to the Vulg.
Latine and Septuagint herein, becauſe without pricks, as the Hebrew ſometime went, before the Maſoreth, the word עבדו here uſed may well bee rendred, his ſervant. And thus rendred it agreeth beſt, becauſe Abimelech regarded them ſo little, that he ſet a baſe fellow, a ſervant of his over them, and lived not amongſt them himſelfe, there was no reaſon why they ſhould endure his reigne Gen. 34. any longer. And he calleth the Shechemites the men of Hamor, not for that they came of Hamor, but from Hamor the father of Shechem, to commend the antiquity of that City, becauſe his hiſtory was well knowne, and that this City ſtood in Jacobs dayes. Touching the former words, Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem? the meaning is, is not Abimelech a baſe man, that came of a Maidſervant, and by murther attained to the throne? and is not Shechem a great

City and famous, and therefore unfit to be under his dominon? yea, is he not the ſon of Jerubbaal, who was neither of us, nor a friend, but a deadly enemy to our God Baalberith, and ſhall we then ſerve him?

V. 29.

Would to God this people were under my hand, then would I remove Abimelech: And hee ſaid to Abimelech, Increaſe thine Army and come out. The Septuagint, And I would ſay to Abimelech, Increaſe thine Army and come out; but Hebr. it is, and hee ſaid, that is, as Vatablus hath it, Gaal ſaid thus vauntingly in the abſence of Abimelech, by a Proſopopeia ſpeaking to him as preſent. The Vulgar Latine, And it was ſaid to Abimelech. Pagninus, dixit quiſpiam Abimelecho: but the firſt is beſt, becauſe Zebul the Governour of the City under Abimelech, hearing theſe words of Gaal, ſent ſecretly unto him, to certifie him thereof, v. 30, 31. and then moſt probably did Abimelech firſt heare of it; and all this while, ſaith Lyra, did Zebul make a ſhew to Gaal, as if he had been on his ſide.

Vatablus.

Pagninus.

Lyra.

V. 30, 31, 32.

But he ſent privily to Abimelech to come againſt the City with his Army, and to lye all night in the fields, and early in the morning to aſſault it, who did accordingly, and lay in wait againſt Shechem with foure Companies. Then Gaal ſtanding in the gate, they aroſe and came towards the City, and Gaal at the inſtigation of Zebul went out and fought with them, but was beaten and chaſed, and many of his men overthrowne. The place to which Gaal ſent to Abimelech, is held to bee Ophrah, where his father Gedeon dwelt, 10 miles from Shechem, v. 37. For theſe words, One Company commeth from the middle of the land; the Vulgar Latine hath it, de umbilico terræ, but the navell is put for the middle, becauſe it is in the midſt of the body: the Sept. have more words, By the ſea from the contiguous navel of the earth.

V. 33, 34.

V. 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40.

H. Bunting Patria. travailes

Unto theſe words, And Abimelech chaſed him, and hee fled before him, the Vulg. Latine addeth, and hee drove him into the City, and this may ſeem to have been ſo ſaid, becauſe v. 41. Zebul is ſaid to have thruſt out Gaal and his brethren that they ſhould not reſt in Shechem, wherefore they entred in with the men of Shechem fleeing, for if they had been kept out, they had at that time been all ſlaine. Thus wee ſee that the union amongſt wicked men founded in ſin, continueth not, but ſoone breaketh out through Gods juſt judgement into moſt deadly enmity. And againe, that the moſt wicked may prevaile in their Wars for a time, as did Abimelech, for the puniſhment of other wicked men, themſelves receiving their juſt reward ere long, as hee alſo did, and the Beaſt in the Revelation.

Note.

V. 41.

And Abimelech dwelt at Arumah; and Zebul thruſt out Gaal, &c. Here is ſhewed when the battaile was ended that day, where Abimelech with his men reſted till the next day, viz. at Arumah; the Vulg. Latine Ruma, which is the ſame, ſaith Jerome, with Arimathea, it was doubleſſe a place neare Shechem, becauſe he was to renew the warre againſt it the next day. The word ישב rendred, hee dwelt, ſignifieth alſo, hee ſate, and ſo the Vulg. Latine hath it, and more aptly, becauſe of his ſhort ſtay there. As for Gaal, Zebul had ſo perſwaded the Shechemites againſt him, for his battaile ſo ill fought that day, that hee was not ſuffered, nor his brethren, to reſt at Shechem ſo much as that night, but was immediately expelled, ſo Joſephus: ſo that Zebul, who had before diſſembled amity with Gaal, now ſhewed plainly his hoſtile mind againſt him for his pride, treachery, and vain-glory.

Joſephus.

V. 42, 43, 44.

The next day the men of Shechem comming out to fight with Abimelech, hee divided his Army into three parts, and haſtening with one part to the gate, hee appointed the other two to fight in the fields, and ſo entred the City, ſlew all the people, and beat down the City, and ſowed it with ſalt, which laſt thing was done in token of utter deſolation, becauſe ſalt maketh ground barren. So that hereby Abimelech ſhewed his hatefull mind againſt his owne City, not willing that ever any people ſhould inhabite there againe, for inhabitants are, as it were, the fruits of a City: that Millaine in Italy was ſerved likewiſe, Anno 1162. Sigonius writeth. Whereas it is ſaid here, that the people went out of Shechem next day into the fields, Ioſephus and Procopius ſay, that they went to their Grape-gathering, thinking that Abimelech had been gone. But this is altogether

Sigonius de regno Italiæ.
Joſephus.
Procopius.

altogether improbable, becauſe Abimelech having obtained the victory the day before, would not in all likelihood ceaſe to proſecute it the next day, till that he had deſtroyed ſuch Rebells. Wherefore it is rather to bee held, that they came out to battaile, if they could meet with him, truſting to their number; and therefore Abimelech with all care ordereth the battaile againſt them accordingly: unleſſe it ſhall bee thought, that the Shechemites ſuppoſing Abimelech to be pacified by the thruſting out of Gaal, went without feare about their husbandry.

V. 40.

V. 47, 48, 49.

Adrichomius.

The City of Shechem being thus ruined, they of the Tower of Shechem hearing it, flee to the houſe of Baalberith, and are there burnt together with that Hold to the number of 1000 by Abimelech and his men cutting downe and bringing boughs of trees for that purpoſe. And theſe, as hath been already ſhewed, were moſt probably the men of Millo, that had holpen to make Abimelech King. Mount Salmon, from whence this wood was taken, was neare Shechem, as Adrichomius hath it; and hereof it is ſpoken, Pſal. 68. 14.

V. 50.

V. 51, 52, 53, 54, 55.

V. 57.

Note.

Then went Abimelech to Thebez, and fought againſt it, and tooke it, &c. After that God had uſed Abimelech to execute judgement upon the Shechemites and the men of Mill, now it is ſhewed how he alſo was judged for his tyranny. Approaching to the gate of the Tower of Thebez, to which the inhabitants fled, to ſet fire upon it, as hee had done upon the Tower of Shechem, a woman caſt downe a piece of a milſtone upon his head, and brake his skull, and then his Armour-bearer ſlew him, as hee commanded him. Thebez is thought to have been a Colony of the Shechemites, as Millo was, or the tower of Shechem. Adrichomius ſaith, it waa but one mile diſtant from Shechem. Wherefore the Shechemites and the men of Millo being deſtroyed, Abimelech haſtened to the deſtruction of this Place alſo, that he might not leave any thing pertaining to the Shechemites undefaced. But here he miſerably periſhed, according to the curſe of Jotham, as is noted, v. 57. both touching him and the men of Shechem, that had aided him in ſo unnaturall and cruell a murther, of which curſe ſee v. 20. where, becauſe as a fire is called for to come from Abimelech againſt the Shechemites and the men of Millo to devoure them, ſo from the Shechemites to devoure Abimelech, it appeareth that the people of Thebez belonged to them. So judgement may bee deferred, but at length it is certainly executed upon the heads of all the wicked, and the curſe of the righteous againſt ſuch taketh effect; ſo the curſe of Joſhua, Ioſh. 6. 26. tooke effect, 1 Kings 16. 34. and the curſe of Eliſha, 2 Kings 2. 24. and there be many examples of Parents curſing their wicked children, as Noah curſed Canaan.

The Myſtery.
Iſidor.

Myſtically by Abimelech, Iſidor underſtandeth Antichriſt, who reigneth over vaine and light perſons, as the Bramble, and in the end, both hee and they goe to deſtruction: But neither the Olive, Vine, nor Figtree will reigne over ſuch, that is, neither the Spirit of Grace, the Vine Chriſt Jeſus, nor the Law, ſet forth by the Figtree planted in Gods Vineyard. The 70 ſons of Gedeon ſlaine by Abimelech, ſet forth the Nations of the world divided into 70 Languages, amongſt whom Antichriſt worketh great deſtructions; but Jotham eſcapeth and ſtandeth upon Mount Gerizim, thence prophecying the deſtruction of Abimelech, &c. by whom the remnant eſcaping the fury of Antichriſt, are ſet forth; but neither can they eſcape or propheſie, but by getting up to the top of bleſſing, that is, by an high degree of faith and vertue; for Gerizim was appointed by Moſes to pronounce the bleſſing there.

Deut. 27. 12.

CHAP. X.

V. 1

AND after Abimelech there aroſe to defend Iſrael Tolah the ſonne of Puah, the ſon of Dodo, a man of Iſſachar; the Vulg. Latine hath it, The ſonne of Puah, the Uncle of Abimelech, taking Dodo for an appellative, ſignifying his Uncle, and not for a proper name, and becauſe Abimelech was laſt ſpoken of, preſuming, that by his Vncle was meant Abimelechs Uncle. But in this reading the word ſonne in the ſecond place is left out, which is in the Hebrew, which being ſupplied, thus, ſonne of Puah, ſonne of his Uncle, would make it without ſenſe; beſides that this Tola is ſaid to have beene of Iſſachar, but Abimelech by his father of Manaſſeh, and ſo likewiſe moſt probably was his Uncle. I am not ignorant, what they anſwer to this laſt, that defend the Latin tranſlation: but that of omitting theſe words, the ſonne, cannot be anſwered. Take wee therefore Dodo for a proper name of Tolah his Grand-father. From what this Tola defended or ſaved Iſrael, it is not ſaid, or his ſucceſſor Iair. For no enemies are ſaid in their times to have oppreſſed Iſrael. It is therefore to bee held, that Abimelech being by Gods juſt judgement taken away, the kingdome ſet up by men ceaſed, and was of no continuance, but yet God was not wanting to his people, but immediately raiſed them up a Judge, according to the forme of government by him conſtituted, and hee being dead, another, both which according to their office counſelled and directed the people in the right way, and were ready to defend them againſt their enemies if any ſhould have riſen up againſt them, and even by this they ſaved them, that they kept them from idolatry, as appeareth v. 6. for after theſe two it is ſaid, that Iſrael ſinned againe, implying that in their dayes they were kept from ſerving Baalim, and conſequently from the oppreſſions of their enemies, and if not all the time of Jair, as I ſhall ſhew v. 8. yet hee kept them from ſinning ſo publikely, and for his ſake they were ſpared from judgements. From all which we may gather both that the acts of men againſt Gods ordinance are vaine, and ſhall ſoone come to nought, as the Kingdome ſet by the Schechemites did, and alſo, that the Governour or Prince, that keepeth his people from idolatry, ſaveth them as well as he that fighteth for them, and therefore the word להושע is here uſed, v. 1. There roſe up after Abimelech to ſave Iſrael, Tolah, &c. Whereas he is ſaid to be of Iſſachar, Ferus noteth well, that hee was of an obſcure tribe, and moſt probably a meane man; but Jair, his ſucceſſour a great man, for he had 30. ſonnes, that had each one a City of his owne, and rode as Princes. Thus it ſeemeth good unto God ſometime to preferre to the higheſt office meane men, and ſometime noble men, that promotion might be acknowledged not to come from the eaſt or the weſt, as the Pſalmiſt hath it, but that God raiſeth them up as he pleaſeth, & by every one be praiſed accordingly. Tolah is ſaid further to have dwelt in Shamir of Mount Ephraim. This Shamir, ſaith Junius, was not that mentioned, Joſh. 15.48. for that was in Judah, but a place in Ephraim bordering upon Iſſachar. And although he was of Iſſachar, being now called to the office of a Judge, he placed himſelfe here, that he might dwell moſt commodiouſly for the people, and be nearer for Jeruſalem, this Shamir being but 12. miles from it. He judged Iſrael 23. yeares, that is, appeaſing the tumults at the end of Abimelechs reigne, reſtoring the true Religion, & adminiſtring juſtice according to Gods Laws. How he or Jair came to this office, it is not ſaid, whether by the election of the people, or extraordinarily appointed of God. The laſt way is moſt probable, becauſe all other Judges hitherto were extraordinarily ſtirred up, and whilſt the Judges ruled, it is ſaid, that God reigned over them, and therefore without doubt hee appointed his Deputy by giving his holy Spirit, and ſuch gifts neceſſary for government, which were not in any other man, to him, whom hee would advance, as made it appeare to all men, that he was choſen of God, thus drawing the people to obedience.

Note.

Ferus.

Junius.

H. Bunting Patria. travailes.

V. 2.

And after him aroſe Jair a Gileadite, and hee judged Iſrael 22 yeares. The Gileadites were of Manaſſeh, ſee Joſh. 17. 1. One ſaith, that hee was a man of great eſteeme in Iſrael, but lame on both his feet, but whence he had this I cannot tell. Hee had 30 ſonnes, that rode upon 30 Aſſe-colts, and they had 30 Cities, called Havoth Jair, wee read of Havoth Jair built by Jair, the ſonne of Manaſſeh, and therefore thus called, the Cities of Jair, Numb. 31. 41. But theſe, ſaith Hugo, were other Townes of the ſame name, and that Jair another man living long before this, and were 60 in number. Bonfrerius contendeth, they were ſome of them, having now anew the ſame name impoſed upon them, but the former is to be preferred. For the Aſſe-colts, upon which they are ſaid

V. 3.

H. Bunt. patriar. travailes.

V. 4.

Hugo Cardin.
Bonfrerius.

Lyra. to ride, it is to be underſtood, ſaith Lyra, that the Hebrew word ſignifyeth onely pullos, that is, young ones, and not the young of Aſſes, wherefore the Hebrew Doctours underſtand hereby young horſes; and Cajetan following this ſaith, Cajetan. that they rid upon horſes, as being the more honourable. Hugo Cardin: Horſes, Hugo Card. or Aſſes, or Mules, that come of both. But the word עירם here uſed is not any where put for any other, then an Aſſe-colt, and amongſt the Jewes it was an honour to ride upon ſuch, neither were they permitted to uſe horſes, but when they tooke them, they houghed them, Joſh. 11. 6. 2 Sam. 8. 4. ſee upon Joſh. 11. Wherefore they were young Aſſes, as all tranſlations agree, and Pagninus expoundeth the word.

After the death of theſe two Judges related, the apoſtaſie of the children of V.6. Iſrael againe to idolatry is ſet forth, and their divers oppreſſions hereupon, but chiefly by the Ammonites. They ſerved Baalim and Aſhteroth, of which ſee before Judg. 2. 13. Theſe were the gods of the Syrians and Sidonians, beſides which are reckoned up the gods of Moab, that is, Chamos, and of Ammon, that is, Moloch, and of the Philiſtims, that is, Dagon, ſo that they ſinned now by all kinde of idolatry, which they learned from the neighbouring nations. And therefore even from ſome of thoſe peoples, the Philiſtims and Ammonites, did God bring a grievous ſcourge upon them. That yeare they oppreſſed the children
V.7. of Iſrael: 18 yeares all the children of Iſrael, that were on the other ſide of Jordan in V.8. the land of the Amorites, which is in Gilead, Hebr. that yeare, the 18 yeare even Junius. all the children of Iſrael on the other ſide &c. Junius therefore hath it, that yeare, I ſay the 18. yeare, but the Vulgar Latin, they were oppreſſed 18. yeares: but the word in Hebrew is שנה yeare, not שנים yeares. And if after the death of Jair they were oppreſſed 18. yeares, before that Jephthah delivered them, and hee judged Iſrael but 6 yeares, Ch. 12. 7. foraſmuch as the number of the yeares of their oppreſſion were many more, and ſo cannot come under thoſe yeares of Jephthah, according the reckoning, which wee have before ſhewed muſt bee made Ch. 3. 11. to juſtifye the yeares reckoned, 1 King. 6. 1. here will be a ſurpluſage of almoſt 18 yeares above the number ſet downe, 1 King. 6. 1. and ſo that account cannot bee true: wherefore this place is not to be underſtood of 18 yeares oppreſſion, but of one yeares, which yeare yet is ſaid to bee the 18th. but from whence is not determined, but if I may ſpend my conjecture
I think, that the time is meant, when they began againe to revolt from God to idolatry, which was 17 yeares before Jair dyed, but becauſe hee was godly, and ſought what hee could, to repreſſe this wickedneſſe, the judgements due therefore were hitherto kept away, but now the 18. yeare after they began thus ſhamefully to revolt, hee being dead, and idolatry becoming more generall and publike, theſe enemies were brought upon them without any further delay.

V 9. And now not onely the two tribes and halfe on the other ſide of Jordan were diſtreſſed, but the tribe of Judah, Benjamin and Ephraim alſo, the Ammonites comming over Jordan againſt them, and diſtreſſing them, ſo that V.10. the calamity was generall. v. 10. Then the children of Iſrael cryed unto V.11,12, the Lord and ſaid, Wee have ſinned, &c. But hee upbraided them by his 13,14. former deliverances, bidding them to goe and cry to the gods, whom they had choſen, ſaying, that hee would deliver them no more, becauſe that when they were delivered in times paſt from the Egyptians, Amorites, Ammonites and Philiſtims, the Zidonians, Amalekites, and Maonites, yet they forſooke him. Who it was, by whom the Lord made this anſwer, it is not expreſſed, Rabbin. the Rabbins hold, that it was Phinees, but it is not probable, that he was living to this time, it being now 300. yeares, ſince his going out Captaine againſt Lyra. the Midianites, Numb. 31. Wherefore Lyra thinketh, that it was ſome other Prophet, and ſome, an Angel, but becauſe no mention is made either of Prophet or Angel, I think rather, that they comming before the Tabernacle to humble themſelves, received this anſwer by the High-Prieſt, that then was, for the High-Prieſt by reaſon of his office had commonly the gift of Joh. 11. 51. propheſying, as may be gathered from that which is ſaid of Cajaphas, hee being ing High-Prieſt that yeare propheſied. For the peoples reckoned up from whom the Lord ſaith hee delivered them, their deliverance from the Egyptians was famous, and from the Amorites they were delivered, when Sbim King of the Amorites fought againſt them: Of their deliverance alſo from the Philiſtims mention is made Judg. 3,31. And the Amalekites and Ammonites were in the Army of Eglon, King of Moab, Judg. 3. 13. and the Amalekites were with Exod. 17.

the Midianites, Judg. 6. 3. But for the Zidonians and Maonites it doth not ſo appeare, that they were from them delivered; Yet the Zidonians are numbered amongſt the enemies left to prove Iſrael, and happily they ſerved under Cuſha- Iudg. 3. 2. riſhathaim, a Syrian King, to whom they were neighbours, when he fought a-gainſt Iſrael, Judg. 3. 8. Laſtly, for the Maonites the Vulgar Latin hath the Canaanites, and likewiſe the Sept. who were the inhabitants of the countrey, becauſe the word מעונים ſignifyeth inhabitants, and the Canaanites were the moſt noted inhabitants here, and their deliverance from the Canaanites was moſt famous. There were a people indeed properly called Maonites, as the Rabbins, Iudg. 4.
Vatablus, Mercerus, and the Tygurine interpreters ſay, and a wilderneſſe Maon
1 Sam. 23. and 25. and a City in Judah, Joſh. 15. 55. but of any ſet forth by this name, from whom the Iſraelites were delivered, we have hitherto read nothing: and therefore they may upon the reaſon before going be taken here for the Canaanites. But what is this, that the Lord biddeth them goe and call Qu.
upon the Gods whom they had choſen, and that hee ſaith hee would deliver them no more, when as hee meant, and did ſoone after deliver them? For the firſt it was ſpoken ironically, as that of Elijah to Baals Prieſts, Cry aloud for hee is a god, &c. For the ſecond, the Lord ſaid, hee would no more deliver 1 King 18.
them, as Ferus noteth, firſt to ſhew, that horrible ſinning tendeth to a deſpe- Ferus.
rate eſtate, wherein a man is without all hope or ſenſe of comfort to Godward, that all may take heed of thus ſinning, becauſe there is no eſtate ſo uncomfortable, as this; and yet becauſe when God had abſolutely denyed all helpe, he did upon their perſevering to ſeeke unto him againe deliver them, to ſhew that when wee have no ſenſe of comfort, yet wee ſhould not deſpaire, but ſeeke ſtill to God; for as a father, although hee threatneth to doe nothing for his childe in his bitter diſpleaſure, yet cannot, if hee ſueth againe and againe unto him, but ſhew him favour, ſo God our heavenly father cannot, but out of his fatherly compaſſion deale with us. 2. To ſhew that the pardon of ſinnes iterated againe and againe is hardly obtained. 3. That praying for mercy without reforming from ſinne doth not prevaile, becauſe upon this de-niall the Iſraelites went and put away their ſtrange gods, and then humbling themſelves againe were delivered, but not before.

And his ſoul was grieved for the miſeries of Iſrael, this is ſpoken per Anthropopathei- V. 16.
an, to ſet forth an effectuall motion in his mind to ſet them free againe therefrom: which is a place to be thought upon by ſuch, as are ready to deſpaire of Gods mercy, but yet are truly humbled for their ſins, and put them away. God is grieved for the intolerable miſeries of ſuch diſtreſſed conſciences, and whatſoever they have formerly done, will ſhew them mercy, that they may bee comforted herein. But this is meat onely for the contrite, obſtinate ſinners are to be fed otherwiſe, viz. with threatnings of hell fire, death and deſtruction for ever.

Then the children of Ammon were gathered together, and incamped in Gilead, V. 17.
and the children of Iſrael incamped in Mizpeh. The Ammonites were the poſterity of Lot, with whoſe Countrey the Iſraelites had beene before prohibited to Deut. 2. 19.
meddle, but now they ill requite that forbearance, neither are they moved with the ancient alliance betwixt Lot their father and Abraham the father of Iſrael. But the thing, whereby they had beene hitherto moved, was the judgment of God againſt Iſrael for ſinne, for which they were ſtirred up to oppreſſe them. For as to the godly enemies are turned into friends, ſo to Note.
the wicked friends and all creatures are made enemies. But now the Iſraelites having truely repented, although they had had no anſwer of comfort from God, knowing, that hee would not bee unlike himſelfe, gracious and merci-full to the penitent, take courage to themſelves, ſo as they durſt not doe before, and prepare in pitcht battail to fight againſt the Ammonites. Thus ſinne Note. taketh away all courage, and maketh timerous and fearfull at the falling of a leafe, but grace maketh bold and courageous. Where Gilead was, hath been already ſaid; viz. on the other ſide of Jordan, where the Gadites and half tribe of Manaſſeh had their poſſeſſions. Of Mizpeh, ſee Joſh. 11. 3. it was not farre from the place that the Ammonites pitched in. Of the Ammonites pretence V. 18. in invading thoſe parts, ſee Chap. 11. 13. The Iſraelites being here incamped, when they could not agree about a Captaine, offer him the Principality of Gilead that would begin the battail; hoping that God would thus ſtirre up ſome man, and put the ſpirit of courage into him to fight valiantly for them, as hee had done in the like ſtraights before.

CHAP. XI.

HEre Jephthah a Gileadite is made Captain of the warre againſt the Ammonites;
and after Meſſages ſent twice or thrice between him and the Ammonites, V. 1, 2, 3. hee fighteth againſt them, and overcommeth: But firſt it is ſhewed what hee was, viz. a mighty man of valour, but the ſon of an harlot, begotten by Gilead, and when the ſons that hee had by his wife were grown up, they thruſt him out, and hee went and dwelt in the Land of Tob, and there were vaine men gathered unto him, and he went out with them. Jephthah was called Lyra. a Gileadite, ſaith Lyra, from the Countrey wherein hee was born, from his Father, and from the City in which hee lived, which was Gilead, Chap. 12. but in this laſt he was miſtaken, becauſe Mizpeh is ſaid to bee the City where hee dwelt, v. 34. And whereas hee is ſaid to be the ſon of an harlot, the Hebrews, ſaith hee, render it, the ſon of an Inne-keeper; and the word here uſed, as alſo Ioſh. 2. ſignifieth either. But the circumſtances doe plainly ſhew, that ſhee was an harlot, and ſo Jephthah was a baſtard. And herein the great grace of God appeared, in that he choſe one ſo infamous by his birth, to bee a deliverer Deut. 23. of his people, and to bee head over them. The generall Law was, That a baſtard ſhould not enter into the Congregation to the tenth generation; ſo infamous was hee that was thus born, and a baſtard inheriteth not his Fathers Land; which is ſo ordained, that mariage might bee had in honour, and fornication deteſted. But God choſe Jephthah, notwithſtanding his baſe beginning, that hee might appeare to bee gracious towards all, of how wicked Parents Ezek. 18. ſoever they come, if they doe not follow them in ſinning for the ſon ſhall not bear the iniquity of the father. This Jephthah was godly, and not like his father, as appeareth, Heb. 11. where hee is regiſtred in the catalogue of the moſt Joſh. 17. 1. famous for their faith. He is ſaid to bee a Gileadite, but not of what tribe; yet becauſe Gilead, from whom the Gileadites had their name, was of Manaſſeh; it is generally held that hee was of Manaſſeh. For his father Gilead, hee was not that Gilead the ſon of Machir the ſon of Manaſſeh, for his time doth not agree, but another man of that name. The ſons of Gilead being grown up, thruſt him out of his fathers houſe, becauſe hee was the ſon of a ſtrange woman, Hebr. of another woman, but hereby an harlot is meant. It is not ſaid whether their father were living or dead when they did this, but it is moſt likely that hee was dead, otherwiſe hee would not have ſuffered it. And it ſeemes Ferus. they did this by offering violence, becauſe it is ſaid, that he fled from them. Thus Note. proudly they that have preheminence in the fleſh beare themſelves towards others, that are outwardly baſe and contemptible, but afterwards they were glad to ſeek to him, that wee may learne not to bee proud for outward priviledges, nor to contemn the vileſt, for they that are vile before men, ſometimes are great before God. And Jephthah dwelt in the land of Tob: where Tob was, is uncertaine, but Ioſephus and Adrichomius ſay, that it was in thoſe parts beyond H. Bunting Patria. travailes Iordan. H. Bunting ſaith, it was in the half tribe of Manaſſeh, 104 miles from Ieruſalem, and that it was a pleaſant and fruitfull place, according to the name, Tob, good. And there were gathered vaine men to Jephthah. The Vulg. Latine hath hath it, Poore men and robbers. Whereupon Jephthah in that book of Queſtions upon the Old Teſtament, aſcribed to Auguſtine, Qu. 43. is called a Captain of robbers, and a moſt wicked man, and void of all goodneſſe. But as Lyra acknowledgeth, the word [robbers] is not in the Hebrew; and if Jephthah were a Captain of ſuch, hee did in thoſe times of warre onely lead them againſt the enemies to rob and to ſpoile them, as David afterwards did the like, 1 Sam. 27. Some ſay, that ſouldiers were of old called latrones, which wee engliſh robbers, becauſe they ſtood to their Captaines à latere, by his ſide; or did weare ſwords ad latera, by their ſides. But to diſcourſe no more about this, becauſe it is neither in the Hebrew nor Septuagint. The word rendred vaine men, is the ſame before uſed, Chap. 9. 4. poore men, and void of meanes, and ſo happily they, with Jephthah their Captain, took ſpoiles from the enemy, and that not without ſome skirmiſhing, whereby Jephthah came to bee famous for his valour.

Lyra

Varro.

V.4. And it came to paſſe in proceſſe of time, that the children of Ammon made warre with the children of Iſrael, &c. The Vulg. Latine, In thoſe dayes the children of Ammon, &c. the Septuagint, after dayes; Junius, after thoſe dayes or yeares; that is, ſaith hee, the 18 yeares of their oppreſſion before ſpoken of: the Hebrew word is מימים after dayes, that is, after the time before-mentioned, that Iephthah was caſt out, the Ammonites were gathered together, as Chap. 10. 17. not content to ſpoile the children of Iſrael in all places, as they had before done; but thinking now at once to deſtroy and bring the Country under, which they pretended had been taken from them, as v. 13. But there was a ſecret Providence, whereby they were thus gathered together to their owne greater deſtruction, now that the Lord inclined to ſhew mercy to his people after their ſerious humiliation. Wherefore a great battail being now to bee fought, they ſeek to Jephthah to bee their Captain, of whoſe valour they had heard; this motion comming doubtleſſe of the Lord, as appeareth by his Spirit given unto him, v. 29. V.7,8,9,10. But Jephthah at the firſt upbraideth them by their former hatred of him, ſaying, Yee expelled mee out of my fathers houſe, and doe yee now ſeek unto mee in your diſtreſſe? wherein they confeſſe themſelves guilty; and now to make him amends, offer him to bee their Head; upon which condition hee goeth with them. It is ſaid before onely, that his fathers ſonnes drave him out; but here, that this was objected to the Elders of Gilead, as if done by them. To this Lyra anſwereth, that it is likely his brethren were ſome of theſe Elders that came unto him; and that he was not expelled without the conſent of the Elders of the City, giving judgement againſt him.

Junius.

Lyra

They promiſe to make him head of all the Gileadites, and ſo they did v. 11. that is, of all on the other ſide of Iordan, of Reuben, Gad, and the half tribe of Manaſſeh. For the other tribes, they could promiſe nothing, but it appeareth, that after his victory, and the Ephraimites chaſtiſed for their inſolency, hee was Judge over all Iſrael, Chap. 12. 7. and therefore he is reckoned with other Judges, 1 Sam. 12. 11. whom God ſent them. And Jephthah uttered all his words before the Lord in Mizpeh. Theſe words were the words of Covenant betwixt Jephthah and the men of Gilead, that hee ſhould be their Head from thence forward, and fight for them, and that they ſhould bee obedient unto him and his command. They had ſworn before to him, v. 10. and now he ſweareth to them when what in Mizpeh, the place of their aſſembling, hee was conſtituted their Head; and becauſe an oath is a calling of God to witneſſe, he is ſaid to have uttered the words of his Oath before the Lord, and not for that the Tabernacle was there, for that was in Shiloh. Some think that theſe words were words of Prayer uttered by Jephthah, before he attempted this war: and ſome, words of inquiring of the Lord by the High Prieſt arrayed in his Prieſtly habit and pectorall, touching the ſucceſſe of this battail: but becauſe Jephthah was not yet upon the point of going to battail againſt the Ammonites, but ſent firſt to expoſtulate with the King of Ammon, theſe are but improbable conjectures.

Ioſh. 18.
Bonfrerius.

V. 12, 13. Jephthah being made Head of the Gileadites, now ſendeth to the King of Ammon, to know the reaſon of this invaſion; V. 14, 15. who anſwereth, that Iſrael had taken his Land from him, from Arnon to the river Iabbock and to Iordan. But

V.16,17, Jephthah replyeth, that they tooke nothing from Edom, Moab, or Ammon, whoſe
18,19, Countreys lay one by another, but paſſed peaceably by them, and then comming 20,21,22. to Sihons Countrey, who was King of the Amorites, hee reſiſting them in their paſſage, they fought againſt him, and tooke and poſſeſſed his Country from Arnon to Jabbock, God giving it unto them. Of this, ſee Numb. 21. 24.
and that the land of Sihon then taken by Iſrael had been the land of Moab, Ammons brother in times paſt, but long before conquered by the Amorites. And of their kind dealing with the Ammonites, Deut. 2. But why doth the King of Ammon challenge Iſrael for taking away his land? when as we do not read, Numb.
21. that it was the land of the Ammonites, but of the Moabites, before that Sihon tooke it. But that part of it had been the Ammonites, it appeareth, Ioſh.
13. 25. where the coaſt of Gad is ſaid to bee half the Land of the children of Ammon; and it may bee that the King that now reigned over Ammon, was King of Moab alſo; and this is intimated, v. 24. where Kemeſh, which was the God of the Moabites, is ſaid to bee his God, for Melchom was the God of the Ammonites, Numb. 21. 29. as hath been ſhewed, Chap. 10. 6. and therefore hee challengeth this 1 Sam. 11. 7. Land to be all his, both by the right of Moab and Ammon; thus Lyra, Cajetan, Lyra. Cajetan. and Carthuſianus. But ſome thinke that the King of Ammon ſpake untruly, and Carthuſ. pretended a right to this Countrey onely for a colour of juſtice to his warre Ferus. now undertaken. But if ſo, Jephthah would have anſwered him accordingly; Serrarius. but becauſe hee doth not, it is plaine that hee and the people under him had ſometime a right unto it, and therefore I preferre the former reſolution. We Note. may ſee here in Jephthah a great deale of wiſdome and moderation, in that before hee entreth upon this warre, hee ſendeth to treat peaceably of the cauſe; ſo it is commanded, Deut. 20. and love requireth, that warre ſhould not bee made, but upon meere neceſſity, nor ſubjects lives hereby put in danger, as Auguſtus Ceſar ſaid, I had rather ſave one ſubject, then kill a thouſand enemies.

V. 24. Wilt not thou poſſeſſe that which Chemoſh thy God giveth thee, &c. Jephthah having cleared the Iſraelites from the imputation of wrong doing to the Ammonites, by relating truly the order of their proceedings, now uſeth divers arguments to make the Ammonites to deſiſt from this warre: 1. Becauſe God, whoſe all Countreys are, had given Iſrael this Countrey; and if their God Chemoſh being in their opinion a God, and ſo ſuch an one as to whom they aſcribed the giving of them ſuch places as they obtained, ſhould give them any Countrey, they would make no doubt but to hold that; ſo, and much more would Iſrael Lyra. hold and poſſeſſe the Countreys given them by the true God. And thus Lyra expoundeth it, which Chemoſh thy God poſſeſſeth, or maketh thee to poſſeſſe, that is, in thy opinion. And herein Jephthah had reference to the conqueſts of the Ammonites and Moabites of old made in that Countrey, which now they held:
for they attained it by expelling the former inhabitants, Deut. 2, 10, 20, 21.
and this victory whereby they got that land into their poſſeſſion, they impiouſly aſcribed to an Idol, according to which Jephthah here ſpeaketh, and ſeeing they held what they had gotten by the ſword, there was as good reaſon that
V. 25, 26. the Iſraelites ſhould doe likewiſe. 2. Jephthah reaſoneth from the long time that Iſrael had poſſeſſed this Countrey, even 300 yeares; neither did Balak the King of Moab ever ſtrive with them about it, although hee had as good right, and was as great a King as he that now reigned; and he meaneth not onely Balak, but the Kings ſucceeding him in all that time, but hee nameth him, becauſe hee reigned at the time that the Iſraelites firſt poſſeſſed that Countrey; and therefore if hee had had any right, would doubtleſſe at the beginning have ſtood for it. Touching the number of yeares here ſpoken of by Jephthah, they were 1 King. 6. not, ſaith Lyra, preciſely 300, but 267: for onely 480 yeares paſſed from the comming of the Iſraelites out of Egypt untill Tolam 4 yeare, and of theſe here 174 from Iephthah, and before the taking Sihons Country 39. being together Melchior Canus 213. which deducted out of 480, there remaine but 267. Some to juſtifie Jephthah, ſay, that the times of their oppreſſions are alſo to bee reckoned; but ſo not 300, but 340 would bee found at the leaſt, and the account can by no meanes agree with 1 King. 6. wherefore it is better to hold with others, that Iephthah made the moſt of the time of quiet poſſeſſion, which hee pleaded for, and ſtood not preciſely upon the juſt number of yeares, but they being almoſt 300 hee mentioned this number, as being moſt full and compleat; upon theſe premiſes Iephthah concludeth, that hee ſinned not againſt the King of Ammon, nor yet the children of Iſrael, but that hee did them apparent wrong in invading their Countrey, which hee prayeth God to judge.

V.27.

V.29. Hugo Cardin.

And the Spirit of God came upon Jephthah, and hee paſſed over Gilead and Manaſſeh, and Mizpeh, and from Mizpeh to the children of Ammon. Hee went through all theſe places to gather an Army, and ſo came upon his enemies.

V.30. V.31.

Then Jephthah vowed a vow to the Lord and ſaid, If thou wilt without faile deliver the children of Ammon into my hands: then it ſhall bee that whatſoever cometh to meet mee out of my houſe, when I returne in peace, ſhall bee the Lords, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering: Jephthah being now ready to goe to battaile ſeeketh helpe of God by vowing unto him a burnt-offering, but for ſo much as hee vowed not any thing certaine, but that, which ſhould firſt come out of the doore of his houſe to meet him, it is queſtioned, whether hee did not raſhly and indiſcreetly in making this vow, and whether hee did indeed offer up his daughter for a burnt-offering, becauſe ſhee came firſt out to meete him? The Fathers generally condemne Jephthah for making this vow, and performing it. Ambroſ. ſaith, hee made it raſhly, and the performance of it was paricide. Tertullian calleth him a mad man for vowing that to God, which hee abhorred. Chryſoſt. ſaith, that hee was moved by the ſuggeſtion of the Devil. Nazianzen ſaith, it was a raſh vow. Anaſtaſius Nicenus, that nothing was more wicked, then it. Theodoret, that it was a fooliſh promiſe. Procopius calleth it evill, unjuſt and impious, and aſcribeth it to the Devills ſuggeſtion through pride and vaine-glory. For any living thing might not bee offered in ſacrifice to God, for no uncleane beaſt might be offered, nor man-kinde; but at his returne, who more likely to come out to meete him, and to congratulate his victory, then his wife or his daughter, he having no more children; or his dog, whoſe nature is to run and fawn upon his Maſter? touching any beaſt that was cleane and fit for ſacrafice, hee could not expect the coming forth thereof out of his houſe, as being a thing unuſuall. It was therefore a moſt raſh vow, and unlawfull to be made, and therefore ought not to have bin performed. But ſome argue that Jephthah is ſaid immediately before to have had the Spirit of God to come upon him, therefore what hee did herein was by the inſtinct of the ſpirit, as when Abraham was bidden to ſacrifice his ſon Iſaack, being otherwiſe unlawfull, but then to him lawfull. And as Samſon by the like inſtinct pluckt the houſe downe upon his owne head together with the Philiſtims, thus voluntarily killing himſelfe. Againe God heard his prayer, when hee made this vow, and ſhewed his approbation thereof by giving him victory; neither is he any where blamed for this fact, but commended as one of Gods worthyes, Heb. 11. Wherefore they hold both that his vow was lawful, and that in ſacrificing his daughter he did lawfully. For that he did ſacrifice her, is the common tenet of the ancient Fathers, as of Tertullian lib. 3. contra Marcion. c. 4. Origen, Nazianzen, in orat. de laude Maccabæorum. Juſtin Martyr, qu. 99. Severus Sulpitius, Chryſoſtom, Rupertus, Hugo de Sancto victore, Iſidor, Toſtatus, Joſephus, &c. But they generally taxe him therefore, as hath beene already ſhewed. But ſome contrariwiſe hold, that hee did not offer her up in ſacrifice, but onely gave her to God to ſerve him in faſting and prayer in perpetuall virginity, being ſeparated from the common condition of others, after the manner of votaryes, as R. David, Lyranus, Arias Montanus, Vatablus, Eſtius, Pagninus, Junius, &c. And Junius ſaith, that ſhee was made a Nazarite for ever, but out of the ignorance of the law in thoſe corrupt times, the Father holding, that his vow muſt neceſſarily be thus kept, and the daughter beleeving the father and therefore confirming it by her conſent, and ſo ſhee was not redeemed, as ſhee ought to have beene,

Levit.

Ambroſ. lib. 1. officiorum cap. ult.
Tertull.
Chryſoſt.
Anaſtaſius.
Nazianzen.
Theodoret.
Procopius.

Deut. 12. 30, 31, 32.

Serrarius.
Sallianus.
Hieronym epiſt. ad Iulian. Iephtah obtulit filiam virginem, ideoq; in enumeratione ſanctorum ab apoſtolo poſitus eſt.

Tertull. Origen, Nazianzen, Iuſtin Martyr. Sulpitius, Chryſoſtom, Rupertus

R. David, Lyra, Arias Montanus, Vatablus, Iunius

Levit. 27. 1, 2, 3, 4. &c. Their reaſons are 1. becauſe the vow was made by a diſjunctive particle, it ſhall bee the Lords, or I will offer it, that is, if it bee fit for ſacrifice, for thus ו the particle expounded and may be rendred, as Gen 26. 11. Exod 1 10. 21. 15. 2. Becauſe it is not ſaid, that he offered her in ſacrifice, but did unto her according to his vow, that is, not being fit for ſacrifice, he conſecrated her to God, to live a perpetuall Virgin. 3. Becauſe ſhee deſired to goe to the mountaines two moneths to bewaile her virginity, not her untimely death. 4. Becauſe the word rendred to lament, v. 40. ſignifyeth alſo to ſpeake unto, or to talke with, the daughters of Iſrael went 4 dayes in a yeare לחנות to ſpeake unto and to comfort the daughter of Jephthah, which they could not have done, if ſhee had beene killed and offered in ſacrifice. Thus I have ſhewed the diverſity of opinions touching this matter, but which to follow I can hardly reſolve: for the intent of Iephtah in vowing ſeemeth plainly to have beene to offer an extraordinary ſacrifice unto God of one moſt deare unto him, and therefore not of any beaſts, which had beene too ſmall a matter to vow in this caſe of ſo great moment, but of Wife, Daughter, or Servant, to whom it was proper to come out of the doores of his houſe to meete him, and it is ſaid, that hee did according to his vow, wherefore it ſeemeth, that hee ſacrificed her, and not ſeparated her onely as one devoted unto God. And on the other ſide the Arguments brought ſeeme to bee ſtrong, that hee did not ſacrifice, but ſeparate her, and if hee had intended or attempted to doe otherwiſe, there were men doubtleſſe expert in the law, that in the two moneths reſpit would have adviſed him to the contrary, it being a thing, that the mercifull God doth ſo much deteſt, that humane blood, which the Devill delighteth in, ſhould be ſhed to him in ſacrifice. But becauſe it is expreſſly ſaid, that hee did unto her according to his vow, which muſt bee underſtood of his intention in vowing, this allegation to the contrary is vaine, and becauſe wee never read of any woman under the Old Teſtament, that lived in perpetuall virginity, herein to ſerve God, no not of any Nazarite, ſuch as ſhee is pretended to have beene made, that by reaſon hereof lived apart, man without woman, or woman without a man, for this was none of the conditions required in a Nazarite; I rather aſſent to that moſt ancient tenet, that Iephthah did ſacrifice his daughter, but herein I cannot be carryed with the current of moſt of the Fathers to hold, that hee was raſh and fooliſh in making this vow and impious in performing it, becauſe hee is ſaid to have had the Spirit of God to guide him, had ſuch ſucceſſe hereupon, and is no where blamed, but highly commended, Heb. 11. Hee vowed thus then by the inſtinct of the Spirit, and out of a moſt pious reſolution even againſt naturall affection hee performed it, the conſcience of ſo ſacred a tye urging him hereunto, as Abraham ſometime prepared to doe the like upon Gods command to his ſonne Iſaac; wherefore Jerom ſaith, not the ſacrifice of Iephthah, but the minde of the offerer is praiſed. As for the reaſons alledged to prove, that hee did but devote his daughter to the Lord, they are eaſily anſwered. 1. That ו here cannot be put for or, becauſe hee meant not any thing uſually offered in ſacrifice, but mankind, as hath beene ſhewed, and ſo the ſecond argument falleth alſo. 3. Shee bewailed her Virginiry, becauſe it was a reproach in thoſe dayes to dye childleſſe. Laſtly, the word לחנות ſignifieth as well to lament, as to ſpeake unto. If it bee demanded how it could bee that God ſhould move to ſuch a ſacrifice, ſo contrary to his owne Law, or be ſo cruell to an innocent Virgin? I anſwer, ſeeing all men and women muſt dye, it was no cruelty in God, at whoſe liberty it is to take away this life, when and how hee pleaſeth; as neither in ſuffering his holy Martyrs to bee cruelly butchered and ſlaine by the hands of perſecuters, for hee both can, and doth make abundant recompence for ſuch ſufferings, in his heavenly Kingdome. If therefore hee would have this done in a myſtery, and hereby try the love and obedience of Iephthah, who can or dare blame him therefore? Iephthah did myſtically ſet forth Chriſt; as Iephthah, ſo hee was caſt out of his brethren the Jewes, as the ſonne of an harlot, and a deceiver;

Numb. 6.

Hieronym. in Jer. 7.

Hugo Cardin.

as Iephthah ſignifieth apertion or opening, ſo hee openeth the underſtanding and the way of life; as hee fled into the land of Tob, and poore men gathered unto him, ſo Chriſt and his Goſpel being rejected by the Jewes, hee went by his Apoſtles to the Gentiles, whoſe Land was a good Land, as Tob ſignifieth, becauſe they brought forth fruit abundantly, and there the people that flocked unto him, were ſuch as before time were vaine men, and poore, becauſe wicked and empty of all goodneſſe. The Gileadites that ſeek to him to bee their Head againſt the Ammonites, are Chriſtians by repentance turning to him, both of the Jewes and Gentiles againſt Heretiques and other enemies: for many Jewes ſeeing the ſignes after his death, were converted, and there ſhall bee a turning one day of that Nation, Hoſ. 3. 4, 5. 2 Cor. 3. Rom. 9. the ſacrificing of his daughter, a Virgin, was Chriſts ſacrificing of his humane nature, pure and ſpotleſſe as a pure Virgin: the Virgins from yeare to yeare lamenting this, are Chriſtians keeping the remembrance of Chriſts paſſion yearely with griefe and ſorrow. Thus Hugo, and Iſidor, and Auguſtine, who although hee inclineth rather to blame Iephthah, yet he ſaith, that hee might happily be moved therein by the Spirit of God, and that for ſome great myſtery, and then who dares blame him for errour? Ferus alſo acknowledgeth the ſame myſtery, but condemneth the vow and fact of Iephthah, and yet hee ſaith, no man ever durſt determine whether Iephthah did well or ill herein, becauſe it is uncertaine whether hee did it by the motion of Gods Spirit, or of his owne minde, ſeeing this is not revealed. Whereas in juſtification of Iephthah it is ſaid, that the Spirit of God came upon him, and hee is commended, Heb. 11. hee ſaith, the like is ſaid of Gedeon, yet his ſetting up of an Ephod was a ſinne, and of David, but hee ſinned by adultery; ſo although Iephthah were an holy man, hee was not free from ſinne, but hee doubtleſſe repented of it and was ſaved. And hee laboureth to prove, that hee ſinned in making this vow, becauſe when Abraham was moved by God in the like, hee hindered him from ſacrificing his ſonne Iſaac, but hee ſuffered Iephthah to ſacrifice his daughter; the one hee commanded to kill his ſonne, and ſuffered him not, to commend his obedience; the other vowing it of his owne head, hee ſuffered to kill his daughter to deterre all others from raſh vowes; thus hee: but the examples brought of Gedeon and David prove nothing touching Iephthah, for their ſins were taxed and puniſhed, but ſo was not Jephthah, but bleſſed after his vow, and praiſed after the execution. And there was a diverſe myſtery in Abrahams fact, and in Jephthah's, for which God dealt with them diverſly: Abraham was ſtayed from ſacrificing his ſonne, to ſhew that Chriſts Deity ſuffered not. Jephthah was not ſtayed from ſacrificing his daughter, to ſhew that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer in his humanity. Or as Ferus hath it, that hee ſhould aſſigne the Church to ſufferings by the hands of perſecuters, and thus to bee, as it were, ſacrificed to his glory. The daughter of Jephthah, ſo willingly ſubmitting her ſelfe to bee done to, as her father had vowed, may be an example of obedience to Parents to all children.

Iſidor.

Ferus.

CHAP. XII.

V. 1 AND the men of Ephraim gathered themſelves together, and went northward, and ſaid unto Jephthah, Why didſt thou paſſe over againſt the children of Ammon to fight, and didſt not call us? &c. As Chap. 8. they had through pride ſtirred up diſſention againſt Gedeon; ſo they quarrell here with Jephthah, envying it, that any famous victory was obtained without them: but vengeance would not ſuffer them now to goe on in their pride any longer, but by their commotion ſo unjuſtly made, they got a grievous fall. They went northward, becauſe Mizpeh in Manaſſeh on the other ſide Jordan, where Jephthah dwelt, was northward from Ephraim. Whereas they challenge him for not calling them to V. 2. this warre, this was but a pretext, for hee had called unto them, as hee ſaith, v. 2. and they refuſed to come, and therefore hee with a few men adventured his life, and God had given him the victory. Wherefore there was no reaſon that they ſhould deale thus unkindly with him, to fight againſt him, when as they ſhould rather have been thankfull to him for delivering them from their common enemies. But the Ephraimites, as it ſeemeth, were nothing moved here-V.4. by, but reviled the Gileadites, ſaying, that they were runagates of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, in ſo much that Iephthah with his Gileadites were inforced to fight againſt them, and ſmote them, and when they fled, prevented them in taking the paſſages of Jordan, where they ſlew ſuch of them as remained alive to the Qu. number of 42000. But how could the Gileadites bee ſaid to be runagates or fugitives of Ephraim, and in the midſt of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, as it is in the Hebrew, ſeeing they dwelt beyond Iordan, and the Ephraimites with the Ma-naſſites placed next unto them on this ſide Iordan? Anſw. It is thus ſaid, becauſe Lyra. they came all of one common ſtock of Joſeph, amongſt whom they would in thus ſaying, ſet forth the Gileadites as moſt abject and vile amongſt all his po-ſterity: ſo, as that being compared with Ephraim and Manaſſeh, they were of little or no reckoning; thus Lyra ſaith the Hebrewes expound it: but ſome take it as ſpoken of Iephthah and his company, becauſe he was expelled from his Fathers houſe, and fled from his brethren, and haply they glanced at that in particular.

V.6. The meanes whereby they tryed the Ephraimites, was by pronouncing Sib-boleth in ſtead of Shibboleth, that is, by their liſping: but why the word Shib-boleth was made the meane of tryall, rather then any other word, Lyra ſaith the reaſon was, becauſe the word Shibboleth ſignifieth a current of water; wherefore as any of them came to paſſe over the water, they were put to the pronouncing of this word; it ſignifieth alſo an eare of Corne, and ſo it is rendred in the Vulg. Latine, Dic Sheboleth, quod interpretatur ſpica; but here the other inter-
The Myſtery. pretation ſeemeth to agree beſt. Myſtically by Iephthah deſtroying the Ephrai-Ferus. mites, Ferus underſtandeth Chriſt after his paſſion, whereby hee overcame the ſpirituall enemie, comming againſt the Jewes, and deſtroying them by the Romans, becauſe they had blaſphemed and railed upon him, as the Ephraimites upon Iephthah. His diſcerning of them by pronouncing Seboleth in ſtead of Hugo Card. Sheboleth, ſaith Hugo, ſetteth forth the judging of worldly men, who ſpeake nothing but words of vanity, talking of nothing, but wordly things and vaine-glorioully, and not of heavenly, ſo that of their talke there cometh no fruit neither is there any weight therein, as Seboleth ſignifyeth an eare of chaffe, but Sheboleth an eare fnll of corne, ſo likewiſe Lyra; which conceit I miſlike not, but onely becauſe Seboleth hath the ſame ſignification with Sheboleth, although the one bee written with ס and the other with ש. But thus Seboleth may ſet forth vaine talke and Sheboleth ſubſtantiall, becauſe one of the letters of the name of God, viz. ה is wanting in Seboleth, Matth.12.37. or the pronunciation is not ſo full as in Sheboleth; and by thy words thou ſhalt bee juſtifyed, and by thy words thon ſhalt bee condemned, v.7.

V.7. Then Jephthah dayed and was buryed, &c. His buriall is ſaid to have been H.B. Patriarks travailes. in one of the Cites of Gilead, but Hebr. it is in the Cities of Gilead, whereupon ſome relate, that Jephthah was ſo eſteemed of for his valour, that they cut his body in pieces when he was dead, and carryed a part to each of their Cities, and there buryed it.

V.8. V. 8. And after him Ibzan of Bethlehem judged Iſrael, &c. Here the Hiſtory of three Judges is briefly runne through, of Ibzan, Elon of Zebulun, and Ab-don of Pirathon in Mount Ephraim, of whom nothing is ſaid, but only that they judged Iſrael, the one 7 yeares, the other 10, and the laſt 8 yeares, ſaving that Ibzan is ſaid to have had 30 ſonnes and 30 daughters; and Abdon 40 ſonnes, and 30 nephews, that rode upon 70 Aſſecolts, ſee the like before, Ch. 10.4. It ſeemeth, that nothing memorable happened in the dayes of theſe Judges, and Ferus. therefore ſuch brevity is uſed about them: yet as Ferus noteth, hereby it appeareth that they were worthy men, becauſe they kept the people from ſinning by Idolatry all their dayes, as appeareth, in that after the laſt of them dead and buryed, they are ſaid to have ſinned, Chap. 13.1. and not before. Whereas Abdon is ſaid to have been buryed in the Mount of the Amalekites, which was in

Pirathon,

Piratbon his City, and therefore within the Ephraimites lot, it is not to be thought with ſome, that the Amalekites now dwelt here, but in times paſt, from whence it ſtill retained the name, for the Amalekites now dwelt eaſtward beyond Jordan, as appeared, Judg. 6. 3.

CHAP. XIII.

V. 1.

AND the children of Iſrael did evill in the ſight of the Lord, and hee delivered them into the hands of the Philiſtims forty yeares. How theſe 40 yeares are to bee reckoned, is very doubtfull, becauſe they cannot come within the number of yeares that Samſon judged Iſrael being but 20, Chap. 16. 31. Wherefore ſome will have theſe yeares to bee the time of an interregnum betweene Abdon and Samſon; ſome to begin 20 yeares before Samſon, in the time of the other Judges, and to continue all his time; and ſome reckon 20 of theſe yeares to Samſon, and 20 to Ely, who is ſaid to have judged Iſrael 40 yeares, 1 Sam. 4. 18. The firſt of theſe cannot bee admitted, becauſe ſo the number of yeares from their comming out of Egypt to the building of Solomons Temple, will exceed that number, 1 King. 6. 1. as hath been ſhewed upon Joſh. 24. 32. Againſt the ſecond this ſeemeth to make, that they are not ſaid to have been delivered into the Philiſtims hands, till after the death of Abdon: and againſt the third this maketh, that it is ſaid of Samſon before he was borne, that he ſhould begin to deliver Iſrael out of the Philiſtims hands, V. 5. Therefore the Philiſtims oppreſſed them before that Samſon was Judge. How any thing can bee anſwered to that which is objected againſt the firſt and third, I ſee not; but to that againſt the ſecond, it may bee ſaid, although their doing evill, and being delivered into the Philiſtims hands be not ſpoken of till after Abdons death, yet this might be done before, not long after the beginning of the time of the firſt of theſe three Judges, becauſe all things in the ſacred Hiſtory are not alwayes ſet downe in the ſame order wherein they were done.

Euſeb. in Chron.
Genebrardus,
&c.

Yet Euſebius, Genebrard, Lyra, and Toſtatus are for the third, becauſe Samſon did but begin to deliver Iſrael from the Philiſtims, and they were ſtill grievous enemies to them in Elies time. Wheras it is objected, that Iſrael was under the oppreſſion of the Philiſtims before Samſon was borne: it is anſwered, that this is no where plainly affirmed, but when Samſon was a man growne, Chap. 14. 4. and therefore that of his beginning to deliver Iſrael out of the Philiſtims hands, might bee ſpoken by way of Propheſie, before that Iſrael fell into their hands; and to this, as moſt probable of all theſe Opinions doe I ſubſcribe.

V. 2.

The next words then, wherein the hiſtory of Samſon is begun: There was a man of Zorah, of the family of the Danites, whoſe name was Manoah, &c. are not ſo to bee underſtood, as if before this Iſrael had ſinned, and was delivered to the Philiſtims, but becauſe the Lord would have the whole hiſtory of Samſon knowne, from his birth to his death; the manner of his birth, which was many yeares before, is here ſet downe.

Ferus.

Note.

From the time of the Philiſtims having dominion over Iſrael, viz. 40 yeares, Ferus noteth, that this was a greater puniſhment then any that they had yet ſuffered, for they were never under any enemy ſo long; which intimateth, that they which ſinne againe and againe after puniſhments and deliverances, ſhall bee puniſhed more grievouſly, according to that, Goe thy way and ſinne no more, leſt a worſe thing befall thee. Of Zorah, the City, of which Manoah was, ſee Joſh. 19. 41. and moſt aptly was one raiſed up of this place and tribe againſt the Philiſtims, becauſe it was neare unto them.

Ioſeph Antiq.
lib. 5 c. 10.

Joſephus ſaith, that Manoah was the beſt man among the Danites, and that his wife was very faire, and that he was jealous of her, and much grieved becauſe hee had no childe by her; for which cauſe hee prayed moſt earneſtly to the Lord, who ſent an Angel to her being alone, to bring her this joyfull meſſage, that ſhee ſhould conceive and beare a ſonne.

Ferus.

In Samſon God ſhewed his power, ſaith Ferus, more then in any of the Judges before-going, in that he cauſed a barren Woman to beare him, and gave him ſuch extraordinary ſtrength, as if hee would raiſe them up a deliverer out of the ſtones, that his power being herein acknowledged, they might at length begin to feare and ſerve him.

V. 3, 4. The Angel appearing to Manoah his wife, told her, that although ſhee had been hitherto barren, yet now ſhee ſhould conceive and bear a ſonne, bidding
V. 5. her to abſtaine from wine and ſtrong drinke, and from eating any thing uncleane, becauſe he ſhould be a Nazarite from the wombe, therefore no raſour muſt come upon his head; and hee ſaith, that he ſhould begin to deliver Iſrael from the Philiſtims. 1. Hee telleth her that ſhee was barren, that ſhee might bee the more attentive to him, as to an Angel or Prophet of God, which
Joh. 4. knew ſecrets, as the woman of Samaria gathered that Chriſt was a Prophet, becauſe hee told her of her husbands. 2. Becauſe this childe ſhould bee a Nazarite, he forbiddeth her wine and ſtrong drinke, as is forbidden to Nazarites, Numb. 6. to teach, that a mother which would have an holy childe, muſt her ſelfe be holy and temperate, for the childe commonly taketh after the mother. 3. According to the law of Nazarites, hee ſaith, that no raſour ſhould come upon his head all his life time, other Nazarites were ſuch but for a time, and then they were ſhorne, but this childe muſt be a Nazarite for ever. 4. Hee ſaith, that he ſhould deliver Iſrael, a man ſeparated to ſerve God in a ſtrict and auſtere kind of living in private, and never exerciſed in feates of Armes; that he ſhould at length come forth and fight againſt whole Troopes of the Philiſtims alone, and beat them downe, was admirable; but thus God to ſhew his power ordained that it ſhould bee, whoſe wayes are not like mans wayes, but by contemptible and unlikely meanes worketh wonders when he pleaſeth; thus Ferus. But ſhee is forbidden wine and ſtrong drinke alſo, and the eating of things uncleane by the Law, Levit. 11. becauſe the childe in the mothers womb, partaketh with her, and liveth upon the ſame nouriſhment, that her child therefore might live according to the law of Nazarites, both from the wombe and in the womb, theſe things are injoyned her: and it is to be held, that it was meant that ſhe ſhould continue in this abſtinence all the time that ſhee gave him ſuck, there being ſtill the like reaſon in regard of the childe. Touching the eating of any uncleane thing forbidden her, which is more then is ſpoken of in the law of Nazaritiſme, Numb. 6. and more then needed, becauſe this was forbidden to all the people of God, Levit. 11. it may bee conceived that the corruption of thoſe times was ſuch, that they lived not according to the Law; and therefore ſhee in particular was put in mind of this alſo, as being a thing as much to bee ſhunned, by a Nazarite eſpecially, as Wine or ſtrong drinke.

Hee ſhall begin to deliver Iſrael; this is ſpoken to ſhew that hee ſhould not, as other Deliverers, utterly ſubdue the Philiſtims at once, but by little and little waſte and deſtroy many of them, and weaken them ſo, as that they ſhould not bee able ſo powerfully to oppreſſe the Iſraelites as in former times, but they ſhould by his meanes have ſome reſpite from their tyranny.

V. 6, 7. Verſ. 6, 7. Manoahs wife having ſeen and heard all this alone, telleth it to
V. 8, 9, 10. her husband, who prayed unto God, that the man of God might come again, and was heard, and the Angel was ſent againe, &c. In Manoah's wife, ſaith Ferus. Ferus, wee may ſee an example of the womans ſubjection to her husband, and of the unity wherein they lived together, in that ſhee reſted not in the viſion which ſhee had ſeene, but firſt told her husband, that ſhee might have his counſell; a thing wherein Evah failed when the Serpent ſpake unto her, and ſo fell moſt foully; and he likewiſe having heard his wives relation of a man comming to her alone, upbraided her not, but being confident touching his wives chaſtity, prayed, that the Angel appearing in the likeneſſe of a man, might come againe to inſtruct them touching the ordering of the childe. For touching the woman, hee had heard already what ſhee ſhould beware of, but no particular inſtructions had been given touching the childe, wherein he gave an example of an holy ſollicitude to all Parents about the education of their children according to the will of God. And in all theſe things this marryed couple are to bee imitated by all others in the ſame eſtate, by the wives being ſubject to her owne husband, and taking his advice in all matters of moment, their living together in love and unity and in their ſolicitude about the good education V.13, 14.

of their children. The Angel appearing againe and being deſired by Manoah to give him directions, how to order the childe, anſwereth nothing touching him, but touching his mother, as before, ſuppoſing, that hereby it would eaſily be underſtood, that hee ſhould abſtaine from the ſame things, ſeeing he was to be a Nazarite. Then Manoah prayeth him to ſtay, till he V. 15, 16, had made ready a kid, and hee refuſing to eate, hee craved his name, V.17, 18.
but was denyed it, the Angel ſaying, why doſt thou inquire after my name, which Lyra.
is ſecret? that is, according to Lyra, becauſe Angels have names according to meſſage, that they are ſent about, and ſo hee that is called by one name now, varyeth his name afterwards, when hee is ſent upon another meſſage, and because hee knoweth not, what that ſhall be, till that it is revealed unto him, hee ſaith here, that his name is ſecret: thus hee following the Hebrews, who ground this upon Eſa. 6. where the Angel, that touched Eſays lips with a coale from the Altar, is called Seraphim, becauſe of that imployment, but was not of the order of the Seraphim. I thinke rather with Ferus, that hee reproveth Ferus.
him for asking after his name, as being a point of curioſity and no way tending to edification, and herein we are all forbidden to enquire after ſuch things, and to pry into the ſecrets of the Lord: ſo likewiſe to Iacob asking the name of the Angel, that wreſtled with him, hee ſaid, Why doſt thou inquire after my Gen 23 19.
name? For the Angels doubtleſſe have names, whereby they are diſtinguiſht one from another, as Michael and Gabriel, and Raphael, but they are not to be knowne by us in this mortall life any further, then it pleaſeth God to reveale them. For theſe words, which is ſecret, the Vulgar Latine hath, which is wonderfull, and Junius, fuitque mirificus, the reaſon of which he ſaith, may Junius.
bee gathered from that, which followeth, v. 19. the Angel of the Lord did wonderfully: and the text favoureth this, becauſe the ſame word פלא, which is here uſed, is againe uſed there, and it ſignifyeth either ſecret or wonderfull; neither is there any word in the Hebrew ſignifying which is, but according to Junius, and hee was wonderfull.

So Manoah took a kid with a meat offering; and offered it upon a rocke, and the V.19.
Angell did wonderfully, &c. If it be demanded, how Manoah being no Prieſt could offer ſacrifice, and that out of the place appointed, viz. the place of the Tabernacle? It is eaſily anſwered, that this was extraordinarily done by particular direction, as Gedeons ſacrifice before. But Lyra and ſome others Lyra ſay, that Manoah offered it not, but brought it to the Angel, who offered Bonfrerius.
it, hee and his wife onely looking on: but becauſe v. 16. the Angel bad him offer a burnt-offering to the Lord, it is rather to bee held, that hee offered it, and the Angel went up in the flame, which it ſeemeth came miraculouſly out of the rock, as before when Gedeon offered. v. 21. Then V. 21, 22:
Manoah knew, that it was an Angel of the Lord, and ſaid, wee ſhall ſurely dye;
becauſe wee have ſeene God, &c. In the like feare was Gedeon, Ch. 6. 22, 23. of V. 23.
the ground of which feare ſee Exod. 33. 20. but his wife uſeth divers ſtrong Arguments to expell this feare out of him. Then the woman conceived and bare a V. 24.
ſonne and called his name Samſon, &c. This name is thought by Jerom to come of שמש the Sunne, ſo that Samſon ſignifyeth either their Sun according to Hugo Cardin.
ſome, or a little Sunne being a diſinutive word, according to others; Joſephus Mercerus.
expoundeth it Robuſtus, becauſe as the ſtrength of the Sunne in the heat thereof, ſo his ſtrength was irreſiſtible. And the childe grew and the Lord bleſſed him, and the Spirit of God moved him at times in the tents of Dan. That is, the Lord put the Spirit of fortitude and ſtrength into him, extraordinary, ſome ſignes whereof hee ſhewed amongſt thoſe of his tribe, viz. the Danites, who dwelt in tents, at ſuch times as the Spirit moved him hereunto, whereby ſome hope might bee conceived of his future valiant acts to bee done againſt the enemie.

CHAP. XIIII.

V. 1, 2. AND Samſon went downe to Timnath, and ſaw a woman of Timnath of the daughters of the Philiſtims, &c. Of Timnath ſee before Gen. 38. 12. where Judah is ſaid to have gone thither to ſheare his ſheepe, and Joſh. 24.30. for H. Bunting will have this Timnath and that to bee all one, but forſomuch as that Timnath was in Mount Ephraim, but this, as Lyra ſaith, in the Philiſtims Countrey nearer to the Sea, ſee Joſh. 19. 50. he was deceived. To this City of the Philiſtims Samſon goeth downe, for now the Iſraelites being under their dominion, they might freely goe amongſt them and returne. H. Bunt. Patria. travailes. Lyra.

V. 4. But whereas Samſon is ſaid to deſire one of their daughters to wiſe, which is againſt the law, Deut. 7. it is ſaid to have come of the Lord, that he might take occaſion to quarrell with the Philiſtims, which his parents knew not, and therefore diſſwaded him from it. But it ſeemeth, that Samſon knew it, and it was revealed unto him, and he made his parents acquainted with it, whereupon they yeelded to his deſire, for otherwiſe both hee and they had ſinned herein, which is not to be thought of them, becauſe they were godly and devout perſons: thus alſo Lyra, who further inquireth, what neede there was, that Samſon ſhould ſeeke occaſion to fight againſt the Philiſtims, ſeeing their unjuſt holding of any part of Iſrael inheritance from them was a ſufficient occaſion, and anſwereth, that they were now under the Philiſtims dominion, and ſo by covenant happily and oath obliged unto them, and therefore he could not without breach hereof make warre againſt them, unleſſe ſome new occaſion were offered.

V. 5. Then went Samſon downe to Timnath and his father and mother, and came to the vineyards of Timnath, and behold a young Lion roared upon him, &c. Here is the firſt particular act expreſſed, whereby Samſon gave proofe of his ſtrength, and it ſeemeth, that hee was now gone aſide from his Parents upon ſome occa-

V. 6. ſion, for hee rent the lion in pieces, as a kid, having nothing in his hand, but told not them of it, therefore they were not preſent, when hee did it. And when hee did this, it is ſaid, the Spirit of God came upon him, to ſhew that hee had not this great ſtrength of himſelfe, but by the Spirit, as alſo appeared afterwards, when the Spirit of God left him, Judg. 16. 20. And it was by a ſingular providence, that a fierce young lion now encountred him, that hee might with the more courage, this valiant act being done, ſet upon the Philiſtims afterwards. Note. Ferus. In that Samſon would not wed without his parents conſent, all young men and women, ſaith Ferus, may learne their duty, viz, to obey their parents even in their marriages, and parents ſhould not tyrannically force them to match contrary to their liking, as Samſons parents did not. And in that hee, which ſhould deliver Iſrael from the Philiſtims, joyned himſelfe in affinity with them, hee noteth well, that God goeth about ſuch things, as hee will bring to paſſe the cleane contrary way: becauſe matching into any ſtocke is a meanes commonly of the more amity and love, although it bee by ſome Princes perverted to an occaſion of quarell to enlarge their dominions, wherein they marry as Samſon did, but not having the ſame ſpirit to move them, but ambition and covetouſneſſe; although he did well, they ſinne greatly herein.

V. 7, 8, 9. After the Lion thus ſlaine, Samſon having his parents with him agreeth to marry that woman, and deſcending for the celebrating of the muptialls hee findeth bees and honey in the Lions carkaſs, whereof hee taketh and eateth and giveth ſome to his Parents. Qu. Wherefore did Samſon goe to ſee the Lions carkaſs? Doubtleſſe not out of curioſity, but that by ſeeing it againe he might bee the more confirmed; and hee was now alſo brought hither againe by a ſecret inſtinct of the Spirit, that hee might ſee another wonder, a ſwarme of bees making their neaſts there, a thing, which they naturally abhorre from, for bees harbour not in ſtinking, but cleane places. Onely God, who can doe all things, cauſed it thus to bee at this time, that a foundation might bee laid of his riddle, and quarrell with the Philiſtims, which follow, v. 12, 13. &c. Of the bees being delighted in ſweet flowers and cleane things, and abhorring from all ſtinking things, write Pliny, Varro, Collumella, and others; but Lyra and Abulenſis ſay, that there are two kinds of Bees, the City Bee, which indeed is ſo cleanly, and the Countrey Bee, which is not, and therefore theſe Bees might bee of this kinde. Lyra. Toſtatus. But no Naturaliſt writeth of any ſuch kinde of bees, and therefore it is but a conjecture. Bonfrerius Some thinke that the carkaſſe was conſumed to the bare bones, and ſo ſtanke not, and that the bees were bred of the putriſaction of the Lions dead body; but this was miraculous, becauſe although bees breed of Bullocks, waſpes of Horſes, and hornets of Aſſes, yet of Lions no ſuch thing hath ever been obſerved. The Vulg. Latine and Septuagint, for carkaſſe, have, the mouth of the Lion, but Hebr. it is the carkaſſe. Schol. Hiſt. V. 11. Whereas it is ſaid, Hee gave of the honey to his father and mother; Comeſtor addeth, and, to his Spouſe alſo. And whereas at the nuptialls it is ſaid, That they brought unto him 30 young men to bee his companions, hee ſaith, that the men of Timnath did this, pretending that they ſhould keep him company during the feaſt, and bee merry with him, but intending that they ſhould bee his keepers, for feare of any attempt to bee made by him through his great ſtrength: Ferus. Lyra. ſo likewiſe Ferus and Lyra, and others, they pretended to doe this in friendſhip, and to honour him, but they were indeed ſet to reſiſt him, if the caſe ſhould ſo require.

V. 12. And Samſon ſaid, I will now put forth a riddle unto you, and if you can certainly declare it unto mee within ſeven dayes of the feaſt, I will give you 30 ſheets, and 30 changes of garments, &c. This is the onely example of propounding a riddle in all the Scriptures, but amongſt the Greekes it was a thing commonly uſed at feaſts, but not upon ſuch paines, but the condition was to drinke a cup of wine to him that reſolved it, or ſalt water to him that could not reſolve it; ſo Pollux, Atheneus, Ariſtophanes and others. Ferus. Wee may ſee here how much our marriage feaſts are gone from that they were of old; for now they are kept with drinking and dancing, and wanton dalliances, but then with exerciſes of the wit, whereof ſome good might come. For ſheets, the Septuagint and Vulgar Latine have ſyndones, linnen garments; and hereby are meant ſhirts, which goe next the body, covering it all over; by the other 30 change of garments, are meant coates, which are commonly worne above. The riddle propounded, (when the condition was agreed upon, viz. that if they could reſolve it, hee would give them theſe garments, but if not, they ſhould give ſo many to him) V. 14. was this, Out of the eater came meat, and out of the ſtrong came ſweetneſſe: this he propounded, having in minde that marvailous thing before related, for the Lion eateth other creatures, and was moſt ſtrong, but the ſweet honey comb which is pleaſant meate, came out of his dead body. Qu. Some make a queſtion upon Samſons eating of that which came out of a Lion, which is an uncleane beaſt, whether he ſinned not? becauſe Levit. 11. 34. that which toucheth the carkaſſe of any uncleane beaſt, is uncleane, and may not bee eaten. I anſwer, God provided this honey here extraordinarily, that Samſon might eate of it, and therefore it was no fault in him; as neither the taking up of the jawbone of an Aſſe, which was uncleane alſo, and drinking out of it, and other things that hee did, which were not lawfull ordinarily to bee done, but by Divine diſpenſation they might be done by him. V. 15, 16, 17, 18. The riddle propounded Samſons companions could not expound in three dayes, but afterwards comming to his wife and threatening her, ſhee with teares prevailed ſo, that before the 7 dayes of the Feaſt were ended, Samſon expounded it to her, and ſhee to them, and they to Samſon. Qu. Whereas ſhee is ſaid to have wept before him 7 dayes, it may bee demanded how this could bee, ſeeing they came not to her with their threatenings till the 7 day? Anſw. Although it is ſaid, that they could not expound it in 3 days, and that they threatened not her till the 7 day, it followeth not, but that they might importune her, and ſhee her husband from the beginning; but Samſon putting her off 3 dayes, and ſhee them, they ſet upon her afterwards with more violence, threatening deſtruction to her and her fathers houſe, unleſſe leſſe ſhee learned out the expoſition of the riddle for them. Or elſe they having ſtudyed upon it by themſelves 7 dayes in vaine, laboured with her about it by prayers and intreaties till the 7 day, and then threatened her, and ſhee all thoſe 4 dayes laboured by teares with Samſon, till ſhee prevailed; and theſe are ſaid to bee 7 dayes, becauſe the greater part of the 7 dayes of the feaſt; ſo Lyra. Or Lyra. ſhee is ſaid to have wept 7 dayes, that is, ſome of the 7, as Chriſt is ſaid to have Hugo Cardin. appeared 40 dayes, that is, divers of the 40 from his reſurrection to his aſcenſion; ſo Hugo. Touching their ſpeaking to Samſons wife upon the 7 day, Lyra ſaith, it was not the 7 day of the feaſt, but the Sabbath day, which was one of the 7 feſtivall dayes, viz. the fourth, but called the 7, becauſe the Sabbath was the 7 day: But I ſee not, how by the 7 day any other can bee underſtood then the 7 day of the feaſt, ſeeing the reckoning is altogether made hereby, and it was the 7 day towards Sun-ſetting, before that they could know the expoſition of the riddle, ſo long did they labour with Samſons wife, and ſhee with her husband, before that hee would diſcloſe it; but hee that was moſt ſtrong in body, was not ſo ſtrong in minde, but by a womans weeping and teares hee was at length overcome. Gen. 29. 27. For the feaſt of 7 dayes continuance, it was a thing then uſuall at marriages. Samſon having the expoſition of his riddle brought V. 18. Lyra. unto him upon the 7 day before the Sun-ſet, ſaid, If yee had not ploughed with my heifer, yee had not found out my riddle: A metaphoricall ſpeech to ſet forth the finding out of a mans ſecrets by the helpe of his wife; for hee that plougheth the ground, diſcovereth that which was before hidden; and hee likeneth his wife to an heifer, propter muliebrem inſolentiam, ſaith Lyra. And hee that uſeth any thing of another mans to get advantage againſt him, may well have this proverb alſo applyed to him.

V. 19. And the Spirit of God came upon him, and hee went up to Askelon, and ſlew thirty men, &c. Here was a bold attempt, ſhewing invincible courage and ſtrength, in that one man alone durſt come into a populous City, and there ſlay 30 men, and take their ſpoile to give to thoſe 30 that had expounded his riddle. What did all the reſt of the Citizens whilſt he was doing this? Verily, it is to bee thought, that for feare of him they ran away and hid themſelves. Qu. But how was this juſtifiable, hee owing garments by covenant to ſome, to goe and take them from others being ſlaine, therewith to pay them? Anſw. In all this Samſon ſinned not, becauſe by the Spirit of God comming upon him he was moved unto it, but for us it is not lawfull, but a great ſinne to doe the like. The thing that outwardly provoked Samſon to this, was to bee revenged for the injury done unto him, in that by threatening his wife, they had wreſted the expoſition of the riddle from him, whereas the condition was, if they of themſelves could find it out.

V. 20. Then his wrath was kindled againſt the Philiſtims, and hee went away to his fathers houſe, but his wife was given to his companion. Here that began to worke, for which the Lord moved him to marry a wife of the Philiſtims, hee was now made their profeſſed enemy, but they themſelves were the firſt cauſe hereof, both for the indirect meanes which they uſed to reſolve his riddle, and in that his wives father, contrary to the law of marriage, gave her to another man. Samſon was angry with the Philiſtims, who happily derided him when they received his gifts, and with his wife, for her treacherous dealing in bewraying his ſecrets, ſo he left her in his wrath for a time, and went to his fathers houſe; but her father taking it for a finall departing, and conceiving that Samſon had quite rejected her, marryeth her to one of his companions, that is, one of the 30 brought to be his companions during the feaſt: for that this was the cauſe of giving her to another, may bee ſeen, Chap. 15. 2.

CHAP. XV.

V. 1. BUT it came to paſſe within a while after in the time of wheat-harveſt, that Samſon viſited his wife with a Kid, &c. Although being ſo provoked, hee was Ferus. angry with her, yet now hee putteth all anger away, and returneth to his wiſe in all love and kindneſſe, giving herein an example to all men, and marryed men in ſpeciall, Note. not to dwell in anger, but ſoone to bee reconciled againe, and ſpecially to the wife the husband ought to bee reconciled, conſidering the womans weakneſſe, wherein hee ought to beare with her as with the weaker veſſell. And this is noted to have been in the time of wheat-harveſt to prepare to the relation following of burning up their ſtanding corne. This was the placable mind of Samſon, who thought to forgive and forget all former injuries, ſuppoſing that the Philiſtims would doe likewiſe. But when hee came unto her with his Kid, as a token of his kindneſſe, hee found it otherwiſe with the Philiſtims; for ſhee was given to another man, and hee was not permitted to goe in unto her, which was a manifeſt injury, becauſe although hee went from her for a while, yet hee did not put her away, and therefore ſhee ought not, leaving him, to have been marryed to another. So that herein was a ſecond occaſion of quarrell with the Philiſtims given unto S*amſon*, which hee being ſet to revenge not his owne wrongs onely, but the wrongs of the people of God, ought not to neglect, being alſo appointed by God, before he was born, to deliver Iſrael from the P*hiliſtims*: wherfore the apology made by her father, v.2. I thought that thou hadſt hated her, V.2. & his offering another daughter unto him that was fairer, would not ſatisfie him, but for this injury done him by the Philiſtims, he took 300 Foxes, V.4,5. and tying two & two together by their tailes, he put them into their ſtanding corn, with firebrands faſtened between them, and ſo burnt up their ſhocks, ſtanding corn, olives, and vineyards. Her Parents and kinſfolks, ſaith Ferus, Ferus. moſt probably conſented about the taking of his wife from him, and giving her to another, and amongſt the P*hiliſtims* there were none that prohibited it, therefore hee imputeth this fault to the Philiſtims of that place in generall. But what hee did in way of revenge, is not lawfull for us ordinarily to doe, for wee muſt not revenge our ſelves, but love our enemies, and ſuffer wrongs. It is then to bee conſidered, that he had an extraordinary calling in hoſtile manner to invade the Philiſtims, in which caſe it was lawfull for him, both to ſpoile their goods and to deſtroy them, as it is lawfull for all others to doe againſt enemies, againſt whom they may lawfully make warre. For his burning up of their olives and vineyards, this ought not to bee done in an enemies land, Deut. 20. 19. but this of Samſon was ſuch a way of infeſting the enemy, as that it was out of the compaſſe of that Precept, the hurt intended here, being to their ſtanding corne onely, and that other following upon it accidentally to their vineyards. If it ſhall ſeeme marvailous that Samſon could take ſo many Foxes at one time, Lyra Lyra. anſwereth, that it is not likely that he took them alone, but uſed men skilfull in taking them with nets, who might ſoone, in a Countrey ſo full of them, furniſh him with ſo many, as well as a Warrener can take in a ſhort time 300 Conies. For his tying fire-brands betweene their tayles, hee ſaith alſo, that was by ſomething put betweene them, which might not burne aſunder, and which might keep the fire from burning the Foxes, through the ſpace betwixt tayle and tayle.

V 6. Then the Philiſtims ſaid, Who hath done this? and they anſwered, Samſon the ſonne in law of the Timnite, becauſe hee tooke his wife and gave her to his companion; then they came up and burnt her and her father with fire. The companions of Samſon had before threatened this unto her, Chap. 14. 15. unleſſe ſhee learned for them the reſolution of Samſons riddle, and now it commeth accordingly upon her and her father. Note. Whence note, that they who yeeld to doe any wickedneſſe for the avoyding of a danger, ſhall ſurely fall into it, for ſhee did wickedly, in treacherouſly ſeeking the reſolution of the riddle to betray Samſon, and now ſhee ſmarteth for is: and ſo likewiſe the Jewes, who feared, if they let Chriſt alone, that the Romans would come and take away their City, Joh. 11. 48. wherefore they crucified him, and had their City deſtroyed indeed.

V.7,8. And Samſon ſaid, Although yee have done this, yet I will bee revenged on you, &c. and he ſmote them hippe and thigh, with a great ſlaughter, &c. Hereby it appeareth that S*amſon* ſet himſelfe againſt the P*hiliſtims*, not ſo much to revenge the wrong offered unto him about his wife, (for then hee would have ceaſed as fully ſatisfied, when her owne Countrey-men to revenge that wrong offered him, had burnt her and her father, and as Joſephus ſaith, all her kindred) but that by deſtroying the Philiſtims hee might doe the publike office, to which hee was appointed of God, tending to the deliverance of his people from their tyranny. Therefore when hee ſaith, Although yee have done this, yet I will bee revenged on you; his meaning is, hereby I will not bee ſtayed from hoſtilly invading you, but as yee for your tyranny and oppreſſions of Iſrael deſerve, I will ſmite your perſons as wel as I have done your goods, now that ye have by your unjuſt dealing with mee made me your enemy. For Samſon knew well enough, that what they had done againſt his wife and her father, they did not in taking his part, but for vexation at the great loſſe which they had ſuſtained: They did it not, as Ferus hath it, out of zeale againſt unrighteouſneſſe, but in fury and madneſſe for their loſſe. But what this meaneth, Hee ſmote them hip and thigh, divers conjecture diverſly; ſome Hebrewes, becauſe the horſeman ſitteth with his hips upon his horſe, and the footman goeth upon the ſtrength of his thighs and legs, ſay, that hereby horſemen and footmen are meant. Some Hebrewes more anciently, as Burgenſis hath it, that Samſon without any weapon, onely by kicking them upon the hip and thigh, made a great ſlaughter of them. Some following the Vulg. Latine, which is, ſo that being amazed, they laid their hip upon their thigh, that hee ſmote them ſo grievouſly, that they ſat downe aſtoniſhed, and laying one leg over another, ſtudyed how to be revenged upon him therefore, ſo Augustine, Lyra, &c. As if one ſhould ſay, ſaith Auguſtine, hee ſmote them hand upon the cheek, that is, ſo as that leaning the cheek upon the hand, they ſtudyed what to doe. Hee mentioneth alſo another expoſition, becauſe it is not Hebr. hip and thigh, but hip upon thigh, he ſmote them with the hip or leg of ſome beaſt upon the thigh, and ſo ſlew them, as afterwards with the jawbone of an Aſſe: But hee reſteth not in this, becauſe it is not probable that he ſmote them all in one place. Ferus, he ſmote them ſo, that they ſhrunke up their bodies together, if they might any way avoid his ſtrokes. Of all theſe expoſitions, that ſeemeth to mee to bee beſt, which is for his ſmiting of them with his feet and heeles, and thus Junius underſtandeth it, who rendreth the words, percuſſit eos crure vibrato in femur; and he expoundeth it, he ſet upon them with no other weapon then with his foot, as being a cowardly people, and herewith hee ſmote them upon the thigh or ſide; for ſo alſo ירך ſignifieth, and thus hee deſtroyed them. And this ought not to ſeeme incredible, conſidering his great ſtrength, and his ſlaying of a fierce Lyon before, when he had no weapon in his hand. If hee had ſlaine them with the thigh of any other creature, it ſhould ſurely have been mentioned, as the jawbone of an Aſſe is afterwards; if footmen and horſemen had been meant, there were other words whereby to expreſſe this more plainly, and it is leaſt probable that their ſitting downe as aſtoniſhed is meant, or the ſhrinking up of their bodies to avoid his ſtrokes, becauſe this was no time thus to doe, but rather, if they could, to betake themſelves to flight. And hee went downe and dwelt in the top of the rocke Etam, the Vulg. Latine, hee deſcended and dwelt in a denne in the rocke Etam, that is, ſaith Comeſtor, in a ſtrong Hold there. The word בסעף biſgnaph properly ſignifieth in the bough or branch, that is, a part which moſt probably was a den fit to dwell in, and of ſome good ſtrength. This Etam was in the tribe of Judah, where, as H. Bunting hath it, was a rock or ſtrong Hold in which Samſon dwelt, and being decayed, it was afterward repaired by Jeroboam, 2 Chron. 11. 6. But how is hee ſaid to deſcend thither, and yet the Philiſtims are ſaid to have come up againſt Judah, where hee was? Anſw. Becauſe it was a place lower then other parts of Judah, and then Zorah where Samſon dwelt before, yet higher then the Philiſtims Countrey, who dwelt by the ſea.

Joſephus.

Ferus.

Hebræi.

Burgenſis.

Auguſt. qu. in Judic. Lyra.

Ferus.

Junius.

H. Bunt. Patria. travailes.

V. 9. Then the Philiſtims went up, and pitched in Judah, and ſpread themſelves in Lehi, that is, 6 miles from Etam, a place here called Lehi by anticipation, for Lehi ſignifieth a jawbone, and it was ſo called, becauſe Samſon ſlew here with the jawbone of an Aſſe 1000 men, v. 15. it is called, v. 17. Ramath-Lehi, that is the lifting up of a jawbone.

The

V. 10, 11, 12, 13. The men of Judah fearing the Philiſtims, and knowing that their quarrell was againſt Samſon, came at their requeſt 3000 of them to Etam, and bound Samſon with two new cords, and ſo brought him to the Philiſtims at Lehi: but firſt Samſon causeth them to ſweare unto him, that they would not fall upon him: Hee yeelded himſelfe unto them to bee bound, ſaith Lyra, Lyra. that the Philiſtims might not ſlay them for his ſake: for the comming up of their great Army, (to denote the greatneſſe whereof, it is ſaid, They ſpread themſelves in Lehi; as covering a great breadth of ground) was either to bind and carry Samſon away captive, or if their deſire were not fulfilled this way, to fight againſt Judah. And hee cauſed them to ſweare unto him, leſt by attempting any thing againſt his life themſelves, they ſhould bee indangered of being deſtroyed by him. The Philiſtims had already ſeen, ſaith Ferus, Ferus. the hand of God in Samſon, againſt which there was no reſiſting but by penitency and humiliation, yet they, as men inſenſible, harden themſelves, to the procuring of a greater blow from Samſons hands; Note. ſo wicked men ſometime puniſhed by the hardneſſe of their hearts and impenitency, procure unto themſelves greater deſtruction. And here was a great deal of puſillanimity and unbeliefe in the Iſraelites, in that ſeeing the Philiſtims come up they feared, when God had ſtirred them up ſo mighty a Champion, for they could not bee ignorant of his exploits, ſo that there was no reaſon that they ſhould now bee affraid, but have ſticked to their Champion, truſting by him to bee delivered from this great Army. But they contrarywiſe for feare binde him, and ſo doe what in them lyeth, to bereave themſelves of this great benefit, ſhewing herein both ingratitude towards Samſon that had ſo well deſerved of them for killing up their enemies, and infidelity towards God, for which they had no full deliverance by him, but onely as it is ſaid, hee began to deliver Iſrael, the Philiſtims being ſtill permitted many yeares after, to rule over them, as hath been ſhewed upon Judg. 13. 1. Note. Thus want of faith hindereth men from enjoying the good they ſhould, and the well-deſerving are ill requited amongſt evill men, yet they ought not hereby to bee diſcouraged, or uſe their power to revenge themſelves, as Samſon did not. For although hee was able, hee ſmote not the men of Judah, Note. to helpe whom hee had received his ſtrength, neither ſhould any faithfull perſon uſe his power againſt the people of God, but againſt his enemies, and for them. The faith of Samſon was moſt ſtrong, for although hee were delivered bound into the Philiſtims hands, yet hee feared not but hee ſhould prevaile againſt them, as appeareth by his ſpeech to the men of Judah. But thoſe that were in danger for his ſake, hee would rather ſuffer any thing himſelfe, then not bring them out of it againe. It is a marvaile that Samſon being of ſo great ſtrength, as to encounter with an whole Army, did not comfort the men of Judah comming to binde him, willing them rather to forbear, and ſaying, that hee would goe and abate their courage, which in reaſon he might ſeeme to bee more able to doe, being free, and taking a weapon in his hand, then when he was bound. But partly, becauſe they were fearfull and unbeleeving, & partly, that the power of God in him might the more appear, he was thus firſt diſabled, and then to their greater aſtoniſhment and confuſion he brake theſe bands, and fell upon them and ſlew them with that which came next to hand. Note. Thus God ſuffereth the caſe of his to be brought to that, that it ſeemeth deſperate, and then ſheweth his power, that hee may bee the more glorified, and truſted in.

V. 14. And when hee came to Lehi, the Philiſtims ſhouted againſt him; and the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and the cords became as flaxe, &c. They ſhouted for joy, doubting not but that they ſhould now worke their will upon Samſon, but it fell out cleane contrary, ſo the hope of the wicked periſheth. And Samſon was ſupplyed with ſtrength ſufficient in the time of need, againſt which all binding could doe nothing, ſo the Lord will bee neare unto his that truſt in him to ſupply them with help when they have moſt need thereof.

V. 15. And he found a new jawbone of an Aſſe, and took it, and therewith he ſlew 1000 men.

This was miraculous, that one man having ſo many armed men about him, without any weapon onely with a brittle jawbone ſhould knock downe and Eccleſ. Hiſtoria kill ſo many men, and put all the Army to flight, as muſt needs bee underſtood, and Comeſtor hath it. And when hee had thus done, hee ſung a triumphant ſong unto the Lord, as Moſes and Deborah had done before, which was very ſhort, or as Lyra hath it, the beginning of it onely is ſet downe, in Lyra. Hebrew there is an elegant paranomaſy in the words בלחי חמור החמור

V.16. חמורתים בלחי Joſephus and Ambroſ. ſay, that theſe words were vauntingly ſpo-Ioſeph. Ambroſ. ken by Samſon, in the praiſe of his owne ſtrength, and therefore God puniſht him with ſo great thirſt, that he was in danger of death hereby, but Lyra and Ferus, Jerom and Comeſtor hold it to have beene a ſong of praiſe unto God:
Ferus. Hieron. Sholaſt. hiſtor. and this is moſt probable, becauſe his thirſt came upon his great labour, & herein he moſt piouſly ſought to God for ſuccour, without acknowledging any fault, and was heard, v. 18, 19. Touching the words there is a difference, our tranſlation hath it, with the jawbone of an Aſſe heapes upon heapes, with the jawbone of an Aſſe I have ſlaine 1000 men. but the Vulgar Latin, with the jawbone of an Aſſe, with the jawbone, pulli aſinarum, of the young of ſhee Aſſes, I have ſlaine &c. Ours is followed by the Rabbins, Pagnine, Vatablus, Junius, Ti-gurini interpretes, &c. and the word חמור ſignifyeth an heape as well as an Aſſe, and the ſecond word is of the duall number to ſhew, that this heape was great enough to make two heapes, and according to this reading it is more elegant the ſame word being brought againe aptly in a divers ſignifi-cation, whereas if it ſhould be read, ſhee Aſſes, there can bee no reaſon given why it ſhould be put in the feminine gender in the plurall number. And hee called that place Ramath Lehi, that is, the lifting up of a jawbone, that by the very name this miraculous ſlaughter of the enemies might be alwayes remembred to the praiſe of God.

V.18. And hee was ſoare athirſt and called on the name of the Lord, &c. and God clave the hollow place of the jaw and there came water out of it, &c. Some by the hol-Arias Montan. Chald. Paraphr. low place, out of which this water came, underſtand a place indented in the ground by the jawbone caſt out of Samſons hand, but it is plainely ſaid to have beene the hollow of the jawbone, or the hollow, that was in the jaw, that is, the place, where one of the grinders ſtood, and from hence water flowed out miraculouſly, as out of the head of a Fountaine, and when Samſon had V.19. drunke hereof, his ſpirit revived, and hee called the name hereof En-hakoreh, it is in Lehi to this day. En-hakoreh ſignifying the fountaine of one calling; and becauſe it is ſaid to bee in Lehi to this day, it is held ſtill to have remained a fountaine flowing with water from age to age, for both the writer of this booke, who wrote it ſome yeares after this was done, affirmeth to have continued untill his time. And Hieronymus ſaith, that it remained a ſpring of wa-Hieron. epitaphio Paulæ. Glycas ann. P. 2. ter, till his time, and Glycas ſaith, in the ſuburbs of Eleutheropolis is ſtill ſeene a ſpring called the jawbone.

V.20. And Samſon judged Iſrael in the dayes of the Philiſtims 20 yeares: ſee the ſame againe, Ch. 16. 31. in the dayes of the Philiſtims, to ſhew that his 20 yeares were part of the time, that the Philiſtims had dominion over Iſrael, as was ſhewed upon Ch. 13. 1.

CHAP. XVI.

V.1. THen went Samſon to Gaza and ſaw there an harlot, and went in unto her, &c.
Hitherto the valiant acts of Samſon have beene ſet forth and his piety:
now his fowle fallings into ſinne follow, and ſo into miſery and death, that the weakneſſe of the beſt may appeare, that who ſo ſtandeth may alwayes take heed, leſt hee fall. The Hebrews ſeeke to ſalve the matter, ſaying that ſhee was no harlot, but an Inne-keeper, as the word alſo ſignifyeth, and that hee went in to her onely to lodge all night, as travailers uſe to doe. But both the circumſtance of ſeeing her and ſo going in unto her, and of loving Delilah after this evince, that hee committed the foule ſinne of fornication with her her, as with Dalilah, but it is to bee thought in the time of his miſery, which followed, that hee repented and was forgiven, becauſe Heb. 11. hee is numbred among the Saints. Gaza was one of the chiefe Cities of the Philiſtims, and hither it is likely, that Samſon came to ſeeke occaſion againe againſt the Philiſtims, that hee might try his ſtrength further upon them. But it is moſt probable, that hee came now of his owne minde, preſuming upon his ſtrength, becauſe it is not ſaid, that this came of the Lord, and ſo God withdrew his grace from him for a puniſhment of his preſumption, and hee ran into the ſinne of fornication. v. 2. And it was told the Gazites ſaying, Samſon is come V. 2.

in hither, and they compaſſed him in and laid wait for him, &c. And Samſon roſe at midnight and tooke the doores and the two poſts, &c. Although hee ſinned by fornication, yet as long as he ſinned not againſt the law of Nazaritiſme, the Lord out of his great mercy paſſed it over, and ſupplyed him ſtill with this ſtupendious ſtrength, the like unto which was never heard of in any man, to plucke up and to carry away the gates and poſtes of a great City, which accordingly were without doubt great and heavy and ſtrongly fixed, ſo that he could not be hereby kept in, it ſhewed plainly a ſupernaturall and divine power, againſt which the ſtrongeſt gates and walls are nothing to defend the wicked inhabitants within. The place, to which hee carryed theſe gates was an hill before Hebron, this ſaith H. Bunting, was 20 miles, Adrichomius, a place H. Bunt Patria.
neare Gaza, but that could not bee, becauſe it is deſcribed by Hebron, neare travailes.
unto which it was, and that was, as Adrichomius himſelfe ſaith, 14 miles from Adrichomius.
Gaza. And this tending to the increaſing of the miracle. What the watchmen did all this while it is not ſaid, but it is moſt probable, that they were aſleepe, it being now midnight, or ſtood amazed ſeeing him doe ſuch a wonderfull thing, and not daring to reſiſt, or to purſue him.

After this he loved a woman in the valley of Sorek, whoſe name was Dalilah. V. 4.
The river Sorek, which ran through this valley, ſaith Jerom, was by E- Hieron. in loc.
leutheropolis northward, where a little village remained to his time called Ca- Hebr.
pharſorek, and Adrichomius placeth it in Dan, but Joſephus in Paleſtina: which Joſephus.
is moſt probable, and that Dalilah was a Philiſtim woman, becauſe the Lords of the Philiſtims dealt with her to betray Samſon, as followeth, and his wife and the harlot, to whom hee went in before, were Philiſtims. Sorek ſignifyeth a H. Bunting Pa- myrtle, which beareth berryes, of which pleaſant wine is made: the river Sorek tria. travailes.
had the beginning in the tribe of Judah, and ran through the Philiſtims Countrey, the valley about being a moſt pleaſant place, full of vines and myrtles. This woman is held by ſome to have beene Samſons wife, as by Chryſoſt Hom.
Chryſoſtom, Ephrem, and Proſper, but Joſephus, Ambroſius, Suidas, Toſtatus, Fe- 15. in Math.
rus, &c. ſay, that hee lived alſo in fornication with her: for of his taking Ephrem. contr.
her to wife there is no mention made, as of the Timnites daughter before. impias mulieres
And Ferus noteth that having once fallen, and caſt the feare of God away, Proſper lib. de hee made now no conſcience of committing the ſame foule ſinne againe and promiſ. Cap. 22. Joſeph.. Ambroſ.
againe, till that hee was brought to miſery: Wherefore let us take heed of Epiſt. 70.
falling, and if wee fall, riſe ſpeedily up againe, leſt ſinne follow ſinne, and Ferus.
unavoidable judgment after all. The five Princes of the Philiſtims perceiving Note.
the love of Samſon to Dalilah, ſeeke to her to betray him, promiſing unto her V. 5, 6, 7, 8, great ſummes of money, if ſhee could learne out, wherein his great ſtrength 9, 10.
lay, that he might be deprived of it and come into their hands; wherefore ſhee V. 11, 12, inticed him, and being thrice deluded at the laſt hee truely certified her, that 13.
if his haire were cut, hee ſhould become weake, another man, &c. Dalilah V. 14, 15, is wonne by money, and ſhee though a weake woman, overcometh Samſon, 16, 17. and delivereth him bound into his enemies hands. Which is ſet forth, that every man may take heed of the whoriſh woman, ſeeing what miſery Samſon was brought by ſuch an one. Her houſe, ſaith Solomon, is the way of Note.
death, to ſuch an houſe Samſon going came to bee bound, blinded, and to Prov. 2. ſuffer a world of miſery. But why did the Philiſtims imagine the ſtrength of Samſon to lye in ſomething, of which hee might bee deprived, ſeeing they Queſt.
that are moſt mighty men are made ſo by nature? Anſw. It is not improbable, but

but that hee had ſometime ſpoken ſomething in generall, whereby they gathered it, although hee alwayes kept ſecret, what that thing was, and now being importuned by his Dalilah, hee would not a long time tell her, but firſt;
V. 7. If they take 7. greene withs, that were never dryed, and binde mee, &c. the Vulgar Latin, ſi 7. nerviceis funibus ligatus fuero, the Sept. likewiſe have νεύροις nerves of beaſts, which being twiſted together will make a moſt ſtrong binder. The word יתר here uſed ſignifyeth either a nerve, cord, rope, or rod, which being wound greene maketh a with. It may be indifferently taken therefore for a nerve or with, and herein Samſon might ſeeme to ſpeake probably: for what ſtrength of man is able to breake 7. of theſe together. Hee had indeed broken cords, wherewith he was bound before Ch. 15. 13. but this might ſeeme to bee a binding much ſtronger: wherefore ſhee beleeved him and bound him therewith, but when the men laid in wait were ready to take him being thus bound, he eaſily brake them, and ſo they durſt not approach.

V. 11. 2 If hee were bound with new ropes, but hee brake theſe alſo as threads.
Now although ſhee cryed out both theſe times, The Philiſtims are upon thee Samſon, yet they lay hid ſtill, and appeared not, till that ſome triall was made, and ſo hee remained ſecure, not knowing, that there were men hidden in the chamber to take him. For otherwiſe hee would without doubt both have ſlaine them, and ſeeing the treachery of Dalilah have taken heed of her.

V. 13. 3. If thou weaveſt the 7 lockes of my head with a web, and ſhee faſtened it with a pinne, &c. The ſpeach of Samſon being not full, but the faſtening with a pinne left to be underſtood, is thus ſupplyed by the Sept. If thou weaveſt the 7 lockes of my head with a web, and faſteneth it with a pinne to the wall, The Vulgar Junius. Latin, et clavum his circumligatum terræ fixeris; Junius thinketh, that having weaved his 7 lockes, into which his haire was diſtinguiſhed, ſhee bound on a pinne and faſtened it to a pillar. It was doubtleſſe ſome long pinne of iron, ſharpe at the end like a naile, that ſhee drave into ſome ſtud of the houſe ſo faſt, that it might ſeeme impoſſible for him to remove from that place, till the Philiſtims lying in wait had taken him, he lying bound thus by the haire of the V. 14. head, and this is intimated, v. 14, hee awaked out of his ſleepe and went away with the pinne of the beame and the web.

V. 15, 16. Laſtly Dalilah ſeeing, that none of theſe wayes would take effect, ſhe urgeth Samſon more, that being overcome at the laſt, hee telleth her all his heart, and
V. 17, 18, 19. the haire of his head was ſhaved contrary to the law of Nazaritiſme, and the Lord departed from him, and his great ſtrength failed, and hee was taken by the Philiſtims. It is not to bee thought, becauſe when his haire was cut off, he became weake, as another man, that his great ſtrength lay in his haire, for then other Nazarites ſhould have had ſuch invincible ſtrength alſo, but it was a gift extraordinarily given him of God that hee might deliver Iſrael, Lyra. Ferus. and as long as hee continued in his calling of a Nazarite not ſuffering a razour to come upon his head, this gift continued, but ſo ſoone as hee was ſhaven hee loſt it. And it came to paſſe by a juſt judgement of God, that hee was ſo beſotted through the love of an whore, as to reveale his great ſecret, that hee might bee puniſhed for his licenciouſneſſe this way, both now, and before in Gaza. If any man ſhall ſay, if the tranſgreſſing againſt the law of Na-zaritiſme was the cauſe of Gods depriving him of this great gift, it ſhould ſeeme, that hee was worthy to bee deprived of it long before, becauſe a Nazarite might not touch a dead body, or come at it, but hee was amongſt heapes of the dead Philiſtims, when he had ſlaine them, and from 30 men being ſlaine hee tooke garments. But Lyra anſwereth well, Samſon although a Nazarite, was not in this tyed to the law of ordinary Nazarites, becauſe his calling was to kill and to deſtroy the Philiſtims, v. 19. when his haire was going off, ſhee is ſaid to afflict him, becauſe his ſtrength went then from him, or when his haire was all cut off ſhee afflicted him by waking him out of his ſleepe, whereupon hee found his owne weakneſſe and came immediately into Qu. miſery. But it may further be demanded here, how the Philiſtims knew, that his ſtrength was now gone from: for although it was moſt probable, that hee had revealed his whole heart truly to Dalilah, yet becauſe he had ſo often deceived her, they could not certainly ground upon it, unleſſe they ſaw ſome ſigne of weakneſſe now in him? To this Lyra and others anſwer rightly, that although there be no mention made of her binding him at this time, yet it is to be held, that ſhee bound him as at other times that ſhee might hereby make tryall, and now he being awakened, and not able to breake the bands, it appeared that his ſtrength was gone.

The Philiſtims having taken Samſon put out his eyes, and made him to grinde V. 21.
in a mill at Gaza, binding him with fetters of braſſe, and putting him in priſon; a juſt puniſhment for being drawne by his eyes after an harlots beauty, therefore his eyes are now cruelly put out; hee voluntarily ſuffered himſelfe Ferm.
to be bound by her, a ſtranger, therefore hee cometh into the hands of ſtrangers, and was bound by them; hee could not uſe his liberty and freedome in Gods ſervice well, therefore hee is now impriſoned and made to worke like a ſlave: thus God puniſheth ſinne in the kinde. They ſlew him not, but put Note.
his eyes out, that hee might indure miſery the longer, and bee no more able to hurt them; they bound him with fetters of braſſe, becauſe, they ſaw, that other bands could not hold him, and they made him grinde in priſon after the manner of captaines in thoſe dayes, to adde unto his affliction, and that hee might not eate bread gratis. The Hebrews, as Comeſtor hath it, ſay, that Eccleſ. Hiſtor.
they alſo made him lye with women of able bodies, that hee might of them beget luſty children, and Lyra, that they interpret his grinding in the mill thus, but this, is obſcene and abſurd. Wee may ſee in this example the fickleneſſe Note.
of worldly glory, in that ere while none upon earth was ſo glorious as Samſon, but now none more miſerable. But this is the reward of ſinne, and although all fornicators, and wicked perſons are not ſerved thus, yet ſpiritually they ſuffer as Samſon did. 1. By comming thus into the hands of their ſpirituall enemies. Ferm.
2. By having the eyes of their mindes blinded. 3. By being bound 2. Cor. 4.4. with an evill cuſtome of ſinning, that cannot be broken. 4. By being caſt into the priſon of obſtinacy. 5. By making them to labour without end in his workes, which is the grinding in his mill.

Howbeit the haire of his head began to grow againe, after that hee was ſhaven. V. 22.
When his haire was cut off, his ſtrength went away, becauſe that ſpeciall thing concerning Nazaritiſme decreed concerning him before hee was borne, was tranſgreſſed: but now in his affliction hee was carefull to live like a Nazarite againe and to nouriſh his haire, till it came to that length, that it was of, before hee was ſhaven, wherefore God now ſupplyed him of his mercy with the like ſtrength againe, that his enemies might not alwayes triumph in his miſery, but be deſtroyed, as they were well worthy for their ſinnes, and Iſrael might hereby have deliverance from them, for which Samſon was appointed. By this time it is likely, that hee was througly humbled for his ſinnes paſt and ſought unto God for mercy, and therefore although for a time hee afflicted him, hee ſhewed mercy at length againe unto him, and gave him might to be revenged upon the Philiſtims, who were as the rod of God unto him for a time. So God leaveth none of his finally: but when he Note.
hath corrrected them, that they might not periſh for ever, he turneth againe unto them in much compaſſion, but hee utterly deſtroyeth the wicked, whom for a time hee hath uſed as his chaſtiſing inſtruments; and it is not injuſt in him after this to deſtroy them, as a father, when hee hath done correcting his childe with a rod, may well take it and caſt it into the fire. For although God uſeth the wicked to chaſtiſe the vices of his, yet they ſinne ſo greatly in chaſtiſing them, as that they are well worthy when the faithfull having ſinned have taſted of the cup of his wrath, to drinke the dreggs thereof even to the bottome. Thus theſe wicked Philiſtims ſinned, when they were made inſtruments to puniſh Samſon. 1. For that they aſcribed their pre- V. 23. 24.
vailing over him to their idoll Dagon, 2. In that they aggravated his miſe- V. 25.
ry by propounding him as their common laughing ſtocke, they derided the miſerable. The Lords of the Philiſtims gathered together to offer a great ſacrifice

ſacrifice to Dagon their god, and they ſaid, Our God hath delivered Samſon our enemy into our hands. And when the people ſaw him, they praiſed Dagon likewiſe. Thus becauſe things fell out proſperouſly for a while unto them, they thought, that they did well in ſerving Dagon, an idoll, whereas it was through Gods judgement againſt Samſon for his ſinnes, that hee came Note. into their power. So the wicked commonly flatter themſelves becauſe of their proſperity, and have no conſcience of their evill doings: but proſperity doth not alwayes argue well doing, but the wicked are ſometime lifted up hereby, that they may take the greater fall. Dagon is thought to come of דג a fiſh, it was an idoll having an humane ſhape upward, and the ſhape of a fiſh downward, according to the forme of ſome monſters in the Sea. Diodorus Note. Siculus writing of this idoll by the name of Derceta ſaith: In Aſcalon, in Syria, there is a famous Temple of a goddeſſe called Derceta, and therein an image having the face of a woman, but the reſt of the body all like a fiſh. For this Derceta being once taken with the love of a proper young man, by whom ſhee had a daughter, through ſorrow and ſhame caſt herſelfe into a lake and was turned into a fiſh, for which cauſe the Syrians abſtaine from fiſh, and worſhip fiſhes as gods; Of Dagon ſee more 1 Sam. 6. 4. Hee had an head and hands, but no feet, that wee read of, as a fiſh hath none, which confirmeth this that upward hee had the ſhape of a man or woman, downward of a fiſh. By ſuch vanities of old were the heathen led. And when their hearts were merry, they called for Samſon, that hee might make Lyra. them ſport which hee did: that is, ſaith Lyra, becauſe hee was blinde, by going ſometime againſt a pillar and ſometime againſt the wall, and ſometime Arias Montan. ſtumbling and falling. Arias Montanus ſaith, that it was by dancing, but it is not probable, that Samſon would doe any thing to move them to laughter, but rather the ſport, that was made by him was paſſive, they jeſting and laughing at him, and happily one while one ſtriking him on the eare, and then another, and asking him, who did it, or other wayes moſt groſſely abuſing Joſephus. him, ſo that hee being of an ingenuous and valiant minde had rather indure death. And thus the Sept. have it, they mocked him; Joſephus, they Ambroſ. Epiſt. 70. conviciated him in their cuppes, ſo likewiſe Ambroſ. gravibus in eum inſultabant convitiis.

V.26. And Samſon ſaid to the lad, that led him, Suffer mee to feele the pillars whereupon the houſe ſtandeth, &c. Hitherto of Samſons great ſinnes and puniſhment ſuffered therefore, now followeth his being received to grace againe, and the judgement through his ſtrength comming upon his enemies.
Ferus. For that God received him to grace appeareth, becauſe he heard his prayer and ſtrengthened him to pull downe the houſe upon the Philiſtims heads. Although hee had ſinned foully, yet he did patiently beare his grievous puniſhment without murmuring, and prayed to God as his God, wherein his repentance Note. and faith appeared. And from hence wee ought all when we have ſinned, to be ſtirred up to repent and by faithfull prayer to ſeeke againe unto God for mercy, ſeeing he is eaſily entreated by thoſe that turne unto him. If Object. it be objected, that Samſon prayed, that he might be revenged, whereas the Lord ſaith, Revenge not your ſelves, for vengeance is mine: It is anſwered, hee indeed that hath no calling to take revenge, ſinneth, if hee ſeeketh it, but Samſon had a calling to it, becauſe hee was ſet up to deliver Iſrael, and therefore Object. to take revenge upon the Philiſtims their enemies. If it bee further objected hee ſlew himſelfe together with the Philiſtims, which for any man to doe is moſt impious: It is anſwered, hee did not this out of deſpaire, or without a calling, but to deliver Iſrael, and to glorifie God by his death, as his calling required: for hee could not now otherwiſe deliver the people of God, but by putting his owne life in certaine hazzard, even as they, that runne into apparent danger of death in fighting againſt the Turkes for the good of many miſerable Chriſtians being hereunto appointed by their ſuperiors: wherefore Samſon in this deſerved no blame, but rather high praiſe and commendation; Lyra. ſo Ferus. It was not, ſaith Lyra, out of malice for the wrongs done unto unto him, but out of zeale, that hee thus ſought the Philiſtims deſtruction, becauſe they blaſphemed the true God and magnifyed their idol Dagon. And becauſe hee could not otherwiſe take vengeance on them, hee did it with the loſſe of his owne life together, being moved doubtleſſe by an inſtinct from God, becauſe hee gave him ſuch miraculous ſtrength to doe it. So that here is nothing to patronize thoſe that deſperately make away themſelves, or run raſhly into deadly dangers. In asking the lad that led him, to bring him to the two pillars, which ſupported the houſe, hee might happily be thought to deſire this, ſaith Lyra, to reſt himſelfe againſt them, as being over-wearyed:

but I thinke rather hee was ſuffered to lay hold upon them, that the Philiſtims might laugh at his vanity, holding it impoſſible for him to pull them downe, ſuppoſing him ſtill to be as weake, as at their firſt taking of him. But thus God ſuffered them to be infatuated, againſt that, which they had notice of to their deſtruction. For otherwiſe having learnt once that his ſtrength lay in his Nazaritiſh haire, a man would wonder, that they ſhaved him not againe and againe to make ſure worke againſt the miſchiefe, that otherwiſe they might feare hee would doe them. The houſe, where this great ſlaughter was made, is held generally to bee the Temple of Dagon, where they ſacrificed and feaſted. The V. 27.
number ſlaine is ſaid to be 3000 of men and women, that ſtood upon the roofe, beſides all the Lords of the Philiſtims, and ſo many within, as the houſe could containe, and thus hee is ſaid to have ſlaine more at his death, then in his V. 30.
life, and by this meanes the children of Iſrael had a breathing time given them from the Philiſtims oppreſſions.

Then his brethren came downe and tooke him, and brought him up and buryed him V. 31.
betweene Zorah and Eſhtaol, &c. ſo the body of this ſervant of God was not ſuffered to lye amongſt the Philiſtims, but was honorably buryed amongſt his people, about which ſuch care was commonly taken for the hope of the reſurrection, when the bodies of all the faithfull ſhall be made glorious, and therefore it is fit in the meane ſeaſon, that they ſhould be laid up with honour.
As Samſon dying ſlew more enemies, then living, ſo ſaith Ferus, doe all the faithfull, Ferus.
ſome vices they mortify, whilſt they live, but then they kill all, that have had dominion in them.

Myſtically by Samſon Chriſt was figured out, 1. In his name taken from The Myſtery.
the Sun, as hath beene ſhewed, for Chriſt is the Sun of righteouſneſſe. 2. In Mat. 4.
that hee came of a barren woman to deliver Iſrael being full of miſery, ſo Chriſt came of a Virgin, from whom no fruit could bee expected to ſave his people. 3. The Angel foretelleth his birth and condition, he ſhall be a Nazarite, and begin to deliver Iſrael, and giveth a ſigne by aſcending in the flame which burnt the ſacrifice: ſo the Angel Gabriel foretold the birth of Chriſt, and his condition, that hee ſhould bee holy and the Sonne of God, and gave a ſigne in Elizabeth, who beyond all expectation had now conceived. 4. Samſon grew up and the Spirit came upon him, ſo Chriſt grew in ſtature and favour with God and men, and had the Spirit without meaſure. 5. Samſon tooke a wife of the Philiſtims, but his Parents were againſt it, ſo Chriſt tooke a ſpouſe of the Gentiles, the Jews being left, but this was taken indignly by his ancient people the Jews, but ſome of them, that is, the Apoſtles at length conſented, and furthered the marriage by their preaching unto them. 6. Samſon going about the taking of a wife is incountred by a Lion, but he ſlayeth him without a weapon: ſo Chriſt was tempted by the Devill, but hee overcame him and confounded his forces. And he likewiſe cometh againſt the faithfull, but is by faith ſubdued, and cannot hurt them: for thou ſhalt tread upon the Lion, Pet. 5. 8 or the Aſpe, and the Baſiliske, Pſal. 91. Eſa. 11. 7. Samſon tooke hony out of the Lions carcaſs: ſo Chriſt cauſeth honey to come from them, that before were Lions, that is, ſweet and heavenly doctrine, as from Paul, and of Lions hee maketh Bees, when the hard hearted are made mercifull, the cruel gentle, the proud humble, &c. 8. Samſon propoundeth a riddle to be expounded to his companions promiſing a reward, but they could not expound it, but by the helpe of his heifer: So Chriſt, ſaith Hugo, propounded the Scriptures to the Hugo Cardin.

Numb. 6.19.

Lyra.

Apoſtles, but they could not expound them, that is, the Propheſies touching him, till they beleeved his incarnation, and this was ploughing with his heifer, for the man Chriſt, by whoſe blood wee are cleanſed from ſinne; was prefigured by a red heifer; or they could not expound them without light comming from him. Or as Ferus, the compainions of Samſon ſet forth the Jews, amongſt whom Chriſt was preaching, and whom hee uſed familiarly, but they being treacherous againſt him, hee went away angry, when hee departed up to heaven, as Samſon went angry away from the Philiſtims. 9. Samſon returneth againe in wheat harveſt to viſit his wife with a kid, but is rejected, and with Foxes tyed together and fire-brands fireth their corne, ſo Chriſt came in the time of Pentecoſt by his Spirit, that by his Apoſtles indued herewith hee might viſit the Church of the the Jews, but being rejected hee bringeth the Romans with fire and ſword againſt them, thus Ferus: but Lyra will have his going among the Gentiles by the Apoſtle to preach, and ſo his deſire to bee joyned to a Church amongſt them to bee here prefigured, but the Roman Emperor, as their father withſtood it, but hee kindled in their harveſt the fire of love, &c. but the firſt is better. 10. The Philiſtims came up to binde Samſon, and the men of Iudah delivered him bound into their hands, but he brake the bands, and ſlew them with the jawbone of an Aſſe, and being athirſt had water miraculouſly out of that jawbone: ſo Chriſt was bound by the conſent of Jews and Gentiles, with the bands of death, hee himſelfe permitting it, but hee brake theſe bands and came forth, and onely by the tongues of his Miniſters, who were baſe and contemptible, as the jawbone of an Aſſe, he ſubdued thouſands, but then hee caſt them away, as it were, as Samſon did the jawbone, when he ſuffered them to come into the hands of perſecutors, and when the faithfull hereupon were much perplexed, he gave them comfort by working miracles at their ſepulchres. 11. Samſon came downe to Gaza and loved a woman there, and going in unto her was watched, but hee aroſe at midnight and carryed away the gates of the City: So Chriſt, through the love of mankinde having deſcended into the grave had a watch ſet about his ſepulcher, but hee aroſe and deſtroyed the gates of hell, and went up to the Mountaine of God, that is, heaven. 12. Samſon loved Dalilah and by her was betrayed, being firſt 3 times bound, then his eyes were put out &c. But his haire growing his ſtrength returned, and the Philiſtims, though for a time rejoycing were by his might deſtroyed: So Chriſt loved the Church of the Jews, but was betrayed amongſt them, and put to death, but even then his power departed not from him, but was onely hidden for a time, breaking out againe afterwards, when the Apoſtles, that before fled, returned and went about courageouſly preaching, and the houſe wherein his enemies were, was pulled downe upon them, when their City and Temple were deſtroyed, onely herein he was unlike unto Samſon in that hee dyed not together, but liveth for ever. Thus Ferus, who alſo addeth, that hee was bound 3 times, when hee tooke upon him the ſinnes of thoſe before the law, under the law, and under the Goſpell. But the putting out of Samſons eyes doth better ſet forth the blindfolding of Chriſt, and then their ignominious uſage of him, as the Philiſtims uſed Samſon, the ſhaving of his haire, the departing of the divine helpe for a time from him, as hee cryed out, my God my God why haſt thou forſaken mee? Samſons voluntary offering of himſelfe to death after his binding and carrying it away, Chriſts voluntary dying for our ſins, when he ſlew more then in all his life time, becauſe hee now deſtroyed him, that had power of death, that is, the Devill, Heb. 2. 15, 16.

CHAP. XVII.

AFter Samſon there were no more Judges in Iſrael untill Eli and Samuel, whoſe Hiſtory ſhould therefore follow in the next place, which is ſet forth, 1 Sam. But becauſe there were three remarkable things, that happened in the dayes of the Judges, 1. Micahs idolatry. 2. The villany of the men of Benjamin. 3. The marriage of Ruth a Moabiteſſe, to Boaz, and her converſion to the faith, therefore it ſeemeth good to the Spirit of God, firſt to ſet forth the hiſtories of theſe things. What time this thing and the reſt were done, is uncertaine, but here it is ſaid, in thoſe dayes, in the Vulgar Latin, but Hebr. without any noting of the time, There was a man of Mount Ephraim, whoſe name was Micah, onely v. 6. the time is deſcribed thus, in thoſe dayes there was no King in Iſrael, but every man did that, which was right in his owne eyes. Joſephus placeth the hiſtory of the Levite, whoſe wife was abuſed, and of the Tribe of Benjamin hereupon almoſt all deſtroyed, which followeth Ch. 19. next unto the death of Joſhua and Judahs prevailing againſt Adonibezek, Judg. 1. for after this, hee ſaith, the people of Iſrael growing to be full of abuſes, that villany was committed and ſo much bloud was ſhed. Then the Canaanites prevailing againſt the Tribe of Dan pent them up in the Mountaines, ſo that they had not roome for their neceſſary occaſions, wherefore they ſent out 5 men to ſearch into the Mediterranean Land, and going a dayes journey towards Sidon they found a fruitfull place, and having certified it, the Danites went with an Army and ſubdued it, and built a City there and called it Dan, according to the hiſtory here following, Ch. 18. 29. And if that expedition of the Danites was neare unto Joſhua's time, then this of Micah, an appurtenance of it muſt needs be about the ſame time alſo. Joſh. 19. 47. the Danites having too ſtrait bounds and going out and taking Leſhem, and calling it Dan, is ſpoken of, as if it had beene in Joſhua's dayes, but, as there was ſhewed, it was ſet downe by anticipation: Yet it is not probable, that they tarryed till after Samſons time, before they thus ſought to inlarge themſelves, but did it ſoone after the death of Joſhua. And this is one argument uſed by Junius to prove that time, Judg. 2.11. to be the time of doing theſe things; a ſecond is, becauſe Jonathan is ſaid now to have bin Prieſt unto the Danites, Ch. 18.30. who was grand-childe unto Moſes by Manaſſeh, as he ſaith. 3. Becauſe the hiſtory following this Ch. 19.20. muſt needs be of things done about that time, ſeeing Phinees was yet High-Prieſt, as is noted, Ch. 20.28. and Ieruſalem was wholly in the Iebuſites hands, as appeareth, Ch. 19.11, 12. whereas it was ſubdued part by Judah ſoone after Joſhua his death, Judg. 1.8. and part by Benjamin, v. 21. Lyra therefore and Comeſtor are both for this time, & Ferus alſo, but Lyra ſaith, that ſome of the Hebrews ſtand for the time, that Othniel was Judge, but Joſephus ſheweth plainly, both that Cuſhanriſhathaim oppreſſed Iſrael after this, and alſo that the Kenezite, who was Othniel, fought againſt him after this. I doubt not then, but the time of doing theſe things was, as Joſephus hath it, but they are placed here, that the hiſtory of the Judges geſts might not be interrupted, and that ſuch memorable things might not be altogether omitted, ſeeing that hereby it appeareth, that not without cauſe God had beene formerly ſo ſevere againſt his people in giving them into their cruell enemies hands, they are here finally added. For that deſcription of the time by the Anarchy, that now was, there was no King in Iſrael in thoſe dayes, it ſeemeth alſo, as Junius noteth, to imply all this to have beene done betweene Joſhua's time and Othniells. For although a Judge differed much from a King, yet men might not doe whatſoever they thought good even in the Judges time, but he had ſome coactive power to reſtraine them from evill, by puniſhing the evill doers, according to the Law, wherefore Moſes that was no King, yet is ſaid to have beene a King in Jeſhurun, Deut. 33.3. Why Junius calleth Jonathan the grandchilde of Moſes by Manaſſeh, when as hee is ſaid to be the ſon of Gerſhom, the ſon of Manaſſeh, I know not, but in the Vulgar Latin, Moſes is put for Manaſſeh, Ch. 18. 30. the ſon of Gerſhom, the ſon of Moſes, becauſe Gerſhom is known to come of Moſes, and not of Manaſſeh, now the name Manaſſeh is yet put in the Hebr. as Bonfrerius noteth out of the Rabbins for reverence to Moſes, that he might not ſeeme to have ſo wicked a grandchilde, that ſo ſoone became a Prieſt unto idols, but hee is written the ſon of Manaſſeh, as noting him rather worthy to bee called the ſonne of Manaſſeh, ſo infamous afterwards for idolatry, and therefore to intimate this, Manaſſeh is written in Hebrew here with נ elevated above the other letters and this marke ∘ upon the top, and a

V.1.

Joſephus. Antiq. lib. 5. c. 2.

Junius.

1 Lyra. Ecleſ. Hiſtor.

Bonfrerius

note in the margin, and if נ as is hereby ſhewed it ought to bee, be left out, there will onely theſe letters remaine משה Moſes. Having thus found out the time, the hiſtories follow, and firſt of M*icah.*

There was a man of Mount Ephraim, whoſe name was Micah, and hee ſaid unto his mother, the 1100 ſhekels of Silver, that were taken from thee, about which thou curſedſt &c. behold the Silver is with mee, &c. It ſeemeth, that Micah had ſtoln Ferus. this money from his mother, but hearing her curſe the theife, and ſay, that ſhee had devoted it unto God, and to his ſervice, his conſcience was troubled, and hee ſoone confeſſed, that hee had taken it, and ſo reſtored it againe, willing her to doe therewith, as ſhee had vowed, and haply telling her, that hee V. 2. meant to have imployed it to the ſame purpoſe; whereupon ſhee cals him the Lyra. bleſſed of the Lord; thus Ferus, and Lyra almoſt to the ſame effect, the Vulgar Latin for theſe words, which were taken from thee, hath, which thou hadſt ſeparated, whereupon the former expoſition goeth, but by the Hebr. Text it doth not appeare, that his mother made this known, before that he had confeſſed the theft. Some, ſaith Lyra, becauſe the ſumme is 1100 ſhekels, and Dalilah had received of each Lord of the Philiſtims for betraying Samſon 1100 ſhekels, hold that Dalilah was Mica's mother, but this is a conjecture altogether without ground, ſeeing this was done long before Samſons time. For that reading which thou hadſt ſeparated, Hebr. it is אשר לקח לך which were taken to thee, Junius, quod captum eſt tibi, and one Sept. tranſlation, which thou tookeſt to thy ſelfe: but another Sept. Pagninus, Tygurini inteepretes, Cajetan, &c. have it, which were taken from thee, but לך ſignifyeth not from thee, but to thee, and therefore it ſeemeth to imply ſome ſpeciall uſe, for which ſhee had laid this money aſide, which Jerom ſuppoſing for that, which followeth, to bee for the ſervice of God, according to her blinde devotion, rendred it, which thou hadſt ſeaprated, and if it be thus taken, the ſtealing of this mony from her is not mentioned, but left to be underſtood. Or it might be money taken for her not long before by Micah or ſome ſervant of hers, which ſhee now miſſing raged and curſed, as followeth, about which thou curſedſt, Lyra ſaith, our expoſitors commonly take it for her vowing this money unto God with an oath, but the Hebr. word, hee confeſſeth, properly ſignifyeth curſing. Now Micah hearing his mother to rage thus confeſſeth unto her, that hee had the money, Ferus. as Ferus noteth, having ſtolne it, but now hearing, that it was devoted to God, hee was terrifyed, and reſtored it: whereupon hee obſerveth, how Note. blinde devotion worketh more in the ſuperſtitious, then the feare of breaking Gods command: for he was not troubled at his theft, but hearing that this money was devoted to make an Idol and Teraphim, he feared. But how came it to paſſe, that hee or his mother were ſo taken with theſe things? Hee anſwereth, they thought, that if it were acceptable to God to worſhip at the Tabernacle, which was in Shiloh, to which they could goe but once a yeare, it would bee much more acceptable to ſet up ſome image unto him, and to get a Prieſt, and to have ſacrifices offered, and to, worſhip him before this dayly at home. But in the meane ſeaſon they looked not into the word of God, appointing one place onely to doe ſacrifice in, and ſtraightly forbidding ima- Note. ges, and they were led on onely by a good intention. Whereby wee may ſee, that good intentions juſtifie not our actions, but then is our ſervice acceptable to God, when it is regulated by his word. The neglect hereof is the fountaine of all ſuperſtition in the Church at this day. As a ſilly woman here firſt in blinde devotion makes an Idoll, and ſetteth up idolatrous worſhip in private, but hereby an whole tribe, the tribe of Dan was ſoone infected: ſo ſome melancholike perſon firſt deviſeth a way by himſelfe to ſerve God in a ſingular manner, and ſoone after many follow him herein, and then another doth the like, and this is ſeconded with the ſuffrage of a company of unlearned Prieſts, and ſo the whole Church is filled with ſuperſtition. But in all this nothing is heard ſavouring of idolatry, but the name of the Lord, and they that erre thus thinke that they do highly pleaſe God, and are next unto him in ſanctity, thus Ferus being himſelf a Fryer, but ſhewing plainly a miſlike, as there was cauſe, of the many ſuperſtitions in men of ſuch orders of the Church of Rome, whereof he was a member, and ſhewing the true originall of all this, viz. the not going by the Word, but by mens own phantaſies, when as the written Word onely ſhould be our rule in all our devotions. And the like was obſerved before touching Gedeon with his Ephod, Iudges 8.27.

V.3. Micah having reſtored the money to his mother, ſhe ſaid, I had wholly dedicated it to the Lord from my hand for my ſon to make a graven Image and a molten Image, the Vulgar Latin for more expreſſion, I had wholly dedicated it to the Lord, that my ſon might receive it from my hand, &c. Iunius, dimiſſura de manu mea filio meo ad faciendum &c. for a graven Image and a molten image, Toſtatus hath it a graven Image or a molten, holding that one Image onely was made, which hee proveth v. 4. Becauſe although it bee rendred, they were in the houſe of Micah, yet Hebr. it is in the ſingular number, it was in the houſe of Micah, and Ch. 18.31. one Image onely is ſpoken of, unto which may be added, that hereby her intent was to repreſent the Lord, who is but one. But it is moſt plaine Ch. 18. 14. 17, 18. that there was made both a molten Image and a graven. As for the mention made onely of the graven Image, Ch. 18. 31. haply that onely is ſpoken of, and the other underſtood, and likewiſe it is ſaid, v. 4. It was in the houſe of Micah, that is, the graven Image: the other being underſtood, or it was, that is, this whole preparation of the graven Image, molten Image, Ephod, and Teraphim, was in his houſe, for which hee is ſaid to have had an houſe of gods. As for that one Lord repreſented hereby, it is no marvaile, ſeeing they were ſo groſſe as to ſet him forth by Images, that they made not one, but many; imagining, as the heathen, one to be the principall and the other inferior to him.

Junius.
Toſtatus.

V. 4. And his mother tooke 200 ſhekels of ſilver, and gave them to the Founder, &c. Hebr. it is onely 200 of Silver, and before a 1100. of Silver, but under this phraſe ſhekels are commonly underſtood, a common ſhekel being of our money 1.*s.*3.d. the Kings ſhekel 22.d. the ſhekel of the Sanctuary 2.*s.*6.d. of this money a molten Image was made, that is, by being melted and caſt into a mould, and a graven Image, that is, one carved and graven, the reſt of the money it is moſt likely was imployed about veſtiments, and other appurtenances, as it followeth, v. 5. Micah made an Ephod and Teraphim, the Vulgar Latin, an Ephod, that is, Prieſts garments and a Teraphim, that is, idols. An Ephod was a garment of the High-Prieſt made with great coſt, of which ſee Judg. 8. 27. and hereby, ſaith Lyra, was meant both it, and all other Prieſtly garments: For as they would have a Prieſt to offer to theſe new made gods for them, after the manner that was uſed at the Tabernacle, ſo garments like unto thoſe were prepared accordingly. And Teraphim idols are called Gen. 31. but Lyra ſaith, hee knoweth not whether they bee gods, or idols, which are ſet forth by Teraphim, becauſe the Hebrews underſtand the head of one firſt-borne dedicated to the Devill, and ſpiced well, that it may laſt long without corruption; upon the tongue a plate of gold being placed with the name of the Devill written thereon to give anſwers. And indeede becauſe a Teraphim is mentioned, as ſomething diverſe from the graven and molten Image; it is plaine, that common idols cannot bee meant hereby, but ſomething of another kinde. Hugo Cardin. becauſe the word Teraphim is uſed in a good ſenſe, Hoſ. 3. 4. the children of Iſrael ſhall bee without a King, and a Prieſt, a Sacrifice, an Ephod and a Teraphim many dayes, underſtandeth the Cherubims and Seraphims hereby, which were there pictured, as Cherubims at the Tabernacle were placed above the Mercy ſeat. But it ſeemeth rather to ſet forth the breaſt-plate that was in the Ephod, having the Urim and Thummim in it, whereby the Prieſt gave anſwer to thoſe that came to inquire of God, becauſe it is named together with a ſacrifice and Ephod, and Prieſt, to be without which was to bee in a miſerable eſtate: ſo Judg. 18. 5. the Levite in the houſe of Micah was deſired to aske counſell of God for the Danites, implying this Teraphim to bee, as it were, an oracle to conſult with. And Idols wherein the Devill gave anſwers to idolaters, are therefore called by this name, Ezek. 21. 21. Zechar. 10. 2. 2 King. 23, 24.

V.5.
Lyra.
Hugo Cardin.

and Micah conſecrated one of his ſonnes, who became his Prieſt, Hebr. Hee filled the hands of one of his ſonnes, it is a phraſe to ſet forth conſecrating of a Prieſt, becauſe Levit. 8. 26,27. Aaron and his ſonnes were conſecrated by filling their hands with the fat of the ram of conſecration, the ſhoulder and oyled cakes, Toſtatus. &c. Toſtatus thinketh, that this ſonne was his firſt-borne, becauſe the firſt-borne ſerved in this office, before that the Tribe of Levi was taken in their ſtead;
but it was a preſumptuous part in Micah to take upon him to conſecrate a Prieſt and no Levite, ſhewing, how greatly out of order all things then were.

V.6. v. 6. In thoſe dayes there was no King in Iſrael, &c. Here is ſet forth the fountaine of all theſe wicked doings, and of thoſe that follow, there was no King, that is, no Soveraign power of King or Judge to reſtraine the over-flowing Note. of wickedneſſe: whence note, that an anarchy is the worſt eſtate that is, yea worſe then a tyranny, for now idolatry is committed, violence is offered, women are deflowred, & abuſed unto death, &c. for this was done after Joſhua's death and before the ſtirring up of a Judge, as I have ſhewed already in the beginning of the Chapter.

V.7. And there was a young man of Bethlehem Judah, of the family of Judah, &c.
Micah having made one of his ſonnes his Prieſt, now it is ſhewed, how he accidentally met with a Levite and entertained him for his Prieſt. Hee is ſaid to Lyra. bee of the family of Judah, ſaith Lyra, by his mother, but his father was a Levite: The Vulgar Latin hath it, of his family, that is, of Micahs kindred, ſay ſome, but this, ſaith Lyra, is falſe, and contrary to the Hebrew Text. Of Bethlehem Judah, this is ſo called, becauſe there was another Bethlehem, in the tribe of Zabulun, Joſh. 19. This poore Levite wandred to get a place, where hee could, becauſe all things being now out of order, the tithes for the Levites maintenance were not paid, ſo that they were forced to ſeeke ſome other way V.10, 11. to get their living. This Levite cometh to Micahs houſe, and hee agreeth with him for Victualls, 10 ſhekels a yeare and a ſuite of apparell to bee his Prieſt, or houſhold chaplain. Hebr. for a ſuit of apparell, it is, an order of apparell, the Sept.
ζεῦγος ἱματίων, the Vulgar Latin veſtem duplicem, the Chald. Paraph. par veſtium.
Nehem. 3. Thus it is noted alſo in Nehemiahs time, that the Levites were forced to wander, becauſe their parts were not given unto them. This Levite being poore for Victuals conſenteth to many wickedneſſes, 1. To be conſecrated a Preiſt, when hee was not of the ſonnes of Aaron. 2. To offer ſacrifice in an unlawfull place, Deut. 6.16. for it ought not to bee offered but onely at the Tabernacle. 3. To offer and to doe ſervice to Idols. Thus for food and raiment, and for the love of world-Note ly gaine the fouleſt ſinnes are committed even by thoſe of the holyeſt tribe, and the people are pleaſed and humoured in their wickedneſſes.

V.13. And Micah ſaid, Now I know the Lord will doe mee good, ſeeing I have a Levite to my Prieſt. See here, how through blindeneſſe and ignorance this man promiſeth himſelfe proſperity from God, when as all that he did was a provoking of God to judge him: for although hee had now a Levite to his Prieſt, yet, as hath beene ſhewed, ſinne was herein committed divers wayes. Hee thought ſurely, that hee did not well before in conſecrating to this office his owne ſonne, but of the other ſinnes concurring in his blinde devotion he had no ſenſe. Onely becauſe the Leviticall tribe was choſen of God, hee bleſſed Note. himſelfe, how groſſely ſoever hee erred. And thus the Zealous Roman Catholickes, becauſe they confeſſe and have abſolution from a Prieſt; or a pardon from the Pope, in whom there is ſucceſſion, thinke themſelves moſt happy, although they commit moſt groſſe idolatries, and many other abominations.

CHAP. XVIII.

HERE againe it is firſt repeated, that there was in thoſe dayes no King in Iſrael, to denote this to bee the originall of the wickedneſſe here ſpoken of, viz. the violence done by the Danites unto Micah, and the corrupting of that

V.1. that whole tribe with idolatry. Next the Danites ſeeke them ſome more inheritance, for all their inheritance had not yet falne unto them, this was ſoone after Joſhua his death, Ch. 1. 34. the Amorites held the chiefe part of their inheritance and ſo ſtraightened them, and of this they complained even in Ioſhua his life time, Ioſh. 19. 47. and there this expedition is briefly ſet downe by anticipation, but here more largely. V.2. The Danites ſend out five men to ſeeke for more roome to inhabit in, they paſſe by Micabs houſe, and lodge there, for hee as it ſeemeth, was a great man, and wealthy, and therefore they being Iſraelites, he entertaineth them, which ſhewed his hoſpitality. V.3,4,5. Being there they ſaw the Levite, and were by him informed of the Images and the Teraphim, wherefore they pray him to inquire of their way, which hee did, and promiſed them proſperity. It is ſaid, they knew the Levites voyce, and turned in thither, that is, ſaith Lyra, they knew by his voyce, that hee was of Bethlehem Iudah, because although all the Iſraelites ſpake one language, yet they of one place differed in their dialect, from thoſe of another, ſo Lyra, as our north countrey men differ from us in their ſpeach, and hereby may eaſily be known from the ſoutherne. And hee ſaith, that they turned in thither, that is, to the lodging aſſigned to the Levite. But by what meanes could he conſulting with a dumb Idoll foretell, what ſucceſſe they ſhould have in their way? To this Lyra, ſome hold, that hee ſpake thus to pleaſe them having no anſwer from the Idoll; but the Hebrews, that the Devill anſwered out of the Idoll, God permitting it for their greater deluſion, who were addicted to Idols, that they might be the further gone in errour, who loved not the truth, and ſo finally bee damned therefore. Ferus ſaith, that God might anſwer by this Prieſt, as hee uſed the mouth of Balaam, and Caiaphas to ſpeake the truth, and oft times of wicked Paſtors, to try theſe Danites. And it ſeemeth that they were hereby drawne away to Idolatry, becauſe it fell out truly according to his prediction, and by their meanes the whole tribe; for hereby they gathered that this ſervice before Images here pleaſed God, as well as that which according to his word was done before the Tabernacle. But this was their ignorance of the word which had given warning here-againſt, Deut. 13. And they were worthy to bee thus given over, becauſe they would inquire in an unlawfull place, and of an unlawfull perſon.

Lyra.

Ferus.

V.7. Then the five Men came to Laiſh, and ſaw the people how they dwelt careleſſe, &c. This Laiſh is alſo called Leſhem, Joſh. 19.47. and being taken, Dan, after the name of Dan, the father of the Danites. It was furtheſt north of all the Land of Canaan, ſince called Cæſarea Philippi, becauſe re-built by Philip the Tetrarch in the honour of Tiberius Cæſar; and becauſe it lay furtheſt northward, this ſpeech is ſometime uſed to ſet forth the north and ſouth bounds of the holy Land, that is, the whole longitude from Dan to Beerſheba; and here afterwards Jeroboam ſet up ome of his golden Calves. From Micab's houſe in Mount Ephraim to this Laiſh, ſaith Hen. Bunting, were 104 miles, from Zorah and Eſhtaol to Mount Ephraim 24 miles. And this people is ſaid to have dwelt ſecurely like the Zidonians, that is, a people having a very ſtrong City, and ſo fearing no enemies, and farre from Zidon, ſo that the Zidonians could not readily helpe them, and farre from all others that might reſcue them; and had no buſineſſe with any man, that is, they were in no league with any other people; for buſineſſe, Hebr. דבר a word or matter is put. Now beſides all theſe things that might encourage the Danites to this expedition, it is inſerted. And there was no Magiſtrate in the Land, which might put them to ſhame in any thing; Hebr. there was none deſtroying any thing in the Land, the poſſeſſor of that Kingdome; for this expoſition is neareſt unto theſe words, ואין מכלים דבר בארץ יורש עצר. And it was one reaſon rendred of their ſecure dwelling, whereby the Danites might the more confidently come againſt them; there was none of the deſtroyers of any thing in the Land, as in other places, that poſſeſſed or dwelt in that Kingdome. They had no enemies either domeſticall or foraine that annoyed them; and as no enemies, ſo no confederates to helpe them in caſe they ſhould bee ſet upon: for both the Zidonians and all other people dwelt faſt from them; which is the full meaning of this verſe, and expreſſeth a ſtate more ſecure.

H. Bunt. patriar travailes.

ſecure. The Vulg. Latine, Nullo eis penitus reſiſtente; the Sept. Not able to ſpeake a word in the Land, inheriting treaſure. Junius, Nec eſſe quenquam, qui de re ulla pudore afficeret in ea terra hæredem imperii: in ſtead of which two laſt words the Vulg. Latine tranſlation hath it, and of great riches, following the Septuagint. Why a Magiſtrate putting to ſhame or not, ſhould be ſpoken of here, I cannot ſee; becauſe if there had bin none among them to puniſh miſdemeanors, they could not have lived ſecurely, but in continuall feare of violence from the evil-minded; wherefore I preferre the firſt. Or if we take מכלים for putting to ſhame, of כלם, the two laſt words may be expounded inhabitant of that Kingdome, or inheritor there, and ſo being joyned with אין the ſentence will bee this, There was none inheritor in that Kingdom confounding a matter in the Land; that is, there were no domeſticall troubles by reaſon of any hot-ſpirited, or doing violence, but all quietneſſe.

V. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

H. B. Patriarks travailes.

Lyra.

The five ſearchers returning, informe their Brethren how they had found this Land, and incite them to goe to poſſeſſe it, which they doe, and march out of Zorah and Eſhtaol, 600 men of warre; firſt to Kiriath-jearim in Judah, then to Micahs houſe. From Zorah to Kiriath-jearim were 16 miles, from thence to Mount Ephraim where Micah dwelt 8 miles. Of Kiriath-jearim, ſee before, Joſh. 15. & Joſh. 18. here they lodged by the way without the City, not within it, as the words v. 12. doe declare, Behold it is behinde Kiriath-jearim; and as Lyra noteth.

V. 14, 15.

When they were come to the houſe of Micah, the five ſearchers informe them that there was a Molten and graven Image, and a Teraphim, and Ephod, all which they tooke away with them; and when they were about it, being expoſtulated with by the Levite, they eaſily perſwaded him for greater dignity, to joyne with them in this their robbery, and to goe away with them to become a Prieſt unto their whole tribe. The phraſe uſed to the Levite, when they would have him to hold his peace, was this, Lay thy hand upon thy mouth; For thus ſilence was wont to bee expreſſed, Job 21. 5. Job 29. 9. Pliny and Macrobius ſay, that the Romans had a Goddeſſe called Angerona, the Goddeſſe of Silence, with her finger laid upon her mouth. In a Temple at Egypt, where Iſis and Serapis were worſhipped, there was an Image with the finger upon the mouth alſo, to ſhew, that it ſhould bee kept in ſilence that theſe were mortals. And Harpocrates the God of Silence was alſo amongſt them thus pictured. Whereas they perſwade him rather to bee Prieſt unto a tribe, then to one man, it is not to bee underſtood, that the whole tribe removed their ſeat to Laiſh; for the tribe of Dan for a great part dwelt ſtill in Zorah and Eſhtaol, and theſe were onely 600 men of war, whereas the whole conſiſted of many thouſands; by a tribe then, they underſtand a good part of a tribe, and that of good note. In this Levite we may ſee, how ambition and covetouſneſſe work in thoſe that bee worldly minded in the Miniſtery, they are altogether led by dignities and profits here, and care not for Gods glory, or to keep a good conſcience.

V. 19.

Plinius.

Macrobius.

Pierius.

Note.

V. 22.

V. 24.

Lyra.

Micah ſeeing what was done, gathereth his neighbours together, and purſueth after the Danites, and cryeth out unto them, and chargeth them, ſaying, Yee have taken away my Gods and my Prieſt, and what have I more? the Vulg. Latine for the laſt words, hath, And all that I have: the meaning being, according to Lyra, not that they had taken any thing away from him, ſaving thoſe things which pertained to idolatrous worſhip; but of theſe hee made ſuch account, as that hee made no reckoning of all that hee had in compariſon hereof. But Micah being threatened by them, returneth home, and they paſſe on to Laiſh, and deſtroy the people deſtitute of all helpe, and burne the City, and this is ſaid to have been in the valley by Bethrehob. Rehob was a City in the north, nigh unto Mount Libanus, Numb. 13. 22. being part of the lot of Aſher, Joſh. 19. 28. but it was not ſubdued by them, Judg. 1. 31.

V. 28.

V. 30.

And they ſet up the Image, and Jonathan the ſonne of Gerſhom, the ſonne of Manaſſeh, hee and his ſonnes were Prieſts unto the tribe of Dan, untill the time of the captivity of the Land. Here two queſtions may bee made: 1 How Jonathan a Levite, could come of Manaſſeh, of which ſomewhat hath been ſaid before, fore, Chap. 17. 1. Qu. 2 What captivity is meant, untill the time whereof, hee and his are ſaid to have been Prieſts unto Dan? Lyra ſaith, that captivity made by Salmanaſar, 2 King. 17. but yet hee citeth Jerome, who ſaith, that the captivity of the Ark is meant, when it was carryed away by the Philiſtims, 1 Sam. 5. 1. and this Lyra confeſſeth to bee moſt probable, becauſe in the next verſe there is another deſcription of the time that Micah his graven Image ſtood, V. 31. viz. all the time that the houſe of God, or Tabernacle was in Shiloh, and ſo long onely it ſeemeth to be meant that Jonathan was Prieſt, and his ſonnes, but no longer: For in Samuels dayes, the worſhip of God was reſtored to the firſt purity; and therefore Idols were certainly beaten downe, and idolatrous Prieſts were removed, and this was the time of carrying the Arke from Shiloh, to the warre againſt the Philiſtims, after which it was brought back no more thither, but to Kiriath-jearim, where it remained 20 yeares. And this is followed by Junius, Iunius who rendreth the laſt words of v. 30. Uſque ad tempus, quo migravit e terra: in the Vulg. Latine it is, Uſque ad tempus captivitatis ſuæ; but our Tranſlation anſwereth verbatim to the Hebrew. Wherefore I thinke rather, that two times are in theſe two verſes deſcribed, the time of the Idols ſtanding made by Micah, v. 31. and the time that Jonathan and his ſonnes were Prieſts to the tribe of Dan, not onely to miniſter to this Idol, but to others ſet up afterwards; when this was taken away, v. 30. even all the time from hence till the Babyloniſh captivity, 2 Kings 17. there being yet intermiſſions, when good Judges and Kings ruled, that tooke away ſuch abominations. For Jeroboam ſet up a Calfe in Dan after Micahs Idol put downe, and other wicked Kings of Iſrael that ſucceeded him, followed him in his ſinnes, till the time of that captivity.

CHAP. XIX.

HEre followeth another moſt lamentable accident of a Levites concubine, or wife abuſed unto death by the men of Gibeah in Benjamin, whereupon that whole tribe almoſt periſhed, to ſhew further the miſery of that State where therein is no King. Joſephus relating this hiſtory, ſaith, that hee took her to wife, and that the time of her departure from him, was within foure Joſeph. Antiq; *lib.*5.*c.*2. months after that he had marryed her. And that the cauſe was the quarrels that were between them, ſhee being a faire woman, for which his affection was greatly towards her, and ſhee not anſwering him with the like, contentions aroſe, whereupon ſhee went away to her Parents, &c. V. 1. This Levite dwelt in Mount Ephraim, not farre from Micahs houſe, and hee tooke his concubine from Bethlehem Judah, where Micahs Levite had ſojourned, before that he came unto him, Chap. 17. 7. ſo that the ſtrange accidents here, and in the former Chapters ſet downe, happened to thoſe of the ſame places, whereby we may gather, that many more villanies were then committed throughout that kingdome. An odious woman, ſuch as this was, is one of the foure things that Prov. 30. 21. diſquieteth the earth. V. 2. Shee played the whore againſt him, and went away from him to her fathers houſe. The Vulg. Latine, Septuagint, and Joſephus likewiſe ſpeaketh of 30 furlongs, and of 20, counting 5 furlongs to a mile. In that comming to Gibeah no man entertained them, till that this old man came from his worke, who was more hoſpitable, we may note both the inhumanity of that people; and that of old there were neither Innes nor Alehouſes, into which a man might bee received in his travaile for his money, nor Bakers, nor Victuallers in Cities, of whom hee might buy bread or other proviſion. But the manner was then to take beaſts loaden with proviſion, as this Levite had two Aſſes and a ſervant with him, and provender for the beaſts; and at night if any hoſpitable perſon would receive him that travailed into his houſe to lodge him, hee went in, otherwiſe hee lay in the ſtreet; as the two Angels ſaid to Lot, that they would lye in the ſtreet all night, or in the field, as Jacob neare Bethel pitching a tent there. Note. This inhoſpitableneſſe and inhumanity ty was in the men of Gibeah a fore-runner of their deſtruction, as the like had been in Sodome. It is then a moſt wicked thing to be thus unkind to ſtrangers Heb.13.2. in their travaile, and a moſt excellent to bee hoſpitable, as Abraham and Lot.

Touching Gibeon or Gibeah, the place, were this was done, Joſh. 21. 17. it Qu. is ſaid to have beene a City given to the Levites out of Benjamins lot, how then did the Benjamites now inhabit there? Anſw. The Levites did not now injoy what was given them, all things being ſo out of order, which made them wander and ſojourne, where they could get a living, others in the meane ſeaſon poſſeſſing their rights, and ſo did the Benjamites, Gibeah.
Some thinke, that Levites dwelt there and Benjamites amongſt them.

V. 22. The wicked men of Gibeah, that came to the old mans houſe, where they were entertained, are called ſonnes of Beliall, that is, ſaith Ierom, in his tranſlation, without a yoke, but of this phraſe ſee before Deut. 13. 13. Like the moſt wicked and unnaturall Sodomites they require not his wife, but him to bee brought forth unto them, that they might know him, that is, ſatisfie their filthy luſts with him. See how averſe ſome are from all goodneſſe, they not Note. onely gave no hoſpitality, but would not ſuffer theſe ſtrangers to be quiet in another mans houſe, and this is an high degree of ſinning, to doe no good, Ioſeph. and to hinder others from doing good alſo. Ioſephus againſt the common ex-Lyra. poſition of Chriſtian Doctors ſaith, that theſe wicked men asked the man to bee brought forth unto them, that hee might deliver his wife, and this Lyra ſeemeth to aſſent unto, becauſe when they had his wife, they were content:
but this their contentment was forced, ſeeing they could not have the man.
Note. Hereby wee may ſee, to what an height of impiety theſe men were grown ſo ſoone after the death of Ioſhua, ſo that ſome horrible judgement could not but bee now expected to come upon them, as it did, to their deſtruction. The V.23,24. old man to ſave his gueſt from ſo unnaturall an abuſe, offereth them his owne daughter a Virgin and the Levites concubine, as ſometime Lot had offered his two daughters to the Sodomites in the like caſe, Gen. 19. 8. where it hath beene already conſidered, whether ſuch an offer were juſtifyable or not.

V. 25. Then the Levite put forth his concubine unto them, who led her away and abuſed her, &c. For ſo it muſt needs bee underſtood, that they tooke her to their owne houſes, becauſe they are ſaid at the ſpringing of the day to let her goe, and ſo that ſhee came to the doore of the houſe, where her Lord Ferus. was. This abuſe offered unto her, whereupon ſhee dyed immediately, as Ferus noteth, was a juſt puniſhment by God brought upon her for her former adultery, v. 2. for now ſhee periſhed in her kinde by adultery, although the act was moſt hainous in thoſe, that committed it. And although wicked doers eſcape the ſword of the Magiſtrate, yet they muſt not looke finally to eſcape the hand of God, who will puniſh every one in his kinde, onely repentance preventeth his wrath.

V. 29. The Levites wife being dead hee carryeth her home upon his Aſſe, and then Lyra. divided her body into 12 parts, and ſent them into the 12 Tribes of Iſrael, that is, ſaith Lyra, two parts into the two halves of Manaſſeh: for to Benjamin it is not likely, that hee would ſend any part, where this villany had beene committed, leſt they ſhould ſlay his meſſengers: and they that were ſent, doubtleſſe had it committed to them to relate, what had beene done, which was the cauſe of their carrying this ſtrange ſpectacle about, that every where they might be the more moved to t[illegible] revenge. Others by the 12 Tribes underſtand Benjamin alſo, becauſe onely [illegible] little part of that Tribe was guilty hitherto, and not the whole Tribe, till that by abetting theſe malefactors it became all guilty.

CHAP. XX.

V.1,2,3. THE children of Iſrael being ſtirred by the Levites meſſengers aſſemble all together in Mizpeh before the Lord, being 400000 men, but the Tribe
of

of Benjamin was not with them, but onely heard of this great Aſſembly. And they are ſaid to have come altogether, as one man, even from Dan to Beerſhebah, that is, from the two uttermoſt boundaries of the land on that ſide of Iordan, where the land of Canaan lay, except the Benjamites, for Dan was furtheſt north, and Beerſhebah ſouth, and all the land of Gilead, that is, the Reubenites, Gadites, and half Tribe of Manaſſeh dwelling on the other ſide of Iordan. Mizpeh where they aſſembled, was not the place, where the Tabernacle then was, for it was now in Shiloh, Iudg. 18. 31. but a place, wherein there was a Synagogue or oratory to congregate to pray in, 1 Maccab. 3. 46. and the Hebrews ſay, that here was the firſt beginning of Synagogues. Some will have Mizpeh to be a City in the Tribe of Benjamin, but Ierom placeth it in Iudah, and indeed ſometime it is ſaid to bee in Iudah, as Ioſh. 15. 38. and ſometime in Benjamin, as Ioſh. 18. 26. whereby wee may gather, that it was a bordering City betweene both, and poſſeſſed part by one Tribe and part by the other, as Ieruſalem was, and ſo it was a fit place for the nearneſſe, for all the Tribes to aſſemble hither about this buſineſſe. Amongſt thoſe, that aſſembled and preſented themſelves before the Lord in this place, it is ſaid, there were the chiefe of all the people, the Vulgar Latin hath it, omnes anguli populorum, the Princes being ſo called, becauſe they are like the corner ſtones, in a building, holding all the building together: So likewiſe they are called 1 Sam. 4. 38. Zephan. 3. 6. and Hebr. it is פנות anguli.

V. 3, 4. They being all here aſſembled together inquire of the Levite, how that hainous wickedneſſe was committed, to whom he anſwereth, that the men of Gibeah beſet the houſe, wherein hee was, thinking to ſlay him, and that they forced his concubine unto death &c. Hee ſaith, that they would have ſlaine him, meaning by Sodomitically abuſing him, as they did her by raviſhing her, but Joſephus ſaith, that they threatened to ſlay him, unleſſe hee would deliver her unto them. V. 8, 9. Hearing this, and being fully certifyed of ſo abominable a wickedneſſe committed by the men of Gibeah, they reſolve with one conſent to goe againſt Gibeah to bee revenged, and that by lot, ten being ſet apart out of 100. and 100. out of a 1000. to fetch victualls for all the reſt, whilſt they were in this expedition. V. 12, 13. 14. But before they ſet upon the City, they ſend throughout the Tribe of Benjamin, deſiring, that the actors in this wickedneſſe might be delivered unto them to be put to death, but they refuſe to hearken unto them, and contrariwiſe aſſemble together to defend Gibeah, being 26000. and the men of Gibeah 700. and amongſt theſe 700. left handed, that could ſling ſtones at an haires breadth. The Vulgar Latin, for 26000. men of Benjamin hath 25000. and ſo hath the Sept. tranſlation and Joſephus, but herein, ſaith Lyra, it is corrupted, the tranſlators finding v. 35. and v. 44, 45. &c. that there were ſlaine onely 25000. and 100. and 600. that fled to rock of Rimmon, thought, that there was an error in the Hebrew, and therefore altered it, putting a leſſer number for a greater to make the reckonings to agree. But how they may bee made to agree accounting 26000. here, hee ſheweth not, Toſtatus. Toſtatus ſaith, that 1000 of them moſt probably were appointed to fetch Victuals for the reſt. Bonfrerius. Bonfrerius is bold herefor to ſtand for the Vulgar Latin, and againſt the Hebrew, affirming it to be corrupt. But forſomuch as the Hebrew is the fountaine, wee muſt rather ſtand for the purity thereof, and reforme all tranſlations hereby. For the difference in the numbers, although 25000. and 100. onely are numbred of the ſlaine that day, and 600. that fled to Rimmon, in which numbers there want 1000. of that here ſet downe, yet there is no reaſon to count this number greater, then the truth, becauſe v. 48. a company are ſaid to bee ſlaine, beſides all theſe, in every City of Benjamin, unto which 1000. at the leaſt might well be fled, thinking to ſave themſelves there, thus alſo Lyra and the Hebrews. V. 16. For the 700. men amongſt them ſaid to bee left handed, that could ſling ſtones out of a ſling at an haires breadth, the Vulgar Latin rendreth it thus, beſides the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were 700. moſt valiant men, fighting as well with the left hand as with the right, which could ſling ſtones, &c. Thus making all the men of Gibeah ambi-dexters, and all alike skilfull, which is incredible. There were 700. then, as the Hebrew verity hath it, amongſt

Iunius.

Philoſtr. vita Apollonii lib. 2. c. 12.

mongſt all the Benjamites Army thus expert in ſlinging ſtones, which did wonderfully ſtrengthen that ſide, and made them doubtleſſe ſo bold, as to ſet upon a number ſo much greater then themſelves. Junius thinketh the ſaying to bee hyperbolicall, they could ſling ſtones at an haires breadth, but there is no neede herein to flee to hyperbole's: for wee doe read of matters as rare in other hiſtories. Philoſtratus writeth of ſome of the Indians, that they did throw ſo skilfully out of a ſling, that they would touch the haire of the childes head with a ſtone and not hurt the head. Gothus a Souldier was ſo skilfull an Archer, that hee would hit an apple placed a farre off upon a ſtaffe with his arrow and not miſſe, which he having boaſted of was related to King Harold a Saxon, who would have him to try his skill upon an apple placed upon the head of his owne ſonne, hee then ſetting the childe with his back towards him, that hee might not feare or move at the comming of the arrow; took to him three arrows, and ſhooting with one of them hit the marke, and being demanded by the King, why hee tooke three arrows, hee anſwered, that if hee ſhould by chance have ſhot his ſonne into the head, hee might bee revenged upon the head of the King by ſhooting the other two at him, that had beene the author of ſo unnaturall a murther. One Soranus having ſhot an arrow up into the aire, ſhot another at it falling and ſplit it. Commodus the Emperor could ſtrike any thing with dart or arrow, that hee ſet his eye upon, ſo Herodianus and Sabellianus. A certain Indian, ſaith Plutarch, in the dayes of Alexander the Great could ſhoot an arrow into a little ring and through it. Domitian, the Emperor, ſaith Suetonius, could ſhoot a wilde beaſt firſt on the one ſide of his head, and then on the other in the forme of a paire of hornes. And ſuch skill hath beene attained by daily practice, as in the Balearian Iſlands, ſaith Florus, mothers would not give their ſonnes any other meat, but what they had firſt beaten downe with a ſtone out of a ſling. And David ſeemeth to have beene inferior to none in this skill of ſlinging when hee ſmote Goliah with a ſtone, and ſlew him. Whereas it is ſaid, that theſe 700. were left handed, Hebr. it is, ſhut up their right hand, but of this phraſe ſee before in the ſtory of Ehud, Judg. 3. 15.

V. 18.

Ferus.

And the children of Iſrael went up to the houſe of God, and asked counſell of God, &c. The Iſraelites may ſeeme herein to have proceeded rightly, as alſo in ſending before to the Benjamites to have the wicked men of Gibeah put to death, who had committed ſo foule a ſinne, and before that inquiring of the Levite the certainty of the matter, ſo that it may ſeeme ſtrange, that they ſhould at the firſt have ſo ill ſucceſſe, and bee repelled twice with the loſſe of ſo many men, eſpecially being bidden by God, of whom they asked counſell, to goe againſt them. But as Ferus noteth, they offended in that they truſted to the equity of their cauſe and to their great multitudes, and not in God only and in his helpe, which is intimated in this that they asked not of God at the firſt, whether they ſhould goe up to fight againſt Benjamin, and whether hee would deliver the Benjamites into their hands, but as if they were ſure to prevaile through their great ſtrength, they asked onely, who ſhould goe firſt up, v. 18. and the ſecond time although they wept, and asked, whether they ſhould againe goe againſt Benjamin, yet they ſought not helpe from God by faſting and prayer and ſacrificing, which they did after their ſecond great overthrow, and then prevailed, v. 26, 27. &c. The houſe of God, to which they went up all theſe times, was the Tabernacle at Shiloh, as may bee ſeene by comparing Ch. 21. 2. with v. 12. and therefore for more expreſſion, v. 27. the Vulgar Latin hath it in this Ch. The Arke of God was in Shiloh in thoſe dayes. And Shiloh, ſaith Lyra, was neare to Gibeah, ſo that they might eaſily goe thither, H. Bunting ſaith, it was within 2. miles, but Mizpeh, from whence they went firſt to Shiloh to inquire of God, was from thence 48. miles.

Lyra.

Patriar. travailes.

V. 20, 21.

V. 22

The Iſraelites comming, after that they had inquired, to fight againſt Gibeah, are by the Benjamites ſlaine to the number of 22000. But then they incouraged themſelves, the Vulgar Latin, they truſting to their fortitude and number ſet the battaile in aray, but yet before this they went up to the houſe of God againe, and wept, and inquired, yet notwithſtanding, they are ſlaine the ſecond time to the number of 18000. The cauſe of all this ill ſucceſſe, ſay the Hebrewes, was, becauſe the tribe of Dan being lately corrupted with idolatry through the Idols of Micah was not firſt puniſhed by them therfore, according to the Law, and purged. But the true reaſon ſeemeth to bee that before rendred by Ferus, for they that truſt in men ſhall fall, although their cauſe bee juſt: and happily there were many groſſe offenders in the Iſraelites Army, who till they were rooted out, they could not proceed with any ſucceſſe, as Joſhua could not againſt Ai, till Achan was cut off; and God in his juſt judgment had appointed this to bee the way to cut them off. For it is intolerable, that they ſhould take upon them to puniſh ſinne in others, who are foule offenders themſelves. Or happſly it was diſpleaſing to God in the whole Army, that they went about to puniſh ſinne in the men of Gibeah, without firſt humbling themſelves for their own ſinnes, and taking them into their conſideration: for hee that will caſt a moat out of another mans eye, muſt firſt caſt the beame out of his owne eye. Therefore when they had faſted, and offered ſacrifice for the expiating of their ſinnes, at the third onſet they prevailed. Whereas they are ſaid to have wept before their ſecond going againſt them, and to have humbled themſelves; that was not ſo much out of any ſenſe of their ſinnes and unworthineſſe to become chaſtiſers of the ſinnes of others, but rather out of an indignation, that they being ſo many, ſhould bee beaten back by ſo few. Laſtly, if they ſhould at the firſt have prevailed, they would have been ready to attribute the victory to their owne ſtrength, and ſo not to have given to God the glory; whereas, being twice defeated, they learned God to bee the giver of all victories, and to magnifie his mercy for it at length attained. Note. And by this example wee are taught: 1 That the goodneſſe or badneſſe of a cauſe, is not to bee meaſured alwayes by the good or bad ſucceſſe in battail, for Benjamin had a bad cauſe, and yet prevailed, and Iſrael contrariwiſe. 2 A good cauſe ſhall certainly prevaile at length, and the bad ſhall goe downe, and the abettors of it, although they may proſper and lift up their heads for a time. 3 The way to prevaile in battaile, is to humble our ſelves firſt for our ſinnes in faſting and prayer, and ſo to proceed, with truſting not in our owne ſtrength, but in God onely. 4 To this end wee muſt conſider, that great Armies of men, and other warlike preparations are nothing, for God can give victory to a few over a farre greater company. Wherefore not mens preparations, but Gods favour is all in all for the getting of the victory.

V.27, 28. When the children of Iſrael being twice beaten by the Benjamites, went the third time to the houſe of God, it is ſaid, That they offered burnt-offerings, and peace-offerings, for the Arke was there; and Phinees the ſonne of Eleazar miniſtred before it in thoſe dayes; which is ſpoken, to ſhew that they might lawfully offer ſacrifices, ſeeing it was before the Arke, and a lawfull Prieſt was there ready to miniſter about theſe ſacrifices. And by this ſpeciall mentioning of Phinees, it is made plaine at what time theſe things were done, viz. not long after the death of Joſhua, as hath been already ſhewed upon Chap. 17.1.

V. 29. And Iſrael ſet lyers in waite round about Gibeah, &c. Here the manner of the Iſraelites proceeding againſt the Benjamites is ſet forth, and their deſtroying of them; firſt, generally and briefly to v. 38. Secondly, more particularly, how the lyers in waite ſet the City on fire, and ſo gave a ſigne to the reſt; and how many periſhed in one place, and how many in another, and how many eſcaped by fleeing to the rocke Rimmon, v. 38, 39, &c. to the end of the Chapter. For their proceeding by laying of an ambuſh, it ſeemeth that they were taught of God thus to doe; for thus Joſhua alſo did againſt Ai, when the victory was promiſed him; and David came upon the Philiſtims behinde, at Gods direction, and ſmote them. Ioſh. 8. 2 Sam. 5.23. V. 33. But that which is ſaid, v. 33. is ſomewhat obſcure, And all the men of Iſrael roſe up out of their places, and put themſelves in aray at Baal-Tamar; and the lyers in waite roſe and came againſt Gibeah, and there came againſt Gibeah 10000 choſen men, &c. After that the battaile was begun, how could they riſe out of their places? and if all Iſrael roſe and ſet upon them now, who were thoſe ten thouſand choſen men? or how is it ſaid, firſt they roſe againſt the Benjamites, and then the lyers in waite came upon Gibeah: whereas by that which followeth, it appeareth, that the lyers of waite came firſt againſt the City, and gave a ſigne to the reſt? By all Iſrael, we may underſtand the maine body of the Army, which lay at Baal-Tamar, a village, as Jerome ſaith, neare Gibeah, whilſt ſome were ſent out to begin the battail; by the 10000 choſen men, ſo many going foremoſt out of this great body, or placed elſwhere moſt conveniently to come on, when they ſhould ſee their opportunity; and whereas the lyers in waite, comming againſt Gibeah behinde it, are ſpoken of after the riſing up of the maine body of the Army; here the order is a little inverted, and therefore the ſame ſtory is againe repeated in the particular relations following, and all things are put in due order. Whereas the lyers in wait are ſaid to have come out of the meadows of Gibeah, the Vulg. Latine hath it, from the weſt part of Gibeah, ſo alſo the Septuagint, but the word is מערח ſignifying a denne or lurking place, and not מערבה ſignifying the weſt. Junius hath, à denudatione Gibeæ, i. after that it was left deſtitute of men, who iſſued out againſt Iſrael. How the word commeth to be rendred a meadow, on denudation, I ſee not. Pagnin and Polanus render it, a denne, and this doth very well agree as fit to hide them in.

V.35. The number of the Benjamites ſlaine is ſaid to bee 25000, and 100, and yet v. 46. they are ſummed up onely 25000; but this is, becauſe in the ſecond numbring, regard is not had unto ſo ſmall a number as that of 100, to ſet it downe againe, becauſe the whole ſumme had been ſo exactly ſet downe before. For the difference between theſe ſums, and that of 26000, v. 15. ſee what hath been already ſaid upon that verſe.

V.38,39,40 41,&c. Hieron. de locis Hebr. Touching the more particular deſcription of their proceedings in this war, when the ambuſh had given a ſign of the City being taken by fire, the Benjamites looking back and ſeeing it, & the men of Iſrael, who ſeemed to flee before, to return upon them, they were greatly terrified, and ſought to flee into the wilderneſſe, but they were prevented, becauſe they were incloſed on every ſide, and ſlain to the number of 18000. Then in their fleeing to the rock of Rimmon, they ſlew 5000 men, and to Gidom 2000 more. Touching Rimmon, Jerome ſaith it was 15 miles from Jeruſalem; Joſephus calleth it the rock Rhea. For theſe words, They purſued them to Gidom, the Vulg. Latine hath it, They purſued them when they went further; but Gidom, if it bee not taken properly, ſignifieth their occiſion, for גדע whereof it commeth, ſignifieth to kill, and ſo it may better bee rendred, to their deſtruction; the Sept. retaine the Hebrew word, whereby it appeareth, that they tooke it for a proper name.

V.47. V.48. Toſtatus. Dionyſ. Carthuſian. Out of this great deſtruction, 600 are ſaid to have eſcaped, that fled to the rocke Rimmon, and they abode there foure months. And the men of Iſrael turned againe and ſmote them in every City, both men and beaſts, and burnt their Cities. This may ſeeme to bee a point of great cruelty, to rage thus againſt all ages and ſexes, and the very beaſts, leaving nothing alive, and Toſtatus condemneth it therefore; but others juſtifie it, holding that both this, and the deſtruction of Jabiſh Gilead in the chapter following, was done according to the will of God, for the great abomination committed amongſt the Benjamites, and by them maintained. And this is moſt probable, both becauſe they made not this warre without conſulting with the Lord, and with his Prieſt Phinees, an holy man, who would have otherwiſe oppoſed ſuch proceedings; and after this deſtruction, they were grieved for the cutting off of this Tribe, which ſheweth that they would not have done it but for Gods command. And laſtly, the like was ſometimes done before againſt places accurſed for ſinne, as, Numb. 31. 17. Joſh. 7. 24. and is commanded for idolatry, Deut. 13. which was ſo appointed, that the greater terror might be ſtricken into all men againſt ſinning likewiſe, and in ſome ſort to repreſent the deſtruction to come at the laſt day, when no ſex, age or degree ſhall be ſpared.

CHAP. XXI.

THere being but 600 men onely left of all Benjamin, and not one woman; here it is remembred what a vow all the men of Iſrael had made out of their fury againſt Benjamin, tending to the utter extirpation of that Tribe, for V.1.
they had vowed not to give any of their daughters unto them to wife, wherein, as Ferus noteth, they did raſhly and uncharitably. This their vow was Ferus.
therefore ſinfull. 1 Becauſe againſt charity. 2 Without any direction or word from God. 3 Againſt his order, who had made 12 Tribes, and given them ſingular bleſſings, and to the tribe of Benjamin in ſpeciall. Wherefore V.2.
now they repent and are humbled therefore, grieving to thinke, that one of their Tribes was in danger of being quite cut off. With Ferus agreeth Tostatus, Toſtatus.
holding both the vow to bee unlawfull, and that it ought not to have been kept, becauſe God would have all the 12 Tribes to remaine, and none of them to be quite cut off; and becauſe in denying them wives, when they had no women of their owne, they expoſed them to the danger either of fornication, or of marrying Heathen women, and conſequently of being drawne to idolatry.
But ſome hold this vow to have been lawfull, becauſe an whole City might bee deſtroyed for idolatry, and therefore an whole Tribe, for ſo great Deut. 13.
and unheard of abomination made the ſinne of all by patronizing the actors of it. I ſubſcribe rather to Ferus, that the vow was raſhly made, but in zeale againſt ſinne, they thinking then for ever to extinguiſh ſo impious a Tribe; for which yet (becauſe they had no warrant, there being not the like reaſon of a City and a Tribe, God having ſome famous inſtruments of his glory to raiſe out of every Tribe, according to Propheſies fore-going of them, and Paul in Gen. 49.
ſpeciall out of this Tribe of Benjamin) they now ſeeing by a ſingular providence Deut. 33.
ſome of this Tribe preſerved, begin to conſider their errour, and grieve to thinke, that they had laid a foundation againſt their ever multiplying again, by making ſo raſh a vow, and repent thereof. But becauſe a vow is a ſacred tye, and may not bee broken, unleſſe the doing of the thing vowed be directly Numb. 30. 1. ſinfull, I hold againſt Toſtatus, that they ought to make conſcience of keeping this vow, eſpecially there being other wayes to bee excogitated of furniſhing theſe Benjamites with wives, as the ſequell declareth. This vow is ſaid to have been made in Mizpeh, v. 1. that is, before the warre began; v. 18. it is ſaid, that they had ſworne, Curſed bee hee that giveth his daughter to Benjamin to wife; and v. 5. another vow made at that time is alſo commemorated, viz.
to deſtroy that City that ſhould not come up to helpe in theſe warres; ſo that zeale wrought with them, not onely to cut off the wicked, but ſuch as would not helpe in cutting them off. Being before the Lord now in Shiloh, they weep V.3,4. to thinke upon the utter ruine of a Tribe like to bee, and they complaine hereof, and build an Altar, and offer ſacrifices; but this was done, ſaith Lyra, in Lyra.
thankeſgiving for their victory. But how is the building of a new Altar Qu.
juſtifiable, when as they had one before made by Moſes, and it was unlawfull to make another, as wee may ſee, Joſh. 22? Anſw. It was not altogether unlawfull, but in any other place beſides that where the Tabernacle was, nor ſo neither at extraordinary times, and upon extraordinary occaſions, ſuch as this was, when happily they had direction from the Lord alſo to doe thus, to ſhew the greater thankfulneſſe. Having done thus, they are againe affected V.5,6,7,8.
with Benjamin's caſe, and caſt about, how they might doe to helpe them to wives, who ſurvived. Then they remember the oath made by them againſt V.9,10.
ſuch as came not up to Mizpeh to joyne in theſe warres, and finding that Jabeſh Gilead came not up, they ſent againſt that City 12000 men to deſtroy them, V.11,12.
their wives and children, onely ſparing the virgins that had knowne no man, V.13,14.
which were 400, and theſe they gave to the 600 Benjamites to bee their wives, but yet they were not ſufficiently ſupplyed. The Vulg. Latine for 12000, hath 10000, confeſſedly erroneouſly. Here was a wonderfull change in the Iſraelites, as Ferus noteth, towards the Benjamites ſurviving, in that all enmity be- Ferus.

ing laid aſide, they now ſtudy and labour to procure their welfare againe; and Note. thus it ought to bee with all that puniſh offenders, bee angry with their ſinnes, and uſe ſeverity againſt them, but compaſſionate their perſons being in miſery. And in theſe Benjamites we may ſee the ſingular providence of God over his people in their greateſt miſery and moſt deſperate eſtate, in that hee turned their enemies to bee their friends, beyond all that they could expect. H.Bunting Patriar. travailes Jabeſh Gilead was a City in Gilead, 52 miles from Shiloh, and therefore farre from Gibeab. And happily becauſe the men of that City were farre off, and ſo thought it did not concerne them what was done in Gibeab; or becauſe they had not ſo much zeale for juſtice, as to put in for a part in revenging ſo horrible a fact, they ſate ſtill, expecting the event of this warre at home, holding it beſt to Qu. ſave themſelves from a great deale of labour, charge, and danger. But now they pay deare for their being ſo worldly wiſe; but whether the Iſraelites did well in taking this ſevere revenge upon them and their innocent children, is a Ferus. queſtion, but Ferus reſolveth it rightly, becauſe they ſeparated themſelves from the community of Iſrael, in ſeeking to be revenged upon ſo great abomination, they were worthily counted enemies, and deſtroyed; inferring hereupon, that ſuch Chriſtians as in the publique affaires of the Church, wherein there is need of their helpe, withdraw themſelves, and helpe not their mother the Church, with all their might, are not worthy to bee counted ſonnes of the Church, but enemies, and to bee proceeded againſt accordingly. Moreover, the Iſraelites had bound themſelves by oath hereunto, and as Joſephus hath it, the men Qu. of Jabeſh being ſent unto, refuſed to come to this warre. For other queſtions made here, how they knew the virgins, and whether they ſpared any, but ſuch as were now marriageable? To the firſt, Lyra anſwereth, that they made Lyra. them to paſſe before the Arke, and by a ſign given there they were knowne. Toſtatus. Toſtatus, that they they uſed the helpe of ancient women to diſtinguiſh them. And to the other queſtion, that all Virgins were ſpared, as well thoſe that were yet children, as the marriageable, theſe being given to the Benjamites to wife, and thoſe reſerved, to bee afterward marryed within their owne Tribe. But becauſe they are bidden to deſtroy all the women and children, except the Virgins that had knowne no man: I thinke it plaine, that it was meant onely ſuch ſhould bee ſpared as were of age, but yet unmarryed, and theſe might be known by their habit and manner of going, and by the relation of their mothers and friends, before that they had killed any of the females, or diſcovered the end of their enquiry hereabout.

V.19, 20. The next project for the Benjamites, which yet wanted, to get them wives, was, that they ſhould lye hid in the Vineyards, and obſerve upon the Feaſt day of the Lord, when the daughters of Shiloh ſhould come out to dance, and then ſuddenly come upon them, and catch every man a wife, and goe away with them to their owne Countrey. And in doing thus, ſaith Lyra, it was not ſin*Lyra.*ned, either by the Elders that gave this counſell, for they had ſworne onely, not to give them any of their daughters to wife, or by the men of Shiloh, becauſe although they had their daughters, yet it was without their giving them, neither were they acquainted with this project; or by the Benjamites, becauſe Ferus. they did onely as they were directed by thoſe that had authority. Ferus confeſſeth it to have been an evill to take, and carry away, and marry other mens daughters againſt the will of their parents; yea, and worſe then theft; for which cauſe by the civill law a greater puniſhment is appointed therefore, viz. death. But it ſeemeth good at this time unto them, rather to tolerate this, then that the oath of the Lord ſhould bee broken, and ſo his Name bee in danger of being made contemptible amongſt the common ſort of people. I cannot but thinke with Ferus, that this catching up of other mens daughters was a fault, and out of this caſe puniſhable, but now neceſſity requiring it, tolerable; eſpecially, if their conſent, and the good will of their Parents was forthwith obtained, as was moſt probable it ſhould bee, they having ſuch mediators to ſpeake for them, as the Elders of Iſrael, who were then of greateſt power in that Common-wealth. But what Feaſt was this, and what dancing was that of the Virgins at it? Toſtatus holdeth it to have been ſome feaſt at a Fair once a yeare, or ſome feſtivall of that place for the pleaſure and recreation of the inhabitants, as many Cities and Villages have in ſome Countreys their peculiar feaſts; and to juſtifie this, he alledgeth Joſephus, who ſaith, thrice in a yeare they came to Shiloh, their wives and daughters followed ad mercimonium, that is, to buy wares. But the words of Joſephus, are εἰς πανήγυριν, ſignifying rather, ad publicum conventum aut ſolennitatem. And becauſe it is ſaid three times in the yeare, Bonfrerius gathereth, that this feaſt was one of the three generall feaſts of the Paſſeover, Pentecoſt, or feaſt of Tabernacles; as alſo becauſe it is called a feaſt of the Lord, and was kept in Shiloh, where the Arke now abode, to which place therefore all the people were bound to come up theſe three times in the yeare to keep theſe feaſts. I am not of Toſtatus his minde, that it was a Faire-feaſt, or ſome other time of merry meeting upon pleaſure, becauſe it is called a feaſt of the Lord: Neither doe I thinke with Bonfrerius, that it was one of the three generall ſolemnities; for then they would not have ſaid, there is a feaſt of the Lord yearly in Shiloh, as if it were kept onely by the inhabitants of that place, their daughters onely going out in dances and ſinging into the fields in praiſing God, becauſe although the males onely were bound to come to thoſe three ſolemnities, yet many women and virgins came alſo from all parts of the Land, and being there, without doubt would bee ready to joyne with the daughters of Shiloh, in any act to the praiſe of God; and if ſo, they alſo ſhould have been in danger to bee taken as well as the Siloan women. Whereas Joſephus ſaith in his Greek Copy, three times a yeare, which giveth occaſion to this conceit, that it muſt bee one of the three moſt ſolemne feaſts; Gelenius his Tranſlator hath it not ſo, but every yeare we have a cuſtome in Shilo to come together to a celebrity, correcting Joſephus herein by the Scripture, which ſpeaketh not of three, but of one feaſt kept by that people in the yeare, wherein they had this ſingular cuſtome, that their daughters went out to dance. And it ſeemeth even by the relation of Joſephus, that this was not a thing knowne generally how they kept this ſolemnity, becauſe hee ſaith, the Elders being in a ſtudy for the Benjamites that yet wanted wives, one came unto them and ſaid, wee have a cuſtome every yeare in Shiloh, &c. whereas if this feaſt had been one of the three, their cuſtome had been generally knowne, becauſe they came from all parts to thoſe feaſts. It ſeemeth therefore to mee, that this was the feaſt of blowing Trumpets the firſt of the ſeventh Moneth, being a time of great mirth and joy above all other new Moones, eſpecially where the ſilver Trumpets were kept, which place now was Shiloh, where the Tabernacle abode. For the people came not together from all parts to keep this Feaſt, but each City kept it by it ſelfe. Or rather ſome ſingular feaſt kept in Shiloh onely to the honour of God, in way of thankfulneſſe for chooſing it to place his Tabernacle there, and that happily upon the day that it was firſt ſet up there from yeare to year. The dancing of the daughters of Shiloh now was not in levity and wantonneſſe, nor in the company of men, but modeſt and holy in praiſing God, as Miriams dancing, Exod. 15. 20. for if young men had been amongſt them, the Benjamites could not ſo eaſily have taken them and carryed them away. Shiloh here deſcribed by Bethel, and the way to Shechem and Lebanon is ſaid by Jerome to bee in the tribe of Ephraim, and neare to the lot of Benjamin, and therefore the fitteſt place that they could have been appointed to get them wives.

Toſtatus.

Bonfrerius.

Numb. 29. 1.
Numb. 10. 10.

Hieron. de loc. Hebr.

V. 22. Now to encourage the Benjamites to this enterprize, the Elders tell them, That if their fathers or brethren come to us to complaine, wee will ſay, Bee favourable to them for our ſakes, becauſe wee reſerved not to each man his wife in the warre; for yee did not give unto them at this time that yee ſhould bee guilty. The Vulgar Latine hath it, Non rapuerunt eas more bellantium atque victorum, ſed rogantibus, ut acciperent, non dediſtis, & à veſtra parte peccatum eſt. This reading, howſoever different from the Hebrew, is firſt expounded by Lyra, and then it is rendred according to the Hebrew, and ſo expounded. For this, they have not taken them away by the right of warre,&c. that is, as if they were taken captive to uſe them hardly as ſervants and ſlaves, but lovingly and kindly as wives: but becauſe yee gave them not unto them asking, yee have ſinned, that is, having bound your ſelves by oath not to give them, yee have ſinned, for that yee looked no better to them, to keep them from being ſtolne away. For the other truer reading according to the Hebrew, which is in our new Tranſlation, Wee reſerved not to each man his wife in the warre; Lyra. Wee tooke not for each man a wife in the warre, that is, in the warre which wee made againſt Jabeſh Gilead; Neither have yee given unto them, as though in time yee ſhould bee blamed; that is, now that they have taken your daughters, if yee be content with it, and ſo give them as it were unto them, yee ſhall beare no ſinne of going contrary to your oath in ſo doing, becauſe they were taken without your knowledge or conſent, for it is not likely that the men of Shiloh knew any thing of this project, till that it was put in execution. Junius. Junius hath the firſt clauſe thus, Wee reſerved not to each man his wife in the warre; that is, when we fought againſt Benjamin wee deſtroyed the wives of theſe men amongſt others; and the ſecond clauſe thus, Nam vos non dediſtis neque jam rei eritis, expounding it as before; thus alſo others. But the Hebrew being rendred word for word, is thus, Wee tooke not for each man his wife in the warre, becauſe yee have not given them unto them at this time yee have ſinned, and thus almoſt goeth the Geneva Tranſlation. According to which the meaning muſt bee, becauſe yee expoſtulate about them at this time, and are not yet moved in compaſſion to your brethren in this their neceſſity to let them have them, yee make your ſelves guilty of the ſinne of inhumanity and want of brotherly affection, howſoever yee thinke, that in regard of your fore-paſſed oath, yee ſhould bee guilty in permitting them to goe away with them; for the clauſe before-going, I ſubſcribe to Lyra, becauſe the word properly ſignifieth we tooke not. Beſides theſe, there is another reading, with a ſupply of one word, thus, Becauſe yee gave them not unto them according to the time, wherein yee ſhould ſinne; for Hebr. it is כעת according to the time, that is, yee need not feare being guilty of ſinne by reaſon of your oath, although now yee conſent, becauſe your oath bindeth you not at this time, ſeeing the caſe is diverſe, yee doe not directly give them, but in pity conſent now, that they are by the direction of authority taken and carryed away. Let the judicious reader follow which of theſe expoſitions he pleaſeth.

Lyra.

V.23,24. This being done, the Benjamites depart to their poſſeſſions, and rebuild their Cities, and all the reſt of the Iſraelites returne every one to his Tribe and to his family.

The Book of RVTH.

CHAP. I.

WHo wrote this little Booke, is uncertaine, ſome ſay Hezekiah, ſome Eſdras, but moſt Samuel. The Hebrews make no diſtinct booke of it, but an Appendix to the book of Judges, becauſe theſe things, as the firſt verſe ſheweth, were done in the dayes of the Judges. It is entituled Ruth, becauſe the hiſtory of Ruth is herein ſet forth, and was thought worthy to have a place amongſt the holy Scriptures, becauſe the line of King David, and conſequently of Chriſt is herein ſet forth, and this is the chiefe ſcope of all the holy Scriptures, to ſhew him unto his people, and that hee was the bleſſed ſeed promiſed. It is placed next unto Samuel, and after all the hiſtory of the Judges, becauſe Samuel writeth of David the King, who was the ſonne of Jeſſe, the ſonne of Obed, the ſonne of Booz and Ruth, as is ſhewed in the end of this Booke; wherefore it was moſt fit that it ſhould come betwixt the Judges and Kings, as a preparative to the hiſtory of Jeſſe and of David his ſon, the moſt famous King of Iſrael.

V. 1.

It came to paſſe in the dayes when the Judges ruled, that there was a famine in the Land, &c. The things ſet forth in this Book were done, as hereby appeareth, in the dayes of the Judges, but in what Judges times, is uncertaine. Joſephus, Comeſtor, and Zonaras ſay, that this was in the dayes of Eli, who judged Iſrael forty yeares, but this cannot bee, becauſe Obed muſt needs bee very aged when he begat Jeſſe, and Jeſſe of great yeares, when he begate David, as by and by ſhall bee ſhewed; but if Obed were borne after the tenth yeare of Elies government, as upon the premiſes muſt bee granted, becauſe v. 4. Ruth dwelt in Moab 10 yeares, before ſhee came to bee marryed to Booz, hee could bee but 40 yeares old when David was borne. The Rabbins and Lyra hold Booz to have been that Judge who was called Abeſan, Judg. 11. Gallianus, Abimelech and Tola to have been Judges that ruled when theſe things were done. The Chronicle of the Jewes called Seder Olam, that theſe things began under Ehud. Toſtatus, at the end of Barak, or the beginning of Gedeon. But the beſt way to finde out the time, as neare as wee can, is to goe by the genealogy ſet downe, Ch. 4. 18, 19, &c. Judah begate Pharez, Pharez Hezron, Hezron Ram, Ram Aminadab, Aminadab Salmon, Salmon Booz, Booz Obed, Obed Jeſſe, and Jeſſe David. And Matth. 1. 5. Salmon is ſaid to have begotten Booz of Rahab, ſo that theſe things muſt be done at ſuch a time after Rahab, as may agree with the time that David was borne, to finde out which, wee muſt have recourſe to 1 King. 6. 1. where it is ſaid to bee 480 yeares from the time of their comming out of Egypt, to the fourth yeare of Solomons reigne: out of theſe then deduct 40 yeares of Moſes, 4 of Solomon, 40 of David's reigne, and 30 of his age when he begun his reigne, together 114, there will remaine 366, which muſt bee divided between Salmon the husband of Rahab, Booz, Obed, and Jeſſe, and the greateſt age that may be for generation muſt be allowed to each of them, or elſe the time will not agree. Reckon we then that Rahab bare Booz being 80 yeares old, for Sarah bare Iſaac at 99. and in our dayes that are ſo declining, ſome women have borne children being above 60. and if ſhee were 20 at the taking of Jericho, 60 of theſe yeares will goe to her time, then allow 102 to Booz, and as many to Obed and Jeſſe, when each of them had theſe ſonnes born unto them, and the whole time will bee made up. Neither is it incredible, that they ſhould have children at ſo great an age, ſeeing many hundreths of yeares ſince, even in theſe our times wee doe read of one Petrus Erneſtus that begat a child after 80 yeares of his age; and not long before in Thuringia, there was a man aged 150, who was confirmed by the Biſhop of Bamberge; and in this our land this very yeare 1635. dyed one Thomas Parre at London, being 152 yeares old, and 9 moneths, in the hiſtory of whoſe life it is ſaid, that hee did penance for incontinency, being aged 105 yeares. And if according to this account wee reckon to Rahab 60 yeares after the Iſraelites comming into Canaan; and to Booz, when hee begate Obed of Ruth, 102 yeares, the whole will bee 162, and from their comming out of Egypt 202, whereof 40 were ſpent in the time of Moſes, 17 of Joſhua, 40 of Othniel, 80 of Ehud, 25 of Deborah, who judged 40 yeares. In her time then moſt probably happened this great famine, when Jabin ſo ſorely oppreſſed Iſrael 20 yeares, and Elimelech with Naomi his wife and children were forced to goe into Moab to ſojourne there, ſtaying 10 yeares, till that by meanes of Deborah and Barak the times grew more proſperous, and then Naomi with her daughter in law Ruth returned, and at length obtained a good husband Booz her kinſman for Ruth. Hugo Cardin. ſtandeth for that opinion, that Booz was the Judge Abeſan, and ſo doth Lyra, and ſo hee ſaith hold the Hebrewes, and that Ruth was the daughter of Eglon King of Moab, whom Ehud ſlew; but Abeſans or Ibſans time was not till above 100 yeares after Deborah, as yee may ſee in the computation which I have made upon Joſh. 24. 32. And Eglon was ſlaine long before that, ſo that he could not have a daughter now living

Joſephus Schol. Hiſt.

Rabbini, Lyra.

Seder Olam.
Toſtatus.

2 Sam. 5. 4.

Hugo Card.

ſo

to marry and beare a childe. That none therefore might be carryed away with this, or that of Joſephus and others, ſo groſſely erring, I have taken theſe paines to finde out the time. Now although the time of theſe things was towards the beginning of the Judges, yet they are not there ſet forth, but after and immediately before the hiſtory of the Kings for the arguments ſake, matters touching the Progenitors, of King David, whoſe hiſtory followeth ſoone after: Whereas Lyra and others make 3. in this line of the name of Booz to avoid the neceſſity of reckoning ſo many yeares to him and Obed and the reſt, before they begat, I have already confuted it, in my firſt Text: Matth. 1. This booke is compared by Hugo to a little Bee, great in fruitfulneſſe for the waxe and honey, which it gathereth for light and medicine, for the hiſtory is little, but the myſtery touching Chriſt and his Church herein ſet forth is great.

Touching the famin here ſaid to bee in the land, that is, in all the land of Canaan, as the Chaldee expreſſeth it, by reaſon whereof Elimelech with his wife and children went into Moab to ſojourne, it ſeemeth, that it was a very great one, ſeeing Elimelech, who is thought to have beene a rich man, was forced to ſeeke reliefe in another country, and hee dying there and his two ſonnes, his wife Naomi with her daughter in law Ruth returned not, till after 10. yeares, when ſhee firſt heard of the fruitfulneſſe of the land of Canaan againe. This famine then muſt needs laſt above 10. yeares, becauſe it is not to bee thought, that a man of ability would immediately goe out of his owne country for food, but having firſt ſpent his owne proviſion at home, which could not be little, and therefore not ſpent in a little time. But admitting it to be of 10. yeares continuance onely, it was a very great famine, and ſo a great judgement, but the people were exceedingly wicked and idolatrous in thoſe dayes, as wee may ſee in the foregoing hiſtory of the Judges, when this happened, and therefore it is to be held, that this great judgement was ſent, a fruitfull land was turned into barrenneſſe for the wickedneſſe of them that dwelt therein. For ſo it was threatned, Levit. 26.19. Deut. 28.16. The Hebrews, ſaith Lyra, affirme, that the Sun ſtood ſtill a certaine time to move the people to repentance, and then there being no amendment, at the ſight of this prodigy, this grievous famine followed, and Elimelech, one of the Nobles of Iſrael being weary of the multitude of poore people, that came begging to his gate, went away into the Country of Moab with all his goods, but there hee conſumed and grew poore, and dyed both hee and his two ſonnes through Gods juſt judgement. Thus hee, and yet 1 Chron. 4.22. following Ieroms tranſlation, which hath it, who made the ſunne to ſtand, et viri mendacii, for that, which is in our tranſlation, Jokim and the men of Chozebah, hee expoundeth the firſt of Elimelech, that hee by his prayers made the Sun to ſtand ſtill for a ſigne to that wicked generation, as Joſhua had done, that they might bee hereby moved to repentance, but they not being moved, a ſore famine was ſent, whereby hee was forced to goe with his family into Moab: the other, viri mendacii, hee expoundeth of his two ſonnes Mahlon and Chilion, who are ſaid to be men of lyes, becauſe taking each of them a wife, they yet had no children. Now if Elimelech were ſo gracious with God, that hee could cauſe the Sun to ſtand ſtill for a time, it is ſtrange, that hee ſhould be ſo hard hearted to the poore, and after this ſo notably judged. To paſſe this over then, as a figment of the Rabbins, whereof they are full, Elimelech forced by the famine went to Moab to ſojourne, * which was not farre from thoſe two Tribes and halfe on the other ſide of Iordan, for there lay the plaines of Moab, and hee and his two ſonnes and wife are ſaid to be

V. 2. Ephrathites of Bethlehem Iudah. They are called Ephrathites, becauſe of the City of Ephrata, otherwiſe named Bethlehem; for it was firſt called Ephrata, ſaith Hugo, from Ephrata, the wife of Caleb, who was buryed there, afterwards Bethlehem for the fruitfulneſſe thereof, for Bethlehem ſignifyeth the houſe of bread: this Ephrata alſo, ſaith he, was Miriam, the ſiſter of Moſes, and called Ephrata, that is, ſhee ſaw fury, becauſe the Lord in his wrath had

ſmitten

Pſal. 107.

Lyra.

* H. Bunting Patriar. travailes, ſaith Moab was 40. miles from Bethlehem.

Deut. 1.5.

Hugo Cardin.

ſmitten her with the Leproſy, but according to others this City was called Ephrata, becauſe it ſaw wrath in the time of this famine, but Bethlehem afterwards, becauſe made fruitfull againe. But all theſe are vaine ſpeculations, ſeeing this City had both theſe names long before this, Gen. 35. 19.

V. 3, 4, 5.

Elimelech comming to Moab dyeth, his two ſonnes take wives of the women of Moab, one called Orpah, and the other Ruth, and after 10. yeares they both dye. Here although Ruth be named laſt, yet ſhe was the wife of the firſt Mahlon, ſee Ch. 4. 10. and Orpah of Chilion, ſo Joſephus expreſly affirmeth.

Rabbini.

The Rabbins unto that tale of Ruth, that ſhe was the daughter of Eglon King of Moab, adde another touching Orpah, that ſhee was afterwards the mother of Goliah, which is moſt abſurd: for ſhee was of Moab, hee of Gath, and ſhee lived divers ages before him.

2 Sam. 21.

But they were deceived by the name of Goliah his father Arapha, being ſomewhat neare to Orpah, which is groſſe, the difference alſo of theſe names being more in the Hebrew.

Qu.

A queſtion may here be moved, whether Mahlon and Chilion ſinned not in taking theſe wives of the heathen? Anſw. The Moabites were not of thoſe heathen, which were forbidden them to make marriages with, Deut. 7. 3. but becauſe they were idolaters, the ſame reaſon was of force againſt marrying with them, that was againſt marrying with the Canaanites, and that Orphah and Ruth were both ſuch, when theſe men tooke them, and ſtill when they were dead, appeareth by the ſpeach of Naomi unto them, v. 15. Behold, thy ſiſter is gone backe unto her people and unto her gods, returne thou alſo. Howſoever then it had not beene unlawfull for Mahlon and Chilion to marry them if they had beene converted, yet in that caſe it was unlawfull, as alſo Toſtatus teacheth, and happily for this ſinne God ſlew them, and gave them no iſſue.

Toſtatus.

But when Booz marryed Ruth, ſhe was converted, and ſo the caſe was altered: Yet becauſe Deut. 23. 3. it is ſaid, a Moabite ſhall not enter into the congregation to the tenth generation, it may be doubted whether Boaz his marriage with her be juſtifyable: but, as hath beene already ſhewed upon that place, that law concerned the men, & not the women, if they were made proſelytes.

Qu.

Toſtatus alſo moveth two other queſtions before this about Elimelech: 1. Whether he and his family might not alwayes have dwelt in Moab? 2. Whether Iſraelites dwelling in other countreys were bound to reſort to the temple 3. times in the yeare? To the firſt he ſaith, they might not, for the danger of idolatry, and for feare of forgetting the law by continuall abſence; and laſtly, becauſe they could not fulfill that law of appearing at the Temple 3. times in the yeare: affirming in anſwer to the ſecond queſtion, that all Iſraelites, whereſoever they dwelt, were bound ſo to doe. But forſomuch as this was a thing impoſſible for the length of the way betweene ſome Countreys, where the Iews dwelt, and Ieruſalem, except they ſhould doe nothing elſe but travaile from one end of the yeare to the other, and they that were in a journey, were excuſed from comming up to the principall of theſe feaſts, the paſſeover, it is certaine, that they were not bound to come every time from all places, but at ſome times, as the length of the way, and their other neceſſary occaſions would permit.

Numb. 9. 10.

Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 16. c. 4

And thus the Jews have underſtood this law, witneſſe Ioſephus, who ſaith, that they ſent their tribute money for the Temple, which they were to pay yearly, by ſome other faithfull perſons, if they dwelt farre off, which they would not have done, if every one had gone up in his owne perſon.

Antiq. 4. c. 8.

And in another place ſpeaking of thoſe that were bound to come up thrice a yeare, he ſaith, they ought to come from all the limits of the land held by the Jews.

Philo lib. 3. de vita Moſis.

And Philo ſaith, that they, who dwell farre off, or be in a farre journey, although they come not to ſacrifice with their Countreymen, yet they ſhall not be deprived of their common honour, becauſe this is no ſinne in them, ſeeing one Countrey cannot containe ſo populous a Nation, but they muſt neceſſarily ſend out colonies into other lands. And Toſtatus himſelfe confeſſeth, that Elimelech during the time of his abode in Moab, was not bound to come to Ieruſalem to theſe three feaſts, becauſe it being a famine, hee could not be ſupplyed with neceſſaries for ſuch a journey. And as for his anſwer to the former queſtion, there is no reaſon, if one might goe and dwell in another Countrey 10 yeares together, but that, need requiring, hee might goe and dwell there alwayes. And Acts 2. wee read of Jews devout Perſons, that dwelt in all Countreys, who were at Jeruſalem at Pente-coſt.

V. 6,7,8.&c. After 10. yeares abode in Moab, Naomi having loſt her husband & both her ſons prepareth to returne with her daughters in law into the land of Iudah. But upon the way ſhe willeth her daughters to returne home againe, wiſhing well unto them. They being much affected unto her offer to goe on with her, but at length Orpah is perſwaded to return, but Ruth clave conſtantly unto her, and would not be parted from her by ought, but death. For the words of Naomi uſed to her two daughters in law, when ſhee perſwaded them to returne, v. 8. Goe, returne each Lyra. to her mothers houſe, Lyra ſaith, that ſhee ſpake ſo, becauſe either their fathers were dead, or daughters doe more familiarly converſe with their mothers.
And for her next words, v. 11. Are there yet more ſonnes in my womb, that they may bee your husbands? hee ſaith, that this was ſpoken according to that law whereby it was provided, that a brother dying without iſſue, his brother ſhould take his widow and raiſe up ſeed unto his brother. Laſtly, touching the ſpeach of Naomi to Ruth, when her ſiſter was gone backe, v. 15. Behold, thy ſiſter in law is gone backe to her people and to her gods, returne thou after her, to which ſhe anſwereth: Entreat mee not, for whither thou goeſt, I will goe, and where thou lodgeſt, I will lodge; thy people ſhall bee my people, and thy god my god, and where thou dyeſt, I will dye, and there will I bee buryed. Seeing Ruth inclining to her religion and to turne one of Gods people, ſhee moſt earneſtly diſſwaded her and propounded unto her the hard conditions, that they muſt bee ſubject to, that would turne Jews, that hereby ſhee might prove the ſtedfaſtneſſe of her reſolution, as it is neceſſary, that they who will turne to the true religion, ſhould firſt bee acquainted, what is required of ſuch. Shee therefore, as the Hebrews ſay, told her firſt, that the Jews muſt not goe out of their owne Countrey, except in the caſe of great neceſſity. 2. That a woman muſt not bee alone with a man, unleſſe hee be her husband. 3. That the precepts of the law, to which a Jew is ſubject, are very many, even 613.
4. That it is unlawfull for a Jew to ſerve divers Gods. 5. That there were divers kindes of death appointed for offenders amongſt them, as ſtoning, burning, ſtrangling, and killing with the ſword. And according to theſe particulars Ruth directed her anſwer: to the firſt, whither thou goeſt, I will goe, that is, I will not goe out of the countrey, unleſſe with thee: to the ſecond, where thou lodgeſt, I will lodge, that is, I wil alwayes be in thy company, and therefore with no man alone: to the third, thy people ſhall be my people, that is, I will be as they are, ſubject to all the laws: to the fourth, thy God ſhall bee my God, that is, I will worſhip none other, but him alone: to the fifth, where thou dyeſt, will I dye; that is, I will be ſubject to the law to bee put to death, if I deſerve it, as thou art. God doe ſo to mee, and more alſo, if ought but death part thee and mee. Here Ruth bindeth herſelfe by oath never to leave Naomi, for this was an uſuall forme of ſwearing amongſt the Hebrews, God doe ſo, that is, judge mee ſo, as hee hath threatened the tranſgreſſors of his laws, or as ſevere-ly as ever hee hath judged any.

V. 19. Naomi therefore ſuffered Ruth to goe with her, and they came together to Bethlehem, &c. From hence to the end of this Chapter nothing elſe is re-bated, but the trouble that was amongſt the Bethlehemites at the returne of Naomi, to ſee her in times paſt a wealthy woman having an husband and children, now to come out of Moab alone without wealth or attendants, poore and a widow and childeleſſe. They aske therefore amongſt them-
V. 20. ſelves not without admiration, is this Naomi? but ſhee biddeth them not to call her Naomi, that is, faire or pleaſant, but Marah, that is, bitterneſſe; and thus the Vulgar Latin hath it expreſſely. And this her returne was at the be-V. 22. ginning of barly harveſt, that is, about the time of the paſſeover, and therefore the Chaldee hath it, in the aſcenſion of the paſchall day, for the day after the Paſſeover they were appointed to offer a ſheaſe unto the Lord, and not to eate any of their corne of that year, till this was done. Lev.23.10,11.

The Myſtery.
Hugo Cardin.

Myſtically by Elimelech, ſaith Hugo, underſtand Chriſt, for Elimelech ſignifieth my God the King, and hee was born in Bethlehem; by Naomi, the Church, which is beautifull; by their two ſons, two companies, one of the Prophets, by Mahlon, ſignifying, from a window, becauſe they opened a window, as it were, to give the firſt light; and the other of the Apoſtles, by Chilion, ſignifying perfection, becauſe they perfectly underſtood, and taught the myſteries of the Goſpel: by the two wives of theſe two men, the Jewes and the Gentiles, viz. the Churches gathered together by both theſe companies amongſt the Jewes and Gentiles. By Elimelech dying, Chriſt dying; by his two ſons dying, the Prophets and Apoſtles dying after that: the Church Naomi then remaining deſolate, prepareth to returne to her heavenly Countrey; and Orpah, that is, the Church of the Jewes, leaveth her, but R*uth*, that is, the Church of the Gentiles, cleaveth ſtill unto her, by conſtancy in the true faith. Whereas Naomi her diſſwading of her daughters from going with her, may not ſeem to agree to our mother the Church, becauſe ſhe perſwadeth all to the Faith, and diſſwadeth none from comming, hee ſaith, that either this is to bee underſtood, as ſpoken by way of tryall, for wee muſt try the ſpirits, diſſwade from comming, to prove how earneſtly they are bent to come; or the very caſe of the Church after the death of Chriſt, and the Apoſtles, was very diſſwaſive from comming to it, becauſe it was under bitter perſecution, contemned and deſpiſed. For her two daughter-in-laws following her for husbands, by whom they might have iſſue, this ſetteth forth particular Churches deſiring good Paſtors to bee ſet over them, but when the univerſall Church groweth old, and paſt childebearing, or to that, that ſhee hath no children ready, but they muſt ſtay till they be growne up, ſhee telleth her daughters, that ſhe hath no worthy Paſtors for them, and if there bee any Paſtors to come, of which there may bee hope afterwards, there would be danger in ſtaying for them, as whilſt Thamar ſtayed for Shelah, of falling into the ſinne of fornication: This is verified in the declining time of the Church, wherein ſome Pariſh Churches are without worthy Paſtors, and ſome have the young Nephews of Biſhops put upon them, they taking the profits, in the meane ſeaſon, whilſt they grow up, and thoſe under unworthy Paſtors are in as bad caſe, becauſe they ſeek not iſſue, but their owne worldly profit. And here hee further compareth Biſhops preferring their brethren and kinſmen to Benefices, unto Lot begetting of his two daughters, Ammon ſignifying, my people, and Moab, from my father; but this was done in the night, to ſhew, that to doe thus is a work of darkneſſe, and ſuch Biſhops follow the Shechemites preferring Abimelech their kinſman to their owne confuſion. Judg 9. Naomi her bringing of R*uth* to Bethlehem in the beginning of barley harveſt, which was the time of the Paſſeover, ſetteth forth the Primitive Church bringing the Church of the Gentiles to the benefits of Chriſts paſſion then undergone, for hee ſuffered about that time, and inſtituted his Supper.

CHAP. II.

V.1.
Lyra.

HEre it is ſhewed how God provided for Ruth, that for pieties ſake forſooke her owne Countrey to live with her poore mother in Law Naomi an Hebrew in the land of Iſrael, by marrying her unto Booz. The firſt ground of this marriage was, Booz was a kinſman of Elimelechs, and hee was a mighty man of wealth. The Hebrews, ſaith Lyra, affirme, that S*almon* the father of Booz, and Elimelech were brethren, and ſo the husband of Ruth, and Booz were couſin germans, and to this hee inclineth: And whereas the time of S*almon* agreeth not with Elimelech, who muſt needs bee too long after S*almon*, hee reſolveth it, by making three of the name of Booz, the grandfather, father, and ſonne, and the laſt he ſaith marryed R*uth*. But if this bee granted, which

I

I have ſhewed elſewhere, is but an imagination, it maketh Elimelech never a whit the elder or nearer the time of Salmon, and ſo is nothing to the purpoſe.
Elimelech more probably was the ſonne of Salmons brother, and ſo his ſonne the kinſman of Booz once removed, for there was one nearer, as is ſhewed, Ruth V. 2. 3.12. To the field of this Booz Ruth came accidentally to gleane, whereby her poverty appeareth. Of leaving Corne for the poore to gleane and gather, ſee V. 4. the laws, Levit. 19.9. & 23.22. Deut. 24.19. After a while Booz commeth amongſt his reapers, and ſaid, The Lord bee with you, whereby wee may ſee, that the cuſtome of ſaluting thoſe whom a man meeteth, is very ancient, and alſo of ſuch as we come unto, as the Angel comming to the Virgin Mary, began his meſſage with a ſalutation.

V. 5. Lyra. Then hee enquireth touching Ruth, and is certified who ſhee was. Now it may ſeeme ſtrange, ſaith Lyra, that hee ſhould enquire rather of her then of any other gleaner there, but according to the Hebrews he obſerved ſome ſingular modeſty in her, which was, that ſhee gathering the ſtanding eares of corne that were left ſtanding, ſate downe to gather them that were falne, leſt by ſtooping any part of her legs ſhould bee ſeene, but this is ridiculous: hee might rather enquire of her, becauſe ſhee was a ſtranger, and either in habit or complexion differing from the Iſraelitiſh maids.

V. 8. Booz hearing who ſhee was, ſpeaketh kindly to her, and biddeth her to ſtay by his Maidens, and not to gleane in any other field all the harveſt, and when ſhee was athirſt, to goe and drinke at the Reapers bottles. Whereas hee ſpeaketh of his Maidens, and her going out with them to gleane, is ſpoken of, ver.
22, 23. it is not to bee thought that they gleaned for Booz, for that had been againſt the Law, whereby the ſcatter was alotted to the poore, but being poor Maid-ſervants, he gave them leave to gleane for their own benefit.

V. 10, 11, 12. Ruth hearing Booz ſpeake ſo kindly to her, bowed her ſelfe downe to the ground, admiring his curteſie to her being a ſtranger, and hereby hee was moved V. 13, 14. to be yet more kinde unto her, both in words, telling her what hee had heard of her, and praying to God for her; and in deeds, as hee had before bidden her to come and drinke with his ſervants, when ſhee was thirſty: ſo V. 15, 16. now hee added, At meale time come hither, and eate of the bread, and dip thy morſell in the vinegar; and hee reached her parched corne, and ſhee had enough and to ſpare. Laſtly, he bade his ſervants to ſuffer her to gleane amongſt the Note. ſheaves, and to let fall ſome Corne for her. Whereby wee may learne, as Ruth, to be thankfull for favours received, and that reverence and thankfulneſſe to Benefactors procure yet more favour. For theſe words, v. 13. Let mee finde favour in thy ſight, the Vulg. Latine hath it, I have found favour; the Hebrew, I ſhall finde favour, for it is in the future tenſe, and ſo it may have a good ſenſe thus, I doubt not, but I ſhall finde favour henceforth with thee, ſeeing thou haſt already thus comforted mee, although moſt unworthy, as being inferiour to any of thy Maids. Whereas at dinner time hee bade her eate bread, and dip her morſell in the vineger, it is to bee underſtood, that by bread any kind of food is ſet forth, and vineger ſerved to coole them in that hot Countrey, and Chald. Paraphr. ſpecially in the hotteſt time of the yeare, as in harveſt. The Chaldee underſtandeth bread properly, and by vineger pulſe made with vineger, and eaten with bread. And hee reached her parched corne, the Vulg. Latine, ſhee gathered together parched corne unto her ſelf; but the word is a maſculine, and therefore cannot bee expounded by her, but by him, that is, Booz, moſt probably, as the Chaldee hath it expreſly; the Sept. render it ἐβούνισεν αὐτῇ Βοὸζ, Booz reached unto her by heapes.

V. 17. When the evening did come, Ruth did beat out the corne which ſhe had gleaned, and it was an Ephah, that is, a buſhel, as hath been ſhewed upon Exod.
16. where an Omer is ſaid to be the tenth part of an Ephah. Then ſhe took it up, and went home to Naomi, and told her where ſhee had gleaned, &c. whereat ſhee rejoyceth, and telleth her, that Booz was one of their next kinſ-V. 20. men, ſaying, Bleſſed bee hee of the Lord, who hath not left off his kindneſſe to the living and to the dead: the Vulg. Latine, who hath ſhewed the ſame kind-kindneſſe to them being dead, that hee did to them living, that is, to Elimelech and Mahlon living, and now they being dead, to Naomi and Ruth their widowes. In ſaying that hee was one of their next kinſmen, Hebr. מגאלנו of our redeemers (for ſo the next kinſmen were called, for the right which they had to redeem either land or wife, or to bee revenged for bloodſhed, ſee Levit. 25. Numb. 35. 12. ſhe intimateth ſome hope that he might redeeme the land of Elimelech, and ſo Ruth his ſonnes wife being without iſſue to bee his wife.

The Myſtery. Gloſ. Ordin.

Myſtically by Booz, wee may againe underſtand Chriſt; by the comming of Ruth into his field, the Church of the Gentiles working with him in gathering ſentences of the holy Scripture ſet forth by the eares of corne let fall by the reapers, who are his Miniſters: Booz his charging Ruth not to goe to any other field to gleane, ſetteth forth Chriſts giving a charge to the faithfull amongſt the Gentiles to cleave to the truth received, and not to goe away to any Gentiliſh errors any more. Ruths humbling of her ſelfe, ſetteth forth the humility of the faithfull, as not comparing with Gods Primitive church. Laſtly, Ruths going on to gleane in the fields of Booz, till all the barley and wheat-harveſt were brought into the barnes, the Churches feeding and gathering of Divine knowledge even unto the end.

CHAP. III.

HEre Naomi deviſeth a way to preferre Ruth her daughter in law, in marriage with Booz, and to this end ſhee directeth her to waſh, annoint, and to cloath her ſelfe with her beſt apparell, and ſo to goe down to the floore where Booz winnowed barley, and lodged, and there when hee was in bed, to lye downe at his feet; all which ſhee did accordingly. And hee finding her there at midnight, and hearing who ſhee was, and for what end ſhee came, viz. to deſire him to doe the office of a kinſman unto her, and to marry her, praiſed her therefore, and promiſed to fulfill her deſire, and ſo early in the morning hee diſmiſſed her with ſix meaſures of barley, that is, as one hath it, ſix gallons.

H.Bunting Patriar.travailes.

V. 1. Lyra.

Shall I not ſeeke reſt for thee? that is, ſaith Lyra, to preferre thee to a rich marriage, that thou maiſt not have need for want to toyl and labour ſo much, and thou maiſt have the comfort of iſſue, which yet thou wanteſt, and is a thing ſo much deſired by women.

V. 2.

Behold hee winnoweth barley to night in the threſhing floore. At the time of winnowing, ſay the Hebrews, as alſo of ſheep-ſhearing and the vintage-ending, men uſed to make feaſts for their ſervants and workmen, and a great heape of corne being dreſſed up, the Maſter thereof ſtayed all night at the floore after the feaſt ended, taking up his lodging there, that his corne might bee kept more ſafely, and according to this cuſtome Naomi ſpeaketh, behold hee winnoweth, that is, hee hath a winnowing of corne, which is ended this night, and therefore he will now feaſt and lodge there.

V. 3.

Waſh thy ſelfe, and annoint thee, and put thy raiment upon thee, &c. the Vulgar Latine, induere cultioribus veſtibus, for more expreſſion, as it is moſt probable, that ſhee meant, ſhee ſhould deck up her ſelfe in the beſt manner, that ſhee might find the more favour in the eyes of Booz. If this ſhall ſeeme not to agree with the time, ſeeing it was darke night, and ſo her neatneſſe could not bee diſcerned: I anſwer, it was uncertaine, as carefull as ſhee was to conceal her ſelfe, whether ſhee ſhould not bee ſeen. 2 In the morning ſhee might be ſeen, and although ſhee made haſte away, yet ſhee returned not ſo early, but that Booz could ſee to meaſure her ſix meaſures of barley, and therefore might ſee her alſo. For annointing, it was much uſed of old, as we may ſee, 2 Sam, 12. 20. 2 Sam. 14. Pſal. 104. 15. Pſal. 45. Iſa. 61. Judith 10. 3. Heſt. 2. 12. Matth. 6. 17. and it was of the head and face, to make the countenance the more chearefull and pleaſant, but not to alter the colour or complexion, as annointing and painting

ting is uſed by vaine and proud women now adayes, more like unto Jezabel then Ruth, by the ruine of the former of which ſoone after this vanity following, it were to bee wiſhed that all other women would take warning. For her going to lye downe at his feet, it is to bee underſtood, that threſhing floores were open, and ſo free for any to come into, even in the night ſeaſon; onely a tent happily might be pitched for the time to ſhelter the corn and men from the raine and dew that might fall in the night. But for the thing here counſelled by Naomi to bee done, a queſtion may be made, whether it was not unlawfull to adviſe a woman to goe to a man alone in the night ſeaſon, and to lye there neare unto him, yea, under the ſame covering, and to uſe ſuch ſpeeches unto him, as whereby he might be allured to lye with her; For this was to doe the office of a kinſman, howſoever not out of marriage, but in marriage, and all this when he had made his heart merry with eating and drinking, in which caſe there is the more danger. Lyra. Dionyſ. Carthuſ. Lyra, and Dionyſius Carthuſianus ſeem to blame the counſell of Naomi, although they excuſe the fact of Ruth, becauſe there was another nearer of kin to her then Booz, who muſt firſt refuſe, and to ſeek to get an husband in this manner was ſcandalous and dangerous, but for Ruth, ſhee being a ſtranger, and newly converted, and ſo not knowing the laws of marriages amongſt the Jewes, ſeeing ſhee did nothing but follow the directions of Naomi, who ſhee thought could better inſtruct her, ſhee was free from all blame. Theodoretus. Toſtatus. Contrarywiſe Theodoret, and Toſtatus, and others juſtifie them both, becauſe Booz was well known to bee righteous and of good government, ſo that hee would not offer to commit that ſin; and Ruth to bee ſo vertuous that ſhee would not ſuffer it. And if there were another man nearer akin to Ruth, yet happily, either Naomi knew it not, or elſe ſhee had no hope of preferring her in marriage with him, but Booz had already ſhewed her ſuch favour, that ſhee preſumed upon his good will. Neither was there any thing done that was immodeſt herein, for by the Law Ruth might require the next kinſman, who in the Hebrew phraſe is called a brother, to doe the duty of a kinſman by raiſing up ſeed unto his dead brother, Deut. 25. 5. and to this end to marry her. For her going to this end to lye downe at his feet, and to deſire him to ſpread the skirt of his garment over her, Lyra. by this phraſe nothing elſe was meant, as Lyra hath it, but that he would take her to wife, for when a man marryed, hee laid his skirt over her. Toſtatus thinketh that ſhee deſired him to lye with her, which is groſſe; and by Booz his anſwer it appeareth, that ſhee meant onely that hee would take her to wife, &c. Neither did ſhee put off her cloaths to lye down, but lay downe apparelled as ſhee came forth: and ſhe lay not by his ſide, but at his feet; and the Scripture in concluding this hiſtory, freeth them both from any act of incontinency, by ſaying, Shee lay at his feet untill the morning, and then roſe up before one could know another, that is, ſuddenly. Author imperfect. operis, Chryſoſt. One ſaith, that he doubteth not but all this was done by inſtinct from God, or elſe ſuch holy women would never have done and ſpoken ſo.

V.8. And it came to paſſe, at midnight the man was afraid, and turned himſelfe, and behold a woman lay at his feet: the Vulg. Latine, and hee ſaw a woman lying at his feet, that is, ſaith Lyra, Lyra. following R. Solomon, hee reached out his hand and felt upon her head, whereby he knew that it was a woman, but hee feared that it had been ſome evill Spirit, or a Theef; and if ſo, hee ſaw, is put for he found or perceived. But in the Hebrew there is nothing, but, behold a woman lying, &c, ſo that it is not neceſſary to hold that he diſcovered her ſex till ſhe ſpake.

V. 10. And Booz ſaid, Bleſſed be thou of the Lord, for thou haſt ſhewed more kindneſſe at the latter end, then at the beginning, in as much as thou followedſt not young men, &c. Booz is ſo farre from taxing Ruth, as hee would have done, if ſhee had immodeſtly deſired him to lye with her, as ſome thinke ſhee did, when ſhee ſaid, ſpread thy skirt over mee, as that he greatly praiſeth her, becauſe ſhe was not carryed by carnall luſt, but onely by the deſire of iſſue, to ſeek an husband, which appeareth, for that ſhee followed no young man to this end, but one aged, and becauſe in ſeeking to a kinſman of her dead husbands to raiſe up ſeed unto him, and ſo to continue his memoriall and name, ſhe ſhewed the greateſt kindneſſe unto him that might bee; ſhe had ſhewed kindneſſe to him in his life time, by living lovingly with him, but then he could requite it with the like, but he being dead, and ſhe of another Country, to forſake it to ſeek iſſue for him in the land of Iſrael, this was a kindnes in her far greater.

V.11. For all the City of my people knoweth, that thou art a vertuous woman: this was ſpoken by Booz, to ſhew, that hee would without doubt yeeld to her deſire, but that hee muſt not doe any thing to wrong another man, who was nearer to her then he, as he ſheweth, v. 12. Chald.Paraphr. For, all the City of my people, Hebr. is; all the gate of my people, that is, ſaith the Chald.Paraphr. the whole Sanedrin, or bench of Judges and Rulers, for they ſate in the gates to give Judgement: ſo likewiſe Vatablus and others; but the Sept. render it, the whole tribe of my people; and Pagninus by a Synecdoche, the whole City; and becauſe all the City came together alſo to the gate for Judgement, it is beſt to take it thus generally. V. 12. Lyra. For the man, who he ſaith, was nearer to her, Lyra ſaith he is not named, becauſe unworthy, for that he would not raiſe up ſeed unto his brother; but the Rabbins ready to determine any thing, becauſe they would ſeem to be ignorant of nothing, lay hold upon the word טוב v. 13. ſignifying well, and ſay that his name was Tob. V. 14. V. 14. And ſhee roſe up before one could know another; that is, before it was light, in the very dawning of the day, ſo that if a man ſhould have met her, he could not know her by the face. And herein both he and ſhe were carefull to prevent all ſcandall, becauſe men are generally ſuſpitious, and apt to ſpeak the worſt.

V.15. And he ſaid, Bring the vaile that thou haſt upon thee, and hold it, and he meaſured her ſix meaſures of barly, &c. This vaile was a covering which ſhe put upon her moſt outward, made of linnen, and therefore the ſame word uſed but once more onely in all the Bible, viz. Iſa. 3.22. is by Jerome rendred linteamina; the Sept. here render it περιζώμα; it was moſt probably her apron, in which it is not unuſuall for a woman to carry things. Lyra. For ſix meaſures of barley, Hebr. it is ſix barleys, as Lyra rightly obſerveth, ſo that it is uncertaine what meaſures they were, but that they were very ſmall, appeareth, becauſe ſhee was able to carry them all away together. R. Solomon. By theſe ſix, ſaith R. Solomon, were ſet forth the ſix bleſſings upon the Meſſiah, that ſhould come of her, which are reckoned up Iſa. 11.1. The ſpirit of wiſdome and counſell, &c. The Chald. Paraph. for ſix meaſures, hath 6 ſata, which make two Ephaes; the Tygurin Interpreters have ſix Ephaes, both which are moſt improbable, ſith that neither her apron could hold the leaſt of theſe quantities, being two buſhels at the leaſt, neither could ſhe carry it.

The Myſtery. Lyra. Hugo Card. Myſtically Booz his winnowing of barley at the threſhing floor ſetteth forth Chriſts living and preaching amongſt the Jews, for he is ſaid to have his fanne in his hand, and throughly to purge his floor, after which he did eat and drink at his laſt Supper with his Diſciples, as Booz with his ſervants, and then laid him downe to ſleep the ſleep of death, when hee was crucified. By Ruth waſhing her and anointing and cloathing her in the beſt manner, the Church of the Gentiles waſhing by repentance, anointed with grace, and cloathed with righteous acts, coming to Chriſt after his death, for they received not the Faith before; and then uncovering the place of his feet, by looking into the myſtery of his Incarnation, ſhe lyeth down by conſtant meditating hereupon, and is comforted in her thus doing, and bidden to continue thus doing, till the morning of the reſurrection, the Lord promiſing then unto her marriage in heaven, by her ſo much deſired, before the light of which morning, before one could yet ſee another, he meaſureth unto her 6 ſingular gifts, reckoned up Iſa. 11.1.

CHAP. IV.

V.1. THen went Booz up to the gate, and ſate down there, and behold the kinſman of whom Booz ſpake, came by; and he ſaid, O ſuch an one turn aſide and ſit downe here, &c. The gate was the place of Judgement, as hath been noted before, and therefore to this place Booz now commeth to treat before the Elders of the City about the

Deut. 25,27. redeeming of Elimelechs land, and of Ruth his ſons wife together, which thing ought publikely to bee done, as many acts betwixt private men are done amongſt us before a Judge or publike Notary for the greater aſſurance. And here Booz ſate downe, becauſe hee was one of the Elders, and ſo happily was that other kinſman, and therefore he ſitteth down alſo. For his comming by at this time, it ſeemeth plainly to have been accidentall, hee peradventure going through the gate of the City about ſome other buſineſſe. For theſe words, Vatablus. O ſuch an one, whereby Booz calleth him, Hebr. פו פלוני אלמני which are words, as Vatablus hath it, that ſignifie nothing, but are put for the name of the man, whoſe name is not expreſſed, and therefore they are not the words which Booz uſed, for hee certainly knew his name, and called him by it, but the writer of this Book either not knowing it, or not willing to ſet it down, expreſſed it by theſe common words; as the Lawyers put caſes by the names of John a Stiles, or John a Nokes. They being ſet there together, and other Elders of the City alſo comming together by this time, to the number of ten, hee propoundeth the matter to this kinſman before them, thus; Naomi who came out of
V. 3. the Countrey of Moab, ſelleth a parcell of Land which was our brother Elimelechs;
and I thought to advertiſe thee thereof, that thou mighteſt buy it before the Elders
V. 4. *of my people; and if thou wilt redeem it, redeem it, and if not, tell me, that I may know;
for there is none to redeem it but thou, and I am after thee, &c.* In ſaying, Naomi ſelleth, he meaneth, ſhe is about to ſell, that is, having an eſtate in her husband Elimelechs land during life, after which it was to go to the next kinſman, ſhe is now willing to ſell her time away, being grown poore, and not being able to ſtock or occupy it, or to ſtay till another year to reap fruit of it: In which caſe the neareſt kinſman was to have the firſt offer, and if hee refuſed to buy it, then the next to him might, and if no kinſman, then it might bee ſold to any other Levit. 25. man till the year of Jubilee, at what time it was to return to that family again.
Toſtatus. Toſtatus, becauſe Hebr. it is a preterperfect tenſe, hath ſold, gathereth, that Naomi had already ſold it, and therefore Booz advertiſing this kinſman to buy it, meaneth to redeem it from him that had already bought it. But this cannot be gathered from the tenſe, becauſe the enallage of the tenſe is uſuall amongſt Bonfrerius. the Hebrews, ſaith Bonfrerius; or theſe words, ſhe hath ſold, may admit of this expoſition, ſhe hath ſet to ſale, becauſe ſhe could not ſell to any other except the kindred firſt refuſed; but by what law ſuch a ſale is forbidden, I cannot finde, but onely that if it be ſold to another, the kinſman hath liberty to redeem it, Levit. 25. 25. And therefore were it not for the words following, v. 5. What day thou buyeſt it of the hand of Naomi, thou muſt buy it of Ruth alſo; I ſhould have concluded with Toſtatus, but ſeeing theſe words make it plaine that it was yet to be bought of Ruth and Naomi, I underſtand the preterperfect tenſe here, as the preſent, for which it is often put, becauſe the Hebrews have no preſent. Naomi ſelleth, or is now upon ſelling.

V. 4, 5, 6. The kinſman hearing the Land propounded, ſaid, he would buy it, but then Booz telling him of Ruth, whoſe name hee had hitherto purpoſely concealed, ſaying, that hee muſt together take her to wife, to raiſe up ſeed unto his dead brother, her former husband; he ſaid he could not redeem it, leſt hee ſhould marre his own inheritance. For the better underſtanding of which, it is to be Deut. 25. 5. known, that if one brother dyed without iſſue, the next unto him muſt take his wife, and raiſe up ſeed unto his brother; and the firſt born ſpringing from this marriage, was to be counted the dead mans ſon, and to enjoy his inheritance; and if the man marrying a brothers wife ſhould never have any more ſons, he muſt carry both the inheritance of his legal father, and of his naturall father alſo; and thus his naturall father ſhould have his name quite put out, ſeeing he was not reputed his ſon, neither was called by his name, but by the name of his mothers former husband. And hereupon it is that this kinſman refuſeth Ruth, becauſe as it ſeemeth, having yet no children, hee might bee in danger of loſing his inheritance, the ſon of another carrying it away, and by this meanes to have his name put out alſo. The like danger to which was not to Booz, becauſe hee being ancient, happily had other ſons before by other wives.

wives. Yet upon any occaſion it was a fault in the next brother to refuſe to take his brothers wife being childleſſe, becauſe it was againſt Gods law, and he that refuſed, if the woman required him, was publikely to have this diſgrace by her done unto him, viz. to have his ſhooe pluckt off, and to be ſpitted in the face. But the fault of this kinſman was not ſo great, becauſe Ruth required not him but Booz, and therefore he refuſing her was not ſo ſerved, but onely it is ſaid, This was the manner in former time in Iſrael, concerning redeeming and changing, V.7. to confirme all things, a man plucked off his ſhooe, and gave it to his neighbour, and this was a teſtimony in Iſrael, viz. that he had given up his right unto him; ſo the kinſman V.8. drew off his ſhooe and gave it to Booz, as is to bee underſtood. Joſephus there- Ioſephus Antiq; fore erroneouſly relateth this hiſtory, when hee ſaith, that Ruth plucked off his ſhooe, and ſpat in his face; for there was a peculiar law for that made by God, Deut. 25. and it was not to confirm or paſſe away any thing to another Man, but onely in a ſingular caſe of a brother refuſing to take his brothers wife to raiſe up ſeed unto him, whereas the plucking off here mentioned was upon a cuſtom, and no law in every paſſing away of a mans right to another in any thing. This was an ancient cuſtom, and it ſeems was ſtil uſed, but afterwards left, which made Joſephus, being ignorant hereof, as is likely, ſo to erre. And it ſeemeth to have been a fit ſymbole or ſigne of a mans giving up his right to another, becauſe in taking poſſeſſion, hee goeth and ſetteth his foot upon the poſſeſſion, Poſſeſſio being quaſi pedum poſitio; and therefore by treading under foot, having dominion over is commonly ſet forth, Pſal. 110. 1. Deut. 33. ult. Luke 10. 9. and contrarywiſe to pluck off the ſhooe, and to give it to his neighbour, was an apt ſymbole of diſpoſſeſſing himſelfe, that hee might take poſſeſſion. Quinquarboreus for ſhooe, hath glove, becauſe the Chaldee rendreth it by Quinquarboreus נרתק a glove, but the Rabbins ſometime expound that word by ſheath, or caſe containing any thing, and ſo it may bee a ſhooe as well as a glove, and the Hebrew word נעל is every where rendred a ſhooe.

Booz then calleth the Elders and people to witneſſe, that he had bought the V. 9, 10. land of Elimelech, Mahlon, and Chilion, and Ruth Mahlons wife to bee his wife, that is, he had now right to buy it of the hand of Naomi, and to hold the poſſeſſion untill an heire ſhould be born of Ruth to enjoy it afterwards. Whereas it may ſeem that Booz did not take Ruth to wife, as he pretended, viz. to preſerve the name of Mahlon, and that his name might not bee put out in Iſrael, becauſe Obed that came of this marriage, is not called by Mahlon, but by Booz in the genealogies. I anſwer, this doth not prove that hee intended it not, but becauſe hee was a mighty man of wealth, Mahlons name, by whom the childe might at the firſt be called, was ſoon drowned by his name; and it may bee alſo that the genealogy was thus ſet forth to grace Booz for his piety, by putting him into the holy line, and thus alſo it is beſt underſtood, whoſe naturall ſon Jeſus was, and how he came of Judah according to Gen. 49. 10.

Then all the people and the Elders bleſſed Booz, and prayed, that Ruth might V. 11. build up his houſe, as Rachel and Leah did Iſrael's; and that his houſe might be V. 12. like the houſe of Pharez, which Pharez was born by Thamar to Judah, and of whom Booz came. They mention Rachel and Leah in bleſſing, becauſe they were moſt fruitfull, and by bearing many children they built up the houſe of Iſrael; whereas their maids Zilpah and Bilhah were fruitfull alſo, they are not yet ſpoken of, becauſe they were ſervants, and their children were counted to their Miſtreſſes. Sarah and Rebekah were not ſo fruitfull, and therefore paſſing them over, they mention theſe. And Rachel is placed before Leah, becauſe ſhee by Lyra. right was Iſrael's firſt wife. And of Pharez mention is made, becauſe from him the line of David is begun, by whom hee was made famous, ſo Lyra. And hee was alſo famous for the numeroſity and principallity of his children, amongſt Numb. 2. 3. their brethren of the tribe of Judah; and becauſe hee was the founder of the people of Bethlehem, otherwiſe called Ephrata, whereby the blemiſh was done away, that was by the inceſtuous copulation of Judah with Thamar, whereof Pharez came. Doe thou worthily in Ephrata, and bee famous in Bethlehem; the vulg. Latine, ut ſit exemplum virtutis in Ephrata, & habeat celebre nomen in Bethlehem; referring it to Ruth, the Chald. Sept. and Tygurine agree with ours, referring it to Booz, in the ſecond perſon, and ſo goeth the Hebrew text.

V.13. Then Booz tooke Ruth to wife, and ſhee bare him a ſon, by whom the neighbors comforted Naomi, and called his name Obed. And here the Lord is ſaid to have given Ruth conception, becauſe ſhe was marryed to an old man, and yet concei-Lyra. ved with childe ſo ſoon, whereas before being married to a young man Mahlon, ſhee conceived not all the time that he lived with her, ſo that this was a ſingular V.16. gular act of Gods bleſſing. And Naomi became nurſe unto it, that is, dry-nurſe, for otherwiſe ſhe could not nurſe it by giving it ſuck; the Vulg. Latine to expreſſe this, hath nutricis & gerulæ fungebatur officio. But how did the women her neighbours ſay unto her, that Ruth was better to her then ſeven ſons? Anſw.
A certain number is put for an uncertaine, ſeven for many, and in bearing this ſon, which might be a cheriſher of her in her old age, ſeeing he was like to bee wealthy enough, comming of ſuch a father; Ruth was better to her then many V.17. ny ſons, if ſhe had had them by Elimelech, who was poore. And they called his name Obed, that is, ſerving or miniſtring, becauſe he ſhould miniſter unto Naomi of his ſubſtance.

V.18. Now theſe are the generations of Pharez. &c. From henceforth to the end is the genealogy of David from Pharez, to prepare to his Hiſtory following in the next Book.

The Myſtery. Lyra. Hugo Cardin. Myſtically, by Booz going up to the gate, and ſitting there, both Lyra and Hugo underſtand Chriſt conceived in the Virgins womb, which was myſtically ſet forth by the gate of the Temple, Ezek. 44.2. by which it is ſaid no man ſhould enter, becauſe the Lord had come in by it, but it ſhould bee ſhut up as the wombe of the Virgin Mary; by the kinſman that came by, John the Baptiſt, who was before him, and whom he cauſed, as it were, to ſit down by him, when he had familiar conference with him, but he diſclaimed being Bridegroome to Ruth, the Church; he was not worthy to unlooſe the latchet of Chriſts ſhooe, but hee looſeth his own, and giveth it him, when as hee openeth the myſtery of the faith in him, and giveth way unto him, and willeth him to take the Bride, when as he ſought by praiſing him, as the Bridegroom, to draw all men unto him. So Chriſt tooke the Church, and begat Obed, that is, a faithfull people of the Gentiles, obſerving and obeying the Lord. And Naomi was nurſe, that is, the ancient Church of the Jewes, which now can have no children of her own, yet ſhe nouriſheth up the Church of the Gentiles, when as by the holy Scriptures by her ſet forth and preſerved, this Church is confirmed in the faith, and excited to a vertuous and holy life.

A
COMMENTARY
UPON THE FIRST BOOKE
OF SAMUEL.

PREFACE.

THE two Bookes of Samuel and of the Kings are called foure books of the Kings by the Latines; but by the Hebrews they are divided onely into two, Samnel and Malachim, or Kings, ſaith Hugo, as they muſt needs be to make but 22 Books of Canonicall Scripture in the Old Teſtament, as hath been ſhewed in the entrance of Joſhua. Yet Jerom in his Prologue upon this Book, ſaith, that ſome diſtinguiſh the Old Teſtament into 24 Bookes, holding Ruth to be a Book by it ſelfe, and the Lamentation of Jeremiah, reckoning them amongſt the Hagiographa; which number of 24 was ſet forth by the 24 Elders, Rev. 4. 10. For the Author of theſe two Books of Samuel, it is generally held that he wrote them unto that place where his death is deſcribed; and from thence that which followeth, was ſupplyed as ſome thinke, by Gad or Nathan, ſome by Hezekiah and Ezra. Hugo following the Ord. Gloſſe, ſaith, that the hiſtory after Samuels death, was written by David till the end of his time, then by Solomon and other Kings, or by their appointment, ſucceſſively for their times; and that Ieremiah brought Samnel and Kings into one continued hiſtory, which appeareth, becauſe his propheſie endeth as theſe Bookes. The hiſtory here, and in the two Bookes of the Kings, ſet forth from Eli to the laſt Babyloniſh captivity, is of 570 yeares. How Eli came to be Judge, is not ſaid, but it is moſt probable, that after Samſon there was none other Judge extraordinarily ſtirred up, and ſo the forme of government was by an Ariſtocracy, that is, the Councell of Lxx, above all which the High-prieſt being for his time, executed the office of a Judge or ſupreme Magiſtrate, 1 Sam. 4. 18. and thus Eli at this time Judged Iſrael. For the drift of this Hiſtory, it is, as of the Book of Judges, to ſhew how the promiſes and threatenings of the Law tooke effect, the Judges, and Kings, and people that tranſgreſſed being grievouſly puniſhed, and thoſe that kept the

Hugo Card.

Hieron. in prologo.

Peter Martyr.

the law, graciouſly preſerved and made famous by wonderfull victories over their enemies, that wee by theſe examples might bee warned againſt evill Origen Hom. 1. in Iudic. and excited to well doing. Moreover, as Origen noteth, the temporall deli-verances of Gods people from many dangers and miſeries in theſe Bookes recorded, doe give us occaſion to conſider of a greater deliverance wrought for us by Chriſt, and to [illegible] upon our happie [illegible], ſeeing this is the ſcope both of the law and prophets to bring us to Chriſt. And the captivities and miſeries of the Kings and people ſinning ſerve to put us in minde of a farre more grievous miſery to come in hell fire for ever, and ſo to make us Eccleſ. Hiſtoria flee from ſinne. The Bookes of Samuel, ſaith Comeſtor, have their name from the writer, and thoſe of the Kings from the matter in them handled. And becauſe the hiſtory of Samuels birth, life and geſtes take up a great part of this Booke, it is begun with his parents, and with their commendations.

CHAP. I.

V. 1. THere was a certaine man of Ramathaim Zophim of Mount Ephraim, whoſe
V. 2. name was Elkanah, the ſonne of Jeroham, the ſonne of Elihu, the ſonne of Tohu, the ſonne of Zuph an Ephrathite. And hee had two wives, the name of the one was Lyra. Hannah, the name of the other Peninnah, &c. This Booke, ſaith Lyra, beginneth with the hiſtory of Judges Eli and Samuel, that we might ſee the firſt occa-ſion of altering the government from Iudges to Kings. The ſonnes of Eli were wicked, 1 Sam. 2. 12. and ſo were the ſonnes of Samuel, 1 Sam. 8. 1, 2, 3. which made the people weary of their government, and ſo to deſire a King to be ſet over them, of the difference betwixt whom and a Judge enough hath beene already ſpoken in the entrance of the booke of Iudges. Of the Kings both here and in the two Bookes of Kings ſome were ſet up by God, viz.
the godly, and ſome by his permiſſion, viz. the wicked, for none ever attaine to this high dignity, but by God, Prov. 8. 15. and in the hiſtory of theſe two laſt Judges, and of Kings good and evill, both Samuel, Kings and Hugo Card. Chronicles are ſpent. Theſe Bookes of Kings, ſaith Hugo, do well follow the 1 Cor. 11. 31. Iudges, becauſe after judging our ſelves followeth the eternall Kingdom. Firſt is Geneſis ſetting forth the fall of man into ſinne, and his going downe into Egypt, and his afflictions there, to ſhew, that miſery followeth ſinne. 2. Exodus, ſhewing his bringing out of Egypt. 3. Leviticus ſhewing his inſtruction in divine Ordinances. 4. Numbers, ſhewing his temptations by enemies for the better arming of him. 5. Deuteronomie, his confirming by the recapitulation of the law. 6. Ioſhua ſhewing his bringing into the promiſed land.
7. Iudges, ſhewing, that when men abuſe the benefits beſtowed upon them, they ſhall be puniſhed therefore. 8. Kings, to ſhew, that after judgement, and reformation hereby, the everlaſting Kingdome of heaven ſhall follow, to which the number of 8. doth aptly agree. To returne now to Elkanah. Hee is ſaid to be of Ramathaim Zophim, the firſt of which words is of the duall number to ſhew that there were two Cities called Ramath, or that Ramath was divided into two, ſo Iunius; Comeſtor ſaith, that Ramathaim was Arimathea by Ioſephus called Ramath, and v. 19. it is Ramah, and Zophim is added either to ſhew, that they ſtood upon two high places, as it were looking one upon a-Lyra. nother, for צפה of which Zophim cometh, ſignifieth to behold, or that from hence a watchman might ſee afarre off, or that here Prophets dwelt, who are called ſeers or watchmen, and this laſt is followed by the Hebrews. The Chaldee Paraphraſt hence gathereth that Samuel came of the Prophets, and ſo doth Ben. Gerſon, and it is not improbable, becauſe Elkanah, the father of Samuel came of Chore, 1 Chron. 6. 22. 27. and his race did miniſter before the Lord by muſicke, v. 33. and ſome of them by the Spirit of Propheſie Peter Martyr. indited ſome of the Pſalmes, as their titles doe declare: ſo Peter Martyr, who alſo conjectureth, that from Zuph, one of Elkanah his progenitors here named, and the eldeſt, theſe Prophets had this name of Zophim, whereby
the

the Cities of Ramathaim are ſet forth, Comeſtor ſaith that E*lkanah* was the 19 from Caath comming of Iſſuah, and Chore, Ch. 9. 5. wee read of the land of Zuph from whence Iunius thinketh that Zophim cometh, as if it had beene ſaid Ramah in the land of Zuph; which tooke the name from Zuph, the firſt in E*lkanah* his pedegree. Zuph is called an E*phrathite*, becauſe hee and his poſterity lived amongſt the Ephraimites, as being a Levite hee might well doe, becauſe the Levites were diſperſed throughout all the Tribes, to teach the people in all places, and the Kohathites had Cities in E*phraim*, Ioſh. 21. 20. There are two other reaſons of the name E*phrathite*, 1. Hee was ſo called, that was an inhabitant of E*phrata* or Bethlehem, or that was borne there. 2. He might be ſo called, ſaith Ierom, becauſe his mother was of E*phrata*. But neither of theſe wayes, ſaith P. Martyr, could Zuph or E*lkanah*, bee called an E*phrathite*; not the firſt, becauſe Ephrata, or Bethlehem was in Judah, and he came not of Judah, but of Levi: nor the ſecond, becauſe a man never had his name from his mother, unleſſe it were in caſe that ſhee had the inheritance of her father. That hee was called an E*phrathite* becauſe hee dwelt in Mount E*phraim*, holdeth alſo Lyra, and Junius, and Hugo ſaith, that an E*phrathite* might bee put for E*phraite*, as the men of Ephraim were called Judges 12. 5. or hee might be called an E*phrathite*, as Rabanus hath it, from E*phrata*, the wife of Caleb, who bare E*lkanah*, yet ſaith Hugo ſome hold, that ſhee was the ſiſter of Moſes. But to let this paſſe, as already confuted. Judg. 12. 5. maketh it plaine, how hee might be called an E*phrathite* from the place of his dwelling: for when Iephthah his men would know the men of Ephraim from themſelves, they asked each one, as hee fell into their hands, Art thou an E*phrathite*, ſo that it was uſuall to call him, that dwelt in E*phraim*, an E*phrathite*: Whereas Comeſtor, an E*phrathite* of E*phraim* was diſtinguiſht from one of E*phrata*, becauſe the one was written with ſ, the other with ph. in Hebr. they are both alike written with פ ſee the places. Whereas the genealogy of E*lkanah* here drawne may ſeeme to bee taxed by St. Paul, forbidding the ſtudy of genealogies, Paul Martyr anſwereth the ſtudy of genealogies taxed by was that, which was vaine, and without any profitable uſe onely for vaine-glory: but of this genealogy drawing there is good uſe, for knowing now, that Samuel came of Chorah a Levite, and yet a moſt wicked man, who periſhed by a ſtrange judgement in his wickedneſſe, we learne 1. that the bleſſing of Levi by Moſes, Deut. 33. Hee ſhall teach Iacob thy laws, &c. was not vaine, for Samuel a Levite was eminent for this. 2. That children do not alwayes ſuffer for the iniquity of their fathers Ezek. 18. for Samuel, that came of ſo bad a father, was never the leſſe famous, and gracious with God.

Hieron. de tradit Hebr.

Junius.
Hugo Car.
Rabanus.

P. Martyr.

Note.

V. 2. Hee had two wives, becauſe one was barren, ſaith Lyra, hee tooke another: but Hugo, that this was by diſpenſation of the Spirit of God, wherefore he ſinned not herein, as did Lamech, Gen. 4. who tooke two for luſt. And this was not the caſe of E*lkanah* alone, but of Abraham, Iacob, David, &c. Who were never reproved for having more wives, and therefore moſt probably diſpenſed with for the increaſe of poſterity, as that time required, whilſt the people of God were contained within one family. For even Iehojadah, the High-Prieſt tooke unto Ioaſh the King two wives, 2 Chron. 24. 3. but now the caſe and times being altered under the Goſpell it is altogether unlawfull as Peter Martyr ſheweth at large in 1 Sam. 45. 34. and as I have touched before, upon Gen. 4.

Lyra.
Hugo Cardin.

P. Martyr.

V. 3. And this man went up yearely to worſhip and to ſacrifice to the Lord God of hoſtes in Shiloh, &c. Hereby his piety appeared, for the Lord had appointed, that every male ſhould appeare before the Lord yearly 3. times, at the Feaſt of the Paſſeover, Pentecoſt, and the Feaſt of Tabernacles, E*xod.* 23. 17. the reaſons whereof ſee there. Now E*lkanah* his comming up yearly is to bee underſtood according to this law, of his comming up 3. times in the yeare, and becauſe none muſt now appeare empty, hee brought his offerings for ſacrifice, and the place to which hee came, was Shiloh, becauſe there was the Tabernacle ever ſince that it was ſet up there. Ioſh. 18. 1. For this word yearly, the Vulgar

Hugo Cardin. Lyra. Vatablus. Qu. P. Martyr. Rabbini. Auguſt. Peter Martyr.

gar Latin hath, ſtatutis temporibus, whereby Hugo underſtandeth the three Feaſts times before ſpoken of; ſo likewiſe Comeſtor. But Lyra ſaith it is uncertaine by the Text, whether hee went up ſo often, or once onely in the yeare to the paſſeover, becauſe they that dwelt farre off, were ſpared from comming the other two times, or upon ſome other reaſonable cauſe, and this hee laboureth to prove touching Elkanah from v. 7. where he is ſaid to have done ſo yeare by yeare, Hebr. it is מימים ימימה miiamim jamimah, by Kimbi expounded, from yeare to yeare, as the words are plainly v. 7. ſo that his going up cannot bee proved indeed by the Text to have beene any more then once in the yeare: but becauſe Elkanah was a godly man, and therefore doubtleſſe obſerved the ordinances of the Lord in every thing, I doubt not but hee went up three times yearly, and one is onely mentioned, when his wives alſo went with him, as they were not injoyned to doe, becauſe women had many neceſſary impediments, but yet did out of piety moſt commonly, as other women alſo did in all parts of the land. Whereas Lyra ſaith, that they which dwelt farre off, needed not to come up any more then once in the yeare, it is neither true except they dwelt out of the land as hath beene already ſhewed upon Ruth 1. 6. and if it were, yet this concerned not Elkanah who dwelt neare enough to Shiloh. If it be demanded, how Elkanah being a Levite could bee ſaid to come up at times, when as the Levites were continually to ſerve about the Tabernacle? P. Martyr anſwereth, 1. That his time of ſerving might now be expired, hee being paſt 50. according to the Law, Numb. 8.25. 2. That all the Levites did not ſerve about the Tabernacle, but were diſperſed amongſt the Tribes to teach the people in all places, and to judge of cauſes: which laſt onely I ſubſcribe to, but not to the firſt, becauſe it is expreſly ſaid, Numb. 8. 26. even after 50. they ſhould miniſter with their Brethren in the Tabernacle to keepe the charge &c. Yet, as Toſtatus noteth, it is likely, that hee came oftner to the Tabernacle to ſerve there, as was the duty of a Levite. For his going up to Shiloh hee alſo queſtioneth how this could bee ſpoken, ſeeing Ramathaim was an high place; and anſwereth that hee went downe firſt by lower grounds, and then aſcended againe, to pray and to ſacrifice, or to worſhip and to ſacrifice, by the firſt the low proſtration of the body being intimated in prayer, from whence the Rabbins obſerve prayer to bee the chiefe, and more excellent then ſacrifice, becauſe it is firſt named; and before wee come to receive the Lords Body, ſaith Auguſt. we ſhould worſhip and fall downe before him in prayer. Thus P. Martyr, whoſe words are, Fideles antequam Chriſti corpus fide & ſpiritu percipiant, illud pro ſe affixum cruci & mortuum ſupplices adorant, atq; ita ejus adoratio ritum communionis antecedit, whereby adoring of his body is not to be underſtood that Papiſticall adoring of the Hoaſt, as they call it, in the forme of bread, but of him in his humanity, although abaſed to the death of the croſſe. But this of worſhipping of the ſacrifice before the offering of it is but ill inferred hence, ſeeing Elkanah is not to bee underſtood to have adored his ſacrifice, but God firſt, and then to have ſacrificed: for it is להשתחות ולזבח ל יהוה to bow himſelfe and to ſacrifice to the Lord.

V.4. Schol. Hiſtor. Levit. 3. & 7. 19. Lyra. Peter Martyr. Auguſt. Tract. 26. in Iohan.

And when the time was, that Elkanah offered, hee gave to Peninnah his wife and to all her ſonnes and daughters portions: that is, not to each one new apparell, as ſome, ſaith Comeſtor, expound it, but parts of ſacrifice, which hee offered, for it being a peace-offering part was to bee burnt upon the Altar, part went to the Prieſt, and the reſt to the offerer to feaſt withall, that is, all, but the fat and kidneys, which were for ſacrifice, and the wave breſt and right ſhoulder, which were the Prieſts, the reſt then Elkanah had now unto himſelfe and gave portions hereof to his wife and children to feed upon. The times of bringing theſe ſacrifices then were times of feaſting and rejoicing before the Lord, and the meat which now they did eate, was holy and figured out the fleſh of Chriſt unto them, ſo that they looked not onely at the meat, which they ate but at Chriſt to come, of whom they did partake by faith. Therefore ſaith Peter Martyr, Auguſtine ſheweth the ſame thing to have beene propounded in their ſacrifices, and in ours, onely a diverſity was in the ſignes; and this is according to the Apoſtle, 1 *Cor.*10. They did all eate of the ſame ſpirituall meat, &c. that is, not as the Papiſts object, they ate of the ſame ſpirituall meat amongſt themſelves, for then his argument had been of no force, but the ſame, that we eate of by faith, although hee had not then taken fleſh, for to faith hee was ſlaine from the beginning of the world, and therefore had fleſh alwayes to feed the faithfull withall: Wherefore Auguſtine ſaith, our ſacrifice and theirs were the ſame in reſpect of the matter, and they differed onely in circumſtances, ours being yet in vertue greater, in profit better, in act more eaſie, and in number fewer. If it be demanded how he ſaith, in vertue greater, if they received Chriſts body as well as we? P. Martyr anſwereth, becauſe to us things are made more manifeſt, as being plainly taught; whereas to them, they were taught but obſcurely and darkly ſet forth by figures; ſo that we may have a more firme faith in Chriſt then they could, if we ſpeake of the generall ſtate of the Church in thoſe dayes; although it is not to bee doubted but that Abraham, David, and others, that had revelations from God, excelled even the beſt in theſe times in faith.

Revel.

Aug. contr. Fauſtum, l. 29. c. 12. Virtute majora, utilitate meliora, actu faciliora, numero pauciora.

V. 5. But to Hannah hee gave a worthy portion, for hee loved her, but the Lord had ſhut up her wombe: the Vulg. Latine, he being ſad, gave to Hannah a part; Hebr. מנה-אחת אפים one part of faces, that is, according to Ben Gerſon, an excellent part, conſiſting of fat on the one ſide, and leane on the other. Pagninus ſaith, either it may be underſtood, he gave it her falling upon his face, and praying for her in reſpect of her barrenneſſe: Or, becauſe אפ ſignifieth alſo anger, it may be underſtood thus, hee gave it her being angry or ſad, becauſe ſhe was upbraided continually at theſe times by her adverſary Peninnah; or he being angry becauſe ſhe was no more chearly at theſe feſtivall times gave it her. I ſubſcribe to the firſt, he gave her a goodly portion, that look'd better then any of the reſt; and ſo the reaſon added holdeth beſt, for hee loved her, that is, he loved her moſt, as Jacob did Rachel; thus alſo the Chaldee Paraphraſt, and Toſtatus, Jerome, and Cajetan. But the Lord had ſhut up her wombe; hereby is ſhewed, that barrenneſſe and fruitfulneſſe come not onely by ſecondary cauſes, but according to the good pleaſure of God. This Jacob acknowledged before in Rachel, and it is ſaid expreſſely, that God had ſhut up all the wombs in Abimelechs Court, and that they were healed by the prayers of Abraham.

R.L. Ben Gerſon
Pagninus.

Gen. 30. 2.
Gen. 20.

V. 6. And her adverſary provoked her ſore, &c. that is, upbraided her by her barrenneſſe, which in thoſe dayes amongſt the people of God was reproachfull:
1 Becauſe it was againſt that precept at the beginning, Increaſe and multiply.
2 Becauſe as a bleſſing it was promiſed to Abraham, that his poſterity ſhould bee multiplyed as the ſtars of heaven; and therefore to be barren was thought to be a curſe. 3 Becauſe every one deſired that the Meſſiah might come of her poſterity. 4 Becauſe the Iſraelites were then the onely peculiar people of God, and to increaſe the number of them was by all greatly deſired. It was alſo reproachfull amongſt the Heathen; for a certain Lacedemonian an old man a batchelor, as he paſſed by one, he roſe not up unto him, and being asked the reaſon, ſeeing age was there thus reverenced, he ſaid, thou haſt no childe which may riſe up to me when I am old. And amongſt the Romans, there were divers immunities granted to them that had many children, ſo P. Martyr. But this was ſo onely during the time that God led his people by outward bleſſings, but now it is an honour not to marry, and to be without children, ſo that it be for the kingdome of heaven; neither are the marryed pronounced bleſſed for having children, but for that their names are written in heaven; yet for the increaſe of Gods Church, to have children, is a thing deſirable in them, and matter of joy.

P. Martyr.

V. 7. Howſoever Peninnah ought not to have been proud of her own fruitfulneſſe, as it ſeemeth ſhe was, nor to have upbraided Hannah by her barrenneſſe, as ſhee did, eſpecially at a feſtivall time, which was a time of rejoycing together before the Lord; for it is ſaid, ſhee dealt thus by her from yeare to yeare, when ſhee came up to the houſe of the Lord. Some, ſaith Pet. Martyr, by Peninnahs provoking of her, underſtand her urging of her to pray to God, who onely hath power to make a woman fruitfull. But this is moſt improbable, becauſe to have good counſell given her, would not have made her vexe and weep, and to ſit and eate nothing for ſorrow, as it is ſaid ſhee did. Elkanah againſt her

V. 8. reproaches, comforteth Hannah, ſaying, Am not I better to thee then ten ſons? that Lyra. is, ſaith Lyra, following the Hebrews, then the ten ſons of Peninnah are to her, that is, maiſt thou not have more comfort of mee, and of my great love, then ſhee can have of all her children, ſeeing ſhee is not ſo greatly beloved of mee.
But others hee ſaith, underſtand it thus, Am not I better to thee, then if thou hadſt ten ſons? but this ſtandeth not with ſo good reaſon, becauſe if ſhe had had many children by Elkanah, his love would ſtill have been greater, rather then leſſe towards her, with whom I likewiſe hold.

V. 9. And Hannah roſe up after they had eaten and drunke, &c. Junius, after hee had eaten: the Sept. after they had eaten, which is thus rendred, leſt there ſhould ſeeme to bee a contradiction in this verſe, to that v. 7. ſhee ate nothing; Hebr.
Hugo Cardin. it is אחרי אחלה after eating, and after drinking, as Hugo hath well noted here, who yet followeth the Vulg. Latine, wherein it is ſo, after ſhee had eaten and drunke; and to reconcile it with the words before-going, ſhee ate nothing, hee ſaith, ſhee ate ſo little, as that it was counted as nothing; but hee finally fleeth to the Hebrew, after eating, that is, the time of others eating in that holy Feaſt ended: So that from theſe words it cannot bee inferred that now ſhee Peter Martyr. had eaten ought. And it is to be held, ſaith Peter Martyr, that ſhee had at this Feaſt according to the words before-going, eaten nothing, becauſe being ſad and grieved, if ſhee had eaten, ſhee had offended againſt that precept, Deut. 12.
7. There yee ſhall eate before the Lord, and rejoice; and this is Aarons meaning, Levit. 10. 19. when Moſes reproving him, becauſe hee had not eaten of the goat after the death of his two ſons, hee ſaid, If I had eaten to day, ſhould I have been accepted? that is, being ſad and grieved. 2 Becauſe, v. 15. ſhe ſaith, that ſhee had drunke neither wine nor ſtrong drinke, and v. 18. after that ſhee had prayed and been comforted by Eli, ſhee is ſaid to have put away her ſadneſſe, and to have eaten; thus alſo Ben Gerſon holdeth, although David Kimbi be of a contrary minde, holding that ſhee ate a little. Faſting then as ſhee was, ſhe roſe up and went to pray unto God, that he would take away this
V. 10. her reproach. She was in bitterneſſe of ſoul, and prayed to the Lord, and wept ſore; and it is noted, v. 9. that Eli the High-prieſt ſate by upon a ſeat by a poſt of Note. the Temple. As Hannah did in her diſtreſſe, when ſhee was reproached by Peninnah, not render reproaches for reproaches, but betooke her ſelfe to prayer, ſo ought all both women and men to doe, as David ſaith, *They requited
mee with hatred for my good will, but I gave my ſelfe unto prayer*: ſo Sarah, Gen.
16. 5. when ſhee was deſpiſed by Hagar, ſaid, The Lord judge between mee and Lyra. thee. For the ſeat where Eli ſate, Lyra ſaith, that it was an honourable ſeate for the High-prieſt, where he uſed to ſit and judge the people; but the Hebrewes, hee ſaith, hold, that now hee firſt ſate upon it, and was made Judge, which cannot bee, becauſe he judged Iſrael 40 yeares, and Samuel was borne ſoone after this, but Eli was very aged, Chap. 2. 22, and Samuel is ſaid to bee a childe, Chap. 3. 1. That opinion of the Hebrews, howſoever I thinke it unworthy to bee received, as being without all ground, yet the arguing of Lyra againſt it, is of little force, becauſe although Eli was very aged, when Samuel was yet called puer, a childe, it doth not hence follow, that hee could not ſit 40 yeares Judge from about the time of his birth: for the word נער rendred childe, doth alſo ſignifie a ſervant, or one that miniſtreth, although of a middle 1 Sam. 8. 1. age, and Samuel could not bee much leſſe then 40 when Eli dyed, becauſe hee and Samuel judged Iſrael 40 yeares, and Samuel is ſaid to be an old man, before that Saul was made King. The ſeat where Eli ſate, was the proper place, ſaith Peter Martyr. Peter Martyr, of the High-prieſt, for on the eaſt, at the entrance of the Temple, was the place for Aaron and his ſonnes, as the Gerſhanites place was weſtward, Numb. 3. 38. the Cohathites ſouthward, and the Merarites northward, who were all the Levites:
Before the entrance of the Tabernacle then ſate Eli, that came of Aar

D Kimhi.

and there about him ſtood the other Prieſts, for, as Kimhi ſaith, none might ſit downe in the court of the Lords houſe, but the High-Prieſt onely, for this was not permitted, no not to Kings. Hee ſate here to inſtruct the people touching the rites and ceremonies of Gods worſhip, and other ordinances of the Law, if any came to inquire of him; and to ſee that none ſhould come to the Tabernacle in their uncleanneſſe: And here in his ſight the people came to pray before the Tabernacle, which was a ſigne of Gods preſence, and therefore Hannah came hither alſo. But to goe to any particular place to make our private prayers wee are not now bound; but in every place wee muſt lift up pure hands unto God: They went to the Tabernacle, becauſe it was a figure of Chriſt; but now Chriſt being come, we goe to the Tabernacle when in his Name we pray, whereſoever we be.

1 Tim. 2.

V. 11.

Peter Martyr.

And ſhee vowed a vow, and ſaid, If thou wilt indeed looke upon the affliction of thy handmaid, and give mee a Man-childe, &c. Peter Martyr moveth two queſtions here; 1 Whether Hannah did well in asking a Man-childe, thus preſcribing to the Lord what kinde of childe ſhee would have. 2 Whether ſhee could vow for her childe.

Qu. 1.

For the firſt, it may ſeem that ſhee did not well in thus asking, becauſe ſhee knew not whether the having of a ſonne would bee good for her, or no, as wee know not whether any outward thing being enjoyed by us, would bee good or evill for us, becauſe it is uncertaine whether wee ſhall uſe it well or ill. And Chryſoſtome ſaith, How may I know, whether I ſhall obtaine that which I aske of God? If I aske nothing againſt his will, nothing unworthy of his majeſty, nothing earthly, but all heavenly and ſpirituall; and in the Lords prayer wee are directed to aske for outward things, onely by a generall petition, Give us this day our daily bread. Plato alſo thinketh it a moſt hard thing to determine particularly, what wee deſire in prayer, and therefore that it is ſafeſt to aske good things onely in generall, according to the prayer of an Heathen man, Give me all things that be good, and keep away all evill from me. Peter Martyr anſwereth, that Hannah without doubt did well in thus praying, becauſe there being two things requiſite in asking any outward thing: 1. That the having of it ſhould not bee our utmoſt end aimed at herein, but the glorifying of God hereby; 2. That wee deſire to uſe it well: they both concurred in her; for ſhee craved not this ſonne for her owne content and pleaſure, but that ſhee might dedicate him to God, to ſerve him continually to his glory. Shee was alſo indued with the Spirit of propheſie, whereby ſhee knew what manner of ſonne ſhe ſhould have. And for our deſiring of any outward thing in particular in prayer, to approve it, he citeth Auguſtine, ſaying, What we may wiſh for, we may pray for, and alſo what God hath promiſed to ſuch as obey him: For thus Moſes prayed for victory over the Amalekites; Abraham, that Iſhmael might live; and Paul to be delivered from danger. Indeed, as our Lord ſaith, We muſt firſt and chiefly ſeek the kingdome of God, and outward things but in a ſecond place.

Chryſoſt. Hom. 8. in 1 Tim.

Plato in Alcibiade.

Aug. Epiſt. ad Probam

Qu. 2.

For the ſecond queſtion, ſhee may ſeem to have vowed this vow raſhly, becauſe ſhe knew not whether her husband would ratifie it, and then it could not ſtand: And againe, ſhe knew not whether her ſon would bee free from blemiſhes, or no, and ſo fit, or unfit to ſerve the Lord in his Sanctuary; or whether he would follow that ſtrict courſe of life, never to drinke wine, &c. or, whether his body would be able to goe without it. But that her husband conſented, appeareth at the leaſt afterwards, v. 22. where he is ſaid to goe to performe his vow, her vow being called his, becauſe hee conſented to it, and v. 23, 24. for without her husbands conſent, the wives vow cannot ſtand; but ſeeing he ſo dearly loved her, and the thing vowed was ſo good, ſhe made no doubt at the time of her vowing, but that ſhe ſhould eaſily prevaile with him to ratifie it. Again, for fitneſſe in every reſpect for this holy ſervice and order, that was neceſſarily to be underſtood, ſo as that if the childe ſhould have proved blemiſhed, or too infirme, the vow had been diſpenſed withall. Laſtly, for her power over her childe, ſhee could admoniſh him what a vow ſhee had made touching him, and perſwade him to keep it, and ſo it was not to bee doubted, but that he in obedience to his parents, would take upon him the vow made for him, as his owne vow. Object. If it bee ſaid, then parents may devote their children to a Monaſticall life in their infancy alſo, and they ſhall be bound hereby. Oſiander. Oſiander anſwereth, that there is not the like reaſon of Nazaritiſme and Monkery: 1 Becauſe this is grounded upon Gods ordinance, Numb.6. that not. 2 There was no great difficulty in keeping this vow, but to keep that, is not in the power of any, ſaving of ſome few to whom it is given. 3 To lead a Monaſticall life is held meritorious, but this not; thus hee: And hereunto we may adde, that a Monaſticall life is not onely not of Gods ordaining, but againſt that precept, 1 Cor. 7. Epheſ. 4.28. Let every one continue in that calling wherein God hath called him; and let him worke with his hands the thing that is good. Object. If it bee ſaid, the ſon of Elkanah being a Levite, was the Lords without vowing to ſerve him, and much more being Hannah her firſt born. Sol. But a Levite, was not to enter into his ſervice till 25. neither was he to ſerve in Nazaritiſme, and his time determined at 50. whereas Hannah voweth her ſon from his childhood even all the dayes of his life. In ſaying, There ſhall no raſour come upon his head; by mentioning one point of Nazaritiſme, ſhe meant the other alſo of drinking of wine, &c. Toſtatus addeth, that other Levites ſerved by courſe, but hee always without intermiſſion, Deut. 18.6. and ſo this of not drinking wine underſtood, conſenteth Joſeph. Philo, Theodoret, and the Sept. adde theſe words, Hee ſhall drink no wine.

Peter Martyr.

Numb. 30.

V.12,13,14. V.15,16. V.17. Eli perceiving H*annahs* lips to move, but hearing no voice come from her, thought ſhe had been drunken, and chargeth her accordingly: But ſhe telleth him, that ſhee had neither drunke wine nor ſtrong drinke, but prayed in her affliction; then E*li* ſaith, Goe in peace, and the God of Iſrael grant thee thy petition. Lyra. Eli, ſaith Lyra, bade her put away her wine, that is, goe away untill the force of it was over, and ſleep, and then come againe and pray. And hee might the rather be moved to thinke that theſe geſtures in her came from wine, P. Martyr. becauſe it was a feſtivall time, ſaith Peter Martyr, and the time of eating and drinking was now paſt; and it is not improbable, but that ſome even at theſe holy feaſts made themſelves drunken with wine, becauſe the like fault is taxed at Love-feaſts, 1 Cor. 11.21. Qu. Whereas ſhee is ſaid to pray in her heart, without uttering a voice, her lips onely moving, he moveth alſo a queſtion, whether the voice may not bee uſed in our ſecret prayers? and anſwereth, there is no need of a voice, becauſe God heareth the deſire of the heart, but ſometimes it is not unprofitable to utter a voice to ſtirre up our ſpirits, that will be ready otherwiſe to languiſh; and if in our earneſtneſſe a voice ſometime breaketh forth, it cannot but be acceptable to God; thus hee: but we muſt have a care, leſt in uſing a loud voice in our private devotions, wee affect not the hearing of men, that they may praiſe us; for this is all one with going into the ſtreets to pray to bee ſeen of men, which is taxed for hypocriſie. Math 6. For her praying thus ſecretly, it was not becauſe ſhee asked any thing diſhoneſt, which ſhe might be aſhamed to utter, as may bee gathered from the ſpeech of Athenodorus, cited by Seneca, that ſome heathen men did, He hath profited well that asketh nothing of God, which hee is not aſhamed publikely to profeſſe. And ſhee is ſaid to continue praying, to intimate a duty to us, if wee would ſpeed of that which wee deſire, wee muſt continue to aske, as the widow of the unjuſt Judge. Luke 18. Often repetitions and much babling indeed is condemned, Math. 6. where the ſpirit and fervency is wanting, a confidence being had in ſuch repetitions, and many words; Note. but to bee long in our private prayers ſometimes, is commended by the example of Chriſt, who ſometime continued all night in prayer.

Hannah being * reproved by Eli, although unjuſtly, anſwereth him againe reverently, No my Lord, I am a woman of a ſorrowfull ſpirit, &c. and again, Count not thy handmaid for a daughter of Belial, &c. ſhee doth not bid him reprove his owne ſons, who were drunkards and whoremaſters, as a woman of an intemperate ſpirit would have done, but mildely anſwereth for her ſelfe, and telleth him what ſhee did there, and what cauſed thoſe motions in her. Here then

* Chryſoſt. following the Sept. tranſlat. ſaith, that Eli's ſervant reproved her, from hence gathering her admirable patience, Hom. 1. de Hanna.

was

Note. was a meek ſpirit indeed, which before the Lord is much ſet by, and therefore her example would be followed by all others, eſpecially having to doe with ſuperiours. A daughter of belial; what is meant hereby, ſee Deut. 13. 13. one without a yoke, one unprofitable and that ſhall not proſper, and ſuch ſhee confeſſeth ſhee ſhould have been, if ſhee had been drunken, for ſuch are all drunkards, for they are unruly. 2. Unprofitable to themſelves and others, daily conſuming the bleſſings of God in riot and waſting their ſubſtance. 3. They proſper not in this world, or in the world to come, 1 Cor. 6. 10. as Willet noteth here. Willet. Hebr. it is אל תתן את אמתך לפני בת בליעל Give not thy handmaid before a daughter of belial; whereupon ſome thinke, as Peter Martyr hath it, Peter Martyr. that Peninnah was preſent, and that ſhee deſired him not to charge her thus before her, calling her a daughter of belial; but he followeth the former ſenſe, becauſe it is not probable that ſo modeſt and good a woman would bee ſo virulent againſt her greateſt adverſary; thus alſo the Vulg. Latin and Iunius render it, before being taken here for for, Give her not for, that repute her not for. Of ſons of belial, that caſt off the yoke of Gods Law, is, ſee how all ſorts of wicked men are ſet forth hereby, 2 Sam. 22. 5. 2 Chron. 13. 7. Judg. 19. 22. 1 Sam. 2. 12, 17. & 10. 17. & 25. 17. 2 Sam. 16. 7. 1 King. 21. 10. 2 Cor. 6. 15.

V. 18. For Eli's praying that her requeſt might bee granted, when hee was by her apology ſatisfied, his ſpeech may ſeem to bee propheticall, and ſo doubtleſſe ſhee conceived of it, in that having heard him ſay ſo, ſhe anſwered, Let thy handmaid finde grace in thy ſight; and then went away to that holy Feaſt, being chearfull and ſad no more, Hebr. it is, Thy handmaid ſhall finde grace in thy ſight, that is, to be prayed for by thee, and ſo I doubt not but to have my deſire granted.

V. 19, 20. The next morning after this they all return home, and Hannah conceiveth and beareth a ſon, and calleth his name Samuel, but they return not without worſhipping firſt. And touching Hannahs conceiving, it is ſaid, God remembred her, not that hee at any time forgetteth his, but hee is ſaid to remember her, when he did for her that which ſhee deſired, in the very phraſe which ſhee had uſed in her prayer. And Elkanah is ſaid to have knowne her after their returne home, to intimate that he refrained from companying with her whilſt they were at the Feaſt, not that there is any impurity in the husbands going in to his wife, but that nothing might then take their mindes off from their devotions, as appeareth, 1 Cor. 7. 5. and that they might not contract any outward legall pollution, which then made unfit for thoſe Feſtivalls, or to come neare the Lord, Exod. 19. 16. although there was never any ſinfulneſſe therein, any more then in touching a dead body, or any iſſue in the fleſh, which alſo made uncleane. When the time was come about, Hannah conceiveth and bare a ſonne, &c. ſhe conceived immediately, but brought forth when the time was come about, that women uſe to goe with childe; therefore theſe words, When the time was come about, are placed before the mention of her conception by [illegible] Peter Martyr. Hebraiſm, as God is ſaid to have dryed up the waters, and divided them, wh[illegible] Exod. 14. as they were firſt divided, ſo Iſa. 64. Thou haſt been angry with us, and wee h[illegible] ſinned againſt thee; when as they firſt ſinned, and then God was angry; it is a figure called Hyſteron proteron, firſt the revolution of time is ſpoken of, and then her conceiving; whereas ſhee firſt conceived, and then the time being come about, brought forth; to make which more plaine, our Tranſlation hath it, When the time was come about, after ſhee had conceived, ſhee bare a ſonne, but Hebr. it is as before. For the name Samuel, Hebr. שמואל Shemuel, of ש put for שאל to aske, and מ for מן of, and ו him, and אל God, as the reaſon is commonly rendred, and Hannah her ſelfe giveth a reaſon: By this name ſhee would both put her ſelfe in minde, and him, that hee was not hers, but the Lords, that accordingly he might ſerve him, and ſhe might the more willingly part with him for Gods ſervice.

V. 21. And Elkanah and all his houſe went up to offer his yearely ſacrifice and his vow, that is, not onely as hee uſed to doe in other yeares, but as Peter Martyr hath it, he brought Euchariſticall ſacrifices for the benefit received, in that God had given him a ſon by Hannah, which he ſo greatly deſired, and happily hee vowed ſomething now to God, although it be not expreſſed, beſides the childe, to ſhew his thankfulneſſe.

V.22. V.22. But Hannah ſaid, I will not goe up untill the childe bee weaned. This refraining of Hannah to come now up to the Tabernacle, may ſeeme to bee againſt the Law, Levit. 12. 6. whereby a woman after puerpery is enjoyned, when the dayes of her purification bee ended, to come with a lambe, or two turtle doves or young Pigeons to bee offered for her cleanſing, for ſhee went not till the childe was weaned; and there was a double weaning, ſaith Lyra, 1st. from the dugge at the end of three years, the other from the milke of childehood, when he beginneth to uſe other ordinary meats at the end of 10 yeares. And it is not likely ſaith hee, that ſhee went up with her childe, till hee was of this age, becauſe hee was not fit; till then to miniſter or doe any little ſervice in the Tabernacle, ſo likewiſe Hugo hee ſtands for 12. yeares, and Junius hath it, untill hee bee educated, that hee may be able to miniſter. Peter Comeſtor ſaith, either at 7. when the 2. weaning was, or at 12. when the 3. and if at 7. hee was brought to be inſtructed, if at 12. immediately to miniſter. The Hebrews thinke, that ſhee weaned him at 2. yeares old and brought him to the Tabernacle, and this ſeemeth moſt probable; becauſe Ch. 2. 19. it is ſaid, ſhee made him a little coate and brought it to him, when ſhee came up from yeare to yeare, and becauſe it is incredible that ſo holy a woman would ſtay from the houſe of God, 7. or 10 yeares together; and laſtly, becauſe the weaning of Samuel, is expreſly ſaid to bee from ſucking, v. 23. ſo that when ſhee had weaned him from the breaſts, ſhee went up with him. Willet, that followeth the other opinion reaſoneth from his miniſtring immediately after that hee was brought before the Lord, which hee could not doe being ſo young, and from the trouble that would have beene in the Tabernacle to have any ſo young there. But although it be ſaid, that hee miniſtred, when his parents were gone home, it is not neceſſarily to bee underſtood that he did ſo immediately, but ſo ſoone as hee was able to doe any ſervice; and for his bringing up, it might well be together with the little ones of other Levites or Prieſts neare the Tabernacle, without any trouble to it. And Theodoret qu. 5. in 1 Reg. is plainly of this opinon, that he was brought to the tabernacle immediately after weaning from the breaſt. For he ſaith, ſo ſoone as ſhee had weaned him, ſhee offered him to God, and with him a bullocke equal to him in age: and thus much by the way touching the time, when Hannah came up with her ſon. Now although ſhe ſtayed but 2 years before ſhe came, how did ſhe fulfil the law of comming at the end of 40 dayes? Peter Martyr anſwereth, happily the childe was weake, and ſo unfit to be brought any ſooner, although the Virgin Mary brought her ſonne to the Temple at the due time: and howſoever ſo many dayes are ſet, yet it is not to be underſtood, that the woman [illegible]s tyed to come juſt at that time, becauſe ſhee might be weake, and ſo un[illegible] for travaile, or her childe ſicke. But this was not Hannahs caſe, but [illegible]other extraordinary reaſon detained her, viz. Becauſe when ſhe ſhould come, ſhee meant to leave him at the Lords houſe for ever, and not to redeeme him with 5 ſhekels, according to the law, Numb. 18. 15, 16. It is true, ordinarily, a woman was to come with her offering immediately after the dayes of her purification ended, and if any neceſſary impediment came in the way, ſo ſoone after, as it was removed. But Hannah intending when ſhee came, to offer her ſonne to the Lord, and to leave him to his perpetuall ſervice, and to recompence her delay with a farre greater offering, then a lamb, as ſhee did

V. 24. v. 24. Shee tooke him with three bullockes, an Ephah of flowre and a bottle of Wine, was certainly no delinquent in ſtaying thus long, before ſhee came, eſpecially ſeeing the time was not ſo preciſely ſtood upon for theſe things touching women and children, as wee may ſee in that when as by law it was provided, that the firſt-borne ſhould bee redeemed at a moneth old, and then preſented before the Lord, yet commonly it was not ſo done, but when the mother went up with

Lyra.

Hugo Cardin.
Junius.
Schol. Hiſtor.

Willet.

Qu.
Peter Martyr.

Numb. 18. 16.

with her purifying offering divers dayes after, ſhee brought her childe with her, as did the Virgin Mary; Toſtatus ſaith, that ſhee being a Levites wife was not bound to bring an offering for her firſt-borne, as other women, becauſe the Levites were taken for all the firſt-borne of Iſrael; others that ſhe might come to the Tabernacle with her offering, and yet not goe at the Feaſt time any more, till Samuel was weaned, although it bee not recorded. And it is to bee underſtood, that although Hannah ſtayed thus long, before ſhee came to the Taqernacle, yet it is not to be thought, but that ſhee frequented the ſynagogue for her exerciſe in publique religious duties, that no woman may take example from hence to abſent herſelfe from Church all the time of her giving ſucke. From Ramathaim otherwiſe called Ramah or Ramath, where Hannah dwelt, to Shiloh was 12. miles, and therefore the childe being ſo ſoone as hee was put from the dugge to be brought hither Hannah might well be diſpenſed with, although ſhee came not ſo long a journey, till that time.

Luke 2. 24.

H. Bunting Patriar. travailes.

V. 23. Elkanah agreeth to this propoſition of his wife praying God to eſtabliſh it, that is, that ſhee and the childe might live, and that when he ſhould be weaned hee might be brought to the Tabernacle and ſerve the Lord there all the dayes of his life. From hence Peter Martyr commendeth the like good agreement betwixt man and wife to all marryed perſons, alledging the ſaying of Ariſtotle, a maſter of a family is a kinde of tyrant to his ſervant, a King to his children, but for his wife, hee ſhould rule over her by an ariſtocracy, not according to his owne luſt, but according to his dignity, preſcribing her nothing touching her diſtaffe, needle and maides &c. but leaving her herein to her owne will and judgement. In which nothing is to bee miſliked, but that even to ſervants a Maſter muſt not bee a tyrant, but doe unto them that which is equall, for whoſoever doth wrong to any, God will bee avenged upon him.

P. Martyr.

Ariſtot. lib 8. Ethicorum.

Col. 4 1.
Chap. 3. 25.

V. 24. And when ſhee had weaned him, ſhee tooke him and 3. bullockes and an Ephah of flowre, and a bottle of wine, and brought him to the houſe of the Lord in Shiloh, &c. the Vulgar Latin hath it, 3. meaſures of flowre, but as Hugo confeſſeth, it is corrupt, it being in Hebrew an Ephah. A queſtion here is moved, ſeeing v. 25. onely one of the Bullockes was offered, wherefore the other two ſerved? Lyra ſaith, they were given to Eli, to whoſe care the childe was now committed. Peter Martyr alledgeth two other divers opinions. 1. Of David Kimhi, that the other two were for feaſting, becauſe they were wont to make a feaſt, when they weaned their children. 2. Of R. Levi Ben Gerſon, who ſaith, that they were offered upon two other days of the Feaſt: but Peter Martyr thinketh, that the firſt being offered for a burnt-offering, the other two were uſed for peace-offerings, the greateſt parts whereof were to Feaſt withal: & thus the quantity of flowre agreeth, becauſe an Ephah containes 10. tenth deales, and by the law it was provided, that 3. tenth deales ſhould bee offered for one bullocke, and to three Bullockes then went 9 1. whereunto the tenth was added ex abundanti, out of liberality. I thinke rather with Lyra, that the other two Bullockes were given to Eli with her ſonne, and ſo much flowre and wine as was ſpared from the ſacrifice of one Bullocke, that is, all but 3. tenth deales of flowre and halfe an hin of wine; according the law, Numb. 28. 13, 14. becauſe it is ſaid expreſly of one Bullocke, it was offered, which would doubtleſſe have beene ſpoken of the other two alſo, if they had beene offered. Moreover it ſtandeth with reaſon, that ſhee bringing her ſonne ſo young to Eli ſhould give ſome gratuity, that he might with the greater care take this charge upon him. I hold then, that the Bullocke offered was no burnt-offering, but a peace-offering, for a benefit obtained, with part of which they feaſted, having flowre and wine alſo with them for that purpoſe, and the remainder of both was given to the Prieſt together with the other two Bullockes. Now an Ephah of flowre was a buſhel, or thereabouts, and the bottle of Wine by the Vulgar Latin rendred amphoris, if it were the leaſt amphora but one, 9. gallons, for amphora is by Hugo ſaid to be 3 modii, and one modius was 3 gallons; and

Hugo Cardin.

Qu.

Lyra.

P. Martyr.
D. Kimhi.

R. L. Ben Gerſon

Numb. 28. 12.

if ſo, then after one bullock offered and the flowre and wine belonging thereto, there remained to their diſpoſing of flowre 5. gallons & ſomewhat more, & likewiſe of wine. One Bullocke being ſacrificed Hannah goeth to Eli and ſheweth him the childe, which ſhe had prayed for, and ſaith, therefore I have lent him to the Lord,
V. 28. as long as hee liveth, he ſhall be lent unto the Lord, and he worſhipped the Lord there. As her firſt comming to Eli ſhee ſaith, Oh my Lord, as thy ſoule liveth, I am the woman, &c. the Vulgar Latin, I beſeech thee my Lord, let thy ſoule live, Hebr. בי אדוני, Oh or I beſeech thee, Junius, attende Domine, this whole
D. Kimbi. ſpeach is to inſinuate into Eli ſo, as he might the more lovingly receive her childe, and bee as it were a father unto him, wiſhing him long life, to the
R. Levi. Gerſon. end that hee might bring him up, ſo David Kimbi, but Ben. Gerſon takes it for an oath to aſſure Eli and to move him the more, becauſe ſhee had before him prayed and hee had diſmiſſed her with his bleſſing; and this is the more probable. Shee ſaith ſhee had lent him to the Lord all the dayes of his life. The words here uſed anſwer to thoſe before going in the Hebrew thus, for v. 27. are theſe words יתן יהוה שאלתי אשר שאלתי, here אנכי השאלתיהו ליהוה כל הימים אשר היה הוא שאול ליהוה The Lord hath given my requeſt, which I asked, and I have rendred or lent him to the Lord all the dayes, that hee ſhall bee asked for the Lord. for the ſame word, שאל in divers voyces ſignifyeth both to aske, to give, or render or to lend.
Junius. Thus alſo the Vulgar Latin, Junius eum precarió datum ſiſto Jehovæ omnibus diebus, quibus fuerit precarió rogatus. Our tranſlation muſt needes be acknowledged here not to be ſo good, both becauſe there is no word ſignifying all the dayes of his life and the word שאל Shaul is never put for lent, but asked; her Peter Martyr. meaning is, according to Peter Martyr, hee ſhall ſerve the Lord in his houſe as long as he ſhall require it; which ſhee ſpake thus, becauſe ſhee knew not, how the Lord might afterwards imploy him, as indeed he did Ch. 7. taking him from ſerving at the Tabernacle to bee Judge over his people, when hee went and dwelt at Ramah again. And hee worſhipped the Lord there, the Vulgar Latin, they worſhipped, the Hebr. ישתחו which Gen. 47. 31. is uſed for a verb of Willet. the ſingular number, when it is ſaid, that Jacob worſhipped, and as Willet noteth, in the plurall it is ישתחוו: hereupon a queſtion ariſeth, who is ſaid
Peter Martyr. Junius. to have worſhipped? Junius ſaith, the childe, Peter Martyr, Elkanah, Willet following the Gen. Verſion, Eli; I thinke with Junius, that Samuel is meant; whereas it may ſeeme, that it could not be ſo, becauſe he was too young, I anſwer, to worſhip and to ſerve the Lord is all one, and this it is meant hee did at the Tabernacle, although not at this inſtant, but there his mother left him and as ſoone as hee was fit, he ſerved the Lord and worſhipped him there. To draw it to Eli is moſt improper, and forced, becauſe it was no new thing in him to be noted, that he worſhipped there, and of E*lkanah* nothing was ſpoken before to intimate him to be the man, that was meant, therefore ſeeing it was an hee, it muſt needs be Samuel, and ſo this hiſtory is aptly cloſed up, Samuel was brought to the Tabernacle very young and preſented to Eli, who received him, and ſo he abode there and ſerved and worſhipped the Lord, as hee grew
The Myſtery. fit in a Leviticall office. E*lkanah* ſignifying the poſſeſſion of God, ſaith Rabanus, myſtically ſetteth forth the miniſtry, Peninnah and Hannah his two wives two Churches of the Jews and Gentiles, for that of the Jews was firſt fruitfull, this of the Gentiles barren, but at length ſhee conceiveth, and is made glad through a ſonne, a Samuel, that is, his name God, as Shem, and Θ and El ſignify, this is when the Faith of Jeſus is entertained into the heart, &c.

CHAP. II.

HERE firſt Hannahs Canticle of praiſe is ſet downe for the benefit received, v. 1, 2, 3. &c. to v. 11. and then the hiſtory of Elies ſonnes, and of their wickedneſſe, and how their Father reproved them, v 11, 12. &c. to v. 18. and v. 22, 23. &c. to v. 26. there being interlaced ſomething more touching

Samuel, Hannah and Elkanah, v. 18, 19. and to v. 22. and v. 26. Laſtly, a Prophet is ſent to Eli to reprove and threaten judgements againſt him and his houſe, v. 27, 28. &c. to the end of the chapter. Touching this thankſgiving of Hannah; it is ſaid, ſhee prayed, and ſaid, for thankeſgiving is a ſpecies of prayer, 1 Tim. 2.1. Wherefore the Phariſee when he gave thankes, is ſaid to pray, and praiſing of God is of the nature of prayer to procure the flowing down of more bleſſings upon us, according to that ſaying of Auguſt; decurſus gratiarum a nobis eſt recurſus gratiæ ad nos; Vatablus ſaith that hereby ſhee commended her ſonne Samuel to Gods bleſſing, and therefore it is ſaid ſhee prayed; Borrheus ſaith, that ſhee prayed herein againſt the enemies of Gods Church, and Ben Gerſon will have the laſt words in partic. v. 10. a prayer, the adverſaries of the Lord ſhall bee broken in pieces, out of heaven ſhall bee thunder upon them, &c. as it came to paſſe, Ch. 7. but that was rather propheticall, then petitory, neither is there any petition in all this holy hymne. For the thankſgiving it hath theſe parts. 1. Hannah rejoycing. 2. A deſcription of the Lord, v. 2. 3. A reproof of the wicked for their pride and vaine boaſtings, from which ſhee dehorteth them, v. 3. 4. A reaſon, why no man ſhould boaſt himſelfe, becauſe God knoweth and pondereth it; and can eaſily cruſh the proudeſt and lift up the meaneſt; v. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. 5. A propheſie of comfort to his Saints and of deſtruction to the wicked, and of the King Chriſt his Kingdome, v. 9, 10. According to this the Chaldee Paraphraſt, and David Kimhi ſay, that this hymne was a propheſy, wherein Hannah being carryed with the Spirit, 1. In the perſon of the Church expreſſed her joy, for that God had given her Samuel, ſuch a ſonne as ſhee foreſaw ſhould beat downe idolatry, and uphold the truth. 2. Propheſied of the beating downe of the enemies of the Church, Aſſyrians and Grecians, Gog and Magog. 3. Of the Kingdome of the Meſſiah. 4. Of the laſt judgement, when the Saints ſhall be taken up to everlaſting felicity, and the wicked ſent away into endleſſe miſery. In inditing this ſong of thanſgiving ſhe did but as Moſes had done before, and Deborah, and after, David and others for great benefits, and the Virgin Mary, whoſe hymne Peter Martyr noteth to bee much like unto this, as the caſe of either of them was much alike, becauſe Hannah was barren, and ſhee was a Virgin, and ſo not likely to beare a ſon, and as Hannah hath it, My heart rejoyced in the Lord; ſo Mary, My ſoule doth magnify the Lord, and my ſpirit hath rejoyced, &c. as ſhee, there is none holy as the Lord, ſo Mary, hee that is mighty hath magnified mee, and holy is his name: as ſhee, talke no more ſo proudly, and the bowes are broken, they that are full have hired out themſelves for bread, &c. ſo Mary, hath ſcatered the proud in the imaginations of their hearts, hee hath filled the hungry with good things, and the rich hee hath ſent empty away. Now whereas women are forbidden to ſpeake in the Congregation, Willet anſwereth well, ordinarily they were forbidden, but not when any woman was moved extraordinarily by the Spirit, as Hannah was, and ſo Hannah under the New Teſtament, and other women, upon whom was powred out the Spirit of propheſie, according to that, I will powre out my Spirit upon all fleſh, and your ſonnes and daughters ſhall Propheſie, and Philip had 4 daughters Prophetеſſes, wherefore as of a man, ſo it is ſpoken of a woman propheſying, thus alſo Peter Martyr.

Luke 18. 11.
P. Martyr.
Auguſt.
Vatablus.
Borrheus.
R. B. Gerſon.
P. Martyr.
Chald. Paraphr.
D. Kimhi.
Exod. 15. Iudg. 1.
Peter Martyr.
Willet.
1 Cor. 14.
Acta 2.
Peter Martyr.
1 Cor. 11.

V. 1.
Peter Martyr.
Lyra.

My heart rejoyceth in the Lord, my horne is exalted, my mouth is inlarged over my enemies. As ſorrow maketh one to mourne in ſilence, ſo joy cauſeth one to ſpeake freely in his praiſe that putteth an end unto his ſorrow, and maketh him to rejoyce. In the horne lyeth ſtrength of horned beaſts, and therefore it was an uſuall phraſe amongſt the Hebrews, by the exalting of the horne Metaphorically to ſet forth the conferring of ſtrength, and to Hannah had God now given ſtrength to conceive and bring forth a ſonne, thus Peter Martyr, Lyra ſaith, that by horne is ſet forth in the Scriptures, the motion of the heart carrying into any hard thing, and if the rule of right reaſon be wanting, and of Gods law, it is called the horne of pride, but if it be thus regulated, an exalted horne, becauſe by the benefits received the heart is lifted up through hope of receiving greater benefits of Gods liberality, and thus the horne of Hannah was exalted.

exalted, ſhee hoped for the increaſe of grace here and of glory hereafter. And ſhe ſaith, my mouth is inlarged over my enemies, becauſe Peninnah and her children were vexed to ſee her to have this cauſe of opening her mouth ſo magnifically to praiſe the Lord.

V. 2. There is none holy as the Lord, for there is none beſides thee, nor any rocke like our God; the Vulg. Latine, there is none ſtrong as our God; the Sept. there is none holy as our God: the word is צור ſignifying a rock, and metaphorically fortis, and fortitudo, ſtrong, or ſtrength, and ſo the Rabbins. Hannah here celebrateth the power and might of God, in that hee ſhewed himſelfe able to change her nature, from barren to fruitfull, whereas no ſecondary cauſe can doe any thing, but as hee hath appointed, but he can do whatſoever it pleaſeth him, neither can any power withſtand him. I thinke, that the word ſtrong is apteſt here. Shee praiſeth God alſo from his holineſſe, as the chiefe of his attributes, whereby the Angels continually praiſe him; and hence wee learne to bee in love with holineſſe, whereby we doe moſt reſemble God. There is none holy as God, ſaith Lyra, becauſe hee is eſſentially holy: and the ſame may bee ſaid of ſtrong. And he is not onely holy and ſtrong beyond all compariſon, but beſides him there is no God, the Gods of the heathen are not onely not ſo holy or potent, but indeed are nothing, for there is no more Gods.

D. Kimhi
Ben Gerſon.
Iſa. 6.
Note.
Lyra.

V. 3. Talke no more ſo exceeding proudly, neither let arrogancy come out of your mouth; the Vulg. Latine, Doe not multiply to ſpeake lofty words, glorying, let old words goe out of your mouth: Hebr. Doe not multiply to ſpeake lofty words of pride, let ſwelling or hardneſſe goe out of your mouth, or that which is old: For all theſe ſignifications, ſaith Peter Martyr, hath the word עתק, yea עתק ſaith Pagninus, firſt and chiefly ſignifieth to waxe old, ſo that here the Vulg. Latine is to bee preferred. And aptly ſhe ſaith, doe not multiply, becauſe Peninnah had often upbraided her by her barrenneſſe, being proud of her owne fruitfulneſſe; and that which is old, becauſe of old ſhee had thus vexed her, For the Lord is a God of knowledge, and by him actions are weighed; for knowledge, Hebr. is knowledges, ſo likewiſe the Vulg. Latine, deus ſcientiarum; David Kimhi ſaith, hee is thus called, becauſe he is the moſt intelligent of all others, and knoweth all particular things, for all knowledges without any change in him are inherent in him. For theſe words, by him actions are weighed, in the Hebrew text is, actions are not weighed, but in the margin it is, by him, or, to him, for לו is in the margin, and לא in the text, wherefore ſome expound it as negative, rendring the words thus, actions are not directed or diſpoſed, that is, without him, or, againſt his will; for whatſoever men thinke and intend, they can bring nothing to paſſe but as hee willeth, ſo Arias Montanus, Junius, Oſiander. Some as affirmative, Vulg. Latine, Septuagint, expounding it either of God, his purpoſes ſhall come to paſſe, or of men, by him the actions of men are ordered, diſpoſed and directed. Peter Martyr taketh it either way, thus; 1 Affirmatively, to him workes are prepared, that is, his enterpriſes ſtand firme and are all perfected, 2 Negatively, the attempts of men ſhall not ſtand, neither can they hinder his will. Any of theſe wayes the ſenſe is good, but I preferre the affirmative, both becauſe it followeth moſt aptly thus, hee is a God of knowledge, by him actions are moderated, and not at your wils, wherefore your proud bragges are vaine, and becauſe the word in the margin commonly is appoſed, that the Reader might looke at that and ſo underſtand the Text the better, and yet becauſe both are held to come from the Spirit of God, they erre not, that take it either way. Theſe words, for the Lord is a God of knowledge, &c. are a reaſon, why Peninnah and hers ſhould no more ſo inſult, becauſe they knew not what ſhould come to paſſe, but God knoweth all things, and how to abate the pride of the inſolent, and to exalt the afflicted.

D. Kimhi.
Arias Montan.
Junius, Oſiand.
Vatablus.
Bornæus, Pellican.
P. Martyr.

V. 4. The bows of the mighty men are broken, and they that ſtumbled are girt with ſtrength, that is, ſaith Lyra, the bowes of Peninnah and her children, who did ſhoot reproachfull words at Hannah, as out of a bow; for ſtumbled, the Vulg. Latine hath, the weake, whereby ſhe meant her ſelfe, and ſuch as ſhee was, weak for prolification, but now by Gods bleſſing ſhe was ſtrengthened to bear fruit,

Lyra.

thus

Peter Martyr.

thus alſo Hugo, ſaying, that by the metaphor of one with a bow, ſhee being ſtrong in times paſt to beare was ſet forth, becauſe a bow belongeth to the ſtrong; and it is to be noted, that Hebr. there is nothing ſignifying men, but the ſtrong in the plurall number. Peter Martyr underſtandeth the words properly, expounding them of thoſe that goe to warre well-armed, and of thoſe that are unarmed, as the Egyptians and the Iſraelites, for the Egyptians bowes were broken, when they were overthrowne, and the Hebrewes fleeing before them naked were ſtrengthened. But it is beſt, firſt to bring the words to Hannahs caſe as neare as may bee, and then to extend them to other acts of Gods power alſo. For theſe words, thoſe that ſtumbled, or the weake, Hebr. is בכשלים ſuch as fall through weakneſſe of their knees and loynes. And as Hannah of weake was made ſtrong to beare, ſo by the former words, the bows of the mighty are broken, ſhe ſeemeth to intimate, that Peninnah now ceaſed bearing children, which is further confirmed, v. 5.

V. 5.

Lyra.

They that were full have hired themſelves out for bread, and the hungry ceaſed; ſo that the barren hath born ſeven, and ſhee that hath many children is waxed feeble. Here alſo, ſaith Lyra, is another metaphor, ſhee compareth Peninnah to the full, becauſe ſhee was full of children, for it is thought that ſhee had ten, according to Chap. 1. 8. but now ſhee was in the caſe of thoſe that let themſelves for bread, that is, empty and poore enough of children: For the Hebrewes ſay, that ſo ſoone as H*annah* had one childe, two of Peninnahs ſonnes dyed; and by that time that ſhee had foure, ſix more of Peninnahs dyed; and when ſhee ſaw her to bee with childe againe, ſhee fearing the death of thoſe two that remained, beſought H*annah* to pray for her, and ſo they were ſpared; and becauſe they were ſpared at her prayer, they were thenceforth counted H*annahs* children, and ſo together with her owne five ſpoken of, v. 21, ſhe had ſeven, as it here followeth. But this ſoundeth like a fable of the Rabbins, and therefore Lyra rejecteth it, and that worthily, becauſe at this time H*annah* had onely one, Samuel. Againe, H*annah* compareth her ſelfe to the hungry that are filled, for ſo he readeth it after the Vulg. Latine, becauſe ſhe deſired children as an hungry perſon doth food, but now was ſatisfied in this matter. For theſe words, hath born ſeven, the Vulg. Latine hath, very many, which Lyra approveth, becauſe it is moſt according to the ſenſe, ſeeing it cannot bee juſtified that ſhee bare preciſely the number of ſeven, neither by the reckoning of the Rabbins already ſpoken of, nor yet as others count, five children of her owne, and two of her ſonne Samuels, for this was long after this Canticle, unleſſe it ſhall bee thought, that herein ſhe ſpake prophetically. Moreover he ſaith, that the moderne Hebrewes take this word שבע for ſatiety, ſhee bare children till ſhee was fully ſatisfied. Hugo ſeemeth to bee affected with the former comment of the Hebrews, but differeth in this, that hee ſaith, when Samuel was borne, one of P*eninnahs* ſons dyed, and ſo another, and a third unto all her ſeven children, when ſhee had borne five, and Samuel two, applying hereunto that, Jerem. 15. Shee was weakened that bare ſeven ſonnes, &c. But before this, hee ſaith better upon the firſt words, the full have hired out themſelves for bread, that is, P*eninnah* full of children was empty as a begger, that beggeth his bread, becauſe all hers were counted nothing in compariſon of Samuel: the hungry were filled, that is, H*annah*, who ate nothing before for ſorrow, being in hope of a ſon eateth and drinketh with joy, Chap. 1. 18. Peter Martyr by the barren bearing ſeven, underſtandeth nothing elſe but many, as the word ſeven is commonly uſed for a full number. And to that queſtion, how ſhee could ſpeake this, before ſhee had borne many; hee anſwereth, ſhee ſpake by the Spirit. If it be ſaid, ſhee bare but ſix, he anſwereth, ſix was very many for her being before barren, and therefore the word ſeven is uſed to ſet forth very many. In all which I ſubſcribe unto him, but whereas he draweth the former words altogether another way, viz. to the Gibeonites that hired themſelves out for hewers of wood, &c. I cannot but, leaving him, approve rather of Lyra and Hugo, becauſe all things are to bee applyed to the preſent caſe as much as may bee in the firſt place, and then for the

Hugo Cardin.

Peter Martyr.

Ioſh. 9.

the more glorifying of Gods power extended to others. For theſe words, the hungry have ceaſed, according to the Hebr. the meaning is, they have ceaſed to hire out themſelves for bread, having now no further need, as being fully ſatisfied, to doe like the needy and beggerly, and ſo it is the ſame in effect with theſe words, the hungry are filled, in the Vulg. Latine.

V. 6. The Lord killeth and maketh alive, hee bringeth to the grave, and bringeth up, that is, ſaith Lyra, hee bringeth downe to the grave the children of P*eninnah*; and maketh alive, and bringeth the children of H*annah*; for the word שאול by the Vulg. Latine rendred hell, it ſignifieth, ſaith hee, the grave, from which the Lord did, as it were, bring up Hez*ekiah* before adjudged to death. Hugo applyeth it altogether to H*annah* and Peninnah, the one the Lord vivified by giving her children when ſhee was dead unto conception before, and he brought her up from grievous affliction, metaphorically ſet forth by hell here; the other hee killed, as it were, and brought downe to hell, by afflicting her through extreme ſorrow for the loſſe of her children, and to ſee H*annah* made fruitfull, for there is not a greater miſery then envie. And thus hee ſaith, theſe words cohere with the former, they being an explication or reaſon of them, The barren hath borne ſeven, and ſhee that was full of children waxed feeble, becauſe the Lord did, as it were, ſtrike her dead with ſorrow, and put her to great torment, but H*annah* had life, and joy, and gladneſſe put into her. Peter Martyr expoundeth this alſo onely in generall of Gods bringing men ſometimes to extreme miſery, and then lifting them up with comfort; and through extreme ſickneſſe to ſuch a paſſe, as that all men deſpaire of their life, and then reſtoring them to health again, ſee the ſame phraſe, Deut. 32.39. and thus he dealt with Hezekiah and Jonah, and our Lord firſt died, and then roſe again, and ſo muſt wee: and thus it is in our juſtification, wee muſt firſt be caſt down in the ſight of our ſins, and then bee erected with comfort through faith in Chriſt. All which is good, but the prime thing intended is the magnifying of God for his dealings in particular with H*annah* and P*eninnah*, and ſo although wee have no certaine ground for it, yet it is moſt probable that P*eninnah* did not onely ceaſe bearing of children, when H*annah* began to be fruitful, but alſo ſuffered the loſſe of ſome or moſt of them. Which may bee a warning to all women, that they bee not proud of their bearing many children, nor inſult over any barren H*annah*, for God can ſoone alter the caſe. VVillet here ſetteth downe foure acceptions of the word שאול. 1 It ſignifieth the grave. 2 By a metaphor, grievous adverſity. 3 The ſtate of thoſe that feele themſelves forſaken of God, as Cain and Saul. 4 The ſtate of the damned; but here it is uſed according to the ſecond, for H*annah* lay in ſorrow before, as in the grave.

Hugo Card.

Invidia Siculi non invenere tyranni majus malum, vel tormentum.

Peter Martyr.

Note.

Willet.

V. 7. The Lord maketh poore, and maketh rich, hee bringeth low and lifteth up. In this verſe and the 8. ſaith Hugo, the ſame things are againe ſet forth in other words. He maketh Peninnah poore in children, and Hannah rich in children.

Hugo Car.

V. 8. Out of the duſt hee lifteth up the poore, and the begger out of the dunghill to ſet him with princes, &c. This is ſpecially meant according to the letter of H*annahs* exaltation in Samuel her ſonne, who was ſet upon the Throne of glory, when hee was made Judge over Iſrael, and anointed Kings; generally of the proud and high, and of the humble and low, and myſtically of Chriſt; ſo likewiſe Lyra; and Peter Martyr having expounded it generally, applyeth it in particular to Samuel. And Ben Gerſon hence admoniſheth the rich not to bee proud, and the poore not to deſpaire, becauſe God can eaſily pull downe the one, and raiſe up the other. For the pillars of the earth are the Lords, and hee hath ſet the world upon them. Here is the reaſon rendred, why the Lord can doe this, hee is of infinite power, as appeareth by his laying of the foundations of the world. Lyra diſtinguiſheth both this and the reſt of this Canticle; thus, here is the magnification of the Lord: 1 In reſpect of his power in the act of Creation, the pillars of the earth are the Lords. 2 In reſpect of his wiſdome in the act of governing, v. 9. hee ſhall keep the feet of his Saints. 3 In reſpect of his Juſtice in the act of due puniſhment, the wicked ſhall be ſilent in darkneſſe, &c.

R. L. Ben Gerſon.

Pſal. 113.

that is, 1 In the darkneſſe of ſinne. 2 In the darkneſſe of hell. He ſhall give the kingdome to his King, &c. that is, to Chriſt, who at the laſt ſhall come glorioully in the form of a man, and judge all men, Joh. 5.

The pillars of the earth, ſaith Peter Martyr, the earth is called, becauſe it is as a foundation whereupon all other things are ſet, as upon pillars, the aire, and all the heavens, for they all compaſſe the earth, being ſet thereupon as upon a foundation.

Peter Martyr.

V.9. V.10. He will keep the feet of his Saints, and the wicked ſhall bee ſilent in darkneſſe, &c. V.10. The adverſaries of the Lord ſhall be broken in pieces, out of heav. n ſhall be thunder upon them; the Lord ſhall judge the ends of the earth, and give ſtrength unto his King, and exalt the horne of his anointed. By footſteps, Peter Martyr well underſtandeth all kind of actions, ſtudies, and enterpriſes, which God keepeth, when he guideth them, and proſpereth them herein, that feare him; for, his Saints, Hebr. is חסידיו a word comming from חסך ſignifying mercy, becauſe God doth embrace them with mercy. Now in ſaying that hee keepeth their feet, ſhee meaneth not ſo, as they ſhall never fall, but ſo, as that they ſhall not fall into perdition. And the meanes whereby hee keepeth them, are intimated by the antitheſis next following, the wicked ſhall bee ſilent in darkneſſe, his ſaints therefore are kept by the light of the Word and Spirit, for the one availeth not without the other; but the wicked are deſtitute of all internall light, and ſo are in darkneſſe, not onely in reſpect of their many miſeries, but alſo becauſe their underſtanding and reaſon is darkeneſs, and hereby their ruine is cauſed, and they being judged, ſhall have their mouths ſtopped by their owne conſcience accuſing them, and ſo goe into everlaſting deſtruction, which is called utter darkneſſe; where, although they ſhall howle and cry for torment, yet they ſhall bee in ſilence, as Kimhi hath it, in reſpect of braggings and boaſtings, whereof they have been full before, ſome boaſting of their nobility, and ſome of their riches, &c. but now they ſhall all lye in ſilence, and not ſpeak a word more of theſe things. And ſo this aptly anſwereth to that v. 3. being a propheſie of Gods bringing downe all the proud and wicked, as hee did Peninnah, and of his continuall providence over the godly, For by ſtrength ſhall no man prevaile, that is, when the godly are preſerved and comforted, and the wicked confounded, it is not by the power of the one ſort, that they attaine to this comfortable condition, nor is there ſtrength in the other ſort to reſiſt their judgement, but God in mercy ſaveth his, and in juſtice deſtroyeth the wicked irreſiſtibly. And this the reaſon, ſaith R. Levi, why a mighty King is ſometime overcome by the weak, becauſe there is no ſtrength in man, but God giveth victories as it pleaſeth him.

P. Martyr.

D. Kimhi.

R. Levi.

V.10. The adverſaries of the Lord ſhall be broken in pieces; Who are Gods adverſaries, ſaith D. Kimhi, but the enemies of the godly? ſo likewiſe Auguſtine; by vertue of the Covenant betwixt God and his Saints, their enemies are counted his enemies, and wee in like manner muſt count his enemies our enemies. Theſe ſhal be deſtroyed all as a thing broken in pieces, as a potters veſſel. And thus ſhall it be, ſaith Peter Martyr, with both the Antichriſts, the Turke and the Pope. Out of heaven ſhall bee thunder upon them; this is added to ſhew their ſudden and miraculous deſtruction. This was according to the letter, fulfilled againſt the Philiſtims, 1 Sam. 7. 9, 10. and that it ſhall not bee the caſe of the Philiſtims alone, but of all the wicked in the world, the next words doe declare, The Lord ſhall judge the ends of the earth, and this ſhall bee at the laſt day of Judgement, that no man in any corner of the world may think to eſcape. R. Levi, ſaith Peter Martyr, expoundeth this of Samuel being Judge of all Iſrael, but hee rather thinketh according to the letter, that in the next words the time is declared when theſe things ſhall bee done, viz. When hee ſhall give ſtrength to his King, and exalt the horne of his anointed; viz. when hee ſhall change the government by Judges, into the government of Kings, then both Philiſtims and all other enemies of Gods people, Amalekites, Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites, &c. ſhall be ſo brought downe, as that they ſhall ſcarce have any power left them any more. For although by Judges, whom God at divers times raiſed

D. Kimhi.
Aug. de Civit. l. 17. c. 4.
Pſal. 2.

P. Martyr.

ſed up, they were delivered from their enemies, yet they were eſtſoones oppreſſed againe by them; but when David and Solomon reigned, the power of Philiſtims, and all other enemies about was cruſhed in pieces. But myſtically by his King and anointed, both hee and all others underſtand Chriſt, who ſhall come one day to judge and to deſtroy all the wicked in all parts and corners of the world; and becauſe that his comming ſhall bee in great power and glory, Matth. 24. 30 hee ſaith, Hee ſhall give ſtrength to his King, and exalt the horne of his anointed, and according to this, Zachariah the father of John Baptiſt, ſpeaking of Chriſt, Luke 1. 69. ſaith, Hee hath raiſed up for us the horne of ſalvation, in the houſe of his ſervant Chald. Paraphr. David: and to the Meſſiah the Chaldee Paraphraſt alſo applyeth this prophesie, and ſo doe many Rabbins more, that lived before Chriſts Incarnation. Our Pſalm 110. 1. Lord indeed hath now wonderfull ſtrength, and is highly exalted, but then all 1 Cor. 15. 25. his enemies ſhall bee put under his feet, never being able to riſe up againe.
Whereas it may ſeeme not to agree to Chriſt, that is here ſaid, Hee ſhall give ſtrength to his King, &c. for Chriſt being God, hath all power and glory, and as hee is Man, hee is by vertue of the union with the Godhead, partaker of the Lyra. ſame power and glory from the firſt: Lyra anſwereth well, it is true, the man Chriſt had all power from the firſt, authoritative, but not executive, for all things were not actually ſubjected unto him in the time of his humiliation, but Matthew 28. after his reſurrection hee ſaith, All power is given to me in heaven and in earth, then he began to make Kingdomes ſubject to him farre and wide, and at the laſt will ſubdue all men actually, and all things, and then ſhall hee in his humane Eſay 53. 2. nature ſhine in glory above the moſt glorious Angels, how much ſoever
R. Jonathan. hee was with out forme or beauty here. Jonathan in his Chaldee Paraphraſt, expoundeth all this Canticle as propheticall, thus: Firſt, knowing by the Spirit, that her ſonne Samuel ſhould bee a Prophet, and doe wonders; and a Judge, and ſave the people from the Philiſtims, ſhee ſaid, My ſoule hath exulted in the Lord. Secondly, foreſeeing, that Heman, Samuel's ſons ſon, and his 14 1 Chron. 25. ſons ſhoulfl bee ſingers in the houſe of God, ſhee added, My horne is exalted.
1 Sam. 6. Thirdly, foreſeeing the captivity of the Arke by the Philiſtims, and their being compelled to ſend it back againe with gifts, ſhee ſaid, My mouth is inlarged over 2 Kings 19. my enemies, &c. Fourthly, foreſeeing Sennacheribs great brags againſt the God of Iſrael, and his Armies and his confuſion, ſhee ſaid, There is none holy as 2 Kings 25. the Lord, there is no God beſides him. Fifthly, foreſeeing Nebuchadnezzars deſtroying of Jeruſalem, and his glorying herein, ſhee added, Speake no more ſo proudly, &c. becauſe the Lord is a God of knowledge, hee knoweth what time to take revenge upon you; as hee did indeed, driving Nebuchadnezzar from his kingdom, and Belſhazzar his grandchild he gave, together with Babylon, into the hands of Darius and Cyrus. And by him thoughts are prepared, that is, theſe things which be hidden from the eyes of men, are foreſeen and determined in his mind.
1 Maccab. 1. Sixthly, foreſeeing that Antiochus Epiphanes would pollute the Temple by Idolatry, 1 Maccab. 4. and overthrow Gods ordinances, but that Iudas Maccab. and his brethren, who were weak in compariſon of him, ſhould beat him, and purge the Temple, Heſter. ſhe ſaid, The bows of the mighty are broken, and the weake are girt with ſtrength. Seventhly, foreſeeing the conſpiracy of Haman againſt her people in the dayes of Ahaſhueroſh, and Hamans overthrow with his children and adherents, ſhee ſaid,
The full have hired themſelves out for bread, and the hungry are ſatisfied; for Haman that was ſo rich and full, fell downe to Heſter, and intreated for his life, and, ſo that it might have been granted, without doubt hee would have been content to have ſtript himſelfe of all his wealth and honour, and to have become an humble ſervant unto her. Untill the barren hath borne ſeven, and ſhee that had many children waxed feeble; that is, Jeruſalem, which is now as a barren woman, becauſe her children ſince her deſtruction by the Romans, have been caſt out and diſperſed in other Nations, ſhee remaining deſolate; but in the time of the Meſſiah ſhee ſhall bee rebuilt and repleniſhed againe, and then all Nations ſhall bee ſubjected to the Jewes, and the Roman Empire utterly waſted and brought to nothing; and in like manner hee expoundeth the next words, The Lord killeth and maketh alive, &c. hee brought the Jewes downe to death and to the grave, but quickened them againe by the Meſſiah, thus advancing him out of the duſt to the throne of glory: He ſhall keep the feet of his Saints, and the wicked ſhall be ſilent in darkneſſe; that is, he ſhall keep the Jewes, that they fall not into the darkneſſe of ſin, and after into hell, but the Gentiles ſhall bee deſtroyed, yea, he ſhall judge all the ends of the earth at the laſt, and the horne of the King Meſſiah ſhall bee moſt highly exalted; thus he. But hereby, ſaith Lyra, it appeareth, that their expected Meſſiah is the Antichriſt, becauſe when hee commeth, the Roman Empire ſhall goe downe according to 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. For my part, I doe not miſlike the conceit of the Rabbin, but onely whereas he fed himſelfe with an hope of a Meſſiah yet to come in the fleſh, and drew the propheſie to that, we may underſtand it of his comming in power to convert the Jews, and to bring them back to their own Kingdome with great joy, at what time the barren Church of the Jewes ſhall bring forth children abundantly; and the Roman Empire that was full of children before, both for the Emperor ſometime reigning there, and for the Pope deceiving and drawing to him the Nations round about, ſhall be made deſolate: and of his comming to judgement, when all the wicked ſhall bee deſtroyed, and the godly ſaved everlaſtingly; for when all this is done, the horn of his Chriſt is indeed moſt highly exalted. But if it bee according to Jonathan taken as propheticall, it muſt firſt have ſome verity in it, being underſtood according to the preſent caſe of Hannah, and of Samuel and David following ſoone after, and then underſtood alſo as pointing moreover prophetically at thoſe particulars.

Lyra.

V. 12. V. 11. Now the ſonnes of Eli were ſonnes of Belial, they knew not the Lord, &c. Before this it is ſaid, That Elkanah went to his houſe to Ramah, which was before called Ramathaim, but Samuel miniſtred to the Lord before Eli, which is to be underſtood, not immediately after Elkanah's departure, for hee was then too young, but ſo ſoone as hee was growne fit and able to doe ſome little ſervice about the Tabernacle in ſetting up Lights, and attending upon Eli: And more particularly, as ſome thinke, hee being now full ſeven yeares old, and therefore hee is now called נער and this was the eighth yeare of Eli's High prieſthood. Now that of Samuel is inſerted here before the mention made of the wickedneſſe of Eli's ſons, how hee miniſtred to the Lord, that the fault of Eli's ſons might appeare the more foule; for contraries, ſaith Lyra, being ſet together, are made the more manifeſt. And hereby it appeareth that Elkanah was of the tribe of Levi, becauſe otherwiſe his ſon could not have ſerved in the Tabernacle. For the name whereby the ſonnes of Eli are called, viz. ſonnes of Belial, enough hath been ſaid already upon Chap. 1. 16. and they are ſaid not to have knowne the Lord, becauſe they denyed him in their doings; or in thus ſaying, it is ſhewed, how they were ſons of belial, that is, without a yoke, becauſe they had caſt off the yoke of Gods ordinances and lawes, as if they had not knowne them, taking a contrary courſe of their owne deviſing about his ſacrifices, and in the manner of their living, as the next words doe declare. Peter Martyr thinketh that they are truly ſaid not to have knowne the Lord, becauſe they ſtudyed not his Word, whereby alone God may be truly known: ſo Kimhi ſaith, they knew not the Divine right, and the true laws of the holy Miniſtery, wherefore they deviſed for themſelves another right, and excogitated a new way of doing. The Chaldee Paraphraſt rendreth it, They were deſtitute of the feare of the Lord; and Peter Martyr himſelfe at the firſt concurreth with my expoſition beforegoing, they knew not the Lord, that is, they did and lived, as if they knew him not; and if they were ignorant of the rights preſcribed by the Lord concerning their office, nothing could bee ſpoken more ſhamefull of Prieſts. But becauſe it was knowne even to the common ſort of people, how they ought to have proceeded, as appeareth, v. 16. I cannot thinke that they erred thus, becauſe they knew not, but becauſe they regarded not Gods ordinance, ſo profane or Atheiſticall were they.

Lyra.

Contraria juxta ſe invicem poſita magis eluceſcunt.

Peter Martyr.

Chald. Paraphr.

V. 13, 14. The Prieſts cuſtome towards the people was, when any man brought a ſacrifice, their ſervant came with a fleſh-hooke with 3 teeth in his hand, whilſt the fleſh was

V.15. in ſeething, &c. 15. alſo before they burnt the fat, their ſervant came to him that ſacrificed and ſaid, Give fleſh to the Prieſt to roaſt, for hee will not have ſodden fleſh but raw, &c.
The ſinnes of Elies ſonnes about the ſacrifices are ſet forth here to be three. 1. In that whereas the right ſhoulder and breaſt onely of the peace-offerings, were allotted to the Prieſt, Levit. 7.31. they tooke more, even whatſoever the fleſh-hooke brought up out of the pot, kettle or caldron, which was ſacriledge. ; 2. In that they would ſerve themſelves before the Lord, to whom the fat was firſt to bee burned, and then the Prieſt was to have his part, which was great preſumption, Vatablus, Iunius, Borrheus. neither would they have it ſodden, but raw, that it might be dreſſed to their liking, which was guloſity. 3. In that they ſtayed not to take it at the offerers hands, but extorted it by violence, which was rapine, as Vatablus, Junius, and Borrheus have noted. And this their ſinne will appeare to bee the greater if we conſider, P. Martyr. what a large portion was alotted unto them out of the ſacrifices. If a ſacrifice were brought for ſin by any private perſon, all but the fat, was the Prieſts; indeed if it were for the ſins of the Prieſt, or of the whole Congregation, it was wholly to be burnt without the campe: Of a ſacrifice of peace-offerings there was a threefold diviſion, part was to be burned upon the Altar, part went to the offerer to feaſt withall before the tabernacle, and part to the Prieſts, viz. as the Hebrews note, ſome of every principall part, of the trunke or body the breaſt, of the members the right ſhoulder, and of the head the two cheekes. Wherefore they being ſo largely provided for, it was a foule ſin in the ſonnes of Eli to take more, in any ſacrifice. Againe they ſinned no leſſe in taking it, before the fat was burned to the Lord: for the Altar, was as it were, the Lords Table, now they would not ſtay
R. Levi Ben Gerſon. til his part was offered, but ſerve themſelves firſt, as if ſervants ſhould preſumptuouſly take their owne dinner before they had ſerved in their maſters; and ſeeing the offering of part firſt was a ſanctifying of the whole, they inverting this order fed not, as they ought to have done upon holy meate, but upon prophane and common: this is P. Martyr and B. Gerſon. Hugo Card. ſaith, that the cuſtome was ſo ſoone as the Beaſt was fleaed, to take the fat and burne it on the Altar, and then preſenting the fleſh there to take all the parts away againe and boyle them, laſtly the ſhoulder, breaſt, &c. being boyled were given to the Prieſts; but now they contrariwiſe took their parts away firſt raw, then offered the fat and came with a fleſhhook to get what they could more, when the offerers parts were in boyling, ſo that they ſinned all the five ſinnes that are in gluttony. Præproperè, lautè, nimis, ardenter, ſtudioſè. 1. Becauſe they would have it, before the fat was burnt. 2. Raw.
3. They ſent with a fleſhhooke. 4. This their ſoule deſired. 5. They tooke it by force. Moreover, as Martyr hath it, this may ſeem to be a light ſin, becauſe it was but about meat for the belly, but ſinne is not to be meaſured thus, but by the command of God, which to tranſgreſſe in any thing is intolerable, as we may ſee in our firſt parents. And unto theſe ſinnes they added the ſinne of adultery, ſo that there being 4 cardinall vertues, as the Philoſopher ſpeaketh, Wiſedome, Juſtice, Fortitude and Temperance, they ſinned againſt them all, becauſe they were ignorant of Gods Ordinances, and had need, that the people ſhould put them in minde thereof, v. 16. they were moſt unjuſt, and fortitude degenerated into daintines about their diet; and againſt temperance they ſinned, in that they refrained not from their neighbours wives, no not in the time, when they came up to the Tabernacle for devotion. And the like ſinnes, ſaith hee, reigned amongſt the Cardinalls of Rome. And this V.17. made men to abhorre the offering of the Lord. Their ſinnes about the holy things redounded, 1. To the ignominy of Gods ſacrifices, and conſequently of God.
2. To the great hurt of the people, who becauſe of theſe abuſes would not many of them bring any more offerings, as the abuſe of the Sacrament amongſt the papiſts depriving the people of the wine maketh many that feare God, to refraine from communicating with them. In concluding this of their ſinnes it is ſaid the ſinne of the young men was very great, Hebr. הנערים of Lyra. the children, ſo likewiſe the Vulgar Latin, peccatum puerorum, which Lyra expoundeth thus, they were called children, as Samuel is called a childe, v. 18.
not in age, but in conditions, although hee were yet but a childe in yeares,
and

and his miniſtring before the Lord then is againe remembred to condemne them the more, and to commend him, in that ſuch a childe attended better upon the ſervice of God in his place, and lived better then they, who were men and fathers happily of children, 1 Sam. 4. 19.

For Samuels miniſtring before the Lord in his childhood ſomewhat hath V. 18.
beene already ſaid, v. 11. but here it is further added, girded with a linnen Ephod: of an Ephod wee read for the High-Prieſt, Exod. 28. 6. but that was made of gold, blew purple and skarlet, this of Samuel was ſuch, ſaith Lyra, as the Levites uſed in their miniſtry, made onely of linnen; and of linnen Ephods worne by the Prieſts, wee read 1 Sam. 22. 18. and David is ſaid to 2 Sam. 6. 14.
have danced before the Arke in a linnen Ephod, ſo that when any came to miniſter before the Lord in any kinde, it ſeemeth, that they uſed linnen Ephods; and white garments are ſpoken of as garments uſed to expreſſe joy, Eccleſ. 9. 8. So that, as Willet noteth, there were three kindes of Ephods, 1. of Willet.
the High-Prieſt, 2. of the Prieſts and Levites, which were holy, 3. a civill garment of the ſame faſhion worne ſometimes by others being about ſacred duties. Theod. qu. 8. ſaith, that for the excellent grace appearing in him & the hopes conceived of him, Eli imparted unto him this honor. Toſtatus, becauſe no mention is made of an Ephod for Levites, thinketh it to have bin a lay mans-garment.

Moreover his mother made him a little coat and brought it up to him from yeare V. 19.
to yeare, &c. That is, to be worne under his Ephod at Feaſtivall times, ſaith Peter Martyr; whereas Kimbi holdeth, that ſhee carryed it away againe and Peter Martyr.
brought the ſame from yeare to yeare, hee rejecteth that, becauſe when hee grew to a greater ſtature, it would have beene too little for his uſe. This is written to ſhew the motherly care of Hannah over her ſonne Samuel, although ſhee had given him away, yet ſhee ceaſed not to provide ſomewhat for him from time to time. And this her piety was well approved by Eli, and V. 20, 21.
her diligent reſorting to the Tabernacle, in ſo much that he bleſſed her and her husband, and God gave her five children more, whereby we may ſee, that there is nothing loſt, but much gotten by giving to the Lord.

Now Eli was very old and heard of all that his ſonnes did to all Iſrael, and how V. 22.
they lay with the women, that aſſembled at the doore of the Tabernacle, &c. Theſe women, ſaith Lyra, were ſuch as came to the Tabernacle after the time of their Lyra.
purification ended, according to the law, Levit. 12. ſo likewiſe Hugo, but he ſaith, that ſome hold, that they did not lye with them, but for money gave leave to their husbands to lye with them, before their purification, becauſe V. 24.
it is ſaid, they made the Lords people to tranſgreſſe, ſo Jerom. Ben Gerſon ſaith, Hieronym. de that Elies ſonnes lay not with them, but deferred to offer their offerings, tradit. Hebr.
when they brought them, ſo that they were ſometimes conſtrained to lye Ben Gerſon.
abroad before the Tabernacle all night. Becauſe if they had ſinned by adulery, Eli their father would have ſpoken of it, when he reproved them, or the man of God, when hee came to taxe Eli for their wickedneſſe, which neither of them doth, but onely of their abuſes about the ſacrifices of the Lord. But the Text is plaine, as Peter Martyr hath it, they lay with them, and the verb P. Martyr.
is maſculine, therefore theſe are but vaine imaginations. Eli being old and dim-ſighted, ſo as that hee could not ſee; they waxed bold to commit theſe horrible wickedneſſes. In ſetting forth theſe womens aſſembling to the doore of the Tabernacle, Hebr. the word חעבאות is uſed being taken from the marching of ſouldiers, becauſe, as David Kimbi hath it, the cuſtome was, that they who came to be purifyed, ſhould come together in companies, like troopes. Of ſouldiers of women aſſembling to the doore of the Tabernacle, read Exod. 38. 8. many of which came for devotion, as Hannah Luke 2. and did, as it Borrhaus.
were, militare deo as the Levites, touching whom this word is alſo uſed, Numb.
4. 3. and this aggravateth the ſinnes of Elies ſonnes, in that they committed this wickedneſſe with ſuch holy women and neare ſo holy place, being nothing moved with the reverence thereof, or of him that dwelt there.

And hee ſaid unto them, Why doe you ſuch things, &c. Hee being High-Prieſt and V. 23.
Judge ſhould have puniſht them according to their ſinnes, but hee onely re-

1 Tim.3.
*Hieron.lib.*1.
contr.Iovin.
Quia corripuit filios lenitate patris,non authoritate pontificis, damnatus eſt.

proved them, whence it came to paſſe, that they ſtill went on in their ſinnes and were nothing amended, and thus Eli alſo became guilty of their wickedneſſe. And becauſe it is ſuppoſed, that when the children are wicked and out of order, there is fault in the father, the Apoſtle forbiddeth him to bee made a Biſhop, that hath not his children in ſubjection with all chaſtity, and Jerom ſaith, that hee whoſe children live unchaſtly, cannot be a Biſhop, ſaith Peter Martyr. Eli corrected his ſonnes with the lenity of a father, not with the authority of an High-Prieſt, and becauſe hee was bound to correct them thus, he was puniſhed not onely for their iniquity, but alſo for his owne, as Jerom hath it.

V. 24.
Lyra.
Hugo Cardin.
P.Martyr.
V.25.

Yee make the Lords people to tranſgreſſe, that is, diſcouraging them by your abuſes from bringing ſacrifices, as they ought to doe, ſo Lyra, but Hugo erroneouſly, becauſe yee make them goe in to their wives, before their purification: for it was in the matter of ſacrifice, as alſo Peter Martyr ſaith. If one man ſinne againſt another, the Judge ſhall judge him, but if hee ſinne againſt the Lord, who ſhall plead for him? Here Eli aggravateth the ſinnes of his ſonnes, in that hee ſheweth them not to be againſt the ſecond table and man, but againſt the firſt and ſo immediately againſt God, for any abuſe in the ſervice of God is againſt God.

Lyra.

For the meaning of theſe words, Lyra ſaith, placari ei deus poteſt, God may be pacifyed towards him by prayer and ſacrifice, in this reading following the Vulgar Latin, but if he ſinneth againſt God, what meanes of pacification are now left? not that it is impoſſible, that he ſhould bee forgiven, but moſt difficult, as it is ſaid of him that ſinneth againſt the Holy Ghoſt, hee ſhall never bee forgiven. But this was abſolutely ſpoken, and therefore it is ill brought for a parallel to this by Lyra.

Matth.12.

P.Martyr.

Peter Martyr firſt ſetting downe the expoſition of the Hebrewes, the Judge determineth commonly of treſpaſſes, done by one man againſt another, and ſo they come againe, after great fallings out, to bee reconciled to one another: but if the treſpaſſe be againſt the Judge himſelfe, hee being both the party offended and Judge, the offender can expect nothing but ſevere puniſhment from him, and likewiſe from God the Judge of all, if he committeth ſinne againſt him immediately: for when one man ſinneth againſt another, God is alſo offended and ſinne is committed againſt him, becauſe his law is tranſgreſſed, but that which is immediately done againſt God, onely is here ſaid to be againſt God, and the other kinde againſt man. After this of the Hebrews hee bringeth his owne, which is this: if a ſinne be committed againſt man there are ſacrifices, whereby it may be expiated, but when the ſacrifices themſelves are corrupted, there are no meanes now left to expiate ſuch a ſinne. And this I take to be moſt genuine. For whereas in our tranſlation it is read, the Judge ſhall judge him, Hebr. it is ופללו-אלוהים God ſhall be entreated for him, and the next word rendred, plead or crave for him, is the ſame verb, and becauſe craving of pardon and obtaining it was by ſacrifice, it is well expounded, his ſinne may be expiated by ſacrifice, but ſith the corrupting of ſacrifices was a moſt hainous kinde of ſinning againſt God, it is ſaid on the contrary ſide, touching this ſinne, if a man ſinne againſt God, who ſhall plead, or make atonement for him? the meanes of atonement being thus perverted and taken away, it cannot be. And although אלוהים be ſometime rendred Judges in other places, yet there is no reaſon here to goe from the proper ſignification, eſpecially it being a plurall and joyned with a verb of the ſingular number, as it never is, when men Judges are ſet forth hereby. Yet I doe not thinke, that every ſinne about ſacrificing, although it were very great, was ſuch, as that no meanes now could be uſed for the expiating thereof, for the blood of Jeſus Chriſt cleanſeth from all ſinne, and even for errors about holy things there were ſacrifices.

1 Ioh.1.6.

Indeed hee that had no grace to repent, after groſſe ſinning, but went obſtinately on ſtill in ſinne, for his ſinne there was no expiation, not becauſe it was unpardonable, but becauſe his heart was uncapable of repentance, ſo Pellican, and this was the caſe of theſe young men, which made their father to ſpeake thus unto them, as the next words ſhew. Notwith-

Pellican.

ſtanding they hearkened not to the voyce of their father becauſe the Lord would ſlay them. And of any that ſinne preſumptuouſly it may alſo truely be ſaid, who ſhall entreate for them? for their caſe is even almoſt deſperate, becauſe ſuch doe hardly ever repent, neither will their obdurated hearts admit of grace at any time to repent. Thus wee ſee, how Eli was ſevere enough in words towards his wicked ſonnes, but forſomuch, as hee did nothing againſt them, in expelling them from the Prieſts office, and cutting them off, as they that ſinned preſumptuouſly ought to be dealt withall, neither did hee rip up their ſinnes in particular, or charge them herewith, as certainly perpetrated by them, and as utterly diſtaſted by himſelfe, (for he ſaid onely, I heare ill of you by all the people, as if he went onely upon hearesay and were put on by the people thus to checke them) hee made himſelfe guilty of their wickedneſſe, as Peter Martyr noteth, who alſo addeth, that Chryſoſt. ſaith, hee ſhould have abdicated them, and put ſuch impudent knaves quite from the Prieſt-hood: ſo Marcion having ſtuprated a certaine maid was expelled from the Church by his father, a godly Biſhop. But happily Eli refrained from thus doing, leſt the High-prieſthood ſhould by this meanes goe from his family; but that, which hee thus ſought to avoid, hee brought upon his family, as hereafter followeth. Now becauſe it is ſaid the Lord would ſlay them, a queſtion is moved, How this could bee, ſeeing hee willeth not the death of a ſinner? Anſwer. Hee willeth it not indeede, as the cauſe hereof, but as a juſt Judge, they being obſtinate and incorrigible ſinners hee would for a puniſhment of ſo great wickedneſſe deſtroy them, hee willed not their deſtruction directly, but by conſequence, becauſe hee would doe juſtice upon ſuch ſinners; to which effect Lyra. Or the word becauſe noteth the ſigne, not the cauſe, ſaith Hugo, as in ſaying of that woman, a ſinner, Luke 7. Becauſe ſhee hath loved much many ſinnes are forgiven her, it is not meant, that her love was the cauſe of this forgiveneſſe, but the ſigne. Peter Martyr ſaith, 1. That Ezek. 18. it is ſpoken of penitent ſinners, here of obſtinate. 2. According to Auguſt, as Lyra had it before, hee willeth not the death of a ſinner ſimply, but per voluntatem retribuentem, as he cannot but in juſtice thus puniſh the impenitent ſinner. Some referre it to his eternall decree of reprobation, which is the firſt cauſe of the perdition of the wicked, and the ſecond is their owne obſtinacy in ſinning, but ſo his will muſt come in as a cauſe of this obſtinacy and deſtruction, whereas hee decreeth to reprobate onely upon the fore-ſight of their finall impenitency ariſing out of their owne corruption, and want of grace. The beſt is to hold, that for their impudent and abominable ſinning the Lord would lay this ſpirituall judgement upon them, viz. the withdrawing of his grace, ſo as that they regarding no admonition ſhould at length receive their juſt reward, deſtruction by a violent death here, and after that perdition for ever in hell fire: ſo Junius. Of giving men over in judgement to hardneſſe of heart, ſee more in my notes upon Rom 9.

Peter Martyr.

Ezekiel 18.

Lyra.

Hugo Card.

Peter Martyr.

Borrhaim.

Pellican.

Junius. Oſiander

V. 26. And the childe Samuel grew on, and was in favour both with the Lord and men. Of his growing before the Lord, ſee v. 21. now this is added for further explication, that by his growing when hee miniſtred before the Lord is meant not onely his increaſing in ſtature, but in vertue and grace, which made him amiable to God and to all good men, as contrariwiſe Elies ſonnes were abominable to all. And this praiſe of Samuel is ſo often inſerted that their abomination might appeare to be the greater.

V. 27. V. 28. And there came a man of God unto Eli and ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the Lord, Did I plainly appeare unto the houſe of thy father in Egypt &c. And did I chooſe him out of all the Tribes of Iſrael to bee my Prieſt, &c. wherefore kick yee at my ſacrifice? &c. Who this man of God was is not expreſſed, and therefore, as Lyra ſaith, divers conjecture diverſly, ſome that it was Phinees, and ſome that it was Elias, but neither truely, for Phinees lived 350 yeares before, and Elias 208 yeares after; ſome, that it was an Angel, and ſome Elkanah, the father of Samuel. But leaving all theſe, as meere conjectures, as Peter Martyr doth, becauſe the Scripture ſaith nothing in particular, who this man was, I determin, that hee was ſome

Lyra.

P. Martyr.

man extraordinarily ſtirred up, and indued with the ſpirit of propheſie to rebuke and denounce judgements againſt Eli and his family, as thoſe moſt corrupt times required, but his name is unknowne: yet Junius ſaith, it was Samuel, whoſe calling to ſpeake thus to Eli is ſet downe, Ch. 3. per ὑστέρωσιν; and Willet maintaineth this, 1. Becauſe there was no Prophet in thoſe dayes elſe, as the Chaldee upon Ch. 3. 1. 2. v. 12. there is a reference to this. 3. Becauſe Samuel feared to tell Eli thus much, which argueth that it was not told him before: ſo likewiſe Joſephus, Antiq. lib. cap. 11. That hee was a Prophet, the phraſe, a man of God declareth, becauſe Prophets peculiarly were thus called, and therefore hee ſpeaketh as a Prophet, thus ſaith the Lord. The Hebrewes ſay, that the propheſying of Eli now failing becauſe of his great age, another Prophet was ſent unto him, as though age could make a man unfit for to propheſie, or a Prophet might in no caſe be reproved by a Prophet, when as David a Prophet was reproved by Nathan, and the Prophet that ſpake againſt Jeroboam having diſobeyed, was threatened by the old Prophet, that ſeduced him. Wee may note, that even the High-Prieſt is ſubject to reproof for his ſinnes, as Aaron alſo was before ſharpely reproved by Moſes, and Peter afterwards by Paul: whereby wee may ſee, how great the pride of the Pope of Rome is, that hee will be ſubject to the reproof of no man, but of God onely; ſo Symmachus once decreed, and the Popes flatterers ſay the ſame at this day. For the ſpeach made by this Prophet to Eli; 1. Hee commemorateth the benefits and favours of God towards Elies Progenitors, in that hee choſe Aaron in Egypt, when hee was bondſlave, to bee his High-Prieſt, to come neare unto him with ſacrifice, incenſe and the Ephod, and provided liberally for his maintenance by giving him all the offerings of the children of Iſrael. 2. Hee upbraideth him by his ingratitude, in that having ſo much for his maintenance given unto him, and being ſo greatly honoured of God he againe diſhonoured him ſo much about his ſacrifice. 3. He threatneth him and his whole family with great miſery to come.

Ben Gerſon.

1 Kings 13.

Note.
Exod. 32.
Gal. 2. 11.

1.
Lyra.

For the firſt, this appearing to the houſe of his father, was according to Lyra, Exod. 4. 27. when God ſpake unto Aaron and bade him goe and joyne with Moſes his brother, for then ſay the Hebrews, hee told him, that hee ſhould bee High-Prieſt, although it bee not there expreſſed; and they hold before this, that hee was a Prophet and propheſied in Egypt, and reproved the Hebrews for their idolatry there, and that one of his Sermons was recorded by Ezekiel, ſo Peter Martyr. Very anciently therefore did God grace the houſe of which Eli came, by conferring the Prieſthood upon it, the duties whereof here remembred were, 1. To offer ſacrifice. 2. To burne incenſe to God upon the Altar of incenſe. 3. To weare the glorious Ephod with the Urim and Thummin, of which ſee Levit. 8. and therein to miniſter in the Sanctuary. The maintenance allowed to the Prieſts was all the oblations brought by the people, ſee Numb. 18. which was a very liberall maintenance, whereupon both the High-Prieſt and the reſt of the Prieſts might have lived plentifully and honourably.

2.
V. 29.

For his ingratitude. v. 26 Why kicke yee againſt my ſacrifices, &c. and honoreſt thy ſonnes above mee, &c. Hee ſpake thus unto him, becauſe they did, as it were, tread Gods Ordinances touching the order about ſacrifices under their feet, vilipending them, and preferring a new order of their owne deviſing to ſatisfy the better both their covetous and epicuriſh mindes; and becauſe Eli ate of the meat alſo, as is moſt probable, thus diſorderly taken and roaſted, hee is joyned with his ſonnes in the offence, why kick yee, &c. And becauſe neither for this, nor for their foule adulteries hee puniſht them, as he ought to have done, hee is challenged to have honoured his ſonnes above God, who had ſo much honoured him, and his fathers houſe, which was the higheſt degree of ingratitude that could be.

2.
V. 30.

For his threatening. v. 30. I ſaid ſurely that thy houſe and the houſe of thy fathers ſhould walke before mee for ever, the Vulgar Latin, ſhould miniſter before mee for ever, more expreſſing the meaning that they ſhould execute the Prieſts office and abide in that high dignity alwayes, but now ſaith the Lord, farre bee it from mee, &c. A queſtion is here, when this promiſe was made to Eli and to his fathers houſe, becauſe wee read of none in particular? Anſwer. Some ſay, that Aaron having two ſonnes, Eleazar and Ithamar, when there was ſo great corruption in Iſrael, by idolatry and all manner of licentiouſneſſe, of which wee read Judg. 19. 20. &c. Eleazars houſe was put from the High-Prieſthood, and it was tranſlated to the houſe of Ithamar, becauſe that family had beene negligent and remiſſe in withſtanding ſuch abominable wickedneſſes, and the family of Ithamar acquiting it ſelf better, God made this promiſe, although it be no where expreſſed, till now. Others becauſe no ſuch promiſe is expreſſed in any place, but onely to Aaron and to his houſe, Exod. 28. 43. and Ch. 29. 9. that they ſhould bee Prieſts unto God by a perpetuall decree, and the other is but a tradition of the Hebrews, ſome hold, that nothing elſe is meant here, but that Eli and his poſterity being of the Prieſts that came of Aaron, ſhould have continued ſo alwayes, as thoſe that came of Eleazar Aarons eldeſt ſonne, but now one part of his poſterity ſhould be cut off in them, for their great wickedneſſe, ſo as that they ſhould not bee in ſo holy and honourable an office any more. For to Phinees the ſonne of Eleazar, the High Prieſthood was promiſed for ever, Numb. 25. 12, 13. and therefore it could not after this be promiſed to Ithamars family: thus Junius, and after him Willet. But I ſubſcribe rather to the other, becauſe the Lord ſaith, I will raiſe mee up a Prieſt, not Prieſts, that is, an High-Prieſt, and hee ſhall walke before mine anointed alwayes, that is, in the dayes of the King, whom I will ſet up, this ſhall be done, as it was 1 Kings 2. 35. when Zadok was made High-Prieſt, and Abiathar was put downe; for in the time of Saul, Abijah, the ſonne of Abitub, brother to Ichabod was High-Prieſt ſtill, and hee was of the poſterity of Eli. And it is not ſaid that Elies Poſterity ſhould bee quite cut off, but that none ſhould live to bee an old man, and that they ſhould bee poore, and humbly crave of the High-Prieſt to bee admitted to execute the Prieſts office for bread. v. 35, 36. Yet I confeſſe, that when I looke into the genealogies of the ſonnes of Aaron, and finde none to have come of Ithamar, but onely of Eleazar, I can ſee no reaſon, why it ſhould bee ſo, but that Ithamars ſonnes failed not long after this judgement denounced, or if any ſurvived, they were in Solomons time rejected, as unworthy of the Prieſts office for ever, unleſſe they were after ſo poore and deſpicable inferior Prieſts, that they were paſt over in ſilence, as if they had not beene; ſee more v. 33. And hitherto of the firſt queſtion, another is made, How the Lord ſaith, now it ſhall not be ſo, whether there be any variableneſſe with God, and if there be not, as indeed there is not, how it is ſaid here, I was thus determined, but now it ſhall be otherwiſe. Anſw. When God promiſeth any good to any particular perſons, a condition is alwayes to be underſtood, if they be obedient unto him, and contrariwiſe for his threatening, ſee Jerem. 18. 7, 8. &c. So the promiſe of God to Eli and the houſe of his father was to be underſtood with a condition, ſo Peter Martyr. There is the like condition of the promiſe of life and ſalvation to all the faithfull, they muſt perſevere in faith and obedience to the end: but they that are of the election, ſhall bee ſo kept by the Spirit given unto them, that they ſhall either not fall, or if they fall, riſe againe by repentance and be undoubtedly ſaved, as the election of the ſeede of Abraham can never be fruſtrated, notwithſtanding their long falling off. For thoſe that honour mee I will honour, &c. that is, ſay the Hebrews, becauſe Phinees the ſonne of Eleazar honoured mee with all his might, I will honour his family and advance it againe, but Eli & his family, becauſe they have deſpiſed mee, ſhall come into contempt. But the theſis is generally true in all men, as Peter Martyr ſaith, and to honour God is, 1 by being zealous for his glory, and not induring any thing againſt it, 2 to live godlily, 3 to hearken to the voyce of wiſedome, 4 to give credit unto God, as Abraham did &c.

Qu.

Peter Martyr, Lyra, Hebræi, Oſiand Borrhaus,

Junius. Willet.

1 Sam. 14. 3.

1 Chron. 6.

Qu.

Iam. 1. 17.

Peter Martyr.

Rom. 11.

Behold the dayes come, that I will cut off thine arme, &c. By arme, ſaith Lyra, underſtand the power and authority of the High-Prieſthood, which was cut off

V. 31. Lyra.

1 Kings 2.35.

Peter Martyr.

off 80 yeares after by Solomon, when Abiathar, that came of Eli, was removed, and Zadok ſet up, who came of Eleazar. For from this time to that were 40 yeares of Samuel and Saul, and 40 of David. Comeſtor addeth that his arme is ſpoken of alſo, becauſe the right arme of the ſacrifice belonged to the Prieſt. Moreover by his arme, that ſhould be cut off, is meant the cutting off of his children in the midſt of their age, as Hophni and Phinees, his two ſonnes, and therefore it is added, there ſhall not bee an old man in thy houſe, ſo likewiſe v. 32. This, ſaith Peter Martyr, is by ſome expounded as not meant of their age, but wiſedome, they ſhould be children in wiſedome, and ſo uncapable of any high dignity: but hee preferreth the literall meaning, either they ſhould bee cut off by a violent death, as many of them were, 1 Sam. 22. by Saul, or pine away and ſo dye for ſorrow, to ſee Eleazars family ſo preferred, and themſelves deſpiſed, ſee for proof of this verſ. 33. Oſiander thinketh, that it was meant, they ſhould all dye, before that they attained to the age of 30. and ſo before they could bee admitted into a Prieſt Office. Now this puniſhment was firſt denounced, and long after inflicted, that Eli yet living might bee more affected with his ſinne unto repentance, and that his poſterity might have ſpace of repentance, but not being amended the more juſtly be thus judged. To ſhew, that they ſhould pine away for ſorrow, it is added,

V.32.

Lyra.

v. 32. Thou ſhalt ſee thine adverſary in the habitation, in all the wealth, that God ſhall give Iſrael, &c. the Vulgar Latin, in the Temple in all the proſperity of Iſrael, that is, ſaith Lyra, thou ſhalt ſee the poſterity of Eleazar in high honour in the Temple, which Solomon ſhall build in the moſt flouriſhing time of the people of Iſrael, and ſo when the greateſt multitude of ſacrifices ſhall bee brought unto the Temple, and the Prieſts ſhall be moſt liberally provided for, this being a corraſive to thy heart to thinke of thy being cut off from ſo great an happineſſe. Some, ſaith Comeſtor, hold, that it was meant, that the Prieſthood ſhould bee tranſlated from Aarons poſterity to Samuel, but falſly, ſeeing Samuel was never a Prieſt, and the Aaronites continued Prieſts till the captivity of Babylon. If it bee demanded, how it could be ſaid, that Eli ſhould ſee it, forſomuch as hee lived not to that time; hee anſwereth, it is not meant preciſely of his perſon, but of thoſe that came of him, thou in thy poſterity ſhalt ſee, &c.

PeterMartyr.

Junius.

Willet.

To the ſame effect Peter Martyr, the two families, that came of Aaron, were as two wives, whereof one is counted the others adverſary, and the felicity of the one is a pining and vexation to the other. Even as the families ſpringing from the ſame King, as the houſe of Yorke and Lancaſter. Junius rendring the words in a diverſe manner thus, For after that thou ſhalt behold the ſtraights of my habitation, for all that wherein God would have done good to Iſrael, expoundeth them of the ſtraight by the taking of the Arke by the Philiſtims, Ch. 4. which ſhould not have beene, but contrariwiſe good ſhould have beene done to Iſrael, if hee and his children had adminiſtred their Prieſts Office rightly: but now after that hee had ſeene this to his great grief hee ſhould dye, and after him there ſhould bee no old man of his family for ever, but every one ſhould from time to time dye in the midſt of his ſtrength. And this expoſition is juſtifyed by Willet, becauſe of Eleazars family comming to the High-prieſthood in ſtead of Elies, it is ſpoken, v. 35. but the word צר doth moſt properly ſignify an adverſary, as it was uſed before, Ch. 1. 6. in ſpeaking of Peninnah Hannahs adverſary, and the next words are verbatim, in all the good, that hee ſhall doe for Iſrael, ſo that the expoſition firſt brought doth beſt agree, for it is not an adverſary in Gods houſe to the prejudice of the good of Iſrael, that is here ſpoken of, ſuch as the Philiſtim was, but Elies adverſary ſitting as chiefe ruler here in the beſt and moſt proſperous times. In the Hebrew there is neither thy enemy, nor my habitation, but צר מעון, an enemy, an habitation or houſe, ſo that it may be read, thy enemy having an houſe, &c. that is, a ſure houſe, according to v. 35. Whereas that verſe is objected, as making againſt this expoſition, becauſe there one is ſpoken of to be ſet up in the roome of Eli, I anſwer, this doth not hinder, but that hee may be ſpoken of here alſo, but here more obſcurely, there more plainly, it being further expreſſed what good ſhould bee done to Iſrael, and when, viz. in the time of Gods anointed Solomon, who ſhould build a glorious Temple, and inrich the kingdom.

V. 34.

V. 33.

Lyra.

And this ſhall bee a ſigne unto thee, that ſhall come upon thy two ſons, Hophni and Phinehas, in one day they ſhall both dye. Before this having ſaid, that there ſhould not bee an old man of his houſe; And v. 33. The man of thine that I ſhall not cut off from mine Altar, ſhall bee to conſume thine eyes, and to grieve thy heart, &c. that is, although my meaning is not to cut off every one of thy poſterity from the Prieſtly office, yet hee that ſurviveth, ſhall live in ſuch poverty and miſery, and bee ſo macerated through envy to ſee his adverſary ſo highly preferred, and himſelfe ſo debaſed, as that his life ſhall bee but for his greater puniſhment, for his owne terrour, and example to others, as Cains life was: ſo that here againe by thine eyes, and thy heart, wee are to underſtand the eyes and the heart not of Eli in perſon, but of his race, thus Lyra. And more particularly wee may underſtand by the man ſurviving Abiathar, who eſcaped when Saul ſlew al the reſt, but his eſcape was but to endure more vexation and miſery, when he ſaw Zadok preferred to the High-prieſthood, himſelf being put down; ſo Willet.

Gen. 4.

1 Sam. 22.

Willet.

For the ſigne here given, it was, that when part of the judgement threatned ſhould come to paſſe, the reſt, which was to come after, might bee the more confirmed, as by the untimely death of his two ſons to come very ſhortly, hee might bee well aſſured when this was done, that all the reſt to come many yeares after, ſhould bee accompliſhed alſo. Now falſe Prophets have given ſignes, as well as true, Deut. 13. but there have alwayes been theſe differences; 1 They have ſometimes followed, ſometimes not, theſe alwayes without faile. 2 They were ambiguouſly propounded, theſe plainly. 3 They tended to idolatry and ſuperſtition, theſe to the glory of God; ſo P. Martyr.

P. Martyr.

V. 35.

1 Kings 2. 26.

And I will raiſe mee up a faithfull Prieſt, &c. and hee ſhall walke before mine anointed for ever. This, as was before ſhewed, was Zadok; but how is it ſaid that hee ſhould walke before his anointed for ever? Anſw. In theſe words was implyed a change of government from an Ariſtocracy into a Kingdome; and becauſe Kings were anointed to this high office, the King, that then ſhould [illegible] is ſet forth by the name of Gods anointed, and this particularly was [illegible], before whom Zadok ſhould miniſter, which is meant by ſtanding before him for ever, or, all dayes, as it is Hebr. that is, the Prieſthood being never more taken away from him and his poſterity, as from Eli, but abiding with him all Solomons dayes, and all the dayes of the Kings ſucceeding him, as long as the Common-wealth of Iſrael ſhould continue; and ſo Kimhi noteth upon 1 Chron. 7. that Zadoks Poſterity continued in the High-prieſthood till Ezra's time; and this is alſo meant by the words before-going, I will build him a ſure houſe, hee ſhall walke before mine anointed; that is, ſaith the Chaldee Paraphraſt, Hee ſhall miniſter to him by doctrine and erudition; not bee of greater dignity or excellency: and D. Kimhi ſaith, before him, is about the King, for the High-prieſt as the inferiour, came alwayes before the King, but onely when the King went to aske counſell of him from God, for then hee was before the Prieſt in an inferiour place, as Joſhua was appointed at ſuch times to come before Eleazar the Prieſt; ſo that here is no ground for the Popes ſuperiority above the Emperour, and making him to come before him, as he hath often done.

D. Kimhi.

Chald. Paraphr.

Numb 27. 21.

V. 36.

Peter Martyr.

And it ſhall come to paſſe, that every one that is left in thy houſe, ſhall come and crouch to him for a piece of ſilver, and a morſell of bread, &c. It may ſeeme, ſaith Peter Martyr, that ſeeing they were of Aarons poſterity, they could never come to this great want, for ſo much as the offerings, and tenth of the tithes were to bee diſtributed amongſt them, and if any through any blemiſh were unfit for ſervice, yet he muſt hence bee alſo maintained. But it is to bee underſtood that Abiathar the laſt High-prieſt, who came of Eli, for treaſon was not onely put from the Prieſts office, but commanded to goe and live apart at Anathoth, where his houſe was, having no more either to doe at the Altar, or any maintenance, tenance there-from, wherby it muſt needs be, that he lived in great poverty, and his children were poor, which made them come, as Lyra, following the hebrews, hath it, and crouch to the High-prieſt, and crave the meaneſt Prieſtly office for neceſſary maintenance: For a piece of ſilver, he hath an half-penny, as the word אגורה ſignifieth, it is the ſame with gerah, the twentyeth part of a ſhekel, according to Peter Martyr. And now if wee put all the judgements upon Eli's family together, wee ſhall finde that they ſuited with his, and his ſonnes ſins: 1 In that as hee honoured his ſons above God, ſo hee both loſt his honour, and them alſo. 2 As they abuſed the ſacrifices, ſo now his poſterity had no more to do with the ſacrifices, but at the allowance of another. 3 As they abounded with dainties, and in fleſhly pleaſures, ſo now they were in want and miſery.

Lyra.

The Morall.
Lyra.

Greg. in Paſtor. Cum paſtor per abrupta graditur conſequens eſt ut grex per præcipitium ſequatur.

Morally, by Eli's ſonnes were ſet forth wicked Miniſters of the Goſpel; their boy comming with a three-hooked inſtrument to pluck fleſh out of the pot, their ſenſuality carrying them to theſe three: Firſt, the luſt of the heart, that is, bodily pleaſures. Secondly, the luſt of the eyes, that is, worldly profits. Thirdly, the pride of life, that is, honours and dignities here. And as they made men to abhor Gods ſacrifices, ſo theſe by their lewdneſſe, that they have no care to doe good works, but live moſt wickedly: for when the Paſtor goeth by abrupt places, it muſt needs bee that the flock ſhould follow to a precipice, and periſh.

CHAP. III.

V. 1.

Schol. Hiſtor.
Hugo Cardin.

THe Word of the Lord was precious in thoſe dayes, and there was no open viſion. For the wickedneſſe of the Prieſts, ſaith Lyra, there had been no revelations or viſions a long time; wherefore it is ſaid, The Word of God was precious, that is, rare, for rare things are precious, ſeldome did the Word of God come to any extraordinarily, to ſhew what ſhould bee done afterwards; thus alſo Comeſtor. Hugo ſaith, it was both for the ſinnes of the Prieſts and the people, that God ſent no Prophets, nor Angels, and alledgeth Eſa. 13. A man ſhall be more precious then gold, to prove, that rare things are precious. But whereas ſom[illegible] hereupon, that preaching ſeldome is precious, and often preaching ſho[illegible] bee, becauſe this vilifieth it, hee alledgeth, Hebr. 6. 7. of the often falling, of raine to make the ground fruitfull, and the gloſſe of Jerome thereupon againſt it, If preaching bee rare, it is not ſufficient, but if it bee daily, it is vilified: ſo that both by the gloſſe and text, although through the corruption of people, the Word being often preached be ſleighted, yet rare preaching, as inſufficient, is to be condemned.

Hieron. Prædicatio ſi rara eſt non ſufficit, ſi aſſidua, vileſcit.

Peter Martyr.

Joſephus.

Peter Martyr here noteth how Samurl was rewarded for his faithfulneſſe and diligence in his place according to that, Thou haſt been faithfull in little, I will make thee Ruler over much; and therefore to make way unto the relation of the word of God comming to Samuel, it is firſt ſaid, The childe Samuel miniſtred to the Lord; and then ſee how the Lord dignified him, although hee were yet very young, for hee is generally held to have been but 12. Revelations, that were then very rare, were yet made unto him, ſo great grace and favour did hee come into with the Lord, none had that name and fame for a Prophet ſince Moſes, as hee had. There was no manifeſt viſion in thoſe dayes; that is, ſaith Junius, although there were ſome private revelations, yet the publike office of prophecying failed.

V. 2.

Junius.

And it came to paſſe at that time, when Eli was laid downe in his place, and his eyes waxed dimme, that he could not ſee. V. 3. Ter the lamp of God went out in the Temple where the Arke was, and Samuel was laid downe to ſleep. Being about to ſet forth the revelation made to Samuel, hee firſt deſcribeth the time. For theſe words, at that time, Junius hath, that day, that is, the day in which the Prophet had come to Eli, to threaten him, Chap. 2. 27. at night when Eli and Samuel were both in bed, in the Prieſts and Levites chambers, neare the Tabernacle in the Court thereof, for in the Tabernacle no man might lye; this of that day, is taken out of Ben Gerſon, and diſliked by Peter Martyr, becauſe it is Hebr. in thoſe dayes; ſo that it is not neceſſary to hold it to have been done preciſely the night following that day. Ter the lampe went out, that is, before morning, for it burnt all night, and in the morning was ordered againe continually, Exod. 27. 20, 21. the lamps were ſeven, which burnt all night, and from thenceforth three of them onely being renewed all day, and then all the ſeven againe at night, according to ſome; but according to others, five of them were lighted againe in the morning before the morning ſacrifice, and that being ended, the other two alſo; ſee my expoſition there. So that here is a deſcription of the night ſeaſon, it being yet towards the dawning of the day, for then the lampe began to goe out. A lampe is ſpoken of in the ſingular number, becauſe there was onely one golden candleſtick with ſeven branches, wherein ſeven lampes burned. For theſe words inſerted touching Eli, His eyes waxed dimme that hee could not ſee; they ſerve onely to ſhew, of how great an age Eli was at this time, and that, as Peter Martyr hath it, the reaſon of Samuel's ſo Peter Martyr.

readily running to Eli when he called, might appear, becauſe they that cannot ſee, have need of helpe oftentimes, eſpecially when this commeth upon them by age: yet hee thinketh not but that Eli could ſee a little, as Jacob being dim-ſighted, yet could ſee the two ſonnes of Joſeph to put his hands upon them, as hee would. Hee alſo ſaith, that the Rabbins note hereupon the great providence of God to bee pointed at, when one light went out, to ſet up another in his Church, after Eli, Samuel, as after Moſes, Joſhua; but whereas by Eli's eyes waxing dimme, they ſay it is not to bee underſtood of his bodily eyes, but of the eyes of his minde, becauſe it had been to no purpoſe here to make mention of his bodily blindneſſe, but to intimate, that hee had in times paſt the ſight of Divine things, but now had loſt it for the ſinnes of the people, this he diſliketh as not being ſaid according to the meaning of this place. I thinke that both blindneſſes may bee underſtood here: 1 Of the body, to ſhew why Samuel was ſo ready to runne to Eli, as being a thing to which hee had been uſed.
2 Of minde, to ſhew what need there was that God ſhould now raiſe up another Seer in his Church. The Vulg. Latine joyning the next verſe unto this, Eli his ſight was dimme, and hee could not ſee the lampe before it went out, hath given occaſion to Lyra, and others to inquire how this could bee properly ſpoken, forſomuch as the dimmeſt ſight, if it can ſee any thing, can ſee the light Lyra.
of a candle, or lampe by night: but he reſolveth it well, that the Latine tranſlation is herein corrupt, as alſo in many other places, for in Hebr. it is both diſtinguiſht by another verſe, and the words are, And before the lampe of the Lord went out, &c. Samuel was laid downe, &c. but as in confounding theſe two verſes there is an error in the Vulg Latine, ſo in our new Tranſlation, and in Junius it is gone from the order of the words in the latter part of the verſe, and the Vulg. Latine keepeth the right order, for in the Hebrew it is, And Samuel lay downe in the Temple of the Lord, where the Arke of God was, and ſo the Vulg. Latin; but Junius and our new Tranſlation, Ter the lamp was gone out in the Temple, &c. and Samuel was laid downe, inverting the order happily, that it might not be thought that any man lay in the houſe of the Lord. But the order of the words being kept, Ben Gerſon ſaith, it may bee rendred, beſides the R. L. B. Gerſon.
Temple, where there were chambers for the Prieſts and Levites to keepe in, and watch the Tabernacle, and this is followed by Peter Martyr, who noteth, that P. Martyr.
all the families of Levi were placed neare about the Tabernacle, eaſt, weſt, north, and ſouth; not that Gods houſe had any need to bee watched, but to Note.
teach us to watch alwayes, and to bee ſober, and to have our converſation in heaven, ſeeing wee are a royall Prieſthood now ſo many as bee true Chriſti-ans. There is a note of diſtinction under שכב called athnah, ſhewing that the next words, in the houſe of the Lord, &c. are to be diſtinguiſhed, and not to bee read, as ſhewing the place where Samuel lay.

V. 4. The Lord called Samuel, and hee anſwered, Here am I, and hee ranne to Eli, &c.
The Lord called Samuel three ſeverall times, and every time hee thinking that

Eli had called him, ranne to him; and the reaſon is rendred, v. 7. Samuel yet knew not the Lord, neither was the word of the Lord yet revealed unto him. Hebr.
And Samuel before hee knew the Lord, and before his word was revealed unto him.
Septuag. Which is followed by the Sept. being thus ſupplyed, Thus did Samuel before Chald. Arias he knew the Lord,&c. but the other is followed by the Chaldee, Arias, and Vatab.
Mont. Vulg. Vulg. Latine,&c. The ſenſe is all one, but becauſe טרם terem, ſignifieth, before that,
Latin. it is beſt to follow the Hebrew. Now Samuel is not ſaid, not to have known the Lord, as the wicked ſonnes of Eli, Chap. 2. 12. but as the laſt clauſe ex-preſſeth, hee knew not that the voice which came to him was his, becauſe hee had not yet been uſed to it; the Chaldee, he knew not the word of propheſie.
Gregory, lib. 3. c. 1. ſaith, the Lord ſpake in a voice like unto Eli's, ſo that Samuel knew it not to bee the Lords voice, but thought it had been Elies. Sa- P.Martyr. muels running to Eli, ſhewed his diligence, and God ordered it ſo by his providence, that hee ſhould run unto him three times, that Eli might ſurely know that it was a Divine revelation, and be affected with it, whereas otherwiſe hee might happily either not have heard of it, or have ſleighted it as a childiſh
V. 8, 9. dreame; ſo Martyr. But now hee perceived that the Lord had called him, and inſtructeth him when hee called againe, what anſwer hee ſhould make.

V. 10. Then the Lord came and ſtood, and called, as at other times, Samuel, Samuel, and he anſwered, Speake, for thy ſervant heareth; For theſe words, as at other times, Hebr. כפעם־בפעם, in the Vulg. Latine, ſecundo, moſt unaptly, for it was the fourth time of his calling. Peter Martyr, ſemel atque iterum; Junius, ut antea;
but the Hebrew ſignifieth, hac vice, ſicut alia vice, at this time, as at the other, or, againe and againe, for now he doubled his calling, ſo as hee had not yet done.
R Kimhi. Touching his comming and ſtanding, Kimhi thinketh that it was in ſome viſible ſhape, becauſe the ſame word is here uſed that was uſed in ſetting forth his ſtanding in Balaams way. Whereas in anſwering, Samuel ſpeaketh not all the words put into his mouth by Eli, for Eli bade him ſay, Speake Lord, for thy ſervant heareth, but hee leaveth out the word Lord; Kimhi noteth it to have been done for reverence to the name Jehovah, becauſe it ought not to be ſpo-R.Kimhi. ken by every one. But this is rightly taxed by Martyr as frivolous, becauſe if ſo, the High-prieſt would not have inſtructed him to ſpeak ſo: It is more probable, that Samuel through feare forgat part of his anſwer, as a man being Joſephus. terrified with majeſty may eaſily doe. Samuels being thrice called, ſaith Jo- ſephus, intimated his threefold dignity to come, of a Prophet, a Judge, and a Hugo Card. Prieſt, in that he offered ſacrifice. But Hugo ſaith, hee offered, becauſe Icha- bod was then too young, but hee was not for this a Prieſt; wherefore it is ſaid, Pſal. 99. 6. Moſes and Aaron amongſt his Prieſts, and Samuel amongſt, &c. Moreover, any man extraordinarily called might offer ſacrifice, and in any place, although ordinarily, the Prieſt onely comming of Aaron might doe it.

V. 11. And the Lord ſaid to Samuel, Behold I doe a thing in Iſrael, at which every one that heareth it, both his eares ſhall tingle, that is, it ſhall make him to ſtand amazed at it: for upon vehement aſtoniſhment, certaine commotions and humors are ſtirred up in the head, and deſcend with great force into the eares, Peter Martyr. making them to tingle; ſo Peter Martyr. Hee meant hereby the great judgement that ſhould ſhortly come upon all Iſrael by the Philiſtims, when the Arke of God ſhould bee taken and carryed away, of which who could heare with-Lyra. out aſtoniſhment? that the Arke ſo ſacred that none but the Prieſts might touch it, ſhould bee ſuffered to come into the hands of barbarous enemies, and ſo bee ſcorned and triumphed over, as Lyra partly hath it.

V. 12. In that day I will performe againſt Eli, all that I have ſpoken, &c. that is, ſaith Hugo, all that I have ſpoken by my Prophet, whom I ſent unto him; and
V. 13. I have told him, That I will judge his houſe for ever, is ſpoken alſo with reference to the ſame. This was the deſtruction of his two ſonnes, and the cutting off of all the reſt of his family in their youth, and the putting downe of the ſurvivers from the Prieſthood: When I begin, I will alſo make an end; Hebr. beginning and perfecting; whereby is not meant, that all things ſpoken of ſhould come to paſſe at one time, for the removall of his family from the Prieſthood was not till 80 yeares after, as hath been already ſhewed. Mart. I will begin and perfit it, but for theſe words, I have told him that I will judge his houſe, hee hath it, I will ſhew that I judge, &c. as if they had no reference to any former threatening, whereas indeed in Hebrew they plainly have, Becauſe his ſonnes made themſelves vile, and hee reſtrained them not; the Vulg. Latine, Becauſe hee knew that his ſonnes did unworthily, and hee corrected them not: the Sept. they curſed God, and hee admoniſhed them not. Junius, hee repreſſed not his ſonnes, bringing a curſe upon himſelfe, or themſelves: Mart. his ſons contemned themſelves, and hee prohibited them not. The word uſed in Hebrew, properly ſignifieth they curſed themſelves, as A. Mont. readeth it, but hereby, as Junius hath it, is meant, that they brought a curſe upon themſelves by their wickedneſſe, and hee was not ſevere enough againſt them to prevent it, or hee ſtopped them not in their wicked courſe time enough, but let them alone till they were ſo hardened, as that no admonition would doe them good; which is meant, when it is ſaid, Hee reſtrained them not, ſo Borrhæus.

V. 13.

Vulg. Lat.

Septuag.
Iunius.

V. 14.

Therefore I have ſworne to the houſe of Eli, That the iniquity of his houſe ſhall not bee purged with ſacrifice for ever. For the preterperfect tenſe, I have ſworn, Junius hath it, I ſweare, becauſe in that which was ſaid before by the Prophet, Chap. 2. there is no mention made of an oath. That the Lord did ſweare for confirmation, is no new thing, for hee ſware of old to Abraham, Gen. 22. 16. to confirme his promiſe, and Numb. 14 28. to the rebellious Iſraelites to confirme his threatening: The forme uſed is Hebr. If the iniquity of Eli's houſe ſhall bee purged, &c. ſomewhat being left to bee underſtood; as, let mee not live, as Junius, or, let mee not bee God, as Peter Martyr. Our tranſlation and the Vulg. Latine reſpecting rather the ſenſe, then the rendring of it verbatim, have it, ſhall not bee purged. But how is it thus ſaid? was their ſinne then altogether unpardonable? The Hebrews anſwer, it could not bee purged by ſacrifice, but by prayer, almeſdeeds, and teaching and living according to the Law it might, and hereunto they therefore aſcribed more vertue then to ſacrificing; wherein they were not deceived, if by ſacrificing they underſtood no more then the ceremony of killing and offering up a beaſt upon the Altar by the Prieſt to make atonement for the ſinner: for this might bee done, and yet the wicked bee ſtill in his ſinnes, as is ſhewed Iſa. 1. and Iſa. 66. but prayers being penitently made, and the life being reformed, ſinnes paſt are forgiven, ſee Ezek. 18. Pſal. 50. & 51. Dan. 4. 27. But whereas they aſcribe more vertue for the expiating of ſinne to almeſdeeds, prayer, &c. then to ſacrificing, if it bee rightly underſtood, they foully erred. For the ſhedding of the blood of a beaſt in ſacrifice, was nothing elſe but a figurative repreſentation of the ſhedding of Chriſts blood to come, whereby alone wee are purged from all ſin, and therefore in ſuch as had faith in this blood, ſin was certainly by ſacrificing done away. But becauſe a true and a lively faith was never without penitent prayer, charity, and reformation of life, theſe are chiefly inſiſted upon, and ſacrificing without theſe rejected, as inſufficient, and plainely arguing one either without faith, or whoſe faith was dead. The true anſwer to the queſtion propounded then is, that neither by ſacrifice, nor by any other meanes could their ſin be purged, in reſpect of the puniſhment threatened, but ſo many of Eli's houſe as truly repented, ſhould be purged from the guilt binding over to everlaſting condemnation, ſo Lyra and Peter Martyr.

Iunius.
Peter Martyr.

Qu.

Rabbini.

1 Ioh. 1. 6.

Lyra.
Peter Martyr.

V. 15, 16, 17

In the morning when Samuel aroſe, hee fearing to ſhew Eli of theſe things, was charged and adjured by him to tell him, and then hee told him all that the Lord had ſaid. One thing is queſtioned here upon theſe words, And hee opened the doores of the houſe of the Lord, ſeeing the Tabernacle was compaſſed in onely with curtaines, and had no doores; what doores are meant here? Pellican thinketh that ſome other houſe of God is here meant, and not the Tabernacle, becauſe it is called the houſe of God and the Temple. But that of Oſiander is more probable, that although a curtaine ſerved in ſtead of a doore all the time that the Tabernacle was carryed about in the wilderneſſe, yet being

Exod. 26.
Pellican.

Oſiander.

now ſetled in Shiloh, they made doores unto it, and to the Levites it belonged 1 Chron. 26. to open and ſhut theſe doores; ſo that Samuel, as Peter Martyr noteth, was Peter Martyr. ſtill as humble as before, and as attentive about his duty in ſerving the Prieſts, although hee were now called to bee a Prophet of the Lord, extraordinary revelations did not puffe him up, neither ſhould knowledge or any other gifts beſtowed upon us, puffe up us.

For his not ſhewing his revelation to Eli, it was a fault, ſaith the ſame Author, becauſe revelations are made to the men of God, that they might ſhew them to others, but becauſe hee was not bidden to ſhew it to Eli, it was the leſſer; but I thinke it was no fault at all, becauſe although revelations muſt bee ſhewed, yet it is not neceſſary that they bee ſhewed immediately, but in due order, and about this Gods order was, that Eli ſhould firſt aske about it, and then Samuel ſhew it unto him. Hee told it not to Eli, till hee asked to know it, becauſe the judgement was ſo great, that he feared to ſhew or ſpeake of it, contrary to the manner of thoſe who rejoyce to ſee and to ſpeake of the faults Lyra. and miſeries of others. But the reverence which hee bare towards Eli being High-prieſt, alſo wrought with him, as Lyra hath it.

V.17. God doe ſo to thee, and more alſo, if thou hideſt any thing from mee, &c. that is, God bring as great judgements upon thee, as ever hee did upon any, and greater, if thou ſhew mee not all, ſo Lyra. Or, God bring thoſe evills upon Hugo Cardin. thee, which hee hath threatened againſt mee, if, &c. as Hugo. This adjuring by ſuperiours, was often uſed in thoſe dayes, and the inferiour being thus ad- 1 King.22.15. jured, was bound, as the people by Saul, and Micaiah by Ahab, and Chriſt by Caiaphas. And hee ſaid, it is the Lord, let him doe what ſeemeth good in his eyes. Herein Eli ſhewed himſelfe truly penitent, in that hee ſubmitted himſelfe pati- Prov. 3. 12. ently to beare his puniſhment, hee refuſed not the chaſtening of the Lord, and Heb. 12. 9. chaſtenings borne patiently worke good unto the bearer, and ſhew Gods love towards him; which are things not incident, but onely to the penitent, ſo Aaron was patient, when his two ſonnes were ſmitten, and David, and Job, and Mauritius, when the Empire was taken from him by Phocas and his wife and children ſlaine before his face, he ſaid nothing, but juſta ſunt judicia tua Domine; thus Theod. Chryſoſt. Procopius, Lyranus, Toſtatus; but Gregor. Magn. Rabanus, Rupert, thinke that theſe were not the words of true penitency, becauſe hee amended not the fault, nor puniſht his wicked ſonnes, as they deſerved; wherefore his words ſhewed one inordinately truſting in Gods mercy; for hee truſteth ordinately herein, who amends his fault. Peter P. Martyr. Martyr acknowledging that the fathers generally hold Eli to have been truly penitent, and ſo although hee were puniſht temporally, hee eſcaped eternally; yet calleth it in queſtion, becauſe hee might ſay ſo in hypocriſie; but ſeeing this is not revealed touching him, wee are not to queſtion, but to imitate him in his humble ſubmiſſion when we are judged, for happily he ſought to correct his ſons, but they were now growne incorrigible.

V.19. And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and let none of his words fall to the ground, &c. After the revelation made to Samuel, the confirmation of his words are ſet downe, and then the divulgation, ſo that all Iſrael from V. 20. Dan to Beerſhebah, that is, from the north-boundary of Canaan, to the ſouth, knew that hee was a Prophet, v. 20. and another apparition in Shiloh made V. 21. unto him, v. 21. but what was then revealed, is not here ſet downe. None of his words fell to the ground, that nothing which hee ſpake faileth, but all came Hugo Card. to paſſe. Hugo ſaith alſo, it may bee underſtood thus, hee ſpake nothing of heavenly things, but of earthly, applying it againſt thoſe that ſpeake altogether of earthly things: but the firſt is moſt proper. It is a Metaphor, ſaith P. Martyr. Peter Martyr, taken from liquid things, which periſh by falling to the ground, or from buildings ruined: and his words may bee underſtood either of the Lords, or of Samuels ſpeaking by his inſpiration. The ſcope of all this is to ſhew that Samuel was famous all over Iſrael, as before him revelations had been rare, v. 1. ſo now they began againe to bee frequent, v. 21. which was a great comfort to the people.

The Myſtery. Rabanus.

Myſtically by the blindneſſe of Eli, who could not ſee the light, the blindnes of the Jewes, was ſet forth, till their Prieſthood and Temple, and all were deſtroyed; ſo Rabanus.

CHAP. IV.

V. 1.

AND the word of Samuel came to all Iſrael, and Iſrael went out to battaile againſt the Philiſtims. The Vulgar Latin adjoyneth the firſt of theſe words to the end of the former Chapter, and then beginneth this a little otherwiſe, It came to paſſe in thoſe dayes, that the Philiſtims came together to battaile, for Iſrael went out to meete the Philiſtims to battaile. But in Hebr. this Chapter beginneth thus: And the word of Samuel came, &c. and Iſrael went out to meete the Philiſtims in battaile. Whereupon a queſtion is made, what word of Samuel this was, and whether the Iſraelites were hereby ſtirred up to this warre againſt the Philiſtims? David Kimbi ſaith, that Samuel ſpake to all Iſrael, as the Lord moved him to goe and fight againſt the Philiſtims, that thus the judgements threatened, *Ch.*3. 11. might take effect both againſt Iſrael and Elies houſe for their ſinnes, thus alſo Vatablus and Genev. But this is improbable, becauſe it would have made againſt Samuels credit, he being now newly called to the Prophets office, if at the firſt hee ſhould have beene author of ſuch a diſaſtrous warre unto them. Moreover the commendation given him before, God let nothing fall to the ground, which hee ſpake, maketh altogether againſt this. Wherefore Ben Gerſon contrariwiſe ſaith, that this was the immediate cauſe of Iſraels being overcome by the Philiſtims, in that they went to this warre without his direction, never conſulting with him by the Urim and Thummim: but why the former words are prefixed then here, hee yeeldeth no reaſon, neither can his conjecture ſtand, that they went without direction, becauſe the Philiſtims came out firſt againſt them, as the Vulgar Latin hath it, and as in the Hebrew is intimated, in that it is ſaid, they went to meete the Philiſtims, ſo that it was no voluntary, but a neceſſitated expedition. Oſiander thinketh, that by Samuels word is meant his Sermon exhorting to repentance. But Peter Martyr beſt, the word of Samuel came to all Iſrael, that is, his word againſt Iſrael and Eli, ſet forth Ch. 3. 11. was divulged in all parts of Iſrael, and then the hiſtory ſheweth, how it tooke effect, And Iſrael went out to meete the Philiſtims, &c. and this being done, all men began to reverence Samuel, as a true Prophet of the Lord, and to have him in great honour. So that in ſaying, the word of Samuel came to all Iſrael, the cauſe is not aſſigned, whereupon the Iſraelites went forth to warre, but the meanes are ſhewed, how Samuel came to be knowne every where to bee a Prophet, when as his propheſie that they heard of, was accompliſhed, as is here immediately declared. When the Philiſtims came forth againſt Iſrael, and they went out to meete them, they thought of nothing elſe, then fulfilling what God had decreed for the puniſhment of Elies houſe and of Iſrael for their ſinnes, but thus God brought about what hee had threatened, that all might feare to ſinne, ſith puniſhments will certainly follow, and feare at the hearing of Gods word, one title whereof ſhall not fall to the ground, but bee all fulfilled. No cauſe of the Philiſtims comming againſt Iſrael is here expreſſed, but it may well bee thought, that it was to bring under Iſrael againe who had beene delivered formerly by Samſon, and they were the more animated, becauſe Eli their Judge was now old and feeble, &c. And pitched beſide Ebenezer and the Philiſtims pitched in Aphek, the Vulgar Latin, Ebenezer, hath Lapidem adjutorii, the ſtone of helpe, as the word ſignifyeth, this place is here ſo called by anticipation, for it had not this name, till that Samuel called a ſtone ſo, which hee ſet up for a monument of Gods helping them againſt the Philiſtims, *Ch.*7.12. where the place is further deſcribed. Aphek was a City in Judah, Joſh. 15.53. Junius.

D. Kimhi.

Vatab. Geneva Tranſlat.

Ben Gerſon.

Oſiander.
Peter Martyr.

Note.

Hugo Cardin.

Junius.

V. 2.

The Philiſtims prevailing, and having ſmitten of the Iſraelites 4000 men, their

V. 3. their Elders aske ſaying, Why hath the Lord ſmitten us to day before the Philiſtims, let us fetch the Arke of the Covenant, &c. They, who expound the firſt words of this Chapter of Samuels ſpeaking to the Iſraelites to goe out to this warre, hold this to bee ſpoken by way of complaint, Why hath the Lord ſmitten us, ſeeing we came not out to fight without his direction? But without reference to any ſuch direction they might ſay thus by way of conſultation, what might bee the cauſe, that they might goe more wiſely to worke the next time. In ſaying, Why hath the Lord ſmitten us, they ſpake rightly, for the Philiſtims could not have ſmitten them, but for ſome error in themſelves, which the Lord ſtrengthened them to puniſh: otherwiſe they being the Lords people and the Philiſtims his enemies, they muſt needs have gone by the worſt. But ſo fondly fooliſh were even the Elders of Iſrael, that they thought not of their owne ſinnes and of the corruptions in their ſacrifices, and in their Prieſts, and the generall neglect of ſacrificing hereupon, but they laid all the fault upon the abſence of the Arke, which therefore they fetch into the hoaſt; A thing never uſed in times paſt, ſince their comming into the land of Canaan, but onely at the ſiege of Jericho: neither did God appoint it ever to be brought forth for ſuch an end, but onely at that time, although in the wilderneſſe it was carryed before them for their defence, and as ſome thinke, to the battaile againſt the Midianites, where Phinees is ſaid to have taken the holy veſſels with him, for this is expounded of the Arke by Lyra, Toſtatus and Vatablus. They were therefore thus infatuated now in their counſels, that the two wicked ſonnes of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, might be drawne out to their deſtruction, as had beene threatned, Ch.2. For the Arke was appointed for a ſigne of Gods preſence amongſt them to abide in the Tabernacle, whereunto they ſhould reſort to worſhip, and to receive anſwers from God for direction in time of need, and not to be carryed forth, that by the helpe thereof they might prevaile. How they might thus doe was often inculcated, viz. By turning from their ſinnes and keeping Gods commandements, which if they did not, they were threatened with deſtruction before their enemies, although they had the Arke amongſt them. Yet through a ſuperſtitious conceit they ſo doated upon outward ſignes, that becauſe of the Arke, and afterwards for the Temple of the Lord amongſt them all ſhould goe well with them, how wickedly ſoever they lived. And in this ſuperſtition they are imitated by the Papiſts, who carry the hoaſt about, aſcribing great vertue unto it for any purpoſe; and likewiſe in going to warre they weare the ſigne of the croſſe, placing great confidence herein. And thus did many ſuperitſtious Chriſtians in the dayes of Tertullian, Cyprian, Chryſſtom, &c. as Peter Martyr gathereth from their writings. For Cyprian ſaith that ſuperſtitious women did then carry home the Euchariſticall bread and keepe it in their cheſts, and Tertull. lib. de monogamia telleth his wiſe, that uſed to doe ſo, and to eate thereof in a morning, that if after his death ſhee ſhould marry an infidell, hee would thinke, that it were ſomething bewitched, that ſhee did thus eate. Jerom contr. Jovinian. that ſome men, when they had lyen with their wives, would not come forth to receive the communion the next day, but would have it brought home unto them; Ambroſe ſaith, that his brother Satyrus did weare the holy bread about his neck, and that being once in danger upon the Sea, he was hereby preſerved in the midſt of the waves. But by that which followeth in this hiſtory it appeareth, how vaine a thing it is thus to truſt in outward things, and to uſe them otherwiſe, then God hath ordained. They ſent, ſaith Joſephus, to the High-Prieſt and the Senate to deſire, that the Arke might be brought forth, thinking, that all would be hazzarded without it, but having it amongſt them that they ſhould undoubtedly prevaile, being ignorant, that hee who had given ſentence againſt them, was greater then the Arke, which was to be reverenced for his ſake. Thus the Arke was brought into the hoaſt, and with it came the two ſonnes of Eli, having a charge given them by their father, if the Arke ſhould be loſt, never to come into his ſight againe. In this ſending for the Arke they erred divers wayes, 1 becauſe they fetcht it without

Peter Martyr.

Joſeph. Antiq. l.5.c.11.

without warrant, 2 without pompe or due reverence, 3 they ſuperſtitiouſly truſted in it, as carnall Chriſtians in their Baptiſme, and the Euchariſt living ſtill in ſinne, but they were now puniſht more then before. Oſiander, Pellican, Borrbeus. David contrariwiſe ſent backe the Arke, when he fled from Abſalon,
2 Sam. 15.

The Arke is called, The Arke of the Covenant of the Lord of Hoaſts ſitting V. 4.
upon the Cherubims, becauſe in it the teſtimony was contained, he can eaſily, as by unreſiſtible hoaſts both overcome his enemies and ſuccour his people, and over the Arke upon the propitiatory or Mercy-ſeat ſtood two Cherubims, or golden Images with the faces of young men, and wings covering the Mercy-ſeat, as Exod. 25. and from theſe Cherubims the Lord gave anſwers Numb. 7. 89. of the reaſon whereof ſee in thoſe places.

The Arke being brought into the hoaſt the Hebrews rejoyce, but the Phi- V. 8.
liſtims feare, and ſay, Woe to us, who ſhall deliver us out of the hand of theſe moſt mighty Gods? theſe are the Gods that ſmote the Egyptians with all thoſe plagues in the deſert.
Like ignorant heathens, becauſe they worſhipped divers Gods, they ſpake thus in the plurall number of the true God. Whereas they feare conſidering Qu.
the Plagues wherewith God ſmote the Egyptians in the deſert, it is doubted, how they could ſpeake thus, ſeeing thoſe plagues were ſent in Egypt and not in the deſert: Borrbeus ſaith, במדבר may bee expounded in the word, or Borrbeus.
by the word or command of God; but becauſe this word is never ſo uſed, although דבר, whereof it cometh ſignifieth a word, and it is not likely, that the ignorant Philiſtims had the knowledge of the power of Gods word, I ſubſcribe rather to Junius, that they ſpake thus for the laſt and greateſt plague, Junius.
wherewith the Egyptians were ſmitten, when they were drowned in the red Sea, wherein was the conſummation of all their plagues, and this was in the deſart of Etham. Or elſe as the Sept. and Vatablus have it, the conjunction and Exod. 13.20.
is to bee underſtood, in Egypt, and the red Sea. Touching the great feare, Vatablus.
wherewith the Philiſtims were now taken, Lyra ſaith, that the Hebrews Lyra.
expound it of ſome of them onely, who reverenced the Arke, as in all nations there were ſome, that feared God, and theſe ſpake thus, Woe to us, who is able to ſtand againſt theſe mighty Gods? but others feared not, and therefore replyed, theſe are the Gods, that ſmote the Egyptians, as if they ſhould have ſaid, they did before them all, that they were able to doe, but againſt us they are able to doe nothing, plucke up a good heart then and play the men (O yee Philiſtims.) But the words are plainly one continued V. 9.
ſaying of the ſame men, who yet deſperately incourage one another.
Then they fought and prevailed, and 30000 of the Iſraelites were ſlaine, V. 10, 11.
and the Arke was taken, and the two ſonnes of Eli dyed; and then a man of Benjamin ran to Shi'oh, his garments being rent, and upon his head, &c. V. 12.
Peter Martyr here noteth, as a meanes of ſo great an overthrow given to the Peter Martyr.
Iſraelites, the great confidence and ſecurity, that was amongſt them by reaſon of the Arke, for ſecurity giveth much advantage to an enemy, although weaker. If any man ſhall marvaile, why the Lord would ſuffer his Arke to be taken and carryed captive by theſe wicked men, and to be triumphed over, it being ſo foule an indignity unto him; hee anſwereth, it had beene a marvaile, if he ſhould not have ſuffered it thus to be, ſeeing it was amongſt his owne people ſo greatly abuſed; and as it is ſaid of the Sabbath, the Sab- bath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath, ſo the Arke and Tabernacle and all other holy things were made for man and for his ſalvation, but this being not now thus uſed, but contrariwiſe abuſed, it was juſt with God to ſuffer it to be taken and carryed away from amongſt them, as being unworthy of it: For beſides the ſinnes before mentioned, they were groſſe idolaters at this time, as is noted Pſal. 78. 58, 59, 60. 1 Sam. 7. 3. Theodoret ſaith, that God in ſuffering the Arke to be taken taught the Iſraelites, that living ill there was no truſt to be put in the Arke or in him, Cur enim legem tranſ- gredientes Arcam ad auxilium traherent, quæ legem intus habebat ſitam?

Touching the man of Benjamin, that came into Shiloh to bring tidings,

Lyra. ſome Hebrews thinke that it was Saul, who had taken the two Tables that were put in the Arke, out of the hands of Goliah, who was carrying them away, and brought them back to Shiloh, ſo Lyra. But this is a meere conjecture without ground, and is improbable, becauſe Saul was but a young man, when hee was 1 Sam. 7. 3. made King, Chap. 9. 2. and that was twenty yeares after this and more, for ſo long was the Arke in Kiriath-jearim, before the overthrow of the Philiſtims D. Kimhi. by thunder at Samuels prayer, and D. Kimhi reaſoneth againſt it. Who this man was then is uncertaine, but he rent his cloaths, &c. in token of ſorrow, ſee the like, Joſh. 7. 6.

V. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. At the comming of this man, great lamentation was made, and Eli hearing the noiſe, is ſaid to have feared for the Arke, and hearing what was done, and that the Arke was taken, hee fell downe backward from his ſeat, and brake his neck, being aged 98 yeares, and hee had then judged Iſrael 40 yeares; the ſeat where hee ſate, was the throne of Judgement, from which being high he fell, Hugo Cardin. when his ſpirits through feare failed him, Joſephus: Hugo ſaith, that Eli was more ſolicitous for the Arke of God, then for his ſonnes, and yet he ſpeaketh of him as a reprobate, for if Eli, ſaith hee, who was a reprobate, was ſo affected in hearing that the Arke was taken, what ſhall become of them, who heare that Jeruſalem is taken, and the faith overthrowne, and yet are not affe-Peter Martyr. cted with griefe therefore? But Peter Martyr better, moſt Expoſitors take this as an argument of Elies piety, holding, that although hee were too indulgent to his ſonnes; yet for his owne particular hee was an holy man, and repented, and ſo although hee periſhed corporally, yet his ſoule was ſaved, as hath been already touched. For hearing of the great ſlaughter of the people, and of his ſonnes, hee was not ſo much moved, but hearing that the Arke was taken, hee was ſtricken ſo, as that hee preſently dyed. But yet he ſaith, this is no certaine argument of his piety, for hee might bee thus ſtricken, becauſe his dignity and living depended upon the Arke, and hee might now feare, the Arke being gone, that the Prieſthood and Common-wealth would come to ruine; but he Note. leaveth it doubtfull, concluding, that if piety makes a man more carefull about the Arke, then for any worldly thing, that they are full of impiety, that grieve wonderfully for the loſſe of their worldly goods, but have no ſenſe of grief for the true Religion being put downe, and ſuperſtition and idolatry ſet up.

Willet. Willet uſeth divers reaſons to prove that Eli was ſaved: 1 Becauſe hee was godly, as appeared by his diſlike of his ſonnes evill courſes, neither is hee any where taxed, but for his want of ſeverity towards them. 2 Hee was patient in bearing the judgement threatened. 3 Hee was zealous for God and for his Arke, being more moved for that, then for the loſſe of his ſons. 4 He was not in thoſe corrupt times tainted with idolatry, and of ſuch Judges it is ſaid, Whoſe heart went not a whoring, nor departed from the Lord, their memory bee bleſſed, Ecclus. 46. 11. And Theodoret commendeth Eli, and Toſta-tus ſaith, it is not to bee doubted but that hee was ſaved eternally, and Lyra, Carthuſ. &c. Whereas Chryſoſtome and Theodoret may ſeem to ſpeak to the contrary, becauſe they name his damnation, and Gloſſ. Ordin. Gregory, &c. they are to bee underſtood as ſpeaking of his being condemned to dye the corporall death onely.

V. 19, 20. And the daughter in law of Eli, the wife of Phinehas, hearing this newes, and that Eli and her husband were dead, fell in travaile, and brought forth a ſon, but had no joy thereof, but onely having named him Ichabod, The glory is gone Joſephus. from Iſrael, ſhee dyed. Shee was gone, ſaith Joſephus, but ſeven moneths at this time, but this is incredible, ſeeing the childe lived, Chap. 14. 3. It ſeemeth that ſhee had more zeale in her, then her husband, in that ſhee tooke the loſſe of the Arke ſo heavily. For the name given to her ſonne, it is אי where, and כבוד glory, Where is the glory? it is gone. Huga rendreth it by inglorious, or,
Junius. not glorious; Junius, no glory, as if the words were אין כבוד; Oſi-Oſiander. ander, woe the glory; but Pellican beſt, Where is the glory? Peter Martyr
Pellican. taxeth this woman for aſcribing too much to outward things, as if the Arke
Peter Martyr. being taken, all muſt needs now goe to ruine; whereas they were delivered from

Pellican.

from the Egyptian bondage without the Arke, and many more miracles were without it wrought for their preſervation. This indeed was her weakneſſe, but her zeale notwithſtanding was memorable. In ſaying, the glory is gone, ſhee meant, God is gone, becauſe the Arke was a ſigne of Gods preſence, and God was called the glory of his people, becauſe they gloryed in him, and hee made them glorious by the mighty acts which hee did for them. The Arke being taken and carryed away into the Philiſtims Country, was a figure, ſaith Pellican, of the Goſpels removing from the Jewes to the Gentiles; ſo alſo Lyra, and others.

CHAP. V.

V. 1, 2, 3.

Schol. Hiſtor.

Iunius.

P. Martyr.

THe Philiſtims having taken the Arke, carry it away to Aſhdod, into the Temple of Dagon, but the next morning Dagon was falne downe upon his face before the Arke. They ſet the Arke there, ſaith Comeſtor, as a Trophee of their victory; but Dagon fell downe, according to Joſephus, as adoring the Arke. What manner of Idol this was, ſee 1 Sam. 16. 23. Junius ſaith, it was the ſame which the Heathen called Triton, a God of the Sea, and worſhipped by the Philiſtims, becauſe they dwelt by the Sea. Peter Martyr thinketh it was Neptune; and whereas they carryed the Arke away, aſcribing their victory to Dagon, hee ſaith, that the Romans of old in like manner after a great victory carryed their Emperour in triumph into the Capitoll, to give thankes to Jupiter: but Fabius Maximus having overcome the Tarentines, tooke not their Gods away, but being asked what ſhould bee done with them, anſwered, Let us leave them angry with their Tarentines. In cauſing Dagon to fall, the Lord began to ſhew his power, who ſeemed to bee aſleep all this while, as David elegantly ſpeaketh upon this, Pſal. 78. Having puniſhed his owne people, he now began to ſmite the Philiſtims, when hee ſeemed to bee of leaſt power. And hee firſt began with their God, to ſhew that there was none other God that had power, but hee alone: as when Chriſt came into the world, all the Oracles of Idols ceaſed; which Plutarch writing of, and inquiring into the reaſon, ſaith, either they were very old and dyed, or the vapours ariſing out of the earth, wherewith their Prophets being afflated ſpake, were now ſtopped, or elſe the conſtellations which cauſed this, were now paſt. And as one ſaith, the Philiſtims were firſt puniſht in Dagon the chiefe of their Idols, becauſe in it was the originall of their ſin.

V. 4.

Junius.

They having ſet up Dagon, looke the next morning againe, and then he was both falne, and the head and armes of the Idoll were cut off upon the threſhold; the head, ſaith Peter Martyr, ſignifyeth wiſdome, and the armes, power; to ſhew then, that hee had neither wiſdome nor power to helpe them, this was done. The trunke onely remained; the Chaldee, the body of Dagon; Junius, that which reſembled a fiſh, but the words are, Dagon only remained, that is, a fiſh, as the word Dag ſignifieth. For the upper part being like a man, and the nether a fiſh, when the head and armes were cut off, the figure of a fiſh onely remained.

V. 5.

Oſiander.

P. Martyr.

Ben Gerſon.

Therefore the Prieſts of Dagon, &c. tread not upon the threſhold of his Temple to this day. They were ſo farre by ſeeing this miracle from growing into the contempt of this impotent Idol, that they magnified it the more, holding the very threſhold to bee ſanctified by the touch thereof, ſo blinded were they with ſuperſtition; ſo Peter Martyr, who addeth, that by the like ſuperſtition at this day, men refraine from treading upon that part of mount Garganum, where the print of Michael the Archangels foot is to bee ſeen in marble. R. L. Ben Gerſon noteth hereupon, that the Philiſtims by this their ſuperſtition tooke a courſe to continue the memory of Dagons impotency and ignominy many ages after.

V. 6.

Joſeph. Antiq. l. 6. c. 1.

After the ſmiting of Dagon, the Lord proceedeth to execute judgements upon the people of Aſhdod, for hee ſmote them with emerods. Joſephus ſaith, that they had the fluxe called dyſenteria, which cauſed their fundament to come out, and

Lyra.

and their entrailes, whereby they periſhed being full of torment. The Vulg. Latine addeth, The farmes and fields were full of mice, and a great confuſion of death was made in all the City; but as Lyra noteth, this is a corruption which crept in by the unskilfulneſſe of the Scribe, and is not in the Hebrew; but becauſe, Chap. 6. a judgement by mice is ſpoken of, this was by ſome ignorantly inſerted here, and the like hath been done in divers other places. Indeed Joſephus ſaith alſo, the fields ſwarmed with mice, which ate up the ſtanding corne, and all their fruits, but this is not expreſſed, but left to bee underſtood from that, Chap. 6. 4. Lyra ſaith, that their inteſtines comming out with the dyſentery, and hanging out, were full of wormes, and aſſaulted by the mice. But it is more probable, that the mice waſted and ſpoyled the Countrey onely, as Joſephus hath it, and the emerods tormented them. The mice alſo invaded their Ships, according to the Sept. Tranſlation, and herewith they abounded, becauſe they were a Maritime people. Author mirabil. S. 5. God juſtly puniſhed them both theſe wayes; with emerods, which made their entrails to come out to their deſtruction, as they had taken the inwards of the Tabernacle, viz. the Arke, out of its place; and with mice, baſe creatures, as they had worſhipped baſe creatures, which was againſt the law contained in the Arke, now brought amongſt them.

V. 8. Iunius.

The Aſhdothites being thus plagued, by the counſell of the Lords of the Philiſtims ſend the Arke to Gath, and then the people of that place were ſmitten, both great and ſmall, with emerods, which were hidden in them, as the Hebrew text hath it. And this was a kinde of emerod, ſaith Junius, according to the judgement of Phyſitians, far more painfull then the other which came downe, becauſe the blood being retained in their inward parts did exceedingly torment them, ſo that the men of Gath were ſmitten more grievouſly then thoſe of Aſhdod. For the reaſon of their carrying the Arke thus about, it was according to Comeſtor, becauſe ſome thought this plague was by reaſon of the Arke, ſome by accident, and ſome by the corruption of the aire, to try therefore whether the Arke was the cauſe, it was ſo carryed about; but, as Joſephus noteth, it went about the five Cities of the Philiſtims, thus exacting the tribute of juſt puniſhment upon them all for Religion violated, in that they durſt lay hands upon ſo ſacred a thing, as the Arke of God. And therefore his ſingular providence is to bee looked at herein, which ſwayed their conſultations to their owne greater puniſhment as they were worthy.

Ioſephus. In hunc modum quinq; Palæſtinorum urbes pervagata eſt arca, veluti tributum per ſingulas pœnam violatæ religonis exigens.

For theſe words, To Gath let the Arke of God bee brought about, &c. The Vulg. Latine hath it, the men of Gath anſwered, Let the Arke bee carryed about; and when they carryed it about, the hand of God was againſt every City, and hee ſmote the men of every City, &c. favouring that of Joſephus, who ſaith it went about to all the five Cities of the Philiſtims. And thus indeed it ſeemeth to have been done, for Chap. 6. 4. it is ſaid, One plague was on you all, and on your Lords, and therefore according to the number of their Cities, which were five, they made five golden Emerods, and five golden Mice for a treſpaſſe-offering. But in the Hebrew text mention is made onely of Gath and Ekron; neither is it ſaid, The hand of God was grievous againſt every City, but againſt that City. Notwithſtanding becauſe the carrying about of the Arke to Gath is ſpoken of, it is implyed that it went through the other Cities alſo, which are not named, and then they were ſmitten. For all the judgements upon the Philiſtims are not mentioned in this Chapter, but onely the ſmiting of thoſe Cities with emerods, that were moſt plagued, the judgements upon the reſt, and that by mice, being left to bee underſtood, by that which is ſaid Chap. 6. For Gath, Joſephus hath Askelon, ſaying, that the men of Azotus, for ſo hee calleth Aſhdod, ſent to Askelon, deſiring them of that City that they would receive the Arke, unto which they willingly yeelded; but when it came there, the ſame effects followed, and likewiſe whitherſoever it came.

Joſephus.

Toſtatus ſaith, that finding the force of the Arke to bee ſo great, they were unwilling to ſend it back to Iſrael, for feare of arming them hereby againſt themſelves, wherefore they tryed rather firſt, whether in any place it might be kept amongſt them without perill.

The

V. 9. The Vulg. Latine at the end of the ninth verſe, addeth theſe words, They tooke counſell, and made them ſeates of skins; which Lyra ſaith they did to defend them from the mice, that gnawed their fundaments hanging out, and that they might ſit the more eaſily. The Sept. have it before this, The men of Gath ſaid, Bring the Arke of God unto us, and when it was brought thither, God ſmote the City, &c. and then he ſmote them upon their ſeats; and the men of Gath made them ſeats. In both, the laſt words are redundant, neither doe I know any colour of reaſon for them. But the former doe beſt expreſſe the Hebr. the men of Gath ſaid, becauſe it is אמרו גת ſo that אמרו they ſaid, is not to bee referred to the Lords, but to the men of Gath, who ſhewed their willingneſſe to have the Arke brought unto them, not yet fearing any plague to enſue amongſt them by reaſon thereof, wherefore they were plagued more terribly then the Aſhdodites.

The Myſtery. Myſtically, ſaith Gloſſ. Ordin. by the Arke underſtand the Teſtament preached, for they, amongſt whom this commeth, but yet they love the poſteriour things of this life, as the Aſhdodites were affected even to the nether part of Dagon, when nothing of him elſe remained, ſhall bee tormented by reaſon of theſe baſe things, which are but as dung, when they ſhall fall from them moſt unwilling, as the entrails of the Philiſtims came out againſt their wills, to their great torment, for even ſo doe theſe through the love of the world, place Dagon and the Arke together, Dagon that fadeth, and the Arke of the New Teſtament, which is eternall.

CHAP. VI.

V. 1. THe Arke having continued in the Philiſtims Countrey ſeven moneths, they at length adviſe with their Prieſts and Diviners about the ſending of it back again to Iſrael. If it bee demanded why the Philiſtims kept the Arke ſo long, being ſo ſore ſmitten: It is anſwered, they thought in time their plagues might bee aſſwaged, and then they purpoſed to have kept it ſtill, but now ſeeing the puniſhment continued, they perceived that hope to bee vaine. A judgment came to them by the Arke, and no benefit, ſo the Goſpel turneth to the condemnation of the wicked, amongſt whom it is preached. Genev. notes. Note.

V. 3, 4, 5. Their Diviners both direct them to ſend the Arke back with five golden Emerods, and five golden Mice for a treſpaſſe-offering, and earneſtly exhort them not to harden themſelves, as did Pharaoh; for beſides the plague of Emerods, Mice marred their Countrey. In this conſultation there were three diverſe opinions, ſaith Joſephus: 1 That the Arke was to bee ſent back. 2 That becauſe God ſuffered the Arke to come into their hands, hee had no ſuch care thereof, and therefore this plague was not to bee imputed to the Ark detained amongſt them, but to other cauſes, and over a while would ceaſe againe; and that it was not ſo bee ſent back againe, which were diſhonourable to the Philiſtims. 3 That a middle way was to bee taken, neither to detaine it, nor to ſend it away, but to put the offerings here mentioned into it, and ſo to ſet it upon a cart to bee drawne by two young Cowes, whither they would, and this prevailed. In that ſpeaking here of a treſpaſſe-offering, they uſe the word אשם which ſignifieth a lighter ſinne, and not חטאת ſignifying a greater; Peter Martyr noteth, that they thought their ſinne in carrying the Arke away, but ſmall, which indeed was very great. And for the things given for a treſpaſſe-offering, he ſaith, by making the figures of Emerods and Mice, they ſet up, as it were, a monument of their, and their Gods being ſubdued by the God of Iſrael, and of his power in ſmiting and healing them againe, as they hoped would follow hereupon; and therefore it is added, And yee ſhall give glory to the God of Iſrael, for then is glory given to him, when his power is acknowledged to bee over all. For theſe words, v. 3. Then yee ſhall bee healed, and it ſhall bee knowne unto you, why his hand is not removed from you: Junius hath it, or it ſhall bee knowne; that is, if yee bee not healed, it will appeare to

Joſephus.

Peter Martyr.

Levit. 22. 19. Chap. 1. 3.

Iunius.

be

Lyra. bee a chance, as v. 9. but the word more properly ſignifieth, and it ſhall bee knowne; that is, according to Lyra and others, when the Arke being carryed away, yee ſhall bee made well againe, it will appeare that his hand was againſt you hitherto by reaſon of the Arke taken and detained. For the meanes of trying, whether hee ſmote them or no, it is deferred to bee ſpoken of till v. 9. here it being taken for granted, that hee ſmote them, as they verily held, healing is promiſed, as moſt certainly to enſue after the Arkes departure, whereupon they are exhorted not to harden their hearts, v. 6. there that meane of tryall is propounded to convince them all.

V. 7, 8, 9. Make a new cart, and take two milch Kine, on which never yet came yoke, and faſten them to the cart, and bring their calves home, and lay the Arke upon the cart, &c. As Balaam and Caiaphas, ſo theſe Diviners were unwittingly led herein by the Spirit of God to ſet downe a right way of tryall. For if Kine having calves that went with them, and never uſed to draw before, ſhould of themſelves draw this cart with the Arke, and that a contrary way to that which nature commonly inclineth beaſts having young unto, it would plainely appeare that there was a Divine power whereby they were led, which would have the Arke brought home againe to his proper place, and was offended that it was hitherto from thence detained.

V. 10. According to the advice of theſe Diviners it was done, and as Joſephus hath it, the Kine were brought to a three way leet, to try which way they would take, and they tooke the way to Bethſhemeſh. God would not have them draw PeterMartyr. the Arke, ſaith P. Martyr, back to Shiloh, becauſe that place had been corrupted with the ſins of Eli's children, but to Bethſhemeſh, which was a City of Levites, H.Bunting Patriar.travailes. Joſh. 21. 16. This, ſaith one, was from Ekron 12 miles, and within 4 miles of Jeruſalem; and the firſt carrying of the Arke from Aphek by the Philiſtims to Aſhdod, was 160 miles. When the Ark was come to Bethſhemeſh, they of that V. 13, 14. place being in their wheat harveſt, ſaw it, and rejoyced; And the Cart came into the field of Joſhua, and ſtood there, where there was a great ſtone: and they clave the wood of the cart, and offered the Kine for a burnt-offering to the Lord. This Schol. Hiſtor. ſtone, ſaith Comeſtor, is thought by ſome to have been an Altar which Abraham made unto the Lord, it is called the great ſtone Abel, v. 18. and it is ſaid both there, and v. 15. that the Levites tooke downe the Arke, and the Coffer, and golden Jewells, and ſet them upon this ſtone, Hebr. it is Abel the great, v. 18. and not the great ſtone of Abel, whereupon ſome, ſaith Comeſtor, doe conjecture, that Abel was not the name of the ſtone, but of the City Bethſhemeſh, ſo called for the great mourning there for the enſuing deſtruction, for Abel ſignifieth mourning; and if ſo, then it is to bee read, They ſet the Arke by or neare Lyra. to Abel, upon the ſtone before-mentioned, which is there till this day. Lyra ſaith, that the great ſtone before ſpoken of, is called great Abel, becauſe of the mourning that was made there, Aben ſignifying a ſtone, being changed into Iunius. Abel, mourning, by the change of one letter onely. Junius thinketh that Abel is put for Aben, a ſtone. And the Sept. and Chald. doe not read it Abel, but a Oſiander. ſtone. Oſiander thinketh, that the ſame thing was called both Aben and Abel. Joſephus. Joſephus, for great Abel, hath, the great plaine, for Abel ſignifieth alſo a plaine. But Arias Montan. and Pagnin agree with Lyra, and that is the beſt. Whereas they are ſaid to have ſet the Arke upon that great ſtone, Comeſtor ſaith, beſides it, and ſo it is moſt probable, becauſe upon the ſtone they offered their ſacrifices.

For their cleaving of the wood of the cart, and offering the Kine in ſacri*Peter Martyr.* fice, they thought, that being once put to this holy uſe, and ſuch a miracle being wrought in the Kines drawing the Arke thither, they might not bee put to any common uſe afterwards, and therefore they burnt them in ſacrifice. Levit. 22. 19. But forſomuch as in the Law males onely are appointed to bee offered in ſa-Chap. 1. 3. crifice, theſe men erred in offering females. For the place, any place was ſanctified for ſacrificing by the preſence of the Arke; and by the ſtanding ſtill of V. 17. the cart here, this place ſeemed particularly to bee choſen of God. For the gifts given by the Philiſtims for a treſpaſſe-offering, it was ſaid before, that they were five golden Emerods, and five Mice, v. 4. But here the Emerods are ſaid to bee five, but the Mice, according to the number of all the Cities belonging to the five Lords, both walled Cities, and Countrey villages, whereby it ſhould ſeeme, that the number of golden Mice was farre greater then of Emerods. Comeſtor for the clearing of this, ſaith, according to Iſidor, when five Emerods, and five Mice are before ſpoken of, the gifts of five Metropolitan Cities onely are meant; but beſides theſe, all other Cities of the Philiſtims unto the great Abel, which was the border of their Countrey, gave golden Mice. Lyra and Hugo ſay, that five was the whole number; but all the Cities belonging to the Metropolitans holpe in the expences. But becauſe here is a plaine diſtinction made between the number of Emerods, and the number of Mice, thoſe were five, for each chiefe City one, but theſe without any certain number, according to the number of all the Cities of the Philiſtims, I rather preferre the former expoſition. Schol. Hiſt. Lyra, Hug. Card.

V. 19. But the Lord ſmote of the men of Bethſhemeſh, becauſe they looked into the Arke, 50070 men: and it was not onely juſt, but neceſſary, ſaith Rupert, ſo ſeverely to puniſh at this time, becauſe there was danger of thinking the Arke more vile and contemptible, after that it had been ſeven moneths amongſt the Philiſtims, to the detriment of all religion Moſaicall. Beſides the cauſe of this plague alledged, viz. their looking into the Arke againſt Gods expreſſe command given, Numb. 4. 15. 20. Lyra yeeldeth three cauſes more: 1 Their fooliſh joy at the comming of the Arke, proceeding from the lightneſſe of their heads, and not from due reverence. 2 Their undue ſacrificing of ſemales. 3 Their ſuffering of the Arke to reſt abroad, and not ſetting up lights before it, nor giving it the due worſhip. And 70 which were ſmitten, hee ſaith, were of the more noble, and 50000 of the common ſort, and thoſe 70 are named firſt, becauſe more worth then all the reſt, as David is ſaid to have been more worth then 10000 of the people: and to note a difference betwixt them that were ſmitten, the Vulg. Latine rendreth it, percuſſit de populo 70 viros, & 50000 plebis; but the ſame word איש is put to both numbers, yet Hebr. 70 are put firſt, and then 50000; wherefore our Tranſlation erreth in putting the 70 laſt. Comeſtor thinketh that the 70 firſt ſmitten were thoſe that tooke downe the Arke, becauſe they were not Prieſts but Levites, and ſo ought not to have touched it till it had been covered, Numb. 4. 15. Pellican agreeth with Lyra, in the firſt of his cauſes, becauſe they entertained not the Arke with greater reverence, but with ſhouting, as in harveſt; Borrheus in the ſecond: but ſeeing one cauſe onely is alledged, their looking into the Arke, I reſt in that. Theodoret following the Sept tranſlation ſaith, that ſome who were addicted to Idols were ſorry to ſee the Arke brought back againe, and ſo were worthily puniſhed, and the reſt of the people, becauſe they would not adventure themſelves to goe and recover the Arke by force from the Philiſtims. Their looking into the Arke, ſay the Hebrews, was by opening it, and looking into it; but Willet ſtandeth for their beholding it onely; but then it would not have been ſaid ראובארון but ראו-ארון. It is true, to looke upon the Arke uncovered, was death for Levites, or common people, but much more out of curioſity to preſume to open it, to ſee what was therein contained, herein for want of due reverence, even the Prieſts themſelves might bee in danger of deſtruction. For the number ſmitten, it is not likely that 70 are put firſt, becauſe they were more worthy, being either Prieſts, or Elders, or both, becauſe the word עם is uſed ſignifying the people indifferently; but 70 are put by themſelves, becauſe they were of Bethſhemeſh, and the 50000 of people flocked thither from other parts, when they heard the newes of the Arke returned, and happily many of them were ſouldiers that lay there in Gariſon for the defence of the Countrey, becauſe it was a frontier City; ſo Junius. And indeed it is not probable, that in one City alone there were ſo many inhabitants, unleſſe it were one of the greateſt: and Joſephus writeth but of 70 onely of Bethſhemeſh ſlaine, who preſumed to handle the Arke not being Prieſts. But why was God ſo greatly offended for this, that they preſumed to looke into the Arke, which which they did onely to ſee what was there? Anſw. Firſt, becauſe it might bee a meanes to expoſe the Arke to contempt, when they ſhould ſee nothing elſe but a Cheſt covered within and without with gold, for what was there in ſuch things to move them to reverence it? Secondly, becauſe there was an expreſſe command to the contrary, the breach of which God would never ſuffer to goe unrevenged, as when the people were charged not to come to Mount Sinai to touch it upon paine of death; and our firſt parents were forbidden to eate of the tree of knowledge of good and evill. For the tranſgreſſing of any commandement of God, is not to bee meaſured by the thing about which it is given, but by the greatneſſe of him that giveth it. 3 Becauſe the ſecret things of the Lord are reſerved to himſelſe, but the revealed belong to us. It muſt ſuffice us to know theſe onely, and hereafter to come to ſee and know the reſt in the kingdom of heaven, when wee ſhall bee perfect. So that hee which dareth now to pry into them, ſinneth by preſumption, and by confounding the times which God hath diſtinguiſhed. Some have inquired into ſecrets, ſaith Peter Martyr, and yet have been approved, as Abraham and Moſes, and the bleſſed Virgin Mary; but others have been reproved therefore, becauſe the one ſort inquired out of faith, that they might bee more confirmed; but the other out of unbeliefe, and God the knower of all hearts judgeth accordingly. If it be demanded, why the Philiſtims that looked alſo into the Arke, and handled it, were not likewiſe ſmitten? It is anſwered, they had not the charge given them, but onely the Iſraelites, and therefore their ſin was not ſo great as the ſin of theſe men.

Lyra. Schol. Hiſtor. Pellican. Borrhæus. Junius.

P. Martyr.

V. 20, 21.

Lyra.

Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 6. c. 2.

H. Bunt. Patriarchs travailes.

The people being thus grievouſly ſmitten, are full of ſorrow and feare, and ſend to the men of Kiriath-jearim to come and take the Arke home to them. This City, ſaith Lyra, was more noble, and a ſafer place for the Arke to bee in, and therefore they deſire that it might bee carryed from them thither. Joſephus ſaith, the men of Bethſhemeſh ſent to all Iſrael, and by a common conſent it was carryed from thence, as a place unworthy for their ſinne, to Kiriath-jearim, becauſe Abinadab an holy man dwelt there, and his houſe was thought moſt fit for ſo holy a thing to reſt in, and the men of Kiriath-jearim were willing to receive it, ſay ſome, becauſe they knew the Bethſhemites were idolaters, and therefore unworthy that the Arke ſhould bee with them. This was but two miles from Bethſhemeſh, and was one of the Cities of the Gibeonites, Joſh. 9. 17. within the lot of the Tribe of Judah, but given to the Levites. It ſignifieth a City of Cowes, and ſtood but one mile from Jeruſalem: Here Saul was anointed King by Samuel, and in this place, being called Gods hill, becauſe of the Arke, Saul met a company of Prophets praiſing God with holy hymnes, and joyned with them in this kinde of prophecying, 1 Sam. 10. And here Jonathan the ſonne of Saul thruſt out a garriſon of the Philiſtims, which held the men of this place in ſubjection, 1 Sam. 13. 3. ſo H. B. in Patriarchs travailes.

The Myſtery.
Lyra.

Myſtically, by the abode of the Arke amongſt the Philiſtims ſeven moneths, underſtand the Goſpels remaining amongſt the Gentiles till near the end of the world, at what time it ſhall returne to the Jews again. By the ſmiting of theſe men for looking into the Ark unreverently, the ſmiting of thoſe in the Church that uſe the ſacraments unreverently. And when we ſuffer thus at Gods hand, we muſt not, as the men of Bethſhemeſh, cry out upon Gods ſeverity, but conſider our own ſins, whereby we deſerve it, and judge our ſelves therefore, and not deſire for that wee ſuffer, to be rid of any holy thing, and to have it removed to another place, but uſe it more reverently and worthily for time to come: which ſome not doing, have the Arke taken from them to a people that will bring forth better fruits. If it be demanded why the Arke was not brought back to the Tabernacle in Shiloh again? Anſw. Ier. 7. 12. Pſal. 78. 60. for the ſins of the Prieſts and people; and therefore it is moſt probable that God gave direction hereabout by Samuel, although it be not expreſſed. Rupert ſaith, that myſtically hereby was figured out the ſynagogue of the Jews, which ſhould afterwards be rejected, and that holy thing Chriſt removed from them.

CHAP. VII.

V. 1.

THE Arke is ſetcht by the men of Kiriath-jearim, and placed in the houſe of Abinadab upon the hill, and his ſonne Eleazar was by them ſanctified to keepe the Arke, and here it abode 20 yeares, and all Iſrael is ſaid to have lamented after the Lord. And it is thought by Jerom and others, that not onely the Arke was now gone from Shiloh, but the Tabernacle alſo: for it was in Nob, Ch. 21. but not ſaid, when it was carryed thither, and 1 Chron. 16. 39. it is plainly intimated to have beene in Gibeon. Comeſtor for Abinadab hath Aminadab, and unto theſe words, where it remained 20. yeares, hee addeth, even unto the 8. yeere of the reigne of Saul, when hee tooke it into tents, and for theſe words, all Iſrael lamented after the Lord, hee hath theſe words, then Iſrael reſted after the Lord, his wrath being pacified towards them. The Vulgar Latin alſo hath Aminadab in Gabaab, for Abinadab on the hill, and all Iſrael reſted after the Lord. But גבעה is not a proper name in this place, ſeeing Gibeah or Gabaab was in Benjamin, this in Judah, and the word ינהו jinnathu ſignifieth they lamented, not they reſted, but another word written with ח, viz. נוח, ſo that the tranſlator was deceived by the likeneſſe of the word, and Hebr. it is Abinadab. Our tranſlation then is the beſt, in the houſe of Abinadab upon the hill, for ſo the word גבעה ſignifieth, and all Iſrael lamented after the Lord. Yet 2 Sam. 6. 3. where Davids removing of the Arke from Abinadabs houſe is ſpoken of, it is ſaid Abinadabs houſe, which was in Gibeah, as being another City, and not in Kiriath-jearim, but of this I ſhall ſpeake more by and by. Here is no mention made of the Tabernacle any more, for in ſtead of a Tabernacle the Arke abode in an houſe, Abinadab is thought to have beene a Levite, and hee being now aged, and unable to doe this ſervice, his ſonne Eleazar was appointed unto it: But whether hee were a Levite or not, ſee more upon 2 Sam. 6. v. 9. Thus the houſe of Eli was rejected a long time, as was threatened, and afterwards in Solomons time for ever. Of a Tabernacle yet ſet up for the Arke in the City of David wee read againe, 2 Sam. 6. 17. The ſanctifying of Eleazar was nothing elſe, ſaith Lyra, but their appointing him to this office to keepe the Arke covered, and to keepe men from approaching any more too neare unto it to gaze upon it. For the abiding of the Arke in Kiriath-jearim 20 yeares, this is generally held to have beene in the houſe of Abinadab, as the words ſeeme to imply, for if hee had not dwelt in that City, why ſhould the men thereof have fetcht the Arke thither? Yet Lyra ſaith, that Gibeah where Abinadab dwelt, was another City in the Tribe of Benjamin, and that the Arke was not now carryed to his houſe, but long after, having firſt remained in Kiriath-jearim, then in Mizpah, in Gilgal, and in Nob, and then laſtly it was kept in Abinadabs houſe: of which opinion of his ſee more upon Joſh. 18. 1, 2. in my expoſition there. Whereas Comeſtor ſaith, it remained here, till the 8. yeere of the reigne of Saul, that cannot bee true, becauſe even in Davids time wee read of it, as being there ſtill. The reaſon, that might move Lyra to adjourne the bringing of the Arke to Abinadabs houſe ſo long, happily might bee, partly becauſe he could not ſee, how it could bee true, that it ſtood there but 20. yeeres, ſeeing it remained there till the reigne of David, and before that under Samuel and Saul had paſſed 40. yeares, in the beginning of which time it was firſt brought thither, if when it was brought form Bethſhem. to Kiriath-jearim it was placed there But this is well reſolved by Peter Martyr, Pellican and others, that the 20. yeares here ſpoken of were not the whole time of the arks being in Abinadabs houſe, but the time, till the ſolemne turning of the Iſraelites, and putting away their idols, at the exhortation of Samuel, as here followeth, v. 3, 4. after which it ſeemeth, that it aboade there ſtill, by that which is ſaid 2 Sam. 6. untill the time of David, but onely that ſometimes in this ſpace it was happily removed to other places before mentioned upon occaſion, and after a while brought backe to this place againe. But Peter Martyr thinketh, that not the Arke, but the Tabernacle

Schol. Hiſtor.

Lyra. Oſiander. Pellican.

Lyra.

2 Sam. 6.

Peter Martyr. Pellican. Oſiander.

bernacle onely was in thoſe places, Mizpeh, Gilgal and Nob, being disjoyned from the Arke alwayes after the taking of the Arke by the Philiſtims. For the lamenting of the houſe of Iſrael after the Lord: Peter Martyr readeth it, the whole houſe of Iſrael lamented, and followed after the Lord. Junius, they lamenting cryed unto the Lord, but herein the ſenſe is more reſpected, then the rendring of the place verbatim, for ſo it is, they lamented after the Lord, but the meaning is, they were not moved with repentance by that great overthrow, which they had received by the Philiſtims, nor by the coming of the Arke backe againe, but having gone on in idolatry and other wickedneſſe after this 20 yeares together, and ſuffering much at the Philiſtims hands, and broken at length with many miſeries, they now begin to be humbled, and to cry unto the Lord, as in other times of their oppreſſions, they had alſo formerly done.

V. 3. All which is implyed by the next words of Samuel, If yee returne to the Lord with all your hearts, then put away the ſtrange gods, and Aſhteroth from among you, and prepare your hearts to the Lord, and ſerve him onely, and hee will deliver you out of the hands of the Philiſtims: ſo that Joſephus erred greatly in ſaying, that the people ſought the Lord all theſe 20. yeares with ſacrifices and prayers, which Samuel ſeeing makes his exhortation unto them. Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 6. c. 2. For if they had returned, the Lord would not have left them ſo long to the oppreſſions of their enemies, neither would there have beene any neede for Samuel at this time to exhort them to put away their ſtrange gods. It is more probable, that being offended with the great ſlaughter made amongſt them at the Arkes returne, they let that ſtand in Abinadabs houſe, neglecting to ſeeke unto it, and following ſtrange Gods, for which cauſe they were given over to the oppreſſions of the Philiſtims, and now wearyed with ſufferings they lamented, &c. touching Aſhteroth and Baalim alſo, ſee Judg. 2. 13. If it bee demanded whether Samuel did not exhort them all theſe 20. yeares, it is anſwered by Toſtatus and others, that without doubt hee did, but could not hitherto prevaile, for he being an holy Prophet and a Judge next after Eli, would not certainly neglect to doe his beſt endeavour to convert them, even from the beginning of his authority.

V. 4. Then the children of Iſrael put away Baalim and Aſhteroth and ſerved the Lord onely: for if any other be ſerved together with God, ſuch ſervice is abominable, whether it be an idoll of the heathen, or an image of the Papiſts; and the word עבדו, is to bee noted by the Sept. rendred ἐδούλευσαν; that the vanity of the Popiſh diſtinction may appeare, who ſay that λατρεία is to be given to God onely, but δουλεία to ſaints and images alſo, for both are appropriated to the Lord, both here and Matth. 4. 10.

V. 5, 6. Then they were all gathered together to Mizpeh to Samuel, that hee might pray for them, as hee appointed, and they drew water and powred it out before the Lord and faſted on that day, and ſaid, wee have ſinned, and Samuel judged them in Mizpeh. Of Mizpeh ſee before Judg. 11. in the hiſtory of Iephtah, but this was not the ſame, but another upon the border of Judah and Benjamin, as is ſhewed Joſh. 11. 3. it was neare to Ramah, where Samuel dwelt, and famous for aſſemblies, Judg. 20. Junius. Some of the Rabbins thinke it was the ſame with Shiloh, where the Tabernacle was; but this cannot bee, if it bee true, which hath beene noted upon Judg. 20. and Ch. 21. 2, 12. And yet I cannot ſee, why this aſſembly ſhould now be called to Mizpeh, unleſſe the Tabernacle or Arke were there at this time, for to aſſemble before the Lord, is before the Tabernacle: wherefore it is held by Jerom and Toſtatus, that the Tabernacle was now in this place, removed moſt probably by Samuels direction, and afterwards it was removed to Nob; and where it ſtood, the people came together & ſacrifices were offered, the Arke in the meane ſeaſon being onely kept ſafe and covered in Abinidabs houſe. Yet if an Oratory were there as 1 Maccab. 3. 46. they might aſſemble thither for his cauſe. For the water, which they are ſaid to have powred out, Comeſt. ſaith it was a curſed water, which any idolater drinking had his lip hereby glued together, inſeparably, & there he Iudged the people, that is, taught them the judgements of the Lord. Schol. Hiſtor. Yet ſome, hee ſaith, affirme, that hee tooke a certaine idoll and ſtamped it to pouder, and made them to drinke thereof mixed with water, and then by their beards judged who were guilty of Idolatry, and who not. Lyra alſo reciteth this expoſition, but preferreth another of R. Solomon, who ſaith, that their powring out of water, was in way of humiliation for their ſinnes, by reaſon whereof they hereby acknowledged, that they were as water poured out, and had no ſtrength: or, that of Jonathan Ben Oziel, they poured out water to ſignifie the teares, that came downe from their eyes out of the contrition of their hearts. And hee judged Iſrael there, that is, heard their complaints againſt one another, and made a reconciliation amongſt them. Hugo ſaith, that they poured out water, to ſhew, that as water poured out returneth not againe, ſo they would no more returne to their idolatry. Junius following the Chald. ſaith, they ſhed teares in ſuch abundance for their ſinnes, as if they had drawne and poured out water in abundance. Peter Martyr having recited the expoſitions before-going, and rejecting that as a fable, of the water being drunke to try the Idolaters, of which mention is made by Jerom in tradit. Hebr. becauſe the water was not drunke, but poured out, &c. and adding another of ſome Rabbins, that this was done as a ſymbole of the remiſſion of their ſinnes, as by water filthineſſe is waſhed away; and that of Joſephus, that water was poured out for a drinke-offering, hee concludeth, that nothing elſe was here meant, but that they drew and poured out water to waſh themſelves, as in legall purifications it was required. But I rather preferre that before of ſome Rabbins, that this was done in humiliation, to ſignifie, that they were all as water poured out, that they aſcribing no ſtrength unto themſelves, but relying upon God onely, hee might be on their ſide. Yet for Samuels judging Iſrael in this place, I hold with Peter Martyr, that moſt probably is meant his being made Judge now firſt there, becauſe although it is ſaid before, that he was known to be a Prophet, yet that he was Judge, we read not till this time.

Hugo Cardin.

Iunius.

Peter Martyr.

V. 7, 8. The Lords of the Philiſtims hearing that all the Iſraelites were together in Mizpeh, as Joſephus ſaith, unarmed, they came up againſt them; and they being affraid, deſired Samuel not to ceaſe crying to the Lord for them; then hee took V. 9, 10. a ſucking Lambe, and offered it up whole for a burnt-offering, and cryed to the Lord, who heard him, and thundered upon the Philiſtims that day, and they were diſcomfited before Iſrael. Joſephus relateth it thus, The people of Iſrael being at Samuel's appointment, gathered together to Maſpat, the Philiſtims gathered together, thinking to ſet upon them ſuddenly, before they ſhould think of their comming, and thus eaſily to overcome them: Then they beſought Samuel to pray for them, who were now altogether unprepared, and had neither ſtrength nor heart to goe to battaile againſt them, being ſo often already overcome by them. And when he had prayed and offered a ſucking Lambe in ſacrifice, the Philiſtims came in ſight before that it was wholly conſumed, but then the earth quaked under them, and gaped ſo in divers places, that many of them fell into it, and the reſt were ſo ſmitten and burnt in part with often thunders and lightenings, that they had no ſtrength to hold their weapons; wherefore they fled before Iſrael, and Samuel with the people purſued them, and ſlew very many of them, and following on his victory, hee recovered the land which the Philiſtims had formerly taken from them, from Ekron even unto Gath, neither durſt the Philiſtims come out to fight any more againſt them, but kept them within their owne bounds all the dayes of Samuel, as it alſo here followeth, v. 13, 14. Touching the ſucking Lambe which Samuel is ſaid here to have offered, ſome of the Rabbins thinke that hee himſelfe did not offer it, but appointed the Prieſt to offer it, becauſe hee was a Levite; but R. Kimhi better, that hee offered it himſelfe, as hee might well doe by reaſon of his propheticall calling, for by vertue hereof Elias alſo offered ſacrifice, 1 King. 18. It is ſaid to bee a ſucking Lambe, to ſhew that it was of no great worth, and ſo that God looketh not to the greatneſſe of the gift, but to the heart of the offerer; and a Lambe was offered, to ſet forth the true Lambe of God Chriſt Jeſus, by vertue of the ſacrifice of whoſe death, God is made propitious to ſinners. And Samuel cryed to the Lord for Iſrael, and the Lord heard him. Some thinke that he Joſephus. Antiq. lib 6. cap. 2.

R. L.B. Gerſon. D. Kimhi.

Peter Martyr.

he anſwered him by fire ſent downe from heaven to conſume the ſacrifice, as V.10. the Rabbins: ſome, that the next words ſhew how hee heard him, The Lord thundred that day upon the Philiſtims, &c. and of this kinde of hearing we are Lyra. certaine, but not of the other. The Philiſtims came againſt them at this time, ſaith Lyra, becauſe that being under their Tribute ever ſince the taking of the Arke, they were forbidden, to prevent rebellion, at any time to aſſemble together;
wherefore hearing now that they were aſſembled contrary to this order, they came up againſt them, but the Lord turned it to their owne deſtruction, hee fought for his people from heaven, as hee did before, Joſh. 10. and Judg. 5.

V.11. Iunius. And the men of Iſrael went out of Mizpeh, and purſued the Philiſtims, and ſmote them to a place lying under Bethcar, that is, ſaith Junius, to a certaine Rock ſo called, between which and Mizpeh, Samuel is ſaid in the next verſe to have ſet up a ſtone. It is ſaid indeed, v. 12, Samuel ſet up a ſtone between Mizpeh and Shen, as if by Shen, not Bethcar, but ſome other place, the boundary of the Philiſtims Countrey were meant; but Shen is by Junius rendred that Rocke, the word properly ſignifying a tooth; but becauſe this Rock hung over like a Pagnin. tooth, this word is uſed to expreſſe it: ſo likewiſe Pagnine, and this is by Willet Willet. maintained: 1 Becauſe Chap. 14. 4, 5. the ſame word is put for a rock.
2 Becauſe Joſephus ſaith, that Bethcar was this rock ſet amongſt the Coreans, Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 6. c. 2. from whom it had the name. But hee ſaith onely, that they purſued the Philiſtims even to the Corrhæans (for that is the name of the place) and there he ſet up a ſtone for a monument of this victory, and called it fortis, ſtrong; yet from hence it may bee gathered that the name Bethcar, or Bethcor came from thoſe Coreans, of which hee ſpeaketh.

V.13. The Philiſtims being thus brought under, are ſaid to have come no more into the coaſt of Iſrael; and the hand of the Lord was againſt the Philiſtims all the dayes of Samuel. The contrary to this ſeemeth to bee ſet forth, Chap. 10.5.
where a gariſon of the Philiſtims is ſaid to have been at the hill of God, and Chap. 13.50. they came up in very great multitudes, and pitched in Michmaſh;
but the meaning here is, that they came no more againſt Iſrael with any ſucceſs, whilſt Samuel lived, for Jenathan and his Armour-bearer alone began to overthrow Junius. them, and then Saul purſued the victory againſt them. Junius ſaith, Peter Martyr. that they came not to inlarge their bounds any more, but defended them onely by Gariſons. Peter Martyr, they came not till Samuel grew old, and his ſons having the government committed to them, ruled ill: for then becauſe of their new invaſions, the people deſired to have a King to fight for them. But this is manifeſtly againſt the words of the text, all the dayes of Samuel, and the firſt is beſt.

V.14. So Iſrael was againe inlarged, and lived in peace, for the Philiſtims were ſubdued, and they were in peace with the Amorites; whereby, as by a generall name, all the inhabitants of thoſe parts are underſtood, both Philiſtims and others, the ſtate of Iſrael was now quiet after this victory, and the Cities before taken from them reſtored.

V.15. And Samuel judged Iſrael all the dayes of his life. How could this be, ſeeing Saul
Lyra. was made King long before hee dyed? Lyra ſaith, it is meant only till Saul was Junius. made King. But Iunius better, even when Saul was King, hee together with Saul judged them ſtill, as appeareth, Chap. 11. 7. Chap. 15. where hee ſlayeth Agag; and Acts 13. 21. Samuel and Saul are joyned together in the government.
Peter Martyr. And Peter Martyr more fully, although hee made his ſonnes Judges, yet hee did not put himſelfe out of this office; and when hee anointed Saul King, hee retained ſtill a Judicative power over all, yea, even the King himſelf; and therefore he reproveth him, and anointeth David for King, ſo that he was as it were King of Kings, Saul was the ordinary Magiſtrate, and hee the extraordinary.

V.16. And hee went from yeare to yeare in circuit to Bethel, Gilgal, and Mizpeh, &c.
Junius. For Bethel, Iunius hath, the houſe of God, expounding it of Kiriath-jearim, where the Arke war, and therefore the people aſſembled thither at the three great feaſtivall times of the yeare appointed Exod. 23. and ſo it was a fit place for Samuel at ſuch times to come and judge the people there. Gilgal was on the middle of the end of the Land eaſtward near Jordan; and Mizpeh at the other end weſtward, and ſo moſt fit for the people of all parts to aſſemble unto. Others take Bethel for a proper name of that City where Jacob had his viſion, Gen. 28. H. Bunting ſaith, Bethel was but two miles from Gilgal, and from Ramah 16, and Mizpeh from Gilgal 30 miles. But Willet defendeth that of Junius, becauſe it is called the houſe of God where the Arke was, Judg. 20. 18. 1 Sam. 3. 15. Chap. 10. 3. and it is moſt likely, that becauſe the people aſſembled thither together at feaſtivall times, Samuel took this opportunity to come and judge them there. Yet to mee, a place properly called Bethel ſeemeth rather to be meant here, becauſe the other names are proper, and Aſſemblies to holy Feaſts were not ſo fit for judging Civill cauſes; and if hee had taken the opportunities of their meetings at Gods houſe, he ſhould not have needed to have gone about to other places alſo, ſeeing he had them then all together in that one place, Samuel is here ſet forth for an example to other Rulers and Judges, that they ſhould not put the people to unneceſſary toyle in comming over far for judgement, nor otherwiſe oppreſſe or poll them, but provide for their good.

H. Bunting Patriar. travailes.

Note.

Having gone his Circuit, hee ſtill alwayes returned to Ramah, where hee dwelt. But how could hee leave the Tabernacle, to which hee was dedicated by his mother for ever, to dwell in another place? Anſw. When God advanced him to be Judge over Iſrael, hee called him out by a new calling from ſerving any more about the Tabernacle, and therefore hee might well leave that place to follow his calling, for vows hold no longer but till that Gods pleaſure bee revealed to the contrary, ſo Peter Martyr; upon this ſee ſomewhat before, 1 Sam. 1. 28. Borrhæus ſaith, as long as the Tabernacle was in Shiloh, hee was bound by his mothers vow to ſerve there, but now this place being deſtroyed, and the abode of the Tabernacle uncertaine, he was bound no longer; but I aſſent rather to the other.

Qu.

Borrhæus.

V. 17.

And there hee built an Altar to the Lord, that is, ſaith Junius, at Kiriath-jearim, where the Arke was, being therefore called Bethel, v. 16. but it is plainly ſpoken of Ramah, and ſo Peter Martyr underſtandeth it, and others, juſtifying this his fact, becauſe hee was a Prophet, and ſo did it by direction from God, although ordinarily no Altar might be made but at the place choſen by God; and the rather might this now bee done, becauſe the Arke had now no certaine place, and happily it might then be brought to Ramah, although it be no where ſpoken of. Theodoret qu. 15. in 1 Reg. ſaith, before the Temple was ſet up, it was lawfull to build an Altar in other places; but becauſe this was done by Elijah at Carmel after the Temple was built, he ſaith, it was to bee underſtood as an exception to the generall rule, that the men of God might ſet up Altars and ſacrifice any where. The reaſon why an Altar was now ſet up here, was, becauſe the people gathered thither together often times to Samuel, and then it was conſulted about things pertaining to the Weale publique, which it was not fit to doe without publique calling upon God, and the ground of prayer is faith, the ground of faith, Gods promiſes, and the promiſes are ſealed up unto us by outward ſignes; ſo Peter Martyr.

Peter Martyr.

Deut. 12. 14.

Pellican.

Oſiander.

Myſtically by the thunder here ſent againſt the Philiſtims, Rabanus underſtandeth the preaching of the Goſpel, whereby errours are overthrowne, and purſued even to Bethchar, that is, till all errour is purged out, and God is acknowledged, according to the ſignification of the word, the houſe of acknowledgement; and then Chriſt the true Ebenezer, or ſtone of helpe, in whom all our help and health, lyeth is ſet up, which is when we beleeve in him.

Rabanus.
The Myſtery.

CHAP. VIII.

V.1,2,3,4,5

VVHen Samuel was old, hee made his ſonnes Joel and Abiah Judges over Iſrael, and they were Judges in Beerſhebah, but becauſe they tooke bribes, and perverted judgement, the Elders of Iſrael came to Samuel, and complained hereof, and asked a King to judge them like other Nations. The age of Samuel, ſaith Sallianus was now 60, for hee was borne when Eli had been High-prieſt, and Judge one yeare, and was 39 when hee dyed.

Lyra.

Iunius.

Borrhæus.
Oſiander.

Pellican.

Samuel, ſaith Lyra, not being able any longer to travaile about, as hee had done, by reaſon of his age, made his ſonnes Judges, thinking that they would tread in his ſteps, but hee was deceived in them. For theſe words, they were Judges in Beerſhebah; Junius hath it, even to Beerſhebah, that is, from Dan to Beerſhebah, all over Iſrael, as theſe two limits are put, Judg. 20. 1. but I cannot ſee how the word בבאן־שבע properly ſignifying, in Beerſhebah, will bear this conſtruction, for in the place alledged, Numb. 20. 1. it is עד־בארש even to Beerſhebah. Borrhæus therefore and Oſiander hold, that they were placed there, becauſe it was furtheſt remote ſouthward, and next to the Philiſtims countrey, where there was neede of the preſence of a Judge, that might be able to withſtand and provide againſt that enemy, and Samuel being old, could not now travaile ſo farre to judge the people. But this is not probable, becauſe Beerſhebah was none of the places to which Samuel had uſed to travail, but Bethel, Gilgal, and Mizpeh. Pellican thinketh, that they dwelt there to vexe the people, by making them to come long journeys for judgement, and there ſeemeth to mee to bee ſome antitheſis between that which was before ſaid touching their father Samuel his travailing about to divers places to judge the people for their greater eaſe, and their ſloathfulneſſe, abiding alwayes in one place onely, and not travailing about, or dividing themſelves to ſeverall places, that thus at the leaſt the people might bee put to the leſſe labour; and ſo this is mentioned not without ſome taxation, that they preferred their own eaſe and pleaſure before the good of the Common-wealth; thus alſo Peter Martyr: yet I doe not thinke that they did thus purpoſely to vexe the people, but out of a neglect towards them. If it bee ſaid, this is not likely that they lived both in one place, and went not abroad to judge, ſeeing their father was yet living, and ſo hee would not have ſuffered it. I anſwer, it is likely, that being once in authority, they would not bee ruled by their father, as neither would Eli's wicked ſons, nor ſome others ſince, that have bin made Kings whilſt their fathers lived, but have rebelled againſt them. Joſephus ſaith, that one of them dwelt in Dan, and the other in Beerſhebah, but this is againſt the Scripture. They dwelt farre from their father, and happily by his appointment, becauſe he continued a Judge ſtill, as was before ſaid, Hee judged Iſrael all his dayes, and hee made them but his aſſiſtants now that hee was old, meaning doubtleſſe, that they ſhould go about as hee had done, he in the meane ſeaſon judging all about Ramah, and rarely elſewhere.

Joſephus.

Peter Martyr.

Samuel in ſetting up his ſonnes for Judges, ſaith Peter Martyr, ſinned two wayes: 1 That hee did it contrary to all former preſidents, for Gedeon having the Kingdome offered to him and his ſonnes, refuſed it; and likewiſe Moſes, when hee ſaw that hee muſt depart out of this life, ſet not up his ſonne, but prayed the Lord to provide him a man to goe before the people, and to govern them. 2 In that hee did thus, without asking counſell of the Lord; for if hee had asked, hee ſhould have heard that Judges were not to bee ſet up by men, but by the Lord immediately. And therefore it ſucceeded accordingly, both his ſonnes proved wicked, and the people ſhooke off both him and them. The wickedneſſe of his ſonnes was very great: 1 They were covetous. 2 They tooke bribes. 3 Perverted judgement, and ſo the wicked were juſtified, and the righteous condemned, then which there cannot bee a greater peſt to a Common-wealth. Wherefore Exod. 18. it is a property required in a Judge, that hee ſhould hate covetouſneſſe; the Ancients pictured Juſtice without eyes, and without hands, to ſhew, that a Judge ſhould neither bee a reſpecter of perſons, nor take bribes. The Areopagites judged alwayes in the darke, that both theſe evills might bee prevented. Cambyſes cauſed an unjuſt Judge to bee fleaed, and with his skin a cover to bee made for the Judgement-ſeat, appointing his ſonne to ſit there and judge Cauſes. If any ſhall marvaile, that Eli was judged ſo ſeverely for his ſonnes faults, but Samuel not: Theodoret anſwereth, that they lived not neare to their father, but afarre off, ſo as that hee could not provide for a reformation. But whether did the people il hereupon in deſiring a King? Qu. Anſ. Pellican ſaith, that they ſinned by curioſity, in that they deſired not a reformation of the abuſe, but an innovation of the government. Pellican. Oſiander, that they ſinned by diſtruſt in God, for that they thought that a Judge Oſiander. coming ſometime of meane parentage, was not ſo formidable to the enemy, as a King, and therfore that they were not ſo ſafe under Judges: when as indeed they were not under the protection of the Judge, but of God, who raiſed him up immediatly. Laſtly, Willet ſaith, they ſinned alſo by ingratitude towards Samuel, in Willet. that having received ſo many benefits from him, yet they rejected his government even whilſt he lived. And this is one of P. Martyr's, who alſo ſaith, they ſinned by Peter Martyr. deſiring a King, after the manner of all other Nations, and not according to the rule of Gods Word, Deut. 17. and in that they deſired a King without conſulting with the Lord, or having direction and order from him hereabout. For it was not altogether unlawfull for them to deſire to have a King, ſeeing the Lord had before propounded the caſe, if they would ſet a King over Deut. 17. them, hee ſhould bee one of their brethren, and not bee proud, &c. And to Abraham hee had promiſed, that Kings ſhould come out of his loynes: and Gen. 17. 6. Iacob by the ſpirit ſpake in the ſcepter of Iudah. Gec. 49. 10. But till God had pleaſed to give order for the making of a King, they ſhould have reſted in the preſent government by Judges, and deſired that the abuſes in Samuel's ſons, ſhould either have been reformed, or they turned out of their places. And as they ſinned greatly in asking a King, ſo they did fooliſhly, becauſe they deſired to change from a better government by Judges, to a worſe. For the Judge ruled them alwayes according to Gods Word, when God ſet a Judge over them, but there was danger of the contrary, if Kings were ſet up, as wofull experience afterwards proved, there being amongſt twenty Kings, ſcarce foure godly. Againe, kings lived in greater ſtate, and this muſt be maintained by the greater charge of the people; and themſelves, their lands, and children muſt bee at the Kings ſervice, which were free under Judges; and they were excluded from having a voice in matters of importance under Kings, whereas in the time of Judges, the Elders and people did bear ſway. And in asking a King becauſe Samuel's ſons were wicked, they did fooliſhly, for how could they know, but that their King might be wicked alſo; & if the ſons of him ſo a good father did thus degenerate, how could they but feare the like touching the Kings ſonne; who muſt not now by a new-election, but by inheritance come to the Kingdome after him? yet this their unjuſt deſire was guided by Gods providence, to accompliſh Gods Word, That Kings ſhould come of Abraham.

For theſe reaſons before-going, their asking of a King diſpleaſed Samuel, but V. 6. hee went to God by prayer, referring it to his direction. And God bade him hearken unto them; yet hee alſo ſheweth himſelfe to bee diſpleaſed with them, in that hee ſaith, They have not rejected thee, but mee; that I ſhould not reigne over them, according to all the workes which they have done ſince I brought them V. 7. up out of Egypt, even to this day, wherein they have forſaken mee, and ſerved other Gods, &c. V. 8. Whereby wee may ſee that God ſometimes granteth men their deſires in wrath, as the Quailes in the wilderneſſe; and hee ſaith elſewhere, Note. Numb. 11. 33. I gave them a King in my wrath, that wee may all learne in asking any thing of God, not to bee carryed by our owne affections, but to bee regulated Hoſ. 13. 11. by his will. But how doth the Lord ſay, They have rejected mee: Lyra reſolveth it thus, Lyra. they have rejected mee, in that they have left mee to ſerve other Gods, and ſo now they reject thee my Vicegerent. Peter Martyr ſaith, that Peter Marty. God here comforteth Samuel two wayes. 1 That the ignominy now offered to him againſt himſelf, for hee was by God made Judge over them, and ſo hee being rejected for Judge, God himſelfe was rejected for King. 2 That this was no new thing, for they had alwayes uſed the Lord thus, ſince their comming out of Egypt, caſting him off from time to time to ſerve other Gods, therefore it might well bee patiently borne by Samuel, as not arguing any fault in him cauſing them thus to doe, but their rebellious diſpoſition; and no greater diſhonour was herein done unto him, then unto God himſelfe. If a queſtion bee made here, whether to have a King bee a rejecting of God, that hee Prov. 8. ſhould not reigne over us? I anſwer, no, for even Kings reigne by God, and when a good King reigneth, God ruleth by him; yea, a Tyrant is ſet up by Rom. 13. 1. God, and hath his authority from him, and therefore muſt bee obeyed, but for the abuſe of his power hee ſhall anſwer to God another day. Now the people of Iſrael are ſaid to have rejected God from ruling over them, becauſe they deſired an alteration of that form of government by him ſetled amongſt them, and did as much as in them lay, reject Gods government. Yet hee condeſcendeth to their deſire, for the hardneſſe of their hearts, as Moſes yeelded, that a bill of divorcement ſhould be given; leſt Samuel being denyed to make them a King, they ſhould have ſet up one themſelves.

V. 9, 10. Then God bade Samuel tell them the manner of the King, and hee ſaid unto them, Hee will take your ſonnes, and appoint them for himſelfe for his chari- V. 11. ots, and to bee his horſemen, and ſome ſhall runne before him, &c. And will ſet V. 12. them to eare his ground, and to reap his harveſt, &c. And he will take your fields, &c. V. 15, 16, 17, 18. And hee will take the tenth of your ſeed, &c. This, ſaith Lyra, is to bee underſtood in the caſe of neceſſity for the common good, for in this caſe, all things Lyra. are the Kings, and to bee taken and uſed by him, as the preſent need requireth for the defence of the Common-wealth, as for the good of the body, all the members thereof are to bee expoſed to danger. But out of this caſe of neceſſity there bee many things expreſſed, whereunto the right of a King extendeth not, as namely all thoſe things that make the ſubjects condition ſervile, and reſpect not the common good, but rather the will of him that reigneth. And theſe things doth Samuel declare unto them, that they ſeeing how great a power a King ſhould have, ſo that hee might eaſily turne his Kingly authority into tyranny, might hereby be deterred from ſeeking to have a King, which would be ſo inexpedient for them. Wherefore to ſhew what a King might not commonly doe de jure, Deut. 17. it is ſaid, he ſhall not multiply Horſes to himſelfe, nor bring the people back into Egypt, that is, into a ſervile condition. Whereas it is added here, And yee ſhall bee his ſervants, the meaning is none other, but if hee ſhall turne Tyrant, as hee may eaſily doe, by reaſon of his great power. D. Kimbi. R. Kimbi ſaith, that theſe things are ſo of the right of a King, that without them hee is no King, according to ſome Rabbins, but according to others, that theſe are commemorated onely by way of communication of that which Peter Martyr. would follow upon this change of government. Peter Martyr ſaith, that the true right of a King, is deſcribed Deut. 17. here the true right is not propounded, but the uſurped, and this the preſent caſe required, becauſe they deſired to have a King after the manner of the Nations about them, and thoſe Kings did thus tyrannize over their ſubjects, and pill and poll them unreaſonably, and tooke ſuch outward pompe unto them, as that they might thereby moſt terrifie their ſubjects. If it be demanded, may not a godly King then take of his ſubjects, whereby to maintaine himſelfe in that port, which belongeth to a King? He anſwereth, hee may exact tribute according to reaſon, and maintain a royall pompe, but for the uſe of the Common-wealth, and not for riot. And that here is not ſet forth what a King might by right doe, but is prophe- Oſiander. tically foretold, what hee would doe for their puniſhment, is held alſo by Oſi- Pellican. ander, Pellican, and Borrhæus; and Gregory, c. 10. it is not here preſcribed, but Borrhæus. ſhewed, what reprobate Kings would do, but the godly avoid, for ſubjects are to bee defended by Kings, and not ſpoyled of their goods. But if any ſhall contend, that not things to bee avoyded, but to bee done, are here mentioned, the right of Tyrants is written for that King, who is asked, the Lord being rejected. And Toſtatus ſaith, that all things here ſet downe, are not put as the rights of Kings, but as the evills, which for the greatneſſe of their power they can doe. Amongſt whom it is noted, that their King ſhould tyrannize over them three wayes: 1 By taking things violently from them, and not by order of Law. 3 By abuſing the goods taken in beſtowing them upon his favourites. 3 By baſely uſing their perſons, as if they were his ſlaves or ſervants.

V. 18. And yee ſhall cry unto mee becauſe of your King in that day, but I will not heare you. Hereby is ſhewed, that a King being once ſet up, although the government bee not ſo good, yet hee can never bee put downe againe; as the horſe having once received man on to his back to purſue the ſtagge, could never ſhake him off againe. And this propheſie of the miſerable caſe that they ſhould bee in under Kings, tooke manifeſt effect, in that they had all wicked Kings, except foure, under whom they ſuffered greatly, and at laſt for their wickedneſſe went into captivity; ſo Peter Martyr. Peter Martyr. But yet hee diſputeth at large, and proveth, that the government of the Church ought not to bee Monarchicall, but alwayes Ariſtocraticall, becauſe this forme of government was firſt ſetled by Chriſt, when hee gave the keyes of the kingdome of heaven to all the Apoſtles alike, and the power of forgiving ſinnes, and this form may none ever preſume to alter without his allowance, to the worlds end.

V. 19. Lyra. But the people refuſed to obey the voice of Samuel, &c. for the words further added, Nay, but wee will have a King over us, that is, ſaith Lyra, nay, but the Lord will heare us although wee have a King, and therefore wee will have one. But the word [nay] is rather oppoſed to the dehortation before-going, not to perſiſt to aske a King, and ſo Peter Martyr P. Martyr. underſtandeth it, ſaying, that they anſwered as a people headily carryed to have their owne wills, whatſoever ſhould come of it. For although under Judges God had alwayes wonderfully protected them, when they lived in obedience to his lawes; yet becauſe all generally flocked not to the Judge, whereby they thought that they were the weaker, they would now have a King that might command all, thinking, that thus they ſhould bee the ſtronger: forgetfully paſſing over Gods gracious dealing towards them under the Judges, whom hee had raiſed up from time to time, and the miſeries which they had ſuffered under Abimelech in the ſhort time of his reigne.

V. 20, 21, 22. Samuel ſeeing that he nothing prevailed, related their words unto the Lord, who bade him againe make them a King, and ſo for that time hee diſmiſſed the aſſembly, hereby ſhewing, that God would ſhortly ſet up one over them, to whom alone this belonged by the law, Deut. 17. and in the meane ſeaſon they were to waite upon him.

CHAP. IX.

HEre is ſhewed how the Lord ſatisfied the importunate deſire of the people in making Saul King over them. And therefore hee is firſt deſcribed, and then the occaſion and meanes of his comming to Samuel to bee anointed King. V. 1. Hee is deſcribed firſt by his parentage, he was the ſonne of Kiſh, the ſon of Abiel, the ſonne of Zeror, &c. a mighty man of power, 1 Chron. 8. 33. Kiſh is ſaid to bee the ſonne of Ner, but he moſt probably had two names, as many others, being called by the one here Abiel, and by the other there Ner. V. 2. 2 Hee is deſcribed by his youth, comlineſſe and ſtature, A choice young man, and a goodly, neither was there amongſt all the children of Iſrael a goodlier perſon then hee, from his ſhoulders upward hee was higher then all the people. For theſe words, A choice young man and a goodly, the Vulg. Latin hath, electus & bonus, choice and good: and for the next words, there was not amongſt the children of Iſrael a better then hee, and this reading is according to the Hebrew; wherefore Lyra Lyra. and others ſay, that hee is here commended from the goodneſſe of his nature and diſpoſition, as in the words following from his ſtature. But from

Peter Martyr. from his goodneſſe, ſaith Peter Martyr, hee afterwards degenerated, as alſo many more have done, when they have attained to a kingdom, or to any other great dignity, they have been good at the firſt, but afterwards tyrannicall or epicuriſh; ſo that we have need continually to pray that our Kings and Rulers may alwayes perſevere in goodneſſe. Yet moſt Interpreters, ſaith he, expound it goodly, as reſpecting the forme of his body, which is the more probable, becauſe it is by and by added, From his ſhoulders upward hee was higher, &c. I ſee no reaſon but that it may bee taken both wayes, hee had a good ſtature, ſtrength, and comlineſſe of body, and a good diſpoſition, and ſo was a man of all others moſt fit in humane reaſon to bee made King. Hee is here commended, ſaith Martyr, from all ſorts of cauſes; the formall, becauſe there was no ambition, deceit, or violence uſed to get this kingdome, but meerly the will and providence of God effected it: the finall, that the people might bee defended from the incurſions and violence of their enemies: the efficient, God, who ſhewed him to Samuel, and bade him anoint him King: and the materiall, Saul himſelfe, who came of a father a mighty man, and therefore was likely to be ſuch himſelfe alſo, ſeeing mighty men beget mighty men, was now in the prime of his age, and at his greateſt ſtrength, of a good condition, and ſtature, and forme; as it was ſaid of Priamus, fit for an Emperour. Of his City, no mention is made here, for it was Gibeah, which was infamous for the great wickednes committed there upon the Levites concubine, and therefore it is let paſſe in ſilence.

V. 3. And the Aſſes of Kiſh, Sauls father, were loſt, &c. Hee tooke great delight in Aſſes, ſaith Joſephus, and therefore kept of the faireſt ſort; and by ſending out his ſonne Saul to looke them up, hee ſhewed, in what manner great men brought up their ſonnes in thoſe dayes, not in idleneſſe and pleaſure, but to looke to their cattell. In prophane Hiſtories we read of Hercules, that he kept an heard of bullocks; and Apollo ſerved King Admetus in the ſame office; and Paris the ſon of king Priamus kept ſheep.

And Saul paſſed over Mount-Ephraim, which was, ſaith one, 4 miles from H.Bunting Patriar.travailes. Gibeah, the City from whence he came. Then hee went into the land of Saliſah, Iunius. and to the land of Salim, that is, 12 miles. Saliſah was in the tribe of Benjamin, 2 King. 4. 42. Of Salim, ſee Joh. 3. 23. it was not farre from Jordan:
H.Bunting. then hee went to the land of Jemini, which was alſo in the tribe of Benjamin, 16 miles from Salim, but Saliſah, ſaith the ſame Author, was in mount-Ephraim, Iunius. but Junius in Benjamin, alledging 2 King. 4. 42. but there is no mention made of the tribe wherin this land lay, yet it ſeems not to have been in mount-Ephraim, becauſe it is ſpoken of as a diſtinct place therefrom.

V. 5. Then they came to the land of Zuph, this is thought by Junius and others to have beene Ramah, where Samuel dwelt, otherwiſe called Ramathaim Zephim, and the land of Zuph, from Zuph, the firſt in Samuels pedegree, Ch. 1. 1. and this
V. 6. is not unlikely, becauſe here Samuel dwelt, as appeareth, v. 6. His ſer-
V. 7. vant ſaid unto him, Here is a man of God, an honourable man in this City &c. and
V. 8. to this man when hee adviſed him to goe to aske about the Aſſes, Saul tooke care for ſome gift to bring unto him, and ſo they reſolved to give him the fourth part of a ſhekel of ſilver, which his ſervant had about him. Here Qu. it may be demanded, whether Samuel being a Prophet of the Lord did uſe to take gifts for doing any act of his propheticall office, ſeeing Eliſhab would 2 Kings 5. not take any thing of Naaman, and Gebezi his ſervant was puniſhed with the Le-
P.Martyr. proſy for taking? Peter Martyr anſwereth, it is held by Joſephus and by Jerom Hieronym.in qu V.T.et in.Mich after him, that it was Sauls error to thinke, that the Prophet would take 1 Kings 14. ſomething for his divination, but wee read not, that hee tooke ought of him, but rather gave unto him, for hee made him to dine with him: and in the like error was Jeroboams wife, when ſhee went with her gifts to the Prophet for her ſicke ſonne, for neither doe wee read there that any thing was taken.
It is a difference betweene a true Prophet and a falſe, theſe doe their office gratis, they for rewards, as is complained Mich. 3. and wee may ſee in Balaam.
For gifts doe blinde the eyes, and are of force to make men ſpeake pleaſing things, although falſly. The reaſon, why a Prophet ſhould take nothing is given by Chriſt, freely yee have received freely give, wherefore Simon Magus was rejected by Peter, when he offered him money, and Saul ſeemeth not to have knowne any difference between a wizzard and a man of God, which made him to thinke of a gift: yet ſome excuſe him, becauſe to come to a Prophet was to come to God, and before God it was provided by the law, that none ſhould appeare empty. But admit, that Samuel received his gift, it was ſo little, as that it is not worth the ſpeaking of, for it was but the 4 part of a ſhekel, that is 5. d. or 6. d. at the moſt, but now the rewards of Prieſts are the price of great farmes and and fields. Thus hee out of Jerom, but in concluſion he ſaith, hee ſpake not this, becauſe it was altogether unlawfull for a Prophet to take any thing, for Jeremiah received bread of the King dayly, Eliſhah received 20. loaves of thoſe that brought them, and many Prophets were fed by Obadiah, and he that preacheth the Goſpel, muſt live of the Goſpel; but to ſhew that they ought not to take gifts to the inriching of them, but for their neceſſary maintenance.

Now it was their manner of ſpeach of old, when they went to a Prophet, to ſay, Let us goe to the Seer, for a Prophet was called a Seer, &c. It is not meant, that a Prophet was thus called of old and not now alſo, when theſe things were done, but this name of Seer hee was called by a long time and ſtill, for Saul inquired for Samuel by this name, v. 11. And a Prophet was thus called partly becauſe hee foreſaw things to come, and things done ſecretly, as Eliſhah; and partly becauſe God revealed himſelfe unto him by viſions and dreames, as Numb. 12. 6. And leſt Gods people ſhould ſeeme to want the meanes of being ſatisfied in caſes of inquiry, which the heathen had by their wizzards, even particular things and of ſmall moment were revealed by Gods Spirit to his Prophets, ſo that Saul might well goe to inquire of Samuel about his fathers loſt aſſes, and by him be ſatisfied. But now wee muſt be content without ſuch meanes, and not goe to wizzards to know what is become of our loſt things, as did the heathen, who knew not God, but in ſtead of God, ſerved the Devill. It muſt ſuffice us, that wee have the myſteries of the kingdome of heaven more plainly revealed unto us by Chriſt the head of Prophets, although wee have none other revelations touching any thing in this world concerning any of us in particular, and ſuffer much by loſſes and croſſes here.

V. 9.
Borrham.
Junius.
2 King.5.ch.6.
Pellican.

And as they went up the hill to the City, they found young Maidens going out to draw water, and asked them, ſaying, Is the Seer here, &c. The City to which they came, was Ramah, where Samuel dwelt: The Maidens whom they asked for the Seer, did not onely tell them, that hee was there, but alſo that there was a ſacrifice that day in the high place, and that Samuel would bee there to bleſſe the ſacrifice, neither would the people eate thereof, till hee had bleſſed it. Here the conceit of R. Solomon, cited by Comeſtor and Lyra, is not worth the relating, That theſe Maidens being taken with the beauty of Saul, ſtayed him a while to looke upon him, uſing more words then needed: for contrarywiſe it is ſaid, They bade him make haſte to ſpeake with Samuel before hee went up to the ſacrifice, v. 12. For the ſacrifice here ſpoken of, they ſay, ſome hold it to have been onely a feaſt prepared purpoſely againſt Sauls comming, which was the day before revealed to Samuel, v. 15. but ſome a peace-offering, a great part of which was ſpent in feaſting, and then, ſaith Lyra, a ſacrifice might be offered in any place, and not before the Tabernacle or Arke onely, as was ſhewed before, 1 Sam. 7. The firſt, that it was onely a feaſt, is followed by Junius, who therefore rendreth it, There is this day a feaſt, &c. becauſe a ſacrifice might not bee offered but before the Tabernacle: but this reaſon, as hath been already ſhewed, is of no force, for an Altar was by Samuel built in Ramah, 1 Sam. 7. 17. The ſecond, which is better, is followed by Peter Martyr, and Oſiander, and this proveth it to have been a ſacrifice, becauſe it was in the High-place, unto which they ſhould not have needed to goe, if it had been onely a feaſt, and in High-places they uſed to ſacrifice, before the Temple was built. If it bee objected,

V. 11.
V.12.
V.13.
Schol. Hiſt.
Lyra.
Junius.
Peter Martyr.
Oſiander.

Ob. objected, v. 24. the ſhoulder is ſet before S*aul*, which was the Prieſts part, Lev.
7.32. and therefore it ſhould not have been ſo done, unleſſe it had been a feaſt
Sol. without a ſacrifice. Willet anſwereth well, that the Prieſts part was the right Willet. ſhoulder, and this might be the left, ſeeing it is only called the ſhoulder, but not ſaid which ſhoulder. For S*amuel*'s bleſſing of the ſacrifice before they ate, that is, thoſe parts thereof, which were to feaſt withall, that was by thankeſgiving, according to the commendable cuſtome in uſe amongſt the Jews: For D.Kimbi. as David K*imbi* hath it, the Maſter of the houſe, when they went to meat, took bread and bleſſed the Creator of the world for it, and then taking the cup hee did likewiſe: according to which cuſtome our Lord did at his laſt Supper, at Peter Martyr. the Paſchall feaſt, even before hee came to the inſtitution thereof. And according to this pious cuſtome doe wee Chriſtians bleſſe our meats and drinkes, before wee eate, and bleſſe God for them after; not that they are not all good in Gen. 3. themſelves without our bleſſing of them, but becauſe they were curſed to man for ſinne, that they may not bee uncleane, but ſanctified and made pure unto 1 Tim. 4. 5. us, which is by faith and prayer, as the Apoſtle teacheth, ſaying, They are ſanctified
Act. 15. 9. by the Word and prayer, that is, by faith wrought by the Word, which Tit. 1. 15. purifieth, and ſo maketh all things pure unto us, for to the pure, all things are pure; and prayer, whereby their ſanctification is in faith craved, and attained, Luke 11. and the ſanctifying of our ſelves alſo, ſeeing by prayer we attaine the Spirit of grace and ſanctification.

V. 14, 15, 16, S*aul* and his ſervant hearing this, went and met S*amuel*, who being before 17, 18, &c. advertiſed by the Lord, that a man ſhould come unto him that day, whom hee ſhould anoint for King, was now told that this was the man. Wherefore ſo ſoon as S*aul* asked him for the Seers houſe, he invited him to the feaſt which he had prepared, ſaying, That hee would tell him all that hee deſired to morrow.
The phraſe uſed, is, that God told S*amuel* in his eare, wherein it is ſpoken Lyra. after the manner of men, who when they tell any thing to one another ſecretly, are ſaid to tell it in his eare. V. 19. hee ſaith, I will tell thee all that is in thine heart, whereby it may bee demanded what S*amuel* meant hereby; for that hee meant not touching the Aſſes, the next words, v. 20. doe declare, wherein hee for the preſent reſolveth him, that the Aſſes were found, willing Hieron. lib. him therefore not to ſet his heart upon them. Lyra ſaith, in the Hebr. Queſtions, Hebr. qu. there is a tradition, that S*aul* had a dreame that hee was upon the top of a Palme-tree, which fore-ſhewed his regall dignity, about which his minde was Iunius. ſtill troubled, and of this Samuel ſpeaketh. Junius rendreth the words thus,
I will diſmiſſe thee in the morning, but whatſoever is in thine heart I doe now ſhew unto thee, namely, touching the Aſſes: but how the Hebrew will beare this reading, I cannot ſee; for both the words in this verſe are, וכל אשר בלבבך אגיד לך And I will ſhew thee all that is in thine heart; and in the next verſe ולאתונות and for the Aſſes; ſo that there was certainly ſomewhat elſe that S*amuel* knew to bee in S*auls* minde, touching which hee promiſed to reſolve him the next morning. Yet Willet ſtands for that of Junius, that hee Willet. promiſed to ſhew him nothing elſe but touching the Aſſes, arguing, that hee could not meane any thoughts that hee had touching the kingdome, becauſe S*aul* made ſo ſtrange of it when it was mentioned unto him. But although the dreame before ſpoken of, ſeemeth to be but a dreame of the Rabbins, yet it may well be held, that the people generally being in expectation who ſhould by S*amuel* bee appointed for King, S*aul* was in the ſame expectation alſo, and comming to S*amuel*, and ſeeing him to uſe him ſo reſpectively, it might then be a queſtion then beginning to ariſe in his minde, whether hee would lay this honour upon him: not that hee thought himſelfe fit for it, or deſired it, for the words hereafter uſed by him ſhew the contrary, and his hiding of himſelfe afterwards, when hee was ſought for to bee made King, but out of a fear that hee might after hee had feaſted him, declare him to bee King, the burthen of which high honour in thoſe dangerous times hee would willingly have declined.
And to this moſt aptly agree the words following, v. 20. On whom is all the deſire of Iſrael? is it not on thee, and on all thy fathers houſe? that is, ſeeing thou muſeſt in thy heart now, whether I have any ſuch intent in inviting thee, to make thee King, bee it knowne unto thee, that thou art hee whom all Iſrael have ſo earneſtly ſought unto mee for, although they know not yet thy perſon; for they deſire to have a King, and thou art the man by God appointed, and therefore, I ſay, their hearts are ſet upon thee. V. 16. Where the Lord ſaith, Hee had looked upon the affliction of the people, and heard their cry, and ſo would bring a man of Benjamin to Samuel, whom hee ſhould anoint over them: it may bee doubted how hee ſaith thus, ſeeing they were wicked, and unworthy to have their cry heard, forſomuch as God heareth not ſinners, and what their afflictions were, in regard of which they needed one to deliver them? Peter Martyr anſwereth, that the goodneſſe of God appeared in this, that hee would heare the cryes of people in affliction, although wicked, for thus hee uſeth to extend his bounty even to ſuch, to winne them to repentance. Againe, although they were for the moſt part wicked, yet ſome doubtleſſe amongſt them were godly, and of them it may be underſtood, that hee heard their cryes. For the kinde of affliction now urgent upon them, hee ſaith, that the King of Ammon had gathered a great Army to come againſt them, of which they were ſore affraid, but then it would have been ſaid, that he may ſave them out of the hands of the Ammonites, whereas it is not ſaid ſo, but out of the hands of the Philiſtims: their affliction then was the Philiſtian oppreſſion, under which they had long lived, and from whom Samuel had once delivered them, and now it ſeemeth they grew formidable to them againe. For the place where Samuel and Saul met, it is ſaid, v. 18. Saul drew neare to Samuel in the gate; but v. 14. When they were come into the City, Samuel came out againſt them to go up to the High-place: if they were come into the City, how could they come to Samuel in the gate; or, as it is in the Hebr. in the midſt of the gate? The Chaldee Paraphraſt to reſolve this, readeth it, within the gate, and ſo Junius; and this muſt needs bee the meaning, when they were come a little within the gate, they met him; The Septuagint to make theſe two verſes to agree, render v. 18. thus, Then Saul drew neare to Samuel in the midſt of the City: but the Hebr. word is שער ſignifying a gate, and not a city. For Sauls anſwer to Samuel, Why ſpeakeſt thou ſo to mee, ſeeing I am a Benjamite, of the leaſt of all the Tribes, &c. ſome thinke that hee ſpake thus in hypocriſie; but others ſimply, as not thinking himſelfe fit for this high dignity. For the Tribe of Benjamin had been lately waſted by the warre, Judg. 20. and ſo was become now the ſmalleſt of all the Tribes, but afterwards hee was corrupted with hypocriſie, and other groſſe vices. Lyra alſo ſaith the ſame, that Saul ſpake thus in humility, and ſo did Gedeon before, Iudg. 6. but yet his fathers houſe was not ſo ſmall, for hee was a mighty man, ſo that there was ſome diſſimulation in Saul when hee ſaid ſo, which was not without fault, although ſpoken in humility. Hugo reading it as the Vulg. Latine doth, Am not I a ſon of Jemini, and ſo it is in the Hebrew, ſaith, that there are two opinions; 1 That Jeminus was of the meaneſt family in Benjamin. 2 That a ſonne of Jemini was the ſame with a Benjamin, ſeeing Iamin ſignifieth, a right hand, and Ben, a ſonne; and therefore Saul meant not any particular family, but onely that hee was of Benjamin the leaſt Tribe: And his fathers houſe, ſaith Joſephus, was of great note in that Tribe, wherefore his family was not ſo meane, but that he ſpake thus in humility of it. Touching the words before-going, v. 20. Vpon whom is all the deſire of Iſrael, &c. the Vulg. Latine hath it, whoſe ſhall the beſt things of Iſrael bee, ſhall they not bee to thee and to thy fathers houſe? Whereupon Lyra, ſhall they not bee in thy power to take when thou art King, and thy childrens and kindreds? for this hee had ſhewed, Chap. 8. ſhould bee the Kings power; and his ſonne Iſhboſheth was King after him ſeven yeares; and Abner, who was of his kindred, was Captaine of his hoſt. The Hebrew word is, כל-חמודת which may bee rendred, all the deſire, or every deſirable thing, or beſt thing, and this laſt way it beſt agreeth, becauſe Saul was yet unknowne to all Iſrael, and it implyeth a good reaſon why hee ſhould take no greater care for the aſſes, becauſe all ſhould bee at his command, which was beſt in Iſrael.

V. 16.

Peter Martyr.

Chald. Paraphr.

Bortham.
Iunius.
Pellican.

Lyra.

Hugo Card.

Lyra.

V. 22. And Samuel tooke Saul and his ſervant, and brought them into the Parlour, and made them ſit in the chief place amongſt them that were bidden. The Vulg. Latine, for Parlour, hath triclinium; Lyra. which Lyra expoundeth of a room, that had three rankes of beds to ſit downe upon to eate meat, for of old they uſed to ſit upon beds of theſe rowes or rankes: the firſt was for the chiefe gueſts; the ſecond for the middle ſort; and the third for the meaneſt; now Saul and his ſervant was placed in the firſt, hee being herein honoured as the King that ſhould bee. V. 23, 24. Saul being thus placed, the Cooke is bidden to bring the portion of meat prepared for him; and being brought, Samuel biddeth him to eate thereof, ſaying, Vnto this time it hath been kept for thee, ſince I ſaid I have invited the people; here a queſtion ariſeth, how it is ſaid to have been kept or reſerved for him, ſeeing he came up with Samuel to the feaſt, before whoſe comming it was ſaid before, that they would not eate; if then he came at the beginning of the feaſt, how could it bee kept? Anſw. Some thinke that Samuel having begun to eate with his gueſts, when hee heard of Saul's comming, went out to meet him, and then returning againe and bringing him with him, hee ſpake thus; but this cannot bee, becauſe Samuel knew by revelation the certain time of Saul's comming to him; and therefore this feaſt being made for his entertainment, hee did doubtleſſe ſtay for his comming, before that hee went up to it, and all the relation before-going, ſheweth, that Saul came thither with Samuel at his firſt going up. R. Solomon. R. Solomon therefore reſolveth it beſt; the other gueſts had their parts ſet out by themſelves, but this part being the beſt, was ſet aſide from the reſt, after that the meat was prepared, being kept hot happily with more care, as being for a more honourable perſon, and ſo when the feaſt was ſerved in, the Cooke was bidden to bring that firſt, and ſet it before Saul, and then Samuel uſed theſe words to him.

For the next words, ſince I ſaid I have invited the people; Hebr. is, ſaying, I have invited, Junius. that is, as Iunius beſt hath it, ſaying to the Cooke, or when I ſpake unto him, and told him, that I had invited gueſts, that hee might prepare accordingly, I tooke order that this part ſhould bee kept for thee; the Vulg. Latine leaving out this word [ſaying] hath it, ſince I invited the people; the Gen. B. ſaying to Saul, I have alſo invited the people, that hereby hee might know, that Samuel knew of his comming before, by the preparation made, and the peoples comming together at that time upon Samuel's invitement.

V. 25. And when they were come downe from the High-place, Samuel communed with Saul upon the top of the houſe; that was ſecretly, as is conjectured, about the duty of a King, which was a thing not yet publiquely to bee ſpoken of in the hearing of others, and therefore the next morning the ſervant is ſent away before, that he might not heare, v. 27. and for this purpoſe the top of the houſe, there being a plaine place to walke upon, and a battlement, was the fitteſt for them two to be upon alone after ſupper, as the manner then was to goe up at ſuch times, and to walke there.

V. 26. And Samuel called Saul to the top of the houſe, the word may as well bee rendred on the top of the houſe, and ſo it agreeth beſt, for moſt probably Saul was lodged there all night, and ſo the Vulg. Latine hath it expreſſely, Saul lay upon the top of the houſe. V. 27. Being called up by Samuel, he accompanyeth him to the end of the City, bidding him to ſend his man away before, whilſt he told him the word of the Lord touching the kingdom. But why muſt this bee ſpoken ſo ſecretly? Peter Martyr. Peter Martyr ſaith, that Saul being afterwards choſen by lot, might know all this to have been done by the counſell of God, and ſo acknowledge his favour, and that he might know lots to be of Gods diſpoſing, conſidering what followed after this. But this is onely a reaſon of Samuel's ſpeaking to him now, and afterwards finding him out by lot, the reaſon of the ſecrecie was, that it not being known to the people before, what Samuel now did, he might proceed to the caſting of lots more kindly to find out, whom God would have to reigne, ſith lots are to find out that which was ſecret before.

CHAP. X.

V.1,2.
Exod. 30. 23.
Peter Martyr.

HEre Samuel firſt anointeth Saul, and then telleth him the ſignes that ſhould follow for his confirmation; with what oyle hee was anointed, whether with the holy oyle which was appoiuted for the anointing of Prieſts, or other oyle, is uncertaine. Peter Martyr ſaith, that David Kimbi affirmeth it not to have been of that holy oyle, becauſe none might be anointed therewith but the Prieſt onely, which hee ſaith is a weake reaſon, ſeeing God at his pleaſure could allow a further uſe thereof to anoint Kings. But of this enough before upon Exod. 30.23. For the reaſon why Kings were anointed, as alſo Prieſts before, it was to ſet forth the Spirit, wherewith they ſhould bee indued requiſite in men ſo highly dignified. At this day, ſaith Peter Martyr, there is ſome cacozelia in anointing Kings, for being typicall it was done away in Chriſt, they are anointed now, who are indued with the Spirit, although no ceremony of oyle bee uſed, as our Lord is ſaid to have been anointed with the oyle of gladneſſe, although wee never read of any oyle powred upon his head to anoint him to his office. But although the anointing of Prieſts ceaſeth, as typicall, yet the King being called the Lords anointed, as by a proper name, it ſeemeth alwayes to bee as neceſſary at his inauguration, as his Crowne. In that Samuel is ſaid here to have taken a viall of oyle, but when hee anointed David, an horne of oyle, ſome note the fragility of Sauls kingdome, and the durability of Davids ſet forth hereby, becauſe a vial is made of earth or of glaſſe, which is ſoon broken; and therefore Jehu, in whoſe family the kingdome continued but a while, was anointed with a viall of oyle alſo. And Samuel kiſſed him; 1 In token of love and good will. 2 Of ſubjection unto him, as the phraſe is uſed, Pſal. 2,12.

1 Sam. 16.
Pellican.

V.2.
Qu.
Gen. 35. 19.
R. Solomon.
Peter Martyr.
Lyra.

For the ſignes given; 1 When thou art gone from mee, thou ſhalt finde two men by Rachels ſepulchre in the border of Benjamin, at Zelzah, &c. Here a queſtion ariſeth, becanſe Rachel was buryed neare unto Bethlehem, which was in the tribe of Judah, how her ſepulchre could bee ſaid to bee in the borders of Benjamin? R. Solomon ſaith, that it was meant, the two men who ſhould tell him that the Aſſes were found, were at that time neare Rachels ſepulchre, but by that time he came to the borders of Benjamin, they ſhould meet him there: but this device, ſaith Peter Martyr, is needleſſe, becauſe although the place of Rachels ſepulchre was neare Bethlehem which was in Judah, yet it followeth not that it was in Judah, but in the borders of Benjamin extending neare unto Bethlehem. Lyra ſaith, that the borders of both tribes met here.

V. 3.
Schol. Hiſtor.
H. Bunt. Patriarchs travailes.
Lyra.
Schol. Hiſtor.
Hugo Cardin.
P. Martyr
Joſeph. Chald.
Septuag. Vatab.
Borrheus.
Iunius.

Then thou ſhalt come to the plaine of Tabor, and there ſhall meet thee three men going up to God to Bethel, one carrying three kids, another three loaves, and the third a bottle of wine, &c. For the plaine of Tabor, the Vulg. Latine hath, the oake of Tabor; and Comeſtor ſaith, that Tabor here is the name of a man, and not of any place. One ſaith, that the name of this place was Zilzahcabout, ſome two miles from the ſepulchre of Rachel, where hee met the two men. But what is meant by Bethel here? Anſw. It is moſt commonly taken for the Bethel, where Jacob anointed a pillar, Gen. 28. and they ſay, that till the Arke was fixedly placed in a certaine place, it was lawfull to ſacrifice whereſoever there was an Altar, and therefore the Altar of Jacob being at Bethel, they came thither to ſacrifice. But Junius will not have Bethel a proper name either here, or 1 Sam. 7. 16. the reaſon whereof ſee there; and therefore hee rendreth it in both places the houſe of God, expounding it of Kiriath-jearim, where the Arke was, and ſo the houſe, wherein was the houſe of God, becauſe they might not ſacrifice in any other place, but where the Arke was. But this remaineth to bee proved, till which time I ſubſcribe to the generall Tenet, and the words ſeem plainly to confirm it, for if the houſe of God had been meant elſwhere, it would have been ſaid, and might more aptly, to his houſe in Kiriath-jearim, becauſe it was ſaid before, to God. Moreover, Bethel was a place of note, as Gilgal and Mizpeh, 1 Sam. 16. there being happily in every of them an Altar in thoſe dayes, as well as in Ramah. The kids, loaves, and wine which they carryed, were doubtleſſe for ſacrifice, for meat-offerings and drink-offerings. But whereas it is ſaid, they gave Saul two loaves, a queſtion is made how they could thus doe, ſeeing they carryed them to God, and being for an offering to him, they were by no meanes to bee turned to another uſe. D. Kimhi ſaith, that they had more loaves for their owne uſe, then thoſe that they carryed to offer, and of them they gave Saul two, and not of the offerings: but Peter Martyr better, they meeting Saul hungry, and ready to periſh for want, thought it would bee more acceptable to God, to give him of their bread intended for ſacrifice, then to keep it for ſacrifice in this caſe of neceſſity, for God hath ſaid, I will have mercy and not ſacrifice. This is true indeed, if Saul were now in ſuch need of food, but how that ſhould be, I cannot ſee, forſomuch as hee had not yet travailed farre, ſince Samuel left him, viz. not above two miles and an halfe, and hee was alſo of a ſtrong and able body. There was then doubtleſſe ſome other thing in it, God inclined their hearts to give him theſe loaves, as it were a ſacrament to confirm him touching the kingdom, as Peter Martyr alſo ſpeaketh, God who had appointed him to bee King, would have them now meeting and ſaluting him, to offer him a preſent, as to a King; for ſo men uſe to preſent Kings with gifts where they come, and that of their moſt precious things, and ſuch were theſe loaves, ſeeing they were part of Gods offerings; and if God extraordinarily moved them by his Spirit to give them, who dares queſtion the lawfulneſſe of the fact?

Qu.
D. Kimhi.
Peter Martyr.

V. 5.
Chald. Pellican.
Borrhaus.
R. Solomon.
1 Sam.7.1.
Lyra.
Hugo Card.
Iunius.
Joſephus.
Rabanus.
Lyra.
Schol. Hiſt.
Peter Martyr.
Borrhaus.
P. Martyr.

After this, thou ſhalt come to the hill of God, where is a garriſon of the Philiſtims, &c. This hill of God is underſtood by ſome to bee Kiriath-jearim, where the Arke was in Abinadabs houſe upon the hill. But others will have another place meant, where was a Colledge of Prophets, and this ſaith Iunius, was in Gibeah, and Chap. 13. 3. agreeth, where Ioanthan is ſaid to have ſmitten the garriſon of the Philiſtims in Geba; and Ioſephus, for the hill of God, hath, the towne of Gabbatha. Rabanus ſaith, it was ſome hill, where God had beſtowed ſome great benefit, being therefore called Gods hill. Toſtatus is for Gibeah in Benjamin, becauſe it was in the end of Sauls journey, and where hee was known. That it was not the hill in Kiriath-jearim is plain, becauſe the Arke being brought out of the Philiſtims Countrey, ſhould not have been placed ſo neare their forces; and Gibeah, or Geba more probably was the place; and to make it the more evident, Hebr. it is אל גבעת האלוהים to Gibeah of God. But how could the Prophets bee ſafe, where a garriſon of the Philiſtims was? Iunius anſwereth, religious perſons were priviledged even amongſt their enemies: ſome thinke that a gariſon of the Philiſtims had been there in times paſt, but not now: but that they were there now appeareth, Chap. 13. 3. Whereas it is ſaid, Chap. 7. that the people of Iſrael tooke from the Philiſtims all their Cities which they formerly poſſeſſed: It is anſwered, that they had ſtill ſome ſtrong holds in their Land, where they kept garriſons, but herewith they onely defended their owne, but invaded not them all the dayes of Samuel, at the leaſt not to prevaile, ſo Peter Martyr; or elſe, as hee ſaith, when the ſons of Samuel did wickedly, God ſtirred up the Philiſtims for a puniſhment, to make new incurſions into the land. And thou ſhalt meet a company of prophets comming down from the High-place with a pſaltery, a tabret and a pipe before them, &c. Theſe Prophets are thought by ſome to have bin levites, who were firſt trained up here in the knowledge of the Law, till they came to ſerve in the Tabernacle. But this is a meer conjecture without all ground; for they might be a company as wel of other tribes, as of Levi, was brought up in holy ſtudies under men indued with the ſpirit of propheſie, whoſe exerciſe was daily to praiſe God, which is called propheſying, and out of theſe God choſe ſome, and indued them with the ſpirit of propheſie to foretell judgements to come, and to rebuke ſin in all eſtates and degrees, and to call to repentance. Of ſuch a Colledge of Prophets, ſee again, 2 King. 2. 2. in Bethel; and 2 King. 5. in Jericho. The inſtruments of muſick here ſaid to goe before them, were uſed in praiſing God, and to make their mindes the more chearefull herein, and the Spirit of God the more ready to enter into them; who as the Rabbins note hence, is delighted with a chearefull ſpirit, but diſliketh the ſad and heavie, for which cauſe Eliſha called for muſick when hee would propheſie, that his troubled and exaſperated mind, being lenified, hee might bee the more chearefull, and then the Spirit came upon him.

2 King. 3.

V. 6. And the Spirit of the Lord ſhall come upon thee; and thou ſhalt propheſie with them; that is, partly by praiſing God, and partly by fore-telling through the Spirit things to come, as Eldad and Medad propheſied in the Campe. The Rabbins, as it is in the Booke de Hebr. Qu. ſay, that Saul propheſied of warres to come, and of Gog and Magog, of the rewards of the godly, and the puniſhments of the wicked; but this ſoundeth as an invention of their owne. And thou ſhalt bee changed into another man, that is, ſaith Peter Martyr, not by tranſubſtantiation: but, firſt, by becomming ſuddenly a Prophet, to which he had not been trained up, as Pellican: Secondly, by having his minde taken off his cattell, amongſt which hee had been brought up, to meditate upon things belonging to a kingdome, as Borrhæus; yet here was no inward change by grace and ſanctification. Aug. l. 2. ad Simplic. qu. 1. ſaith, that Saul propheſied, as Balaams aſſe ſpake, that is, for the preſent, becauſe God would have it ſo, but this gift ſoone left him againe.

Numb. 11. 26.
Lib. de Hebr. Quæſt.
Pellican.
Borrhæus.

V. 7. When theſe things come to paſſe, ſee thou do as occaſion ſerveth, for God is with thee; that is, ſaith Lyra, know aſſuredly that God hath choſen thee to bee King, and will bleſſe and proſper thee in thy proceedings, and therefore ſee that thou adminiſter the kingdome courageouſly and wiſely when thou art come unto it. Thus God would have Saul confirmed touching this new calling by ſignes, as Gedeon had been before touching his office of a Judge. And this was neceſſary for any extraordinary calling, as the Apoſtles and firſt imbracers of the faith of Jeſus had many miracles for their confirmation, but now the like cannot be expected or deſired without tempting of God. By theſe words, doe as occaſion ſerveth, ſaith Peter Martyr, Saul was not permitted to doe whatſoever he pleaſed; but knowing now that it was Gods will that he ſhould doe as a King, confidently gather ſouldiers together, and goe forth to fight againſt the enemy, nothing doubting of Gods help, and ſo of good ſucceſſe herein.

Peter Martyr.

V. 8. And thou ſhalt goe downe to Gilgal, and I will come to thee to offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, ſeven dayes ſhalt thou tarry till I come to thee, &c. In the book of Hebr. Quæſt. it is otherwiſe pointed, thus, That thou maiſt offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings ſeven dayes, and this, ſaith Hugo, is expounded by the Gloſſe thus, for thy inauguration to the Kingdom, as the Prieſts being conſecrated there were offerings made ſeven dayes, Exod. 26. Levit. 8. But as Lyra well noteth, it is otherwiſe pointed in the Hebrew, as in our tranſlation, and wee doe no where read of any ſuch ordinance of ſacrificing ſeven dayes at the inauguration of a King; and it is not, that thou mayſt offer, but to offer, for Samuel meant to offer for the Kings good ſucceſſe now at the beginning of his raigne, and that hee might attempt no great matter without the adviſe of the Prophet, leſt he ſhould erre, he would come unto him. But from what time are theſe ſeven dayes to be reckoned? The Rabbins ſay, not from the time of Sauls departing from Samuel, for before his coming to Gilgal, he was choſen King in Mizpeh by lot, then he had an expedition againſt the Ammonites, and after this hee came to Gilgal, and was made King, and ſtayed for Samuel, till the ſeventh day, Chap. 13. 8. as Samuel had appointed; ſo likewiſe Junius, who ſaith, that theſe words, doe as occaſion is offred, are to bee underſtood of his fighting againſt the Ammonites, after which hee ſhould come to Gilgal, and bee made King there, and then ſtay ſeven dayes after that, about gathering together an Army, and making preparation to goe againſt the Philiſtims, for by that time hee would come againe unto him thither to ſacrifice for his proſperity. Lyra reciteth another expoſition of Andreas upon this, that when Samuel ſet Saul ſeven dayes, during which time hee ſhould tarry for him, his meaning was, that if any difficult caſe happened, ſo that hee ſhould need Samuels preſence to direct and to pray for him, then hee ſhould goe up to Gilgal, a place fit

Hieron. de Hebr. Quæſt.
Hugo Cardin.
Lyra.
1 Sam. 10. 17.
Ch. 11.
Junius.
Lyra.

for aſſemblies and ſacrifices, and ſend for Samuel; after which hee would come to him within ſeven dayes. But hee excepteth againſt this, becauſe Samuel ſeemeth to ſpeake of a determinate time wherein hee ſhould goe to Gilgal, viz. after his election, and there tarry for him ſeven dayes. But ſeeing here is nothing ſpoken of Saul's election, and that immediately after hee went againſt the Ammonites, and after that to Gilgal, and yet not before Samuel, but with him, as did all the people, to renew the Kingdome there; I cannot ſubſcribe to Lyra; neither can I aſſent to Junius, and the Rabbins, becauſe if hee had meant his going to Gilgal to bee made King, and after this his tarrying for him ſeven dayes there, Samuel ſhould not then have gone thither with him, as hee did; and it had been time enough then at his departure from him, to bid him tarry ſeven dayes till hee returned againe. I rather hold ſomewhat neare to that of Andreas, that Samuel having directed Saul for his firſt notable expedition againſt the Ammonites, v. 7. here propheſieth of a time after that, and after his inauguration to the kingdome, when he ſhould have ſpeciall need of his preſence againe; for hee ſhould gather ſouldiers together to Gilgal againſt the Philiſtims, who ſhould bee affrighted at the multitude and power of them, and ſo flee from him, whereupon hee ſhould ſend for Samuel, but after this hee required him to tarry for him ſeven dayes, leſt happily hee ſhould at that time have other neceſſary employment to hinder him from comming ſooner. And here I miſlike not that of the Rabbins, who ſay, that this was a condition put, whereupon, if it were kept, Saul's kingdome ſhould bee eſtabliſhed, otherwiſe it ſhould not continue. And I will ſhew thee what thou ſhalt do, that is, I will inſtruct thee more touching the office of a King.

V. 9. Hugo Card.

Saul going from Samuel, had immediately another heart given him, and all the ſignes were fulfilled that day: Another heart, ſaith Hugo, hee had, becauſe his heart was now ſet upon higher things, and hee was more courageous. Hee had not another heart, as hee that hath his heart of ſtone taken away, and hath an heart of fleſh given him, wherein Gods laws are written; for hee ſhould finally have acquitted himſelf better then hee did, and the kingdom ſhould have continued to him and his poſterity.

V. 10. Peter Martyr.

In reckoning up the fulfilling of the ſignes, onely one is mentioned in particular, viz. when they were come to the hill, they met a company of Prophets, &c. which is done, ſaith Peter Martyr, becauſe hereby it appeared, how hee was turned into another man, as Samuel had chiefly foretold, which was of them all moſt wonderfull, as appeareth by the admiration, that the people where hereupon ſtricken into, v. 11. they wondred and ſaid, Is Saul alſo among the Prophets? but one of that place anſwered and ſaid, but who is their father? This is expounded by ſome, ſaith Peter Martyr, thus, doe yee ſay, Is Saul amongſt the Prophets? nay, who is their father? may not Saul bee counted ſo for his learned and wiſe propheſying? But hee rather approveth of another, who is the father of the Prophets, that inſpireth and guideth them in propheſying? is it not the Spirit? and why may he not then, if hee pleaſeth, inſpire Saul alſo? or, who is their father? what father have they more then Saul, the comming of whom availeth for the gift of propheſying? verily none, for this gift is not derived from the father to the ſonne, but is given as God pleaſeth, and therefore may as well bee given to Saul, as to any other man. Lyra reciting the laſt way of expounding it, ſaying, thus R. Solomon expounds it, yet becauſe in the Vulg. Latin it is, who is his father, he ſaith, it is meant, who is his father, that he propheſieth? for he is none of the Prophets ſons; as Amos ſaith, I was not a Prophet, nor the ſonne of a Prophet. Now this, although it bee upon a tranſlation not exactly according to the Hebrew, where it is not, who is his father, but, who is their father, yet it commeth neareſt to the true meaning, as wee may gather upon the words following, Therefore it became a proverbe, Is Saul alſo amongſt the Prophets? which was uſed, when any was extraordinarily indued with the ſpirit of propheſie, and that by way of admiration, and this is inferred upon theſe words, who is their father, which ſhould not have been, if the meaning were, who was the father of the Prophets, it is not by reaſon

V. 11. V. 12. P. Martyr. Lyra. Amos 7.

of the father of whom he is deſcended, that hee is a Prophet, but by Gods gift, for thus it was no matter of admiration to ſay, Is Saul alſo amongſt the Prophets?
ſeeing God at his pleaſure might give him the gift, as well as to them.
But when it was admired that the ſonne of Kiſh was amongſt the Prophets;
and ſome ſpake further, But who is their father? the admiration is increaſed, ſeeing neither hee, nor his father came of ſuch a pedegree as ever yeelded a Prophet; for the Prophets were all hitherto moſt probably of the Tribe of Levi, and if of any other Tribe, of ſuch as were educated under ſome old Prophet as a father, as Elijah is called by Eliſha. 2 Kings 2.12.

And when hee had made an end of propheſying, hee came to the high place. V. 13.
And Saul's Uncle ſaid unto him, &c. This high place, was a place in Gibeah, wherein they uſed to offer ſacrifice in thoſe dayes before the ſetling of the Arke any where, and the Tabernacle, which were yet disjoyned, for ſo the hil of God hath been expounded, v. 5. Gibeah of God, where this high place was. And to the high place here, ſaith Peter Martyr, Saul moſt probably went to pray, and Peter Martyr.
there hee met with his Uncle. Or having done his devotion there, and being returned home, the relation of which is omitted for brevities ſake, hee had this communication with his Uncle. If it bee underſtood, that hee met his Uncle at the high place, it is to bee thought that hee alſo dwelling neare, came thither at the ſame time to worſhip: this Uncle moſt probably was Ner, the father of Abner. Whereas it is ſaid, when his Uncle asked him, what Samuel V. 14, 15.
ſaid unto him, hee told him, that he ſaid, the Aſſes were found, but hee told him nothing of the kingdome; this, ſaith Joſephus, hee wiſely concealed, leſt Joſephus.
his Uncle beleeving it ſhould envy him, or not beleeving it ſhould taxe him as ambitious and vain-glorious. Unto which Lyra addeth, that hee was anointed Lyra.
in ſecret, and therefore till Samuel publiſht it, hee ought to keepe it ſecret.

And Samuel called the people together to the Lord to Mizpeh, &c. Some time after V. 17.
Sauls anointing to bee King, but how long is uncertaine, Samuel called this Aſſembly, and then upbraided them by their ingratitude in that God having V. 18, 19.
delivered them out of Egypt and from the hands of all their enemies, yet now they rejected him and required to have a King ſet over them: Of which their rejecting of God, ſee before Ch. 8. 7. But how is hee ſaid to aſſemble them to the Lord in Mizpeh? It is likely, that the Lord had directed him to call them to that place, as being before uſed for ſuch aſſemblies, Judg. 20. 1.
1 Sam. 7. 6. where ſee, how they are ſaid to aſſemble before the Lord there, yet, as Junius noteth, it is likely, that Samuel cauſed the Arke to bee brought hither Junius.
at this time, and the Prieſt with the Ephod to conſult with the Lord about this election of a King, as v. 22. they are ſaid to have inquired of the Lord.

This being done Samuel cauſed them to come before the Lord, Tribe by Tribe, V. 20.
and the Tribe of Benjamin was taken; & then family by family of that tribe, and the family of Matri was taken, and Saul the ſonne of Kiſh of that family. A queſtion is commonly made here, how or by what meanes Samuel found out Qu.
him, whom the Lord had choſen. But in the Vulg. Latin the words of the Text put it out of queſtion, for there it is, the lot fel upon Benjamin, &c. ſo that it was by caſting lots, as Joſhua had found out Achan before, and ſo Joſephus ſaith plainly, Ioſh. 7.
the Tribe of Benjamin was taken by lot, and then the names of the families being Joſephus. Antiq. lib 6. cap. 5.
put into a pot, the family of Matri was firſt drawne, and laſtly every mans name of that family being put in, Saul was drawne. And hereunto agreeth R. Solomon ſaying, that the High-Prieſt drew them, but D. Kimbi ſaith, it was done by the R. Solomon.
Urim and Thummim, the pretious ſtone which was for Benjamin, ſhining extraordinary D. Kimbi.
brightly. But this could not be, becauſe although the Tribe might thus be noted, yet the family and perſon could not; and although no mention bee here made of lots, yet, as Peter Martyr noteth, both the word לכד taken here uſed Peter Martyr.
implyeth it, and the common cuſtome maketh it moſt probable, for to finde out Jonathan and Ionas lots were caſt, and for Matthias, and in dividing the land of Canaan. Touching Matri, Lyra ſaith, it ſignifieth a marke, and is no one mans

mans name, for 1 Chron. 8.30. this name is not found, wherefore hee concludeth, that the family of Matri was of thoſe, that could ſhoot at a marke ſo exactly, Iudg. 20.16.

V.21,22. Peter Martyr. 1 Sam. 23 9. Joſephus. Peter Martyr. Luke. 14.11

When Saul was taken, hee was ſought for, but would not be found, then inquiry being made of the Lord, hee anſwered, that hee had hid himſelfe in the ſtuffe. They inquired by the Ephod which was brought thither by the High-Prieſt at this time, although, as Peter Martyr ſaith, the Arke remained at Kiriath-jearim, as afterwards David bade Abiathar, bring hither the Ephod, that he might thereby conſult with the Lord, when the Arke was not there. Saul hid himſelfe, becauſe he knew before, that hee ſhould bee taken, and that out of humility, that hee might ſeeme to bee farre from ambitiouſly ſeeking the Kingdome; and this, ſaith Ioſephus, was in him a point of modeſty: others thinke that hee ſinned in ſo doing, but Peter Martyr juſtifyeth him herein, for he that humbleth himſelfe ſhall bee exalted, and hee was afterwards praiſed for his humility by Samuel: neither did hee ſo flee the Kingdome to which hee was appointed, but that being brought forth hee preſently tooke it upon him, and ſubmitted to the will of God. The like humility was in Auguſtine, who would not come at thoſe Churches, that wanted Biſhops, leſt they ſhould chooſe him, and Gregory fled away to decline being made Biſhop of Rome. Maximianus and Diocleſianus gave over the Empire to live privately, and ſo did Sylla the Dictatourſhip. They that ſo readily take any high dignity upon them and ſeeke it rather then decline it, reſpect not the labour and burthen thereof, but the honour, and riches, which worke with their ambitious and covetous mindes.

V.23.

Saul being brought forth and ſtanding amongſt the people was higher then any of them from the ſhoulders upward: and this was all, that yet hee was commended by, and no marvaile, becauſe the people are moſt taken with the ſtature and ſtrength of their King, and according to humane reaſon ſuch a man was moſt fit to deliver them from their enemies hands: yet little David who was indued with the vertue of the minde, did farre excell him even in military proweſs and valiant acts, to ſhew, that power and prevailing in the day of battaile cometh of God, and not of humane ſtrength.

V.25. Lyra Pellican. Junius.

Then Samuel told the people the manner of the Kingdome, and wrote it in a booke and laid it up before the Lord. This booke did not containe, as Ioſephus thinketh, predictions of thoſe things that ſhould fall out under Sauls government, for this had beene enough to alienate the hearts of the people from him, but rather, as Lyra, Pellican and others ſay, how the people ſhould carry themſelves towards their King, and the King towards the people, according to that of Moſes, Deut. 17. and this Book was laid up in the Arke, but now is loſt, as alſo divers others, which were written by holy men of old, yet they were no part of the Canonicall Scriptures, ſo as that for want of them theſe ſhould now be counted unperfect. Some, ſaith Peter Martyr, thinke, that there was a Chappel in Mizpeh, to which the people uſed to aſſemble, and that there this Booke was laid up.

V.26. V.27. P.Martyr.

After this every man went home, and Saul went to Gibeah, and with him a band of men, whoſe hearts the Lord had touched: but the ſonnes of Belial ſaid, How ſhall this man ſave us, &c. Saul being thus choſen King, ſaith Peter Martyr, did not yet take it upon him, but lived ſtill privately, becauſe the wicked people, although they had deſired a King, and ſaw plainly this man to bee choſen of God, yet for the meanneſſe of his tribe and pedegree they now deſpiſed him, making a mocke of his ſaving them from their enemies hands. To this hee wiſely did forbeare to ſpeake, waiting for an opportunity to declare himſelfe a King, that could ſave them by deeds rather, then by words. But God now touched the hearts of ſome ſo, as that they clave unto him, who were alſo men of warre; if God had not moved their hearts, they had ſinned as much as the reſt by murmuring even when the thing which they ſo greatly deſired, was granted unto them, as the people formerly did about the matter of Manna, which they deſired, but being given them loathed it, and likewiſe the Note.

Meſſiah himſelfe, whereby wee may ſee the vileneſſe of our nature, and what need we have dayly to pray with David, Lord incline my heart unto thy Law. Pſalm 109.

CHAP. XI.

BEcauſe Saul was deſpiſed by many wicked men, here an opportunity is offered to confirme that by deeds, to which he was choſen by lot: for Nabaſh the Ammonite came to fight againſt Jabeſh Gilead; the men of that place being unable to reſiſt him deſire reſpit for ſeven dayes, in which time they ſend to Gibeah, and ſo Saul is ſtirred up to come for their ſuccour, & deſtroyeth the Ammonites, and then was magnifyed amongſt all the people. In the Vulgar Latin it is ſaid, within one moneth Nabaſh came, ſo likewiſe Joſephus, out of whom it ſeemeth to have crept into the Vulgar Latin; Joſephus. Willet. Willet excepteth againſt this time, ſaying this was done within the ſeven dayes ſet before by Samuel to Saul, and before his election, for the people being terrifyed with the comming of the Ammonites deſired a King. But there is no reaſon of making this computation of the time, as will appear, if wee looke backe to the place, where the ſeven dayes are ſet. And to place this expedition before the election is to croſſe both the order of the hiſtory here and the ſequele of the election. For if hee did this valiant act before his election, why did many deſpiſe him, as unable to ſave them? It might then be happily a moneth after, but the Scripture ſaying nothing hereof it is to bee left as uncertaine. But it ſeemeth by that 1 Sam. 12.12. that the comming of Nabaſh was the cauſe of their asking a King: and if ſo, hee was elected after his expedition againſt him. Sol: they heard of his intention and preparation, betwixt which and his beſieging of Iabeſh might paſſe many dayes, in which all was done, till after his being elected and hearing of Iabeſh when hee prepared to goe to the reſcue thereof, ſee more *Ch.*12.12.

V. 1. Iabeſh Gilead, againſt which the Ammonites came to fight was in the land, that was ſometime Sihons, but taken by Moſes, and given to Reuben, Gad and halfe Manaſſeh, for they held the land of Gilead. The cauſe of this warre may be gathered, Judg. 11. where the Ammonites challenged this land to be theirs, but they were then deſtroyed by Iephthah, now it ſeemeth, that being growne ſtrong againe they gathered a new Army upon the ſame quarrell, and becauſe the City Iabeſh Gilead had beene not long ſince diſpeopled, when all the men thereof were ſlaine by all the Tribes, Judg. 21. they ſet upon this, as the weakeſt and for their old fault in not helping Iſrael againſt Benjamin moſt unlikely to have helpe ſent to reſcue it. And this moſt probably was the cauſe, why being beſieged now they ſent particularly to Gibeah of Benjamin, becauſe by that City all the other Tribes had beene greatly provoked and ſhewed their wrath before; and they were the rather moved, becauſe here dwelt the man, that was choſen for King. But the men of Jabeſh firſt commit a foule fault, as Peter Martyr noteth, in that they yeeld at Nabaſh his firſt comming to be his ſervants, if hee would make a covenant with them. Peter Martyr. For God had forbidden them to make any Covenant with the Ammonites, and the Ammonite to enter into the congregation, therefore much leſſe to bee received as Lord over them. Deut. 23. 3.

V. 2. Nabaſh being puft up through their timerouſneſſe refuſeth to receive them for his ſervants, unleſſe hee might put out every mans right eye amongſt them to the ignominy of Iſrael. Their right eyes, ſaith Lyra, he would put out to make them unfit for ſervice of warre, Lyra. becauſe with the right eye a man aimeth at the marke which hee ſhooteth at winking with the left, and fighting with the ſword they ſhadowed the left eye with a ſhield. Some Rabbini ſay, that by putting out the right eye they meant the raſing out of the Law againſt the Ammonites Deut. 23. but this is abſurd. The true reaſon is, the Ammonites hated the Hebrewes, and therefore they were bent to exerciſe this cruelty againſt them.

V. 3. P.Martyr. The Elders of Jabeſh deſired 7. dayes reſpite, within which time, if they could procure no helpe to come and raiſe the ſiege, they would yeeld themſelves to his mercy. Herein, ſaith Peter Martyr, they did wickedly, for men ought not to preſcribe a time unto God, but to waite his leaſure, who hath not one, but divers wayes to helpe thoſe that truſt in him. But yet that the King newly appointed by God might have the more honour, the Lord paſſing over their errors brought helpe unto them, as they expected, within that time, and confounded the Ammonites. Joſephus. Nabaſh although cruelly bent againſt Jabeſh, yet he granteth their requeſt for the time, hoping, as Joſephus ſaith, that becauſe there was diviſion in their State about the new elected King, ſome being for him and ſome againſt him, no helpe would come unto them. But there was doubtleſſe a ſingular providence of God, that over-ruled herein for the confirmation of Saul in the kingdome.

V.4. V.5. Then came the meſſengers to Gibeah, and when the people heard theſe tidings they wept. But Saul came after the herd out of the field, and ſaid, What aileth the people to weepe, &c. Here is ſhewed how that, when all others were afraid, and puſillanimous like women, Saul onely was courageous, as the high dignity, to which he was choſen, required, and in ſtead of being fearefull and weeping, hee is full of wrath, which, as Ariſtotle ſaith, is the whetſtone of valour, and meditateth upon revenge againſt the inſolent Ammonites. And hereby it appeareth againe, how wonderfully hee was changed after his anointing to bee King, although he was not yet generally accepted of. Qu. But how is hee ſaid to come after the herd out of the field? did hee ſtill imploy himſelfe about ſo baſe a worke, as to keepe an herd, when as hee had beene publikely declared King, and had a band of men following him? Lyra. Lyra ſaith, that hee followed not the herd, becauſe hee ſtill did as an herdſman, but having beene abroad in the field to exerciſe himſelfe in ſhooting or otherwiſe, hee returned now after that the herdſmen had brought home their cattle. R.Solomon. D.Kimhi. Peter Martyr. The Sept. have it μετὰ τὸ πρωΐ, after the morning, becauſe the word בקר ſignifieth the morning as well as an herd, and R. Solomon ſtandeth for the time, but D. Kimhi ſaith that hee came home with other husbandmen. Peter Martyr ſaith, there is no need of any of theſe ſhifts, for Saul having not yet taken upon him the adminiſtration of the Kingdome, hee did nothing abſurd or miſbecoming him to follow his husbandry ſtill: for from the herd and from the plough have come many valiant Commanders and Emperours amongſt the Romans. Plin. Terra gaudebat tractari & coli ab Imperatoribus, & magni erant proventus illorum temporum, quia eadem manu terra tractabatur qua arma. Whereupon Pliny ſaith, the earth delighted to bee tilled and handled by Emperours, and great was the increaſe then, when with the ſame hand the earth was handled and armes. Therefore many famous families have ſprung from ſuch, witneſſe the Piſones, Fabii, Portii, Cicerones, Lentuli, from Peaſon, Beanes, Hogges, Parſneps, and Lintels. And to this of Martyr doe I ſubſcribe, becauſe although the words be neare, that ſignifie morning, and an herd, yet there is ſome difference, Bokar is the morning and Bakar an herd, which is the word here uſed; and becauſe it is after the herd, it is plaine that hee kept and drove home his herd, as other husbandmen did, and ſo did David keepe ſheepe a while ſtill, after that he was anointed King. Thus alſo Toſtatus.

V. 6. And the Spirit of God came upon Saul, and his anger was greatly kindled &c. The Chaldee for more expreſſion hath, the Spirit of fortitude came upon him, for it was not the Spirit of grace and ſanctification, but that, whereby he was ſtirred up to goe to this warre and to deliver the men of Jabeſh. V.7. Then hee tooke two of his oxen and cut them in pieces, and ſent them into all parts, and threatned thus to ſerve all mens oxen, that came not up after him and Samuel: for Samuel, as appeareth v. 12. was with him in this expedition, and he uſeth his name as well as his owne, becauſe hee was anointed King by him, and hee had ſhewed the people their duty towards Saul their King, and his authority over them, ſo that although they would not bee moved by hearing of Sauls name, becauſe many yet contemned him, yet they would be moved at Samuels ſo generally knowne to be the Lords Prophet, and having beene Judge ſo many yeares, and continuing in his office of judging ſtill, for hee judged Iſrael all 1 Sam. 7.17.

all the dayes of his life. Saul did not onely ſend a meſſage to ſummon the people, but ſent oxen hewed to pieces, that by a thing really done they might be the more moved, as the Levite did by his concubine. The people ſeeing Iudg. 19.
and hearing this, feared, and came out with one conſent; but it is ſaid, the feare of the Lord fell upon them, to note, that God wrought this feare in them, to make them obey his anointed, as before it was ſaid, a band of men followed Saul, whoſe hearts God had touched; for otherwiſe many would now have contemned his threatenings, as before they contemned his perſon. And the number ſaid to come to him, was of 300000 men of Iſrael, and 30000 of Ju- V. 8.
dah. The men of Judah are mentioned apart, ſaith Peter Martyr, becauſe this Peter Martyr.
was alwayes counted the principall Tribe, and was appointed firſt to goe a- Iudg. 1. gainſt the enemy. But here is a leſſe number of them then of one of the other Tribes, the reaſon whereof might bee, ſaith Junius, becauſe their borders lay Iunius.
upon the Philiſtims countrey, ſo that many of them were continually employed in looking to them. And becauſe Judah was the chiefe and moſt potent tribe, it is ſet downe as a thing remarkable by it ſelfe, in that the men of Judah diſdained not to follow Saul of Benjamin, which was now the leaſt tribe. Of Bezek, where they met, ſee Judg. 1. 4.

This great army being aſſembled together, the meſſengers of Jabeſh are ſent V. 9.
back to tel them that they ſhould have help the next day. Then they being glad, V. 10.
told Nahaſh, to morrow wee will come unto you, and then yee ſhall doe unto us what ſeemeth good unto you: And Saul, as hee promiſed, came the next V. 11. morning upon the Ammonites in the morning-watch, dividing his hoſt into three companies, and ſmote them ſo, as that two of them were not left together. Touching the place Bezek, from whence they marched, one ſaith, it was a City 16 miles from Jabeſh, and from Gibeah, from whence Saul came to H. Bunting Pa- this place for the people to gather to him, 40 miles. For the ſpeech of the triar. travailes.
men of Jabeſh to the Ammonites, they diſſembled the helpe promiſed, as if they had ſent about, but could get none, and therefore would the next day yeeld themſelves to their mercy; that the Ammonites being hereby made the more ſecure, might bee the more eaſily oppreſſed by Saul comming upon them; and this diſſimulation they might lawfully uſe to an enemy, that ſought their lives; Pellican.
thus Pellican, Oſiander, and Borrhaeus: But Junius ſaith, it is not neceſſary to Oſiander.
lay this upon them, they onely promiſed to come forth next day according to Junius.
covenant, concealing this, if helpe came not in the meane ſeaſon, which is the beſt: but yet it is not ill to uſe deceit againſt thoſe whom wee may kill, ſo that covenants bee not broken. For Sauls dividing of his Army into three companies, hee did herein as Gedeon had done before, that beſetting the enemies on Iudg. 7. 19.
every ſide, he might ſtrike the greater terrour into them, and for this cauſe he came alſo upon them in the morning watch, that is, about the break of the day,
For the Hebrews divided the night into four parts or watches: 1 The evening. Junius.
2 Midnight. 3 The Cock-crowing. 4 The laſt houres of the night, which ended at the breake of the day. For the journey taken by Saul and his company from Bezek to Jabeſh, Joſephus ſaith, it was 10 meaſures of ground, eve- Joſephus.
ry meaſure being 60 furlongs, and 8 furlongs a mile, together 75 miles. But ſeeing this could not bee in ſo ſhort a time, this cannot bee received; it might more probably be, as was noted before, 16 miles. And this commendeth Sauls great diligence, in that being ſo farre off, hee came yet much ſooner then hee had promiſed, and when the Sunne waxed hot, made an end of his victory by what time hee had onely promiſed to bee there. Whether Nahaſh were ſlaine in this battaile, or no, is not ſaid, but Joſephus ſaith, hee was ſlaine amongſt others; but againſt this maketh 2 Sam. 10. 1, 2. where it ſeemeth, that hee lived to ſhew kindneſſe to David, out of an hatred of Saul, as is moſt probable, for this great overthrow. In this victory appeared the great mercy of God, contrary to the peoples deſert, for they had rejected him, and would needs have a King; yet forſomuch as one was now appointed by himſelfe, he aſſiſted him, and gave him this great victory to confirme his owne election.
The men of Jabeſh being thus delivered, did not forget it, but when Saul was afterwards

1 Sam 31.11.

afterwards ſlaine, they ſhewed all the kindneſſe that they could to him and his in fetching their corpſes to their City, and burying them.

V.12.

Pellican.

Lyra.

Qu.

Rom. 13.

This great victory being gotten by Saul, the people recounting how ſome had before deſpiſed him, would have them put now to death, but Saul would have no man to dye therefore, becauſe God had wrought ſalvation for Iſrael that day; and to have put theſe, that were men of Iſrael, to death then, would greatly have obſcured the glory of that deliverance; ſo Pellican. Hee would have no man then to dye, ſaith Lyra, becauſe he would take no private revenge, but ſhew clemency in the beginning of his reigne, then which nothing, ſaith Seneca, doth more become a Prince; and having received ſo great a mercy, it was fit rather to goe to thankſgiving, then to execution. But afterwards his clemency was turned into cruelty, for hee would have put Jonathan to death, by whom a great deliverance was wrought for Iſrael, and David, and the Prieſts of God. Ben Gerſon ſaith, that hee onely reſpited the executing of thoſe wicked men; but ſeeing wee no where read, that hee put them to death at any other time, it is more probable that hee forgave them. If it bee demanded, whether the King may pardon ſuch, as ought for their offences do die? I anſwer, forſomuch as humane laws receive their life from the King, he may pardon offences againſt them; and for ſuch lawes of God, as whereby a ſinne is forbidden, but no mulct propounded, hee may pardon the breach of them alſo. But the breach of ſuch lawes of God, as whereof the puniſhment is expreſly ſet downe, hee may not pardon, for hee beareth the ſword as Gods miniſter, for the puniſhment of thoſe that doe evill. Hee may upon due conſideration reſpit the puniſhment, as if it bee dangerous to the Common-wealth to doe execution preſently, as David for this let Joab goe unpuniſht, but finally he took order that his blood ſhould bee ſhed for his murther. But through partiality or connivence to ſpare malefactors, as David did Ammon, ſinning by inceſt; and Abſalom by murther, is no way tolerable, and therefore God provided that none of them both ſhould eſcape unpuniſhed.

V. 14.

1 Sam. 7.16

Iunius, Borrhæus, Hieronym. Joſephus.

Peter Martyr.

Then Samuel, and all the people being moved by him, went to Gilgal, and there Saul was made King before the Lord; and peace-offerings were offered. Gilgal was famous for the circumciſion there renewed, Joſh. 5. and the firſt encamping of the people there, after that they were come over Jordan; and it was one of the three places to which Samuel went yearely to Judge the people. And here they made him King before the Lord, becauſe it ſeemeth here was an Altar upon which they ſacrificed, and before the Altar, when an aſſembly is met together for ſacrifice, is before the Lord, to whom this Altar is ſet up. Yet ſome thinke, that the Arke was now brought hither, as before to Mizpeh. How hee was made King here, Joſephus ſaith, it was by anointing with the holy oyle; but Willet impugneth this, becauſe Samuel ſurely would not anoint him twice, yet hee ſaith not how hee was made King otherwiſe. Wherefore Peter Martyr better, it is not unlikely but that hee was now anointed, becauſe his former anointing was privately, and hee was never yet publikely anointed; and to expreſſe this, hee ſaith, that the Latine tranſlation had it, They anointed him; and happily hee was there crowned; howſoever hee was now received for their King by a generall conſent, whereas they were before divided.

CHAP. XII.

V. 1.

HEre Samuel expoſtulateth with the people about their rejecting of him, and deſiring to have a King; wherein hee ſaith, hee had yeelded unto them, and they now rejoyced in him, as by whom they had gotten a great victory, ſo that all ſenſe of their ſinne was now paſt. Wherefore, as was needfull, hee taketh this opportunity of having them together, to ſummon them to repentance: 1 By ſhewing, that hee had given them no cauſe to bee weary of the government of Judges, for which they ſhould deſire a King. 2 By recounting Gods gracious dealing towards them ever ſince the time that they were in Egypt; for if they were at any time oppreſſed by their enemies for their ſins, & cryed unto the Lord, he delivered them by Judges even to his time. 3 By denouncing as great judgements againſt them and their King, as they had formerly ſuffered, if they did evill; ſo that the having of a King ſhould no more priviledge them from ſufferings, by their enemies then living under Judges, contrary to their fooliſh ſurmiſe, who thought now that they had a King, they ſhould bee ſafe, whatſoever they did. 4 By calling for raine and thunder to terrifie them, God ſhewing hereby from heaven, that hee was greatly diſpleaſed with them for rejecting his government, and that it was not Samuel's ſaying onely.

V. 2.

And now behold your King walketh before you, and I am old and gray-headed, and my ſonnes are with you, &c. Some of the Rabbins ſay, that Samuel dyed at 52 yeares of age, 18 of which time hee lived after that Saul was made King; Joſephus alſo ſaith, that at 12 yeares old hee began to bee a Prophet, and to judge the people, and 12 he judged alone, and 18 with Saul. By the firſt account he could be but 34, by the other but 24, when Saul was made King, both which muſt needs be moſt falſe, for before this he was old, and made his ſons Judges, and both his ſonnes and his gray head, now argue him to have been neare 60, for in thoſe dayes men were not counted old ſooner. 1 Sam. 7. 6. Samuel is ſaid to have judged Iſrael in Mizpeh, which was 20 yeares after that the Arke came to Kiriath-jearim, and that was almoſt a yeare after Eli's death, and before his death the word of the Lord came unto him, and hee was known to bee a Prophet. Allow unto him then a competent age for a Prophet in Eli's time, and hee could not be leſſe then 20 or 25. whereunto adde 20 more till his being received for Judge, ſee my notes upon 1 Sam. 7. 6. and then he muſt bee 40, or thereabout, when hee began to judge, after which hee could not be ſo old as to need ſubſtitutes till 20 yeares more were expired; ſo that when Saul was made King, hee muſt needs bee above 60, unto which if 18 in the time of Saul bee added, hee muſt needs bee about 80 when hee dyed. But for his time of judging alone, and together with Saul, ſee my notes upon Acts 13. 21.

Joſephus.

But why doth hee ſay, My ſonnes are with you? Lyra anſwereth, he meaneth, that they were as pledges to make ſatisfaction, wherein hee was not able, if he had done them any wrong. Vatablus and Pellican, that they were amongſt them to be conſulted with, becauſe Saul had yet no experience of government. Oſiander, that they were as private men to bee called to an account, as he would give account for himſelfe. Borrhæus ſaith, that hee ſpeaketh of his ſonnes by way of upbraiding them, in that they refuſed to have them for their Judges, comming of a father that had ſo well deſerved of them. Of all theſe, that of Oſiander ſeemeth to mee moſt genuine. I am old, and ſo unfit now any longer to beare the great burthen of governing alone, and therefore I have made you a King to governe in my ſtead; and for my ſonnes, whom yee complained of, as unworthy for their corrupt dealing, to Judge, now that I have made you a King, they are with you, they are depoſed, and become like your ſelves, private men and ſubjects, ſo as that they can trouble you no more by the abuſe of their authority; but if yee will have them further puniſhed for abuſes paſt, yee may, but I have walked before you from my childhoold hitherto. And now in all this time of my being Judge over you, which hee meaneth by walking before them, if yee have any thing to object againſt me, wherin I have wronged any of you, ſpeake, and I will make ſatisfaction, and if not, yee did headily and unadviſedly in rejecting mee for a King. Peter Martyr ſaith the ſame with Oſiander, and addeth, that hee ſpake of them, becauſe they knew him at home, and more inwardly, and therefore if they would, they might know of them whether he had any way dealt corruptly.

Lyra.
Vatablus.
Pellican.
Oſiander.

V. 3.

Behold here I am, witneſſe againſt mee before the Lord and his anointed, &c. Here by anointed hee meaneth not Chriſt, as ſome thinke, but Saul, as appeareth more plainly, v. 5. before whom hee ſpake thus, partly, that hee might by his example of juſt and equall dealing, bee put in minde of his duty, and not take occaſion from that which hee had ſaid before of the manner of a King, to play the tyrant; partly, to vindicate his government from all aſperſion of Oſiander. injuſtice that might afterwards be laid upon it; and partly, that the people Borrhaus. might ſee their owne folly, recounting the equity of their Judges, when they ſhould ſee the unequal proceedings of ſome of their Kings. Whoſe oxe have I taken, Lyra. that is, ſaith Lyra, to doe my worke, or whoſe Aſſe, that is, to ride upon from one place to another. Whom have I defrauded, that is, by unjuſtly drawing him to judgement; or oppreſſed, that is, doing him any kinde of injury; Of whoſe hand have I received any bribe to blinde mine eyes therewith; the Vulg. Latine, & contemnam illud hodie, which Lyra following, ſaith, hee meaneth, that if hee had taken any thing for judging juſtly, hee would not hold it ſtill, but reſtore it, as in the next words, Hebr. it is, That I might blinde mine eyes with it, becauſe it is ſaid, Deut. 16. 19. A reward blindeth the eyes of the wiſe, that is, that hee ſeeth not the goodneſſe or badneſſe of the cauſe, but is, as it were, blindly led to give ſentence on his ſide that bribeth him. Wherefore without cauſe are thoſe Expoſitors divided amongſt themſelves, who referre theſe words, with it, ſome to Peter Martyr. a bad cauſe, ſome to a good, and ſome to the perſon judged. Peter Martyr readeth it, Of whom have I received a price, and hid mine eyes from him. He ſaith alſo, that Samuel ſpeaketh but of ſmall things, intimating, that much leſſe had hee taken any field or poſſeſſion; ſo Moſes in way of apology for himſelf, ſaith Numb. 16. of Corah and his company, I have not taken an hooſe of them. Hereby it appeareth what a good governour Samuel was, and hereunto the people gave all witneſſe, hee ſought not the inriching of himſelfe and his children, but onely the good of the Common-wealth to his own great charge.

V. 5. And Samuel ſaid, The Lord is witneſſe this day, &c. here, ſaith Lyra, the Lyra. Hebrewes have a tradition, that Samuel deſiring that God would bee his witneſſe, a voice came from God, ſaying, Witneſſe, and indeed ſo the Hebrew ſoundeth, where the words are theſe, God is witneſſe againſt you, and his anointed is witneſſe this day, that yee have not found ought in my hand, and hee ſaid, Witneſſe; therefore it ſeemeth, that God himſelfe by a lively voice teſtified his innocency.

V. 6, 7, 8. Samuels innocency being thus cleared, hee now repeateth Gods gracious dealing towards them ever ſince their being in Egypt, for neither there did he faile to deliver them, when they cryed unto him, by the hands of Moſes and
V. 9. Aaron, and ſince their comming into Canaan, although for their ſinnes hee
V. 10. gave them into the hands of their enemies divers times, yet when they cryed unto him hee raiſed up deliverers, who ſaved them from Siſera, the Philiſtims
V. 11. and Moabites, even Jerubbaal, Bedan, Iephthah and Samuel. In ſpeaking of Moſes and Aaron, hee ſaith, Which brought your fathers out of Egypt and made them dwell Qu. in this place. Wherepon a queſtion is made, how Moſes and Aaron could bee ſaid to make them dwell in the land of Canaan, ſeeing they were both dead Iunius. before their coming into Canaan? Junius anſwereth, Moſes gave them part of their inheritance before their going over Jordan, and in this regard it was thus ſaid. Oſiander, Hee by Joſhua, whom hee ſubſtituted in his owne place, Oſiander. gave them poſſeſſion. But moſt improbably of all Borrhæus and Vatablus, they Borrhæus. made them dwell here by giving them Lawes, and Ordinances, whereby they Vatablus. attained it. For they were alwayes rebellious and diſobedient to theſe laws.
The true anſwer is, they made them dwell here, becauſe they brought them to the very entrance of the land, and gave it unto them by aſſigning to the nine tribes and halfe the whole Countrey, and laying out the bounds thereof for them, when they had given to the other two Tribes and halfe actuall poſſeſſion of their parts. They were ſo aſcertained of the land by them as if they had had it then in poſſeſſion.

For the enemies, into whoſe hands they were ſo ſold, Judg. 3. Wee finde, that Cuſhanriſhathaim was the firſt, and Moab the ſecond, and Judg. 4.
Jabin King of Canaan and Siſera his captaine, the third, and Iudg. 6. the Midianites
the fourth, and Iudg. 10. the Philiſtims and Ammonites, the fifth, & Iudg. 13.

the Philiſtims the ſixt. The Judges raiſed up to deliver them was firſt Othniel, ſecond Ehud, third Barak and Deborah, fourth Gideon, otherwiſe called Ierubbaal, fifth Iephthah, ſixth Samſon, and after him Samuel who delivered them mightily from the ſame enemies. But here three ſorts of enemies are onely mentioned, the Canaanites, Philiſtims and Moabites, and that not in order neither, for Moab oppreſſed them before the other two: and of their deliverers foure onely, and of theſe two ſaved them out of the other enemies hands, viz. the Midianites and Ammonites, Samuel from the Philiſtims, Barak being left to bee underſtood, by the Canaanites and their Captaine Siſera mentioned, ſeeing it was well knowne, that by Barak they had that deliverance, and Ehud by mentioning the Moabites, yet the Vulgar Latin ſupplyeth Barak, but I ſee no reaſon, but Ehud might as well have had his name put in alſo. But Samuel thought it enough for brevities ſake to give onely a touch of every oppreſſion and deliverance, by mentioning either the one or the other and not both, except in that of the Philiſtims, becauſe they were their moſt noted enemies, and had beene longeſt grievous unto them. But as their firſt oppreſſion by Cuſhanriſhathaim is not touched upon, ſo neither is Othniel, their deliverer from him, but another ſtrange name Bedan, never heard of before, put in: yet in the Sept. Tranſlation omitted, and Ierubbaal, Barak, Iephthah, and Samuel mentioned. It is generally held both by Hebrew and Chriſtian expoſiters, that Bedan was Samſon, ſo called, becauſe the Spirit of God moved him in the campe of Dan, for Bedan, is in Dan, but ſome Rabbins will have it Bedan, for Bendan the ſonne of Dan: and they ſay, hee is mentioned before Iephthah, although in time after him, becauſe hee was more famous. Iunius hath a ſingular opinion by himſelfe, whom Willet alſo followeth, that by Bedan Iair a Judge, a Manaſſite is meant, becauſe hee was before Iephthah, but Samſon after, and to make this the more probable hee alleadgeth 1 *Chron.*7.17. where this name is found amongſt the Manaſſites, and hee might bee called both by it and Jair alſo. This opinion I confeſſe, moveth me ſomewhat, but ſeeing Iair onely judged Iſrael, and was not famous for any particular deliverance, as the reſt here named were, I cannot ſubſcribe to him: for Samuel naming ſo few would never have put in one amongſt them, that was of no fame for any warlike exploit, leaving out others of note. And why Bedan ſhould bee put for Samſon, I cannot ſee, for if hee were moved in Dan, other Judges were alſo moved in their Tribes, for which they might as well have beene named thereby. I therefore preferre the Sept. putting Barak for Badan, not through miſtaking, as ſome thinke, or corruption, becauſe in the Hebr. and Chaldee it is Badan or Bedan, but his knowne name is in the Hebr. concealed, becauſe hee went about the worke to which hee was called ſo cowardly, for hee would not goe, except Deborah went with him, for which ſhee ſaid, that it ſhould not bee for his honour. Hee is then ſet forth by the name of Bedan ſignifying in judgement, to intimate, that although hee was uſed as an inſtrument to deliver Iſrael, yet it was under another that was Judge, viz. Deborah, ſo as was none of all the other Judges. For the totall omiſſion of the firſt Judge and deliverance from Cuſhanriſhathaim, it was of ſo ſhort a time and ſo long a time of peace immediately followed, and happily in that ſhort time the oppreſſion was not great, but a tribute onely exacted of them, as that it was not now much talked of. If the time of Barak bee objected, for hee was before Ierubbaal, but here Bedan is named after, Samuel was nothing curious in keeping order, as wee may ſee in that their oppreſſion by Moab, which was before the other two is named laſt. Touching Samuels naming of himſelfe, this was not out of vaine-glory, but becauſe by him they had ſo lately beene delivered from the the Philiſtims, who were kept under ever ſince, to aggravate their ſinne of ingratitude, in that now they would ſhake him off and have a King notwithſtanding that great bleſſing injoyed by his meanes.

Iudg.13.25.

Iunius.
Iudg.10.3.

V.12. Yet when yee ſaw, that Nahaſh, the King of the Ammonites came againſt you, yee ſaid, Nay but a King ſhall raigne over us, when the Lord your God was your King.

How is it ſaid, that the comming of Nabaſh againſt them was a cauſe of their asking a King, when as Nabaſh came not againſt Iabeſh, till after Sauls electi-Hugo Gard. on, and that as ſome ſay, a moneth? Hugo anſwereth according to Joſephus, Ioſeph. lib. 6. that Naqaſh came againſt thoſe, that dwelt beyond Iordan in divers places Antiq. cap. 5. and vexed them before the election of a King, but now having gathered a farre greater army, he returned againe and beſieged Iabeſh, and put them to it ſo, as was ſaid before, Ch. 11.

V. 14. If yee will feare the Lord and ſerve and obey him, then ſhall both yee and your King continue following the Lord your God: the Vulgar Latin, eritis ſequentes dominum, and Hebr. yee ſhall bee after the Lord, ſo Vatablus, Peter Martyr, Arias, &c. but Iunius. Iunius, permanebitis ſequentes, expounding it, whilſt ye follow the Lord, ye remain ſafe. But rendring it word for word, yee ſhall be after the Lord, is beſt if with Peter Peter Martyr. Martyr, wee expound it, yee ſhall be ſtill under him, as your King, and he will
V. 15. protect you and take care for you. But if you will not obey, but rebell againſt the commandement, Hebr. the mouth of the Lord, then ſhall his hand bee againſt you, as it was againſt your fathers, Hebr. and againſt your fathers. But hereupon a queſti-on is moved, how it could bee threatened to bee againſt their fathers? Peter Martyr anſwereth, it is meant either againſt their Princes, who are parents of the Country, or being againſt them, it was alſo againſt their parents, becauſe they were part of their parents, or elſe according to our tranſlation, and ו being taken for, as; Yet ſome, hee ſaith, underſtand it againſt their parents, in that his promiſes, made to them ſhould not bee performed. I pre-ferre the firſt way, as alſo doth Pellican, Vatablus, and Borrheus; the Sept. to put it out of doubt read it, and upon your Kings, and this is made plaine, v. 25.
But the Chaldee, Iunius, and Oſiander are for this rendring, as againſt your fathers. Thus Samuel having put them in hope of having God on their ſide, if they did well notwithſtanding their fore-objected ingratitude, but terrify-
V. 16, 17, 18, 20. ing them if they did ill; now that they might have ſome ſenſible ſigne of this their ſinne, and bee humbled for it, hee calleth to God for raine and thunder in the time of wheat-harveſt, which God accordingly ſent, and then the people feared greatly, and deſired Samuel to pray for them, and confeſſed their great ſinne in asking a King. Samuel prayed once before, 1 Sam. 7. 10. and it thundered upon the Philiſtims, wherefore now to make them to ſee into their ſinne, hee prayed for thunder againe, and yet for raine withall, becauſe otherwiſe it might have been more dangerous. And this hee did, becauſe hereby they might bee put in minde of the former thunder, and of Gods power ſhewed therein, to the deſtruction of the Philiſtims, and conſider againe in what grace Samuel was with him, ſo as that when hee would he could procure thunder, that they might both be ſorry, & condemn themſelves of folly for rejecting ſuch a Judge for a King; and ſeeing that if hee would, hee could have procured a deſtroying thunder againſt them, as well as againſt the Philiſtims, they might feare and tremble before God and him, and ſo the more readily hearken to his inſtructions. And it is noted to have been in the time of wheat-harveſt, becauſe this tended to the magnifying of the miracle the more, ſeeing that in thoſe hot Countreys it never uſed to raine at that time of the yeare. For ſome ſay, it rained not there from the midſt of March to the midſt of October, betweene which times they had their early and their latter raine, and all gene-Hugo Cardin. rally, that they ſeldome had any raine in harveſt. Againſt this, Hugo ſaith, it may bee objected, that Jordan is ſaid to have overflowed the bankes, Joſh.
3. 15. at harveſt time, and the ſame is touched upon, Ecclus. 24. and how could this bee, but by the abundant falling of raine? Hee anſwereth, this might either be cauſed by the rain falling abundantly before harveſt, or by the ſnow, which melting now came downe and made it to overflow, ſee Joſh. 3. 15. But the overflowing of Jordan in harveſt, is to bee underſtood of the barley harveſt, and not of the wheat harveſt, of which it is ſpoken here, and that was long before this, and ſo nearer to the time of raine. For the peoples fearing, it was becauſe the tempeſt was ſo terrible, that it ſeemed to threaten deſtruction unto them, of which terrour in the time of thunder and lightening wee have had often experience, and many have periſhed thereby. For their ſin in asking a King now acknowledged, ſee before, 1 *Sam.*8.

V.20,21.

Samuel ſeeing the people greatly perplexed, comforteth them, by promiſiug that the Lord would not forſake them, becauſe hee had made them his people, having firſt exhorted them conſtantly to ſerve God, and not to goe after vanity, although they had done this great wickedneſſe to aske a King. V. 22. For the Lord will not forſake his people for his great Names ſake, becauſe it hath pleaſed him to make you his people: the word הואיל rendred, hath pleaſed, ſignifieth alſo, hath ſworne, and hath begun; wherefore the Vulg. Latine hath it, begun; Pellican, ſworne; Peter Martyr, hee would, rejecting neither of the other, for it may well bee underſtood any way, but rather the good pleaſure of God is here pointed at as the cauſe of their election to bee his people, ſo that hee could not for the glory of his Names ſake, this being knowne to the Nations round about, but ſpare them and uphold them from periſhing, and defend and make them yet a greater people. For if he ſhould not, other peoples would either have ſaid, that hee was not true of his promiſe, or that he was not able, which would have been to his great diſhonour. And this is the ground of the comfort of all his elect, he will not forſake them becauſe of his owne good will he hath choſen them.

V.23.

Moreover, God forbid that I ſhould ſinne againſt the Lord, in ceaſing to pray for you, &c. that is, although yee have rejected mee, yet I am ſo farre from any enmity or hatred in my minde againſt you therefore, as that I will not ceaſe to pray for your good; and hereby it ſhall appeare that I have not prayed for this thunder out of hatred againſt you, but to bring you to repentance and better obedience, that yee might eſcape Gods deſtroying judgements, and ſtill keep his favour. And hee ſaith, God forbid that I ſhould ſinne, to imply, that a Prophet who neglecteth his duty in praying for the people committed unto him, ſinneth againſt God, and conſequently if he ſhould neglect to inſtruct and teach them: And againe, that the enmity of others againſt us may not bee requited with enmity, but with love, and praying for them, according to that, Love your enemies, and pray for them that hate you and perſecute you, and therefore to ceaſe to pray even for ſuch is a ſinne.

Matth. 5.

V. 24,25.

Lyra.

Having comforted the people in promiſing to pray for them, hee concludeth with an exhortation to ſerve God in truth, and with a threatening if they did otherwiſe, that both they and their King ſhould periſh. In truth, ſaith Lyra, that is, without diſſimulation, and with all your heart, that is, without dimunition.

CHAP. XIII.

V. 1.

SAUL reigned one yeare; and when hee had reigned two yeares over Iſrael, hee choſe unto him 3000 out of Iſrael, &c. The Vulg. Latine, Saul was the ſonne of one yeare, when hee began to reigne, and hee reigned two yeares, that is, ſaith Lyra, he was innocent and unblameable as a childe of one yeare old, when hee began to reigne, and in this goodneſſe he continued two yeares; but after that hee fell from it, and David was anointed King; ſo that although he reigned ſtill 18 yeares more, yet that was by uſurpation, and therefore hee is ſaid onely to have reigned two yeares,. But ſome, hee ſaith, read it, Saul's ſonne was of one yeare, but this is confuted by 2 Sam. 2. 10. where [illegible]boſheth his ſonne is ſaid to bee 40 yeares old, when hee began to reigne, which was immediately after Saul's death, and therefore hee was now 20. The Chald. ſaith the ſame with Lyra, and others, of whom ſee my Notes upon Acts 13. 21. Theodoret ſaith the ſame with Lyra, but that the reſt of his time was imputed to the adminiſtration of Samuel. Junius ſaith, it is meant onely that hee was in his firſt yeare, when thoſe things were done, which were before ſet downe. David Kimhi, and Ben Gerſon, whom Vatablus followeth, and Peter Martyr ſay, that it is meant, one yeare was paſt before his confirmation in Gilgal, after his anointing privately by Samuel, and two yeares hee reigned, before that for his ſinne hee was rejected, of which it is ſpoken afterwards in this Chapter. And this is moſt probable, becauſe his confirmation was ſpoken of immediately before, Chap. 12. Now then that wee might underſtand at what time that was done, it is here ſaid, בן שנה שאול the ſonne of a yeare was Saul, when hee reigned by a generall conſent, for before many were againſt him, and happily it is meant after this that hee reigned two yeares well, before his rejection, and after that 18 more; although Oſiander hereupon gathereth, that hee reigned but two yeares in all, for ſo many battailes could not bee fought, and David ſo much purſued in ſo ſhort a time. Some thinke, that the firſt and ſecond yeare of his reigne are thus diſtinguiſhed, to intimate, that he reigned, firſt, without any royall pompe, and then tooke a guard of men unto him, being attended like a King; and at this our Tranſlation ſeemeth to aime, When hee had reigned two yeares, he choſe 3000; but the word [when] is not in the Hebrew, but is added for more expreſſion, yet not rightly, for then it muſt bee granted, that hee took him not this guard till after two yeares of his reigne expired; whereas it appeareth plainly to have been done at the time of this Aſſembly for his coronation in Gilgal; for that it is ſaid, The reſt of the people hee ſent every one to his tent; therefore hee choſe out the 3000, before that they departed from this Aſſembly. It is beſt therefore to render the Hebrew word for word, thus, And hee reigned two yeares over Iſrael, and choſe him 3000 men; that is, after his publike inauguration till this time, he cannot properly bee ſaid to have reigned any more then two yeares, and that hee might henceforth bee attended as a King, he now took from amongſt the people this retinue of 3000.

Lyra.

D. Kimhi, Ben Gerſon, Vatabl:

Oſiander. Genebrard. in Chronol. Vatablus, Toſtatus.

V. 2. Junius.

Of these 3000 men, 2000 were with Saul in Michmaſh, and in mount Bethel; and 1000 went with Jonathan to Gibeah, &c. Michmaſh, ſaith Junius, was no name of a City, but of a tract of ground extending to mount Bethel: here Saul tooke up his ſtation, and Jonathan was moſt probably ſent by him againſt the gariſon of the Philiſtims in Gibeah with 1000 men, and cut them off happily being but 200, or 500: of Gibeah ſee before, Chap. 10. 5. Saul divided himſelf moſt probably thus from Jonathan keeping at this place, that hee might after that exploit done by Jonathan both ſend out to call the people together againſt the Philiſtims, who hee knew before upon the ſmiting of their gariſon, would come againſt Iſrael, and that hee might the ſooner bee at Gilgal, to which place Samuel had before appointed to come unto him.

1 Sam. 10. 8.

V. 3.

Ionathan having ſmitten the gariſon of the Philiſtims, they heare of it, and Saul blew the Trumpet throughout all the land, that they might aſſemble together, and bee prepared to goe againſt the Philiſtims to battail, and they were called together to Gilgal, to which place Saul went. Michmaſh, from whence hee went to Gilgal, ſaith one, was a City in the borders of Benjamin and Manaſſeh 4 miles from Gilgal, ſee Ezra 2. 27. Eſa. 10. and this ſeemeth not to bee ſo probable, as that of Iunius before-going, becauſe here pitched the huge Army of the Philiſtims, v. 5.

H. Bunting Patriar. travailes.

V. 5.

And the Philiſtims gathered themſelves together to fight with Iſrael, 30000 chariots, and 6000 horſemen, and people as the ſand on the ſea ſhore. Of warre-chariots, ſee Judg. 4. 13. The people are ſaid to be as the ſand, by an Hyperbole, becauſe they were an exceeding great multitude. Ioſephus ſaith, they were 300000 footmen. And for the chariots, Lyra conjectureth that they were not 30000, but all the perſons fighting in them were 30000, becauſe Siſera his great Army conſiſted but of 900 chariots, and Pharaoh's of 600: but Joſephus ſaith the ſame with the ſacred hiſtory, neither is it ſafe ſo to goe from the expreſſe words thereof. Here is rather ſet forth ſuch an Army, as was never heard of in that land before, that the power of God might bee the more magnified for confounding it, as hee did, by ſuch weake meanes, as is ſhewed, Chap. 14. that none may ever truſt to the greateſt multitudes and preparations, ſeeing all are vaine where God will deſtroy, as alſo appeared in the great Armies of Darius and Xerxes. The Philiſtims pitched in Michmaſh, the place

Joſephus. Lyra.

Iudg. 4. 13.
Exo. 14. 7.

where they heard Saul was before; and it is ſaid to have been eaſtward from Bethaven, that is, not from Bethel, as ſome thinke, holding, that Bethel, whereby Michmaſh was deſcribed before, v. 2. and this Bethaven were all one place. For although the name Bethaven was tranſlated to Bethel by the Prophets, yet it was not ſo called now, but after that it was made a place of Idolatry by Jeroboam, who ſet up his Golden Calfe here, then it was Bethaven, that is, the houſe of iniquity, and no longer Bethel, that is, the houſe of God. But at the firſt Bethel and Bethaven were two diſtinct places not farre aſunder, as we may read Joſh: 18, 12, 13. Junius.

Vatablus.
Pellican.
Junius.

V. 6, 7.

The People of Iſrael being terrified by ſo great a multitude of Enemies, ſome hide themſelve in caves and thickets, and ſome flee over Jordan to Gilead and Gad: and ſome remaine with Saul in Gilgal trembling. Touching thoſe that fled over Jordan, it is ſaid, the Hebrewes paſſed over Jordan, for ſo it is Hebr: and not, ſome of the Hebrewes, as in our tranſlation, and hereupon it is ſcanned by Hugo, who theſe were, for of the whole body of the people it is ſaid before, when the men of Iſrael ſaw themſelves in a ſtraight, they hid themſelves, and here, the Hebrewes paſſed over. He reſolveth, that they were ſome of them, who more properly retained the name of Hebrewes, becauſe they uſed often to paſſe over Jordan, for the word עבר ſignifieth to paſſe, and here it is ועברים עברו the paſſengers paſſed, that is, they that would paſſe over, they that were right Hebrewes, according to their name. And why fled they that way? becauſe, ſaith Lyra, it was Eaſtward, and the Philiſtims came againſt them, from the Weſt, where their country lay. Here, as Peter Martyr noteth, appeared preſently their vanity in asking of a King, whom if they had once obtained, they thought they ſhould be moſt ſafe from their Enemies, but now having one, they feare and are as much perplexed, as ever.

Hugo Cardin.
Lyra.
Peter Martyr.

V. 8.

And he tarried 7 dayes according to the time which Samuel had ſet, but Samuel came not &c. Here is ſhewed how Saul ſinned firſt, and was therefore rejected, viz. by offering ſacrifice which was unlawfull for him to doe, but onely for a Prieſt or Prophet. For Samuel had promiſed to come unto him within 7 dayes to ſacrifice for his proſperity, which, how it is to be underſtood, ſee there. Some thinke, that he ſacrificed not, but by the hands of others, as Elkanah is ſaid to have ſacrificed, and David and Solomon, but all the Rabbins ſay, that he himſelfe ſacrificed, ſo ſaith P. Martyr, and that Ben Gerſon ſaith that Saul by ſacrificing thought to obtaine the ſpirit of Prophecy, and ſo to know the will of God, and to direct himſelfe without Samuels advice; ſo likewiſe Sulpitius Severus, Rupert, Lyra, Joſephus. But it was a cuſtome even amongſt the Heathen to ſacrifice before they went to warre, that they might have the Gods propitious unto them, and this doubtleſſe was Sauls end in ſacrificing.

Ch. 10. 8.
Toſtatus, Cajetan, Vatablus.
Peter Martyr.

V. 11, 12.

Saul having made an end of offering his burnt offering, Samuel came, and he relating what he had done, was by Samuel reproved therefore, and threatned that his Kingdome ſhould not continue. But here a queſtion ariſeth, how he brake the commandement of God, ſeeing he ſtayed 7 dayes, as Samuel had appointed? To this Hugo anſwereth according to ſome, that no certaine number of dayes was ſet by Samuel, to the end whereof he ſhould tarry for him, but that he ſhould tarry till he came and then he would offer for him 7 dayes together, but this hath beene already confuted, Ch: 10. 8. Andreas ſaith Lyra anſwereth, that Samuel meant he ſhould tarry 7 dayes after the day, in which Saul ſent for him, but he reckoning that day for one, tarryed but 6 more, and ſo tranſgreſſed. But he rather approveth of a third anſwer, viz. that Saul tarryed not 7 dayes compleate, but the time of the evening ſacrifice approaching and Samuel not coming, he offered the ſame day, for when he had made an end of one ſacrifice, before he had offered the Peace-offerings Samuel came. And to this do I ſubſcribe, and this is ſpoken of by P. Martyr, as the onely ſinne of Saul at this time, and it was ſinne enough, for which to be rejected, to doe againſt Gods command, in the ſmalleſt matter, as for our firſt Parents to eate of the forbidden fruite, ſo for Saul to anticipate the time ſet by the Lord, although never ſo little. But Lyra taxeth him for two other

Hugo Card.
Lyra.
Peter Martyr.

ſinnes here. 1 That he preſumed to ſacrifice, which King Uzziah preſuming to do afterwards was ſmitten with the Leproſie. 2 In that he excuſed himſelfe in ſtead of confeſſing his ſinne, but his excuſe by the great danger that he was in was nothing, for his ſacrificing was rather a provoking of God againſt him then a reconciling of his favour towards him. He ſhould have kept to the time ſet him by the Lord, and by faith reſted upon him, in how great a ſtraight ſoever he ſaw himſelfe to be: for God had promiſed to his people keeping his Commandements, One of you ſhall chaſe 1000, and 100 of you put 10000 to flight; and it had beene ſhewed in Gideons expedition, that God can as eaſily ſave by few as by many. Whereas Saul in excuſing himſelfe, ſaith, I forced my ſelfe and offered a burnt-offering, the Vulg: Lat: hath it, being compelled by neceſſity I offered, Vatabl. I was bold, but the word is ואתאפק I refrained my ſelfe, as Joſeph is ſaid by the ſame word to have refrained himſelfe from weeping before his Brethren. His meaning is then, that he refrained as long as he could from ſacrificing, although in ſo great ſtraights, but at length ſeeing not Samuel come within the time limited he offered. And herein Saul thought that he did wiſely and providently, not to goe to the battell before that he had made ſupplication to the Lord, (for ſacrificing was joyned with the confeſſion of ſinnes, and praiſing of God) but Samuel telleth him, that he did fooliſhly, becauſe he tranſgreſſed the commandement of God; and ſo doe all carnall men, when they thinke that they do wiſely, they do fooliſhly, for who ſo goeth Note. from the commandement under what pretence ſoever doth fooliſhly, and ſhall be rejected therefore, as Saul was. But how is it juſtifiable, that he ſhould P. Martyr. ſpeake ſo unreverently to the King? Peter Martyr anſwereth well, that God ſpake thus by the mouth of Samuel, and Eſay, Eliah, and Eliſha and other Prophets being carried by the Spirit have ſpoken to Kings without all reſpect, becauſe in ſuch caſes they were Gods legates, and not meerely as their Subjects, in which regard at other times they humbled themſelves before them. And as for Samuel in particular, he was more then another Prophet, a Judge, for it was ſaid before, that he judged Iſrael all the dayes of his life; and he was ſet not onely to judge the people but even the King himſelfe, in that he both made him King and pronounced his doome of rejection, and ſet up David to be King in his ſtead.

V. 13. Qu. And now would the Lord have eſtabliſht thy Kingdome over Iſrael for ever, but now it ſhall not continue, &c. A queſtion ariſeth here, how it could be ſaid thus, conſidering the Propheſie of Jacob, that the Scepter ſhould not depart from Judah, Gen. 49. ſo that the Kingdome was to be eſtabliſhed in Judah, not in Benjamin? Ben Gerſon. Vatablus. Oſiander. Iunius. Some anſwer, that by theſe words for ever, a long time only is to be underſtood, or all the time of Sauls life. Others, the Lord would have eſtabliſhed thy Kingdome for ever, if thou hadſt perſiſted in obedience to Gods commandements: Peter Martyr. Pellican. for there was no promiſe made unto him, as afterwards to David, of an everlaſting continuance of his Kingdome, but being ſet up by the Lord, there was a foundation laid, ſo that he might have continued and his children after him, D. Kimhi. if he had not tranſgreſſed; and here D. Kimhi applyeth that Deut. 17. 20. that the King ſhould read the booke of the Law continually and keepe it, that he might prolong his dayes in his Kingdome, and his Children after him, and ſaith, that according to this it is here ſpoken: ſee the like paſſage before 1 Sam. 2. 30. Qu. If it be ſaid, then if Saul had not diſobeyed, how ſhould the propheſie touching Judah have taken effect? Anſw. God, to whom all things to come are preſent, foreſaw, that Saul would breake his expreſſe commandements, that he might juſtly caſt him and his houſe off againe. If it be objected, then there was a neceſſity of Sauls ſinning and rejection. I anſwer, it is true, he could not but ſinne, yet he was carryed hereunto, not by any neceſſity of Gods decree, James 1. 14. but by the corruption of his owne nature and will, for God tempteth no man to evill, but every man is tempted when he is drawne away by his owne con- Qu. cupiſcence. But it will be ſaid, Is not the will of God immutable? Lyra. Lyra anſwereth well, the will and decree of God, as it is in his divine preſcience, is immutable, but as it is in reference to ſecundary cauſes, viz. the well or ill doings of men, it is mutable, and ſo it is to be underſtood here, If thou hadſt perſiſted in obedience, thy Kingdome ſhould have ſtood for ever.

V. 15, 16. Samuel having thus taxed Saul went away to Gibeah, and Saul and Jonathan followed him, having but 600 men with them, and the Philiſtimes were ſtill in Michmaſh. From Gilgal to Gibeah was 12 miles, from thence to Michmaſh 8 miles. They followed Samuel to Gibeah, ſaith Lyra, being ſo few, that they might have the comfort of his preſence: and happily he went to Gibeah, or the hill of God, where the company of the Prophets was, that he might there together with them pray to God for the people being in this diſtreſſe. Some becauſe there is no prepoſition before Gibeah, read it, he left Gilgal in Gibeah, but becauſe theſe two were diſtinct places and farre aſunder, this cannot be. Joſephus ſaith, that Samuel went now to his owne houſe in Ramah, but it is more probable, that although in his anger he went away from Saul, yet he did not quite leave him in his danger, but let him underſtand, to what place he went, that he might come to him thither with his men, viz. to Gibeah. For although God by the mouth of Samuel rejected Saul, yet that he meant not that he ſhould preſently be cut off, appeareth by the good ſucceſſe that he had by Jonathans meanes, now that he was come to Gibeah, againſt the Philiſtims, and therefore Samuel would not doubtleſſe now give him over, but keepe neere unto him, and pray for him, and by his prayers moſt probably ſuch a wonderfull victory was now immediately obtained. For he directed him after this to goe and fight againſt Amalek ch. 15. and ſtill mourned for him ch. 16. 1.

H.B. Patriarks travailes.
Lyra.
Genevenſ:
Joſephus.

V. 17. The Philiſtims lying in Michmaſh were not idle, but ſent out 3 companies to ſpoille the Country of the Iſraelites, which, ſaith Lyra, they were the more bold to doe becauſe they knew them to be unarmed, and ſo could make little reſiſtance, and if they ſhould ſet upon their Campe, when theſe were gone, they made [illegible] doubt, but that they ſhould reſiſt them well enough with the company remaining. But God intended otherwiſe, as appeareth ch. 14. where by Jonathan and his Armour-bearer alone the whole Campe was troubled. One Company went in the way that leadeth to Ophrah in the Land of Shual. Ophrah, ſaith Junius, was in Benjamin, Joſh. 18.23. and the region of Shual was ſpoken of before ch. 9.4. but there it is Shaliſha, it is therefore rather to be held, that it ſhould be read in the Land of Saul, as Lyra readeth it, and the Vulg. Latin: for the Countrey of Benjamin might be called well the land of Saul becauſe he was of Benjamin. And to ſpoile this land they ſent out firſt and chiefly, becauſe Jonathan the ſonne of Saul had ſmitten their gariſon, whereby they were provoked to this warre. But whereas the Vulg: Latin hath it, by the way of Ephraim to the land of Saul, this Lyra taxeth, as a corruption in the tranſlation, but yet he erreth alſo in turning it Ephrata, whereas Hebr: it is Ophrah. The other company went the way of Bethoron, that is, ſaith Junius, in the land of Ephraim Joſh: 16. 3. the third company towards the valley of Zeboim towards the Wilderneſſe, that is, in the land of Benjamin neare unto Jordan, Nehem. 11. 34.

Lyra.
Junius.
Lyra.
Junius.

V. 19. Now there was no ſmith in all the land of Iſrael, for the Philiſtims ſaid, Leſt the Hebrews make them ſwords or ſpeares. It was the policy of the Philiſtims, when they had the Hebrews under, not to permit them to have any weapons of war, & to this end not a ſmith, that could make them in all their land, or that could make any Iron tooles for any other uſe, as Mattockes, Spades, Plough-ſhares, &c. onely they were permitted to have files to ſharpen theſe, and if they would have any made new, they muſt go to the Philiſtims for them: which ſheweth, in what a miſerable caſe they were in thoſe dayes, ſeing this muſt needs be a wonderfull trouble unto them, and being naked of weapons they were alwayes lyable to the danger of their enemies. Thus the Pope depriveth the people of their ſpirituall weapons by debarring them from reading the holy Scriptures, and by keeping them in an unknown tongue, and Iulian the Apoſtata by forbidding the learning of the liberall ſciences unto Chriſtians did the like, and thereby did more in danger the Chriſtian religion, then all the perſecuters, that were before him. And as Hugo noteth, they that take away faithfull preachers from the people, which ſhould provide and put weapons into their hands to fight againſt their ſpirituall enemies. But how could the Philiſtims rule now thus over them, when as not long before they were ſubdued by Samuels prayers, and then it is ſaid, they came no more into the land, and the hand of the Lord was 1 Sam. 7. 13. againſt the Philiſtims all the dayes of Samuel? Moreover a little before this Ch. 11. they obtained a great victory againſt the Ammonites, and then there went out to warre 330000. how then could they bee all diſarmed againe Peter Martyr. by this time? To the firſt Peter Martyr ſaith, according to the Rabbines, that the Philiſtims had them in this ſubjection in the latter dayes of Samuel, when the people fell againe to idolatry. But this is againſt that 1 Sam. 7. 13. wherefore I rather thinke, that this was a policy uſed of old by the Philiſtims before that great overthrow given them by Samuel, when they had ſubdued the Hebrews at the end of Eli his prefecture, they interdicted them the uſe of ſmiths, and although a little before this they were exempt from the juriſdiction of the Philiſtims, yet through diſuſe having none expert in making armes amongſt them, they remained without ſmiths to this day contenting themſelves with ſlings, and bowes, and clubs, and pitchforks, and long ſtaves to fight with all, and the rather becauſe without other warlike inſtruments they had prevailed againſt the Canaanites in the time of Deborah, who had alſo taken their weapons from them, when they reigned over them, and Shamgar with a ploughſhare, had ſlaine 600. of the Philiſtims. And for husbandry buſineſſe, although it was a great toyle unto them, when they would have any new iron tooles made to goe for them to the Philiſtine ſmiths, yet not knowing by this Iudg. 5. 8. time, how to remedy it, for the preſent they made this ſhift. Toſtatus thinketh that the men with Saul onely were without ſword or ſpeare as being of Gibeah, where a Garriſon of the Philiſtims had lyen to keep them under, if it ſhall ſeeme ſtrange, that the armed ſhould hide themſelves, and theſe onely ſtay, there was a ſpeciall providence herein for Gods greater glory. For the ot[illegible] queſtion an anſwer to that may bee gathered from this, which hath beene already ſaid, they fought and prevailed againſt the Ammonites without ſword, or ſpeare, with ſuch inſtruments, as were before ſpoken of, ſo David prevailed againſt Goliah armed with a ſword and a ſpeare, having nothing in his hand but a ſling onely, and amongſt thoſe of Gibeah 700. are ſaid to have beene able to ſling a ſtone at an haires breadth. And this of their being without ſword or ſpeare is premiſed here to magnifie Gods power the more, in giving them the victory, of which it is ſpoken Ch. 14. Yet ſome thinke, that the Iſraelites onely in Rabbini. the land of Canaan were thus unprovided of weapons, they to whom the power of the Philiſtims had not extended on the other ſide of Iordan being ſufficiently armed, and ſo in the expedition againſt the Ammonites, they had armour and weapons of them, ſeeing Iabeſh Gilead, to the reſcue whereof they went, lay D. Kimhi there; and Kimhi ſaith, that they had old weapons, a few: but none new. But the text is plaine againſt ſmiths throughout al the land of Iſrael. And all the Iſraelites V. 20. went downe to the Philiſtims to ſharpen their ſheares and coulters, &c. yet they had a file for the ſheares &c. the Vulgar Latin, retuſæ itaq; erant acies vomerum, &c. the edges of their ſheares, &c. were therefore blunt unto the very oxe goad, expounded Lyra. by Lyra, becauſe after that Jonathan had ſmitten the Gariſon of the Philiſtims, they durſt no more goe downe to the ſmiths amongſt them to ſharpen them. But the Hebr. words are והיתההפצירה פים and there was a file of mouths for the ſheares, and by a file both David Kimhi and R. Solomon expound it, and Pagninus ſaith, it is called a file of mouthes becauſe it hath many mouthes, as it were, and this they uſed commonly to ſharpen their inſtruments of husbandry withall, but onely when they were ſo worne, that they needed more to be done unto them, for then they had uſed to goe downe to the Philiſtims ſmiths, although now it is moſt probable, that they durſt not doe ſo any more, V. 22. ſo that there was now not any, that had ſword or ſpeare, except Saul and Ionathan, who being Princes, it is no marvaile, though they were better provided then any of reſt, ſo Lyra, who ſaith, that the Rabbins ſay, that theſe weapons were brought unto them miraculouſly, but he rejecteth it, as a fable, becauſe if it had beene ſo, it ſhould doubtleſſe have been ſpoken of in the Scripture.

And

Junius.

And a Gariſon of the Philiſtims went out to the paſſage of Michmaſh, that is, ſaith Iunius, that having taken it, the Countrey of Benjamin, which lay before it, might bee open to them, which is ſpoken in way of preparative to the hiſtory following, Ch. 14.

The Myſtery.
Hugo. Cardin.

Myſtically, ſaith Hugo, by ſmithes wanting in Iſrael, underſtand faithfull Preachers failing in the Church, at what time they goe downe to Philoſophers and Orators, which are ſet forth by the Philiſtims ſmiths to ſharpen their inſtruments, that is, to ſet a gloſſe upon their teaching, which tendeth indeed, to the bringing in of worldly gaine, when the people are taken with their eloquence, but for the ſpirituall warfare they want weapons, all but a Saul and a Ionathan, that is, Chriſt and a few faithfull teachers.

CHAP. XIIII.

V. 3.

HEre Ionathan eſpying, how the Gariſon of the Philiſtims was placed moveth his armour bearer to goe with him over unto it, but Saul his Father knew not of his going. This motion in Ionathan came doubtleſſe from God, as the ſequell ſheweth, and therefore that he might not be hindred in this attempt, hee made not his father acquainted with it: a thing, which otherwiſe hee ought not to have done, to goe againſt the enemy without order from the Generall of the field, or without his knowledge; for to doe thus commonly tendeth to the confuſion of the Army, wherefore Torquatus, as Martyr noteth, put his his owne ſonne to death for preſuming thus to doe, and Marlius another Roman his, although hee had fought valiantly againſt the enemy. Hee alſo arguing the caſe, whether it were not temerity in Ionathan thus alone to goe againſt an whole Gariſon, rather then true valour, defendeth it, becauſe God had promiſed that one of them ſhould chace a 1000. and two of them put 10000. to flight; this Ionathan recounted and beleived, and ſo being full of faith proceeded to this incounter; and becauſe by Saul deliverance had beene promiſed from the Philiſtims, hee ſeeing his father now growne timerous, and not daring to oppoſe himſelfe againſt the Philiſtims, that waſted the Countrey, tooke courage to himſelfe and went alone with his armour-bearer, as God moved him.

Peter Martyr.
1 Sam. 9. 16.

V. 2.
Iunius.

And Saul tarried in the uttermoſt part of Gibeah under a Pomgranate tree, which is in Migron &c. that is, ſaith Iunius, in a field ſo called neere one part of the ſtraight towards Gibeah, Eſa. 10. 28. here he and his men lurked for feare, watching to ſee, what the Philiſtims would doe. And with him was Abiah the ſonne of Abitub, Ichabods brother, the ſonne of Phinees, the ſonne of Eli, the Lords Prieſt in Shiloh, wearing an Ephod, &c. Abiah is ſaid to have beene there wearing an Ephod, to ſignifie that he was now High-Prieſt, for the rich Ephod with the Breaſtplate, and the Urim and Thummim was for the High-Prieſt therewithall to conſult with the Lord, Exod. 28. In that he is ſaid to be the ſonne of Abitub, the ſonne of Phinees, it appeareth that Phinees had two ſonnes, Abitub not hitherto mentioned, and Ichabod his yonger brother who was filius Poſthumus, and ſince the time of Eli's death, and Phinees ſlaine, when Samuel was young, Abitub finiſhed his courſe, and now Abiah his ſonne was Prieſt; but whether Abitub was ever High-Prieſt or no, we do not read, it is moſt likely that he was not, but during the 20 yeares, that the arke abode in Kiriathjearim, before Sauls election, Eleazar the ſonne of Abinadab being ſanctified for the Prieſt to keepe it, hee lived and dyed privately, Elias poſterity being then preſently by the juſt judgement of God for his and his ſonnes ſinnes thus long ſtripped of this honour, and although Abiah his ſonne now attained to it againe, yet it continued not long in that family, as hath beene before ſhewed, and will afterwards appeare in the beginning of Solomons raigne. This Abiah is otherwiſe called Abimelech, Ch. 22. 20. who was ſlaine at Sauls command: whereas hee is commonly underſtood to be the nephew of Ichabod, the ſonne of Phinees, Iunius will have him to bee his brother, but this cannot bee, becauſe ſo he muſt have beene the ſonne of Phinees and not of Abitub. The conſideration of theſe

V. 3.
Peter Martyr.
1 Sam. 7. 1.
Iunius.

theſe Prieſts, Eli, Abitub, Abiah, and Abiathar alſo his ſonne, to whoſe time Samuel lived, ſheweth plainly, that hee was a very old man, when hee died, and not of 52 yeares onely, as the Rabbins would make him, of which ſee before, Chap. 8. 1. Now as Abiah the Prieſt was preſent, wee read the like of the Ark,
v. 18.

V. 4, 5. In deſcribing Jonathans proceedings, here is ſhewed how hardly he came to the Philiſtims gariſon, hee was faine to creep upon his hands and his feet over a ſteep ſharpe rock to come unto them, and his Armour-bearer after him; and there are ſaid to have been two rocks on either ſide of them, north and ſouth, ſo as that both thoſe wayes they thought themſelves ſafe from the enemies attempting any thing againſt them, as being ſtrongly defended by nature, and other paſſages they kept by force of armes. Wherefore by this way, whereby they thought themſelves moſt ſecure, they with great difficulty gat unto them. Jonathan had ſmitten one garriſon of the Philiſtims before, having V. 6. with him 1000 men; now hee telleth his Armour-bearer, that there was no reſtraint unto the Lord, to ſave by many or by few, exhorting him therefore to goe with him over to theſe uncircumciſed. Whereas hee ſaith, It may bee the Pellican. Lord will work for us; this was not ſpoken by way of doubting, ſaith Pellican, but of praying, and to intimate the difficulty of the attempt, that his man might bee excited by faith to rely upon God alſo for help.

V. 8, 9. The man promiſing not to leave him, they go over the rock, and ſhew themſelves to the Philiſtims, and Jonathan ſaith to his Armour-bearer, If they ſhall ſay, Wee will come to you, then wee will ſtand ſtill and goe no further; but if they ſay, Come to us, we will goe, for the Lord hath delivered them into our hands.
Joſephus. Joſephus ſaith, that Ionathan having earneſtly prayed unto the Lord, had this ſigne given unto him, and it was a ſigne in reaſon, that if they ſhould ſay, come to us, they ſhould be confounded, becauſe it argued confidence in their owne ſtrength, that they durſt not come neare unto them being ſo ſtrong. And not Borrheus. much unlike unto this is that of Borrheus, it was a boaſting ſpeech like that of Pellican. Goliah to David, for which it was juſt with God to pull them downe. Pellican ſaith, if they ſaid, tarry and wee will come unto you, it was a ſigne of courage, that they durſt goe and ſet upon their enemies, but if they ſaid, come to us, of puſillanimity, and that they feared to ſet upon them. For Gods giving Jonathan this ſigne, it is not to bee doubted, but that he was moved thus to ſay, by the inſtinct of his Spirit, as Abrahams ſervant propounded a ſigne, when he went to fetch a wife for his maſters ſon Iſaac.

V. 11, 12. The Philiſtims ſeeing Ionathan and his Armour-bearer, firſt deride them, and then bid them, Come hither, and wee will ſhew you a thing. Ionathan hearing this, was full of courage and confidence, and fell upon them, and his
V. 24. Armour-bearer after him, and they ſlew at the firſt onſet twenty men within half an acre of ground, which a yoake of oxen might plough. Whereas Ionathan Joſephus. is ſaid to have gone up upon his hands and his feet, Ioſephus ſaith, that hee went not on that ſide where the Philiſtims ſaw him, but at another place where they were more ſecure: And when he came unto them, a cloud ſuddenly aroſe, which darkened the aire ſo, that they knew him not, nor one another, and ſo every one ſmote his fellow that was next him; and they that had gone out to ſpoile the Countrey, returning, fought againſt their owne men. But others, Lyra. as Lyra hath it, better, that they were ſmitten with an acriſis, as the Syrians were, 2 King. 6. when they came to take Eliſha, ſo as that they could not perceive, or ſee thoſe that ſmote them, nor know one another, but every one took the next unto him to bee his enemy, and therefore went on beating down one another, as v. 18. And v. 20. it is ſaid, Every ones ſword was againſt his fellow, and there was a very great diſcomfiture: yet here is nothing expreſſed, but that there came upon them a very great trembling, and that the very earth trembled under them, they by a feare, wherewith they were ſmitten from the Lord, and the earth by an earthquake ſent to increaſe their terrour; but hereby wee may gather, that they were ſo blinded in their judgement, that they knew not one another, and therefore as any was in anothers way in this their haſty flight, hee beat him downe and ſlew him.

For theſe words, v. 15. there was a very great trembling, Hebr. it is, a trembling of God; and ſo Vatablus and the Chald. render it, noting from theſe words, that there was trembling or ſhaking upon the very earth ſent from God, and not upon the Philiſtims army onely; the Vulg. a miracle from God: Junius a very great trembling, becauſe that which is cauſed by God extraordinarily, is very great. I thinke it beſt to hold to the originall. For the quantity of ground whereupon theſe 20 were ſlaine, it is ſaid to have been halfe an acre, which a yoake of oxen might plough; in the Vulg. Latine, which a yoake might plough in a day; Hebr. it is, as it were in halfe an acre of a paire of land, which muſt neceſſarily bee ſupplyed to make it ſenſible, in halfe an acre of land ploughed by a paire of oxen: the Chaldee, about the ſpace of halfe a journey of a paire of oxen, but hereby muſt bee underſtood halfe a dayes worke, becauſe it is but little that a paire of oxen could plough at halfe a journey, and certainly halfe an acre is here meant; Joſephus ſaith, this was done early in the morning, and theſe twenty men were ſmitten being yet aſleep. But it ſeemeth rather that they were placed in ranke, or elſe one would not have been ſo farre from another, as to have ſupplyed halfe an acre with twenty men. And this is ſaid to have been the firſt ſlaughter, becauſe there was another that followed, made by the Philiſtims amongſt themſelves, and a third by the Iſraelites after this chacing them.

Vatablus.
Chald. Paraphr.
Joſephus.

V. 16, 17, 18. The watchmen of Saul ſeeing the trouble of the Philiſtims hoſt, certifie him thereof, and the people being numbred, hee findeth that Jonathan and his Armour-bearer were abſent, then hee bade Abiah to bring the Arke. Hereby Peter Martyr gathereth that Samuel was not now there, or if hee were, hee would no more conſult with him, as being too rigid: but that hee was in Gibeah, hath been ſhewed before. When, or how the Arke was brought hither, is uncertaine; ſome thinke it was carryed to Gilgal before, where their aſſemblies met, and from thence now to Gibeah, when the campe removed, but here it ſtayed not long, for it was ſtill in Kiriath-jearim in the time of Davids reigne, ſo that it was ſoon carryed back thither againe. For conſulting with the Lord in any difficult caſe by the Arke, it is moſt probable, that the High-prieſt, arrayed in his robes and Ephod, with the Urim and Thummim, ſtood before the Oracle, and from thence craved and expected anſwer from the Lord. Now Saul taketh this courſe, that hee might ſeem to bee religious, and not to attempt any great matter, but God being firſt conſulted with.

Peter Martyr.

V. 19. Whilſt Saul talked with the Prieſt, the noiſe increaſed, then hee ſaid unto him, Withdraw thy hand. Of what hee talked to the Prieſt, is not ſaid, but by the premiſſes it appeareth, that hee talked with him about bringing the Arke, and the thing that hee would have him to conſult about. But now ſeeing the Philiſtims already falling, hee ſtayeth not, but maketh haſte into the battaile, bidding the Prieſt withdraw his hand, that is, to proceed no further in inquiring. Joſephus ſaith, that the Prieſt had received anſwer, that the Philiſtims ſhould bee overcome, but this agreeth not with the ſacred hiſtory. Saul, as is generally held by Expoſitors, herein ſhewed the fickleneſſe of his devotion, and how little truſt hee had in God, in that when hee was in a right way, which God himſelfe had directed to, Exod. 28. yet perceiving the victory already to bee partly obtained, or, as ſome ſay, fearing that the Philiſtims haſtened towards him, hee either would not, becauſe hee thought hee was now ſure of the victory, or durſt not, becauſe hee feared the enemy comming, ſtay till hee had received anſwer from the Lord. Yet Samuel hearing of the enemies approach another time, ſtayed till hee had done offering ſacrifice, and then going out to battaile, God fought for him. Wee contrariwiſe muſt ſeeke to God with perſeverance, and in all times of danger when wee are in his ſervice, rely upon his gracious protection.

Ioſephus.
Chap. 7.
Note.

V. 20. When Saul and the men with him came to the battaile, they found the Philiſtims fighting one againſt another, which Joſephus ſaith, was, becauſe the Army conſiſting of people of divers Countreys, the ſouldiers knew not one another,

Peter Martyr.

another, and the Hebrewes that were with the Philiſtims, turned againſt them, joyning with Saul and Jonathan; and ſuch as had hid themſelves in Mount Ephraim, came forth and fought againſt them alſo. Peter Martyr thinketh, as was ſaid before, that they were held ſo in their eyes, that they could not diſcerne their friends from their foes and herein the wonderfull mercy of God appeared towards his people, in that Saul having ſinned, and ſo being worthy to bee forſaken, and Samuel having left him, and the people ſhewing their diſtruſt in God, in that they fled away and hid themſelves, yet he wrought this great miracle for them; But herein he had reſpect to the great faith of Jonathan, whom he had ſingularly ſtirred up, and to his Covenant made of old with their fathers Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob. The Hebrewes that were with the Philiſtims were either ſuch, as ſojourned amongſt them, or dwelt ſtill in the Cities which they had ſubdued, and ſerved them, and ſo in time of warre were conſtrained to goe with them, as David ſometime when hee dwelt in Ziklag, had gone with the Philiſtims to fight againſt his brethren, but that the Princes would not ſuffer him; And the battaile paſſed over to Bethaven, that is, the army went this way in purſuing the Philiſtims; this Bethaven was neare to Michmaſh, ſee before, Chap. 13. 5.

V. 24.

Lyra.

Qu.

And the people of Iſrael were diſtreſſed, becauſe Saul had adjured them, &c. Saul ſeeing the Philiſtims to flee, to the end no delay might bee made in ſlaying and purſuing them, adjureth all the people to eate nothing till night, in this forme, Curſed be the man that eateth any food untill evening, and to this Lyra gathereth by the ſequell, that the paine of death was annexed. And hereupon hee moveth a queſtion, Whether Saul ſinned in thus adjuring the people, or not? And anſwereth, that it is the common opinion of Doctors, that hee did ſin, and that two wayes: Firſt, becauſe it was ill to adjure the people. Secondly, it was worſe to ſeek to fulfill this oath. For although it bee lawfull to give an oath in the caſe of neceſſity, and due circumſtances being obſerved, yet if either of theſe faile, it is a ſinne. Now here was no neceſſity, unleſſe God had ſo directed, thus to purſue the enemies, becauſe God had miraculouſly confounded them already; and hee failed in the cirumſtance of excepting, if any through abſtinence were ready to faint and dye; whereas in all ordinances about meats, and abſtinence herefrom, mens lives and healths are to bee reſpected, and they are not in the caſe of neceſſity bound by any lawes. Wherefore hee ſinned yet worſe in ſeeking to ſlay Jonathan, becauſe hee ate a little honey in his neceſſity, and becauſe by this his adjuring them, hee hindred them from purſuing and deſtroying more of their enemies through faintneſſe, and was a cauſe of ſinne in the people, in that being kept ſo long from food, when they came to it, they were ſo hungry, that they ate fleſh with the blood, as is afterwards ſhewed. Whereas it is objected, Saul's deſire was good, viz. to deſtroy the more of Gods enemies by this meanes; and if he had ſinned in adjuring the people thus, then Jonathan had not ſinned in eating contrary to this oath; and if ſo, God would not have directed the lots to the finding of him out. Sol. A good intention doth not juſtifie a mans action, for then if one ſhould ſteale with an intent to give to the poore, hee ſhould doe well. Againe, although by Gods judgement Jonathan was found out, yet it followeth not, that hee ſinned herein, but God diſcovered him, that by being brought forth, and anſwering for himſelfe, his innocency might appeare, which otherwiſe might have been queſtioned amongſt the people, becauſe ſome of them ſaw him eate honey, but knew not that hee heard not, when his father adjured all to eate nothing till evening. God therefore diſcovered him to be the man, but by his anſwer it appeared, that hee was cleare from any fault, becauſe hee had not heard of the adjuration before; neither could it bee a ſinne in him howſoever, becauſe hee was inforced by neceſſity to eate, ſeeing his ſpirits began to faile him, which hereby were revived. Joſephus ſaith, that Saul uſed this victory too inſolently and immodeſtly, to fill himſelfe with the ſlaughter of his enemies; and ſome, ſaith Peter Martyr, hold, that hee would have them faſt out of ſuperſtition, that

Joſephus.

Peter Martyr.

by the merit hereof they might obtaine the greater victory; but hee preferreth the former, that hee did it out of inſolency, and therefore hee condemneth him of folly and cruelty towards his ſubjects, whoſe health and ſafety hee ought to have preferred before the deſtruction of his enemies. And as others have it, hee ſhewed his hypocriſie and arrogancy, in that hee would by this meanes aſcribe to his owne policy the victory, which God had given by Jonathan. Comeſtor ſaith, that in warre they uſed not to eate, till the time of the evening ſacrifice, hereupon S*aul* made this adjuration; ſed vix credo.

V.25. Lyra. Then the people came into a wood where the honey dropped, and none durſt eate any thereof, becauſe they feared the oath. Bees, ſaith Lyra, kept in trees, and gathered thither ſuch abundance of honey, as that it dropped from thence downe upon the ground; and becauſe it was ſo in divers places of the land of Canaan, it was called a land flowing with milke and honey. They feared the oath, becauſe the penalty of breaking it was death.

V.27. But Jonathan not knowing of this adjuration, becauſe hee was abſent when it was made, taſted a little honey, and his eyes were cleared, which one ſeeing, told him of the oath. V.29. Then Jonathan ſaid, My father hath troubled the land; ſee now I pray you how mine eyes are inlightened, becauſe I taſted a little of this honey: V.30. How much more if the people had eaten freely to day of the ſpoile of the enemy which they found? for had there not now been a much greater ſlaughter made of the enemies? Through hunger the ſpirits begin to faile, and then the ſight, which is by the ſpirits comming to the eyes, muſt needs waxe dimme, but food being received, the ſpirits are ſtrengthened, and ſo the ſight commeth againe, according to this ſpeech of Jonathan. The words of v. 30. are very obſcure, and therefore are rendred diverſly from the common reading; Iunius. by Junius thus, Etiam quia (utinam comediſſet populus libere hodie de ſpoliis inimicorum quod ſuffeciſſet) quia inquam jam non infertur in Philiſt*æos plaga amplior:* ſo alſo Arias Montanus, and this is word for word according to the Hebrew, and the ſenſe is perfect. I would to God the people had been permitted freely to eate, becauſe by their being reſtrained no greater deſtruction hath been made of the Philiſtims through their fainting for want of food. Whereas in the common reading, the words in the beginning of the verſe are altered, how much more, to which the Hebrew גם כילוא cannot bee drawne, and that which is indicative in the end, is made interrogative; S*aul* is here rightly taxed, for, as Theodoret and Chryſoſtome have it, he did fooliſhly, ſo likewiſe Procopius; but Toſtatus defendeth Saul's act, becauſe there was no ſuch neceſſity of eating till night, when they were in the heate of warre; and Cajetan alſo, and Tertul. de jejun. and *Ambroſ. Ser.*36. praiſe him; and *Jerome li.*2.contr. Jovin. ſaying, that herein he followed Moſes and Joſhua.

V.31. And they ſmote the Philiſtims that day from Michmaſh to Aialon, &c. This Aialon was a City in the tribe of Dan, Joſh. 19.42. and it was 12 miles from Michmaſh. H.B. Patriarks travailes. The people having purſued them thus farre, waxed faint, and ſo could follow them no further, then the evening comming on, they fell to eating of the ſpoile, and killed and ate ſheep, oxen, and calves with the blood; V.32. Lyra. and it is ſaid, they ſlew them on the ground, which, ſaith Lyra, is expounded three wayes. 1 In every place where they tooke them, not bringing them firſt to the ſanctuary which was then amongſt them, that the blood might bee poured out upon the Altar, as the Law required; for although being farre off from the Sanctuary, they were to poure out the blood upon the ground, yet being neare unto it, they were to kill their beaſts ſo, that the blood might be ſprinkled upon the Altar. 2 Upon the ground, that is, not laying them upon ſomething, from whence the blood might the better run, and bee all drained out. 3 They did kill and eate of the ſpoile of the enemy, before that they had brought a ſacrifice to the Lord, which they ought to have done firſt. For the firſt of theſe is Jerome, and for the third, and for the ſecond Pellican, and Peter Martyr, and Junius. And this is undoubtedly meant, as the complaint following which was brought to Saul, doth ſhew. They laid not the beaſts up upon ſome ſtone or block, as the manner was, that the blood might runne all away from the fleſh, but for haſte they killed any where upon the ground, and the beaſt being dead, prepared the fleſh with much blood ſtill remaining in it, and therefore Saul to remedy this, commanded a great ſtone to bee brought, and that all the people ſhould come thither to kill their beaſts, that he might ſee the Law duely obſerved in letting out all the blood. But by his ordinance before made againſt eating ought, till the evening, hee was the occaſion Note. Borrhaus. of this ſinne againſt Gods ordinance, as one well noteth, and ſo the Pope is by many of his decrees, as the Phariſees by their traditions, an occaſion of overthrowing Gods commandements.

V.33. Iunius. For the great ſtone which Saul biddeth them rowle unto him, ſome thinke, that it was not to kill the beaſts upon, but that being killed neare unto it, ſacrifice might bee offered thereupon, and therefore they ſay it was the Altar, which hee is ſaid to have built, v. 35. but all others underſtand it as before, Lyra, Hugo Card. Pellican, Borrh. P. Mart. Joſephus. and Joſephus ſaith, hee built an Altar beſides this ſtone; and Peter Martyr, that in compelling the people to come to one ſtone, although hee made a ſhew of piety, yet hee added ſtill more trouble to the people, they being now 10000, as Joſephus hath it, to cauſe them all to come to one ſtone to kill before they could eate, which could not bee done but in a long time, and to the increaſe of their miſery, being already neare famiſht through abſtinence.

V. 35. Lyra. Touching the Altar which hee built, it is ſaid to bee the firſt that hee built unto the Lord, for as Lyra hath it, although hee offered ſacrifice before, when hee was reproved by Samuel, yet it was not upon any Altar which hee built, but upon one ſet up there before; now ſeeing that ſacrifice was not accepted, he made a new Altar to offer a ſacrifice of praiſe for this victory thereupon, but indeed hee was now ſo farre from the other, which was in Gilgal, and hee at this time in Aialon, that hee could not uſe it. Hugo Cardin. Hugo ſaith, that hee built it to ſacrifice for the ſinne of the people upon it, for that they had eaten fleſh with the blood. Hieronym. Jerome following the Hebr. traditions, thinketh, that he had built Altars before, but becauſe hee built now in obedience, then in hypocriſie, this is ſaid to bee the firſt. Oſiander. Oſiander ſaith, that this Altar was not ſet up for ſacrifice, but for a monument of the victory. Joſephus, that ſacrifices were offered upon it. It ſeemeth plaine to mee that hee never built any Altar before, which is here taxed as a neglect of piety in him, in that other great perſons, who were godly, upon any favour received, have built Altars to God to ſhew their thankfulneſſe, as Samuel, Jephthah, Gedeon, &c. but Saul had obtained a victory before againſt the Ammonites, and yet built none till now: And for the uſe of this Altar, I hold with Joſephus, and Lyra, and others, that it was for ſacrifice, and that of praiſe, as had been the uſe of Altars formerly ſet up by other godly Commanders. When any thing hath been ſet up for a monument, it hath been a ſtone or Altar, having a name given it implying ſo much, as the ſtone called Eben Ezer, ſet up by Samuel. Whereas it may ſeeme unlawfull for Saul to ſet up an Altar for ſacrifice, which might not bee done in every place, but onely in the place which the Lord ſhould chooſe, except it were done by a Prophet, or ſome man having extraordinary direction from God: It is anſwered, that it was in the preſence of the Ark, which was there at that time, and therefore juſtifiable.

V.36. Saul having refreſhed himſelfe moveth the people to goe downe the ſame night againſt the Philiſtims, but being adviſed by the Prieſt he firſt enquireth of the Lord, whether he ſhould goe and prevaile, and no anſwer being made, he calleth them together to enquire out the ſinner, for whoſe ſake God denyed to give any anſwer, vowing, that he ſhould dye for it, if it were his ſonne Jonathan: whereby it appeareth, that he thought this to be the ſinne in that they had ſome of them eaten contrary to the oath. In calling the people together it is ſaid, draw yee neere together all the chiefe of the people, Hebr. and Vulg. Lat. all the Corners of the people, Gloſſa Ordin. and thus, ſaith the ordinary Gloſſe, are Princes called, becauſe as by the corners the walls are held together, ſo by Princes the people in Unity, Hugo Cardin. and as Hugo hath it, becauſe the corner ſtones of a wall are the beſt, as Princes ought alſo to be; thus therefore they are called alſo Zephan. 1. and Eſa. 19.

For

V. 39. For Sauls ſwearing, that he ſhould dye whoſoever had committed this ſinne, this was both an unjuſt oath, becauſe he knew not whether the ſinne were of that nature, that it might be puniſhed with death, and a fooliſh oath, becauſe now every one for feare would conceale himſelfe, as P. Martyr noteth. Peter Martyr V. 40, 41. Then he divideth himſelfe and Jonathan from the people, and caſteth lots to finde out the offender, praying God to give a perfect lot, Hebr: give perfection, the Vulg. Lat. give judgement, Junius and Oſiand. give him that is innocent, obſerving that when Jonathan was taken, it fell out according to this his deſire, but the Chald. better, a perfect lot, and ſo our tranſlation. Of lots ſee Numb. 33. 54. Now for ſo much as God heard Saul and gave a perfect lot, for firſt he and Jonathan, then Jonathan was taken, Qu. a queſtion ariſeth, whether Saul prayed in faith? 2. Whether Jonathan ſinned in eating honey, becauſe he was taken? 3. Whether Saul ſinned not as much or more then he? P. Martyr. To the firſt Peter Martyr anſwereth well, God directed the lots aright, not ſo much becauſe Saul prayed ſo, but for his owne Glory, ſeeing he profeſſeth to be the diſpoſer of lots. Wherefore when the Mariners in the Ship with Jonah, who were Heathen, caſt lots, the offender was hereby rightly found out. Borrhaus. Iunius Oſiand. To the ſecond ſome anſwer, that Jonathan ſinned not in eating, becauſe he knew not of the oath, yet the lots were ſo directed, that he was found out, that his innocency, when he was heard to ſpeake, might appeare, as I have already ſhewed upon v. 24. Willet. But Willet contrariwiſe will have Jonathan ſomewhat faulty for breaking the oath, becauſe ignorance, although it excuſeth à tanto, yet it excuſeth not à toto. But this is only in caſe, that a man is bound to take notice of the thing, wherein it is tranſgreſſed, as I cannot ſee, how Jonathan was, except order had beene taken for the notifying of it to every one, as well abſent as preſent. Jonathan therefore was taken, and God denyed to make anſwer, till this ſinne was found out, it hereby appearing that ſinne was committed, not that he might be convinced of doing evill, and ſo ſuffer for it, for God provided for his deliverance by the people, but that Sauls raſhneſſe and ſinne in adjuring all the Hoaſt might thus be checked, as he was well worthy. For although he pretended piety in that adjuration, and then in ſhewing to be ſo unpartiall towards the tranſgreſſour, how neere unto him ſoever, yet this was in him nothing but hypocriſie, and tyranny, and folly, to the hindering of the ſlaughtering of many more of Gods Enemies at that time. And thus it is eaſily anſwered to the third, Saul ſinned moſt, yea onely, but was not taken, Peter Martyr. 1 For his credits ſake, he being King, that it might not be impaired, which conduced much to the keeping of the people in obedience. 2. Becauſe if he had beene taken, none could have done execution upon him. 3. That there might thus be a foundation laid of Military diſcipline in Armies. 4. Becauſe Jonathan was ſeene by ſome of them to breake the Oath, who knew not that he did it ignorantly, and ſo might otherwiſe have beene ſcandalized: and although he ſinned not in eating, yet his open impugning of the Kings act was worthy of ſome taxation. V. 44. Jonathan being taken and confeſſing what he had done, Saul ſweareth againe, that he ſhould ſurely die, Phariſee-like uſing more rigour for his owne Ordinance broken, then for Gods, in eating with the bloud, for that he eaſily paſſed over, and ſo doe the Papiſts count it a greater ſinne and more ſeverely puniſh it, to tranſgreſſe one of their Ordinances, then the expreſſe lawes of God.

V. 45. But the People take part with Jonathan and ſave him. For the manner, how, ſome thinke that they offered prayers and ſupplications to God for his deliverance, as Joſephus, Joſephus. ſome that they became petitioners to Saul, ſome that they ſaved him by force out of his fathers hands: for they oppoſed an oath againſt his oath, and ſo Saul ſeeing great danger of a mutiny in the Army yeildeth unto them. And this is moſt probable, becauſe no mention is made of their petitioning for his life. But in thus doing there was a foundation laid of civill Warres and Rebellion againſt the King, which could not but be a great ſin, as Chryſoſt. noteth Chryſoſt. although it fell not out ſo, for it is to be conſidered what might have happened, and not what happened on this their oppoſing of the King. And he obſerveth the artificium of the Devill in drawing the people to ſweare thus contrary to their King, for one part now muſt needs be entangled with an horrible ſinne; yea as boyes pulling at a line ſome againſt others, doe on both parts take a fall, if the Rope breaketh, ſo here was falling Peter Martyr. into ſinne on both ſides. The arguments uſed by the people, why Jonathan ſhould not dye, ſaith Peter Martyr, were but weake, 1. he had wrought ſalvation, 2. God had wrought with him, for a wicked Souldier may ſometime doe valiantly and have good ſucceſſe, and yet afterwards commit ſomewhat worthy of death. The maine reaſon then is omitted, he deſerved thus well, and for that wherein he faulted, he did it ignorantly, and therefore was not worthy to dye.

V. 46. So Saul purſued the Philiſtims no farther at that time, and they V. 47. went to their place, v. 47. from hence to the end of the chapter, the warres and other memorable things touching Saul are ſet forth moſt compendiouſly, that he might haſten to the hiſtory of David. Saul tooke the Kingdome of Iſrael and fought againſt all his Enemies on every ſide &c. Junius readeth it, Saul had his Kingdome being received, the Vulg. Lat. he had his Kingdome confirmed. But the Hebrew beſt, he tooke it, that is, having heard by Samuel, that his Kingdome ſhould not ſtand ch. 13. 14. he ſtrengthened himſelfe by gathering forces unto him, as v. 25. that none might be able to take it from him, to which Iunius. effect Junius in 1 Sam. 13. 1. Neither did he want ſucceſſe in all the warres which he made againſt the Ammonites, Moabites, the King of Zobah and the Philiſtims, for it is ſaid, that whitherſoever he turned, he vexed them. Of the Zobeans ſee Oſiander. 2 Sam. 8. Although he were wicked and rejected of God, yet for his people Iſraels ſake God proſpered him in fighting againſt their Enemies, for now Samuel yet living, they were kept in obedience to God, wherefore he would not forſake them. The word ירשיע in the Vulg. Lat. is ſuperabat, Peter Martyr in Peter Martyr, viriliter egit, in Junius, inquietabat eos, the word doth properly ſignifie he condemned them for wicked, or he handled them as wicked men, as they were, becauſe they were enemies to Gods People, and greatly infeſted them. Lyra will have the Hebrew word to ſignifie he did wickedly, a demonſtration whereof is made ch. 15. V. 48. And he gathered an Hoaſt and ſmote the Amalekites &c. This is ſpoaken by anticipation, that his valiant geſts might all be ſummed up together, and this in particular is left to be declared more at large ch. 15. Schol. Hiſtor. yet Comeſtor ſaith happily he ſmote them firſt, before that he utterly deſtroyed them V. 49. at the commandement of the Lord. v. 49. His ſonnes and daughters are mentioned, P. Martyr amongſt whom Iſhboſheth is not named, becauſe happily he was yet very young, or of no valour. But becauſe he is ſaid to be 40 yeares old at the death of his father, 2 Sam. 2. 10. he was not omitted for want of age, but for Junius. want of worth. That of Junius is not ſo probable, that Sauls ſonnes onely are propounded to be mentioned here, which fell with him in his laſt fight againſt the Philiſtims, for why then is mention made alſo of his daughters?

V. 50. His wife is ſaid to have beene Ahinoam, Abner the ſonne of Ner his Captaine, Schol. Hiſtor. &c. 1 Chron. 8. 33. Ner is alſo ſaid to bee father of Kiſh, Sauls father, but this, ſaith Comeſtor, is ſpoken for his age, and becauſe he brought him up.

CHAP. XV.

V. 1. HEre Saul is ſent by Samuel againſt Amalek, being charged to deſtroy them all, and all their cattle, ſparing none, becauſe they had dealt ſo wickedly with the Hebrews in the wilderneſſe, Exod. 17. 8. Comeſtor following R. Solomon ſaith hereupon, that hee was charged to deſtroy the Beaſts, becauſe many amongſt the Amalekites had the faculty of transforming themſelves into Beaſts by witchcraft, leſt in thoſe ſhapes they ſhould eſcape. Lyra. But Lyra well rejecteth this, becauſe this generall deſtruction of all things tended to ſhew the greateſt indignation againſt ſo wicked a nation, that might bee, that the memory thereof might be quite raſed out. And Amalek was not ſerved thus alone but others had alſo the in like deteſtation, as Numb. 24. the

Peter Martyr.

Note.

Lord ſaith, I remember what Amalek did, this is ſpoken, as Peter Martyr hath it, not that God doth properly remember or forget, but according to the manner of men, becauſe by not doing any thing yet againſt Amalek in 400. yeares, hee might ſeeme to have forgotten their injuries done to his people, but now taking order for revenge upon them, hee ſeemed to remember them. Whence note, that judgements againſt the wicked may long bee deferred, but at length they ſhall come. The particulars to bee deſtroyed are enumerated, that S*aul* might be without al colour of excuſe, men, women and children, ſheep and oxen, &c. If this ſhall ſeeme to bee cruelty, for what had the little children or beaſts done? I anſwer, if men of themſelves being carryed on with a deſire of revenge ſhould have done thus, it had beene intolerable cruelty, but authority being given from God thus to doe, it is juſtice to puniſh them not onely in themſelves, but alſo in their children and cattle. When S*amuel* came to ſend S*aul* againſt Amalek hee ſaid, thus ſaith the Lord of Hoaſts, becauſe hee hath all power, and all creatures are uſed as his Hoaſts, whenſoever hee pleaſeth, ſee Eſay 40.26.

Iunius.
P.Martyr.
Joſephus.

Note

V.4. S*aul* therefore calleth the people together, and numbreth them in Telaim 200000. footmen and 10000. men of Judah. The word Telaim ſignifying Lambes, is in the Vulgar Latin rendred, as Lambes, and the Hebrews hold, that it being the time of the paſſeover, every one brought a Lambe, which when they were numbred, the number of the men was knowne, for it was not lawfull to number them by the poll. But to leave this, as a fond conjecture, it is more probable, that Telaim is a proper name here, which Junius conjectureth to be Telem, in the tribe of Iudah, ſpoken of Ioſh. 15. 24. as lambes, it cannot bee rendred, becauſe ב is prefixed ſignifying in, and not כ ſignifying as. Joſephus ſaith, that he numbred them in Gilgal, but hee erreth manifeſtly in the number, for he hath but 40000. of Iſrael, and 30000. of Judah. Whereas Judah affordeth a leſſe number then any other tribe and yet was the greateſt, 2 Sam. 24. it was becauſe it lay upon the Philiſtims coſt, and ſo could ſpare no more. V.6. Having this great Army he ſendeth to the Kenites to goe away, or to deſcend from the Amalekites, that they might bee out of danger; and he biddeth them deſcend, becauſe they dwelt upon hils and rockes, Numb. 24.21. Theſe were the people, of whom came Hobab the father in law of Moſes, Iudg. 1. 16. and they dwelt now on the ſouth of Iudah, neare unto Amalek, and partly amongſt them. Now becauſe the people of Iſrael had received kindeneſſe from one of them in the wilderneſſe, this is here long after requited, as the Amalekites are appointed to deſtruction for their unkindeneſſe, and cruelty, ſo the benefits done to Gods people ſhall not goe unrewarded. But becauſe they are required to depart from amongſt the Amalekites, that they might be ſpared, hereby was ſhewed, that who ſo would not partake with the wicked in their judgments, muſt ſeparate from them, and not bee linked in ſociety with them, as 2 Cor. 6.17.

Iunius.

1 Sam.27.8.
Ch.30.1.

Ioſephus.

V.7. And Saul ſmote Amalek from Havilah to Shur right over againſt Egypt, that is, a Countrey of Arabia to the uttermoſt bound of Arabia towards Egypt, whereby ſaith Junius, is not meant the whole Countrey of the Amalekites, but ſo many of them, as came into the place here deſcribed againſt S*aul*: for if all the Amalekites had now beene deſtroyed, how could they have after this invaded Ziklag, and beene purſued and ſlaine by David? thus hee, but if S*aul* had ſlaine onely thoſe, that came out againſt him, he ſhould not have fulfilled Gods command, which was not onely to deſtroy the men, but alſo the women and children, for which hee muſt needs enter into their Cities. Wherefore Joſephus better, he went from Towne to Towne killing and ſlaying all that hee could meet withall from Peluſium to the Red-ſea. And whereas the Amalekites are againe ſpoken of after this, Ch. 27. 8. and 30. 1. whereby it ſhould ſeeme, that they were not all rooted out at this time, it may bee thought, that ſome fled away into other parts, and ſome hid themſelves and ſo eſcaped, or men of other countreys ſeeing Amalek now to lye waſte having ſome Amalekites amongſt them came and inhabited there, being from the place where they lived called Amalekites.

And

V.8. And he tooke Agag their King alive. This was the common name of the Kings of Amalek, as Pharaoh of the Kings of Ægypt. Saul, ſaith Joſephus, was taken with the beauty of Agag, and therefore ſpared him; but other Hebrewes, that he might ſhew him his hidden treaſure, and it is moſt probable, that he was Joſephus. led by covetouſneſſe to do this againſt Gods command, as to ſpare the beſt and fatteſt of the Cattle, and every good thing, v. 9. This ſinne of Saul in ſparing Agag, is thus aggravated by Joſephus, when God had ſent him to deſtroy the wicked Amalekites and had given him the Victory, he fell into this foule fault to ſpare the head and chiefe of all that wicked people, who ought chiefly to have beene cut off, and therefore was juſtly put from his Kingdome. Yet Pellican. Pellican will not have Saul to have ſinned herein, becauſe he is not charged with this, as a ſinne, but with ſparing the Cattle, and happily he ſaved Agag alive to do execution upon him before all Iſrael, thus he: but Saul is plainely noted to have ſinned herein, becauſe he did contrary to Gods command, and Samuels
V.9. ſlaying of Agag, ſhewed, that Saul had no meaning to kill him. v.9. The beſt of the ſheepe, and of the oxen, and the fatlings and lambes, &c. for fatlings and lambs the Vulg. Lat. hath garments and rammes, Junius, the ſecundaries and leaders of the ſheepe, but the word משנים here uſed ſignifieth the double, that is, thoſe that were double in fat and fleſh to the reſt, wherefore this word is well rendred the fat, and happily, as Pagninus hath it, משנים is put for שמנים by a Metatheſis, which ſignifieth fat, and the next word כרים ſignifieth lambes as well as V.11. rammes. v. 11. The wickedneſſe of Saul is ſoone revealed by the Lord unto Lyra. Samuel, who ſaid unto him, it repenteth me that I have made Saul King, &c. In him that repenteth, ſaith Lyra, there is mutability, but there is none in God, he is therefore ſaid to repent, becauſe he did like man repenting, deſtroy-ing that which hee had made, in depoſing him from the Kingdome, whom he had advanced to it, for v. 29. God is ſaid not to be like unto man, that he ſhould repent. All the mutability then was in Saul; and Gods decree, which was from the beginning, that Saul ſhould be put from his Kingdome, re-Auguſt. mained immutable, wherefore Saint Auguſtine ſaith well, penitudo dei eſt mutandorum immutabilis ratio.

V.12. And when Samuel roſe early to meet Saul, it was told him, Saul came to Carmel, and he ſet him up a place, and is gone about, and paſſed on to Gilgal. For theſe words, he ſet him up a place, the Vulg. Lat. hath erexiſſet ſibi fornicem triumphalem, expound-Lyra. ed by Lyra, he ſet up a triumphal arch of Palmes and Olive branches in token of the Victory, which he did in a boaſting manner through vaine-glory, thus aggravating his ſinne, in that he did not give all the praiſe to God. Hierome Hieron. de ſaith that the Hebrewes, when they had gotten a great Victory, uſed to ſet up a Hebr. qu. triumphant arch of Myrtles, Palmes, and Olives, and this ſaith Hugo, was called Hugo Cardin. fornix from fornicor to commit fornication, becauſe it was erected upon a Wall arched, under which of old, whores were proſtituted. The Hebrew word is Iunius. יד an hand, he made him an hand, which Junius expoundeth of a ſtation, in which he reſted with his Army a while; Kimhi and the Chaldeans underſtand it Peter Martyr. of a place, where he divided the ſpoiles, and ſome, ſaith Peter Martyr, of an Altar, which Altar they thinke is againe ſpoken of, when Elijah is ſaid to have 1 King. 18. repaired the Altar in Carmel. To me that of Hierom ſeemeth beſt, he ſet up ſome monument of his Victory, and ſo putting his men in order, he led them along in a triumphant manner downe to Gilgal, to make the greater ſhew, for by hand power or forces may be underſtood, Numb. 11.23. One deſcribing the H. Bunting Pa- way that Saul went about this expedition, ſaith, that from Gibeah to the Ama-triar. travailes. lekites Country was 160 miles, from Peluſium to the Red-ſea, the whole Country ſubdued by him 92 miles, and from thence backe to Carmel 140 miles, from Carmel to Gilgal 32 miles.

When Samuel came to Saul, he firſt ſaid, that he had done Gods commande-V.13, 14, 15. ment, but Samuel diſproving him by the bleating of the Sheep, and lowing of the Oxen, which were kept alive, he excuſeth it, by ſaying that the People pre-ſerved theſe for ſacrifice. Unto his ſinne of doing againſt the word of God, Saul here addeth divers other ſinnes, as 1. boaſting of his obedience, 2. laying the fault upon the people, and clearing himſelfe, 3. hypocriſie, in that when he ſpared the Amalekites beſt things out of covetouſneſſe, he pretended piety, 4. his juſtifying of himſelfe againe v. 20. 5. in that when he confeſſed his ſinne, he did it feignedly, ſtill extenuating it by his fearing of the people, v. 24. 6. by vaineglory, in that he would needes have Samuel to honour him with his preſence (when he worſhipped,) before the Elders of Iſrael. V. 16,17, 18,19. When Saul had ſpoken, Samuel telleth him of his great ſinne, and what the Lord had ſaid unto him the night before, firſt recounting the wonderfull great favour done by God unto him to raiſe him from ſo meane an eſtate to that royall dignity, thus aggravating his ſinne, in that being ſo engaged to the Lord he would be moved by the ſpoile to doe contrary to the ſtraight charge which he had given him.

V. 20. Then Saul juſtifyed himſelfe againe, ſaying, that he had gone the way which God appointed, and had deſtroyed the Amalekites, onely he brought Agag alive with him, if it ſhould ſeeme ſo good unto him, to be ſlaine there before all Iſrael, and for the Sheep and Oxen, and other good things of Amalek, the people ſpared them for ſacrifice, not unto any ſtrange Gods, but to the Lord his God in Gilgal: which he ſpake to inſinuate the more into Samuel, thinking, that this would be pleaſing unto him, if after ſo great a Victory obtained, he provided, as piety required, ſome Euchariſticall ſacrifices to be made unto the Lord.

V. 22,23. Samuel replyeth, that obedience is better then ſacrifice, and that Rebellion is as the ſinne of witchcraft, and as Idolatry, and becauſe he had rejected the word of the Lord, he telleth him, that God had rejected him from being King. Sauls ſinne in diſobeying the expreſſe command of God, is likened unto witchcraft and Idolatry, becauſe there is the ſame fountaine Infidelity, and he that feareth not to tranſgreſſe the knowne will of God, doth in effect deny him to be God, as Witches and Idolaters doe, and he maketh himſelfe wiſer then God, as if he could finde out a better way then God hath preſcribed, ſaith Vatablus, wherefore Saul ſinning ſo heinouſly was well worthy to be put downe from reigning. But ſeeing Saul reigned ſtill, how was he rejected from being King? Anſ. He was put from his Kingdome in his poſterity, ſeeing none of them reigned after him, but a King was ſet up of another Tribe and Family.

Pellican.

Vatablus.

V. 24. Then Saul ſaid, I have ſinned, and tranſgreſſed the Commandement of the Lord and thy word, becauſe I feared the people &c. That this penitency of Saul was not true, but feigned, ſaith Lyra, appeareth by this, that he ſought falſely to ſhadow over his fault by laying it upon the people. The confeſſion of Saul in the firſt words was the ſame with that of David, but yet much different from it. 1. For that it was long before this confeſſion could be wrung from him. 2. He confeſſed not being moved out of conſcience of any offence committed againſt God, but for feare of loſing his Kingdome. 3. He extenuated his ſinne by making the people moſt guilty. And ſuch is the repentance of Hypocrites. 1. It is long before they repent. 2. They are not moved in conſcience, but by ſiniſter reſpects. 3. They will maintaine their credit as much, as they can, by laying the leaſt fault upon themſelves. But all ſuch penitentiaries ſhall ſpeed no better then Saul.

Lyra.

Note.

V. 25. Now therefore I pray thee pardon my ſinne, and turne againe with me, that I may worſhip the Lord. The word here rendred, pardon, is שא comming of נשא to beare, to take away, or to pardon, the Vulg. Lat. therefore rendreth it porta, beare, which is by Hugo expounded, either pacify Gods wrath for my ſinnes by praying unto him, for ſo Levit. 10. the word beare is uſed, where it is ſaid, that Aarons ſonnes ſhould beare the iniquities of the people, or to beare ſinne is to beare the puniſhments due to ſinne, as 1 Pet. 2.24. or to take it away by prayer, as Hoſ. 4.8. This laſt is altogether miſalledged, neither hath the ſecond any place here, but onely the firſt, for no man can beare the puniſhments due to the ſinne of another, but Chriſt onely: but by praying for him he may obtaine remiſſion, as James 5.16. and if the word beare be thus taken, it is all one to expound it, beare or pardon, the meaning being, procure me pardon by turning and praying with me, and for me to the Lord. V. 26. Samuel being entreated refuſeth to returne with him at the firſt, but afterwards being againe importuned, hee returneth, Lyra. not hereby falſifying his word, as Lyra noteth, and others; but as Chriſt ſometime Oſiander. ſaid, I will not goe up to this feaſt, and yet afterwards hee went, for hee meant, hee would not then goe up; ſo Samuel would not at the firſt returne, but afterwards being againe urged, he returned, not to pray God to take Saul's ſinne ſo away, as that hee might bee againe eſtabliſhed in the Kingdome, but both to doe him honour before the people, that hee might not fall into contempt whilſt hee lived, which would have been dangerous to the State; and to aſſiſt him in his worſhipping, which was his praying, that his ſinne might bee ſo pardoned, that hee might not come into everlaſting condemnation Oſiander. therefore. Some thinke that hee returned, that being preſent whilſt Saul worſhipped, hee might onely doe him ſome civill honour in publike, and that hee Ioſeph. lib. 6. prayed not with him. But Joſephus is plaine for the contrary, that hee worſhipped Antiq. cap. 7. with Saul; and Pellican thinketh, that hee aſſiſted him according to Pellican. the will of God, as his propheticall office required. V. 27. Samuel then turning

V. 27. to goe away from Saul, hee tooke hold of his garment to ſtay him, and
V. 28. it rent; then ſaid Samuel, The Lord hath rent the kingdome from thee this Lyra. day, &c. Here, ſaith Lyra, ſome Hebrews have delivered, that Samuel gave Saul a ſigne who ſhould reigne after him, viz. hee that ſhould afterwards cut off the lap of his garment; wherefore when David had done this, Saul ſaid, I know ſurely that thou ſhalt reigne, Chap. 24. but this is uncertaine. Whereas Hugo Cardin. Samuel ſaid, This day is thy kingdome rent from thee; Hugo moveth a queſtion, how that could bee, ſeeing Saul was not then put from the kingdome, but reigned divers yeares after, and hee anſwereth, that now hee deſerved to have the Peter Martyr. kingdome rent from him: but Peter Martyr better, the decree is now made never to bee altered againe, of rending the kingdome from thee, before it was threatened that it ſhould not goe to his poſterity, but now that hee ſhould bee turned out of it, by being cut off before his time came to dye naturally.

V. 9. For the ſtrength of Iſrael will not lye nor repent, for hee is not man that he ſhould repent. For ſtrength, Hebr. is נצח, in the Vulg. Latine rendred triumphator; by Junius, the eternity, becauſe it was more apt to ſet forth God in this caſe by his eternity, then by his power, ſeeing hee now ſpake of his unalterable decree for ever. But the word moſt properly ſignifieth ſtrength, fortitude, or power, and it agreed very well in this caſe to call God ſtrength, becauſe by his power Saul ſhould now bee put downe, and another ſet up, although hee ſhould ſeeke to prevent it with all his power; and his power and ſtrength to hold his reſolution againſt all prayers and entreaties, is hereby alſo ſet forth.
Peter Martyr. But of what is it meant that hee would not repent? Kimhi, ſaith Martyr, underſtandeth it of David, his purpoſe of removing the kingdome to him, and eſtabliſhing it in his ſeed ſhall never bee altered; but it is beſt underſtood both of the rejection of Saul and his ſeed, and the ſetting up and eſtabliſhing of David, becauſe he ſpake before of both.

V. 30. Here Saul confeſſeth his ſinne againe, and deſireth Samuel to honour him by returning with him, before the Elders of Iſrael, whereunto hee yeeldeth; ſeeing Lyra. hee was yet King, ſaith Lyra, hee gave him honour accordingly by going with him to pray; but there was alſo another cauſe of his returning with him, viz. to ſlay Agag: as here followeth.

V. 32. And Agag came forth delicately, and ſaid, Surely the bitterneſſe of death is paſt.
In the Vulg. Latine it is, Moſt fat Agag came forth trembling, and he ſaid, Doth bitter death thus ſeparate? Peter Martyr, verily the bitterneſſe of death cometh, the Hebr. is, Agag came forth with pleaſures or delights, and ſaid, Verily the bitterneſſe of death is removed, ſo alſo Junius, hee would ſeeme to bee ſo valiant, as to contemne death, or as ſome thinke, ſeeing Samuel, hee hoped for mercy, which is the more probable, becauſe the word uſed is סר receſſit, it gone.

V. 33. And Samuel ſaid, As thy ſword hath made other women childleſſe, &c. Hereby it is not meant, ſay the Hebrews, that Agag whilſt hee was King, had ſlaine many of the Hebrews by invading them, but that the King of Amalek had done ſo,
and

and thus made other women childleſſe when hee fought againſt Iſrael in the wilderneſſe, Exod. 17. ſo Lyra: but I ſee no reaſon why it ſhould not bee underſtood properly of this King, ſeeing the Amalekites were a warlike Nation, and uſed to invade other Countreys, as appeareth, 1 Sam. 30. Now his mother, Samuel telleth him, ſhould likewiſe bee made childleſſe, becauſe her other children were ſlaine in this warre, if ſhee had any more, and hee the onely ſurviver ſhould now bee put to death; And Samuel hewed Agag in pieces, &c. This, Joſephus ſaith, hee did by the miniſtry of others; but if ſo, it would have been ſaid, that hee commanded him to bee hewed in pieces, as before to bee brought forth; it is plaine therefore, that hee did this execution with his own hands, as being Judge, to ſupply the defect that had been in Saul, who ought to have ſlaine him before, not out of a deſire of revenge, but out of zeale to do Juſtice; ſo Pellican and Lyra. Whereas his calling might ſeem to bee againſt it, becauſe hee was a Levite and a Nazarite; it is anſwered, that hee was extraordinarily ſtirred up, as Phinees the Prieſt had been before, and Moſes a Levite, and Elijah to ſlay Baals Prophets. But this is not to bee imitated by other Miniſters about the holy things of God: for a Biſhop, ſaith Paul, muſt be no ſtriker; and in ancient Councells they are not onely forbidden doing execution, but comming to the place where malefactors were to bee put to death, or ſtanding by the rack wherewith the guilty were tortured, or ſitting in judgement where any is delivered to death. And if any Clergy-man by chance ſheddeth blood, hee is by the Canons of the Church counted irregular, and uncapable of ſacred Orders. Wherefore the Pope, that challengeth unto himſelf the right of the ſword, is plainly an uſurper, and irregular. Samuel did not onely ſlay Agag, but cut him in pieces, that his deſtruction deferred contrary to the will of God might be the more notorious; and hee is ſaid to have done it before the Lord in Gilgal, becauſe moſt probably there was an Altar there, it being anciently the place where the Tabernacle ſtood.

Joſephus.

Pellican.

Numb. 25.

1 Tim. 3.
Concil. Matiſcon. 2. c. 19.
Concil. Autiſſiodor. c. 33, 34.

In this ſlaying of Agag, Peter Martyr obſerveth the fulfilling of an old propheſie of Balaam touching Agag 400 yeares before, although ſome thinke Agag to have been the common name of the Kings of Amalek.

P. Martyr.
Numb. 24. 7.

V. 34, 35.

After this, Samuel went to Ramah, and Saul to Gibeah; And Samuel came no more to ſee Saul till the day of his death. Here a queſtion is made by Expoſitors, how this can be, ſeeing Saul propheſied after this before Samuel at Naioth in Ramah, Chap. 19. 24. But this queſtion is needleſſe, for there is no contradiction in this, he came no more at him, and this, Saul came and propheſied before Samuel; for there Saul came to Samuel, and not Samuel to him, as hee had uſed before to doe, to direct him about the affaires of the Kingdome. That is frivolous of ſome, who ſay, that theſe words, hee came not to ſee Saul till the day of his death, imply his comming to him after his death, being raiſed by the witch of Endor, for it is plainly meant, that hee never came to ſee him any more; ſo Peter Martyr, who alſo examining the reaſon of Samuels mourning for Saul, which here next followeth, and praying for him, and how God is ſaid to repent that hee made him King; anſwereth to the firſt, that although he knew that the ſentence of God againſt Saul could not bee reverſed, as the caſe then ſtood, Saul being impenitent, yet hee knew not whether God might be entreated to give him an heart to repent, and ſo it might bee reverſed; and thus he might in faith both mourne and pray for him; or although the ſentence of loſing his kingdome here, muſt needs ſtand, yet hee might obtaine ſuch grace for him, that hee might not loſe the kingdome of heaven; but hee preferreth the former. And for Gods repenting, hee following Tertullian againſt Marcion, ſaith, that in thus ſaying, no errour or crime is implyed in the Lord, but the fault of Saul is aggravated, as if he had ſaid, it was ſo hainous, that if it were poſſible for the Lord to repent, it would have repented him, that hee made him King; for to repent in God, is to change his former ſentence without any fault of the changer. But ſith it is not ſaid, that Samuel prayed for Saul, but onely mourned for him: I aſſent rather to Pellican, that hee grieved for the hardneſſe of his heart, and the miſery and violent

Peter Martyr.

Pellican.

death that hee foreſaw was to come upon him, for he was much affected with his wickedneſſe, for that neare relation that he had unto him, being his ſucceſſor, and by him ſet up.

CHAP. XVI.

V. 1.

P. Martyr.

Rom. 9.
Ezek. 9.

Cyprian de lapſis. Jacula, quibus illi feriuntur, me percutiunt, gladii ſævientium tranſeunt per viſcera mea, cum proſtratis ego quoque una proſternor.

AND the Lord ſaid to Samuel, How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, ſeeing I have rejected him? fill thine horne with oyle, &c. Becauſe Samuel is reproved for mourning for Saul, a queſtion is here moved, whether hee ſinned not in thus doing? Peter Martyr anſwereth well, that he mourned out of love to him, and to the Common-wealth, foreſeeing the miſeries to come, and therefore hee ſinned not, unleſſe after the will of God made knowne unto him, that hee ſhould mourne no more, hee had ſtill continued to mourne. For Paul mourned for the Jewes, and the godly in Jeruſalem are commended by this, that they mourned for the abominations done in Jeruſalem. Cyprian writing of thoſe that fell away in the time of perſecution, ſaith, The darts ſmite mee, wherewith they are ſmitten; the ſwords of thoſe that rage, paſſe through my bowells; I am overthrowne alſo, with them that are overthrowne; which hee ſpake by reaſon of his great ſorrow for them. Fill thine horne with oyle. It may ſeeme ſtrange, that Saul not being depoſed in his perſon, but in his poſterity, another King ſhould now bee anointed before his death. But it is anſwered, God would have David, whoſe Kingdome ſhould continue, to come unto it through many afflictions and dangers, both to teach us, that we muſt through many adverſities come to the kingdome of heaven, which endureth for ever; and that David might bee a type of Chriſt, who lived here alſo in obſcurity, and endured infinite afflictions, and then came to his kingdom, and to be moſt highly exalted, as Phil. 2. 6. Moreover, David's afflictions in this time prepared him the better to obey conſtantly the will of God in all things, as Saul did not, becauſe παθήματα, μαθήματα, ſufferings are inſtructions; It is good therefore, ſaith hee, that I have been afflicted, for hereby I am taught to keep thy commandements. And laſtly, the malice of Saul in perſecuting innocent David in this time appeared the more, to his juſt condemnation. So that when David was anointed, Saul continued lawfull King of Iſrael ſtill, becauſe although the ſentence of rejection was denounced againſt him, yet it was not executed till his death; ſo that the people were ſtill bound to obey him, and David himſelf alſo to live as a ſubject unto him, and not to ſeek his deſtruction. And God would have him anointed now, ſaith Peter Martyr, and againe afterwards, that hee might bee equall to Saul in his double anointing. And for the horue of oyle, which Samuel is bidden to take to anoint him with, whereas Saul was anointed with a viall of oyle, which was a brittle veſſell, the ſtability of David's kingdome was ſet forth hereby, as by that the fragility of Saul's kingdome, as Lyra hath it; for with this oyle, David one of the ſons of Iſhai muſt be anointed King, as here followeth.

Pſalme 119.

Lyra.

V. 2.

Borrhæus.
Peter Martyr.

And Samuel ſaid, How can I goe, for if Saul heare it, hee will kill mee, &c. This, ſaith Lyra, Samuel ſpake not out of diſtruſt, but as inquiring the manner how hee ſhould goe; ſo likewiſe Borrhæus, hee inquired how hee might goe and bee out of this danger; but Peter Martyr holdeth it to have been an infirmity in him, although hee had been at other times ſo courageous, for even the beſt of Gods ſervants have their infirmities, as Abraham alſo feared killing, and Moſes. But ſeeing Samuel may bee excuſed in ſaying thus, as the Virgin Mary afterwards in ſaying, how can this be, that ſhee might bee better inſturcted in the manner; I aſſent rather to Lyra, for Samuel was now old, and had ſuch experience of Gods ſingular favour towards him, that he could not be ſo affraid. Solon oppoſing himſelf againſt Piſiſtratus the Tyrant, was asked how hee durſt doe ſo, and anſwered, becauſe he was old, and ſo could not live long, and therefore he feared not to die, much leſſe did Samuel.

Iunius.

The Lord then bade him take a bullock, and ſay, I am come to offer ſacrifice: for theſe words, to offer a ſacrifice, Junius hath it, to celebrate a feaſt, yeelding

hereof

Oſiander. Pellican. Qu. Lyra.

hereof theſe reaſons: 1 Becauſe ſacrifices might not bee offered but before the Arke, or in ſome high place. 2 In a publike place, and not in a private houſe, whereas this was done in the houſe of Iſhai. 3 Becauſe at ſacrifices none but Prieſts and Miniſters were preſent, but hee is bidden to call Iſhai to this. Willet anſwereth to all theſe: 1 That Samuel was a Prophet, and therefore at Gods appointment might ſacrifice in any place. 2 It is not neceſſary to underſtand it to have been done at Iſhai his houſe. 3 Of a ſacrifice of peace, a great part was to be ſpent in feaſting, and therefore the Lords bidding of him to call Iſhai to the ſacrifice, is to bee underſtood of the feaſt after made of the parts of the bullock remaining, as both the Chaldee expoundeth, and Joſephus explaineth it. And Oſiander noteth, that the words imply a religious act, and not a feaſt, becauſe hee ſaith, to the Lord, and in that hee biddeth them to ſanctifie themſelves, and carryeth a bullock with him; and becauſe the Prophet uſed not to goe about any weighty affaire of the kingdome, but firſt beginning with ſacrifice, as alſo when he firſt met Saul to anoint him for King, ſo Pellican. Touching the diſſimulation here preſcribed, a queſtion is made, how it may bee juſtified, in that the intent of his going being to anoint a King, hee contrarywiſe ſaith, that hee came to ſacrifice? It is commonly anſwered, that to ſacrifice was one end of his going, before hee went about the other; wherefore hee might truly ſay ſo, and conceale the other end: for there being two ends of his comming, one to bee revealed, the other to bee concealed, as Lyra hath it, hee declared that which was to bee revealed, but concealeth the other, as prudence required, ſo likewiſe Pellican: and thus Jeremiah being asked what communication the King had with him, declareth ſome part, and concealeth the other, Jer. 38. 27. Moreover Gods directing him thus to doe, freeth him from all fault or blame.

Peter Martyr. Pellican. Ly Hugo Cardin. Peter Martyr. Gloſſa Ordin. Joſephus.

V. 4, 5. Samuel having received inſtructions from the Lord, commeth to Bethlehem, and the Elders of the City hearing of it, were afraid, and went to meet him, and asked, whether his comming were peaceable. Hee being an old man, ſaith Peter Martyr, and now not uſing to travaile about, they feared, that either ſome great ſin had beene committed in the City, which he came to expiate, or that he fled from Saul now inraged againſt him becauſe he had boldly reproved him, and threatened him with the loſſe of his Kingdom and the tranſlating of it to another man. Lyra addeth, that they feared becauſe he uſed not in times paſt to come thither, and becauſe hee came ſo ſolitarily. Pellican, that hee came at an extraordinary and unwonted ſeaſon. Then Samuel ſaid, that hee came to doe ſacrifice to the Lord, and bade them ſanctifie themſelves and come to the ſacrifice, and he ſanctified Iſhai and his ſonnes. This ſanctifying, ſaith Lyra, was by the water of expiation, or by abſtaining from their wives. Hugo Cardin and Martyr, by waſhing their clothes and bodies, and abſtaining from their wives, as Exod. 19. all were commanded to doe. For to cleanſe them from any uncleanneſſe they were to waſh with water in token of repentance and faith in the blood of Chriſt, which cleanſeth from all ſinne, and ſo they were cleanſed and accepted for holy in the ſight of God, as wee now being once baptized, without iterating this waſhing any more. For Samuel's ſanctifying of Iſhai and his ſons, Hug. ſaith, he did it by ſprinkling them with the water of expiation, the Ord. Gloſſe, by cauſing them to waſh themſelves: but ſo he cauſed the Elders to do, therefore ſomewhat more is here implyed, viz. that he was an Agent in ſanctifying them, and that moſt probably by ſprinkling them with holy water. The ſacrifice to which he called them, was the feaſt made out of that part of it, which remained. Joſephus maketh mention of none, but Iſhai and his ſons called to the feaſt; R. David Kimbi ſaith, that ſome of the Elders of the City were preſent alſo, and this ſeemeth moſt probable by the Text, but he ſaith, that when the ſons of Iſhai came before Samuel, hee whiſpered ſecretly in the eares of Iſhai that which hee ſpake, ſo that none of Davids brethren knew what was ſaid.

V. 6. The ſeven ſonnes of Iſhai being cauſed to come before Samuel, hee firſt looked upon Eliab, the eldeſt, ſuppoſing him to be the man whom the Lord had choſen to bee King, but hee was bidden not to looke at his beauty or the height of his ſtature, &c. Samuel remembring that Saul, whom God had choſen before, was indued with theſe outward gifts, ſeeing they alſo availe much in a Captaine; when hee ſaw Eliab indued with theſe, hee thought verily that God would have him anointed. For the phraſe which hee uſed, verily the Lords anointed is before him, this by Kimbi is expounded of his pleaſing the Lord, by ſome, ſaith Martyr, it is expounded interrogatively, as by the Vulgar Latin, is hee before the Lord? that is, although hee bee not knowne yet unto men: Iunius. Some referre it to the ſacrifice, but Junius beſt, this man is verily choſen by the Lord to bee anointed, or becauſe when men appeared about ſacrificing they were commonly ſaid to bee before the Lord, Samuel ſpake this of Eliab, who was called to the ſacrifice, by the name of the Lords anointed. But God checked this his thought, ſaying, I have rejected him, for God ſeeth not as man ſeeth, for man looketh to the outward appearance, but God ſeeth into the heart. R. Solomon R. Solomon ſaith, that Eliab was a proud and angry man, as appeared alſo afterwards, when hee gave ſuch a checke to David. Into the hidden conditions of this man Samuel could not ſee, becauſe hee could not ſee into his heart, but God ſaw them, wherefore hee refuſed him, but Samuel led by his externall forme judged him to bee the man, whom hee ſhould anoint. And this is the weakeneſſe even of the beſt men, they know not by the outward appearance at the firſt Note. ſight, who is fit to bee a Ruler and who not, and therefore no man ought raſhly to paſſe his ſentence upon any, but in every time of want deſire of God a Ruler, whoſe heart he ſeeth to be upright. Samuel had found before by experience in Saul that there was deceit in the outward appearance, and yet it is ſtrange to ſee, how ready hee is to erre againe in the ſame kinde. Wherefore wee had neede to be warned of it, not to reſpect outward lineaments and parts ſo much, but inward vertue in the choice of any to any rule or office, as Iethro his counſell was to Moſes, Exod. 18. Qu. But are not all hearts corrupt and ſinfull? how then could the Lord be moved by David's heart more then by Eliab's? Anſw. Naturally all are corrupt and abominable, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, but God had ſanctified the heart of David, and not of Eliab, wherefore hee refuſeth the one and chooſeth the other, and in ſo doing hee had not reſpect unto mans merit, but to his owne gift of grace, Rom.8.30. for whom hee hath juſtified hee hath glorified, and hee crowneth his owne gifts in us, as Auguſtine Aug. Deus in nobis ſua dona coronat. ſpeaketh. Neither was the good heart in David the cauſe of his election, but onely hereby hee was made fit for this dignity, the cauſe of his election was onely Gods good pleaſure preordaining him to the Kingdom, ſo Peter Martyr, Peter Martyr. who alſo queſtioneth why hee refuſed not Saul then, who had nothing but outward things to commend him no more then Eliab; and anſwereth, that he Qu. would have men to know the difference betweene an evill King and a good. But the true reaſon is, becauſe God was angry with the people for deſiring to Hoſ.13.11. have a King, wherefore he gave him unto them in wrath. Hee was then their King, as Samuel called him, ſaying, behold your King, but the King now to bee made was Gods King, a man after his owne heart, therefore that they might ſee, what the fruit of mens heady deſires is to repent thereof, God choſe them not one at the firſt, whoſe heart was right, but one, who as farre as they could ſee, might bee moſt fit and able to defend them from their enemies, that induring many miſeries under his his government they might learne afterwards to depend upon God, and to bee ordered in all matters of ſuch moment by him onely. Yet for the generall good of the people, becauſe they were his people, hee gave unto him many famous victories, untill that by his diſobedience and wickedneſſe, being greatly provoked hee left both him and them to the will of their enemies, as he had threatned ſaying, both yee and your King 1 Sam. 12.25. ſhall periſh.

V. 8,9,10. After Eliab Iſhai brought forth Abinadab, and Shammah and all his ſeven ſons, that were men growne, but they were all refuſed. But here a doubt ariſeth, how Iſhai could be ſaid to have ſeven ſonnes, beſides David, when as ſix onely are reckoned up, theſe three, and Nathaniel, Radad and Ozem, 1 Chron. 2.13. yet hee is ſaid expreſly, 1 Sam. 17.12. to have eight ſonnes. To reconcile this difference Junius ſaith, that Shammah his ſonne Jonadab, mentioned 2 Sam. 13.3. was probably one of the ſeven, becauſe in holy Scripture, grandchildren are alſo called ſonnes, ſo likewiſe Lyra, Comeſtor, &c. Lyra. But I approve rather of the conjecture of R. Salomon, that one of the ſonnes of Iſhai dyed without iſſue and ſo is not numbred, 1 Chron. 2.13. V. 11. Samuel then asked Iſhai, whether hee had no more ſonnes, he anſwered, there remaineth yet the younger, and hee keepeth ſheepe; Samuel ſaid, Send and fetch him, for wee will not ſit downe till hee cometh. David the youngeſt was thought leaſt fit of them all to bee made King, yet God choſe him before all the reſt, and herein hee was a type of Chriſt, who was deſpiſed of men, but honoured above all by God; and in his elder brethren, who were rejected, the Iewes were figured out, in him the Church of the Gentiles, who were a deſpiſed people and thought moſt unworthy of the Kingdome of heaven. Samuel, ſaith Lyra, would not ſit downe to meate, till David came, becauſe hee was to anoint him with oyle and faſting ſpittle, but it is more likely, that this was done for honours ſake unto David. Peter Martyr. Here Peter Martyr, inquireth how David could come in amongſt the reſt to this holy aſſembly, ſeeing hee was not ſanctified as the reſt were; and anſwereth, either that hee was there before and was ſanctified, but the ſacrifice being ended went out to looke to his ſheepe, or that hee was ſo carefull in his life, that hee had contracted no legall uncleanneſſe, or that God, who made the law of ſanctifying by waſhing before ſuch meetings, could in a caſe extraordinary diſpenſe with it; and this laſt I thinke the beſt, and yet happily hee might bee inſtantly ſanctifyed by ſprinkling with holy water.

V. 12. David being come in is ſaid to bee ruddy and of a beautifull countenance, then the Lord bade Samuel anoint him. Junius and Pellican referre this redneſſe to his haire, but Arias, and Oſiander, and our tranſlation better to his face, becauſe red haire doth not conduce unto beauty, but a mixture of red and white in the face, ſee Cant. 5.11. blacke haire is more commendable, and becauſe the ſame word is uſed to ſet forth the redneſſe of the body, Lament. 4.7. the colour of David ſhewed him to be a man of ſpirit and courage.

V. 13. V. 13. Then Samuel roſe up, and anointed him in the midſt of his brethren. Peter Martyr. Saul was anointed ſecretly, ſaith Peter Martyr, not ſo much as one man his ſervant being permitted to behold it, but David before many, becauſe Samuel was to live to confirme him King publikely, but before Davids inauguration he dyed, therefore that witneſſes might not be wanting of his anointing, this was done openly. Yet it is to be held, that none of his brethren, but Iſhai and David onely knew, whereunto he was anointed, for that had beene dangerous, whilſt there was another King living, and if they had knowne it, Eliab would not have handled him ſo harſhly afterwards. They might conjecture then that he was anointed for ſome notable end, that he might be indued with the Spirit of propheſie to make Hymnes and Pſalmes to the praiſe of God, and to make muſick thereunto, and to propheſie in Samuels ſtead, but of the Kingdome they could conjecture nothing, onely when they ſaw it come to paſſe, they could teſtifie this his anointing to it by Samuel made long before. Some thinke, that David was anointed in the ſight of his brethren, expounding theſe words in the midſt of his brethren amongſt them, hee being choſen from amongſt them all, as Kimhi: ſome, the thing being made knowne to them alſo, but they contemned it, as Oſiander, becauſe it is ſaid, 2 Sam. 5.2. God hath ſaid, &c. but this might bee publiſhed afterwards by Samuel or David. And the ſpirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward, Touching the age of David, Pellican. when hee was anointed, nothing is ſaid in holy Scripture, but Pellican gueſſeth that hee was 23, and ſo the time betwixt this anointing and that to be King over Judah, 1 Sam. 2. ſeven yeares, as the time betwixt that and his being anointed King over all Iſrael, 1 Sam. 5.7. was 7 yeares: for when hee was firſt made King over Judah, he is ſaid to have beene 30, 2 Sam. 5.6. It ſeemeth to me that hee was not neare the age of 23. but rather about 16. or 17. becauſe he was thought unfit for his age to come before Samuel amongſt his brethren, whereas if hee had beene 23. or 21. hee ſhould ſurely have beene called amongſt them at the firſt, becauſe at this age one is no youth, but a man. Moreover Saul told him after this, that he was a youth, but Goliah a man of warre, intimating his young yeares. But although he were ſo young and by men refuſed, God choſe him and ſent his ſpirit into him: that is, ſaith R. Levi, the ſpirit of Peter Martyr. felicity, but Peter Martyr, the ſpirit of fortitude, as appeared by his killing of a Beare and a Lion, and fighting againſt Goliah; the ſpirit alſo of Wiſedome, to execute the office of a King and Captaine, as was neceſſary, becauſe he had not Chap. 11.6. beene brought up ſo, as to be fit by experience; ſo likewiſe when Saul was anointed, the ſpirit of God came upon him; laſtly the ſpirit of Prophecy, for he ſet forth many Pſalmes, that were Propheticall; and the ſpirit of ſanctification, which Saul had not, but with this he was endued before his anointing, for God ſaw his heart and approved it.

V.14. But the ſpirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evill ſpirit from the Lord troubled him. Saul, although he had ſinned greatly, yet the ſpirit of wiſedome and fortitude, to make him fit to rule, was not hitherto taken from him, but it is taken away, and an evill ſpirit is ſent to trouble him. Lyra ſaith that this evill Lyra. Peter Martyr. ſpirit is ſaid to come from the Lord, becauſe by his permiſſion, but Peter Martyr better, he was not onely permitted, but ſent for the puniſhment of Saul in judgement for his ſinnes. For the manner, how this evill ſpirit troubled Joſephus. him, Joſephus ſaith, that it tortured his body at ſome times, ſo as that he ſeem- Oſiander. ed to be ſuffocated. Oſiander ſaith, it was a melancholicke fury, wherewith Borrhæus. the ſpirit troubled him at times. Borrheus referreth it to trouble in regard of Pellican. his ſinnes. Pellican to vexation, and envy ſtirred up in him by the evill ſpirit for the loſſe of his Kingdome, making him oft times phrentick and mad. And it is not unlikely, but that he was troubled all theſe wayes, and ſo his caſe was moſt miſerable, and the more becauſe he was now alſo deſtitute of that good ſpirit of God whereby he might have beene ſupported in his miſery.

V.15,16,17,18. Saul being thus vexed, is adviſed by his ſervants to ſend for one that could play upon the harpe, that ſo the evill ſpirit might be made to depart from him, and David is commended for this purpoſe unto him, as being both cunning to play, a valiant and prudent man, and that the Lord was with him. It is noted here, that Sauls ſervants in ſpeaking to him about this, ſaid, an evill ſpirit of God troubleth thee, whereupon a queſtion is made, if it were an evill ſpirit, how it could be ſaid to be of God, for whereas in our tranſlation it is from God the Vulg. Lat. hath it of God, and likewiſe the Hebr. Lyra anſwereth, even the evill ſpirits were made by God, but good at the firſt, but by their pride they made themſelves evill, wherefore they are thus called in reſpect of their Origi- Peter Martyr. nall, they are Gods creatures and ſo ſpirits of God; and Peter Martyr addeth, that they are alſo called thus, becauſe they are executioners of Gods will againſt Iſidor. the wicked. So likewiſe Iſidor ſaith, and that the threatning made againſt tranſgreſſours Deut. 28.28. was here fulfilled upon Saul. Gregor. ſaith, the ſame ſpirit is called the ſpirit of the Lord, and evill; Dei, per licentiam juſtæ poteſtatis; malus, per deſiderium injuſtæ voluntatis; therefore he is not to be feared, becauſe he can do nothing, but being permitted, for although his malignity be not from the Lord, yet he hath no power, but from the Lord. And whereas his ſervants Note. ſay, an evill ſpirit of God vexeth thee, this was not ſpoken by way of accuſing their Maſter, but piouſly according to the manner of Gods people, who in the time of any malady looked not, as the phyſitian doth, to ſecundary cauſes onely, but to God, and ſo ſhould we doe.

For their advice given unto him to ſend for David, that could play upon Lyra. the Harpe, the Hebrewes, ſaith Lyra, have a tradition, that it was Doeg who counſelled to ſend for the ſonne of Iſhai in particular, and that not out of good will unto him, but out of a grudge, which he bare againſt him even then, that being before Saul, when his phrenticke fit came upon him, he might be endangered; Junius thinketh that it was Jonathan. But to leave both theſe to the Authors thereof, muſicke is a great meanes to cheare the minde being oppreſſed with ſorrow, and Boetius ſaith, that a certaine Philoſopher by playing upon Gloſſa Ordin. the Harpe expelled the Devill out of one, ſo ſaith the Ord: Gloſſ: But Peter Mar- tyr derideth this, becauſe the Devill hath no body, and ſo cannot be affected with bodily things, yet he granteth the minde being preſſed with melancholy by reaſon of the bodies diſtemper, that worketh upon it, (for the minde followeth the temper of the body) may be cheared with muſicke, and ſo for the time much eaſed, and the minde being cheared, the paine of the body may be allayed hereby, becauſe as the body worketh upon the minde, ſo doth the minde upon the body. And Borhaus ſaith, muſicke is of wonderfull force to worke upon the affections to ſtirre them up, if it be loud and running, as is uſed in warre, or to allay them, if it be ſoft and moderate, as appeareth by the example of a phrenticke young man, whom Pythagoras by ſuch muſicke reſtored to his wits, and ſome barbarous and ſavage men have beene reduced to a civill life, by the muſicke of Terpander, Arion, and Iſmenias, Thebanes, wherefore Saul's diſtempered affections being the inſtruments of Satans working, and theſe being cheared, his troubles were mitigated. Joſephus ſaith, that David did not onely play, but ſing ſacred hymnes before Saul, and the ſound of the muſicke allayed the paſſion, the voice of the ſacred hymne did cauſe an intermiſſion of Satans worke. But it is ſaid v. 23. that when David plaid with his hand, the evill ſpirit departed from Saul, ſo that muſicke is of force to drive out evill ſpirits from the poſſeſſed, not by working immediatly upon them, but active corporeall things mediating, which diſpoſe the matter to receive an afflictive action in the bodies poſſeſſed by them, but being by corporeall meanes removed, ſuch a diſpoſition of the body may follow, as that it is not fit to receive any afflictive action of the Devill, as Lyra reaſoneth, and he bringeth in Saint Auguſtine affirming the ſame. Yet properly he denyeth, that any evill ſpirit can be driven out by corporeall meanes, unleſſe it be held with the Platoniſts, that they have aerean bodies, which they have not. To the fume of the fiſhes liver in Tobit objected, he ſaith both that it is apocryphall, and not the fume, but Tobits prayers effected that, the fume being but a ſigne. But whereas Burgenſis goeth farther, and ſaith, that by muſicall harmony the evill ſpirit may be altogether expelled, becauſe ſuch a diſpoſition ceaſing, as whereby a man is made fit to be wrought upon by the afflictive actions of the Devill, he cannot thenceforth worke upon him any more, this he ſaith is falſe, ſeeing God can ſend an evill ſpirit upon any man in judgement, whatſoever his diſpoſition is, as he did upon Saul, whom we may gather not to be any way ſo diſpoſed of himſelfe, becauſe he is commended, 1 Sam. 9. 2. as being at the firſt excellently diſpoſed. And whereas Burgenſis to prove the force of muſicke, alledgeth the example of Eliſha, to whom the ſpirit of prophecy was brought hereby, and therefore an evill ſpirit may be much more expelled hereby, he anſwereth, that this was not done by muſicke, but by the merit of the praiſe of God ſung by the muſitian, and becauſe a virtue created cannot extend it ſelfe to acts ſupernaturall. But before this he anſwereth better, by muſicke Eliſha his minde was more lifted up towards God, and taken off all other things, and ſo by Davids muſicke Sauls minde might be taken off from his paſſions, and he for the time eaſed. It is then to be held, that although Sauls paſſions were lenifyed for the time, when David played upon his harpe, which is called a departing of the evill ſpirit from him, yet the chiefe meanes of being delivered from this judgement, viz. prayer, and faſting, and true repentance being neglected, there was no perfect cure of this malady made, and therefore, howſoever David was now diſmiſſed, as having wrought the cure perfectly, as may be gathered from the Chapter following, yet the evill ſpirit vexed Saul againe ch. 18. 10. The counſell of Saul's ſervants then he being under ſuch a judgement, to ſend for a muſitian, but ſpeaking nothing of repentance and prayer, was carnall and inſufficient, and like unto it is the counſell of ſuch friends about the ſicke to ſend to the Phyſitian, the chiefe meanes, prayer and repentance, being neglected, and ſending for the Presbyter to pray for them, and if any being oppreſſed with melancholy or phrenſy, the naturall meanes onely of merry company, or phyſick be uſed, and not theſe ſpirituall. But much more are they to be condemned, that ſend in ſuch caſes to Wiſards. Saul himſelfe abhorred from doing thus, yea as bad as he was, he Borrhaus.

Joſephus.

Lyra.

Auguſt. confeſſ. 10.

2 King. 3.

Mat. 17. 21.

Note.

Junius. perſecuted ſuch evill members to the death, and therefore he ſhall riſe up in judgement againſt theſe degenerating Chriſtians and condemne them: but of this enough upon Levit. 20.6. Whereas David is commended for his valour, ſome thinke that he had ſlaine Goliah before this, and that this is ſet downe here by anticipation, becauſe when he went out againſt Goliah, Saul knew him not; but there is no neede for this to hold the Hiſtory to be diſordered, ſeeing he might grow famous for his valour, for killing the Lion and the Beare, which happily was done ſoone after his anointing, the ſpirit of God comming upon him, before that he was nominated to Saul; and if his combat with Goliah had gone before this, he ſhould not doubtleſſe have beene ſpoken ſo ſlenderly of in this place, by one onely, but all would have beene ready to ſpeake of him by name. For Saul's not knowing him after this, he might happily be ſomewhat altered in perſon and habit by that time, and ſo he might not ſo well remember him, eſpecially in that place, being ſo full of trouble: for ſome haire might now be growne upon his face, which was not before, he having beene from the court, as is ſuppoſed 18. months, and comming in ſuch apparell as he uſed to keepe ſheepe in, whereas ſtanding before the King he had uſed another habit, might eaſily make him unknowne to Saul.

V.19. When Saul ſent for David, he is deſcribed by this, that he was with the ſheep; to intimate, that although he were anointed King, yet he followed his old calling ſtill, leaving it unto God, who had choſen him, to bring it about in his good time, for he knew no meanes, how to attaine unto it. Peter Martyr. Wherefore now God beginneth to worke by moving one of Sauls ſervants to ſpeake of him to Saul, and thus he is brought to the court, and liveth there for a time, that he might get ſome experience of the Kingdome, that he might afterwards be the more fit for it, and that before he came to reigne, he might be exerciſed in his faith and patience by many dangers.

V. 20. Then Iſhai ſent David to Saul with bread, an aſſe, a bottle of wine, and a kidde &c. thus it is Hebr: in our tranſlation according to the ſenſe, an Aſſe laden with bread, a bottle of wine, &c. They that came before Kings or other great perſons, were not wont to come empty, if they deſired to be accepted by them, wherefore Jacob ſent a preſent by his ſonnes to Joſeph in Ægypt, and Iſhai here to Saul, which was no great matter, yet it ſhewed his reſpect unto him, and ſo could not but be well taken. For two things, ſaith Ariſtotle in Rhetor. make gifts acceptable, ambition and covetouſneſſe, but to the laſt ſmall gifts are not acceptable, but to the firſt they are, becauſe hereby a reſpect is ſhewed unto him, wherein the ambitious are delighted.

V. 21. David comming to Saul pleaſed him ſo well that he loved him greatly, and became his armour-bearer. Here was a good beginning, but this love was turned afterwards into hatred, ſo that felicity we ſee, ſtandeth not in the favour of Princes, wherefore let no man truſt hereunto, Note. as we are exhorted Pſalm, 146. but in God onely. This love of Saul to David was but as lightning before a terrible tempeſt of thunder, when he might ſeeme to begin to be happy, then a foundation was laid of many miſeries.

The Myſtery. Iſidor. Myſtically by the harpe, wherewith David played, we may underſtand Chriſt crucified, ſet forth by the preaching of the Goſpell, and by preaching him evill ſpirits are chaſed away; morally the ſtriking of the harpe with his hand, ſetteth forth the mortifying of the fleſh by faſting, whereunto prayer being added the evill ſpirit is expelled, according to that, this kinde goeth not out, but by faſting and prayer. Matth. 17.21. Or by David Chriſt was figured out, who by his word expelled evill ſpirits, as David by his harpe.

CHAP. XVII.

V. 1. Then the Philiſtims gathered themſelves together to battel in Shochoh, which belonged to Judah, and pitched between Shochoh and Azekah in Ephes-Dammim. Of Shochoh and Azekah, ſee Joſh. 15.32. and Shochoh is ſaid to have belonged to Judah, to diſtinguiſh it from that on the other ſide of Jordan, ſpoken of, Gen.

34. For theſe words, in Ephes-Dammim, the Vulg. Latine hath, in finibus Dommim. And Saul, with the children of Iſrael, pitched by the valley of Elah; the Vulg. Latine, in valle terebinthi, taking the word for an appellative; and Iunius, ad convallem querceti. For the places in particular to inquire into them, is not materiall, but here the battail being ſet in array on both ſides, upon two oppoſite mountaines, a valley being between, a Champion of the Philiſtims, V. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. &c.
Goliah by name, came downe into the valley, and challenged any one of all the men of Iſrael to fight with him, and he is deſcribed by his ſtature, armour, and weapons, and hee ſaid, I defie the hoſt of Iſrael this day. For the cauſe of this warre made by the Philiſtims, wee read nothing, but it may eaſily bee Peter Martyr.
conjectured, that they hearing Saul the King to bee ſo diſtracted and unfit for warre, tooke this opportunity. For theſe words, [A champion of the Philiſtims,] Hebr. are theſe איש-הבנים Iſh habenaim, a man between two, whereupon a queſtion is made, why this is ſaid of him? To this Willet anſwereth, Willet.
that moſt underſtand it between the two Armies, but this cannot bee, becauſe
the word armies is of the feminine gender, but this of the maſculine, and becauſe hee is ſaid immediately to have come out of the Philiſtims campe. Pellican, Pellican.
that hee was as big as two, but this hee alſo rejecteth, becauſe the deſcription of his bigneſs followeth in the next words. Iunius, duellator, the Sept. δυνατὸς Iunius.
a champion, or a mighty man, according to our tranſlation, and this hee approveth.
But I rather approve of the common reading, a man between them both, vir intermedius, as Peter Martyr hath it, that is, between the Iſraelites and Peter Martyr.
the Philiſtims, into the valley; and in the next words it is ſhewed, to what ſide he belonged. The Vulg. Latine rendereth it ſpurius, but upon what ground I know not, and therfore even Lyra leaving this reading, ſaith, it is Hebr. vir intermedius, Lyra.
and ſuch an one muſt needs bee fortis & audax, who being confident in his owne ſtrength, goeth out before his Army ready to fight againſt any man that ſhould come againſt him from the contrary army. Whoſe height was ſix cubits and a ſpan. A cubit is commonly held to bee a foot and halfe, but according to ſome, ſaith Lyra, two foot. But taking a cubit for a foot and half, he was higher then any other man by the third part and more; becauſe foure cubits is the ſtature of a man, but hee was ſix and a ſpan. Wherefore he was Peter Martyr.
a Giant, many of which were found in the land of Canaan, at the Iſraelites firſt comming thither, but they were ſlaine by Joſhua and his men, onely Ioſh. 11. 21, 22 ſome remained ſtill in Gaza, Gath, and Aſhdod, and accordingly it is ſaid, that Goliah was of Gath. Giants have always been noted to be moſt wicked, and contemners of God, wherefore by the Ethnicks they are called ἀντίθεοι and θεομάχοι, they are deſcribed by the Poets by ſnake-like feet, and diſtorted thighs, and Joſephus thinketh, that they were begotten of incubi devils. They are ſet forth in holy Scripture by divers names, ſometime by this name, Rephaim, taken from death, becauſe men are ready to dye for feare when they ſee them; ſometime by the name Nephalim, from falling down before them; ſometime by the name Anakim, ſignifying chaines, becauſe they went ſumptuouſly adorned; and ſometime Emim, from feare and terrour which they ſtruck into the beholders.

Hee had an helmet of braſſe upon his head. Junius, for braſſe, hath it, ſteele, V. 5.
of which helmets uſed to bee made; and Lyra ſaith, the word rendred braſſe, Iunius.
ſignifieth any kinde of mettle, and hee thinketh iron to bee meant hereby; but Lyra.
that of ſteele is rather to bee preferred. His coat was of Male, of 5000 ſhekels weight: This is caſt up by one, counting a ſhekel for halfe an ounce, to Willet.
bee 156 pound weight, and 4 ounces; his ſpeares head weighed 600 ſhekels of iron, that is, 18 pound and 3 quarters, unto which the other parts of his armour being added, could not amount together to leſſe then 200 pound weight, a great burthen for another ſtrong man to beare, yet hee could with all this goe and fight, which ſhewed his wonderfull great ſtrength, that ſeeing how Note.
eaſily hee was brought to deſtruction notwithſtanding, all men might learne not to truſt to humane ſtrength, how great ſoever it be.

And hee had greaves of braſſe upon his legs, and a target of braſſe betweene his V. 6.
ſhoulders:

ſhoulders: the Vulg. Latine hath, boots of braſſe upon his thighs, and a target of braſſe covered his ſhoulders. Junius, boſen of ſteele upon his feet. The word מצח of which מצחת here uſed commeth, doth ſignifie a forehead, it ſignifieth then any thing faſtened on before upon his legs for defence. Peter Martyr rendreth it plates of braſſe. Pagnin, either plates or boots; the other word rendred legs, properly ſignifieth feet: the meaning is, that hee was ſubſtantially armed from top to toe. For theſe words, a target of braſſe betweene his ſhoulders, which reading moſt doe follow, it ſeemeth not ſo apt, becauſe v. 7. one bearing a target or ſhield of braſſe is ſaid to goe before him. The Chald. therefore beſt rendreth it a ſpeare, and likewiſe Joſephus, bearing a ſpeare between his ſhoulders, for ſo the word כידון here uſed, is taken, Ioſh. 8. 17. Iob 41. 19. Ier. 6. 23. Whereas another word חנית is here uſed for a ſpeare, and both together, v. 45. which ſheweth, that not one and the ſame thing, but divers things are ſet forth by theſe two words, It is anſwered, that by this firſt was meant a truncheon ſpeare, which hee carryed upon his ſhoulder, and by the other a javelin, which hee had in his hand, which is the more probable, becauſe v. 45. David ſpeaketh of both theſe, and a ſword, wherewith hee ſaith Goliah came againſt him, intimating that they were none of them for defence, but all inſtruments to fight withall, ſuch as a ſhield is not. Lyra alſo ſaith, that this was no ſhield, but rather according to the Hebrew, a plate of braſſe on each ſide of his helmet, hanging over with a ſharpe end to defend the junctures of his arms upon his ſhoulders: the ſhield carryed by the armour-bearer, was delivered to him when he came to fight.

V. 8, 9. Goliah thus armed, challengeth the men of Iſrael, offering this condition, if any one of them were able to overcome him, then the Philiſtims ſhould become their ſervants, but contrariwiſe they ſhould ſerve the Philiſtims; and this challenge he came and made forty dayes together, v. 16. In challenging them, he ſaith, Am not I a Philiſtim? Vatablus, Am not I that Philiſtim? that is, who am famous for many exploits done amongſt you. Ionathas Syrus thinketh, that it was hee that had killed Eli's ſonnes, and taken the Arke, but the time doth not agree, for if hee had been a man of warre then, when Samuel was a childe, hee would now in Samuel's old age have been too old to enter into this duell. Upon this duell into which David entred, at the challenge of Goliah, a queſtion is made, whether duells bee lawfull? and it is generally anſwered, that they are not lawfull: 1 Becauſe the challenge is made out of pride and vain-glory. 2. Becauſe to enter into a duell is to tempt God, and it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God, as in the Decrees of Nicolas 1. they who follow Monomachies doe tempt God. And in the book of Decrees, it is ſaid, ſuch are lifted up with pride, and boaſt themſelves of their ſtrength. In the Lateran Councell, beſides this, three reaſons more are yeelded. 1 Champions are ſometimes hired to fight, and ſo men ſet their lives to ſale for money. 2 They fight and die in a rage and malice of one againſt another. 3 Hee that killeth having no warrant from God ſo to doe, is a murtherer. From this yet it ſeemeth, that of old a duell hath been held lawfull, and therefore to decide the queſtion ariſing between two in a matter of moment, the one accuſing, the other ſtanding upon his juſtification, a duell hath often been by Chriſtian Kings and Judges allowed, but by the Doctors of the Church condemned, becauſe the onely lawfull way, as Stephanus hath it, to judge by, is either by a voluntary confeſſion of the offender, or the teſtimony of witneſſes, for things hidden and unknowne, are to bee left unto him, who onely knoweth the hearts of men. To try men then by a duell, is to goe from the ordinary lawfull way, and to take a way unlawfull, and ſo to doe evill, and wee muſt not doe evill that good may come of it. Moreover, it may bee very unequall, hee that is worthy to bee condemned, being ſtrongeſt or moſt expert in the uſe of his weapon, and the innocent weakeſt and moſt inexpert. This then is no way of tryall to bee tolerated amongſt Chriſtians, and therefore it is now well left. And much more intolerable is the practice of thoſe, who upon any offence will challenge others to a duell in fury and malice to bee

Vatablus.
Jonathas Syrus.

Qu.

Nicol. 1. Monomachiam ſectantes tentant Deum.
Decret: part: 2. Cauſ: 2. qu c: 22.

Stephan: in cap: Conſuluiſti ii, qu. 5. Spontanea confeſſione vel teſtium approbatione delicta conceſſa ſunt veſtro regimini judicari: occulta autem & incognita illi ſunt relinquenda &c.

revenged upon them, for vengeance is mine, ſaith God, and I will repay it, therefore avenge not your ſelves. The Devill who delighteth in blood, is the inſtigator to this duell, and thus at his pleaſure taketh two at once in his net, the murtherer by his ſinne of murther, and the murthered by his ſinne of hatred, wherein hee dyed. But for this duell between David and Goliah, it was doubtleſſe by a ſingular inſtinct from God, to glorifie his power the more, and to make David the more famous, and therefore no example is to bee taken hereby.

V. 12. Now David was the ſonne of that Ephrathite of Bethlehem Judah, whoſe name was Jeſſe, who had eight ſonnes, and went for an old man in the dayes of Saul. Gen. 48. 7. Jeſſe is called an Ephrathite, becauſe Bethlehem had alſo the name of Ephrata: Of his eight ſonnes, ſee before, Chap. 16. 10. Hebr. hee was old going amongſt men, V. 13, 14. which is ſpoken to ſhew, that he went not now to the warres for his age. V. 15. But his three eldeſt ſonnes went; as for David the youngeſt, hee had returned again before this from Saul, to feed his fathers ſheep; which is ſpoken becauſe the hiſtory left David with Saul, as being entertained by him to ſerve him. Leſt any man ſhould marvaile then, how hee could now bee at home with his father to bee ſent to his brethren by him, as followeth, his diſmiſſe from Saul is here mentioned. And it is moſt probable, that Saul having now warlike employment to buſie his minde about, was not troubled with his former melancholick fits, and therefore hee ſent David home to bee a comfort to his aged father, Pellican. Joſephus. contenting himſelfe with his three other ſonnes that followed him. This ſhewed the great humility of David, in that having lived delicately at the Note. Court, hee was content to returne againe to a ſhepheards life; but thus alſo did Moſes, after 40 yeares ſpent in Pharaohs Court, hee lived a ſhepheard in the land of Madian 40 yeares. And David comming thus to fight with, and to Note. overcome Goliah, when he had not been uſed to feats of armes; the victory was the more admirable.

V. 17. The challenge of Goliah, and his defying of Gods hoſt, having continued 40 dayes, David is ſent to the hoſt to carry ſome proviſion to his brethren and their Captaine. P. Martyr. Peter Martyr condemneth Saul being of ſo ſtrong a body, and the men of valour about him, as wanting all love and zeale to God, for that they could endure to heare God blaſphemed and railed upon twice a day ſo long a time, and yet none of them would deſcend to fight in this quarrell. Note. But thus it is commonly with men, they are hot in their owne cauſes, but cold in Gods, wherefore God provided himſelfe a Champion extraordinary, even David, the moſt unlikely of them all, and by him chaſtiſed the inſolency of that proud Philiſtime.

V. 17, 18. The proviſion carryed by David, was an Ephah of parched corne, ten loaves, and ten cheeſes ſent to the Captain, and Iſhai biddeth him ſee how they did, and take their pledge. For parched corne, Lyra hath, ſodden wheat, but the word קָלִיא ſignifieth toſtum, parched; Exod. 16. an Ephah was ten homers, and an homer as much as would ſuffice a man for a day. For theſe words, ſee how thy brethren fare and take their pledge, the Vulgar Latine hath it, cum quibus ordinati ſunt, but the word is ערבתם their pledge, and ſo the word is uſed, Gen. 38. 17. ſome thinke, that the meaning may bee, if they had laid any thing to Septuag. pawne having lyen there ſo long, and their victualls being ſpent, whereby they might be inforced to pawne ſome of their apparell for food, hee ſhould redeem it: ſome, take a token, whereby thou maiſt ſafely paſſe and repaſſe in the army: Pellican. Junius. Chald. Paraphr. ſome, bring a token from them in ſigne of their welfare; the Chaldee, bring their welfare. I preferre that of Pellican, that for his more ſecure paſſing amongſt ſuch a multitude of ſouldiers with that proviſion which he carryed, hee ſhould goe firſt and bring ſome token from them, before that hee went into the Army with it, that it being brought to him that kept the carriages, when they ſhould at night come to require of him this corne and bread, they might bee delivered to them by that token, and therefore v. 22. it is ſaid, that hee left it with the keeper of the Carriages at the trench, and ran and ſaluted his brethren. For Iſhai might well conceive that his ſonnes might bee buſie in the warre, and ſo could not for the preſent take and beſtow the proviſion ſent them in their tent, wherefore he directed David in this courſe, that hee might returne with the more expedition, and not bee forced to wait their leiſure. Comeſtor ſaith, that their pledge was a bill of divorce to their wives, for the manner was, when men went to warre, to give their wives bills of divorce, that if they tarryed out three yeares they might marry againe to whom they would, becauſe they might happily be taken by their enemies and carryed away.

V.19. The place, where David came unto his brethren, is ſaid to be the valley of Elah, where the Army of Iſrael was fighting with the Philiſtims: of this valley, ſee before v. 2. by which they are ſaid to have pitched upon a mountaine, but here they were fighting in this valley, which is not to bee underſtood, as if the fight were now begun, but that they were deſcended upon ſome part of the valley ready to fight, as is ſhewed more fully, v. 20. 21. Yet Comeſtor ſaith that they had ſome skirmiſhing together every day.

V. 20, 21. V. 22, 23. V. 24, 25. V. 26, 27. David, as his father commanded him, riſeth betimes and cometh to the Army, and leaving his proviſion with a keeper, goeth to his brethren, and whilſt he was talking with them, Goliah came forth againe and ſpake as at other times, which David hearing, and ſeeing the feare that all men were in, he deſired to know what ſhould be done to him, that could kill him, ſpeaking, as if there were no cauſe, why they ſhould be ſo afraid of an uncircumciſed railer. They tell him, that Saul would give him great riches, and his daughter to wife, and make his fathers houſe free in Iſrael. For the place, to which David came, where hee left his carriage, before that hee went into the Army, it is called המעגלה, by the Vulgar Latin, Magalah, but the ſame word Ch. 26. 5. is by the ſame interpreter rendred, a tent. Vatab'us and the Chalde render it the place of tents, Arias Montanus, as our Tranſl. the trench, Iunius, plauſtrorum ambitum, becauſe bagalah ſignifieth a cart, the Sept. to the roundneſſe or compaſſe, and Ch. 26. 5. a cart: moſt aptly hereby may be underſtood the place of carts, ſet on the outſide of the Army for a defence unto it. For the rewards promiſed, they ſerved to whet on ſome to this enterprize, the making of his fathers houſe free was meant from taxes and impoſitions, ſo Oſiander, and the advancing of it to the ſtate of the Nobility, as Iunius and the Chalde, the Vulgar Latin, he will make his fathers houſe without tribute. Now David was not moved, as Chryſoſt. thinketh, and Peter Martyr, with theſe rewards, but for the glory of God and the love of his people, whom Goliah had ſo proudly defyed, becauſe when hee came before Saul, hee made no mention or pact about this reward. Whereas then hee demanded what ſhould bee done to the killer of Goliah, it is to bee held, that hee asked this, that hee might take occaſion to extenuate the exploit in him, that ſhould doe it, for there ſhould not need to have any ſuch rewards propounded, ſeeing that Philiſtims power was not ſo great, but that a meane man might overcome him, ſeeing he had railed upon the hoſt of the living God, and ſo had laid himſelfe open to Gods judgements through his blaſphemies.

Vatablus.
Chalde
Arias.
Peter Martyr.
Iunius.
Septuagint.
Oſiander.
Chalde. Iunius.
Chryſoſt. Hom. 20. ad Rom.

V. 28, 29. Eliab David's eldeſt brother hearing him ſpeake ſo, did ſharply reprove him, as being proud and arrogant, but David anſwered, What have I now done, is there not a cauſe? Comeſtor here excuſeth Eliab, ſaying that he ſpake thus, fearing, leſt David adventuring to goe againſt Goliah ſhould bee ſlaine. But his words doe plainely ſhew, that hee ſpake thus out of envy: for David had once beene at the court already and gotten himſelfe great praiſe of all about the King, which hee being his elder brother doubtleſſe greatly envyed, for that the youngeſt was ſo preferred and hee neglected, and now after that hee had beene ſent home to keepe ſheep, ſeeing him to come to the Army, and ſo buſie in inquiring about the Gyant, what ſhould be given to him, that killed him, he feared, that he would adventure to goe againſt him and ſo hee might happily come to greater preferment, and far overtop him and all the reſt of his brethren, and this made him to ſpeake ſo bitterly againſt him. And herein David was a figure of our Lord, who did nothing worthy of reproofe, as David did not,

Schol. Hiſtor.

but came at his fathers command and in love to his brethren, and yet by his brethren the Jewes was moſt bitterly ſpoken againſt, and envyed of them:
For theſe words, is there not a cauſe? Hebr. is ſtrictly rendred, as by the Vulgar Peter Martyr.
Latin, and Peter Martyr, is it not a word? that is, ſaith Comeſtor, there is nothing Schol. Hiſtor.
done, for which thou ſhouldeſt be ſo angry, I have but onely ſpoken and inquired of the matter, that I might carry my father word; ſo likewiſe Lyra. But Lyra.
becauſe דבר ſignifyeth a matter or buſineſſe, as well as a word, Iunius better expoundeth it, is there not buſineſſe, about which I am come to the campe, and not as thou chargeſt mee, upon pride?

David notwithſtanding Eliabs ſharpe reproofe inquireth of others touching V. 30, 31.
the ſame thing, ſo that it was told Saul what David had ſaid, and hee ſent V. 32, 33.
for him, and then David offered to goe and fight with the Philiſtim, and when V. 34, 35.
Saul ſaid, that hee was not able to goe againſt him, David replyed that in keeping V. 36.
his fathers ſheep a Lyon came to the flocke and a Beare, & he killed both the one and the other, wherefore hee doubted not, but this uncircumciſed Philiſtim ſhould be as one of them. Hee had 3. grounds of his confidence. 1. By the Spirit of God comming upon him hee had already done as great exploits.
2. The Philiſtim was uncircumciſed, he circumciſed, and ſo was within the Covenant of Grace and under Gods protection, but Goliah not. 3. He had railed Peter Martyr.
upon the Armies of the living God, and ſo had laid himſelfe open to Gods judgements, thus Peter Martyr. For it is no good ground for a man to put himſelfe upon danger, becauſe he hath beene formerly delivered from as great dangers, except there be ſomewhat elſe to truſt unto, viz. a ſpeciall aſſurance from God of eſcaping in that particular caſe, and this Davids words imply, that he had by the Spirit, whereby hee was ſtirred up: Wee may indeed and ought to bee confident in generall upon former experiments, of future deliverances, as the Apoſtle was, who ſaith, hee hath delivered us, and doth deli- 2 Cor. 1.10.
ver, and wee truſt, that hee will yet hereafter deliver us, but for any particular wee may not upon any ſuch truſt adventure upon it, unleſſe beſides former experience, wee have 1. a good cauſe, 2. a calling from God, 3. ſome word of God to truſt unto in that particular, which hee onely hath in whom the Spirit extraordinarly worketh ſuch a faith; and all theſe David had. His cauſe was good, hee had a calling, becauſe hee was anointed to bee Captaine over Gods people, and laſtly he had the inward motion of the Spirit, and a warrant from experience of the Spirits aſſiſtance in the like dangerous interprizes before. The Spirit, which came upon him carryed him to this duel, which might ſeeme moſt dangerous, and how could his enterprize then but be lawfull, and his victory certaine? Now becauſe he ſpeaketh of the uncircumciſion of Goliah, as a maine ground of his confidence, implying the great advantage of his own circumciſion, Note, that the circumciſed which are now the baptized, may ſafely truſt in God Note.
in all times of perill as being within the Covenant, but not the circumciſed in the fleſh onely, becauſe then any Iſraelite might have had the like confidence, Rom. 2.29.
but the circumciſed in ſpirit, and the baptized with a conſcience purifyed by 1 Pet. 3.21.
faith, for faith is our victory over the world. 1 Ioh. 5.4.

Saul hearing David ſpeake thus bade him goe, and ſaid, The Lord be with thee, V. 37.
wherein hee did not raſhly or ill, as ſome charge him, but well and wiſely, per- P. Martyr.
ceiving by that, which David had ſaid, that hee was not without the Spirit of all power, and ſo not unlikely to prevaile, according to others; and to ex- Gennevns.
preſſe his great deſire, that hee might prevaile for his owne and the peoples deliverance out of this great danger, hee prayeth earneſtly for his good ſucceſſe, although his prayer was of no force, becauſe hee was wicked and wanted Faith.

Then Saul cauſed David to put on his Armour and an Helmet of Steele, upon his V. 38.
head, &c. The word rendred Armour, Hebr. is מדּ ſignifying a garment, wherefore the Vulgar Latin hath it, his owne garments, and likewiſe Peter Martyr, Arias, &c. and thus the ſame word is taken, Ch. 18. 4. Ionathan gave David his garments even to his ſword and his bow. And therefore this reading is rather to bee followed, he gave him his Souldiers garments, and thereupon put a coate of male, &c. for Sauls armour would not have fitted David, becauſe the ſtature of Saul was ſo great above all other men. They which are for armour meant here, will either have Davids owne armour and not Sauls meant, or ſome armour out of Sauls armory. But that armour is not meant, appeareth, becauſe he put upon him a coate of male to cover his body, as Goliah had, and that was armour enough for him to beare, neither doe any uſe to weare other ſteele armour under that, but ſome coate of buffe, which is more light.

V. 39. Now when David had put theſe on and tried to goe, he turned againe and put them off, ſaying that he could not goe with them, becauſe he had not beene accuſtomed unto them. If it ſhall ſeeme ſtrange, that David ſhould ſpeake thus, ſeing he was before this made Sauls Armour-bearer; It is anſwered, that although he had this place aſſigned to him, yet for ſo much as Saul had not after Oſiander. that gone out to warre till this time, and David was diſmiſſed againe to a Shepheards life, he never yet executed that office, and ſo the going forth in armour was a thing unuſuall to him, and therefore he put it off, as being rather a hinderance then a furtherance unto him in this his combat. And this was not done without a ſingular providence of God, that the victory might be aſcribed unto God onely, and not unto any warlike preparation made on Davids part.

V. 40. And David tooke his ſtaffe in his hand, and five ſmooth ſtones, and put them in a ſhep-heards bagge, &c. Theſe things might ſeeme to be of little force to enter a Duell withall, againſt ſo mighty a Giant, but by things contemptible and vile amongſt men, God would hereby ſhew, that he would confound the mighty.
David going but thus meanely appointed, but armed with confidence in God was better armed then Goliah. Thus Moſes went armed to ſubdue Pharaoh and the Ægyptians, and prevailed, for he carryed nothing but his rod or ſtaffe in his hand. And yet this kinde of fight was not unuſuall amongſt the Hebrewes, who being kept from iron weapons by the Philiſtims, exerciſed themſelves in throwing of ſtones out of ſlings, and many amongſt them grew ſo expert herein, that they could throw at an haires breadth and not miſſe, as it is ſaid of 700
Iudg. 20. 16. men of the tribe of Benjamin.

V. 41. David drawing neare to the Philiſtim, he alſo drew neare to him, but ſeeing him, he diſdained him and curſed and ſpake vauntingly unto him, that he would give his fleſh to be meat to the fowles and beaſts: but David nothing terrified telleth him, that he came in the name of the Lord who would deliver Goliah into his hands &c. whereas Goliah ſeeing David come with a ſtaffe ſaith Joſephus. unto him, am I a dogge, Joſephus ſaith, that he anſwered, yea and worſe then a dogge, and hereupon Goliah being enraged curſed him &c. But by the ſacred hiſtory David replyed nothing till he had done ſpeaking. For Davids foretelling, that Goliah ſhould be delivered into his hands, that he would cut off his head, and give his carkaſſe to the fowles and beaſts, and likewiſe the carkaſſes Peter Martyr. of the Philiſtims, all this he ſpake not raſhly to requite Goliah with ſuch threatnings, as he had uſed, but by the ſpirit of Prophecy, whereby he knew it ſhould be ſo. 1. Becauſe Goliah had railed upon Gods Armies, with whoſe glory it ſtood not to ſuffer ſuch blaſphemy to goe unpuniſhed, or not to maintaine the people of Iſrael to be his peculiar people, amongſt whom his Tabernacle and ſervice was. 2. Becauſe Goliah truſted to his owne ſtrength, his ſword and his ſpeare, therefore by his confuſion God could not but teach, that ſuch are vaine things to ſave a man, but truſting in God alone of the greateſt force and power.

V. 48, 49. Then the Philiſtim comming towards David he ran to meete him, and flung a ſtone out of his ſling, which pierced his forehead, ſo as that he fell downe Lyra. dead &c. David made haſte, ſaith Lyra, that he might ſling at Goliah before he came too neare him, becauſe a diſtance is neceſſary in ſlinging of a ſtone to make it the more forcible. If it ſhall ſeeme incredible that the head of Goliah ſhould be pierced with a ſtone when as he had on an helmet of ſteele covering both head and forehead, I will not anſwer as Lyra ſaith ſome doe, that the ſteele gave way miraculouſly, and therefore as Hugo ſaith, ſome fabulouſly teach, that the ſharpe ſtone for circumciſion was after this left, and a ſharpe knife uſed; but that his forehead was bare: but for David with the firſt ſtone throwing to hit it, when Goliah was in motion, and with ſuch force, that the ſtone ſunke into his head, this was not done without a ſupernaturall ſtrength; whereby Davids arme was ſtrengthened, and extraordinary direction of him that never erreth.

The Myſtery.

Myſtically by Goliah underſtand the Devill; by David, Chriſt who as David was ſent to his brethren the Jewes, but envyed by them. And as David going againſt Goliah was contemptible both for the ſmallneſſe of his body in compariſon of Goliah's, and becauſe he went with a ſtaffe, ſo unlikely a weapon to prevaile with, ſo Chriſt was deſpiſed for a Saviour, as beeing poore and abject, and having no ſecular ſtrength, yet he only with his Croſſe repreſented by Davids ſtaffe prevailed, and ſo the faithfull, as the Armies of the living God, are delivered, who before by the Devill Goliah were continually put in great feare. For ſtretching this allegory further, as it is ſtretched by ſome, who by his putting off of Sauls Armour underſtand Chriſts putting off of the heavy yoake of the law of Ceremonies, and by his taking 5 ſtones, Chriſts taking the 5 bookes of Moſes, and then one to ſet forth unity, and his wounding him in the forehead, becauſe it was not fenced with croſſing and the like, I leave them to their Authors as meere ſtreinings and unprofitable curioſities. If in the five ſtones there be any myſterie, we may with Lyra hold the five wounds of Chriſt to be rather ſet forth hereby morally, when we are to encounter with Satan we muſt be armed with faith onely in Chriſts death, and with the ſword of the word, wherewith he ſeeketh to ſlay us by wreſting it, we muſt cut off his head, that is, his temptations, as Chriſt did. Otherwiſe Hugo ſaith, by Goliahs ſword we may underſtand the enemies of Chriſt, but now converted, for by ſuch God defendeth his, and confoundeth Satan, as by Paul converted: by the ſling and ſtone the two things, whereby Chriſt prevailed, preaching and working. Whereas onely one ſtone was flung, but by one gloſſe three ſtones figuring out Chriſts three times repelling of the Devils temptations by ſcripture, he ſaith it may be thought that David did fling three, but one onely hit him in the forehead. We may note in that Goliah was ſlaine with his owne ſword, that the thing whereby the wicked thinke to deſtroy others is oft times by Gods juſt judgement turned to their owne deſtruction, as Hamans wicked plot againſt the Jewes, and the Canaanitiſh Kings againſt Gibeon &c.

Hugo Card. 5 lapides ſignant hæc 5. cognitionem ſui, dolorem amiſſi, pudorem commiſſi, timorem ſupplicii, ſpem æterni gaudii, his proſternitur Goliah ſpirit. Mat. 4.

Hugo Cardin.

V. 51. 52.

The Philiſtims champion being thus ſlaine, they flee, and the Iſraelites purſue them, ſo that many fall before them, after which they returne and ſpoil their Tents; then David takes the ſpoile that properly belonged to him, the armour of Goliah, and layeth it up in his Tent, and his head he put in Hieruſalem. This laſt ſaith Lyra, is not to be underſtood, as now done, but afterwards when David raigned in Hieruſalem, to terrifie the Jebuſites, who held the fort of Zion, that they might be moved through feare of being overcome by him, as Goliah was, to leave it, and not truſt to the ſtrength thereof, ſo likewiſe Hugo and the Ordin. Gloſſ. and Comeſtor ſaith, he put the head and armour firſt in his owne Tent, and afterwards in Hieruſalem, and in the Tabernacle there, and Peter Martyr ſaith, it is ſpoken by a Prolepſis, for it was done afterwards, that the people ſeing theſe monuments of Davids miraculous victory might praiſe God, and truſt in his helpe againſt their moſt potent enemies. But becauſe ch. 21. we read of Goliah his ſword lying at Nob in the cuſtody of the High-prieſt, a queſtion ariſeth, how he can be ſaid to have put his armour in his Tent? David Kimbi anſwereth, that his armour was kept by David, but his ſword was layed up in the Tabernacle at Nob, but the word כלי ſignifieth both armour and weapons, wherefore others ſay, that by his Tabernacle is meant the Tabernacle, which he afterwards made for the Lord, wherein he placed the Arke, which was called his, becauſe he made it, this then is ſpoken of a thing done afterwards and not preſently, all for the preſent being put in the Tabernacle at Nob: or rather by his tent underſtand the tent of his brethren, which was his in common with them, whileſt he was at the Campe, his armour falling to David, as victorer he tooke and beſtowed for his owne uſe; his

V. 53. 54.

Lyra.

Hugo Cardin.
Schol. Hiſtor.

Peter Martyr.

Qu.

Iunius. Pellican
2 Sam. 6. 17.
1 Chron: 15. 1.

ſword was put in the Tabernacle, as a monument of this victory. Whereas ſome will have Jeruſi and Nob to be all one, this cannot be, becauſe Eſa. 10.32. they are ſpoken of, as two diſtinct places, and Nehem. 11. For that of carrying his head afterwards to Hieruſalem, and ſetting it up there, that the Jebuſites ſeeing it might be terrified, although it be commonly received, I ſee no ground for it, and therefore doe rather thinke, that it was done immediately, being ſet up upon ſome high turret, where all men might ſee it: but for his armour, he laid it up afterwards in the Tabernacle, which he made, and for the preſent in the Tabernacle at Nob, which then was, for he came as a ſtranger into the Army and had no tent there, and if it ſhall be thought that his tent or habitation at Bethlehem, might be meant, that cannot be, becauſe after this he went no more home to his fathers houſe, but aboad with Saul. If here ſhall ſeeme to be any colour for the laying up of holy reliques in Churches, to ſee and to do reverence, to which the people ſhould in devotion reſort, truly there is none, for, 1. no man will ſay, that Goliahs armour was an holy relique, but onely a monument of the victory aſcribed unto God by laying them up in his houſe, as being gotten by his power. 2. None came to worſhip theſe monuments. 3. They were truly ſuch, as men tooke them to be, but in many reliques there is great deluſion, as in pieces of the Croſſe, which if they were all brought together, would be as much, as all the Wood and Timber of Noahs Arke, as Peter Martyr conjectureth. Peter Martyr.

V. 55. Here is commemorated, how Saul enquired of Abner, when David went out to fight with Goliah, whoſe ſonne he was, Abner anſwered, As thy ſoule liveth, I cannot tell, but now he bringeth him to Saul with the head of Goliah in his hand, and ſo he learneth of David himſelfe, whoſe ſonne he was. Lyra. He made this diligent enquiry, ſaith Lyra, becauſe he had promiſed to give him his daughter, that he might underſtand, whether he came of a ſtocke to marry her. But how could Saul or Abner be ignorant who David was, ſeing he had miniſtred unto Saul, and ſerved him before at his houſe? Anſw. Of this ſee ſomewhat before ch. 16.16. and as for Abner, he being Captaine of the Hoaſt, happily was never at the Court when David was there, and Sauls diſtractions by the evill Spirit, might eaſily make him forget a man otherwiſe well knowne unto him. As for thoſe opinions of ſome, that he knew him, but not who was his father; or of others, that if he knew who was his father, yet he knew not of what Tribe he was, or whether he had beene a man of warre, that had ſo valiant a ſonne, and therefore the end of his enquiry was to know theſe things, theſe I ſay, are not to the purpoſe, becauſe if he had remembred David, he might alſo have remembred his parentage and City, becauſe he was at the firſt told of all theſe, ch. 16. For that opinion of Junius that this hiſtory is tranſpoſed and ſhould come in before that ch. 16. it cannot ſtand, Chap: 18.2. 1. Becauſe David went no more home from Saul after this, but after his firſt comming to play unto Saul he returned, ch. 17. 15. 2. After Davids firſt playing before Saul he loved him, ch. 16. 21. but now he envyed him, ch. 18.9. 3. ch. 18.10. David is ſaid to have played upon the harpe as at other times before him, when the evill ſpirit was upon him, therefore he had beene with Saul before this Duell.

CHAP. XVIII.

V. 1. THen Jonathan began dearely to love David. Here is firſt ſet forth the great grace that David was in after this victory: 1 With Saul's ſonne, then with the reſt of the people. 2 The envie of Saul againſt him. Jonathan Saul's ſon loved him as himſelfe, & in token of his great love made a league with him, and gave him his robe and his garments, even to his ſword, his bow, and his girdle. Lyra. This according to ſome, ſaith Lyra, is thus expounded, he gave him his robe and garments, but not his ſword, &c. becauſe theſe were of neceſſary uſe for himſelfe, but according to others, incluſively, hee gave unto him all theſe in token of perfect amity; which he rather approveth and anſwereth the reaſon brought for the firſt, by ſaying, that Jonathan being a Kings ſonne, could eaſily get him another ſword and bow. P.Martyr. These things, ſaith Peter Martyr, Jonathan tooke from his owne body, and gave to David, becauſe in making leagues ſome outward ſymboles were wont to bee uſed, and hereby hee ſhewed, that the friendſhip, unto which hee received David, was ſuch, that all which hee had ſhould bee common to him, as to himſelfe, according to that ſaying, amicorum omnia ſunt communia. And Chriſt hath given to us yet greater pledges of his love, his owne fleſh and blood in the ſacrament of the Lords Supper, and herein the great provident care of God over David appeared, in that hee ſtirred him up ſuch a friend in Saul's Court, for his greater ſafety. V. 2. For the grace that David was in with the people, Saul tooke him, and would not let him goe home any more to his father, but imployed him about divers things belonging to the State, and David behaved himſelfe wiſely in all things, V. 5. and Saul ſet him over the men of warre, and hee was accepted both of the people, and of the ſervants of Saul. It may ſeeme ſtrange, that David being but ere while a ſhepheard, ſhould know ſo ſoone Military policy, wiſely to order the men of warre, but the Spirit wherewith hee was extraordinarily indued, taught him wiſdome in all things. What men of warre hee was ſet over, is not here ſaid; but v. 13. when Saul began to bee affraid of him, hee is ſaid to have removed him from him, and to have made him Captaine over a thouſand. Some thinke, that the thing generally ſpoken of here, that hee was ſet over the men of warre, is there more particularly expreſſed to bee over 1000. But others, that hee was graced at the firſt with being ſet over all, but afterwards, when Saul envyed him, hee was put out of that place, and made onely Captain of 1000. And this ſeemeth to mee the more probable, becauſe it is ſaid, that he removed him from him, when hee ſet him over 1000, and before that hee had ſought to ſlay him, ſo that this remove was done in diſpleaſure, and therefore cannot bee underſtood of his firſt preferring him, but of his putting him downe from a greater dignity to a leſſer. Pellican. Whereas Pellican objecteth, that Abner was Generall over all the forces, it may bee anſwered, that hee was Generall of them that went out to fight againſt the enemy, but over thoſe that Saul kept about his perſon hee might ſet David, but when hee grew into a feare of him, putting him from this office, hee made him Captaine over 1000 of them that went to warre, when Saul ſtayed at home, that thus by going oftner againſt the enemy, hee might bee in the more danger of being ſlaine.

V. 6, 7. When they returned from the ſlaughter of the Philiſtine, the women came out with muſick and ſinging, Anſwering one another, Saul hath ſlaine his 1000, and David his 10000, &c. Chryſoſt. Hom. de Saul & David. The women aſcribed to Saul more then hee deſerved, as Chryſoſtome noteth, for hee ſuffered the Philiſtim to vaunt himſelfe forty dayes together, and yet cowardly ſate ſtill: but to David they aſcribed no more but according to his deſerts, for his killing of that Philiſtim, was as much as the killing of 10000 of them, yet Saul was vexed at it, and envyed, and from thence-forward hated David to the death, for hee began now to ſuſpect that he was the man that ſhould have the Kingdome transferred to him. V. 10. And therefore when David ſtood before him playing with the Harpe, the next time that the evill ſpirit was upon him, when he propheſied, he ſought to ſlay him by caſting a ſpeare at him, and in thus doing he wickedly oppoſed himſelfe againſt the wil of God, who had threatned to take the Kingdom from him and to give it to another, Borrhaus. whereas David contrariwiſe being in danger to loſe his Kingdome afterwards ſubmitted himſelfe to Gods will, but this his oppoſition and all his other deviliſh projects were vaine, as the ſequel doth declare, for there is no withſtanding of God in his will. But how is Saul ſaid to propheſie in his mad fit? Lyra. Lyra anſwereth not properly, but denominatively, becauſe as an arreptitious perſon he ſpake that which the evill ſpirit moved him unto, and not of himſelfe, Junius. Borrhaus. ſo likewiſe Junius and Borrhaus, his ſpeech and behaviour was ſtrange, as of the prophets, when they were moved by the ſpirit of God, ſo that it was called pophesying for the manner onely, and not for the matter alſo, as when he was ſaid before to propheſie ch. 10. 19. Clarius Chaldæus expoundeth prophetare inſanire, becauſe the geſture of a prophet, when he was moved by the Spirit, was ſuch that he ſeemed to be mad. Whereas it is ſaid, that Saul ſaid, I will ſmite David, Peter Martyr thinketh, that he ſaid thus in his heart onely, for although the evill ſpirit comming upon him he was like a mad man for the time, yet he had the uſe of his reaſon to know what he did. For Davids eſcaping twice, when his deſtruction was thus ſought, it was not without the hand of God making Saul to miſſe of his marke, and David to beware of him, wherein he was a type of Chriſt, whoſe deſtruction the Jewes ſought, Luk 4. and Joh. 7. but he declined their violence, and went away.

Peter Martyr.

V.13. Then Saul feared David and put him from him, and made him Captaine over 1000, in which place he behaved himſelfe wiſely, and ſo was beloved of all Iſrael and Judah. The more Saul ſought to prevent David from comming to the Kingdome, the more poſſibility did he grow unto of attaining it, ſo all things are turned to good, to thoſe that are choſen of God, but all meanes uſed by the wicked to free themſelves from danger, are fruſtrated, and their feares by Gods judgements juſtly againſt them are increaſed.

Note.

He ſet David over 1000 men, that by making excurſions againſt the Philiſtims, with them he might come into the greater danger of deſtruction, but it ſucceeded otherwiſe, the Lord was with David and he proſpered in all things.

Ben Gerſon.

But how did Saul know, that the Lord was with David? R. Levi Ben Gerſon ſaith, that he knew it by his prevailing againſt Goliah, and his eſcaping the ſtroake of his ſpeare two times.

V. 17. David being made ſuch a Captaine, to put him on the more to hazard his perſon againſt the enemie, Saul offered him his daughter Merab to wife, ſo that he would be a valiant ſonne in law unto him, and fight manfully againſt the enemy. But David ſpeaking modeſtly of himſelfe, as unworthy of ſuch a marriage, ſhee was given to another man. Then Michal his other daughter was offered him, and for his dowry nothing required but 100 foreskinnes of the Philiſtims, but all this was done in fraud to bring David into danger of his life by the Philiſtims. By Hypocrites and wicked men one thing is pretended and another intended, when they make the greateſt ſhew of love, they have hatred in their hearts, yea there is no ordinance of God ſo ſacred, but they will abuſe it for their owne devilliſh ends, ſo Domitian the tyrant would ſpeake him the faireſt, to whom he meant the greateſt miſchiefe, and a preparative was made by a marriage to the moſt bloudy maſſacre in France, that ever was in time of peace, ann. 1573.

Note.

V.21. For the words of Saul v. 21. in one of the two thou ſhalt be ſonne in law to me to day, Hebr. it is, in two thou ſhalt be ſonne in law, ſo likewiſe the Vulg. Lat. expounded by Lyra, in my two daughters, in the firſt by eſpouſalls, and in the ſecond not onely ſo, but by marriage, which was a double honour to him, and therefore he meant, that he ſhould be bound the more to behave himſelfe valiantly. Junius rendreth it, by the other thou ſhalt contract affinity with me, taking the cardinall number for the ordinall, as 2 King. 15.32. in the two yeare, for in the ſecond yeare, and this reading is rather to be preferred, in the ſecond or in the other of my daughters. In ſome Latine Copies it is, for two things thou ſhalt be my ſonne in law, that is, according to the Ord. Gloſſ. for killing Goliah, and for 100 foreskinnes of the Philiſtims, but this laſt is not mentioned, till afterwards.

Lyra.

Junius.

V. 25. For the 100 foreskinnes, which Saul required for a dowry, and not any gold or ſilver, it is to be underſtood, that the manner of old was for a man to give a dowry to his wife before marriage, but as for portions we read not, that the woman brought any, except they were inheritrixes, as the daughters of Zelophehad were. That a dowry was wont to be given, ſee Exod. 22.16,17. and of what quantity, Deut. 22.29. And accordingly Shechem offereth a dowry, that ſhould be required, to Dinah, and Abrahams ſteward gave great gifts to Rebecca and her mother and brother, and Jacob gave ſeven yeares ſervice for Labans daughter nomine dotis. And the dowry was to be at the womans diſpoſing, and for her maintenance, if her husband dyed. This cuſtome, as it ſeemeth, was continued a long time under the Goſpell, for in the Councell of Arles, which was

Numb. 27.

Gen: 34.

Gen: 24.

in Concil. Arelat. c. 16.

P.Martyr.

in the time of Conſtantine it was decreed, that no marriage ſhould be made without giving a dowry, as Peter Martyr ſaith, which decree was made to prevent clandeſtine marriages, becauſe that unto dowries witneſſes muſt be uſed, and ſo there muſt needes be witneſſes of the marriage. And this he well approveth, but not that of dowries, becauſe it is no where expreſſely required in the word of God: but by dowry he underſtandeth ſomewhat given with the wife, wherein he is certainely miſtaken, for that which ſhe bringeth, is no dowry, but a portion, and that only is a dowry, which is given to her.

Joſephus.
Lyra.
Qu.
Peter Martyr.

And whereas for the matter of dowry given to the wife or for her, he diſtinguiſheth betweene the times before the law and the time under the law, holding that dowries were given before, but not under the law, becauſe if ſtill that cuſtome had held, it ſhould not have beene impoſed nomine pœnæ upon him, that had deflowred a Virgin to endow her and to marry her; I thinke this collection is ill made from that ordinance, becauſe there is a clauſe therein, according to the dowry of Virgins: whereby is intimated that it was a cuſtome to endow Virgins, when they were marryed. But both are in uſe at this day, the woman bringeth a portion to the man, and the man endoweth her with all his worldly goods, or whether ſhee bringeth portion or not, and for earneſt giveth her a ring, ſo that when he dyeth, ſhee hath right to ſo much of his whole eſtate, as may ſuffice for her maintenance. But to returne to David, he when S*auls* daughter was propounded to him, ſaid, that he was poore and of a meane houſe, and therefore unworthy of ſuch a match, whereby he meant, that he had nothing to endow her withall, as would be expected of him that marryed a Kings daughter. For he had indeed right unto her from Sauls firſt pact, for his killing of Goliah, and he was worthy, becauſe he had beene anointed to be King: but he in his humility looked not at theſe things, but at his owne preſent condition. Wherefore S*aul* to put this doubt out of his minde touching a dowry telleth him by his ſervants, that he looked for no dowry of gold or ſilver, but of 100 foreskins of the Philiſtims. And herein he pretended zeale againſt the uncircumciſed, who hated nothing more then to be circumciſed, and he knew, that David could not cut off their foreskins, unleſſe he firſt killed them; but his intent was to bring David into the greater hatred of the Philiſtims, by thus exaſperating them againſt him. Joſephus is farre wide here, when he ſaith, that Saul required 600 foreskins, and that David brought him ſo many heads, for it is ſaid, that inſtead of 100 he brought him 200 foreskins, and this might better ſatisfie Saul, becauſe he was hereby aſſured, that they were Philiſtims that he had ſlaine and not any of them Iſraelites, becauſe they were all circumciſed, ſo Lyra, who alſo ſaith, that it pleaſed David well upon this condition to be the Kings ſonne in law, partly for the great love that Michal bare unto him, and partly becauſe the Philiſtims were Gods enemies, and ſo hatefull unto him. If a queſtion be made of the lawfulneſſe of this enterprize, it is anſwered, that the Kings command was a ſufficient warrant unto him to goe againſt them, and to doe any deſpight unto them, eſpecially being profeſſed enemies of Gods people, and God had alſo called him to be a deliverer to his people.

Iunius.
The Myſtery.

V.30. Then the Princes of the Philiſtims went forth, &c. They underſtanding, ſay the Rabbins, that David was married, and that none in Iſrael went to warre the firſt yeare after his marriage, tooke their opportunity now to warre againſt Iſrael, hoping that in his abſence they ſhould prevaile. But P*eter Martyr* thinketh rather, that being by the deſpight done unto them immediately before by David exaſperated, they now came forth to be revenged, and this hath the better ground. Whereas in our tranſlation it is rendered, David did more wiſely, then all the ſervants of Saul, Junius rendreth it, he was proſpered more, and the Hebr. word may be indifferently expounded either way, but I rather thinke with Junius, that his proſpering in his warres againſt them is meant, becauſe it followeth, his name grew famous, which muſt be for his noble exploits againſt the enemie, none doing the like. By David ſo greatly beloved of Jonathan, that he ſtript himſelfe of all for his ſake, myſtically underſtand Chriſt, to follow whom the faithfull at the firſt forſooke all. By Saul envying him, when all others praiſed him, the Devill ſtirring up the Phariſees to envy Chriſt, when as his miracles and teaching all admired him. By his cutting off the Philiſtims foreskin, and then marrying Sauls daughter, Chriſts removing of the foreskin, as it were, of the Gentiles by circumciſing their hearts through faith beſtowed upon them, after which he will eſpouſe unto himſelfe the Synagogue of the Jewes, for when the fulneſſe of the Gentiles is come in, all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved. Laſtly by Davids proſpering the more, the more Saul envyed him, Chriſt's proſpering and growing famous all over the world againſt the endeavours of the malicious Jewes.

CHAP. XIX.

THe better David deſerved, the more Saul envyed and hated him, ſo that V. 1. now he could not containe himſelfe, but brake out, and willed Jonathan and his ſervants to kill David. This Jonathan diſliked for the great love that he bare to David, but all the reſt of the Courtiers ſeemed to be indifferent, for none of them did any thing for him, either in word or deed. There be many Note. feigned friends in the world, but true friends indeed, are very rare, for all Sauls ſervants ſeemed before highly to eſteeme of, and to love David, but now not one ſtands for him, but Jonathan onely, who, a man would thinke, had leaſt reaſon, ſeeing the Kingdome belonged unto him by ſucceſſion after Saul, and if David lived, there was little hope of his attaining unto it. But to keepe a good conſcience, and to prevent the ſhedding of innocent bloud, was by him more eſteemed of, then the kingdome; and ſo it is by every godly man. Now for Jonathans ſilence at the firſt, it was diſcretion in him at that time before the ſervants of Saul, that he might not ſeeme publikely to oppoſe his father; and if he had ſpoken then, it was not likely, that he ſhould doe ſo much good, as afterwards, V. 2, 3. having his father alone and in a better humour. But he neglecteth not to tell David of his fathers motion, that he might looke to himſelfe, and promiſeth him to ſpeake for him to Saul alone, when he was walking in the field, and to certifie him of his anſwere. For theſe words, I will ſtand beſides my father in the field where thou art, the Vulg. Lat. hath, in the field whereſoever he ſhall be, ſo likewiſe Peter Martyr, but Hebr. it is where thou art, and it is likely, that they knowing in what field Saul uſed to walke for his recreation, David was hid there, that upon Sauls anſwer to Jonathan ſpeaking in his behalfe he might have him at hand to relate the newes unto. If any doubt be made here, whether Jonathan did not an act of treachery towards his father, in diſcovering to David, Peter Martyr. what he had ſpoken againſt him? Peter Martyr anſwereth well, that he did a good office towards his father in ſaving him from ſhedding innocent bloud, and a good office to his freind, that he might looke to himſelfe, and as his duty to God bound him, who is to be obeyed in ſaving life before King or Father V. 4. unjuſtly ſeeking to kill. v. 4. Jonathan then perſwadeth his father Saul not to ſeeke the life of David. 1. Becauſe he had done no evill againſt him.
2. Becauſe he had deſerved very well of him, in adventuring his life for him, againſt the Philiſtims. 3. Becauſe the Lord was with David, and by him wrought a great ſalvation for Iſrael, the whole common-wealth was bounden unto David.
4. Becauſe the time was when Saul liked David exceedingly well for his valour, and was glad to ſee it, wherefore he ought not now without cauſe to be ſo changed towards him, as to ſeeke his death. Saul overcome with theſe perſwaſions
V. 6, 7. ſweareth, that David ſhould not be ſlaine, and ſo Jonathan bringeth him to Saul, and he ſtandeth before him for a time ſecurely, as in times paſt.
But ere long, although after this David did valiantly againe in putting the Philiſtims
V. 8. to flight, v. 8. when the evill ſpirit came upon Saul, he contrary to his oath raged more againſt David, then ever he had done before, for he both
V. 9. ſtruck at him with his javelin, and when he eſcaped, he ſent after him to watch his houſe, that he might be taken and ſlaine, but Michal let him downe at a window and he eſcaped, telling Sauls meſſengers the meane ſeaſon, who were ſent to ſlay him, that hee was ſick in bed, but ſhee deluded them by laying an image in the bed, which ſhee happily ſhewed them afarre off, that they might goe and tell their maſter Saul, David having the more time, whilſt they went and returned, to flee away. Then Saul bade the meſſengers to goe and bring him in the bed, that hee might ſlay him, but when they came into the chamber, they found that Michal had mocked them with an image, which Saul hearing he reproved his daughter Michal, but ſhee excuſed her ſelfe, Note. ſaying, that David ſaid, Let me goe, or elſe I will kill thee. By this inconſtancy of Saul wee may ſee, what little credit is to bee given to the moſt ſerious promiſes and oathes of wicked men; and ſuch are they profeſſedly, that be of the Church of Rome, their tenet being, that faith is not to be kept with hereticks, and therefore Ladiſlaus the Emperor contrary to his faith given to the Turke made Warre upon the Turke, which made Amurath the great Turke cry out upon the perfidiouſneſſe of Chriſtians, and ſeeing the Emperours Munſter. coſmogr. de Graecia lib.4. ſtandard, which was a crucifixe, to ſay, O Chriſt, if thou beeſt a God, take revenge upon theſe thy perfidious ſervants: and he was heard, and the Imperaliſts were overthrowne, and many thouſands of them ſlaine to the great loſſe of Amurath 2. Chriſtendome. V. 13. The word rendred Image, which Michal tooke and laid in the bed, Hebr. is Teraphim, whereby images abuſed to idolatry are commonly ſet forth, as Iudg. 17.5. 1 Sam. 15.23. Gen. 35.4. Hence ſome gather, that Michal kept images in ſecret, which David knew not of, as Rachel ſometime had done, Iacob being ignorant of it, and that ſhee tooke one of theſe being the image of a man and laid it in the bed, and a goates skin under the head, that there Schol. Hiſtor. might bee a reſemblance of haire, and the liver of a goate panting within the bed, as Comeſtor hath it following Ioſephus.

V.17. P.Martyr. For Michals excuſing herſelf to her father, that David would have killed her if ſhee had not let him goe, herein ſhee ſinned ſaith Martyr, three wayes, 1. in telling an untruth, 2. in raiſing a ſlander againſt David, 3. in being ſo timerous, as not to dare, to ſpeake in the defence of David being innocent, as her brother Ionathan had done. The ſiſter of Dionyſius the tyrant, and wife to Polyxenus doth greatly condemne her, in that ſhee being reproved by Dionyſius for not telling him before her husband fled away, who ſhould have beene queſtioned for treaſon, anſwered him, Doſt thou thinke mee ſo degenerous, that if I had knowne of his fleeing, I would not have fled with him? yet Michal did the part of a loving wife in that ſhee had rather indanger herſelf of the Kings diſpleaſure, then that her husband ſhould come in any danger.

V.18. David then came to Samuel in Ramah, and told him al that was done, and they two went together to Naioth & dwelt there. He would not flee to his own City, becauſe he thought Saul would ſoon find him out there, but to Samuel, of whoſe anointing him Saul had not yet heard, ſuppoſing that he might keep there concealed, and by Samuel be directed, what to do. Lyra. Hugo Cardin. Ramah was in Benjamin, and Naioth ſaith Lyra, a place in Ramah, ſee v. 22. Here ſaith Hugo, was a company of Nazarites alwayes attending upon ſinging Pſalmes and praiſing God. To this place when Saul heard, that David was there, he ſent meſſengers to fetch him, but when they came there, the Spirit of God was upon them and they propheſied, ſo likewiſe did the ſecond meſſengers, and the third, and afterwards Saul himſelfe Rabanus. comming thither. For as Rabanus hath it, wicked men and reprobates may propheſie for a time, as Baalam, and thoſe Matth. 7. which ſay, in thy name wee have propheſied; or by propheſying underſtand praiſing of God by ſinging. Note. Hereby was ſet forth the power of propheſying, in that ſuch as came to the company of Prophets here with an intent to take David and to ſlay him, were upon the ſudden ſo changed, that they joyned with them in propheſying: ſo Latimer going to heat Mr. Stafford, to ſcoffe at him, was turned, and preached the truth alſo as hee did: and Auguſtine by hearing Ambroſe, being before a Manichee. Yea Aug. Confeſ. l.6. c.3. ſuch is the force of humane reaſon being pithily ſet forth, that it hath had ſome time the like admirable effects, as in drunken Polemo, who went in his Garlands to deride Xenocrates the Philoſopher, but having heard him, he caſts of his Garlands and turned one of his Scholars. But ſuch effects are not common, but very rare to ſhew the great power of Gods holy Spirit, ſo they that came to ap-Ioh.7. prehend Chriſt, were taken with admiration and returned without doing that for which they were ſent.

Qu. For Samuel entertaining of David, if it be queſtioned, how he could doe ſo, ſeeing Saul the King held David to bee his enemy? It is eaſily anſwered, that althoug ſuch as bee traitors, and ſo enemies indeed to the King, no good Subject may receive, except as Jael did Siſera, to give them up to the higher power, yet Samuel ſinned not in receiving David, whom hee knew to bee innocent, and a meere patient, as Obadiah ſinned not againſt his allegeance to Ahab, when hee hid the Prophets of God from his fury in caves, and fed them there. And hee tooke him to Naioth, where was a Schoole of the Prophets, that he might have the comfort of the godly exerciſes there performed, and it being a moſt retired place, the more ſafely lye hid there and out of danger, eſpecially becauſe ſuch houſes of learning and piety have alwayes beene as ſanctuaries, and none almoſt have ever beene ſo barbarous to offer any violence in ſuch places, ſee before Ch. 10. 5. But as Samuel received none but the innocent to this place, to protect him hereby, ſo ought none to bee received to ſanctuary, but ſuch, whereas contrariwiſe amongſt the Papals the fouleſt malefactors and mur-therers have beene received to ſanctuary to the incouraging of many in all man-
Of Sanctuaries. ner of lewdneſſe. The pretext of theſe Sanctuaries was the appointing of Ci-Numb. 35. ties of refuge for ſuch to flee unto, as had ſhed blood unawares. But beſides that herein was ſomething typicall, and ſo that law is at an end; Popiſh ſanctu-aries differed altogether from them. 1. Becauſe they were but a few, theſe as many, as there be Monaſteries. 2. Into them were received no wilfull mur-therers, into theſe all ſorts promiſcuouſly. 3. By mens fleeing thither the courſe of juſtice was ſtayed, but the Magiſtrate might examine and judge the caſe, but H.B. Patriarks travailes. here the authority of the Magiſtrate is quite cut off. One ſaith that Naioth in Ramah was a moſt pleaſant place, and therefore Samuel brought David hither to comfort him, it was from Gibeah of Saul 12. miles. Touching Saul him-V.22,23. ſelfe more is ſaid, then of his meſſengers. For, 1. he began to Propheſie upon the way to Naioth, but ſo did not they. 2. Hee caſt off his garments and pro-pheſied naked, when hee came before Samuel and David. 3. Hee continued ſo all that day and all that night. By his garments, which hee caſt off Lyra underſtandeth his Kingly garments, which hee did weare uppermoſt, and by his being naked his ſtripping of himſelf onely of theſe, and putting upon him 2 Sam 6. 10. ſuch a garment, as other Prophets uſed in praiſing God, as David is afterwards ſaid to have made himſelfe naked, when hee put on a linen Ephod, Iunius. having put off his Kingly Robes and danced before the Arke. Junius ſaith, he put off his military garments onely, neither doe any underſtand, that he was peter Martyr. altogether naked, but for putting any other thing on Willet denyeth it; Peter Oſiander. Martyr ſaith, happily hee did ſo, Oſiander, that undoubtedly hee did ſo. Of Sauls propheſying before this, ſee Ch. 10. 10. and Ch. 18. 10. where hee is ſaid to have propheſied, when the evill Spirit came upon him. But this propheſying Peter Martyr. differed from that, as Peter Martyr noteth, for then hee onely uttered ſome ſtrange words after a propheticall manner, and uſed ſtrange geſtures, but now hee joyned with other holy Prophets in praiſing God; and whereas then hee practiſed miſchiefe againſt David, now coming to the place where David was, full of miſchiefe in his minde againſt him, hee is ſuddenly cicurated, and remaineth near unto him a whole day and night without attempting any thing againſt him: but ſome thinke that during the time of this ecſtaſie of Saul, David fled thence, taking it as a ſingular providence of God, to give him this opportunity, by holding Saul in this caſe ſo long, to eſcape his hands. For his falling downe all that day and night, the Vulgar Latin, and Martyr have it, cecinit for cecidit, hee ſung naked all that day, but the word נפל ſignifyeth Iunius. hee fell. But how this is to bee underſtood all are not agreed. Iunius ſaith, excidit, extra ſe raptus eſt, hee was rapt by the Spirit and ſo fell beſides him-Vatablus. ſelfe, as Balaam, Numb. 24. 4. and thus continued a day and a night; Vatablus, he Oſiander. lay naked as one bereft of his ſenſes for that time; Oſiander, hee fell downe certaine houres that day and night, as the reſt of the Prophets did in praying and praiſing of God, for none ever were able to doe it ſo long a time without intermiſſion. That of Vatablus cannot ſtand, becauſe hee did, as the reſt of the Prophets, who lay not in a trance all that time ſaying nothing, but chanted out the praiſes of God. It is rather to bee held according to Iunius, that hee being raviſht by the Spirit fell downe, as the Spirit moved him, forgetting the cauſe of his comming thither, and contrariwiſe lying proſtrate, as the company of Prophets, hee continued in their manner uttering the praiſes of God, yet ſometimes reſting, as Oſiander hath it, and then at the times, that they propheſyed, propheſying againe, with them. For the Proverb ariſing hereupon, ſee before Ch. 10. 11. For the queſt. how Sauls being now before Samuel agreeth with that, 1 Sam. 15. 34. Samuel came no more to ſee Saul, till the day of his death, ſee the reſolution there: the interlinear Gloſſe ſaith, that Samuel and David were hid from the ſight of Saul; but upon what ground I know not. And Samuel, ſay Lyra and Hugo, ſaw not Saul in his Kingly apparell, but having put this off and now as a private perſon, in which ſenſe it was ſaid before, Ch. 10. that Samuel ſaw him no more. Lyra. Hugo Cardin.

The Myſtery.

Myſtically by David watched in his houſe the Ord. Gloſſe underſtandeth Chriſt watched in his ſepulcher, their watching to kill David, the endeavouring of theſe men to deſtroy the memory of Chriſts reſurrection by reporting, that his diſciples came by night and did ſteale his body away; for this was, as it were, an attempting to kill him in the hearts of men in hindring them from beleiving in his name. But as they could not kill David, ſo theſe could not obliterate the memory of Chriſt. Davids comming to Naioth, whither Sauls meſſengers follow and propheſy there, the Jews preaching of Chriſt after this, who before were perſecuters, as Saul, Act. 8. and divers, that were added to the Church and joyned with the Apoſtles, Act. 2. and Act. 4. Saul following alſo and propheſying naked, the Jewes denuded of the faith, Propheſie and Prieſthood, and yet having the Scriptures in their mouths.

CHAP. XX.

DAVID having eſcaped the danger at Naioth, by Gods miraculous changing of Sauls minde for the time, now leſt hee ſhould ſend or come to ſlay him there another time, becauſe hee would not tempt God by looking for ſuch a miraculous deliverance againe, hee fleeth from thence to Ionathan his deare friend to expoſtulate with him about his fathers violence ſo without all cauſe againſt him, ſaying, what have I done, what is mine iniquity, or ſinne againſt V. 1.
thy father that he ſeeketh to ſlay me? Ionathan anſwereth, that he ſhould not dye, and V. 2.
if his father had any ſuch intent, hee knew, that hee would reveale it to him.
It may ſeeme ſtrange, that Ionathan ſhould ſay thus, ſeeing Ch. 19. 1. hee had dealt with Ionathan and all his ſervants about the killing of him. But Lyra Lyra.
anſwereth well, that Jonathan knew not of his attempts againſt David; ſince that hee had reconciled him, and brought him to Saul againe, Ch. 19. 6, 7.
David replyeth, that it was moſt certaine, and bindeth it with an oath, which in matters of great moment, as this was, is not unlawfull, becauſe it tended to the preſervation of life and the glory of God; Ionathan being hereby aſſured, that Davids life was ſought, that hee might the more ſeriouſly apply himſelfe to uſe the meanes of his preſervation. Hereby Ionathan perceiving, that David V. 4.
would have him doe ſomething for him, promiſeth to doe whatſoever hee ſhould deſire, that is, as Martyr hath it, whatſoever he might lawfully doe, for Peter Martyr.
he preſumed, that David being a godly man would not deſire of him any thing unlawfull. Then David deſired him that the next day being the new Moone, V. 6, 7.
when hee ſhould bee expected to ſit at meate with the King, hee would excuſe his abſence, ſaying, that hee asked leave of him to goe to a feaſt, which at that time was kept at Bethlehem by his Fathers family, and if he were wroth, then it might certainly be gathered, that hee intended miſchiefe againſt him, but if hee

he tooke it well, the contrary. It may ſeeme ſtrange, that David knowing certainely that Saul ſought his life, would trouble Jonathan any more, with obſerving his father, and certiſying him. But as Martyr ſaith, either he thought, that he did ſeeke to kill him in his mad and phranticke fits onely, being of another minde at other times, and ſo if any meanes might be uſed, as in times paſt, to drive away the evill ſpirit from him, he might be ſafe, or keeping out of his reach at ſuch times. Or elſe, that if he would live altogether retiredly and privately, and not come at the Court any more, or undertake any publique ſervice againſt the enemy, whereby he had gotten himſelfe ſo great fame, he would be pacified. For he knew not certainely as yet, that nothing would appeaſe Saul but his avoyding of the Kingdome. If it ſhall ſeeme not ſo well, to agree with David's faith to be ſo full of feare of the bodily death, the ſame author anſwereth, that Elijah alſo was afraid of Ahab and Jezabel ſometimes, and Jacob of Eſau, but as they, ſo neither David feared out of diſtruſt in God, nor were for feare driven to doe any thing againſt Gods law, or to neglect the doing of any thing that pertained to their duty, as the wicked and unbeleevers are.

V. 5: Whereas it is ſaid, to morrow is the new moone, and I will goe and hide my ſelfe, till the third day? It is to be underſtood, that the Iſraelites kept every Numb. 28. 12. new moone as a feſtivall, with blowing of Trumpets and offering Peace-offerings, with part of which they feaſted together all that were cleane, but they were not enjoined to reſt from labour then, but onely in the new moone Numb. 29. 7. of the ſeventh moneth, wherefore a feaſt now was to be kept at the Court by Saul and his company, at which it ſeemeth that all men of note about him uſed to be preſent, and ſo David being his ſon in law. But David fearing the fury of Saul deſired to be excuſed from that meeting, and that not onely the firſt but the ſecond day alſo, for he would hide himſelfe unto the third, which may ſeeme ſtrange ſeeing the law appointeth but one day onely, but in Peace-offerings that which was not ſpent upon the firſt day might be eaten upon the ſecond, Levit. 7. 16, 17. but untill the third nothing might be reſerved, but the remainder then muſt be burnt with fire. We may then gather from hence, that ſuch plentifull proviſion was made for the ſacrifice, that enough remained to feaſt withall upon the ſecond day alſo, and ſo at the Kings Court the company was expected to come together to meat upon both theſe dayes. Comeſt. ſaith, happily it was ſome more ſolemne feaſt at a new moone then ordinary, laſting three dayes. But what ſacrifice was it at Bethlehem, by going to which David deſired to be excuſed? Anſ. It was a yearely ſacrifice offered for ſome great benefit at that time received by that family, ſo Peter Martyr. But whether it were ſo or no, it was no unwonted thing to avoid danger for the ſervants of God to pretend ſome honeſt and allowable action, to hide ſome other thing intended, whereby they might be endangered, as Samuel being inſtructed by God himſelfe, ch. 16. 1, 2. Of ſacrificing in any place beſides that where the Arke was, ſee ch. 16. Whereas David willeth Jonathan to ſay, David asked leave of me to goe, &c. it is to be underſtood, that Saul was ſtill at Naioth, and Jonathan ſupplyed his place in his abſence, as being his eldeſt ſonne. Wherefore it is to be held, that David fled from Naioth to Jonathan even whileſt Saul was there prophecying. David having ended his requeſt Jonathan biddeth him to goe with him into the field, V. 11. becauſe he had asked him, who ſhould tell him what anſwer his father made: For it ſeemed hard unto him, that Jonathan ſhould finde out any meanes to let him underſtand it, if his father determined ill againſt him, becauſe he being the Kings ſonne uſed not to goe alone, but with attendants, and if he ſhould ſend Lyra. unto him by any meſſenger, he knew not whom to truſt in this matter, as Lyra hath it. Wherefore Jonathan leadeth David out into the field to ſhew him the place, where he ſhould hide himſelfe, and by what meanes he would certifie him. V. 12. And being now in the field, he ſaid. O Lord God of Iſrael, when I have ſounded my father about to morrow any time or the third day, &c. For theſe words (O Lord God) in the vocative caſe the Sept. Chald. and Vatablus have (the Lord God of Iſrael) in the nominative, all the reſt of the words in this 12 verſe coming in by a parentheſis, and then thoſe v. 13. the Lord doe ſo and much more to Jonathan, doe make the ſpeech perfect, he imprecateth himſelfe, if he declared not unto David the minde of his father towards him, when he had once found it out. And this Willet preferreth, as the beſt reading, and I ſee no cauſe, why the firſt words ſhould be rendred in the vocative, and being read ſo, the ſenſe falleth not ſo well, but in the nominative very well, the Lord God of Iſrael, when I have ſounded my fathers minde, &c. and I ſend not to thee, &c. the Lord, I ſay, doe ſo, &c. Willet.

Jonathan having thus ſecured David by oath, as touching his faithfull dealing with him, before he propoundeth the meanes whereby he would let David underſtand Sauls minde, he interpoſeth a Covenant, to which he required David to agree, ſaying, and thou ſhalt not onely whileſt I live, yet ſhew me the kindneſſe of the Lord that I dye not, but alſo thou ſhalt not cut off thy kindneſſe from my houſe for ever. V. 14. V. 15. The Vulg. Lat. and Sept. render theſe words thus. And if I live, thou ſhalt ſhew me the mercy of the Lord, but if I dye, thou ſhalt not take thy mercy away from my houſe for ever; or if I ſhall not doe it, when the Lord hath rooted out the enemies of David every one from the earth, let him take Jonathan away out of his houſe, and the Lord require it at the hand of Davids enemies. Hebr. it is, And thou ſhalt not whileſt I yet live, thou ſhalt not ſhew the mercy of the Lord unto me, that I dye not: and thou ſhalt not cut off thy mercy from my houſe for ever, no not when the Lord hath cut off the enemies of David every one from off the face of the earth, whereby it appeareth, that much is added in the Vulg. Lat. for explication. But the ſenſe will better be made up thus, going word for word according to the Hebrew and ſome more words ſupplyed. I doe not onely pray God to doe ſo and ſo unto me if I be not faithfull, but I deſire not that thou ſhouldſt ſhew me any mercy, or ſpare me from death, but ſlay me as the ſonne of thine enemy. But I being faithfull to thee, thou ſhalt not cut off thy mercy from my houſe, when all thine enemies being deſtroyed thou ſhalt be advanced to the regall dignity: for to this Jonathan did verily beleeve, that David ſhould come.

So Jonathan made a Covenant with the houſe of David, ſaying, Let the Lord require it at the hand of David's enemies, that is, ſaith Junius, of them that ſhould breake this Covenant made with David. V. 16. Iunius. The Sept. render it, as a part of Jonathans oath, and let Jonathan be cut off by the houſe of David. Vatablus, and let David cut off Jonathan with his houſe. The Vulg. Lat. hath it both wayes. Let him take away or cut off Jonathan from his houſe, and the Lord require it at the hands of Davids enemies. Jonathan therefore made a Covenant with Davids houſe, and the Lord required it at the hands of Davids enemies. But the firſt of theſe, ſaith Lyra, is not in the Hebr. Text, whereby it appeareth that he judged it ſuperfluous, and the ſecond to be the true reading, ſaying, that the revenge, which God is ſaid here to have taken of Davids enemies, was that of cutting off Saul and others that conſpired againſt David, according to all Chriſtian expoſitours. Lyra. But the Hebrewes, he ſaith, turne it another way, God required it at the hands of Davids enemies, that is, of David, becauſe he brake this Covenant when he divided the land of Saul betweene Mephiboſheth and Ziba, for then ſaith R. Solomon, a voice came from God, ſaying, Rehoboam and Jeroboam ſhall divide thy kingdome. But to paſſe this over as an imagination; The reaſon of the difference amongſt expoſitours about the firſt words is, becauſe the word יכרת here uſed ſignifieth either ſhall cut off, or make a Covenant, in which laſt ſenſe it is uſed ch. 22. 8. becauſe it ſignifieth to ſtrike, and the word Berith being added it is ſpoken in this ſenſe Gen. 15. 18. ferire fœdus.

But I aſſent rather to Vatablus, taking this to be the ſenſe, and if Jonathan be not faithfull, David ſhall cut him off as an enemy alſo, with his houſe, and yet God ſhall not lay bloud to his charge, but ſhall herein be accounted to judge Davids enemies, as they are worthy, for their unfaithfulneſſe towards him. And if it be thus underſtood, both the proper ſignification of every word ſhall be retained, and the clauſe againſt Davids enemies will follow moſt aptly. But if it be expounded by making of a Covenant, both the future tenſe is taken as a preterperfect, and of the latter clauſe there will be no coherence.

And Jonathan cauſed David to ſweare againe becauſe he loved him, &c. The Vulg. V. 17.

Ar: Montan. Peter Martyr. Junius.

Lat. Arias Mont: Peter Martyr &c. Jo*nathan ſware againe to* David, Hebr. it is, Jonathan added to make David to ſweare, for the Verbe is in Hiphil, wherefore Junius rendreth it, Jonathan adjured D*avid*, and thus the word is uſed ch. 14. 27. when Saul is ſaid to have adjured the people. And when ſwearing to one is meant, the propoſition ל is uſed, as Gen: 47. 31. but here את, wherefore I aſſent to Iunius and our tranſlatours, to make a firme League betweene his houſe and D*avids*, he having bound himſelfe by oath, now cauſeth D*avid* to do likewiſe, ſee this farther approved, v: 42. and 2 S*am:* 23, 7. If the reaſon added ſhall ſeeme to make againſt this expoſition, for he loved D*avid*, it may well be taken as a reaſon of his making D*avid* to ſweare alſo unto him, that the league betweene them might be made moſt firme forever.

V. 18. P. Martyr.

Then Ionathan ſaid, To morrow is the new Moone, when thou ſhalt be miſſed, becauſe thy ſeat will be empty, &c. It may ſeeme ſtrange, that S*aul* ſhould expect D*avid* ſo ſoone after that he ſought his life, to come ſo neare unto him againe. Some thinke that the Hiſtory is tranſpoſed, and that this was before D*avids* fleeing to Naioth, but for this there is no colour of reaſon, ſome that D*avid* was before this againe reconciled to Saul, as P*eter Martyr*, but for this there wanted time. Others that Saul might forget what he had attempted againſt D*avid*, eſpecially conſidering the caſe that he was in, as Claudius the Emperour is ſaid to have beene ſo forgetfull, that he asked for thoſe at table, whom he had before put to death. But I rather thinke, that he ſuppoſed the matter to have beene ſo covertly carryed, as that D*avid* knew not of his evill intent againſt him, and for his ſtriking at him with a ſpeare, he might impute that to his phranticke fit then upon him, he doing therein he knew not what.

V. 19. Lyra.

Then Jonathan bade him hide himſelfe by the ſtone Ez*el*, that is, ſaith Lyra, according to the Hebrewes, by the ſtone of walking, becauſe that ſtone ſerved to direct travailers, that walked that way.

V. 20.

And I will ſhoot three arrowes, as though I ſhot at a marke, and I will ſay to my Lad, Goe and finde out the arrowes, &c. By ſhooting and ſpeaking to his boy he would ſignifie his minde unto D*avid* in caſe that there ſhould be any company in that way, ſo as that he could not ſecretly come and ſpeake unto him, for of this he was uncertaine. But it fell out otherwiſe, for he had the opportunity, after the ſhooting of his arrowes, to goe and ſpeake privately with him alſo. Or his device was to goe out with bow and arrowes onely with one lad, to avoid the company of other attendants at that time, ſo that he being ſent away with his bow and arrowes, he might be alone with D*avid*.

V. 25. Iunius. Vatablus. Lyra. Hugo Card, Joſephus.

The matter being thus ordered, J*onathan* commeth the next day to meet with Saul, and when the King ſate upon a ſeat by the wall, J*onathan aroſe and Abner ſate by* S*auls ſide, &c.* Touching J*onathans* riſing divers conjecture diverſly. J*unius*, that Saul was not there, when they began to ſit downe, ſo that J*onathan* tooke his place, but his father comming, he roſe up to give him the place, but S*aul* was ſet firſt, and therefore this cannot ſtand. Vatabl: and Oſiander, that J*onathan* being ſet before Abner came, aroſe to give him the place next the King. Lyra, that D*avid* uſed to ſit next the King, but now his place being empty, ſo that Ionathan, who uſed to ſit next unto him ſate next the King, he aroſe, that Abner might come next unto the King, becauſe it was not the cuſtome for the Kings ſonne to ſit next unto his father. And Hugo ſaith likewiſe, or that Saul being ſet, Ionathan roſe up to come to the Table. Pellican, that Ionathan uſing to ſit next his father, now pretending ſome other reaſon, aroſe from that place, and gave it to Abner, becauſe he feared ſome hurt from his father, if a phrenticke fit ſhould come upon him. It ſeemeth to me, that nothing is meant here by Ionathans riſing up, but that when Saul came to take his place, he being at his before, roſe up for reverence to his father, and then ſate downe againe to his meate, as others did. For Abner's ſitting by the Kings ſide, I*oſephus* ſaith, that he ſate on his left hand and Ionathan on his right. To this exception is taken by Willet, becauſe this had beene too great honour for the ſonne, but without juſt reaſon, ſeeing amongſt Princes the middle place is the moſt honourable, and it was not unuſuall amongſt the Iewes for an inferiour to be ſet on the right hand, and another on the left, the King ſitting upon a chaire of ſtate in the middle, as may be gathered from the requeſt of Zebedees ſonnes unto Chriſt; Grant that we may ſit one on thy right hand and the other on thy left in thy kingdome; which if there had beene no ſuch cuſtome, had beene a requeſt too arrogant. v:26. Saul ſpake nothing the firſt day, touching Davids abſence, V. 26. becauſe he thought happily, that he might be uncleane, for he thought, ſomething hath befalne him, be is not cleane, ſurely he is not cleane, the Vulg: Lat: he thought he was not cleane, nor purified; Junius, he is not cleane, and becauſe he is not Iunius. cleane he cometh not, ſupplying the laſt words, he commeth not, to make the ſenſe perfect, and this is the beſt, being word for word according to the Hebrew. Hereby cleane is meant legally cleane, which he thought David might not be, becauſe either he had touched ſome dead body, ſomething had come from him in the night, or he had lyen with his wife. For none but the cleane might eate of the ſacrifices. And herein the hypocriſie of Saul appeared in that he could Note. thinke upon legall cleanneſſe thus to be prepared, but for being cleane from foule ſinne, ſet forth hereby, and therefore chiefly to be lookt unto, he had no care of that in himſelfe, becauſe he was at this time full of deadly malice and hatred againſt David.

V. 27. The next day Davids place being empty againe, Saul asketh Jonathan for him. Whereas by the law one day onely was appointed to be kept for the new moone, ſomething hath beene already ſaid, why Saul kept two dayes, upon v:5 Willet. Willet addeth two reaſons more: Firſt, that ſuch as were not cleane the firſt day, might keep the ſecond, as they that were uncleane at the time of the Paſſcover the firſt month, were appointed to keepe it the ſecond month, Numb; 9. Secondly, becauſe it did not agree with the magnificence of the King, to keepe the feaſt no longer then the common People, whereas then they kept it one day, he would keepe it two. And upon the ſecond day he thought David might be cleane, although not upon the firſt, becauſe the uncleane by waſhing at even were made cleane.

V. 28, 29. Jonathan anſwereth for David, that he asked leave of him to goe to Bethlehem to a feaſt, as he had directed him v:6. but he addeth of his owne, that his brother ſent for him, and he was gone, wherein he ſhewed his infirmity by lying for his ſake; Joſephus alſo addeth, that Jonathan ſaid, he was alſo invited. Joſephus.

V. 30. Then Saul ſaid, Thou ſonne of a perverſe and rebellious woman, doe not I know, that thou haſt choſen the ſonne of Jeſſe to thy confuſion, and to the confuſion of thy mothers nakedneſſe? The Vulg: Lat: reſpecting rather the ſenſe then the words, hath it, fili mulieris virum ultro rapientis, that is, of an impudent whore, who ſought another man to lye with her, and Saul ſaith Lyra, ſpake thus, to intimate that Jonathan Lyra. Peter Martyr. proved himſelfe a baſtard, and none of his ſonne, becauſe he was ſo contrary to him, in loving David and taking his part, whom he ſo greatly hated. Some thinke, that he taxed his mother onely, for her croſſeneſſe unto him, and him Borrhaus. Genevenſ. for being like unto her. But becauſe he ſpeaketh of the confuſion of her nakedneſſe, I rather aſſent unto the firſt. Junius rendreth the words thus, thou moſt Iunius. contumacious ſonne of a moſt perverſe woman, disjoining the two ignominious words, and referring the one to Jonathan, and the other to his mother, as the Soph paſuch comming betweene ſheweth, that they are to be diſtinguiſhed.

V. 32. Then Ionathan replyeth, but what evill hath he done? Saul then waxed more mad and caſt a javelin at him to ſtrike him, that is, at his owne ſonne Jonathan V. 35, 36, 37, 28. &c. for pleading Davids cauſe. Wherefore he avoided the roome, and next morning betimes dealt with David as he had promiſed him.

V. 41. Then David roſe out of his place and bowed himſelfe three times to the ground, and they kiſſed each other and wept, till David exceeded; Iunius, till he Junius. had lifted up David, both againſt the current of all other expoſitours, and the proper meaning and placing of the words, which are עד דוד הגדיל till David made more teares to come out. And there was moſt reaſon, as Peter Martyr P.Martyr. hath it, that he ſhould exceed, becauſe he was now not onely to part from his deare friend, but alſo from his wife, and the people and Tabernacle of the Lord.

The Myſtery. Gloſſa Ordin. Myſtically by the arrowes ſhot by Ionath. when David was hid thereby, we may underſtand the holy Scriptures, ſhewing ſomething concerning Chriſt, when he was in the world, as it were hidden, for he came into the world and the world knew him not, for as the lad gathered up the arrowes, and bare them away, but knew nothing, ſo the Jews, who had the holy ſcriptures knew not Jeſus, of whom they ſpake, and therefore, as Saul at his feaſt gave the ſentence of death againſt David, ſo Pilat when the preparation was to the feaſt of the paſſeover againſt Chriſt.

CHAP. XXI.

V. 1. DAvid having taken his leave of Jonathan fled to Nob to Abimelech, the High-Prieſt, this was the ſame, ſaith Lyra, which is before called Abiah, ſe 1 Sam. 14. 3. 1 Sam. 14. 8. whereas Mark. 2. 26. David is ſaid to have come hither in the dayes of Abiathar the High-Prieſt, but Abiathar was not yet High-Prieſt, but the ſonne of Abimelech, the High-Prieſt, Ch. 22. 20. It is anſwered, that the father was called both Abimelech and Abiathar, and ſo was the ſonne by both theſe names: Beza in Marc. for Abimelech the ſonne of Abiathar is ſaid to bee High-Prieſt, when David was King, 2 Sam. 8. 17. and Ch. 25. 35. Abiathar is ſaid to bee Prieſt, and hither David came and not to Samuel againe, to avoid danger both to himſelfe and Samuel, for hee might more eaſily have beene purſued, and it would have beene taken more hainouſly at Samuels hands by Saul, ſeeing hee had H.B. Patriarks travailes. beene once with him before. Touching Nob, where the High-Prieſt now was, it was a City of Prieſts about 12, miles from Gibeah, from whence David fled, D. Kimhi. and 16. from Ieruſalem, and it ſtood in the Tribe of Benjamin not farre from Anathoth, wherefore they are named together, Nehem. 11. 32. Kimhi therefore was wide, who ſaith, that he learned of his father, that Nob was the ſame with Ieruſalem. Here it ſeemeth, was the Tabernacle at this time, and the Altar 2 Sam. 6. 1, 2. and Table of ſhewbread, for theſe were not disjoyned at any time, but the Ark remained at Kireath-jearim, ever ſince the bringing of it backe from the Philiſtims countrey, til the time of Davids reigne. Whereas David is ſaid to be alone, when he came to Abimelech, but v. 4 other young men with him are ſpoken of, and Lyra. Mar. 2. 26. Lyra ſaith, it is to be underſtood, that he was not ſo alone, but that he P. Martyr. had two or three ſervants with him, but becauſe he uſed to goe forth attended with many men, hee is ſaid, when hee had no more with him, to be alone. Peter Martyr ſaith, that hee was alone without one ſervant, for hee had appointed Ioſephus. to them ſuch and ſuch places, but he asked bread for himſelfe and them, when he ſhould come unto them who were not farre off: ſo likewiſe Joſephus, nec famulitiis ſtipatus, nec ſervis comitatus. But by that Mark. 2. 26. it is plaine that ſome were with him. Anſw. They were with him in the journey, as hee pretended, awaiting his comming againe to the place where he had ſet them not farre off, or now ready to come thither unto him hungry, and in want. To this effect alſo Abulenſ. ſaith, that he came alone to Abimelech, his ſervants being left elſewhere and ap-V. 2. pointed a place wherein to meete him again. David to excuſe himſelf for being Lyra. thus alone, fained, that the King had ſent him about a very ſecret buſines. Herein Hugo Card. David cannot be excuſed, ſaith Lyra, from telling an officious lye, ſo likewiſe Hugo, but yet he excuſeth him, becauſe in thus ſaying he intended no hurt to any Peter Martyr. man, but onely to get bread for his owne neceſſity. P. Martyr ſaith, that neither he nor Abimelech did any thing unlawful, and that the fault was only Sauls, and ſome, ſaith Willet, that hee lyed not, becauſe the King of Kings had appointed him to a ſecret buſineſſe, viz. to bee King. But wee need not thus to ſeeke to juſtify the beſt in all their actions, for there are none but have failed in ſuch caſes, and it cannot but be acknowledged a great fault in David thus to bring Gods Prieſts into danger, as he confeſſeth he feared, Ch. 22. 22.

V. 4. Abimelech ſaid, that hee had no common bread, but hallowed, if the young men had kept themſelves from women. David asked 5. loaves, happily, ſaith Hugo Cardin. Hugo, according to the number of men, that hee had with him. And ſeeing hee asked onely bread, hee ſheweth, that Prelates, when they came to Prieſts houſes, ſhould not looke for dainty fare, but be content with any thing for their neceſſity. The hallowed bread, which as our Lord ſaith, the Prieſts onely might eate, was the ſhew-bread, of which ſee Levit. 24. 7, 8, 9. there was alſo other holy bread, which was offered in peace-offerings, which was the Prieſts, Levit. 7. 9, 10. 14. Of which both they and their families might eate, or any perſon being cleane. And touching the ſhewbread, any of the people might eate of it in caſe of neceſſity, that is, being hungry and having no common bread to feed upon, and therefore this fact of Abimelech is juſtified by our Lord. For to feed the hungry is a morall duty, it being a point of love, to which ceremonies muſt give place, as is ſhewed by that ſaying, I will have mercy and not ſacrifice. And of this kinde was healing the ſicke upon the Sabbath day, the ceremony of reſting gave place to this worke of charity. But whereas ſome make eating ſwines fleſh under the Law to bee a like lawfull for a Jew in caſe of neceſſity, if he hath nothing elſe to eate, I cannot ſubſcribe to this, becauſe to do thus were to commit an abomination with the heathen Canaanites, & the 7. brethren in the Booke of Maccabees, are commended for that they would rather dye, then eate ſwines fleſh. Yet Peter Martyr ſaith, that they were required to eate in teſtimony of their forſaking of Gods Lawes, and not as being put to it through neceſſity, in which caſe it is not unlawfull. For the condition put by the Prieſt, if the young men have kept themſelves from women, that is, from their wives. For of the bread or meat conſecrated unto God none might eate, but the clean, and who ſo lay with his owne wife by the Law of Moſes was uncleane all the day after, untill Even, wherefore when the people were prepared to receive the Law, they were forbidden to come at their wives. Peter Martyr contendeth, that that Law ſhould bee underſtood of ſuch, as had a fluxe, or iſſue, but it is plainly meant of any companying of man and woman together for generation, compare Levit. 18. 20. Yet this proveth not, that now there is any uncleanneſſe in the Matrimoniall Act, for the bed of the marryed is ſaid to bee undefiled, but there was onely a Legall uncleanneſſe, as by an iſſue or fluxe, or touching any dead thing, &c. which, as all other ceremonies, ceaſed long agoe. Wherefore the Popiſh are in an error, who teach that the Matrimonial Act doth ſo defile, that it is unlawfull the day following to partake of the holy Communion, or to pray, and that by reaſon of this defilement it is unlawfull for Prieſts under the New Teſtament to marry, becauſe they daily celebrate the Communion. For touching the firſt, although the Apoſtle ſaith, Defraud not one another, except it be by conſent for a ſeaſon, that you may give your ſelves to faſting and prayer, yet it followeth not hereupon, that in the companying together of man and wife there is uncleanneſſe, hindering, and making unfit for thoſe duties, but becauſe of the pleaſure that is herein, which agreeth not with the ſorrow, that ſhould be at ſuch extraordinary times, the Apoſtle ſpake ſo. For if prayer could not ſtand with matrimoniall duties, then matrimony were altogether unlawfull, ſeeing wee muſt pray continually. And for eating the holy bread of the Communion, the Aaronicall Prieſts themſelves were not made unfit by companying with their wives, for they were marryed men, and attended daily upon the Altar, before that their number being much increaſed they were in Davids time diſtinguiſht into courſes, and ate of the holy bread and offerings. And if not immediately after ſuch matrimonicall acts, but they refrained becauſe of the law in force then, yet now there is no ſuch uncleanneſſe herein to hinder the people from receiving, or the Prieſt from adminiſtring. Yet for better preparation, and that the minde may not bee drawn away from divine meditations, all are to be adviſed, rather to refraine againſt the times of communicating, then to take their liberty herein. Yet Gergory ſaith, no neceſſity is to bee impoſed upon any man herein, but hee is to bee left to his owne diſcretion, and not for this to bee kept from the Communion by us, that knoweth not to burn, when he is put in the fire. St. Auguſtine ſpeaketh of ſome, that received the Communion every day, which hee doth neither praiſe nor diſpraiſe, but to receive every Lords Day he per-

Gregor. Siquis ſua conjuge non voluptate cupidinis, ſed procreationis cauſa utitur, de ſumendo corporis et ſangu. Domini myſterio ſuo relinquendus eſt arbitrio, quia a nobis prohiberi non debet, qui in igne poſitus neſcit ardere.

Willet.

Levit. 7. 19.
Levit. 15 18.
Exod. 19. 15.

Heb. 12. 4.

Cauſ. 33. qu. 4. c. Sciatis (fratres) quad quicunque uxori debitum reddit non poteſt vacare orationi nec de carnibus agni comedere.

1 Cor. 7. 5.

Theſ. 5. 17.

ſwadeth. De Dogmat. eccleſ. c.53. but from hence we may gather, that in the matrimonial duty it was then held, that there was no uncleanneſſe, for if ſo, what Chriſtian could have marryed? and if there were no uncleanneſſe to hinder receiving, there is none to hinder the adminiſtring of the holy Communion. To come now to the condition required by the Prieſt, If the young men have kept themſelves from women: Herein Ierom ſaith, Abimelech ſpake fooliſhly, for although they had not kept themſelves from women, he muſt not rather have ſuffered them to ſtarve, then to have given them holy bread. But happily he thought them not to be in ſo great neceſſity, and therefore he ſpake accordingly, that hee might not give them of this bread, except they were cleane, unleſſe in the caſe of extreame want to ſave their lives, in which caſe a ceremony muſt give place to charity. Moreover Iunius ſaith, he conſulted with God about giving him victuals, and by him was directed to queſtion this, ſee Ch. 22. 10. Wherefore the Popiſh in forbidding a Carthuſian to eate fleſh in what neceſſity ſoever, and a ſonne to come out of his monaſtery to labour for the reliefe of his aged Parents, although ready to periſh through want, doe groſſely erre, as the Phariſees overthrowing Gods Commandement by their traditions.

And the veſſels of the young men are holy, and the bread is in a manner common; yea though it were ſanctifi d this day in the veſſell; the Vulgar Latin, moreover tl is way is polluted, but it ſhall bee ſanctified to day in the veſſels, Junius, it is in a manner common with the Prieſts, eſpecially ſeeing other bread is ſanctified this day in the veſſell. The Vulgar Latin agreeth beſt with the Hebrew, והוא דרך חול which is word for word, and the way it ſelfe is common or uncleane, &c. but becauſe דרך ſignifieth alſo modum, manner, it is ſo rendred by ſome: the next words, penes ſacerdotes, with or in the power of the Prieſts, is added by Junius, for further expreſſion; and in the next, other bread, is added, and of the whole ſentence hee giveth this expoſition, the veſſels of the young men, that is, their bagges or ſackes, as the word is taken, Ch. 9. 7. and in the end of this verſe, the word veſſel is put for that, wherein the bread was put: David meaneth then, that the veſſels wherein they would carry the bread, were fit to put holy bread into, becauſe they were not uncleane: ſo likewiſe Hugo having expounded it another way, of their bodies, mentioneth this of veſſels or baskets to carry victuals in, ſaying, either it may ſo be underſtood. And Willet reaſoneth againſt that of bodies underſtood by veſſels, becauſe enough had been ſpoken of the cleanneſſe of their bodies before, in that they had not come at women in three dayes before, wherefore it is not likely, that David being in haſte would ſtand to iterate the ſame againe in other words more obſcure. And of the next words Iunius giveth this ſenſe; the time being now come to put other ſhewbread before the Lord, this is not now ſo holy, becauſe the Prieſts did eate commonly of it, but hee ſaith, theſe words are added by the author from Levit. 24. 9. And for expounding דרך in a manner, Willet argueth both from other places, where it is uſed in this ſenſe, as Eſa. 10. 26. and to prove, that it cannot be taken here for a way, he ſaith, that it is of the feminine gender and the word חול of the maſculine. But Comeſtor, Lyra, Peter Martyr, Borrhæus, Pellican, by veſſels underſtand bodies, as the word is taken, 1 Theſ. 4. 4. 2 Cor. 4. 7. and women are called the weaker veſſels, 1. *Pet.*3. 7. and ſo the meaning is, wee are not onely free from uncleanneſſe in reſpect of women, but in reſpect of any thing elſe, that might make us uncleane: and being thus expounded here is no repetition of the ſame thing, as was before objected, but a ſecuring of the Prieſt touching any manner of uncleanneſſe, about which hee might make ſcruple. As for veſſels to put the bread in, I cannot ſee, how they ſhould bee meant here, becauſe it is not likely, that Davids comming away being in haſt, he would goe or ſend home for bagges or baskets to put victuals in, but rather, that he was furniſhed with ſuch things where he had this bread. I aſſent, therefore to the moſt for this firſt clauſe. For the next, Lyra expoundeth it thus, in coming by the way, indeed happily wee may by ſome occurrence have contracted uncleanneſſe, but forſomuch as the veſſels of our bodies are cleane from women, wee

Junius.

Hugo Cardin.

Willet.

Schol.Hiſt.Lyra.Pellican.&c.

ſhall have a ſanctified uſe of this bread: or thus, this way or proceeding, to give to lay-perſons holy bread is uncleane, or unlawfull indeed, but our neceſſity, we being now ready to ſtarve, if we have it not, maketh it lawfull. Comeſtor, thy queſtion is prophane, for although we were cleane, we might not being no Prieſts eate of this bread, but neceſſity hath no law, and therefore we eating it in our neceſſity, it ſhall not be polluted, or any thing unlawfull be done, but this eating, and feeding the veſſels of our bodies with it, ſhall before God be counted an holy and lawfull uſing of it. Hugo followeth Comeſtor, but onely that he hath theſe words more. David by ſaying it is ſanctified in the veſſels, meant that he was ſanctified in his minde, for that with an holy minde and not willing to offend the law of God, he would uſe this bread being urged by neceſſity, otherwiſe he would not preſume to eate of it. Peter Martyr, I am in the manner of a prophane man, for whom it is not lawfull to eate it, but taking it for my neceſſity, and uſing it holily, it ſhall not be polluted. Oſiander, by Oſiander.
prophane way underſtandeth their buſineſſe, which was not religious, but worldly and common. Geneveſ: it ſhall be ſanctified in the veſſels, that is, having Geneveſ.
taken this bread, we will be more carefull to keepe our bodies holy. Vatablus, Vatablus.
we will keepe it holily in the veſſels, wherein we carry it. To me the meaning ſeemeth to be plainely this, the veſſels or bodies of the young men are cleane, and ſo holy, and thus fit to receive this bread, becauſe the Prieſt had ſpoken of his holy bread, although the way, which they have come, be common or uncleane, becauſe many in travell doe ſinne, being carryed by fleſhly luſts, nevertheleſſe it ſhall be ſanctified, that is, holily uſed, being received into their veſſels or bodies, becauſe they are none of that ſort of young men, but chaſt and fearing God, ſo קודש anſwereth to קודש holy bread mentioned by the Prieſt before, and חול common or prophane to חול common bread likewiſe before mentioned by him.

V.6. So the Prieſt gave him hallowed bread, for there was no bread there, but the ſhewbread, which was taken from before the Lord, to put hot bread in the day that it was taken away. Of this ſhew-bread there were 12 cakes, two tenth deales to a cake, and they were changed every Sabbath day, the old being taken off, and new being ſet on the Table of ſhew-bread, as is ſhewed, Lev: 24. 8. Hence it is gathered, that it was the Sabbath day, when David came to Abimelech, but this doth not neceſſarily follow, forſomuch as it is not ſaid, it was that day taken from before the Lord, but in the day that it was taken, hot bread was ſet there, ſo that it might be taken before the time of Davids comming, but not yet ſpent. And although the bread ſet on upon the Sabbath was hot, yet as Martyr ſaith, it was not baked that day, but the day before, and left in the Peter Martyr.
Oven all night. Of the myſtery of this bread, ſee Lev:24. and Exod: 25.30.
Martyr will have not onely the ſpirituall food of the word and ſacraments ſet forth hereby, and the number of 12. to ſet forth the 12 Apoſtles, but alſo how that we have all our corporall food from God, by the meanes of the heavenly planets, whoſe influences make the earth fruitfull.

V.7. Now there was a certaine man of the ſervants of Saul, there detained that day before the Lord, and his name was Doeg an Edomite. This of Doeg is here inſerted, becauſe of the hiſtory following ch: 22. of his accuſing Abimelech unto Saul. This Doeg, ſaith Lyra, was not in the Tabernacle, but in the Court, for into the Tabernacle none but the Prieſts might enter, and he was detained by reaſon of ſome Lyra.
offerings and prayers that he came to make upon a vow, which could not be finiſhed, but in more dayes then one, and he ſaith, he is held by the Hebrewes to have beene a judge, and the chiefe of Sauls judges, for judges are ſhepheards of the people, and he ſaith, it is not likely, that he was a keeper of Cattell, becauſe he is ſaid ch: 22. 9. to be the chiefe of Sauls ſervants. Hugo ſaith according to Hugo Cardin.
Joſephus, that he kept the Mules of Saul, and likewiſe the interlinear gloſſe, and that he was detained here by ſome vow, which he had made to continue at the Tabernacle in prayer certaine dayes; and that he was not a judge but a ſhepheard, or heard-man, (for רועה ſignifieth either) doe I thinke, for he was a ſervant of Sauls, as judges be not called. Doeg is ſaid to be an Edomite, as ſome

Iunius.

The Myſtery.

ſome thinke, becauſe deſcended of an Edomite, but by religion an Iſraelite; but Hebr: it is Adomite, and Junius thinketh, that he might be ſo called from the City Adamah in the Tribe of Nephtali, Joſh: 19. 36. or the prickes being changed, Adomite might be put for Edomite. In him was figured Judas, that betrayed our Saviour, and all ſuch, as pretend piety, but are full of malice and wickedneſſe in their hearts, ſuch are damnable hypocrites.

Lyra.

Junius.

Vatabl.P.Martyr, Oſiand.

P.Martyr.

V. 8, 9. Then David deſired of Abimelech a ſpeare or ſword, and he told him that he had none there but the ſword of Goliah, which lay wrapt in a cloth behinde the Ephod: How the head and armour of Goliah was diſpoſed of, ſee ch:17. 54. where it was ſhewed, that this ſword was placed in the Tabernacle for a monument of that victory, and not dedicated to God, as Lyra ſaith ſome doe hold, for if ſo, then it had beene unlawfull for David to take it, and to put it to any common uſe againe. Yet Peter Martyr ſaith, that it was dedicated, and therefore not to be taken, but in the caſe of neceſſity, wherein David now was. Whereas it is ſaid to have lyen behinde the Ephod; Junius rendreth the words thus, after that he had applyed the Ephod, he ſaid, behold the ſword of Goliah &c. lyeth wrapped up in a linnen cloth, approving this reading both from Jonathan the Chald: paraphraſt and Jeſhaiah an Hebr: interpreter, and from that which followeth, ch:22. 10, 11. where Doeg ſaith, that the Prieſt asked counſell of God for him, of which no mention is made here, unleſſe it be meant by theſe words after the Ephod, as it is in Hebrew, that is, after the Ephod applyed for conſultation. And it is not likely, ſaith Willet, that the rich Ephod, which was for the High-prieſt, did lye open for any man to come to it, ſo as that if Goliahs ſword lay behinde that, David could not have come to take it, as the Prieſt bade him, becauſe none but the Prieſts come into the Tabernacle, but onely to the doore thereof, and he referreth for the like uſe of the word אחרי to Deut: 24. 21. But although he bade David take it, it followeth not, that he meant he ſhould goe to the place, where it lay, to take it, for David by and by ſaith, Give it me, and ch:21. 10. he gave it unto him. In bidding him take it then, he onely made him the offer of it, ſo that this is no argument againſt the laying of it behinde the Ephod. Wherefore I ſubſcribe rather to the firſt and moſt received tranſlation; and for omitting his conſulting with God for David in this place, it is not a thing unuſuall in other places, for every thing done is not alwayes related at the firſt, but afterwards. When David heard of the ſword of Goliah, he ſaid, there was none to it, becauſe as Martyr hath it, he counted it, as it were a ſacrament, whereby Gods benefits paſt were brought to his minde, and his hope was further confirmed. Pellican thinketh, that David ſinned in taking this ſword, becauſe dedicated to God, and that he did unwiſely, being to goe amongſt the Philiſtims, who could not but know it.

Lyra.

Peter Martyr.

Stultitiam ſimulare loco prudentia ſumma eſt.

V. 10. Then David fled to Achiſh, the King of Gath, but when he heard it ſpoken amongſt his ſervants, that he was David King of the Land, he was afraid, and faigned himſelfe mad, &c. They called him King, ſaith Lyra, becauſe they had heard that he was anointed by Samuel, but that being ſo ſecretly done, ſaith Martyr, could not be knowne amongſt the Philiſtims, and therefore they called him ſo from the ſuperlative praiſe given unto him, when he returned in triumph from the ſlaughter of Goliah. Now David hearing this beginneth to ſee that he had done unwiſely in fleeing into the Philiſtims country, and to eſcape this danger, becauſe the report of his wiſedome and valour brought him into danger, he faigned himſelfe mad, and let the ſpittle fall upon his beard, and ſcrabled upon the dores of the Gate: thus ſome have acted the greateſt part of wiſedome, as Brutus, who likewiſe fained himſelfe mad, when he ſet himſelfe moſt ſeriouſly to meditate upon the good of the common wealth, and Vlyſſes, when he would not goe forth to Warre with the Grecians, like a mad man ſowing his ground, that was tilled, with ſalt. For theſe words, he ſcrabled, Martyr hath he deſcribed upon the doores, that is, ſaith he, ſome ridiculous and fooliſh things, and ſo the word ויתו ſignifieth, he ſcribled or made markes, for thus lunatickes and mad men uſed to doe. And this is ſaid to have come from a great feare, that was in David, and yet it is by many juſtified in him. For in diſſimu-

Willet.

lation it is to be conſidered; 1. with what minde it is done; 2. about what ſubject or matter; 3. for what end. For if it be not from a diſtruſtfull minde, but uſed as a meane to ſave a mans ſelfe, a confidence being ſtill in God to make this meanes effectuall, it is no ſinne; 2. if the matter about which, be not religious, but civill; 3. if the end be not uncharitable, but to doe good to himſelfe or others without hurt to any. And theſe three were in David at this time, for 1. although he feared, yet he caſt not away his confidence in God, ſee Pſ. 34. 6. 2. it was in a civill matter; 3. his end was to ſave himſelfe without hurt to any. But contrariwiſe he that diſſembleth, not having any confidence in God, in the time of danger, or in matter of religion for gaine or honour, as Simon Magus and other hypocrites, or laſtly with a malicious minde, the more cloſely to doe hurt unto his brother, as Cain to Abel, he ſinneth greatly against God, and therefore ſuch diſſimulation is by all men to be abhorred. Thus Willet, who alſo maketh a difference between diſſimulation in the carriage and geſture and lying, which is alwayes with a minde to deceive: for a man may tell an untruth and yet not lie, if he himſelfe thought it to be true, and in ſpaking the truth be a lyer, if he thought it falſe, as Auguſtine ſaith. Hee that telleth a thing falſe thinking it true, doth not deceive, but is deceived, and therefore is not to be reproved for lying, but for raſhneſſe. And againe, he that unwittingly ſpeaketh the truth with his mouth, but wittingly lyeth in his will, is not free from lying. Now although ſome diſſimulation be lawfull, yet no lying is lawfull, no not ſo much as the jeaſting or officious lye. For although there be no great fault herein, as Auguſt: noteth, yet they are not without fault. The firſt of theſe is not pernicious, because it deceiveth not, and the ſecond leſſe, becauſe it retaineth ſome good will, but if any man thinketh, that there is any kinde of lye that is not a ſinne, he deceiveth himſelfe. Reaſons againſt the moſt tolerable kinde of lying, is 1. becauſe the truth is hereby corrupted, 2. to lye is ſimply evill, as being contrary to God, and evill may not be done, that good may come of it, &c. ſo Peter Martyr. yet it is not lying to conceale part of the truth, as Samuel did, 1 Sam. 16. when he came to Bethlehem, nor alwayes when a man doth not, what he ſaith he will doe, as if a man taking a ſword of a man promiſing to give it him againe, if he proveth mad, although he now giveth him it not, doth not lye, as Auguſt: ſaith, and other like caſes may be put of parents, ſaying they will beate their children to terrifie them for their amendment, as God ſaid he would doe by Nineveh, but yet they doe it not.

Auguſt. Enchir. 22. Qui dicit falſum quod putat verum, non fallit, ſed fallitur: non itaque mendacii ſed temeritatis arguendus eſt. Nec ullo modo liber eſt a mendacio, qui ore neſciens verum loquitur, ſciens autem voluntate mentitur.

Peter Martyr.

Pellican.

Some to excuſe Davids fact here, ſay that he was taken with a fit of madneſſe, and ſome that he did it by a divine inſtinct; but what neede ſuch devices? Hee did thus to ſave himſelfe, and as ſome thinke, not without a myſtery, the account that Chriſt was had in being figured out hereby, for he was counted mad, and to Paul it was ſaid, Much learning hath made thee mad. Lyra ſaith, that Chriſt, according to this type, changed his countenance and geſture, when he taught the contempt of worldly things, which in the Law were promiſed as bleſſings, for which they counted him mad. Now this policy of David tooke ſo, as that Achiſh put him away, as a mad man, and he eſcaped.

Lyra.

V. 14, 15.

CHAP. XXII.

V. 1.
Lyra.
Joſh. 15. 35.

H.B. Patriarks travailes.

1 Sam. 24.

THEN David fled from Gath to the Cave of Odullam, which as Lyra and others ſay, was in the Tribe of Judah, of which Tribe David was, and therefore for his greater ſafety he fled thither amongſt his friends. It was a place full of Caves and Rockes, and therefore fit for fugitives to flee unto. It had the name from a little Towne called Odulla, of which, ſee Gen. 38. 1. where Judah is ſaid to have marryed the daughter of an Odullamite; it was from Jeruſalem 8 miles ſouthweſt, and from Gath 24. being derived from Ed, a teſtimony, and Dalim the poore. Here it is held by ſome, that David compiled Pſ. 57. and Pſ. 142. but it ſeemeth rather by the contents of thoſe Pſalmes, that he made them in the Cave in the Wilderneſſe of Engaddi, the one, viz. Pſ. 142.

when he lay hid there, as the title alſo ſheweth, for he prayed for deliverance from his enemies, as being in great danger, and the other, viz. pſ. 57. after that Saul had come into his danger there, becauſe he ſpeaketh of a pit made by his enemies, into which they themſelves fell, and the title of the pſalme is, when he Iunius. fled from Saul into the cave, ſo Junius, or he compiled Pſal. 14. 12. in this cave and Pſ. 57. in the other. Now whereas Odullam may ſeeme not to be in Judah, becauſe
v. 5. the Prophet Gad biddeth David to goe from the hold into the land of Judah. Junius alſo reſolveth this, by expounding the hold, wherein David was, Lyra. when Gad came to him, of an hold in Mizpah in Moab, but Lyra ſaith, that his father and mother tarryed with the King of Moab all the time that he was in prædicto fortalitio, and yet upon the next words v. 5. he ſaith, that Gad bade him goe from them leſt his company ſhould be corrupted with Idolatry, if they made Eccleſ Hiſtoria. any long ſtay in Moab. Comeſtor by theſe words, all the time that David was Hugo Card. in the hold, underſtandeth al the time that he was in his expedition, ſeeking ſtrong holds to lurke in. Hugo ſaith that David, when hee was in a polluted land, was bidden to goe into the land of Iudah, that hee might ſuffer perſecution, ſo that hee alſo is for ſome hold in Moab. I ſubſcribe to Comeſtor, that by hold not any particular hold is meant, but in generall, that hee ſhould no longer hide himſelfe in ſtrong places and caves, but goe, where he might bee in action and doe ſome good to his countrey, as the following hiſtory doth declare, that hee did. And why David ſhould keepe in a cave in Moab, I can ſee no reaſon, forſomuch as in that Countrey hee was out of Sauls reach, and ſo had no neede to hide himſelfe. Wherefore it is not ſaid, that Gad came to him to a cave, but onely, that he came and bade him not abide in a cave or hold, that is, when hee was in Moab, but had a purpoſe to goe againe and lurke in ſome part of the land of Iſrael in a cave, whilſt his friends, that were not able to follow, ſtayed in Moab, by cave not meaning the cave of Odullam, or one in Moab, but caves in generall, by enallage numeri, abide not in a cave, that is, not in caves, & yet it is not to be underſtood, that he was by the Prophet forbidden to keep at any time in a cave, for then hee had afterwards ſinned againſt this charge, but that hee ſhould not ſo hide himſelfe for fear of Saul, as to refraine from going out to exerciſe his military proweſſe upon the enemies of Gods Iunius. people, as his calling to be their King and Captaine required. Some tax David of weakneſſe in that he ſought to be hid in caves and rockes, ſaying, that Gad was therefore ſent to reprove him: but I hold rather with them, that ſay, that Gad was ſent to comfort him, for of reproof we read nothing here, neither did he any thing worthy of reproof to hide himſelfe, when he was in danger.

To the cave of Odullam repaired to him his brethren and all his fathers houſe, Lyra. becauſe, as Lyra and others have it, moſt probably they were perſecuted, and Joſephus. hardly uſed by Saul for Davids ſake. Ioſephus ſaith, that David ſent to his brethren to let them underſtand, where he was, or elſe they could not have known, V. 2. whither to reſort unto him. And together with his kindred, or after them came unto him all that were indebted, diſtreſſed, or diſcontented, to the number of 400. men, and he was their Captaine. By ſuch as were indebted, wee muſt underſtand ſuch, as had nothing to pay, or elſe it is likely, that David would not have received them; and for others in diſtreſſe, and diſcontent, it is likely, that many of them were in the ſame caſe with Davids fathers houſe, diſcontented at the tyranny practiſed by Saul upon ſuch, as would not ſhew themſelves enemies to David, and further his unjuſt deſignes againſt him. Now David received all theſe, not to attempt any thing with them againſt the King or his countrey, but for his owne comfort and theirs, and that their forces being united together they might the better defend themſelves againſt their enemies, and doe ſomething againſt the enemies of their countrey, as the following Lyra. hiſtory ſheweth, that they did. Wherefore, as Lyra ſaith, hee did nothing unlawfull herein, eſpecially being already anointed to bee King over Peter Martyr. Iſrael. And Peter Martyr noteth it to have beene a ſingular providence of God towards him thus to aggregate forces unto him in Sauls life time, that hee might make ſome beginning of executing his Kingly office for the defence of
the

the diſtreſſed, and the repreſſing of inſolent enemies, that Saul who unjuſtly perſecuted him, might bee the more vexed at it, and pine away through envy of his proſperous proceedings. And herein David was a type of Chriſt, as expoſitors generally note, in that ſuch as bee indebted by ſinne and diſtreſſed and troubled through Satans temptations, doe by faith and repentance come to him, and are protected againſt their ſpirituall enemies. If it be ſaid, David did like unto wicked Abimelech in receiving ſuch. It is anſwered, there was Iudg 9. great difference, for Abimelech gathered unto him for hire, vaine and wicked men, unjuſtly to obtaine the Kingdome, and to make way thereunto by the bloody and unnaturall murthering of his brethren: but David hired none, but they came voluntarily unto him, and if any of them were wicked and came to him in an ill minde, the fault cannot be laid upon him, for hee expoſtulated with them about this, 1 *Chron.*12.17. and Chriſt himſelfe had one follower of the 12. that was a Devill, and at this day hath many more, that gather to him, who be unſound, yea preachers that preach not in ſincerity. Phil.1.16,17.
Neither did David ambitiouſly ſeeke the Kingdome with theſe forces, or oppreſſe any of the people of God, but deſtroyed their enemies. Yet from Peter Martyr.
this meane beginning he grew up into a great Kingdom, as Moſes, and Cyrus, and Iulius Ceſar.

V. 3. And David went from thence to Mizpeh in Moab, and hee ſaid, Let my father and
V. 4. mother I pray thee remaine with you, till I know, what God will doe with mee. And hee brought them before the King of Moab, and they abode with him all the time, that David was in that fort. Mizpeh of Moab this is called, becauſe there was a City of the ſame name in Judah, 1 *Sam.*7. Junius for further explication ſaith, Iunius.
that is, to a denne or cave called alſo Malle, 1 Maccab. 5. 26. which ſignifieth ammunition. But enough hath beene ſaid already againſt Davids abiding in a cave in Moab. Hee came thither with his troupe to bring his father and mother, who were aged and ſo unfit to travaile, that with the King of Moab they might be ſafe from Sauls tyranny, till that hee had a more ſetled eſtate, and by him, ſaith Ioſephus, they were honourably entertained, although ſome of the Ioſephus.
Hebrews ſay that hee afterwards put them to death, after that upon Gads warning of him, hee removed from Moab into Iudah againe. Touching the reaſon why David fled into Moab, as ſome thinke, was becauſe hee was allyed to the Moabites by his great Grand-Mother Ruth: others, becauſe Saul made warre againſt the Ammonites, 1 Sam. 14.4.

V. 5. But the Prophet Gad ſaid unto David, Stay not in this hold, but returne into the land of Judah, and hee came to the foreſt of Hareth. This was doubtleſſe a great comfort to David to have the counſell and direction of a Prophet in the midſt of ſo great dangers, and he uſed the Prophet Gad divers times after, when he was King. 2 *Sam.*23. 1 Chron. 21. 2 Chron. 29. Whereas there were Prophets in the Church in thoſe dayes extraordinarily indued with the Spirit, but now wee have none, there was great reaſon for it. 1. Becauſe the Church had need Peter Martyr.
then to be nouriſhed in the hope and expectation of the Meſſiah, by the reviving of Propheſies. 2. Becauſe the Church was but in one Nation, which was hated and envied of all others, they needed Prophets to incourage them. 3. To ſtay them from going to wizzards, which was commonly practiſed by others round about them in thoſe dayes. 4. Becauſe they had not the Scriptures compleate, but onely the five Bookes of Moſes a long time, therefore for a ſupply of that defect God ſent them Prophets: ſo Peter Martyr.

V. 6. Then Saul hearing that David was diſcovered, and the men with him, hee remaining ſtill in Gibeah under a tree in Ramah, &c. and his ſervants about him, ſaid, Heare, yee ſonnes of Iemini, &c. Gibeah was the City of Saul in the Tribe of Benjamin, but Ramah was the place, where Samuel dwelt, farre from it, and therefore Ramah here muſt not be taken for a proper name, but appellatively for an high place, as Iunius expoundeth it, and hee ſat here under a tree or wood, as the Vulgar Latin, for it may bee taken either way. For the ſpeach made here by Saul unto his ſervants, hee asketh them, whether David would give to every P. Martyr.
one of them fields and vineyards &c. thus deriding Davids inability, for hee knew, that hee himſelfe being King had theſe to give, and that David had none: then hee chargeth them falſly to have conſpired with David againſt him, and likewiſe his ſonne Ionathan, when as David attempted nothing againſt him, but hee ſought Davids life unjuſtly. And herein he figured out the Antichriſt of Rome, who calleth his Councell about him, and thus upbraideth the Proteſtants for ambitiouſly ſeeking after Biſhoprickes and Arch-Biſhoprickes, &c. when as they ſeeke for no ſuch thing: thus Peter Martyr.

V. 9. Then Doeg told, what hee ſaw touching Davids comming to Nob to Abimelech, and his relieving of him with bread &c. but how Abimelech was deceived by Davids diſſimulation he told him not, which ſhewed his malicious deſire to provoke Saul againſt him, with whom hee had beene in pretence of great piety, not long before. For theſe words, Doeg, who was ſet over the ſervants of Saul, Iunius and Vatablus have it, who ſtood amongſt or with the ſervants of Saul, and this ſeemeth to be the beſt reading, becauſe Doeg was not ſet over all the reſt of Sauls ſervants, but over this cattell, as Ch. 21. 7. wherefore the Sept. Tranſl. hath it, ſet over the aſſes of Saul. Whereas hee ſaith, that the Prieſt asked counſell for David of the Lord, ſome ſaith Lyra, thinke that he lyed, but becauſe Abimelech himſelfe confeſſeth it, v. 15. it is plaine, that hee lyed not, but his ſinne was great in that hee malitiouſly reported that which Abimelech did innocently, as done by way of conſpiracy with David againſt Saul. And therefore Pſal. 52. David inveyeth bitterly againſt him, and propheſieth his deſtruction. Hee was a true Edomite, hating David, and Gods Prieſt, as Eſau did Iacob, and ſuch are all that to curry favour with Princes do accuſe unto them his faithfull ſervants and ſtirre them up againſt them.

Iunius.

Lyra.

V. 11. Saul then ſent for Abimelech and all his fathers houſe, and when they were come unto him, hee charged Abimelech with that which hee had done for David, as done againſt him. Abimelech pleadeth his innocency and Davids, but the tyrant fully bent to deſtroy him and all his fathers houſe, how juſt a defence ſoever hee made for himſelfe, denounceth the ſentence of death againſt them all. Abimelech pleadeth 3. things, as Peter Martyr noteth, in his owne defence: 1. Davids faithfulneſſe to Saul in times paſt, neither did hee at his comming to him know any thing to the contrary. 2. That hee was the Kings ſonne in law, and ſo what hee did for him a man would thinke ſhould have beene kindely taken by the King. 3. This was not the firſt time, that hee asked counſell of God for him, but hee had uſed ſo to doe in times paſt, and it was accepted by Saul, and therefore hee thought, that hee would not bee offended now at it. And this is implyed in the interrogative; Did I then begin to inquire of God for him? Yet David Kimhi readeth it affirmatively, as if hee had pleaded, that this was the firſt time. Whereas hee ſaith nothing of Davids diſſembling, that hee came about the Kings buſineſſe, which might probably have excuſed him moſt, Ioſephus ſaith, that hee ſpake of that alſo, and therefore ſome thinke that all is not ſet downe, which Abimelech ſpake: but others, that hee concealed it purpoſely, leſt if David ſhould happily be reconciled unto Saul againe, he ſhould fare the worſe for revealing it at Davids hands. Saul who breathe out nothing but death and deſtruction for conſulting with God, aptly figureth out the Antichriſt of Rome, who objecteth hereſie & rebellion to thoſe, that ſeek to Gods Oracles, that is, his word, for their direction. So Borrhe.

Peter Martyr.

Borrhaus.

.17. Then Saul bade the footemen about him to ſlay the Prieſts, but they would not, then hee bade Doeg, who forthwith ſlew them to the number of 85. Perſons, and after this hee deſtroyed their City Nob, both men, women, and children, and ſucklings, oxen, aſſes, & ſheepe. But Comeſtor referreth theſe words he raſed Nob and ſlew, &c. Saul who by his men did this after to the ſlaughter made by Doeg. Abimelech having made his defence no better, but having ſaid ſomething, whereby God might be offended with him, in that hee pleadeth that he knew not David to have been proſcribed by Saul, as if he would not have recieved him in his neceſſity, had it been known unto him, and ſomething, whereby Saul might bee more offended, in that hee ſo praiſed David for faithfull and honourable when he ſaw Saul to be ſo ſet againſt him, and omitting altogether all prayer for pardon. Saul preſently commandeth execution to be done, and it is done by Doeg and his ſervants, for it cannot be conceived, that hee could doe it alone, to kill ſo many and to deſtroy all the people, and cattle in an whole City. Other ſervants of Saul refuſed to doe this bloudy act, but this Doeg partly out of malice, which the wicked commonly beare againſt the godly, and partly to curry favour with Saul for his owne benefit, doth it without delay, as is intimated in Pſ. 52. which was made purpoſely againſt him. Now although this was a moſt unjuſt fact in Saul to murther the Prieſts of the Lord, yet it was a judgement juſtly brought upon the houſe of Eli, according to that which was threatned, 1 Sam: 2. 31. And it is not to be doubted, but that there were other ſinnes in theſe Prieſts, although unknowne to us, for which they were thus cut off, howbeit that againſt Saul they had done nothing worthy of death: for Gods judgements are often ſecret, but alwayes juſt. By this example, as Martyr noteth, we may ſee that the High-prieſt of old was not above, but under the King, to be ſummoned and judged by him: ſo Solomon afterwards caſt out Abiathar from being Prieſt, and before Conſtantine the Emperour the Biſhops accuſed one another, and Juſtinian depoſed Sylverius, and Vigilius, Biſhops of Rome. Yet now he that taketh upon him, to be the High-prieſt of all the Church, uſurpeth authority over Kings and Emperours, affirming, that he may not be judged by any man, as Pope Nicholas, and the Decretals, that no man may ſay to the Pope, why doſt thou ſo? yea, he exempteth all his Clergy from the ſecular juriſdiction, contrary to Rom. 13.

1 King. 2. 26.

Beſides the cruelty here expreſſed, Joſephus ſaith, that Saul cauſed the City of the Prieſts to be razed to the ground, thus leaving the very Tabernacle of God, that was there, in deſolation, without any miniſter to ſerve about it. Whereby we may ſee how he increaſed in wickedneſſe drawing nearer to the time of his cutting off by Gods juſt judgement. When he went againſt Amalek, he ſpared ſome things contrary to the expreſſe word of God, but now, it being the will of God, that he ſhould have ſpared, he deſtroyeth all, neither was he touched with any remorſe, as then we read upon Samuels admonition, that he was. So that in him, ſaith Joſephus, we may ſee the condition of wicked men, when they have no power, they ſeeme to be good and kinde, and humble, but comming to have power, they ſhew their nature, which was before cunningly hidden, to be moſt wicked, cruell and bloody.

Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 6. c. 14.

Some queſtion here, whether Sauls ſervants did well in refuſing to ſlay the Prieſts, when Saul commanded them? but this is eaſily reſolved, we muſt rather obey God then man. Whereas Doeg is ſaid to have ſlaine 85 perſons that did weare a linnen Ephod; Lyra ſaith, that they came to Saul in their Ephods, thinking hereby to move him the more for reverence to God, whoſe Miniſters they were, to ſpare them from deſtruction: thus alſo Oſiander. But Vatablus, Martyr, and Junius, that they were not now clad with Ephods, becauſe they were to be worne onely in Miniſtring before the Lord: but they are ſaid to have worne them, becauſe there were ſo many ſlaine, that were come to full age actually to ſerve about the Tabernacle in Ephods. I preferre the firſt, holding, that this clauſe is added to aggravate Doegs ſinne, in that they having on the holy veſtiments, which ſhould have ſtricken a reverence into him, he yet preſumed ſo atheiſtically to ſlay them, as it were, in deſpight of God, in whoſe liveries they were. And it is ſaid a linnen Ephod, to difference it from that which the high-prieſt did weare, which was much more rich and precious. In that ſucking children were alſo ſlaine, herein David was againe a type of Chriſt, becauſe at his fleeing into Ægypt, the infants in Bethlehem were ſlaine alſo by the command of cruell Herod.

Lyra.

Oſiander.

Vatabl. P. Martyr.

Oſiander.

V. 20. But one of the ſonnes of Abimelech, Abiathar, eſcaped and fled after David, &c. Saul thought to have rooted out all the poſterity of Abimelech, but God preſerved one ſtill from his rage, yet it was but to endure more miſery, and to be grieved at his future depoſing, 1 Kings 2. 26. according to the prophecy againſt Elies family, 1 Sam. 2. 32. He brought the newes to David, at which he was greatly grieved, and comforted Abiathar by promiſing to be his protectour.

CHAP. XXIII.

CHAP. XXIII.

V.1. HERE it is ſhewed, how David was certified, that the Philiſtims invaded Keilah, and ſpoiled the threſhing floores thereof, that is, by carrying away their corne, and it is likely, as Lyra hath it, that the men of Keilah ſought Lyra. to David for ſuccour in this their diſtreſſe, wherein he was alſo ready both for his love to the children of Iſrael, and becauſe he being anointed King, it was his part to defend them, as his Subjects. But becauſe he would goe upon good V.2. ground, he firſt asketh counſell of the Lord, and is bidden by him to goe against V.3. the Philiſtims and promiſed he ſhould prevaile, and when his men forecaſting the danger of Saul, that they might thus come into, he conſulted againe, not that he doubted, but to ſatisfie them, and for their confirmation, and then he was aſſured againe of the victory.

V.5. Then David went with his men, and having ſmitten the Philiſtims tooke their Cattle, that is, the beaſts, which they brought with them to carry away the corne and proviſion of the men of Keilah. Touching Davids asking councell of God, before he would goe to battell, herein he did as the children of Iſrael had done before, *Judg.*1.1.& 20.18. and it is the onely ſure way, when at any time a people goe forth to warre, to ſeeke firſt unto God to have Peter Martyr. him propitious; to doe otherwiſe, is temerity and raſhneſſe, as Peter Martyr noteth.
Lyra. Hugo For the manner of Davids conſulting with God, Lyra, Hugo, Martyr and Card. Borrhaus. others, for the moſt part hold, that it was done by the Prieſt Abiathar having Oſiander. the Ephod, which he brought with him, when he fled unto David, v. 6. But Junius. Junius and Willet following him will have it by a Prophet, and moſt properly by Gad, becauſe it is ſaid, that Abiathar came to David to Keilah, but this conſultation Joſeph.l.6.c.14. was before his coming to Keilah, and Joſephus ſaith, that he conſulted with God by a Prophet. And this is the rather to be followed, becauſe when he conſulted by the Ephod, *v.*9. it is mentioned, for he ſaid to Abiathar, Bring hither the Ephod, whereas nothing is ſpoken of it in this place, but v. 6. it is recorded, that Abiathar brought it with him, as a preparative to the conſulting hereby ſpoken of, v. 9. that we may underſtand, how it happened, that they had then the Ephod to aske counſell by. Of conſulting by the Ephod ſee before, ch. 14. 18. and Numb. 27. 21.

V.7. Then it was told Saul, that David was come to Keilah, and he ſaid, God hath ſhut him up in my hand, &c. Hereby the blindeneſſe of Saul appeared; he for his wickedneſſe was hatefull to God, and yet he ſpeaketh as if he thought God to be on his ſide and againſt David, and ſo doe others, who be enemies to Gods Note. ſervants and to his truth, as the Papiſts in their warres againſt the Proteſtants, who give for their poſie, Adjutorium noſtrum in nomine Domini, and in their perſecuting Peter Martyr. proceedings begin with theſe words, In nomine Domini, as Peter Martyr noteth, and ſo did Sennacherib, comming againſt Jeruſalem, Am I now come up 2 King.18. without the Lord, ſaid he, by his Generall Rabſhakeh? ſo do the wicked flatter themſelves with an opinion of Gods being with them, when he doth utterly abhorre both them, and their wayes.

V. 9,10,11. Then David underſtanding of Sauls purpoſing to come againſt him, conſulteth 12. with the Lord by the Ephod, and firſt receiveth anſwer, that Saul would come to Keilah, as he had heard, and 2^{ly}. that the men of Keilah would deliver him and his men into Sauls hands. He enquireth of both together, but hath an anſwer given onely to one at the firſt, and then asking againe touching the other, anſwer is made to that alſo. The Rabbins hereupon, ſaith Martyr, faigne, that the divine oracle never gave anſwer to any more, then one demand at one Lyra. time, but there is no ground for this, it is rather to be held with Lyra, that although two queſtions be here propounded together, yet but one was asked firſt, and that being anſwered, the other: or God would have him ſeeke againe unto him, before hee would anſwer all, to teach us that he loveth to be importuned by us in prayer, and to be often ſought unto, as alſo is taught Luk. 18. For touching a double enquiry made of the Lord, and all anſwered at once, we read 1 Chr. 14. 10.

Whereas the Lord anſwered, Saul will come downe, and the men of Keilah will V. 11, 12.
deliver thee up to him, and yet neither of both was done, it is to be underſtood for the juſtifying hereof, that Saul would have come, if David had ſtaid there, and if he had come, they would have delivered him up, but not otherwiſe.
Wherefore David with his men departing thence, Saul hearing of it went not forth, for both Saul had his ſpies to watch David, and David his to watch V. 13.
Saul, whereby it came to paſſe, that either ſooe heard of the proceedings of the other, and did accordingly. The men that went with David now, were 600, but before 400, ſo that his company was not waſted by warring with the Philiſtims, but increaſed, none fell from him for feare of Sauls comming, but more were added, even as in the time of perſecution, the Church was in- Peter Martyr.
creaſed, when many were killed, as Martyr noteth, who alſo ſaith, that God could as well have given David victory againſt Saul, as againſt the Philiſtims, if he had ſtaid his comming to Keilah, but forſomuch as Saul was his anointed, the Lord would not have David to fight againſt him, and he being deſtroyed, to come to the Kingdome, becauſe that would have beene a blemiſh to him, and it might afterwards have been objected to him that he ſought and came to it by ambition. Yet Jehu by going againſt King Joram and ſlaying him, attained 2 King. 19.
his Kingdome, and was approved therein: but Joram was not anointed, as Saul was, that we read of, but came to the Kingdome by ſucceſſion, and both he and all Ahabs poſterity were adjudged before to deſtruction by the Lord, for Ahabs wickedneſſe, and Jehu was ſtirred up by the Lord to doe the execution, a Prophet being ſent unto him, 2 King. 9. 7.

Then David aboad in a mountaine, in the wilderneſſe of Ziph, and ſome- V. 14.
times he was in a wood there, for Saul ſought after him continually. Ziph was a City in the Tribe of Judah, Joſh. 15. from whence this wilderneſſe had the H.B. Patriarks name, Zepheth ſignifieth pitch, wherefore it is likely, that pitch abounded here, travailes.
and ſo this City tooke the name therefrom, it was 22 miles from Jeruſalem V. 16, 17, North-eaſt, ſo H. Bunting. Here Jonathan came to David into the wood, and 18.
renued his League with him, and comforted him, by ſaying, that his father ſhould not finde him out, and that he ſhould be King, and he next unto him in the kingdome. The renewing of their Covenant before the Lord, ſaith Comeſtor, was before Gad the Prophet and Abiathar the Prieſt. Jonathan, ſaith Schol. Hiſtor.
Lyra, knew, where David was, to goe unto him, although Saul knew not, be- Lyra.
cauſe there were meſſengers ſecretly paſſing betweene them, as betweene moſt entire friends. And this was the third time of their ſwearing either to other, 1. in the houſe, 1 Sam. 18. 3. 2. in the field, ch. 20. and 3. in this wood; which he morrally applyeth thus, ſo the faithfull ſoule entereth into Covenant with God, 1. in the houſe of the heart, 2. in the field of the worke, 3. in the deſert H. Bunting Pa- of contemplation. From Keilah to this Ziph, are reckoned 4 miles. Touching triarks tra- Jonathans ſaying that he knew David ſhould be King and he next unto him, in vails.
the firſt hee ſpake upon ſure ground, becauſe he was by Samuel anointed, and becauſe Samuel had told Saul that God had rejected him and choſen his neighbour, and for the grace wherein David was with all the people. But for the ſecond, preſuming only upon that great league of friendſhip, which was betwixt him and David, but as the hiſtory afterwards ſheweth, he was herein deceived, for he dyed before that David attained to the Kingdome, ſo that as Martyr Note.
noteth, the ſervants of God may be deceived in their confidence touching tem- P. Martyr.
porall things, whereof they have no certaine promiſe, but ſo farre forth, as they make for Gods glory and for their good. Others to juſtifie his ſaying, ex- Pellican.
pound it as a requeſt made by him unto David, and ſome of the heavenly king- Oſiander.
dome.

Then came the Ziphims to Saul, ſaying, Doth not David hide himſelfe with us in V. 19.
ſtrong holds and woods? Theſe Ziphims were of the Tribe of Judah and came of Caleb, 1 Chron. 2. 42. In complaining of them David calleth them ſtrangers, Pſ. 54. 3. becauſe in their affection they were eſtranged from him, although of his owne Tribe. That which moved them to this treachery againſt David was doubtleſſe the great feare, wherein they ſtood of Saul, if they ſhould have P. Martyr.

forborne to certifie him of Davids lurking,being warned by the example of the City of Nob.The place,wherein he was,they ſay,was Hachilah, on the ſouth of Ieſhimon,the Vulg. Lat.on the right hand of the deſert,ſo likewiſe Iunius.Hebr.
it is on the right hand of Jeſhimon, and Jeſhimon ſignifieth a wilderneſſe,but moſt take it for a proper name,and this is to be preferred,becauſe the word מדבר is commonly uſed for a wilderneſſe,and David is ſaid now to have been in a wilderneſſe, and if by Jeſhimon a place known particularly by that name had not beene meant,how ſhould Saul by this deſcription have known the better,where David was,when they certified him, that he was in the wildernes near to them, on the ſouth of the wildernes,for there being many wilderneſſes,it would have been uncertaine,which they meant. If it be ſaid,hee could not but underſtand it of the wilderneſſe of Ziph, the ſouth or right ſide of it I ſay, why then did Peter Martyr. they vary the word; and not ſay Midbar, but Jeſhimon? Peter Martyr ſaith, that David upon this occaſion compiled not onely Pſal. 54. but alſo 99. Pſal.
116. and 31. And it was a moſt inhumane part in them to deale thus with one of their owne Tribe, who fled to them, thinking, that for their nearneſſe to him in blood they would have been a ſuccour to him againſt Saul. In theſe men therefore the Jewes were figured out, of whom it is ſaid, when they rejected Joh 1.11. Chriſt and delivered him to death, Hee came amongſt his owne but his owne
V.21. received him not. Saul is glad of this treachery of the Ziphims and bleſſeth them therefore, who were indeede accurſed for this wickedneſſe by David led by a better Spirit. Pyrrhus an heathen King met with better meaſure at the Romans, his enemies hands, for they let him underſtand of the treachery of his Phyſitian who offered them to poiſon him; and the Faliſci, to whom they ſent their Schoolemaſter home bound,that went about to betray their City to them by bringing the children of noble men into their power, which had beene to him committed for their education.

V.22. Saul finding, that the Ziphims were for him,biddeth them diligently to note all his lurking places,for ſaid he,it is told mee,that hee dealeth very ſubtilly,the Vulg.
Peter Martyr. Iunius. Latin,for hee thinketh of mee,that I lay wait ſubtilly for him.Peter Martyr,he ſaid unto mee,that he was moſt crafty. Junius,he himſelf told me, that hee was wont to uſe ſubtilty. The Sept. for Saul ſaid,leſt he uſe craft, the Hebr. is,for he told me, or one told mee, that he is very ſubtle, and this is the ſame in effect with our tranſlation, neither is any thing ſupplyed, but the Nominative to the verb אמר, which is left to bee underſtood, and that is, ſome one, whom Saul had imployed to obſerve David.That of Junius,that David in times paſt when he did ſo proſperouſly,being asked by Saul, how he handled the matter ſo to prevaile at all times anſwered, that hee uſed policy,is not ſo probable; becauſe he then went armed with a ſtrong band, neither needed hee, as now, to ſhift from place to place for his owne ſafety, which is the Subtilty here meant. All other expoſitions goe from the originall,and ſo may eaſily bee rejected.

V.24. And they aroſe and went to Ziph before Saul, but David and his men were in the Wilderneſſe of Maon, on the ſouth of Jeſhimon. Iunius the Ziphims went before Saul, when hee and his men were in the Wilderneſſe of Maon, on the ſouth of the Wilderneſſe. Hebr. and David and his men were, &c. The Ziphims going before Saul to ſearch out David found him in the Wilderneſſe of Maon, which Maon was alſo a City in the Tribe of Judah, not farre from H.Bunting Periar.travailes. Ziph, Ioſh. 15. about 4. miles, as one ſaith, and this was alſo on the ſouth of the ſame Wilderneſſe called Ieſhimon. Then Saul followed with his Army,and Iunius. David hearing of it, went downe to a rock there. Iunius ſaith, hee went downe from the rocke, that was in the Mountaine, Hachilah before ſpoken of v. 19. the Hebr. is, hee deſcended the rocke, moſt probably, as Iunius hath it, it being meant, that hee went downe from the hold or rocke in the Mountaine, that Saul comming might not finde him there, and therefore it is immediately ſaid, that Saul and his men went on the one ſide of the Mountaine and David and his men on the other ſide. Yet I doe not thinke with Iunius, that the aforeſaid Hachilah is here meant, for that was in the Wilderneſſe of Ziph, this of Maon, for David ſtayed not long in any place, but was before
the

the returnes of the Ziphims to ſeeke him, gone to another rock. Yet generally it is rendred, hee deſcended to a rocke, and Willet who in all other things almoſt Willet. followeth Iunius, herein leaveth him, and defendeth the moſt received reading, but upon weake reaſon. The ordinary Gloſſe ſaith, that hee went to the rocke, to leave this carriage there in ſome cave, that hee might with the more expedition paſſe on, but this is very improbable.

Saul being come to the Wilderneſſe of M*aon* purſueth D*avid* ſo hard, that V. 26. hee was in danger of being even now taken by him, wherefore he made haſte to get away for feare of S*aul.* But God by his ſingular providence ſaved V. 27. D*avid*, by calling Saul off from this purſuite, for a meſſenger came to him to tell him that the Philiſtims invaded the land, and ſo hee left purſuing D*avid* for that time to goe and fight againſt them. The Vulgar Latin hath it, he deſpaired of eſcaping from Saul: Peter Martyr, David haſtened to goe away from the face of S*aul.* And thus it is Hebr. there being no word to ſet forth his feare or deſpaire, except the word נחפז be taken for to bee terrified, as it alſo ſignifieth, but then it muſt bee rendred, David was terrified at the preſence of Saul. But that hee deſpaired not, appeareth by Pſal. 116. which M*artyr* thinketh, peter Martyr. that hee made upon this occaſion. Hee was toſſed betweene feare and hope, for hee ſaith, that the ſnares of death did beſet him round, but hee alſo ſaith, that then hee called upon God for deliverance, which ſheweth his faith. Whereas v. 11. hee confeſſeth, I ſaid in my haſte, that all men are lyers, which ſome underſtand, as ſpoken of S*amuel*, and that D*avid* began now to doubt of the truth of that, which S*amuel* had told him touching the Kingdome: this is rather to be underſtood of the Zi*phims* and the men of Keilah, who dealt ſo falſly with D*avid*. But R. Kimhi maketh a diverſe conſtruction thus, although I doubt, yet God is true, for all men are lyers, and therefore I. Thus P. M*artyr*. But I rather hold with J*unius*, that he ſpake ſo having reſpect unto S*amuel*, for he ſaid ſo in Iunius. his paſſion through the greatneſſe of trouble, for hee profeſſed ſtill, that he beleeved. Thus God ſometimes ſuffereth his to fal into the greateſt ſtraights whereby they are much terrified, but let us take heed, that our faith be not overwhelmed with feare, for when all things may ſeeme to be moſt deſperate, then God is Note. neareſt at hand to deliver us, as he did D*avid*. Some ſay, that D*avid* feared not ſo much for himſelf, but for his company, or becauſe he would by no meanes fight againſt S*aul* being the Lords anointed. Gloſſe Ord. that although he doubted not, but hee ſhould bee preſerved to enjoy the Kingdome promiſed; yet hee feared both for his men, leſt many of them ſhould periſh; and for many, that involuntarily followed S*aul*, leſt they ſhould periſh. For S*auls* ceaſing to purſue D*avid*, that hee might goe againſt the P*hiliſtims*, Joſephus and after him Joſephus. Pellican thinke, that hee did it out of the love of his Countrey, which did beare more ſway with him to preſerve it, then his private ſpleene againſt D*avid* to make him ſtill to purſue him, the weale publike being neglected. But Peter M*artyr* ſaith, that it is not to bee imputed to any goodneſſe in S*aul*, for hee had done the office of a good Prince, if hee had ſo loved his Countrey, but to Gods providence over-ruling him at this time, as afterwards Sennacherib to make him leave the beſieging of Jeruſalem, when hee heard, that T*irbakah*, 2 King. 19. the King of E*thiopia* had invaded his land. But forſomuch as even in naturall men there may bee an earneſt love to their Countrey, and an hatred of ſome enemies more then of others, and a greater deſire to reſiſt them, ſpecially for their owne greater good, I ſee not, why this ſhould bee denyed to have beene in S*aul* or S*ennacherib*, nay God hereupon, that hee might give S*aul* an occaſion to ceaſe from purſuing D*avid*, when hee was even ready to take him, ſtirred up both the P*hiliſtims* to invade his Countrey, and ſome man ſpeedily to certifie him thereof. For hee ſaw, that by D*avid* there was not likely to be any preſent danger, becauſe yet hee attempted nothing againſt him, but by the Philiſtims there was danger of ſubduing his Kingdome to them, and then it would have beene too late to goe againſt them, but for D*avid*, hee thought that hee might returne and take him as well another time. S*aul* being thus called away V. 28. and D*avid* by this meanes eſcaping, in remembrance of this deliverance he called the place, where Sela-Hammalekoth, that is, the rocke of direnſptions, becauſe the forces of Saul were here broken off from Davids.

Junius. V. 29. And David went from thence and dwelt in ſtrong holds in Engedi. This is alſo in the Hebrew added to this Chapter, the Vulgar Latin, and Junius referre it to the next, herein following the Sept. ſo likewiſe Peter Martyr. But I, as our tranſlation, follow the originall. H.B. Patriarks travailes. En-gedi was a ſtrong Caſtle ſituated in a Mountaine neare to the dead Sea, the Mountaines here were of a wonderfull height, in ſome places high ragged rockes appearing, which were fearfull to behold, and in others places plaine and fruitfull valleys, it was from Maon 36. miles, yet in the Tribe of Iudah alſo, Joſh. 15. Here grew in the fruitfull places, Vines, and other fruits and a Balſam, wherefore Solomon in his Song ſpeaketh of the Vineyards of En-gedi. It ſignifieth the Fountaine of a Kid or Lambe. To this place being in the extremity of the land, and ſtrong by nature, David came, thinking that Saul would not follow him hither, where an Army could ſo hardly paſſe, but he ſo greatly thirſted after his bloud that as nothing could ſtay him from purſuing after him, as the next Chapter ſheweth.

The Myſtery. For the Myſtery in this Chapter, The men of Keilah who received ſo great a benefit of D*avid*, but yet ungratefully would have delivered him to Saul, doe figuer out the Jewes, amongſt whom Chriſt delivered and cured many, but they delivered him into the hands of the ſecular powers to bee crucified, wherefore hee left them. And the like is to be ſaid of the Ziphims.

CHAP. XXIV.

V. 2. THen Saul hearing, that David was at En-gedi went out with 3000. men to ſeeke him upon the rockes of the wilde Goates, Junius, rupicaprarum, the Vulgar Latin, quæ ſolibicibus perviæ ſunt, which are paſſable onely to the Ibices, that is, ſaith Lyra, a wilde Goate, which caſting himſelfe downe from the toppe of a rocke, pitcheth upon his hornes without hurt; ſo that the place was difficult and dangerous to travaile in. Ibices, ſaith Comeſtor, are either thoſe wilde Goates, or fowles ſo called, being ſomewhat like a ſtorke.

Lyra.

V. 3. And they came to the ſheepfoulds by the way, wherein was a cave, and Saul went in to cover his feet. This cave, it ſeemeth, was very large, for it receiveed D*avid* and all his men, ſo that it ſeemeth to have beene a place, into which the ſhepheards brought their ſheepe in the night ſeaſon for their ſafegard. Oſiander ſaith, in Germany there be caves ſo large, that in one, an whole band of men may be hidden. P.Martyr. Now the nature of a cave, ſaith Martyr, is ſuch, that they within may ſee him that entreth, but hee cannot ſee them, wherefore D*avid* with his men being there ſaw Saul, but he could not ſee them. Then D*avids* men ſaid unto him, The day is come, whereof the Lord hath ſaid, I will deliver thine enemy into thy hand, and thou ſhalt doe unto him what ſeemeth good unto thee, wee do no where read of any ſuch promiſe made to David, yet happily it was made when D*avid* was with Samuel amongſt the Prophets, but it is not recorded before this, as neither be many other things that were ſpoken or done, ſo Mar. and Lyra ſaith. Lyra. Doctors do commonly hold, that this was ſpoken to D*avid*, when hee fled to Samuel; Junius hath it, this is the day, in which the Lord ſaith, behold I deliver thine enemy into thy hand. V. 4. Howſoever, it ſeemed not good to D*avid* now to ſlay Saul, but to cut off the lap of his garment onely; for hee ſaid, that his hand ſhould not bee upon the Lords anointed. Lyra. This garment, ſaith Lyra, was a military garment called Chlamys, or Pyrautica, becauſe it was ſharp on both ſides, and it reached downe to his ankles; One of theſe laps D*avid* came ſoftly and cut off. If it be doubted, how hee could doe it, and not bee perceived, Peter Martyr ſaith, that happily he lay his upper garment aſide, whilſt he did his eaſment, but Pell. better, Pellican. that the Jews were wont for decency, when they ſat downe to do their eaſment with their upper garment to cover themſelves al over, and therefore it is called covering their feet, & ſo it hanging upon the ground in part, D*avid* might eaſily cut one lap off without being perceived, eſpecially by reaſon of the noiſe made by the Army without in the meane ſeaſon. V. 5. But when D*avid* had done this, it is ſaid, that his heart ſmote him, whereupon the Rabbins ſay, that hee went with a purpoſe to kill Saul, but repented in going, and ſo did no more, but cut off a skirt of his garment, but for this God puniſhed him in his kinde, in that when hee was old, he was cold and could not get any heate: but this ſoundeth like a frigid 1 King. 1. 1.

and cold invention of theirs, for David alwayes abhorred from having a thought in his minde to kill the King, how injurious ſoever to him, becauſe hee was, as hee ſaith in the next verſe, the Lords anointed. But wherein was his fault, that his heart ſmote him, ſeeing hee did no more, but cut off the skirt of Qu.
his garment, for this ſeemeth to have beene a very ſmall injury? Anſw. Peter Peter Martyr.
Martyr ſaith, that his heart ſmote him becauſe at the firſt his fact ſeemed to bee injurious; but afterwards conſidering, that hee did not this to offer any injury to Saul, but hereby to manifeſt his humanity towards him, his deadly enemy, in ſparing his life, when hee could as eaſily have taken it away, as cut off the lap of his garment, hee doubted not, but that it was warrantable both before God and men. And God would have him thus to obtaine teſtimony of his innocency from Saul, his utter enemy, which as Ariſtotle ſaith, is the greateſt teſtimony of all others. Lyra ſaith, this cutting off ſome part of Sauls Lyra.
garment could not be without ſome injury to Saul, and therefore well might Davids heart ſmite him, ſeeing Saul was ſtill his King, and therefore no injury ought by any of his Subjects to bee done unto him, no not with the beſt intention; and amongſt the Jewes wee may note it to have beene counted an ignominy to have part of the long upper garment cut off, from the example of Davids men, who were ſo ſerved by the King of Ammon, when they were ſent to congratulate his comming to the Crowne after his fathers death, 2 Sam.
10. From this tenderneſſe in David wee may learne, how every Subject ſhould Note.
abhorre from killing his King, or doing him the leaſt injury in word or deed for reverence to God, whoſe Vicegerent hee is, although hee bee a tyrant, and therefore as David, hee muſt with patience beare his tyranny, waiting the time that God hath appointed to take him away, from being any more a burthen to the Common-wealth, as David ſaid, Ch. 26. 10.

David being blamed, as it is likely, by his men for ſparing Saul, ſaid unto V. 6.
them, the Lord forbid that I ſhould doe this thing to my maſter, the Lords anointed, V. 7.
&c. and with theſe words ſtayed his men from riſing againſt Saul. The Vulg.
Latin, here hath theſe words further, inſerted, as the Lord liveth, the Lord ſhall ſmite him, or his day ſhall come, &c. as Ch. 26. 10. But this Lyra judgeth well to have crept out of the margin into the Text through the ignorance of the ſcribe.

Saul thus eſcaping and going ſafe out of the cave, David followed him and V. 8, 9.
cryed unto him, (My Lord the King) wherefore heareſt thou mens words, ſaying, behold David ſeeketh thy hurt &c. David imboldened by his good conſcience, dareth now to ſhew himſelfe to Saul, but hee neglecteth no meanes, whereby hee might pacify his anger. For 1. hee boweth low unto him. 2. He acknowledgeth him to be his Lord and King, and father, and himſelfe his humble Subject and Servant. 3. Hee proveth his innocency towards Saul againſt all traducers, becauſe God having delivered him into his hand, hee ſpared his life. 4.
Hee vilifyeth himſelfe in compariſon of Saul, as a dead dogge or a flea, after whom therefore it was a moſt unfit thing, that the King of Iſrael ſhould come out, and take this travaile upon him to purſue him. Now whereas he ſaith, that God had delivered Saul into his hands, hee meaneth not, that hee might V. 10.
lawfully have ſlaine him, although ſome thinke ſo, and the ſame phraſe is afterwards uſed to Ahab, and hee is threatened, becauſe the Lord having delivered 1 Kings 20.
Benhadab into his hand, hee let him goe: and hee that is ſlaine caſually by another man, is ſaid to have been by God delivered into his hands, Exod. 21.
13. But here Saul is ſaid to have beene delivered into Davids hands, becauſe P. Martyr hee had an opportunity given him to ſlay him for the tryall of his patience and charity towards his enemy. For it was not lawfull for him to kill him, as Martyr reaſoneth. 1. Becauſe ſo he ſhould have taken vengeance into his owne hands. 2. It might have beene an occaſion of great diſſention in the Commonwealth. 3. it would have beene ſcandalous to David thus to attaine the kingdome. 4. It would have beene an evill preſident to others to riſe againſt their Kings, and to murther them, yea to his owne Subjects to have taught them afterwards to offer violence to him, upon their grievances. It may ſeeme indeed to have beene lawfull, as the caſe ſtood, becauſe David was anointed King, Saul grew intolerably outragious and had killed the Prieſts of God, and came thither with a minde to kill David and his men, and it is not unlawfull to kill another in defending a man ſelfe; which laſt is true, if there be none other way to eſcape, but God ſhewed David a way to eſcape without killing Saul, as wee ſee in this place; and although David were anointed, and ſo appointed King after Saul, yet he muſt waite, till God, who had ſet him up, would pull him downe againe; and untill his actuall poſſeſſing of the kingdome, it belonged not unto him to puniſh the outrages done upon any, except common enemies of the people of Iſrael. Lyra alſo ſaith that David was to honour Saul, as long as God tolerated him in his kingdome, and that he ought not to take revenge upon Saul in his owne caſe, eſpecially he having no office to execute judgement, and that this opportunity was offered him that his humanity might be maniſeſted to his enemy. Lyra.

V. 13. As ſaith the proverb of the ancients, Wickedneſſe proceedeth from the wicked, &c. Hereby ſaith Lyra, he meant, that he went not about to kill Saul, neither would he, but that he being wicked, he would leave him to be ſlaine by the more wicked, as it fell out, for he was ſlaine in a manner by the Philiſtims, when, to avoid that ignominy, he ſlew himſelfe. 1 Sam. 31. The Hebrewes, ſaith he, thinke, that by the ancients, the ancient of dayes is meant, as God is called, Dan. 7. 9. and that this proverb was grounded upon that law, Exod. 21. 13. If a man ſmite his neighbour, not having layed waite for him, God hath delivered him into his hand, and I will appoint a City of refuge for him to flee unto: for this, they ſay, is either for ſome ſecret wickedneſſe in the ſlaine, thus judged by God, or in the ſlayer bringing that evill upon him, that he muſt live in exile from his owne houſe. But this is farre fetcht and little to the purpoſe; and for the former, that he would leave the wicked to be ſlaine by the wicked, it is not probable that he ſpake in ſuch a ſenſe, for hereby Saul might have beene more exaſperated againſt him, and as improbable is it, that he is meant that he would leave him to fall by his owne wickedneſſe, as Vatablus hath it, as alſo that of Borrhæus, that although Sauls wickedneſſe were ſuch that he ſought to kill David, yet David would not attempt the like againſt him, for thus he ſhould have accuſed Saul, whereas he endeavoured not to accuſe him, but onely to excuſe himſelfe. Vatablus. Borrhæus. The beſt then is that of Pellican, that he meant Sauls paraſites by the wicked, ſuch as Doeg and the Ziphims, as if he had ſaid, this wickedneſſe of killing any man unjuſtly commeth from the wicked, who ſtirre thee up againſt mee to take away my life, but I am none of that ſort, for I feare God, and therefore my hand ſhall not be upon thee, I abhorre from ſuch a ſinne. Pellican.

V. 15. The Lord therefore judge betweene me and thee, and plead my cauſe and deliver me out of thy hand. Having briefly ſaid what he could to Saul, he laſtly fleeth to prayer, having little hope to prevaile with him being ſo inveterated in malice. V. 16. 17. But his humanity and oration ſo full of weighty reaſon, and patheticall, did ſo worke with Saul, that he wept, and was overcome, and acknowledged David to be more righteous then he, in that he being his enemy he yet ſpared his life, V. 19. and ſo prayeth God to reward good unto him therefore. Some ſaith Martyr, thinke that Saul ſpake thus to David in hypocriſie, becauſe of thoſe that were about him, and ſaw how well David had deſerved of him, who could not but have condemned him, as a raging beaſt; and no man, if he had not ſhewed to relent, upon ſo extraordinary kindeneſſe ſhewed unto him, and he thought happily by this meanes to draw him to the Court againe, and there with leſſe ſcandall cut him off. Peter Martyr. But he thinketh rather, that he was ſeriouſly touched with remorſe for the preſent, becauſe he dealt with him, as one that he verily beleeved ſhould be King, and have his children in his power, in that he urged

him

Pellican.

him to ſweare, that he would deale mercifully by them: thus alſo Pellican, and this is moſt probable, becauſe even in the wicked there is a conſcience accuſing them for their horrible wickedneſſes, as in Judas, who alſo confeſſed his ſinne in betraying the Lord, and in Cain &c. but here was no true repentance, becauſe no reformation followed, but after a while he perſecuted David againe. But here was a wonderfull change for the preſent in Saul from that which he was before, when he challenged Jonathan for taking part with David, and David for conſpiring againſt him, for now he juſtifieth him and condemneth himſelfe. A great encouragement to David in his affliction, and to all the godly, for that their wicked enemies cannot [illegible] in their conſciences acknowledge their innocency, although out of an [illegible] malice againſt goodneſſe they perſecute them, and ſpeake evill of them: which ſhould make ſuch as feare God to continue conſtant in their upright dealing, notwithſtanding their ſuffering, becauſe one day their righteouſneſſe ſhall breake out as as the ſunne, and their wicked enemies ſhall be aſhamed.

Note.

V. 20. Here Saul further ſaith, that he knew certainely that David ſhould be King, and that the kingdome ſhould be eſtabliſhed unto him, becauſe he was ſo good and vertuous, God was ſo manifeſtly with him to preſerve him and bring him into his hands, who before had ſaid, when he was at Keilah, that God had delivered David into his hands, and becauſe God did proſper him ſo in all his undertakings, and he was ſo gracious in the eyes of all the people. For his wickedneſſe had made, that God had left him and threatned, that his kingdome ſhould not ſtand, and the hearts of the people were averſe from him, wherefore from the contrary in David, he gathered, that David was the man whom Samuel meant, when he told him, that God would take his kingdome from him and give it to his neighbour, that was better then he: for I doe not thinke with Martyr, that the anointing of David by Samuel was yet come to Sauls eare, for then he would alſo have ſought Samuels life, ſo that he knew not thereby, that David ſhould be King, but by the ſignes before alledged.

1 Sam. 15.

V. 21. Then Saul required David to ſweare unto him, that he would not cut off his ſeed, but leave him a name in Iſrael, whereunto David yeilded and ſware unto him, wherein ſaith Lyra, it may ſeeme that David ſinned, 1. Becauſe Saul was reprobated of God, and ſo no oath ought to have beene made unto him for the preſerving of his name in Iſrael. 2. Becauſe David did afterwards contrary to this oath deliver 7 of the children of Saul to the Gibeonites to be cut off. But he anſwereth to the firſt, that he knew not Saul to be any further reprobated of God, but onely in reſpect of his temporall kingdome: and to the ſecond, the will of God is alwayes to be underſtood to be excepted, ſo that when a man hath ſworne to ſpare any, if God biddeth him kill, he may doe it without perjury, and this was the caſe of thoſe 7 children of Saul, God bade him ſatisfie the Gibeonites, whoſe demand was to have ſo many delivered unto them to be hanged up in revenge of Sauls cruelty formerly againſt them. Yet neither was the ſeed of Saul quite cut off, for Mephiboſheth the ſon of Jonathan, the ſonne of Saul was preſerved, yea David was ſo farre from ſinning, when he made this oath to Saul, that he fulfilled a precept of greateſt perfection. Love your enemies, and doe good to thoſe that hate you, &c. Moreover God in his law provideth, that the ſonne ſhall not dye for the offence of the father, ſo that David ſware to nothing, but what was juſt, and if he ſhould have refuſed to ſweare thus, there might have beene ſome colour for Saul to perſecute him againe. And as he ſweare, he did his endeavour to keepe his oath, for he did both ſlay him that ſaid he killed Saul, and both thoſe conſpiratours that ſlew Iſhboſheth, the ſonne of Saul. Onely in the matter of the Gibeonites, wherein he had no power, he ſuffered that to be done, which he could not hinder, it being underſtood when he tooke this oath, unleſſe God ſhould command to the contrary.

Lyra.

2 Sam. 21.

Mat. 5. 44.

2 Sam. 1.
2 Sam. 4.

The Myſtery.

Myſtically by David hidden in a Cave, underſtand Chriſt, by Saul comming into his power to kill him, the Jewes comming to take him, whom he

Joh. 18. 6. ſhewed, that he could have deſtroyed, when he made them fall backward by the breath of his mouth; the Cave, wherein Chriſt was hidden in reſpect of his divinity, was his fleſh, ſo that the Jewes could not ſee it; the lappe of Sauls garment, which David cut off, was the kingdome in a figure, whereof the 1 Sam. 15.28. Lord deprived the Jewes; and as at the laſt, when David ſhewed himſelfe to Saul, there was compunction in him and he acknowledged his owne wickedneſſe and Davids righteouſneſſe and ſought his favour, ſo the Jewes ſhall one day, when their eyes ſhall be opened to ſee whom they have pierced, be compunct 2 Cor. 3. Zechar. 12.10. and ſorrow therefore and ſeeke his favour.

CHAP. XXV.

V. 1. HERE firſt is the death of Samuel recorded, and how he was buried and lamented by all Iſrael. God let him live ſaith Pellican, till that Saul himſelfe was brought to acknowledge, that David ſhould be King, as he had foretold, and after this he tooke him out of this life, and Saul lived not long after, ſome Hebrewes ſay but 7 months, but this cannot be, becauſe David ſojourned 1 Sam. 27. 6. after this a yeare and 4 months in the Philiſtims country, before the death of Saul. That of Joſephus therefore is more probable, that Samuel died in 18 yeare of Sauls raigne, and Saul 2 yeares after, when he had finiſhed 20.
Lyra. For the age of Samuel ſee before ch. 12.22. Lyra noteth that Samuels death and buriall is firſt ſet downe in this chapter and then Nabals death, the one a good man buried with honour, the other wicked and buried without all honour that we read of, that we may ſee, how the godly do excell the wicked Prov. 10.17. even after death, according to that, The memoriall of the juſt ſhall be bleſſed, but the memory of the wicked ſhall rot. For the place of Samuels buriall, it was in his Oſiander. houſe at Ramah, that is, ſaith Oſiander, amongſt his kindred and others of his family. Of mourning for the dead and burials, ſee Gen. 50. And David went to the wilderneſſe of Paran, that is, leaving the ſtrong hold in Engedi, he tooke Iunius. this opportunity, ſaith Junius, to remove to the uttermoſt parts of the land, whilſt all were buſie in burying Samuel, that he might be further out of Sauls danger. Of the wilderneſſe of Paran, ſee Numb. 10.12. it was ſo large, that it extended from mount Sinai to the ſouth border of the land of Canaan.

V. 2. And there was a man of Maon, whoſe poſſeſſions were in Carmel, he had 3000 ſheepe and 1000 goats, and he was ſhearing his ſheepe in Carmel, &c. Maon was a City in Judah, of which ſee before ch. 23.24. Carmel ſignifieth a place tilled or planted, there were two thus called, as by their proper name, one in Iſſachar, 1 Kings 18.19. where Baals Prieſts were ſlaine, the other in Judah, Joſh. 15.53. not farre
V. 5, 6. from Maon, and of this it is here ſpoken. David taketh this opportunity to ſend for ſome refreſhing for himſelfe and his men to Nabal, to Carmel, where he now made a feaſt, ſaying to the young men that went, then ſhall yee ſay to him that liveth in proſperity, peace be to thee, &c. the Vulg. Lat. peace be to my brethren and to thee, &c. Junius, ye ſhall ſay, if he be ſafe, enjoy thou peace, &c. Peter Martyr, ſay to him living ſo, peace to thee, &c. the Hebrew is לחי viventi, and ſo the meaning is good, ſay to him, whilſt he liveth, peace enjoy both thou and thy Iunius. houſe &c. that is, as Junius expoundeth it, as long as thou liveſt; for the conditionall particle [if] it is not in the Hebrew, neither doth it agree with the preſent caſe, becauſe David doubted not, but that Nabal was then in health, becauſe Lyra. he feaſted. It was the manner of the Jewes, ſaith Lyra, at times of ſheep-ſhearing, to make great feaſts in remembrance of their fore-fathers, that were ſhepheards. For the reading of the Vulg. Lat. it was by a miſtaking לחי being taken for לאחי which ſignifieth to my brethren. Thus David ſought to inſinuate into Nabals favour by good words, and commemorating his benefits towards him, in that his ſhepheards were ſafe by his Army, in
V. 7, 8. the Wilderneſſe, as it followeth v. 7.8. they had no hurt neither loſt any Peter Martyr. thing all the time that they were in Carmel neare unto him. Here we may ſee Note. that ſometimes fooles, and men of no deſert are rich, when as the beſt deſerving are in want, as David, and conſtrained to ſue to ſuch for reliefe, thus I have ſeene, ſaith the Preacher, ſervants on horſebacke and Princes walking on foot, that no man of deſert be leſſe eſteemed for his want, or wicked worldlings eſteemed the more for his wealth.

Davids ſervants having done their meſſage, as they were commanded, Nabal V. 10,11.
made them a churliſh anſwer, ſaying, Who is David, or who is the ſon of Jeſſe?
there be many ſervants now a dayes, that breake away every one from his maſter, &c.
He ſpake thus diſdainfully of David, ſaith Lyra, as of a ſtranger, becauſe hee Lyra.
was deſcended of Ruth the Moabitiſſe, and he did not onely calumniate and vilifie him, but alſo his men, as perfidious. When as, as Peter Martyr hath it, Peter Martyr.
he could not be ignorant that David had wrought a great deliverance for Iſrael, when he ſlew Goliah; and it was generally expected, as we may ſee by Sauls owne acknowledgement, that David ſhould raigne after Saul, and he was of his owne Tribe, but David was now poore and he rich, and this made him ſo to inſult over him, and to wrong him, for fooles uſe to be puft up by their riches, and to deſpiſe all that be poorer.

David hearing of Nabals churliſh anſwer, breaketh into a rage, and biddeth V. 13.
his men preſently to gird on their ſwords, which they did, and followed him to the number of 400, and he vowed for this indignity to deſtroy Nabal and all his, *v.*21.22. He bare patiently, ſaith Martyr, Sauls rage againſt him, and the contumelies of Shemei, but towards Nabal he could have no patience, becauſe, as is afterwards ſaid, he had done much good unto him, *v.*16.21. but he requited him with ſo great evill. For contumelious and vilifying ſpeeches to a generous minde, are more provoking, then outward violence, as Chryſoſt.
noteth, becauſe the one hurteth the body onely, but the hurt is divided, as it Chryſoſt.
were, betweene the body and the minde, the other woundeth the minde onely, the wounding whereof is moſt intolerable: and there was not onely the rendring of evill for good, that vexed Davids minde, but for that the man that did it, was ſo baſe in compariſon of him, and did not onely diſmiſſe his men, without reliefe, but for their praying for all good unto him, ladeth them with all contumelies. We may ſee here, that the Saints of God are ſometimes ſubject to violent paſſions, whereby they are carryed to ſinne againſt God. For in this David ſinned divers wayes, 1. By reſolving upon revenge ſo ſoone as he heard of the wrong done, whereas it is forbid to avenge our ſelves. 2. By taking an oath to doe it. 3. For that he vowed to ſlay all that belonged to Nabal, that piſſed againſt a wall, which had beene great injuſtice, when as he onely had abuſed him. Thus the beſt have beene ſuffered to fall, that we may ſee what wee are, if we be left a little to our ſelves, to praiſe God for his grace, Note.
when we are kept from falling ſo foully, and aſcribe nothing to our ſelves or our owne ſtrength.

The one of the young men (that is, one of Nabals ſervants) told Abigail Nabals wife, V. 14.
ſaying, David ſent meſſengers to ſalute our maſter, and he railed on them, &c. This man knowing well the ſtrength and animoſity of David and his men, thought Lyra.
it time to ſpeake without delay unto his miſtreſſe, who was not preſent, when Davids men were ſo reproachfully uſed. For he weighing the good uſage, that he and his fellowes had at Davids hands, of which he ſpeaketh, v. 15.16. did certainely feare, that David would come and deſtroy them all, except ſome courſe were ſpeedily taken to prevent it, for he thought that no man of courage would doe leſſe, if ſo great injury were offered unto him, eſpecially being in his caſe, who upon ſuch diſparagement might feare, that his men would forſake him, being ſpoken of, as no better, then a fugitive ſervant from his maſter Saul, if he did not ſpeedily revenge it.

Now he yeildeth a reaſon in the end, why he ſpake not to his maſter, but V. 17.
to her, becauſe he is ſuch a ſonne of Belial, that a man cannot ſpeake to him, meaning, that he had no hope to do any good by ſpeaking to him, but that he would be more inraged. And herein this ſervant ſhewed himſelfe to be wiſe and carefull both of his maſters good, and of all the family; in which other ſervants ſhould Note.
learne of him; but becauſe one onely is ſpoken of that ſhewed this care and not more, it ſeemeth that diſcreet and carefull ſervants are rare. Peter Martyr hereupon Peter Martyr. gathereth, in that this ſervant ſpake to his Miſtreſſe, the inferiour ruler of the family, when hee deſpaired of doing any good with the ſuperiour:

that when the chiefe Magiſtrate cannot bee prevailed with for the averting of danger from the Church or Commonwealth, which is, as it were, his family, the inferiour Magiſtrates are to bee ſought unto, who have power under him, and are ſet to provide for the common good.

Then Abigail made haſte and tooke 200. Loves and two bottles of Wine, and five
V.18. ſheepe ready dreſſed, five meaſures of parched corne, 100. cluſters of Rayſons, and 200.
Cakes of Figs, &c. Of the wiſedome and beautie of Abigail it was ſpoken before,
*Verſ.*3. and of the churliſhneſſe and evill condition of her husband Naball;
now her wiſedome beginneth to appeare, in that ſhee ſo wiſely ſought to prevent V.19. the danger that was comming upon her family, and herein ſhee had not the counſell of her husband, neither did ſhee tell him of it, as is ſaid, *Verſ.*69.
becauſe if hee had knowne, ſhee feared hee would have hindred her in this her journey. Shee made haſte, becauſe delaying might have been dangerous:
and whereas two great wrongs had been done by her husband Naball unto David; 1. In denying him reliefe in his neceſſitie, which hee had ſo well deſerved.
2. In uſing contumelious ſpeeches againſt him, ſhe prepared for both theſe to ſatisfie him as well as ſhe could, and ſo to appeaſe his anger: for, 1. She carried him victuals for which he had ſent. 2. She uſed good words unto him to inſinuate into his favour, and humble geſtures, Verſ.24, 25, &c. And the proviſion which ſhee prepared was a bountifull gift, both for neceſſary food, for which the Loaves, the Muttons and the parched corne ſerved, and for daintier Cates of Figges and Rayſons. Hereby it appeareth, what abundance of proviſion was made for this ſheepſhearing feaſt, in that there was ſo much bread and fleſh ready, that might bee ſpared, a meaſure called ſatum here, was modius & ſemis, parched Corne, moſt accurate meale, Cakes of Figges, bunches tyed together:
V.20. So Lyra. And in going to meete David, ſhee is ſaid to have gone [by the
P. Martyr. covert of the hill] that is, ſaith Martyr, a ſecret way, and not the common road, leſt ſhee ſhould meete any of her friends by the way, and bee interrupted by them. But whereas it is ſaid, Verſ.19. Shee told not her husband, a queſtion ariſeth, Whether a wife may give ſo much, or how much ſhe may give without the Qu. conſent of her husband? P. Martyr thinketh that the wife hath no power to give, but of thoſe goods which are properly her owne, and to give of the goods that are common between them in way of Almes, were to violate the Law of Matrimony.
But when the caſe ſo ſtandeth, that the husband is fooliſh and churliſh, and ſo neither doth nor will provide for the good of the family, and to prevent danger, then it is her part to provide. But this as Willet noteth, Willet. were too much to abridge the wives libertie of giving, and amongſt us, where the wife hath nothing properly her owne, ſhee ſhould have no power to give any thing, whereas by vertue of marriage the goods which the married have, are common between them. It is to bee held then, that although the wife may not alwayes give away what ſhee liſteth, for ſhee muſt bee ſubject to her husband, yet ſhee may in an extraordinary caſe, as this was, for the good of her husband give liberally, and ordinarily give to the poore with diſcretion, Luk.8.1. as wee reade of the wife of Chuza, Herods ſteward, and other godly women, that they miniſtred to Chriſt of their ſubſtance. But this is not to bee done without the husbands conſent, if hee bee one that feareth God, as the Shunamite 1 King.4. woman, who deſireth to prepare for the entertainment of the Prophet, that paſſed by her houſe divers times, yet did it not, but firſt acquainting her husband with the motion and having his conſent. But if hee bee an enemy to goodneſſe and charity, ſhee may give, as ſhee ſeeth occaſion, ſo that it bee done moderately, and not to the waſting of her husbands eſtate, according to the example of the women before named, whoſe husbands happily did beare no good will to Chriſt, whom they followed.

Abigail with her Servants and Aſſes laden going on in a ſecret way, the divine Oſiander. providence ſo ordered it, that ſhee met David and his men, whereas if hee had gone the common way, hee might have deſtroyed all, as he intended, before that ſhee had knowne of it, as Oſiander noteth.

V.21,22.
Lyra.

Now David had ſaid, In vaine have I kept all that this fellow had in the wilderneſſe, &c. This ſaith Lyra, being ſpoken before, but not recorded, commeth in here by way of capitulation, for when hee girt on his Sword, and bade his men follow him, hee going before them, and impatient of the contumely offered unto him uttered theſe words, and ſware to ſlay all that belonged to Nabal, that piſſed againſt the wall, and not now, as it may ſeeme in the hearing of Abigail: Yet if it bee taken as ſpoken in his chaſe upon the way, when Abigail was come neere him, but not yet obſerved, the Hebrew will beare it, and her alighting and humbling her ſelfe to David, and her ſpeech unto him doe moſt aptly agree, if it bee thus underſtood; for as if ſhee heard his threatnings, ſhee fell at his feet and ſaid, Upon me, upon me bee this iniquitie, Verſ. 22. So doe God to Davids enemies and more alſo, &c. Becauſe men are not willing to pray for any evill againſt themſelves, ſaith Kimbi; David prayeth for it againſt his enemies. Martyr will have the meaning to bee, ſo let God deſtroy the enemies of David, as hee would certainly deſtroy Nabal and all his; but the note of ſimilitude doth not here follow, but a conditionall, if I ſhall leave of all, that hee hath one to piſſe againſt a wall. Wherefore Hugo better, ſometime in ſwearing a man calleth for evill upon himſelfe, as Ruth 1. 17. and ſometimes for good to his deadly enemies for his greater puniſhment, as in this place, God doe ſo, that is, God give ſuch ſucceſſe to Davids enemies in their plotting againſt him as they deſire, if I leave ought to Nabal, &c. All that piſſes againſt a wall, ſaith Martyr, are not onely men and dogges, but women alſo, as may bee gathered from Verſ. 34. who kept mee, that I might not doe evill to thee. But how women can bee brought within the compaſſe of this ſpeech, I ſee not, as for the place alledged, it cannot thence bee gathered, that David meant to have killed Abigail, but it would have beene a great hurt unto her to have had her husband and family deſtroyed.

Kimhi
Peter Martyr.
Hugo Cardin.

V.23.
Hugo Card.

When Abigail ſaw David, ſhee haſted to meet him, and bowed herſelfe unto him, and fell at his feet, and ſaid, Upon me my Lord, upon mee bee the iniquitie, &c. Theſe words may bee diverſly taken, ſaith Hugo, either pardon mee this iniquitie, or take that revenge upon mee, which thou wouldſt take upon my husband, or if thou thinkeſt, that it will bee ſinne in thee, if thou doſt not, as thou haſt ſworne, let this ſinne bee imputed to me. Lyra and P. Martyr take it the ſecond way, as if ſhee laid all the fault upon herſelfe, being therefore caſt downe at his feet to ſuffer the puniſhment, and this is the moſt probable: for her husband was, ſhee confeſſeth, as his name Nabal ſignifieth, a foole, and therefore hee was not to bee regarded. Her meaning then when ſhee ſaid, upon me bee the iniquitie, was, if ſhee had ſpoken or done any thing to offend him, hee ſhould now puniſh her for it, for whatſoever her husband ſaid or did, a wiſe man would not bee much offended at it, ſeeing hee did according to his wit, and men commonly will beare with fooles. And as for her part, ſhee did not ſo much as ſee or know, when the young men came from David to her husband. Shee did then ſo expoſe herſelfe to Davids rage to bee by him puniſhed if hee would puniſh any body, as that ſhee did moſt effectually plead to have the offence paſſed over, as unworthy of any revenge. But what is to bee thought of her calling her husband a foole and ſonne of Belial? Anſw. Herein ſhee did no more then ſhee might, becauſe both it was a thing commonly knowne, for from folly hee had his name, and ſhee did it to ſave his life and all that hee had, and therefore did herein the part of a loving wife, as a Chirurgeon lancheth the body to ſave it. But he was a wicked foole, as Rom. 1. 22. not a naturall, as may bee gathered from his ſpeeches to Davids meſſengers.

V.25.
Qu.
Oſiander.
P. Martyr

V26.

Having ſought to pacifie him by pleading Naballs folly, and her owne abſence, ſhee here proceedeth to another argument, in that God had by his ſingular providence kept him hitherto from comming to ſhed blood, that hee might not avenge his owne cauſe, which is unlawfull to doe, ſhee hoped, that hee ſhould by the ſame providence bee kept ſo ſtill. And whilſt hee ſtaid his hand and ſought not to avenge himſelfe, ſhee prayed, that all his enemies might be a Nabal, that is, ſaith Lyra, fooliſh and improvident in their doings, Lyra. R. Solomon but R. Solomon ſaith, ſhee ſpake herein Prophetically of Nabals ſudden death, Borrhæus. that followed immediately. Borrhæus, and Martyr, as unable to hurt him, as Peter Martyr. Nabal. Junius, in Davids power to bee forthwith deſtroyed, as Nabal was, if David would have proceeded againſt him. Of all theſe that of R. Solomon is moſt improbable, ſeeing ſhee had no ſpirit of propheſie, although the event made her words Propheticall, any way elſe of the three other it may bee underſtood indifferently.

V.27. To theſe arguments ſhee here addeth another reall argument, ſhe offereth the preſent that ſhee had brought unto him, humbling herſelfe as his handmaid, V.28. and calling him her Lord. Fourthly, ſhee falleth to entreating for pardon, ſpeaking of the treſpaſſe, as if it had been her owne, and promiſeth all good unto David from the Lord, who fought the Lords battells, neither was there V.29. ever any evill yet found in him: and for Saul, that without cauſe purſued him and ſought to take away his life, ſhee ſaith, that hee ſhould not bee able to doe it, becauſe Davids life was bound up in the bundle of life with the Lord, and the ſoules of his enemies hee ſhould ſling out, as out of the middle of a Sling; where by binding up his life in the bundle of life underſtand the preſervation thereof againſt the attempts of all his wicked enemies, who ſhould bee no more able to take it away, then to pluck any thing, which the Lord by his Almighty power hath bound up in a bundle, out of it, for this Junius. the ſtrength of no creature can doe; to this effect Junius, ſaying that ſhee ſpake this by a Metaphor; and for the caſting out of the ſoules of his enemies, as out of a Sling, hereby ſhee meant, that they ſhould bee deſtroyed by a violent death, and that ſuddenly to their greater confuſion. Lyra more Lyra. fully, even as Cions cut of trees to bee tranſplanted are faſt bound together, and kept in water from withering, and then are planted in another place, to grow and beare fruit: ſo the life of David ſhould be ſafely preſerved together with the lives of others, that feared God, being kept moyſt alwayes with the water of grace here, and finally bee tranſplanted into the land of the living, where together with ſuch hee ſhould live for ever: but the lives of his wicked enemies ſhould bee wheeled about as it were, in the wheele and circle of a Sling, which is the reading of the vulgar Latine, meaning that they ſhould turne round from one vice to another, till they were caſt out into Hell fire Borrhæus. for ever. Borrhæus and Martyr underſtand it onely of the life to come: Va- Vatablus. tablus of David and his children, who ſhee meant ſhould have a ſure houſe for ever, as a bundle bound by the Lord, that cannot bee broken; but his Hugo Card. enemies ſhould bee caſt out of their limits. Laſtly, Abigail argueth from this, V.30,31. that it ſhould bee no trouble to Davids minde, that hee had not avenged himſelfe, or ſhed innocent blood, at ſuch time as it ſhould bee made good unto him, which the Lord had promiſed, viz. to make him Ruler over Iſrael; whereby wee may ſee, that it was now come abroad, that David ſhould bee King, although Samuel had anointed him ſo ſecretly, and Nabal blinded with covetouſneſſe and envie would take no notice of it, but ſpake of David, as a fugitive ſervant of Sauls. Shee ſpeaketh of trouble to his conſcience becauſe it was a great ſinne, that hee was going about, and if hee had committed it, his conſcience could not but be troubled afterwards for it. Saul indeed committed a moſt horrible ſinne in murthering the Lords Prieſts, and was never troubled in his mind therefore, ſo many wicked men more have no trouble, but are quiet within, becauſe their conſcience is ſeared, as it were, with an hot Iron, and without ſenſe, yet ſome are troubled, as Judas; but every godly man is troubled in his mind after ſinne committed, as David, Pſal.
51. and Peter. And this ſhould bee an argument unto us, to take heed of Note. ſinning, becauſe inward trouble in the mind, which is moſt intolerable, will follow hereupon, the conſcience will accuſe, Rom. 2.15. When the Lord ſhall have dealt well with thee, then remember thine handmaid. She did not here deſire to be

bee remembred according to ſome, that David would take her to wife, or if ſhee ſhould bee a Widow, to ſhew mercy to her, as Widowes have need: for Nabal was likely enough yet to live. But that hee would afterwards thinke upon her counſell, whereby hee had beene ſtayed from ſinning, and thinke well of her, and that ſhee was no enemy but a friend of his, and ſhew kindneſſe to her accordingly, which when hee ſhould come to bee King, might ſtand her and her family in great ſtead, which to expreſſe the Vulgar Latin addeth, and thou ſhalt doe good unto her.

Junius.

V.32. 33,34,35.

David having heard Abigails ſpeech, bleſſeth God, firſt, for ſending her to ſtay him from ſhedding blood, &c. then hee bleſſeth her and her counſell as very good, repeating, what hee had otherwiſe ſworne to doe, and ſo hee tooke her preſent and diſmiſſed her in peace.

Note.

According to Davids example wee ought to bee moved by good counſell to repent and to turne from our evill courſes. 2. To looke up to God firſt and chiefly, by whoſe providence ſuch counſell is given us, to give him the praiſe. 3. To bleſſe even the inſtrument alſo, which hee uſeth to doe us this good. Whereas David may ſeeme yet to have ſinned in breaking his vow and ſparing Nabal, it is to bee underſtood, that he did not, but ſhould rather have ſinned in keeping it, and ſo have added ſinne to ſinne, to the ſinne of vowing unlawfully the ſinne of doing unlawfully. For the end of an oath or vow is to glorifie God in doing ſomething, wherewith hee is well pleaſed, the which that wee may the more carefully doe, wee bind our ſelves by vow. 2. Then is the breach of an oath ſinfull, when it is done with contempt of God, whoſe name hath been called upon. But to vow any unlawfull thing, is to the diſhonour of God, and the breaking hereof is for the feare and reverence of God; wherefore it is not unlawfull, but juſt, neceſſary and commendable, and it had been better for Jephthah and Herod to have broken their vowes, then kept them: Thus Peter Martyr and Willet. Yet hee that maketh a raſh vow and doth not keepe it, is not without ſinne, but onely his ſinne is the leſſer, and leſſe pricking the conſcience.

P. Martyr. Willet.

V.36. 37, 38.

Abigail departing from David and comming home againe found Nabal feaſting and drunken, wherefore ſhee ſaid nothing unto him that day, but the next morning ſhee told him all, upon the hearing whereof his heart died within him, and hee became as a ſtone, and within ten dayes after the Lord ſmote him, that hee died. For Abigails refraining to ſpeake to Nabal in his drunkenneſſe, it was a point of wiſedome, for ſhee ſhould have done no good by ſpeaking at that time, wherefore it is ſaid, Eccleſ. Chap. 31. Verſ. 31. Rebuke not thy neighbour at the wine, give him no reprochfull words, &c. Nabals heart died within him for feare, and when hee had languiſhed ten dayes, ſaith R. Solomon, according to the number of the young men, which David had ſent unto him, God ſmote him that hee died, ſo that hee died not, ſaith Lyra, a naturall death, but God, to whom vengeance belongeth, when David refrained from avenging himſelfe, revenged his wrongs by ſlaying Nabal. And Nabals heart is ſaid to have beene like a ſtone, his drunkenneſſe, and other wickedneſſe, wherein hee had lived, were now puniſhed with a ſtony and hard heart, that could not repent, and ſo hee died miſerably: which may bee a warning to drunkards, and coole the rage of men, when they are wronged, and ſtay them from avenging themſelves, leaving their malicious adverſaries to God.

Lyra. Hugo Card.

R. Solomon

Note.

V. 19.

David hearing of Nabals death bleſſeth God for this revenge taking, and ſendeth to commune with Abigail to take her to wife. In this his rejoycing for revenge taken upon Nabal his enemy it may ſeeme, that

Hugo Card.
Iob 31.
P. Martyr.
Willet.

David did not well; for Prov. 24. 18. it is ſaid, Bee not thou glad, when thine enemy falleth, leſt the Lord ſee it, &c. And Job profeſſeth, that hee rejoyced not at the fall of him that hated him. But Pſ. 58. 10. it is ſaid, the righteous ſhall rejoyce, when he ſeeth the vengeance. David then rejoyced not, becauſe his enemie was falne, as being glad to heare of Nabals puniſhment, but to ſee, how the righteous Judge did revenge his wrongs, and that hee proceeded not, when he was comming to revenge his owne cauſe: thus Hugo and Peter Martyr. And thus the elect ſhall rejoyce at the puniſhment of the reprobate, not becauſe they delight in their puniſhment, but in the execution of juſtice. For Davids ſending to have Abigail to wife, it is not to be thought that hee did it immediately after Nabals death, ſaith Willet, but after a convenient time, becauſe amongſt the Romans a woman was infamous, that married within leſſe then a yeare after her husbands death. Hee thought her to bee a fit wife for him, becauſe ſhee was beautifull, and wiſe, and being Widow to one ſo rich, ſhee could not want wealth; but true wiſdome and vertue ought to bee the Loadſtone of our affection in chooſing a Wife. Abigail, becauſe David, as ſhee beleeved, ſhould bee King, humbled her ſelfe, as unworthy, but made haſte and went with his ſervants unto him. And it ſeemed good unto David to ſend and not to goe in perſon unto her, that hee might not ſeeme to compell her, but that her conſent might bee the more free.

V.43.
V.44.
Deut. 17.17.
Lyra.
Peter Martyr.
Borrhaus.
2 Sam. 3.16.
Note.

After that David had taken Abigail to Wife, hee marryeth Abinoam of Jezreel alſo, but his former Wife Michal, the daughter of Saul was firſt given to another man to Phalti of Gallim. It may ſeeme here, ſaith Lyra, and Peter Martyr and others, that David ſinned againſt that charge, that the King ſhould not multiply Wives. Lyra anſwereth, it is meant of Wives, who were Idolatreſſes, by whom his heart might bee drawne away after falſe Gods: Peter Martyr, that he ſhould have no exceſſive number, but two or three hee might take; but becauſe David tooke more afterwards, and ten Concubines, it is to be held, that not onely two or three were permitted, but more for the procreation of more children, and ſo the meaning of that Law muſt bee, that to ſatisfie his fleſhly luſt, the King muſt not multiply Wives, as hee muſt needes bee judged to doe, if hee tooke very many, as did Solomon: So Borrhaus. For it was then tolerated in other men to have more Wives. Touching Michal, his firſt Wife, the Rabbins ſay, that Phalti was a good man, and learned in the Law, and therefore lay not with her, although being by Saul compelled hee tooke her, for if he had, it is not likely, that David would have taken her againe, as hee did afterwards; but the contrary appeareth to be true, becauſe when David tooke her from him againe, hee followed her weeping for the great love which hee bare unto her: but Lyra ſaith, hee wept for joy that hee had not touched her. Here wee may ſee, that Saul was now growne to be voyd of all conſcience of right and wrong, in that he would take another mans Wife from him, without any bill of divorce given her by him, and thus cauſe her and that other man to live in adultery: So wicked men doe commonly grow worſe and worſe, from one ſinne to another, till they meet with the juſt puniſhment of all their ſinnes.

The Myſtery.

By Nabal myſtically wee may underſtand the Jewes, who becauſe they underſtand not the end of their Lawes, may well bee termed fooles, to them Chriſt typified by David ſendeth by his Apoſtles to bee refreſhed with their faith and repentance, but they ſcorne him as baſe, and raile upon him, but Abigail, that is, the common people amongſt them are wiſer, and humble themſelves unto him, yeilding him that which their great ones denyed, ſo the Jew is ſmitten and dyeth through want of faith, but thoſe few, that beleeved, were eſpouſed to Chriſt, and ſaved.

The beleevers were called out of Jeruſalem to Pella before the deſtruction thereof.

CHAP. XXVI.

HEre the Hiſtory returneth againe to Sauls purſuing after David, and it is ſhewed, firſt, how he was inſtigated by the Ziphims, of whom ſee before, chap: 23. verſ. 19. and they deſcribe the place, as then they did, where David was, in the hill Hachilah over againſt Jeſhimon. Now the Ziphims were thus forward in ſtirring up Saul, becauſe they had betrayed David once before, and now ſeeing him to live ſtill and to bee quiet (for hee would not have ſet his minde upon marrying, but that hee now was free from perſecution) they feared, leſt if hee ſhould come to the crowne, hee would bee avenged upon them, wherefore they ſeeke to have him cut off: ſo Lyra and Martyr, who addeth, that David might ſeeme not to have done wiſely to goe againe into the confines of Ziph, where hee had beene in danger once before: but hee ſaith, that neceſſitie inforced him to abide thereabouts, becauſe Abigails cattell, whom hee had married, were in thoſe parts. And I doubt not, but there was a ſingular providence in it, that Saul might once more give proofe of his inveterate malice againſt David continuing, even after ſo great a benefit received from David, and his oath to him, and yeelding in a manner to him the Kingdome after his deceaſe, that David might never by truſting to his faire ſpeeches come within his danger; and alſo that Saul might againe come into Davids power to manifeſt his goodneſſe the more, and Sauls naughtineſſe, and that David might hereby bee more comforted in reſpect of Gods providence over him, and confirmed in his faith in him, to bee preſerved to the Kingdome, which he had promiſed him.

Lyra.

Peter Martyr.

V.2,3,4, 5,6. 7,8. 9,10. 11,12.

Saul being ſtirred up by the Ziphims commeth out againe to ſeek David, having with him 3000. men, and when hee was in Hachilah, and David in the wilderneſſe, David knowing by his ſpies the place where his campe lay, went by night with Abiſhai, when hee and all his men were ſleeping, ſo that hee might have killed him, and was perſwaded by Abiſhai to let him doe it, but hee then alſo ſpared him, and taking his ſpeare that ſtuck at his head, and a cruſe of water for a ſigne, hee went away, no man perceiving it, for a dead ſleepe was ſent from the Lord upon them all. This may ſeeme to bee a deſperate adventure of David, but it ſeemeth, that God by the inſtinct of his ſpirit ſtirred him up unto it, becauſe hee ſent a dead ſleep upon Saul and all his men, as when Gideon went to the hoaſt of the Midianites, and Jonathan and his armour-bearer to the Philiſtims Campe, were moved by God ſo to doe.

V.5. Lyra.

But before Davids going with Abiſhai in the night, hee had been there diſguiſed in his habit, ſaith Lyra, upon Verſ. 5. to ſee where Saul lay. For it is ſaid, David aroſe, and came to the place where Saul had pitched: In the vulgar Latine, David ſurrexit clam, hee went privily, that is, ſaith hee, diſguiſing himſelfe, that he might not bee knowne, as Alexander ſometime being diſguiſed in his habit went into the midſt of the campe of Porus, the King of the Perſians.

V.6.

Then having marked the place where Saul lay in the trench and his men round about him, hee ſaid to Abimelech and Abiſhai the ſonne of Zerviah, brother to Joab, Who will goe with mee, &c. This Zerviah, ſaith Lyra, was one of Davids ſiſters, whoſe ſonnes were Joab and Abiſhai, and beſides her

P.Martyr. hee had another ſiſter called Abigail of whom came Amaſa, 2 Sam. 17. Martyr ſaith, that ſome thinke, that David went not into Sauls campe till that Abiſhai went with him, but others that hee went firſt alone, and this agreeth beſt with the Text, and with reaſon for how ſhould David know, where Saul lay, except Note. hee had firſt ſeene the place by day light? Wee may ſee here, of what little force a ſtrong guard is about a King, if God will have him lye open to danger, that none may truſt to men, and munition, but to God alone. For the cruſe of water at Sauls head, either, ſaith Lyra, it was roſe-water to refreſh him againſt the heate, or other common water for him to waſh his hands, when hee aroſe. Howſoever, that and the ſpeare taken away were an evident token that he who took them, could as eaſily have killed Saul, if he had born him any malice.

V.13,14. Then David went to the other ſide and ſtood on the top of an hill a farre off, a great ſpace being betweene them, and cryed unto the people and to Abner, the ſon of Ner, &c.
David went a farre off from Sauls campe, before hee uttered his voyce, that hee might bee out of danger, and then he cryeth not to the King, but to Abner, his Captaine, who ſhould have provided better by a watch in the night for the Kings ſafety. But Abner anſwered, who art thou, that cryeſt to the King, the Vulgar Latin, that diſquieteſt the King, reſpecting rather the ſenſe, then the proper ſignification of the words. David replyeth, that Abner had committed a great fault, in that hee kept the King no better, ſaying, that hee was V.15,16. therefore worthy to dye. When Saul heard Davids voyce, hee ſpake and ſaid, V.17. Is this thy voyce, (my ſonne David?) Saul was againe now touched in conſcience for his bloody intention againſt David, ſeeing him to have had more care of his preſervation, then they, to whom the cuſtody of his body was committed, wherefore he now beginneth to ſpeake kindely againe unto him. Then David in all ſubmiſſneſſe expoſtulated with him, asking him, why hee did thus purſue his ſervant, and what evill he had done; and if it came from the Lord,
V. 18. meaning by the evill ſpirit in judgement ſent upon Saul, hee deſired him to offer
V. 19. a ſacrifice, but if men had ſtirred him up, then hee wiſhed, that they might bee curſed, becauſe they had by this meanes cauſed, that he could no longer abide in the inheritance of the Lord, that is, in the land of Iſrael, which hee ſhould bee compelled againe to forſake, as hee had formerly done, to flee Sauls fury and to goe for ſafegard into the land of the uncircumciſed, who ſerved other Gods, whereby he might bee indangered living amongſt them to be likewiſe corrupted by idolatry. Touching theſe words, If the Lord hath ſtirred thee up againſt mee, let him accept an offering, the Vulgar Latin, odoretur ſacrificium, and the Hebr. rendred word for word, let him ſmell a ſacrifice, whereby his accepting of it is meant, becauſe when Noah ſacrificed, Gods acceptance of his ſacrifice was by this phraſe ſet forth, the Lord ſmelled a ſavour of reſt. But amongſt Pellican. expoſitors all doe not referre this ſacrificing to Saul, as I have done in the Paraphraſe Oſiander. before going, but Pellican and Oſiander, who expound the whole paſſage,
P.Martyr. as I have done. Martyr and Borrhæus underſtand of Davids offering ſacrifice, Borrhæus. as if hee had ſaid, I will offer him a ſacrifice. Lyra, let my patience bee accepted
Lyra. of, as a ſacrifice offered upon his Altar. Junius, let mee bee Junius. ſlaine, and ſo made, as it were a ſacrifice. Others, as Hugo hath it, Hugo Card. let us prove by ſacrificing whether it cometh of him, for hee will give ſome ſigne, I doubt not, for my juſtification. I reſt in the firſt referring it to Saul, becauſe ſacrificing was a meanes of atonement with the Lord, and for a man to have his ſinnes mercifully pardoned, and ſo the judgement therefore ſent removed, if then Saul by his ſinnes had provoked God to ſend an evill ſpirit upon him, which made him to rage againſt men, and to ſeeke their deſtruction without cauſe, and in particular againſt David, as hee knew well by former experience that he did, 1 Sam. 18. 10,11. he adviſed him to flee to this meanes of pacifying God, that the evill ſpirit being taken away, and he reſtored to a good temper againe, might ceaſe from this outrageous proceeding. For to referre the ſacrificing to David ſeemeth to mee to bee unreaſonable, both becauſe hee could not come to the place, where hee might offer, and if hee thought, that the Lord in wrath againſt him had ſtirred up Saul to this perſecution, hee would doubtleſſe have ſought long before by offering to pacify him, when he was at the Tabernacle with Abimelech or with Samuel. Moreover David had done nothing to provoke God againſt him, but had many experiments of his favour towards him, and lately in the matter of Nabal, and now in bringing Saul into his power, hee did but goe on in the courſe, wherein God had ſet him as a poore patient, but Saul was manifeſtly extravagant, and therefore hee properly had neede to repent and ſeeke to God by prayer and ſacrifice, as the interlinear Gloſſe hath it, and not David. Now the Lord may bee ſaid to ſtirre up a man to evill, either by ſending into him an evill ſpirit for his ſinnes, as hee did to Saul, or by doing good to another, for which hee envyeth him and ſeeketh to doe him miſchiefe, which was Sauls caſe alſo, for God is ſaid to have hardned Pharaohs heart, when hee did that whereby hee was hardened: and for ſacrificing to make a ſweet ſavour, it was by reaſon of the relation which ſacrificing had to Chriſts paſſion, which had a ſweet ſmell before him, although the ſmell comming from the ſacrifice it ſelf, was offenſive. Whereas in ſpeaking of the ſonnes of men, if they had ſtirred him up, hee ſaith, that they were curſed, becauſe by their meanes hee was driven from the inheritance of the Lord, and they ſaid unto him, that is, facto, ſaith Lyra, Goe and ſerve other Gods, not onely in reſpect of the danger, that is of being drawne to idolatry by living amongſt idolaters, but alſo becauſe they might uſe violence to compell him, ſuch were indeed accurſed becauſe they were an occaſion of drawing others into the wickednes of idolatry. Here Martyr noteth, what a grievous thing it was to David to live amongſt idolaters, and how greatly hee preferred to live amongſt the people of God, where he was rightly worſhipped; and the ſame minde ought to bee in every faithfull perſon, it ſhould not trouble him ſo much to goe from houſe and land, as from the place where the true religion is maintained to live elſewhere, and therefore they that for worldly gaine are content to live amongſt idolaters, and to ſettle there, ſeeme not to be led with the ſpirit of David, but with the ſpirit of the world.

Lyra.

Deut. 13.
Peter Martyr.
Note.

V.20.

And now let not my blood fall to the ground before the Lord &c. that is, ſlay mee not unjuſtly, for this cannot bee done, but God will ſee it and take vengeance upon thee therefore, ſo Vatablus. But Martyr and Borrhæus, my blood ſhall not fall to the ground before the Lord, that is, the Lord will not ſuffer it, doe what thou canſt, and therefore thou doeſt purſue after me in vaine. Yet Martyr hath the former expoſition alſo, thou muſt not thinke, if thou ſlayeſt mee, that my blood ſhall be as water ſpilt upon the ground, that none regardeth, for God hath ſet mee in his ſight, and I am alwayes under his protection: Hee alſo mentioneth a third, as if this were a prayer to God, that he would not ſuffer his bloud to be ſpilt, and a fourth, that he ſpake thus, becauſe he meant to flee out of the land, ſo that Saul ſhould not bee able to come neare him to hurt him. Junius differing from all others hath it, let not my blood fall afarre off from the ſight of the Lord, that is, before my cauſe cometh to bee heard before the Judge by a Legall proceeding. I ſubſcribe to the firſt, that it is a requeſt to Saul, not to ſeeke thus any more unjuſtly to take away his life, the Lord being mentioned, who heard and ſaw all things, that Saul might be the more moved by his ſpeach to ceaſe from perſecuting him. And he concludeth with comparing himſelfe to a flea and to a Partridge in the wilderneſſe, whom being ſo mean, it was not for the honour of a King thus to purſue, ſee *Ch.*24.14.

Vatablus.
Peter Martyr,
Borrhæus.

Iunius.

V.21.

Saul being overcome with Davids carriage towards him condemneth himſelfe againe, as *Ch.*24.17. hee confeſſeth, that he had erred exceedingly and promiſed no more to ſeeke to hurt David: where by error underſtand, not error ariſing out of ignorance, but out of malice and envy, becauſe hee knew David ſhould have the Kingdom, and therfore although that he knew he did evill in perſecuting David, he refrained not from this great wickedneſſe, and thus his fault was no whit the more extenuated as in other caſes of erring.

V.23.
V.24.

The Lord render to every man his righteouſneſſe &c. Theſe are the words of David to Saul, and hee approves his owne righteouſneſſe, becauſe Saul, hee ſaith, being delivered into his hands, hee yet ſpared his life, deſiring Saul that hee he would likewiſe ſpare his life. In deſiring God to render every one his righteouſnes he implieth not any merit in the righteouſnes of man, but prayeth, that God would accept of it and reward it out of his mercy. For the righteouſnes of man, is no way meritorious, but the way to attaine unto the good which God hath promiſed.

V.25. Saul replyeth, that David ſhould doe great things, and alſo prevaile, meaning, that he ſhould live to come to the kingdome, and raigne proſperouſly, to which effect almoſt he had ſpoken before, ch. 24.20.

CHAP. XXVII.

V.1,2. DAVID having had ſuch experience of Sauls irreconcileable hatred againſt him, ſo that he thought he could no where be ſafe in the land of Iſrael, fleeth againe into the Philiſtims countrey, and to the ſame Achiſh King of Gath, to whom he fled once before *ch.*21.10. This flight of David is juſtified by Lyra, becauſe he might uſe any meanes by fleeing into any place to preſerve himſelfe, and his company: for if he had ſtayed ſtill in the land of Iſrael, they muſt have beene beholding to ſome of Sauls ſubjects for reliefe, and hereby thoſe ſubjects might have beene endangered, as Abimelech was. And he did not flee out of feare to be deſtroyed by Saul, but that he might not be forced to fight againſt him, whereby many of his men might periſh, and others that were with Saul compelled to this warfare, whom David was unwilling to ſlay. But Martyr, Junius, and Oſiander hold, that David ſhewed great weakeneſſe in thus fleeing, for his owne words doe ſhew, that he feared to periſh by the hands of Saul; and the unlawfulneſſe of the fact appeareth, 1. Becauſe he fled to the enemies of the true religion, as if a Captaine with a band of men being Chriſtians, ſhould flee to the Turke, to fight for him. 2. He went from his calling, which was to be King over Iſrael and to defend them, but he went to joyne with their enemies. 3. Many inconveniences followed hereupon, as 1. he was driven to diſſemble a going to warre againſt Judah, and other parts of Iſrael, *v.*10. 2. Ziklag was burned, 3. he was in danger indeed of going to fight againſt his owne people &c. I doe with Lyra rather thinke that David may be juſtified in his fleeing into the Philiſtims country to be out of Sauls danger, for it doth not argue, that he fled thither out of diſtruſt in God, becauſe he ſaid, I ſhall one day periſh by the hands of Saul, for hee meant, if he did not ſeeke to preſerve himſelfe by fleeing, he ſhould be in danger, that is, if he did not uſe the beſt meanes that he could deviſe, for his owne preſervation, but meanes he meant to uſe, as is the part of every one, that truſteth in God and hath the greateſt promiſes, and thus he truſted to be preſerved by God to the Kingdome, whereunto he had beene anointed.

Lyra.

Peter Martyr.
Iunius.
Oſiander.

2 Sam,29.

For his fleeing to the enemies of the true religion, it may be excuſed, becauſe they being great enemies to Saul he was likely to be moſt ſafe amongſt them, but with what griefe he fled thither in regard that they were Idolaters, his former ſpeech did declare *ch.*26.19. where he curſeth thoſe that were the cauſe of it. Indeed if there had beene any other country neare in hoſtility with Saul, that had not beene Idolatrous, he had beene worthy to be blamed for making this his refuge. Moreover he had fled before into Moab, although he ſtayed not, for he was bidden to returne againe into the parts of Judah, wherein he obeyed and did ſome good ſervice to his country, and being ſo ill requited, both by the men of Keilah whom he had reſcued, and the Ziphims, and having thrice narrowly eſcaped Sauls hands, he thought it not fit to tarry amongſt men ſo falſe hearted any more, and therefore fleeth for his ſafeguard into Paleſtina, as Chriſt fled afterwards into the parts of Tyrus and Sidon, when the Jews perſecuted him, and Joſeph with him into Ægypt in his Infancy upon good warrant, even the warning of God himſelfe. For his being neceſſitated thus to fight againſt his owne country, or to faigne ſo to doe, this and other inconveniences were accidentall, he knew not when he went downe to Gath, that ever any ſuch truſt ſhould by that King be repoſed in him, to be required to goe againſt his brethren, but that he might be imployed onely againſt other eenemies of that State. Some thinke that this Achiſh was not the ſame, to whom he fled before, but another, that raigned in his ſtead, deſcribed therefore by his mother Maach for diſtinction. R.Rimhi And the Rabbins ſay, that he had ſent to Achiſh to treate with him about his comming before he went, which is not improbable, becauſe he with his men might be fit to doe him good ſervice, for which cauſe he thought that he might be willing to entertaine him, for ſo did Xerxes receive Themiſtocles, the Lacedemonians Alcibiades, and the Volſci Coriolanus, as Martyr hath it. peter Martyr. Laſtly, whereas it is objected, that he forſooke his calling, he did not, but reſerved himſelfe till God would call him backe againe, and make way for him by cutting off Saul, that he might come and be a Captaine to his people, which he could not yet doe by reaſon of Sauls malice and envy againſt him.

V.4. Saul hearing, that David was in Gath, ceaſeth to ſeeke after him any more, becauſe he could not there come unto him, and happily he thought that he ſhould never come ſafely from thence againe, P. Martyr. becauſe he was knowne to be the man, that killed Goliah, and ſlew after that 200 Philiſtims, and cut off their foreskinnes, to their greater ignominy.

V.5. Then David having dwelt a while in Gath with Achiſh, deſired of him ſome other place to dwell in, becauſe Gath was the chiefe City, where Achiſh himſelfe dwelt, and therefore unfit for him and his men, being ſo meane in compariſon of the King, to dwell in together with him. V. 6, 7. Wherefore Achiſh gave him Ziklag, where he dwelt one yeare foure months, and by reaſon of this gift of Achiſh, it was ever after a Towne pertaining to David and to his poſterity, the Kings of Judah. Touching Davids deſire to remove from Gath, he did it in modeſty, becauſe it was not fit for him being a ſtranger, to dwell in ſo eminent a place, for one farre meaner would agree better to his condition; Lyra. Oſiander. but as Lyra hath it, he had another end herein, viz. that he might the more freely goe forth with his men to prey upon the bordering Nations, and thus, get a living for them, whom he could not otherwiſe maintaine being ſo many, without putting the King to great charge. Borrhæus. Moreover he did thus, ſaith Borrheus, to avoid the envy of the Philiſtims, and becauſe he could not away with their vices and Idolatry. Junius. And Ziklag was aſſigned unto him, not without a ſingular providence, for Joſh. 15. 31. it was aſſigned to the Tribe of Judah, but hitherto unjuſtly detained by the Philiſtims, but now it was reſtored to the right owners, and ſo continued. And forſomuch as David had now a place of his owne, many were hereby moved to come unto him, 1 Chron. 12. 12,22, till his Army was growne very great. For the time of Davids aboad here Hebr: it is ſaid ימים dayes and foure months, the Vulg. Lat. making nothing of the dayes, leaveth that out, and hath it onely foure months, and R.Solomon by dayes underſtandeth two dayes, as Lyra ſheweth, Lyra. but he ſaith, that by the word ימים are underſtood either naturall dayes, or a yeare or yeares, and thus rather he thinketh it is to be underſtood a yeare or two yeares and foure months, becauſe ch. 29. Achiſh ſaid to the other Princes of the Philiſtims, that David had beene with him many dayes, that is, a long time, wherein he had experience of his fidelity, and to expreſſe certainely a longer time, then foure months, he ſaith, theſe dayes or theſe yeares, ſo that the time of his aboad there, muſt needes be more then one yeare, that is, a yeare at the leaſt and foure months of another yeare, and this may be further confirmed from ch. 1.21. where the yearely ſacrifice is called the ſacrifice of dayes, and becauſe it is put before the months here, as the greater number, whereas a leſſer number is never wont to be put before a greater, as dayes before months, but contrariwiſe yeares and months before dayes, therefore Joſephus erred, ſaying, he was there foure months and twenty dayes, and Vatablus foure months and certaine daies, and Kimhi ſeven months in the whole, which was the time betwixt the death of Samuel and of Saul, and the Sept. only foure months.

V.8. Then David went and invaded the Geſhurites, Gezrites, and Amalekites, &c. Of the Geſhurites we read Joſh. 12.5. that they dwelt at the firſt in Geſhur in the land of Gilead, and of the Gezrites, *Joſh.*16.3. that they dwelt in Gezer, belonging to Ephraim, but for feare of the people of Iſrael they removed and dwelt amongſt the Amalekites, and when they now thought themſelves ſafe from all enemies, David came upon them and deſtroyed them, and tooke their ſpoile, as he might well doe, becauſe they were Canaanites adjudged long agoe to de-

V. 9. ſtruction. And in deſtroying theſe peoples, David went ſo far, that he ſpared
V. 11. neither man nor woman, the reaſon whereof is rendered v. 11. leſt they ſhould
V. 10. tell, what he did, whereas he diſſembled to A*chiſh* v. 10. that his going was a-gainſt the ſouth of J*udah*, the J*erahmeelites* and the Kenites, but if any of them had beene left alive, they would have diſcovered the contrary, and then happily A*chiſh* would have beene offended with him, becauſe although they were Lyra. none of the Philiſtims, yet it may be that they were in league with them, or un-
P. Martyr. der their tribute, as Lyra ſaith. For his diſſimulation to the King, he cannot plainely be charged with lying, as Peter Martyr chargeth him, for thoſe Iunius. people dwelt on the ſouth of J*udah*, and in places of right belonging to them, ſo that his anſwer was ambiguous, he might be underſtood either to have fought againſt J*udah*, or thoſe peoples inhabiting upon the ſouth of that Tribe, and A*chiſh* being willing, that he ſhould fight againſt J*udah*, was eaſily brought Joſephus. to underſtand his ſpeech accordingly, as Joſephus ſaith, yet as J*unius* hath it, he declined ſome what from that ſimplicity, that ought to be in a good man through weakeneſſe, but he thought thus to give the better content to A*chiſh*, as indeed he did. Of the Jerahmeelites read 1 *Chron.*2.9,25. they came of Jerah-meel, the firſt borne of Hezron, of the Tribe of Judah: of the Kenites, J*udg.*1. 16.

The M*yſtery.* Myſtically by David leaving J*udea* and fleeing into the P*hiliſtims* country, Lyra. Chriſt was figured out, who fled or went by his miniſters from the Jewes to the Gentiles, and the rooting out of errours in thoſe places, where they came, Act. 10. by D*avids* deſtroying of all, not ſuffering one to live, for by killing the ſubduing of the Gentiles to the faith by P*eter* was ſet forth.

CHAP. XXVIII.

V. 1, 2. THE Philiſtims preparing to goe to battle againſt Iſrael, A*chiſh* telleth David that he ſhould goe with him, and David doth not deny it, whereupon A*chiſh* ſaid, that he would make him the keeper of his head for ever. Here David ſeemeth to have run into an unexcuſable errour, becauſe if he meant to fight againſt Iſrael, as he pretended, he ſhould have holpen Infidels againſt beleevers, if not, he ſhould have dealt falſely and fraudulently with his friend, that had received him into his protection. Lyra anſwereth, that David meant, as he ſaid, to fight in the defence of A*chiſh*, and that herein he may be juſtifyed, either becauſe Saul had broken ſome league entred into with the Philiſtims, for which it was juſt for them to fight againſt him, or becauſe he had right unto the kingdome of Iſrael, and now that the Philiſtims were going to warre againſt S*aul*, if they prevailed, he might be in hope that A*chiſh* would be ready to helpe him to the foreſaid kingdome, or laſtly, becauſe David meant onely to defend the perſon of the King. But the contrary to this laſt appeareth to be true, *ch.*9.8. that he meant to goe and fight againſt the enemies of A*chiſh*, that is, the Iſraelites; and for the ſecond although the kingdome was promiſed him, yet he was not to ſeeke it by helping to deſtroy S*aul* and his men; but patiently to waite the Lords leiſure, till that he ſhould bring him to it. And for the firſt, although the Philiſtims might have a juſt quarrel againſt S*aul*, yet David ought not to have helped them, he being one of his Subjects. Wherefore the beſt ſolution is, that David meant not to fight againſt his brethren, nor yet to be falſe to A*chiſh*, but to depend upon Gods direction, who he hoped, would Peter M*artyr.* provide by ſome meanes, that he ſhould not come to this battle, as indeed he Pellican. did provide ch. 29. and therefore he made no promiſe to A*chiſh*, but anſwered Oſiander. him ambiguouſly, thou ſha't ſee, what thy ſervant can doe, thus Martyr, Pellican.

Now Samuel was dead &c. as ch. 25. 1. and S*aul had put all that had familiar ſpirits,*

ſpirits, and the wizzards out of the land. This commemoration of Samuels death is made againe here, becauſe Saul ſought to have Samuel brought againe unto him, Verſ. 11. that wee might know that hee, who there appeared was not the true Samuel, ſo Oſiander, and his putting off the Wizzards out of the land in zeale of the Law, that his inconſtancy and hypocriſie might appeare, in that hee being in diſtreſſe ſought to ſuch againe, as Junius: Lyra ſaith, that Saul pretended zeale of the Law, but was moved to put theſe to death becauſe they foretold that David ſhould bee King: And hee ſaith that Witches were ſuch as uſed mans blood and the touching of the dead, Wizzards only certaine words and charmes.

V. 4, 6. And the Philiſtims gathered themſelves together, and pitched in Shunem, &c. and when Saul ſaw them, hee feared greatly and ſought to the Lord, but the Lord anſwered him not, neither by dreames, Urim, nor Prophet; the vulgar Latine neither by Prieſts, dreames nor Prophets; not by Prieſts, ſaith Lyra, for Saul had ſlaine them all, except Abiathar, that was with David; and by Prophets hee underſtandeth the Diſciples of Samuel, amongſt whom Saul had ſometime propheſied. Whereas, 1 Chron. 10. 14. may ſeeme to bee contradictory to this, where it is ſaid, Saul died for his tranſgreſſion, and becauſe hee ſought unto Wizzards and enquired not of the Lord: Martyr anſwereth well, that hee ſought unto God for formalities ſake and in hypocriſie, not in truth being compunct for his ſinnes, for hee was not moved with any repentance for them, and this was accounted by God as no ſeeking to him, and therefore hee refuſed to anſwer him. Peter Martyr. For how little Religion was in Saul appeared in that hee tooke no care of the Arke to remove it from a private houſe in Kireath-jearim to ſome better place, hee ſlew the Prieſts, and perſecuted righteous David, and by and by ſought unto a Witch. Wherefore, when he enquired, hee was neglected, as unworthy of any anſwer from the Lord. Note. Note, that they, who beare no reverence to the Prieſts of God, but exerciſe their malice againſt them, ſhall not in the day of their diſtreſſe have any comfort by them, nor by any other meanes, that they can uſe, that all may feare to touch Gods anointed or to doe his Prophets any harme, ſeeing if they doe, the greateſt hurt will redound to themſelves in the end. To anſwer by Vrim was by the high Prieſt, who did weare the coſtly Ephod with the Vrim and Thummim in it, but now the Prieſts being all ſlaine, except one, that was fled to David, and the Ephod with him, how could Saul enquire hereby? Some ſay, that hee made another Ephod, which was applyed by ſome other inferiour Prieſt, ſome that hee ſent to Abiathar, that was with David, to enquire for him. But it is not neceſſary to underſtand, that he enquired by the Vrim, but wanting this hee could have no anſwer thereby, hee enquired then of ſuch Prieſts as hee had, but God made him no anſwer: So Martyr and Junius, ſee Verſ. 15. Peter Martyr. Iunius. Touching the anſwers made by the Vrim, I have already ſpoken upon Exod. 28. 30. and have there alſo ſhewed what was meant by the Vrim put upon the Breaſtplate, viz. a writing prepared by the Lord of theſe two words, and given to Moſes and by him faſtned to the Breaſtplate. But ſome thinke, that nothing elſe was meant hereby, but the pretious ſtones upon the Breaſtplate there mentioned, which were of extraordinary brightneſſe, as being prepared by God, becauſe it is called ſometime the pectorall of judgement, Exod. 28. 29. and ſometime the Vrim of judgement, Numb. 27. 21. and to conſult by Vrim, and to apply the Ephod, was all one, 1 Sam. 23. 9. ch. 30. 7. Oſiander. P. Martyr. But I have ſhewed ſome reaſon againſt this, Exod. 28. 30. and whereas ſome thinke, that the Prieſt having the Breaſtplate on was inſpired to give anſwers, that is not probable, becauſe ſo the anſwering by Vrim ſhould not have differed from the anſwers made by Prophets, but this was plainly a way of anſwering diſtinct from that, as here appeareth.

V. 7. Then Saul enquired for a woman, who had a familiar ſpirit, that hee might goe to her, and hearing by his ſervants of one at Endor, hee diſguiſed himſelfe and went with two men unto her by night. Here two queſtions in generall offer themſelves: 1. What it was to have a familiar ſpirit, and what

Qu. 1.

Peter Martyr.

Ephes. 2.

Aug. in Pſ. 77.

what power ſuch had. 2. Whether Samuel indeed were made to appeare, or an evill ſpirit in his likeneſſe? For the firſt, this woman is called Babalath-Obb, the miſtreſſe or dame of a familiar, becauſe the witch is by the devill called dame, and Obb ſeemeth to ſet forth ſuch a ſpirit, as they thought had power to raiſe the dead. Oboth, by which name familiar ſpirits are called Levit. 19. 31. ſignifieth bottles, becauſe they ſpake by them, as out of a bottle from their nether parts being filled with wind, ſee Levit. 19. 31. The Greeks call this woman Pythoniſſa, by a name derived from Apollo Pythius, who was ſo called from the Serpent Python, which hee killed. Some thinke, that there are no devils, as the Sadduces and Peripateticks, and that the ſtrange things, which ſeeme to bee done by them are done by the ſecret and ſtrange operation of nature, or by the phantaſie of man, or by the conſtitution and temperature of the body. But ſome things have beene done, which exceed all ſuch power, as to goe inviſibly, for a dead image to ſpeake in divers languages without learning them: and the Scriptures doe plainely teſtifie that there are ſpirits both good and bad. Now for the power and knowledge of evill ſpirits, whom Witches uſe, they can doe many ſtrange things, when God permitteth them; for the Devills who were in the man poſſeſſed, that kept amongſt the graves, gave him ſuch ſtrength, that hee could not bee bound with chaines of Iron, and of ſuch force they were, that they carried an heard of Swine of 2000. ſuddenly into the Sea. And the Devill being permitted, raiſed a tempeſt, whereby the houſe was blowne downe, wherein Jobs children were, and hee made lightning come downe upon his cattell to conſume them. Peter Martyr ſaith, that there are certaine men in Norway called Lapones, who have three knots in their beards, of which one being looſed a great tempeſt followeth in the Sea, the ſecond being looſed, it increaſeth, and upon looſning the third it rageth ſo, as if heaven and earth would goe together: and becauſe of his working thus ſtrangely in the ayre, the devill is called the Prince of the aire. For hee worketh in the wicked, ſaith Auguſtine, tanquam in propriis mancipiis, but to the godly hee can do nothing, except he be by God permitted, as a man may uſe his owne beaſt as hee will, but not another mans, unleſſe hee giveth him leave. Tucria a veſtall Virgin by the helpe of the devill carried water in a Sive, and Claudia drew a ſhip to ſhoare that ſtuck in the ſand, which no humane force can doe; hee carried the body of Chriſt and ſet him upon a Pinnacle of the Temple; hee can uſe creatures as his inſtruments to ſpeake as the Serpent to Evah, and the Image of fortune ſpake amongſt the Romans. Moreover hee hath power to aſſume a body and therein to appeare, and to delude the ſenſes, and ſo to doe many ſtrange feats. For their knowledge, they are ſo ſubtle and acute, and of ſuch long experience and agilitie in moving to places farre remote, and then inſtantly to returne againe, as that they can foretell many things to come, as being by them ſeene before, or gathered by obſervation, and long experience, or ſeeing into the cauſes of things. 2. God doth many things by the miniſtry of evill Angels for the puniſhment of the wicked, which they knew before by reaſon of this Commiſſion given unto them, as the plagues of Egypt. 3. Hee knoweth ſome things by the propheſies of Scripture, as Triſmegiſtus is thought by St. Auguſtine to have foretold hereby unto Aſclepius the ruine of Idols, learning it from the propheſie of Jeremiah; yet Satan is ignorant of things to come, ſo as that hee can ſpeake hereof onely by conjecture. 1. Becauſe there may ſometimes bee the ſame ſignes, and yet not the ſame effects follow. 2. Becauſe God ſometimes altereth the courſe of nature, or worketh ſupernaturally. Moreover he is ignorant of the thoughts of mens hearts, 1 King. 8. 39, theſe are knowne onely to God.

Qu. 2.

Auguſt. Epiſt. ad Felicianum.

Touching the ſecond queſtion; Some hold that it was not Samuel, that appeared, but the devill in his likeneſſe, and ſome that it was Samuel. But the firſt is generally followed by Chriſtian Doctors, the other by the Rabbins of the Jewes. Saint Auguſtine is ſometime for the one opinion, and ſometime for the other. For the firſt, that it was an evill ſpirit appearing in the likeneſſe of Samuel, he ſaith, that God would not anſwer Saul by any Prophet living, and therefore not by one dead, wherefore it was not the Prophet Samuel that here appeared and gave him anſwer, but a ſpectrum cauſed to appeare by the Devill. 2. This Samuel told Saul, that to morrow hee ſhould bee with him, whereas he moſt probably dying deſperately went to hell, and not to the place where true Samuel was. 3. Hee ſuffered himſelfe to bee worſhipped, which true Samuel would not have done. 4. If it were true Samuel, then hee muſt come forth either voluntarily, which it were inconvenient to affirme, becauſe this would imply his conſenting with the Witch, or againſt his will by magicall power, but this cannot bee, becauſe the devill hath no power over the Saints of God being dead. For the ſecond, that it was the ſoule of Samuel indeed, hee ſaith, it might be ſo, either being brought by the devill, God permitting it for ſome hidden reaſon, as being permitted hee tranſported Chriſt to the pinnacle of the Temple; or being brought by God, the devill not being ſuffered at this time to worke, that he might foretell unto Saul his deſtruction at hand to his greater terrour now that he was dead, as hee had foretold his rejection from the Kingdome when hee was alive. And this is the more probable, becauſe when Balaam went for an anſwer, God would not ſuffer the evill ſpirit to anſwer him, as Lyra ſaith: All Catholick Doctors hold, but a good Angell contrary to his and the will of Balaack, and yet nothing was herein done to credit the art magick, but to hinder the courſe thereof; ſo likewiſe, as the gloſſe hath it upon; Eſay 29. Samuel was called forth by a divine power to give anſwer to Saul contrary to his will; and for proofe of this, that it was Samuel, it is firſt ſaid, that the ſacred hiſtory calleth him Samuel divers times, which it would not have done, if it had beene an evill ſpirit in his likeneſſe, for great irreverence ſhould thus have beene done to Samuell, ſo worthy a Prophet. 2. Eccleſiaſt. 46. 20. after his death Samuel propheſied and ſhewed the King his end, and lifted up his voyce in Propheſie. 3. He propheſied truly of the overthrow of Sauls Army the day following, and of his death and his ſonnes, which the devill could not doe, for hee is a lyer and the father of lies. And to this doth Lyra moſt incline, anſwering the reaſons brought againſt it, the firſt by ſaying, that although God would not anſwer Saul by any Prophet living, yet there was great reaſon of anſwering by Samuel who was dead, becauſe Samuel was the onely Prophet, whom God had ſent unto Saul both to make him King to direct him and to threaten him, ſo that having anſwer from him at this time, hee could not but bee out of all hope of eſcaping Gods judgements any longer, that if there were any grace in him, hee might prepare to die, and ſo not dye eternally, 2. Samuel did not meane, that Saul and his ſonnes ſhould bee in the ſame place where he was, the next day, by ſaying, to morrow thou and thy ſonnes ſhall bee with mee, but onely that they ſhould bee in the ſtate of the dead: for although ſome went into the place of torment, yet Jonathan being a good man was undoubtedly ſaved, and therefore the place to which they all went, could not be meant. 3. Samuel did not ſuffer himſelfe to bee otherwiſe worſhipped, then the Prophet Nathan afterwards worſhipped David when hee went in unto him. 4. It may bee gathered from that which hath been already ſaid, that not the Witch, but God cauſed Samuel to come forth, when as the Witch called forth an evill ſpirit, whom God at this time prohibited to appeare. He anſwereth alſo to the argument brought to prove him to bee true Samuel: to the firſt and ſecond, that an evill ſpirit in appearance like Samuel might be called Samuel, without doing him any wrong, as an Image is called by the name of him, whom it repreſenteth. To the third, that the Devill can ſometimes foretell things truely, viz. being revealed from God unto him, as this of Sauls death might bee. But that in Eccleſiaſtes true Samuel is meant is plain, and how Satan ſhould come to have the death not onely of Saul, but of his ſonnes alſo revealed unto him, I cannot ſee, and therefore I leave it ſtill to be conſidered by the judicious, whether it was not true Samuel, not called forth by the Witch, but ſent of God.

Lyra.

Iohn. 38.

For this woman, to whom Saul ſought, the Rabbins hold that ſhee was Abners mother, and therefore ſpared by Saul, when all other Witches were cut off, but

Peter Martyr.

but the contrary appeareth becauſe ſhe feared to be made knowne for the danger of being put to death, *v.*9, 10. ſo that it was not through any partiality in Saul towards her, that ſhe eſcaped, but through the negligence of officers uſed to the Ioſh.17.11. rooting out of all ſuch. Endor, where this Witch lived, was a City of the Manaſſites, on the other ſide of Jordan, foure miles from mount Gelboa. H.B. Patriarks travailes. Hither Saul came diſguiſed with two men onely, that is, ſay the Hebrewes, Abner, and Amaſa, Lyra. and he diſguiſed himſelfe, becauſe otherwiſe the woman would have feared to exerciſe her diabolicall art, and becauſe he would not have it knowne, that he went to ſuch a woman. When he was come, ſhee recounted to him, how V. 9, 10. Saul had cut off all Witches and Wizzards, and therefore would doe nothing, till that he had ſworne unto her to conceale her. But then having conjured, ſhe V. 12. ſaw Samuel and cryed out, that he had deceived her, for now ſhee knew him to be Saul. Pellican. Whereas Saul deſired her to bring Samuel to him, ſome thinke, that he did not beleeve it to be in her power to raiſe up Samuel, but ſome likeneſſe P.Martyr. of him, but I rather hold with thoſe, that thinke Saul to have beene ſo blinded with errour, that he beleeved that ſhee could raiſe him up, for otherwiſe he would never have mentioned him; but ſome ſpirit, with whom he might have conſulted, according to that, fleƈtere cum ſuperos nequeo, Acheronta movebo. But how did the woman know him to be Saul now, which ſhee knew not before? The Rabbins generally ſay, that when any came up before others, they came with their feet forward, but when before a King, with their Lyra. head firſt appearing for reverence, but Lyra and others thinke rather, that the V. 13, 14. party appearing told her that it was Saul. Then Saul asked her what ſhee ſaw, and ſhee ſaid Gods aſcending out of the earth, then he asking the forme, ſhee ſaid, he was an old man covered with a mantle, whereby Saul knew that it was Samuel, and bowed before him to the ground. Hereby it ſeemeth that the woman onely did ſee the apparition, but Saul ſaw nothing; but this ſaith P.Martyr. Martyr, was onely at the firſt, the Witch being above in a private chamber, for ſuch will be alone, when they doe their feates, but by and by, Saul was admitted in, to conferre with Samuel and ſhee went out, as may be gathered *v.*21. Vatablus. I thinke rather with Vatablus, that Saul onely heard Samuels words, but ſaw not, the Witch did ſee, but heard not, and Sauls ſervants neither ſaw nor heard, for if they had heard that which was ſaid, they would have perſwaded him to abſent himſelfe from that warre, and ſo to keepe out of the danger; he did reverence upon her relation, conceiving that Samuel was there, and if he had ſeene him afterwards being brought in, ſhee ſhould not have needed to deſcribe him unto Saul, but to bid him come in and ſee, neither can it be gathered from the words, *v.*21. that he was in a chamber alone, when Samuel ſpake unto him, but ſomewhat remote in the ſame roome from the woman, that ſhee might not heare, ſhee was in ſecretario ſaith the Gloſſe, in a cloſe place in the roome buſie about her conjuration. Whereas ſhee ſaid, ſhee ſaw Gods, the Rabbins faigne that Samuel and Moſes alſo appeared, but this is contrary to the Text, of what forme is he? as ſpeaking of one; the word Elohim in the plurall, then is uſed ſignifying Gods, to denote one excellent perſon. Joſephus. He was covered with a mantle, for this was proper to judges and prophets, although Joſephus ſaith, it was a prieſtly garment, but without reaſon, ſeeing Samuel was no Prieſt. Hereby Saul conceived him to be Samuel, ſaith Lyra, Lyra. becauſe Religious men uſe to be buried in their habit, which they uſed living, and ſo it is likely was Samuel.

V. 15. He comming forth firſt reproveth Saul for diſquieting him, who excuſeth it by the great ſtraights, wherein he was, and becauſe he could have no anſwer either by Prophets or dreames, for the Lord had forſaken him; where it is to be noted, that he ſpeaketh not of the Urim, whereby is implyed, that he inquired not by it, although it was before mentioned as one of the three wayes of Gods anſwering.

V. 16, 17. Then Samuel replyed, why doſt thou aske of me, ſeeing God hath forſaken thee, and v. 17. and the Lord hath done to him, as he ſpake by me, &c. Here becauſe the perſon is changed, hath done to him, not to thee, a queſtion may be made, whom Samuel

Iunius. Borrhæus. muel meaneth? Junius ſaith, he hath done to himſelfe, that is, diſpoſed of his counſell, as he ſpake by me. Borrhæus, he hath done to him, that is to Saul, but the Chalde beſt, he hath done to David, Chald. Paraphr. of the tranſlating of the kingdome to whom he ſpeaketh for further explanation in the next words, ſo likewiſe Joſephus, the Vulg. Lat. going from the Hebr. hath it, hath done to thee.

V. 19. Then he telleth him, that the Lord would deliver Iſrael into the hands of the Philiſtims, and that to morrow, he and his ſonnes ſhould be with him. D. Kimhi. Ioſephus. Whereupon Kimbi gathereth, that Saul was ſaved becauſe he could not otherwiſe be with Samuel, and Joſephus praiſeth him, as fighting for his country, when certaine death was before his face. But this was onely a civill vertue ſuch as hath beene found in ſome heathens, as the Decii and Curtii amongſt the Romans. And touching the ſaving of his ſoule, as was ſaid before, there can be little hope, conſidering the fearefull end that he came unto. For his being with Samuel, who was dead, and ſleeping in the grave, 1 Sam. 31. nothing elſe was meant hereby, but that they ſhould be dead, as he was. For it is nothing likely, that Samuel ſent to fill Saul altogether with terrour for his wickedneſſe, ſhould comfort him with ſo great a conſolation, of being in heaven with him. For Gods delivering of Iſrael into the hands of the Philiſtims for Sauls wickedneſſe, Lyra. it was juſt with God ſo to doe; becauſe they did helpe him on in his wicked courſes, as wee may ſee in Doeg and the Ziphims, Nabal, &c.

V. 20. Saul hearing this, fell downe all along through feare and aſtoniſhment, and it is ſhewed, that he was the more faint, and ſo leſſe able to beare this evill tidings, because he was faſting, he had eaten nothing all that day, and all that night; happily, ſaith Martyr, Peter Martyr. becauſe ſuch as came to enquire of witches were to come faſting, as God will be ſought to by faſting and prayer. But feare chiefly tooke away his ſtrength, the ſpirits and bloud returning to the heart, and ſo the Members of the body left deſtitute of all ſtrength. And this is all the comfort, that they are like to have, that ſeeke to witches and wizzards in the time of their diſtreſſe.

V. 21. 22. 23. 24. The woman ſeeing him thus feeble offereth him food, but he refuſed to eate, yet upon the importunity of his ſervants joyning with her, after that a calfe was killed and made ready and bread, both he and they did eate. Joſephus. Joſephus for this her humanity towards Saul, the utter enemy of all that were of her profeſſion, doth greatly commend her: but ſhe might be thus carefull about him, leſt if he ſhould have dyed there, ſhee ſhould have been called in queſtion for his death: So Martyr.

Peter Martyr. Note. Morally we may note here, how Saul was puniſht in his kinde, he had often put David in feare by going out unjuſtly againſt him, therefore now the Philiſtims are brought againſt him, and put him in great feare, in what kinde a man ſinneth, in the ſame let him expect to be puniſhed. Againe Saul had men and munition to reſiſt the Philiſtims, as at other times, when he did manfully againſt them, but now his courage faileth him, whence came this, but from his ſinnes, and becauſe he could by no meanes have any comfort from God? Men and munition then are nothing in the day of battle, if our ſinnes riſe up againſt us, and ſo the light of Gods countenance be turned away from us.

CHAP. XXIX.

V. 1. NOW the Philiſtims gathered all their Armies together to Aphek, and the Iſraelites pitched by a fountaine in Jezreel. Before in ch. 28. 5. it is ſaid, that the Philiſtims, pitched in Shunem and Iſrael in mount Gilboa. Now Shunem was in the borders of Iſſachar, Joſh. 19. 18. and Aphek of Aſher, Joſh. 19. 30. Junius. But theſe two Tribes lay the one next unto the other, and ſo theſe places were neare together, and neare to Shunem was Jezreel, being therefore named together Ioſh. 19. 18. and neare to the valley of Jezreel, where this fountaine was, were the mountaines of Gelboah, Junius. Although then new places be named, yet there was no remove of the Armies, but becauſe theſe places were contiguous, the Armies of the Philiſtims overſpreading Shunem, and Aphek, and the Iſraelites Gelboah to the valley of Jezreel, ſometime one is named and ſometime another.

V. 2,3. David comming with his men with Achiſh in the rereward, the Lords of the Philiſtims were offended, and would not ſuffer the Hebrewes to goe with V. 4,5. them to battle, although Achiſh pleaded for David and juſtified him againſt their jealouſies, ſaying, that he had beene with him many dayes, &c. whereupon Lyra. they that hold David to have beene onely foure months in the Philiſtims country, ſay that Achiſh ſpake of a longer time, then he had beene there, to pacifie the other Princes the more. It was not without a ſingular providence, that the Princes had David and his men in ſuch ſuſpition, for by this meanes, he was kept both from fighting againſt his country, and returned opportunely to reſcue Ziklag in his abſence invaded by the Amalekites, and got much prey, wherewith he made him many friends for the better obtaining of the kingdome of Iſrael after Sauls death. And thus alſo he deſtroyed the reſt of the Amalekites, who had before eſcaped Sauls hands.

V. 6. Achiſh being overcome by the importunity of the other Princes, ſaith unto David, as the Lord liveth thou haſt beene upright, &c. He being ſorry, that they had David in ſuſpition, which he thought would be grievous to him to heare of, lenifyed the matter as well as he could, by profeſſing that he thought exceedingly well of him, but the Princes favoured him not, and therefore he P. Martyr. willed him to returne to his place. Thus ſaith Martyr, even Kings are forced oft times to doe otherwiſe then they would by their Subjects, as David afterwards to tolerate Joab, Darius to deliver Daniel to be caſt into the Lions den, Zedechiah touching Ieremiah ſaid to his Princes, that he could deny nothing unto them; and Sylla, Cæſar, and Marius, yeilded to many things againſt their wills at the importunity of their Souldiers: whereby he ſeemeth to have taken Achiſh to be King over all the other Princes, but they were indeed all reguli, or petty Kings, being ſometime therefore called Lords, 1 Sam. 6. 4. 17.
and Gath, of which Achiſh is ſaid here to be King, is not named firſt, as the Qu. principall, but in the fourth place. But whereas Achiſh ſaith, as the Lord liveth, it may be demanded, how he being an Idolater, knew the Lord to ſweare by him, and ſpecially to ſpeake of him by the name Jehovah? Anſw. This was no ſingular thing in him, for ch. 6. 2. the Philiſtims doe generally thus ſpeak
P. Martyr. of God, and Peter Martyr thinketh, that they had the knowledge of this name ever ſince the time of Abraham, Iſaack, and Jacob, who lived in that country, of whom they could not but heare him often ſpoken of. But although they had not the knowledge of this name ſo long agoe, they might learne it of the Iſraelites, and take up this phraſe, when they would ſpeake ſeriouſly of God after their manner, ſeeing they lived ſo neare unto them. Whereas Achiſh is Ioſephus. ſaid here to have remitted David to Ziklag, Joſephus ſaith, that he ſent him to defend his borders from the incurſions of enemies in the time of his abſence.
But herein he was miſtaken, for he went but to his place, v. 4. that is, Ziklag, the place by King Achiſh aſſigned unto him.

V. 8. David hearing this ſeemed to take it heavily that hee might not be truſted to goe with the King to fight againſt his enemies, wherein ſome juſtifie him, as Borrhæus. if he ſpake as he thought, having it ſtill in his minde, that he would doe, when Oſiander. hee came to the battaile, as God ſhould direct him, either by not fighting or fighting: ſome, that he ſpake thus out of flattery to hold Achiſh his favour ſtill, P. Martyr. but juſtifying him, becauſe he was now in ſuch a caſe, that he was neceſſarily enforced to diſſemble: Laſtly ſome hold, that he ſinned in thus diſſembling for a worldly advantage. For my part, I dare not hold with them, that tax David as ſinning in this, but rather with thoſe that juſtifie him, for he ſubmitted himſelfe wholly to Gods guidance and direction, as before when they firſt ſet out, ch. 28. It was not neceſſary for him to diſcover the inward thoughts of his heart to Achiſh, that he had ſome hope all this while, that if it were diſpleaſing to God, that he ſhould goe to fight againſt his brethren, he would provide by ſome meanes to hinder his progreſſe, this he might without ſinning keepe to himſelfe, and now that he was hindered, how glad he was of this accident, and yet expoſtulate with Achiſh for not ſuffering him to goe forward, as if he ſuſpected his fidelity, for if he had gone on, he meant not to be unfaithfull to him. Therefore when he ſaith, that I may not goe to fight againſt the enemies of the Lord my King, it was, as if he had further added, which I would have beene ready to doe, if it had beene Gods will that I ſhould, which now I finde it is not, by reaſon of this obſtacle, which could not have happened but by his ſpeciall providence.

V. 9, 10. Achiſh replyed, that David was in his fight as an angell of God, &c. ſo that we ſee, the heathen were not without all knowledge of God and of his meſſengers the holy Angels, whom they held to be excellent creatures, as we may gather from this that he likened David to an Angell, when he would moſt highly commend him, which ſheweth them to be the more unexcuſable in their Idolatry, as Saint Paul reaſoneth Rom. 1. 19. He ſpake thus to comfort David, whatſoever the other Princes thought of him, and had him in ſuſpition, yet he did highly eſteeme of him, as a man ſent unto him by God, leſt being diſcouraged he ſhould thinke of leaving his country againe and going to ſome other place. But becauſe the Princes favoured him not he bade him to depart with his Maſters ſervants earely in the morning, leſt happily they ſeeing him not gone ſhould in wrath oppreſſe him with their forces, or lay any ambuſh for him in the way, ſo Peter Martyr. And he calleth them his Maſters men becauſe they were Saul's his Maſters ſubjects. Peter Martyr.

V. 11. Then David with his men departed into the Philiſtims country, and the Philiſtims went up to Jezreel, that is, to the place where the Campe of the Iſraelites lay, to fight with them, and by this meanes David was not amongſt them when Saul was ſlaine, but retired to a more fit place for the Iſraelites to repaire unto him to make him King, as is ſhewed 1 Chron: 12. 19, 20, 21.

CHAP. XXX.

V. 1. DAVID comming backe to Ziklag upon the third day found it ſpoiled and burnt with fire, and their Wives and Children carryed all away, but not one killed. Here David might plainly ſee the hand of God chaſtiſing him, ſaith Martyr, for offering to goe with Achiſh againſt Iſrael, but rather he might ſee the ſingular providence of God, in that he was cauſed ſo ſpeedily to returne from an unjuſt warre that he was towards, to a juſt warre for the rooting out of the reſt of the Amalekites, whom Saul had formerly not ſlaine, when he was ſent againſt them. Theſe Amalekites did beare a deadly hatred againſt the Iſraelites even from their firſt comming out of Ægypt, for which cauſe Saul was ſent againſt them to deſtroy them all, and ſlew all that he could come by, except Agag the King, and David, ch. 27. 8. made another deſtruction of them more lately, wherefore their malice being now much increaſed, they tooke this opportunity, when all the men were gone out of Ziklag, to come and doe theſe Iſraelites all the deſpight that they could. But whereas David had ſlaine of their people in thoſe parts that he invaded every living ſoule, both of man, woman, and childe, they contrariwiſe ſlew none, a divine power certainely overruling them herein, in favour to David, that he might recover them all againe alive. But with them doubtleſſe covetouſneſſe wrought herein, they preſerved all with an intent to ſell them. Exod: 17. 1 Sam: 15.

V. 4. When David and the men with him ſaw, what had beene done, they firſt wept exceedingly, and then the people were ready to ſtone him, becauſe he had beene no more provident to leave ſome behinde to defend the City, but he comforted himſelfe in his God. David was now in a great ſtraight, by reaſon of his many enemies, Saul, the Philiſtims, Amalekites, and his owne men, but even now he ſhewed great ſtrength of faith, he comforted himſelfe in God, who he knew, would aſſuredly preſerve him to raigne over Iſrael, as he had promiſed. And he called God his God, for the great experience that he in particular Peter Martyr.

ticular had of his goodneſſe, ſo Paul Rom. 1. 8. I thanke my God, Gal. 2. 20. and whereas the faithfull ſoule calleth Chriſt, my well beloved, in the Canticles, Bernard noteth, that ſhe challenged the Lord of the univerſe by a certaine kinde of propriety for her beloved, which is wonderfull, but it is true, the ſoule ſeeth the ſeeing God no otherwiſe, then as if ſhee alone were ſeene of God. So particular is the faith of a true beleever againſt the doctrine of the Romaniſts, who taxe it for preſumption to have a particular aſſurance of Gods grace and favour. In that David wept, note againſt the Stoicks, that paſſion is incident to wiſe men, and that ſuch doe not upon any accident refraine from changing ſo much as their countenance, as they hold, for this 'twere to be a ſtocke without life, and ſenſe, and not a man.

Bernard. univerſitatis dominum quadam ſibi proprietate vendicat in dilectum. Mirum hoc videtur ſed verum, animam Deum videntem, haud ſecus videre, quam ſi ſola videatur a Deo.

V. 7. V. 8. David being in this ſtraight, conſulteth with God by the Ephod and high-prieſt Abiathar; how this was done ſee Exod 28. 30. then the Lord anſwered, that he ſhould purſue after the enemies and recover all, whereby it ſeemeth, that he anſwered by voice.

V. 9. 10. &c. Then David haſtened after them with his 600 men and came to the brooke Beſor, where 200 that were faint, were left behinde, and he with 400 went on, and finding a young man an Ægyptian almoſt dead with hunger, when by giving him to eate, he was revived, they were by him brought to the Amalekites, who were making merry with their great prey, and ſo ſuddenly deſtroyed by David and his men, coming unexpectedly upon them, all but 400, that eſcaped by fleeing away upon Camels, and all the prey was recovered, which they had taken both out of Judah, and from Ziklag, and they miſſed nothing of all that they had loſt. v. 17. it is ſaid, that David ſmote them from the twilight till the evening of the next day, he ſpent ſo long a time, ſaith Lyra, in ſlaying them, becauſe many ranne away and ſome were hidden, ſo that they could no ſooner finde them out. Whereas David is now ſaid to have conſulted with the Lord, but not before, when he came firſt to Achiſh, when he went out to Warre upon the Amalekites and Gezrites, nor when he went with Achiſh to battle, Martyr noteth that till he was in great affliction he neglected his duty, and proceeded only upon his owne head, but now in his diſtreſſe he was humbled and ſought to God, and he anſwered him, when as he had refuſed to anſwer Saul, of which ſee the cauſe, ch. 28. 6. And in that being encouraged by the Divine Oracle he purſued after the Amalekites, and although in the way 200 of his men were ſpent ſo, as that they could goe no further, yet he proceeded thence onely with 400. that his faith was ſtrong. For he doubted not even with theſe, ſeeing he had Gods promiſe to get the victory.

Lyra.

Peter Martyr.

Touching the ſervant, an Egyptian found in the way, it is ſaid that his maſter left him, becauſe hee was ſicke, there to periſh with famin; this was a cruell part in his maſter, and contrary to that which in common humanity hee ought to have done. The Centurion having a ſervant ſicke ſought with all diligence to have him healed, and ſo ought this mans maſter to have provided better for him, and to have put him into ſome Waggon, wherein other things were carried, or upon ſome Beaſt, eſpecially having time and leyſure ſo to doe, ſeeing no enemy yet purſued after them. But for this his inhumanity hee went not unpuniſhed, the ſervant thus cruelly dealt withall, and left not like a man, but a beaſt, became the overthrow of the whole Army: and let all maſters, that deale cruelly with their poore Servants, not looke to eſcape Gods revenging hand, who is the Patron of the diſtreſſed, and hath ſhewed his care, that Servants ſhould not be cruelly uſed by divers Laws made in their behalfe, Exod. 22. Levit. 25. 39. ſee alſo Ier. 34. Alſo the Roman Laws did much favour ſervants, as in Digeſt. leg. 2. let the ſervant, that is left of his maſter in his ſickneſſe goe out free, becauſe hee is then forſaken, when hee ought ſpecially to be helped, againe lege ultima pro derelicto, if any maſter denyeth food unto his ſervant and another ſupplyeth him with food, hee ſhall

Mat: 8 5.

Note.

Servus in gravi morbo dimiſſus a domino liber eſto.
Si herus negaverit ſervo ſuo alimenta & alius ſuppeditet, ſit occupantis.

thence forth bee his ſervant. But it may bee doubted here, whether David did well in ſeeking to make a ſervant to become an inſtrument to betray his Maſter. Sol. He was now no longer the Amalekites ſervant, but Davids, who had taken him and ſaved his life, and by his old maſter hee was quite put off, wherefore hee might well uſe his helpe to effect that the more ſpeedily, which God had promiſed him, as taking him to bee an inſtrument prepared of God in the way to direct him, who otherwiſe might have wandred with his men about uncertainly. For Davids killing of all the Amalekites, and ſparing none, he may ſeeme herein to have dealt too cruelly, eſpecially ſeeing they had beene more favourable to their wives and children, and killed none of them. But forſomuch as the Amalekites were a people adjudged to deſtruction, he may well be juſtified in thus doing, and for their ſparing of the Iſraelites wives and children, it was not done, as was ſhewed before, out of mercy, but covetouſneſſe to make money of them.

V. 17.

For the time, that David was killing and ſlaying, the Vulgar Latin hath it, from the evening to the evening of the next day, the Sept. from the morning to the evening and ſo untill the next day. Hebr. from the twilight and unto the evening of their morrow, that is, as Pagninus explaineth it, untill the evening of the day after theſe two twilights. Joſephus ſaith, it was but from dinner time, till the night of the ſame day, but that cannot bee, ſeeing it is ſaid, from the twilight, &c. and I am ſure they could not be ſaid to bee at dinner ſo ſoone in the morning. Junius moſt probably, from the twilight of their morrow, that is, the twilight of the day after that, wherein David and his men ſet forth to purſue them, till the evening, ſo that it was not two dayes together that they were making this ſlaughter (for neither could their ſtrength have held out ſo to doe, neither would the darke of the night have permitted them) but one whole day. Whereas they are ſaid to have beene found eating and drinking, it is to bee thought that this being ſo early in the morning was done riotouſly, they having continued banquetting and playing all the night, had not yet broken off, even when the day began to dawne the next day.

Pagninus. Ioſephus. Iunius.

V. 19,20.

David did not onely recover all that was loſt, as God had promiſed him, but tooke alſo the Amalekites flockes and heards and drove them, as it were, in triumph before their owne cattle, ſaying, this is Davids prey, thus aſcribing the victory to him to his greater honour, as before they had laid all the fault upon him, and were ready to ſtone him. If it bee doubted, whether Davids fact in carrying the cattle of the Amalekites were juſtifiable or not, becauſe Saul was reproved for ſparing any thing alive of theirs; It is anſwered, that David had no charge to the contrary, but Saul had, which made it a ſinne in him, but none in David. Moreover, theſe cattle had beene formerly taken by the Amalekites out of Judah, and therefore were ſtolne goods, wherefore David might well take them from the robbers, ſo Pellian: bnt if ſo, hee ought rather to have reſtored them, as Abraham did the goods recovered to the Sodomites. See here the difference betwixt the godly and the wicked, theſe begin in ſorrow, as David and his men, but end in joy, and the greater his extremity was, for that even his owne men were againſt him, the more is the honour now done unto him by them to make him amends by intituling him to all the prey, that was gotten, but the wicked have joyfull beginnings, and end miſerably, as the Amalekites, when they looked for nothing leſſe.

1 Sam. 15. P. Martyr. Pellican. Gen. 14. Note.

V. 21.

David after this approaching towards the place, where he left the foreſaid 200. men, they came out to meete him and to congratulate this great victory, and hee curteouſly ſaluted them, but ſome conſpired not to let them have any part of the prey, yet the goodneſſe of David was ſuch, as that hee would have it divided amongſt them alſo, becauſe they ſtayed and kept the ſtuffe, and he made it a law in Iſrael, that it ſhould alwayes after be done ſo, ſuch as ſtayed by the ſtuffe, and carriages to keepe them, ſhould have part of the ſpoiles taken, as well as they that went to warre. Which law although it was now firſt made, yet the foundation of it was laid long before in Abrahams time, who would have his confederates, Eſhol, and Mamre, and Aner to take their parts, although as it is thought, they were not in the battaile, but ſtayed to keepe his goods at home, and the like was done touching the ſpoile taken from the Midianites, Numb. 31. by Moſes, and afterwards, 2 Maccab. 8. 28. And equity required, that it ſhould bee ſo, becauſe they kept what they had before from enemies, that might otherwiſe have come and taken it away, whilſt their brethren went to recover more, and they ſtayed not behinde, becauſe unwilling to goe, but becauſe they were faint and weary, yet it is not to be thought, but that they who went to the warre, had moſt as their paines were greateſt, as was done, Numb. 31.

Lyra.

V.26.

Peter Martyr.

Borrhaus.

Pellican.

Junius.

Willet.

Then David ſent a preſent of the ſpoiles, which he had taken, to all his friends in Judah, even to 13. ſeverall places, where he and his men were uſed to haunt, Joſephus ſaith, to all parts of Judah, but that agreeth not with this. To ſome parts he was much beholding for relieving him and harbouring him when hee lurked amongſt them for feare of Saul, and therefore having now wherewithall to ſhew his thankfulneſſe hee doth it by ſending preſents unto them; and by this meanes alſo their affections might bee ſo ſtirred up towards him, as that, when Saul ſhould dye, they would be the more ready to bring him in to bee King, as indeed they did. And unto theſe Pellican addeth another reaſon, viz. becauſe a great part of this booty was taken from the men of Judah, wherefore equity required, that ſome reſtitution ſhould be made unto them againe. The places, to which, were 1. Bethel, Junius, the houſe of God, that is, to the Tabernacle in Kireath-jearim, which is called Bethel or the houſe of God, all others take Bethel for the proper name of a City here. Willet reaſoneth for that of Junius, 1. Becauſe it is not unlikely, that David would bee unthankfull to God. But firſt and chiefly ſend a preſent unto him, by whom hee had obtained this victory. 2. Becauſe the word Bethel is thus uſed, 1 Sam. 7. 16. ch. 10. 3. Laſtly, the City Bethel was not in Judah, but in Ephraim, Joſh. 16. 2. and David ſent onely to Judah, and Kireath-jearim, otherwiſe called Kireath-baal, belonged to Judah, Joſh. 15. 60. For the City Corhaſhan, v. 30. which, Junius thinketh, was Haſhan mentioned, Joſh. 19. 7. although it belonged to Simeon, yet it was a City of the Tribe of Judah. All the reſt belonged to Judah, Ramoth, Joſh. 19. 8. Jatter, Joſh. 15. 47. Haroer, Joſh. 13. 16. Siphmoth, Numb. 34. Eſhtema, Joſh. 15. 49. of the Jerameelites, ſee before Ch. 27. 10. of the Kenites, Judg. 1. 16. Hormah, Judg. 1. 17.

CHAP. XXXI.

V.1.

Ioſephus.

Note.

Peter Martyr.

Romi 5.
1 Cor. 11. 32.
Lyra.

THE Philiſtims fight againſt the Iſraelites, and they flee before them and are ſlaine, the three ſons of Saul, and all his ſervants, v. 6. and Saul being wounded and in danger killed himſelfe, and after him his Armour-bearer. Ioſephus noteth that this was done the ſame day, that David triumphed for his victory over the Amalekites, ſo that the godly perſecuted was comforted & the wicked perſecuter at length deſtroyed for his wickednes: which may ſerve to arme al the godly with patience, in their greateſt ſufferings, and to terrifie their wicked enemies. Touching the ſlaughter of Jonathan, who was a good man, happily ſaith Martyr, if he had lived, God ſaw that his heart might afterwards have beene turned from David, and therefore he ſuffered him to be cut off to prevent it, yet he being good, could not dye evill, and it is not to be doubted, but that although he loſt this life, yet he was received to everlaſting life. The ſonnes of Saul are firſt ſlaine to aggravate his ſorrow, and by this example wicked parents may ſee how they bring Gods judgements not onely upon themſelves, but upon their poſterity alſo, upon the beſt of whom God may juſtly bring his judgements, becauſe all are ſinners and ſo ſubject to death, but the godly being thus judged in this world are ſaved in the world to come. Touching Saul and his armour-bearer killing themſelves, Lyra ſaith, it is commonly held, that his armour-bearer was Doeg, whom all the Hebrewes judge to have dyed in ſinne, and ſo to have periſhed everlaſtingly, becauſe he ſlew himſelfe ſelfe, leſt ſurviving he ſhould come into Davids hands, and ſo be put to a more ignominious death: but that Saul was ſaved, although he dyed corporally for his ſinnes and loſt his kingdome here, becauſe although ſelfe-murther be damnable, when it is done out of a reſpect to a mans ſelfe to avoid a more ignominious or painefull death, or to be rid out of the miſeries of this world, or inward troubles oppreſſing, yet if reſpect be herein had to Gods honour to prevent greater diſhonour doing to him by the abuſe of his ſervant living, it is no ſinne, and ſo doth not indanger the ſoule everlaſtingly, for thus Sampſon ſlew himſelfe, and Raſius 2 Maccab. 14. and certaine godly women, of whom Saint Auguſtine ſpeaketh, leſt comming into the power of the barbarous they ſhould be defiled to Gods greater diſhonour, yet he juſtifieth them not from all fault herein, unleſſe they did it by any inſtinct from God: and becauſe Saul repented him of his ſinnes, and patiently ſubmitted himſelfe to beare his puniſhment, they conclude that he was moved by an inſtinct in this killing of himſelfe, and becauſe he repented and patiently ſubmitted to beare his puniſhment, he was ſaved. And as an argument of his patience they alledged his feeding to ſtrengthen himſelfe to goe to this battle and haſtening thither, although he knew certainely that he ſhould dye there, neither did he admoniſh any of his ſonnes to withdraw themſelves out of the danger, which argueth that he ſubmitted not onely to beare Gods judgements in himſelfe, but alſo in his children, and he had in killing himſelfe reſpect to Gods honour, for he ſaid, leſt theſe uncircumciſed come and thruſt me through, and abuſe me, which abuſe he thought being done to him, who was by God made Captaine over his people, would have redounded more to Gods diſhonour. Moreover they argue from the ſaying of Samuel, to morrow ſhalt thou and thy ſons be with me, therefore in a bleſſed condition: and laſtly becauſe at the firſt Saul was commended to be good and elect, & that there was none better then he amongſt all the people: thus the Hebrewes, but the common opinion of Chriſtian Doctors, ſaith Lyra, is, that Saul was damned, becauſe 1 Chr. 10.13. it is ſaid that he ſlew him for his tranſgreſſion, and becauſe he enquired of a Witch, and not of the Lord, whence it may be gathered, that all which hath been ſaid to prove Saul repentant at the laſt is vaine. For if he ſought not to the Lord, but to the Devill, he feared not, nor truſted in the Lord, and ſo could not by true repentance turne unto him to be ſaved. And whereas his patient ſubmitting of himſelfe to beare the judgement, which was denounced, is alledged, this was ſo farre from juſtifying him, as it concludeth him the more ſinfull, becauſe it is forbidden not only to ſeeke to ſuch as have familiar ſpirits but to beleeve them, and if Saul beleeved that which he heard by meanes of ſuch a one, he did thereby increaſe his ſin, and whatſoever he did hereupon could not be good, as coming from an evill cauſe; for that which is alledged of Samue's ſpeech unto him, it hath been already anſwered, and whereas before he was commended for good, ſee what hath bin ſaid upon that paſſage, 1 Sam. 9.2. For the examples brought of Sampſon and Rſiaus, &c. who killed themſelves, it is anſwered, that they did it by an inſtinct from Gods ſpirit, as may be gathered, becauſe Sampſon was often ſtirred up by the Spirit, and if at that time when he pulled downe the houſe he had not, it had beene impoſſible for him to doe it; and for Raſtus and the godly women, that killed themſelves, they were alwayes of a virtuous life, but Saul of a wicked, as ch. 14. whitherſoever he went, he did wickedly, and in the law it is a maxim, qui ſemel bonus, ſemper præſumitur eſſe bonus, and contrariwiſe, qui ſemel malus, ſemper præſumitur eſſe malus, and therefore whatſoever may be ſaid in the defence of them, the like cannot be ſaid of Saul; he had long traded in abominable wickedneſſes, and therefore moſt probably the evill ſpirit, whereby he was carryed at other times, wrought with him now alſo to make him commit this his laſt ſinne of ſelfe-murther, thus Borrhæus, Oſiander, and Martyr. The Devill to whom he ſought, through Gods juſt judgement, ſtirred him up to dye thus deſperately, ſo Mar. Antonius, amongſt the Romans, when he had firſt required his armour-bearer Eros to kill him, fell upon his owne ſword. Saul had put the prieſts of God to the ſword moſt unjuſtly and

Aug: de Civit: l. 1. cap. 17.

1 Sam. 9. 2.

Borrhaus, Oſiander, Marayr.

the

Pellican.
P. Martyr.
Qu.
Willet.
Non recipio tales animas quæ me nolente exierunt e corpore

the Gibeonites, and he ſought by all meanes to kill David, therefore God him and would not vouchſafe to direct him any more, and left him to Satan, by whoſe inſtigation he ſought to a Witch, and ſo was driven by the ſame ſword miſerably to end his owne life. Wherefore it is ſtrange that Pellican ſhould ſpeake of him, as offering himſelfe up in ſacrifice to God, Martyr much better, ſeeing his reprobation is not plainely determined in holy Scripture, leaveth it to his judgement, who alone ſhall judge us all. If it be demanded, whether there be any hope of their ſalvation, that in any caſe kill themſelves: It is anſwered, that it is a fact altogether unlawfull in any caſe, except, as hath beene already ſaid, a man be moved hereunto by the inſtinct of the Spirit, as Sampſon. 1. Becauſe it is expreſly forbidden, Com. 6. for if the killing of another man be here forbidden, much more of a mans ſelfe, becauſe this is more unnaturall. 2. A man by killing himſelfe goeth out of his ſtation without command from God, that ſet him here, and ſo committeth a capitall offence, as a Souldier that goeth out of his ſtation, without order from his Generall, ſo Plato. Therfore Hierome well ſpeaketh hereupon in the perſon of God, I receive not ſuch ſoules, as againſt my will went out of their bodies. 3. Neither did our Lord bid his diſciples to uſe any ſuch meanes to ridde themſelves out of their troubles, but when they were perſecuted in one City to flee into another, neither did any holy man, that we read of in Scripture, ever uſe this meanes, as Joſeph, Moſes, David, Job, or Joſiah. 4. The heathen Athenians did ſo abhorre from this ſinne, that they made a Law, that ſuch ſhould loſe all their goods and not be buried in the fields of Athens. And indeed it ſheweth a great deale of puſillanimity and baſeneſſe of minde, and not any valour, in that ſuch have not the courage to endure the miſery, or ſhame happening unto them; and the judgement of our Church touching them, may eaſily appeare in that they are not admitted to Chriſtian buriall, nor in any private place, but in high-wayes, the common receptacle of dead dogs, and other carrion. If it be demanded, whether thoſe vertuous women, who killed themſelves to prevent ſinne, are not to bee thought to bee in any better caſe, as the Virgine Pellagia, ſo much commended by Saint Ambroſe, and that godly Matron, who being in the hands of Maxentius, deſired leave to goe aſide and tire herſelfe, but went and killed her ſelfe. It is anſwered, that through the grace of God working in them, they might repent after the deadly blow given, and ſo be ſaved. As for others who being wearied with the tediouſneſſe of temptation kill themſelves, their caſe ſeemeth to be more deſperate and dangerous, becauſe through the inſtigation of the evill ſpirit they doe this laſt tragicall unnaturall act towards themſelves.

V. 8, 9.
1 Sam. 54. 17.
Note.

Saul being dead and his body found by the Philiſtims, they cut off his head and ſent to publiſh it in the houſe of their Idols, amongſt the people, and they put his Armour in the houſe of Aſhteroth, and faſtened his body to the wall of Bethſhan. His head was not onely carryed about, but put in the Temple of Dagon, 1 Chron. 10. 10. as his armour in the houſe of Aſhteroth; there it is, in the houſe of their Gods, but the word Aſhteroth is plurall, and therefore may ſo be rendred, ſee Judg. 2. 13. This was done partly to be revenged for the cutting off of Goliah's head by David, and partly in way of aſcribing this victory to their Idols, as David ſet up Goliahs head in Jeruſalem, thus aſcribing his victory to God, and his armour it ſeemeth was put in the Tabernacle of the Lord, ch. 21. 9. Thus an Idolatrous people triumpheth now over God, as it were, and his choſen one, as if their Idols had beene more potent; and God ſuffered this diſhonour for a time, that he might puniſh Sauls horrible ſinnes: whereby wee may ſee, how he is ſet upon the puniſhment of ſinne, that wee all may bee deterred from ſinne hereby.

For theſe words, and faſtened his body to the wall of Bethſhan, the Vulg. Lat. hath it, hanged his body on the wall of Bethſhan, 2 Sam. 21. 12. He and his ſons are ſaid to have beene in the ſtreet of Bethſhan, and howſoever his body onely is here ſpoken of, yet it is to be underſtood, that his ſonnes bodies were ſo ſerved alſo, becauſe in this ch. v. 12. the men of Jabeſh are ſaid to have taken away not onely his body but alſo the bodies of his ſonnes from the wall of Bethſhan. Some thinke that they were hanged in the ſtreet neare the wall, but it is more probable upon the wall, becauſe in the ſtreet it could not ſo conveniently have beene done for troubling the paſſage, and yet it might well afterwards be ſaid that they were ſtolne from the ſtreet of Bethſhan, becauſe the wall was an appurtenance of the ſtreet. Thus the greateſt ignominy was done to Saul and his ſonnes that might be, deſervedly indeed on Sauls part, but ſpightfully, and blaſphemouſly, even towards God, on the Philiſtims part, which was not ſuffered long to goe unrevenged, as we ſhall afterwards ſee in Davids raigne. This Bethſhan was a City in the lot of Manaſſeh, Judg. 1. 17. but not yet gotten out of the Philiſtims hands. Touching that which was ſaid *v.*7. that the Philiſtims went and dwelt in the Cities, out of which the Iſraelites fled for feare, it is to be underſtood, ſaith Lyra, that they dwelt no otherwiſe in them, but by garriſons in their ſtrong holds to keepe the Iſraelites ſtill under.

Willet.

V. 7.

V.11,12,13.

1 Sam:11.

Lyra.

Peter Martyr.

2 Sam: 2. 5.

Note.

Iob, 2. 13.

Borrham.

When the Inhabitants of Jabeſh Gilead heard what the Philiſtims had done to Saul, all the valiant men of them came by night to Bethſhan and tooke his body and the bodies of his ſonnes and burnt them, and put their bones under a tree at Jabeſh, and faſted ſeven dayes. The men of Jabeſh had beene delivered by Saul from Nahaſh the King of the Ammonites, and therefore they above all others ſorrowed for his death, and beſtowed this honourable buriall upon him. They burnt their bodies with ſweet aromaticall ſtuffe, as the manner then was to doe to the dead bodies of Kings, whom they honoured, for thus it was done unto Aſa 2 *Chr:*16. By their faſting ſeven dayes they ſhewed the greatneſſe of their ſorrow for him, ſo Lyra. But whether did the men of Jabeſh well in honouring him thus, whom God would have diſhonoured for his wickedneſſe? Peter Martyr anſwereth, they did thus not to croſſe God in his judgements, but to ſhew a gratefull minde for their paſt deliverance, and to performe a duty of piety towards their King, by vindicating him from that great ignominy, to which he was put amongſt the uncircumciſed, and therefore David hearing of it, approved and applauded it, and ſeconded it, 2 *Sam.*21. 12. and he was a man guided by the ſpirit of God. The wickedneſſe of a King then freeth not their Subjects from duty, as the Pope excommunicating a King abſolveth his Subjects from their obedience, for Ambroſe excommunicating Theodoſius did not thus, and the ſon of a wicked father is ſtill bound to a filiall duty towards him, as Jonathan obeyed his father and followed him to the warre, notwithſtanding his great wickedneſſe. Touching their burning of theſe dead bodies, it may be thought to have beene done partly becauſe the fleſh was corrupted, and therefore they burnt that from the bones with a fire made of ſweet things, and partly leſt the Philiſtims ſhould come to fetch away their bodies againe and abuſe them anew. For it was no generall cuſtome to burne the dead amongſt the Jewes. For their bones, which are ſaid here to be put under a tree, 1 *Chron.*10.12. they are ſaid to have beene buryed under an Oake, or a tree called Terebimbus, for they had not then any publicke burying places. For their faſting ſeven dayes, ſo did Jobs friends, when they came and ſaw him in ſo great miſery, as pierced their hearts with ſorrow; theſe men of Jabeſh were ſo full of griefe not onely for the death of Saul, but for the generall calamity of the commonwealth, and it is not to be doubted, but that unto their faſting they joyned prayers, yet not for the reliefe of the dead, as is uſed in the Church of Rome, for they goe immediately to their place, neither can they be removed any more to a better, as appeareth in the parable of Dives and Lazarus, but to pacifie Gods wrath, which then was great againſt Iſrael. Some thinke that in their ſeven dayes faſt they had reſpect unto the ſeven dayes given them by the King of Ammon, ch: 11. within the compaſſe of which time Saul came and reſcued them.

A
COMMENTARY
UPON THE
SECOND BOOKE
OF SAMUEL.

CHAP. I.

V.1,2,3,4 After Davids returne from the ſlaughter of the Amalekites to Ziklag, a man came unto him and brought him tidings of Sauls death, ſaying, that at his owne requeſt hee had ſlaine him, when his caſe grew deſperate, but herein hee lyed unto him, as may appeare by that which was ſaid before of the manner of Sauls death. Hee did that thinking to winne Davids favour, but hee rewarded him as a wicked lier deſerved with preſent death. The Hebrewes think that this was Doegs ſonne, Gloſſa Ordin. and whereas it may ſeeme to make againſt it, that Doeg is ſaid to have beene an Edomite, this man an Amalekite, it is anſwered, the ſonne of Eliphaz, the Gen: 36. ſonne of Eſau or Edom was called Amalek, and the race comming from him Amalekites, although they were Edomites alſo, all the Amalekites then P.Martyr. ſaith Martyr were Edomites, but not contrariwiſe all the Edomites Amalekites. And whereas, verſ. 10. hee brought with him Sauls Crowne and Bracelets, they ſay that his father tooke them from Saul after hee was dead, before that hee ſlew himſelfe, willing him therewith to repaire to David thus to winne his favour. But Martyr thinketh rather, that hee was ſome Amalekite, whom Saul had formerly ſpared, and if ſo, it was by a juſt judgement of God if hee had ſlaine Saul, that hee preſerved him to his owne deſtruction. But this conjecture is without ground, ſeeing none were ſaved alive but Agag, and if hee had ſlaine him being in that extremity, it had beene to his benefit. This man came with his cloaths rent and earth upon his head, that is, duſt, to ſhew exceeding great ſorrow, ſee the like done by Jobs friends, Job 2.12. they rent every one his mantle, and ſprinkled duſt upon their heads, and 1 Sam. 4.12. the renting of garments uſed in thoſe parts ſerved, to ſhew the inward paſſion of the heart to the rending thereof, and duſt or aſhes upon the head and body, making them to looke ſqualidous, to ſhew their extreame ſorrow and miſery, cauſing them to neglect themſelves, as being in no better caſe, then the dead now ready to bee laid into the ground, and to have earth put upon them, that the Lord ſeeing ſuch ſpectacles of miſery might bee moved to ſhew mercy. For the Crowne which hee brought with him, and the ved to ſhew mercy. For the Crowne which he brought with him, and the Bracelets, ſaying, that he tooke it off his head: Hugo ſaith well, it is not probable that Saul did then weare his Crowne, but as the Enſigne of his kingly dignity it might by his Armour-bearer be carried with him into the field, or upon his Helmet there might be ſome coſtly worke repreſenting the Kings Crowne, and ſo called by that name. But he ſaith, I took the Crown that was upon his head, but this he ſaith, is to be underſtood, which uſed to be upon his head, although he had it not on then. V 10. Hugo Card.

Bracelets

V.11,12. David having heard his tale, rent his clothes, both he and all the men with him, and mourned and faſted till even for Saul and Jonathan and for all Iſrael. There was great reaſon of ſorrowing for his deare friend Jonathan, and for the people of God, but how he could truely ſorrow for Saul, doth not ſo eaſily appeare. For much good came of his deſtruction. 1. An end was put to tyranny, under which the commonwealth could not but groane. 2. David was ridde of his deadly enemy who alwayes ſought his life. 3. The expected time now came of fullfilling the promiſe made to David, and the prophecy of taking the kingdome from Saul: yet it is not to be thought that David diſſembled this great ſorrow even for Saul, becauſe although Saul hated him, yet he loved Saul, as we are bidden, love your enemies, eſpecially being his King and father in law, and therefore it could not but greatly grieve him to heare of his ruine ſo lamentable, and to thinke how the Philiſtims would hereupon triumph and blaſpheme the God of Iſrael, as unable to ſave him, whom he had choſen. Theſe things therefore comming firſt to his thoughts he ſorrowed truly, and not onely hee, but all his company, we read of none, that rejoiced to heare of the taking away of this tyrant amongſt them all. For the good that followed hereupon, that, as Martyr ſaith, proceeded from the goodneſſe of God, who can turne evill into good, but in themſelves theſe things related were evill, and ſo able to make a ſtony heart to relent in every one that was a member of the ſame Commonwealth, now ſo much weakened and brought under. Peter Martyr.

V, 13. Then David ſaid unto him, Whence art thou, &c. It may ſeeme ſtrange, that David hearing him ſay before that hee was an Amalekite, Verſ. 8. ſhould now aske this queſtion. But it is anſwered, the preſent aſtoniſhment at the newes which hee brought, made David, that hee tooke no heed at the firſt unto it. And they that thinke hee was Doegs ſon to this objection, then Saul ſhould not have needed to ask him who he was: Anſwer, that either Sauls ſight began to faile him through the loſſe of much blood, or although his father followed Saul, yet he being young had not yet come at the Court to be known unto Saul, and to the campe it ſeemeth by his ſpeech, Verſ. 6. that he came but accidentally, and was not there as a Souldier, for he ſaith, As I came by chance.

V.14. David ſaid unto him, How waſt thou not affraid to ſtretch forth thine hand to deſtroy the Lords anointed? V.15. then he bade one of his young men to ſlay him. David feared to ſlay Saul when hee was in his power for this reaſon, becauſe hee was the Lords anointed; for hee that killeth a King, is guilty of a double ſin, as the King beareth a double Image of God, one as hee is a man, and another, as his Vicegerent upon earth for his ſupreme power. Wherefore having found a man, that had committed ſo horrible a ſin, hee preſently cauſed him to bee put to death. Qu. But it will bee ſaid, How can this bee juſtified in David to doe execution ſo ſuddenly, when as indeed the man was not guilty? Anſw. Hee tooke his owne confeſſion as a ſufficient teſtimony, as it is indeed when it commeth voluntarily, and is not any way extorted, the ſignes alſo being ſhewed, that made it the more probable, Sauls Crowne and Bracelets, which hee brought with him. And therefore although there is a Law, that the Judge ſhall not condemne a man meerely upon his owne confeſſion, yet when it commeth voluntarily without compulſion, the Law provideth, that it ſhall bee counted a ſufficient teſtimony to condemne. Againe, hee that giveth falſe teſtimony in the caſe of bloodſhed, muſt die for it.

*In ff. de quaeſtionibus lege.*1.para. confeſſio reorum non habenda eſt pro explorato crimine, niſi approbatio alia inſtruat religionem cognoſcentis.

Ob. But David was no Judge

Peter Martyr.

Judge as yet, and therefore hee ought not to have given ſentence. Sol. he was long agoe anointed King, and although hee was not yet in actuall poſſeſſion, hee was a Judge in Ziklag; and laſtly this man being an Amalekite, and ſo by the Lord adjudged to death, hee might juſtly kill him: Thus Martyr, who alſo addeth, that in caſe a confeſſion bee drawne from one by torments againſt himſelfe, it is unlawfull hereupon to put him to death, except there bee ſome other evidence. And whereas the Law requireth, that there ſhould bee two witneſſes at the leaſt to take away any mans life, hee ſaith, that it is not meant there ſhould bee another beſides a mans ſelfe, for a mans own teſtimony againſt himſelfe is more then two witneſſes.

Note.

Here was a juſt reward for a fawning and flattering Hypocrite, that whereby hee thought to curry favour with David was turned to his ruine. Againe note, that it is murther to kill another, or to helpe him out of the world, when hee is neare death, although it bee deſired, for this is a thing to bee left unto God onely, who gave life.

V.16.
Hugo Card.

And Daid ſaid, thy blood be upon thine head, that is, ſaith Hugo, thy damnation to die commeth worthily upon thee, and thou art the cauſe of thy owne blood-ſhed, ſo that none ſhall bee guiltie of blood by putting thee to death: or the puniſhment of the blood which thou haſt ſhed bee upon thee. He ſinned three wayes. 1. Becauſe hee was a traytour to kill the King. 2. Hee lyed unto David. 3. Hee came flatteringly unto him.

V.17,18.

Then David lamented over Saul and Jonathan with this Lamentatton. Alſo hee bade them teach the children of Judah the uſe of the bow, behold it is written in the booke of Jaſher: the vulg. Latine, in the booke of the juſt: this of bidding them teach the children of Judah the uſe of the bow is interlaced before the lamentation to ſhew, that hee made this uſe of this great overthrow given to the people of Iſrael by the Philiſtims, hereupon hee commandeth the Art of ſhooting to be taught and practiſed, becauſe Saul was ſaid to be wounded by the Archers that they might hereafter be the better able to fight againſt their enemies.

1 Sam 31.3.

Hieron. de Hebr quaeſt.
R. Solomon.
Gen. 48.22.

For the booke of Jaſher or the Juſt, ſome thinke it to bee none other, but theſe bookes of the Kings, ſo called, becauſe many juſt perſons are herein written of, as Samuel, David, Nathan, Elijah, &c. Some as R. Solomon, the booke of Geneſis for the ſame reaſon, and becauſe therein mention is made by Jacob of his Sword and his Bow, whereby hee got one parcell of ground from the Amorite, which hee gave to Joſeph, and Geneſis, Chap. 49. Verſ. 8. it is ſaid of Judah, Thy hand ſhall bee in the neck of thine enemies, which was not till Davids time, when Judah having learned the uſe of the Bow grew renowned for divers victories.

Hugo Cardin.
Lyra.

Some by the Booke of Jaſher rendring it juſtorum, as in the Vulgar Latine, underſtand judgements, and ſo will have the booke of Exodus meant hereby, as wherein the judgements of God are moſt ſet forth, and his Lawes called his judgements, ſhewing what is juſt and right to bee done, and it was juſt and ſtood with good reaſon, that they ſhould learne the uſe of the Bow, it being of ſo great force in battell. Comeſtor ſaith, that the meaning is according to ſome, that the art of ſhooting ſhould bee preſerved as that which is written in the booke of judgements. Laſtly, ſome thinke, that it is a booke not extrant, but burnt long agoe by the Babylonians, as alſo all other ſacred books, but ſome being againe repaired by Eſdras, this was not, neither the booke of the warres of the Lord, nor the Songs of Solomon ſaid to bee 5000. nor all his parables being 3000. nor his Booke of the nature of things, Trees, Hearbs and Plants, alſo of Nathan, Abiah, and Iddo: ſo Hugo and Lyra.

Numb: 21.
1 King: 4.
2 Chron: 9.
Peter Martyr.

But of this booke ſee before upon Joſh. 10.13. Peter Martyr maketh theſe words part of the lamentation, ſaying, that David was not then ſo oppreſſed with ſorrow, but hee conſidered what was needfull for the Commonwealth, and to animate them, to whom this funerall Song ſhould come, who might bee ready to deſpaire, that State now being brought to ſuch miſery, he cited the bookes of Jaſher, that is, of Geneſis, wherein it was propheſied of Judah, that their heads of that Tribe ſhould bee upon the necks of their enemies.

Iunius.

Junius rendreth it, whereby hee taught the children of Judah the Bow, that is, by the words of this lamentation, and I ſee not, but that it may well bee rendred, and hee ſpake it to teach,&c. being in Hebrew ויאמר-ללמד for the very words of theſe Verſes tend to the putting of them on to exerciſe themſelves in ſhooting, becauſe Jonathan had ſo greatly prevailed hereby, Verſ. 22. ſo that if the whole Tribe of Judah conſiſting of ſo many valiant men would practiſe it, as hee did, they might bee in hope againe to prevaile againſt their enemies. I do not hold then, that theſe words are any part of the lamentation, but ſet before it by the writer of this booke, as a Preface to it, and the next words, Behold it is written in the booke of Jaſher ſerve onely to ſhew, where elſe theſe funerall Verſes might bee found, viz. in ſome compend, which was then in every mans hands, wherein were briefely compriſed things moſt memorable touching the children of Iſrael, happily being called the booke of Jaſher, in alluſion to the name of Ieſhurum, by which is meant Iſrael, Gen. 32.15. Chap. 33.5.

V 19.
Schol. Hiſtoria.
Peter Martyr.

The beautie of Iſrael is ſlaine upon thy high hills, how are the mightie falne? Comeſtor ſaith that this Lamentation was made at the firſt in meeter: Peter Martyr, that it was written in Elegiack Verſe in way of an Epitaph, which Joſephus alſo ſaith that hee had read: and Jerome exerciſed himſelfe much in this kind, and the Prophet Ieremy upon the death of Ioſiah. Funerall orations alſo have beene anciently uſed to bee made in praiſe of the dead amongſt the Romans and Grecians, which may well bee done, ſo that it bee not in flattery. 1. To ſtirre up people to ſorrow for ſo great a loſſe. 2. By ſetting forth their vertues, and giving them their due praiſe to draw others to an imitation of their vertues; but the maine end of all muſt bee the praiſe of God. The ſcope of David here was as hee was moved by the ſpirit of God, to bring the people to a conſideration of Gods anger againſt them, becauſe it was not wont to bee ſo with them, for Saul and Ionathan uſed alwayes in times paſt to prevaile againſt the Philiſtims, but now they were overthrowne before them, and that in their owne countrey, and in a place of greateſt advantage, an high mountaine, and ſo moſt inacceſſible, that they might bee moved with repentance and turne from their evill wayes. And hee compoſed it rather then any other, becauſe hee was neareſt to Saul, being his ſonne in law, and Ionathan was moſt deare unto him, and hee to bee ſucceſſour to Saul in the Kingdome. The vulgar Latine rendreth theſe words. Conſider (O Iſrael) of theſe, that are dead being wounded upon thy high places, the moſt renouned of Iſrael are ſlaine upon thy mountaines, Peter Martyr, O beautie of Iſrael hee was ſlaine in thy high places, how are the mightie,&c. and Junius, O the beautie of Iſrael, how are the mightie ones falne being wounded in thy high places? and by beautie hee underſtandeth God, who was the beautie or glory of Iſrael. But Hebrew the word rendred ſlaine is of the ſingular number, according to Martyrs tranſlation, and therefore I rather with him underſtand Saul as the chiefe that was ſlaine, and by the beautie of Iſrael, the land of Iſrael ſpoken unto by a Proſopopeia, and ſo called becauſe ſo greatly adorned and renouned above all other lands: and from the ſingular hee proceedeth to the plurall, how are the mighty falne, meaning Jonathan and all the reſt of the valiant men ſlaine together. And hee ſpeaketh to the land that he might be the more patheticall, and ſo it is as if hee had ſaid, O Land, why are they falne in thee, whom thou ſhouldeſt rather have preſerved?

Iunius.
Peter Martyr.

V. 20.
Lyra.
Hugo Cardin.

Tell it not in Gath, nor publiſh it in Askelon: Theſe were chiefe places of concourſe in the Philiſtims countrey, to which a rumour comming might eaſily bee ſpread all over the Land. But it was already divulged, and therefore it ſeemeth unreaſonable now to forbid it. David herein ſpake as one full of griefe, ſhewing that the deſire of his heart was, if it had beene poſſible, that it might not have beene publiſhed there, becauſe by the Philiſtims triumphing in the Iſraelites miſery, it was much more encreaſed. But why doth hee adde, Leſt the daughters of the Philiſtims rejoyce? Anſw. Becauſe victory being obtained the women were wont in ſongs to extoll it, as wee read before of the women of Iſrael, chap. 17. Thus Lyra, but Hugo following him in other things differeth in this, that hee ſaith, David knew, that this great victory ſo publikely

P.Martyr. gotten could not bee concealed, but happily they knew not in the Philiſtims countrey the manner how Saul fell, and this is that, which hee would have concealed from them. Peter Martyr followeth Lyra, ſaying, that hee did rather by theſe words ſhew, how hee deteſted that, which was done, then forbid the doing of it.

V.21. Hugo Card. Rabanus. Yee mountaines of Gilboa, let there bee no deaw nor raine upon you, nor fields of offerings,&c. hee wiſheth the place accurſed, where Saul and Ionathan fell, and ſo a perpetuall monument of this miſery, and of this ſad and heavie time, for as mourners are clad in black, ſo the ground wanting raine in ſtead of greene, which ſheweth a comfortable ſtate, is covered with a withered and darke mantle, ſhewing a dolefull condition, and where it is thus nothing groweth, of which the firſt fruits may bee brought as an offering to the Lord, and therefore hee addeth, nor fields of offerings: the Vulgar Latine with more expreſſion, nor fields of firſt fruits. Some, ſaith Hugo, affirme that the toppes of theſe mountaines were alwayes barren, and that it never rained upon them, ſome that they were fruitfull before, but by this curſing of David made barren, and ſome, that this curſing was propheticall and tooke effect in the time of Elias, when there fell neither dew nor raine in three yeares and ſix moneths, but that was generall to all the Land, and followed upon the propheſying of Elias for the wickedneſſe of thoſe times: and that of barrenneſſe following upon this curſing is but conjecturall, neither did David himſelfe, as is probable, then thinke of any ſuch effect to follow, but onely hee ſpake thus pathetically to ſhew his indignation at every thing about this diſaſtrous accident. Unleſſe wee ſhall with Rabanus hold a myſticall meaning by theſe mountaines, the pride of the Jewes hearts being ſet forth, amongſt whom because the Lords anointed, his Chriſt was ſlaine, they have ever ſince beene dry of all dew of grace, and their Land ſtricken with barrenneſſe. By firſt fruits underſtand not onely thoſe of corne, but alſo of cattell feeding in the fields: for there the ſhield of the mighty was caſt away, that is, was as a thing good for nothing but to bee caſt away, or was indeed caſt away, that they who were overcome might make more haſt in fleeing away: ſo Lyra. Lyra.

V.22. Hugo Card. From the blood of the ſlaine, from the fat of the mighty the Bow of Ionathan returned not,&c. The vulgar Latine joyning the firſt words here to the former verſe, thus, there the ſhield of the mightie was caſt away, the ſhield of Saul, as if hee were not anointed with oyle, from the blood of the ſlaine, from the fat of the mighty, that is ſaith Hugo, for the blood of the Prieſts ſlaine by Saul in Nob, who uſed to offer blood and fat to the Lord: or by men of no baſe condition were they ſlaine, but by the moſt valiant, yet hee confeſſeth, as it is indeed, that Hebrew hath it joyned with the words following, as in our tranſlation, and ſo the meaning is plaine that they were wont to kill and deſtroy the greateſt of their enemies, and to pierce them to their inward parts.

23. Lyra. Peter Martyr. Saul and Ionathan were lovely, &c. For Saul had beene ſuch when hee was choſen King, for it is ſaid, that amongſt all the people there was none better then hee, and hee was a godly man of ſtature; and for Ionathans goodneſſe David could ſpeake experimentally of it, and it is moſt probable that he was for perſonableneſſe not much unlike his father: touching that, which is added, they were ſwifter then Eagles, and ſtronger then Lions, it is hyperbolicall, ſerving to ſet forth their wonderfull great ſtrength and celeritie, and that theſe two being both ſo valiant and ſo good ſhould fall together at one time, as they had lived and gone out to warre together ſundry times, was moſt lamentable: ſo Lyra. And this of their not being divided in their life, Peter Martyr ſaith, was ſpoken to purge Ionathan from the ſuſpition of being againſt his father.

V.24. Yee daughters of Iſrael weepe over Saul who cloathed you with Skarlet, &c. The women are called upon to act their part in making lamentation, as they had beene the inſtruments to celebrate his victories with ſongs of praiſe, his cloathing them ſo richly was by diſtributing the ſpoyles taken from the enemy amongſt his ſouldiers, who carried them home, and gave ſuch as ſerved for ornament to their wives and daughters, and theſe uſe not to bee a little eſteemed of by women, for which cauſe hee ſpeaketh of theſe eſpecially, that they might bee the more affected with ſorrow at this loſſe.

For the reſt of his lamentation, it is made for Jonathan in particular, whoſe V. 25.
love hee ſaith towards him paſſed the love of women, that is, either underſtanding it paſſively, the love wherewith women are beloved of men which is moſt fervent, or actively, the love wherewith women love ſuch men as they are affected to, which is oft times exceeding great. Verſ. 27. How are the mightie V. 27.
falne, and the weapons of warre periſhed? not onely the Captaines were ſlaine, but the people were diſarmed, the Philiſtims taking their armes away, as is the manner of victorers, for ſo David had ſerved Goliah before, and this made the caſe the more lamentable.

CHAP. II.

Here David firſt asketh counſell of the Lord, whether hee ſhould not goe up V. 1, 2, 3, 4. to Judah, and being directed to go to Hebron in Judah he went up, and thither came to him the Elders of Judah and anointed him King over Judah.
In this relation is omitted the flocking of many to him to Ziklag before this, of which wee reade, 1 Chron. 12. as firſt ſome valiant and mightie men of Benjamin 1 Chron: 12:1, 2,3,4.
Sauls owne Tribe, as Abiezer, Joaſh, the ſonnes of Shemaah, &c. to Verſ.
7. which is commemorated to the praiſe of David, and the juſtifying of him and the condemning of Sauls tyranny, in that ſo many of his owne kindred forſooke him, and fled unto David to helpe him. Secondly, ſome mighty men of Gad, who came unto him before, when hee kept himſelfe in holds, that 1 Chron: 12:8: 9,10,11, &c. is, in the Wilderneſſe of Maon, where hee hid himſelfe from Saul; they were eleven, and were ſwift as Roes, and had faces like Lions, the leaſt of them being over 100. and the greateſt over 1000. that is, afterwards, for as yet David Lyra.
had onely 600. men, Verſ. 8, 9, &c. to Verſ. 15. as Lyra noteth. Thirdly, ſome men of Judah, to whom others of Benjamin joyned themſelves, that David might the rather receive them, and not have them in ſuſpition, when hee was ſecured touching their true heartedneſſe towards him by thoſe of his owne Tribe and kindred. Wherefore hee firſt required ſome aſſurance, that they came peaceably to helpe him indeed and not to betray him, and the ſpirit came upon Amaſai, the chiefe of the Captaines, who was alſo called Amaſa, Davids ſiſters ſonne, the ſpirit comming upon him was not to propheſie, but of boldneſſe and courage to ſpeake, ſo Lyra: yet happily the ſpirit certified him of the true meaning of all theſe men, that hee might ſpeake confidently thereof to David, Verſ. 16, 17, 18. Fourthly, many of Manaſſeh, of whom 1 Chron. 12. 16,17,18.
ſeven Captaines of thouſands are reckoned up, and theſe came unto him at his returne to Ziklag from the Phyliſtims army, and helped him againſt the rovers, that is, the Amalekites, who roved about to divers places and tooke great booties, and ſpecially to Ziklag in Davids abſence, as is ſhewed, 1 Sam. 30 1 Chron. 12. 19,20,21.
Verſ. 19, 20, 21. Fiftly, many others came day by day unto him, untill that V. 22.
hee had a very great hoſt, like the hoſt of God, Verſ. 22. For ſpeaking of God, Job 25. 3. it is ſaid, is there any number of his armies; ſo that hereby is noted an innumerable company. Whereas in ſpeaking of thoſe of the Tribe of Gad, Verſ. 15. hee ſaith, theſe are they, that went over Jordan, when in 1 Chron, 12. 15.
the firſt moneth it overflowed all her bankes, this ſhewed their courage and magnanimitie that would adventure in ſo dangerous a time to paſſe over Jordan, and they put to flight all them of the valleys towards the Eaſt and Weſt; that is, people of thoſe nations appointed to bee driven out, who ſtill inhabited in the Land of Canaan given to the children of Iſrael, ſo that hereby their great ſtrength and valour might bee gathered. Now David by this great concourſe of forces being ſtrengthned, and Saul being dead, ſo that the Kingdome by Gods donation belonged unto him, hee would not yet attempt the taking of it, but referred himſelfe wholly to Gods good will and pleaſure, ſeeking by him to bee directed. How hee asked counſell is not ſaid, but it is moſt probable by the Ephod, as at other times. The divine Oracle directed him to goe to Hebron, becauſe, ſaith Lyra, the foure principall patriarchs were

Peter Martyr.

H.B. Patriarks travailes.

buried there, as was ſhewed, Gen. 23. and for this cauſe Caleb went thither before to pray unto God, *Numb.*13. Joſh. 14. and God would have the kingdome of David therefore to begin here, ſo likewiſe Martyr, here were Abraham Iſaac, and Jacob buryed, to whom that land was promiſed, and that Kings ſhould come of them, wherefore David muſt begin his kingdome in this City. Caleb was a moſt ancient City built before Zoan in Ægypt, and it was given to Caleb and to his poſterity, it was one of the Cities of refuge and of the Levites, being diſtant from Hieruſalem as Hierom ſaith 20 miles, and as H: B: 16 miles from Ziklag, it was a Metropolitan City in Judah.

V.2,3.

2 Sam.5.

Lyra.

David according to the direction given him, goeth to Hebron with his Wives, and his men and their families, and dwell there and in the townes belonging to it. Then the men of Judah came and anointed him King over Judah. This was done, ſaith the ſame authour, 10 yeares after his anointing by Samuel, he being now 30 yeares old. He was anointed once more after this to bee King over all Iſrael, from which Lyra draweth this allegory, hereby was ſignified, that every good Chriſtian hath three anointings, firſt, internally by the Spirit in his heart to beleeve; ſecondly, externally with his tongue to confeſſe; thirdly, in his workes to adorne his Chriſtian profeſſion. The tribe of Judah in anointing David King without the conſent of the other Tribes, did but follow the revealed will of God, who long agoe by the mouth of Jacob had aſſigned the Scepter to Judah, and more lately anointed David by Samuel; and the other Tribes, who conſented not with them herein, ſinned againſt the ordinance of God. David in his three anointings, ſaith Martyr, was a type of Chriſt, who was anointed, 1. By the Spirit comming upon him in his baptiſme. 2. By the power of miracles. 3 When he roſe againe from the dead. And his being held under perſecution ſo long, before he could attaine to the kingdome, and then he attained not to the whole neither, till ſeven yeares after, ſerved to figure out the adverſities to be endured by ſuch as are appointed to the kingdome of heaven, under which wee muſt therefore bee patient, being aſſured, that at length wee alſo ſhall attaine to our kingdome.

Peter Martyr. The Myſtery.

V.4,5. 6,7.

Then it was told David that the men of Jabeſh had buried Saul, and hee ſent to commend them for ſo doing, and to promiſe them favour; with what minde this was told unto David is uncertaine, either it might be to exaſperate David againſt the men of Jabeſh, or that he might beware of them, as open favourers of Saul and of his houſe. But hee like a moſt virtuous King commendeth that, which was well done even towards his enemie, contrary to the manner of other Princes, Sylla, Marius, Antony, Octavius, who proſcribed all ſuch, as had ſhewed any favour towards their enemies. Where Jabeſh was ſee before 1 *Sam.*11.1. namely on the other ſide of Jordan in the land of Gilead.

V.8.

When David was anointed King over Judah, Abner the Captaine of Sauls hoaſt tooke Iſhbeſheth the ſonne of Saul, who yet ſurvived, when three other of his ſonnes, who followed him to the warres, were ſlaine, and made him King over Iſrael. It ſeemeth by his not going to warre with the reſt, that either hee was not ſo able or fit for the warre, or that he was left at home to governe in his fathers abſence, and by this meanes eſcaped, when his brethren were ſlaine. How ſoever he remained to be ſet up againſt David, and to breed him more trouble, before that he could come to the full poſſeſſion of the whole kingdom. Yet Abners ſetting of him up, being againſt Gods Ordinance, was ſoone turned into his ruine, and his owne alſo; ſo vaine is it for any to ſtrive againſt God. But his dividing of the kingdom into two for a time, upon the next occaſion offered, tooke effect againe to divide it betweene Rehoboam the ſonne of Solomon and Jeroboam for the ſinnes of Solomon, ſo that they were never more reunited in the houſe of David. Thus God turned Abners wicked reluctting againſt his decree, into an occaſion or preparative to the puniſhing of ſinne in Davids poſterity, for the glorifying of his juſtice, ſo he makes all things to worke for his glory.

Note.

Peter Martyr. Note.

As Judah, by whoſe making of David King ſaith Martyr, this ſchiſme came, yet was herein without fault, ſo they that abhorring the ſuperſtitions and idolatries of the Church of Rome, doe ſeparate themſelves, cannot be blamed for this ſchiſme, becauſe they follow the revealed will of God, but ſuch as ſee and cannot but acknowledge theſe corruptions, and yet will not ſeparate, are greatly to be blamed. And as Davids cauſe might ſeeme not to bee good, becauſe he met with ſuch oppoſition, yet it was certainely juſt and good, and after a a few yeares it was approved by the ſucceſſe, which he had in comming to raigne over all Iſrael: ſo we muſt not thinke the proceedings of thoſe, who ſtand for the truth & againſt Popiſh ſuperſtitions, to be the more diſallowable for the ill ſucceſſe at the firſt, but comfortably expect a good iſſue, when all oppoſition ſhall ceaſe, and men ſhall joyne in one to promote the ſame truth. So Martyr, who alſo noteth the place, to which he cauſed Iſhboſheth to go to be made King, viz. Mahanaim, which was on the other ſide of Jordan according to Junius, in the Tribe of Gad; the inhabitants of which parts, he was ſpecially carefull to bring to acknowledge him for their King, becauſe David had ſent meſſengers to the men of Jabeſh Gilead, as he thought, to inſinuate unto them, and others of the land of Gilead, which might make it ſuſpitious if he ſought not to prevent it, that they would be drawne after David. Wherefore to make them ſure, hee brought Iſhboſheth thither, and ſo hee was received for King over all Gilead, and Aſſuri, and Izreel, and Benjamin, and all Iſrael. The Vulg: Lat: he carryed him about the tents, for Mahanaim ſignifieth tents, but it is the proper name of a place, which was moſt ſtrong, ſo called, becauſe there the Angels of God appeared to Jacob, pitching their tents about him, and here Iſhboſheth remained in greateſt ſafety, whilſt Abner and the hoaſt went out to fight againſt Davids Army. Aſſuri, by the Vulg: Lat: rendred Geſſuri, is held by Lyra, and Hugo, to be Aſher, and Junius rendereth it accordingly, ſuper Aſhereos, and Izreel or Jezreel, he ſaith was the middle region of Zebulun, Iſſachar, and Nephtali, and in naming theſe the whole latitude of the country from the ſea to Jordan is deſcribed, then to ſhew the full extent of his kingdom it is ſaid over all Iſrael.

Note.

V 10.

Junius.

Iſhboſheth was 40 yeares old, when he began to raigne, and hee raigned 2 yeares. He was unjuſtly ſet up thorough the ambition of his coſen Abner, and therefore not like to continue long, for not only David had the right by Gods ſpeciall appointmeat, but if they would make one King by ſucceſſion, Mephiboſheth the ſonne of Jonathan, had moſt right of all Sauls poſterity, but Abner ſurely thought Iſhboſheth, a man of no worth, fitteſt for his owne turne to be advanced to the royall dignity, that he might rule all, as he pleaſed. For the time of his raigning, viz. two yeares, it may bee doubted, how David was kept raigning over all 7 yeares and 6 months, as is ſaid v: 11. if the time of his raigne were ſo ſhort. Some ſaith Martyr, hold that 5 yeares paſſed after Saul's death, before that Iſhboſheth was made King, becauſe ſome were for Mephiboſheth, but at length Abner ſeeing, that they would not come to any agreement about one of them, hee taketh Iſhboſheth and maketh him King. Some againe thinke that after Iſhboſheths death, there was an interregnum, of 5 yeares before that the Princes of Iſrael reſolved upon David. Laſtly ſome that much time paſſed after Sauls death, before that Iſhboſheth was made King, and much time after his death before David was accepted of, R: Levi ſaith, that by theſe two yeares all the time of Iſhboſheths raigne is not ſet forth, but the time that paſſed before the battle, that was fought betweene his men and Davids men, *v:*12, 13. &c. and this Martyr thinketh the moſt probable, and I thinke without doubt it is ſo meant, becauſe the like phraſe is uſed touching Saul, 1 Sam: 13. he raigned 2 yeares, that is, to that time, for he raigned indeed many more, as there hath beene ſhewed: and after this it is ſaid, there was warre a long time betweene the houſe of Saul and Davids houſe, ch: 3. 1. And I will not here omit the conceit of R: Solomon related by Lyra, that God in his providence directed it thus, that Iſhboſheth, the ſonne of Saul of the Tribe of Benjamin ſhould be made King, that the propheſie made unto Jacob Gen: 35. might be fullfilled, Kings ſhall come out of thee, when as all his ſonnes were already borne except Benjamin, and now Iſhboſheth being made King alſo, as his father Saul had beene, it was verified, for thus two Kings came of Benjamin,

V. 10.

Qu.

R. Levi.

P. Martyr.

R Solomon.

thus hee, but although there had not beene two Kings of Benjamin, that promiſe had beene abundantly fulfilled, ſeeing the Lord ſaid not, there ſhall yet one come of thee, from whom Kings ſhall ſpring, but Kings ſhall come of thee, which was fulfilled, when they came of ſome of his poſterity, whether borne after or before this oracle.

V.12. And Abner and Iſhboſheths ſervants went out of Mahanaim to Gibeon, and Joab and the ſervants of David met them &c. Iſhboſheth being ſet up againſt David, now at length Abner thought to try by warre, to ſubdue Davids part and to bring all the kingdome to Iſhboſheth, but it fell out contrary, as here appeareth.
Joſephus ſaith, that Abner being angry with the men of Judah for anointing David King, went to fight againſt Judah. David would not in all this time by Peter Martyr. force of arms ſeeke to obtaine all the kingdom, but expected till God who had promiſed it, ſhould bring him to it, and herein he was a type of Chriſt, the ſubjects of whoſe kingdome are onely volunteers, for ſo many Nations are not ſubdued to him by force, but willingly yeilding themſelves to his obedience.
Moreover he had ſworne unto Saul not to deſtroy his ſeed, and therefore he 1 Sam: 24. 23. would not attempt it, but onely ſought to defend himſelfe. Gibeon, the place to which they came together, was a Metropolitan City in the Tribe of Benjamin, and it was all one with Gibea of Saul often ſpoken of before. In the place where the armies met was a fiſh-pond, on the one ſide of which, one army pitched, and the other on the other ſide; then Abner ſaid to Joab, let the V.14. young men riſe and play before us, and then 12 of Benjamin, and 12 of Davids ſervants went forth and ſlew each other, till they all dyed. But Joſephus ſaith, that the 12 men of Benjamin onely were ſlaine, how truely, let the Reader judge. The word tranſlated play, ſaith Lyra, ſignifieth alſo to kill, and ſo it Lyra. is here to be underſtood, that they ſhould riſe and ſhew their valour in fighting hand to hand and killing one another. But I cannot finde, that the word שחק here uſed, hath any other ſignification, but to play, or to mocke. Although then he meant they ſhould kill one another in tryall of their fortitude, yet this not being intended to be done, as the duel of Goliah and David, to ſpare the armies from fighting, that ſide which was overcome, yeilding to the victorer, it is rather to be thought, that A*bner* would have them to combat together to make their ſpectatours ſport, as oft times hath beene done amongſt the heathen Romans, as Florus ſaith, that Brutus at the funerall of his father put together 22 paire of ſword-players to fight and kill one another; and
P. Martyr. Theodoſius being requeſted to ſhew the people the like ſport, he anſwered, it becometh a godly Prince not onely to raigne, but to uſe clemency; and in Athens the like being deſired by the people, Demonax anſwered, that firſt the altar of Mercy muſt be demoliſhed, before that any ſuch cruelty were publickly admitted.
It was a barbarous and wicked thing then in A*bner* to propound this, and in Joab to conſent unto it. So Martyr, and from hence the place, where theſe fell together, was called Helcath Haſſurim, that is, the field of the ſtrong or valiant, but this was madneſſe rather then true valour.

V. 17. After this followed a great battle, and Abner and the men of Iſrael fled before Joab. Now there were three ſonnes of Zerviah, Joab, A*biſhai*, and Aſabel, and Aſabel was moſt ſwift of foot, it is ſaid that he could out-run horſes, and therefore purſued hard after A*bner* to take him priſoner, becauſe he being the chiefe Captaine, he thought it would bee a great glory and benefit to him, if he could take him, but A*bner* forbade him to purſue after him, willing him to turne rather after one of the young men and to take his ſpoiles, that is, when he had overcome him, for ſuch an one was fitter for him to contend with; whereby is intimated that A*ſabel* was very young, ſo Hugo; and when he would not, he willed him againe, ſaying, that otherwiſe he would ſmite him, but if he did, he knew not how to lift up his face to his brother J*oab*: which he ſpake, Lyra. becauſe he thought, that D*avid* at length would prevaile, and then it would make much againſt him to have J*oabs* diſpleaſure, who was D*avids* chiefe Captaine.
A*ſabel* notwithſtanding this warning purſued him ſtill, till that hee turning ſtrooke him through with his ſpeare and hee dyed. For he was of farre more valour then Aſabel; although Aſabel be reckoned for one of Davids worthies, 1*Chr*:11.26. becauſe Aſabel was young and not yet come to his full ſtrength, nor of that experience, but Abner was both valiant, and Miles veteranus. That, wherewith Abner ſmote him, is ſaid to be the hinder part of his ſpeare, the Vulg. Lat. hath it averſa haſta, his ſpeare being turned away, whereupon ſaith Lyra, ſome gather, that hee ſlew him with the woodden end of his ſpeare, but that cannot bee, becauſe the ſpeare went through his body, and therefore hee ſaith, it is to be underſtood, his ſpeare being turned againſt him. The Hebr. may indifferently be rendred, he ſmote him with the hinder part of his ſpeare under the fifth ribbe, or he ſmote him behinde with his ſpeare under the fifth ribbe, for the words are ויכהו באחרי החנית Veiacchebu Beachari bachanith ell hocomeſh. Aſabel being very ſwift in running went before his brethren in purſuing Abner; till that he came ſo neare unto him, that Abner ſaw himſelfe to be in danger of being ſlaine by him, as he fled with his backe towards him, wherefore when he could by no meanes perſwade him to divert and purſue after ſome other, he turned and ſlew him. But hereunto he was unwilling, becauſe hee knew that Joab his brother would ſeek to revenge it, and happily hee hoped after this ſome peace might have been concluded, which by the killing of Aſabel would be hindered; ſo Martyr: who alſo ſaith, when Abner bade him purſue after ſome young man, and take his ſpoiles, that hee meant, hee ſhould ſeek to get him glory by taking the ſpoiles of one like unto himſelfe, and not attempt this againſt him, leſt that hee too late repented it. In Aſabels fall wee may ſee, that ſometimes excellency in ſome thing, is turned to a mans owne overthrow, as Aſabels ſwiftneſſe of foot was to him; and Milo his ſtrength to him, when hee having cleaved a tree by his great ſtrength, was held in it cloſing together againe, till hee became a prey to the wilde beaſts, that the ſtrong may not glory in his ſtrength, nor the ſwift in his ſwiftneſſe, but give all glory to God alone. Again note, that enemies fleeing are not too hard to bee purſued, but with great care, that no advantage bee given them, leſt their caſe ſeeming deſperate, their feare bee turned into rage and reſolution, to the deſtruction of their purſuers. For the onely health of thoſe that are overcome, ſaith one, is to hope for no health, that is, deſperately to recoyle upon their enemies; and Lucanus ſaith, vincitur haud gratis jugulo qui provocat hoſtem, Hee is overcome to his coſt, who provoketh his enemy by his throat.

Peter Martyr.

Note.

Vna ſalus victis nullam ſperare ſalutem. Lucanus.

V. 24. 25. 26. But Joab and Abiſhai, Aſabels brethren, purſued after Abner ſtill, untill that the men of Benjamin gathering themſelves together upon an heape unto Abner, made a ſtand upon the top of an hill, intending doubtleſſe to fight with them, if they ceaſed not from purſuing them. Then Abner called unto Joab, ſaying, ſhall the ſword alwayes devour, knoweſt thou not, that it will be bitterneſſe in the end? He uſed three arguments, ſaith Martyr, to breake off this warre, 1. Becauſe the ſword had devoured enough people already, warre is not good in it ſelfe, but that enemies being ſuppreſſed we may live in peace, and therefore it ought not when it is begunne to proceed without end: bellum warre hath the name from bellua, a beaſt, becauſe it is the manner of beaſts to goare and to teare one another, wherefore men are to proceed no further in warre, then needes muſt. 2. Becauſe it would turne to bitterneſſe in the end, that is, for the ſlaughter, that would bee made on both ſides, if by Joabs preſſing ſtill upon them, they were provoked to renue the warre, for thus many valiant mens lives would be endangered and ſo advantage given to the common enemy againſt them all. 3. Becauſe they were all brethren, and therefore ſhould be loath to deſtroy one another, and if they did, even the victors might have bitter ſorrow for it in the end, as when all the other Tribes fighting againſt Benjamin had almoſt quite rooted that Tribe out, they lamented it. In a battle fought by Pompey againſt Cinna, and Marius, it is reported that one by chance killing his owne brother, and when he came to ſtrip him to take his ſpoiles, ſeeing that it was his brother, he ſlew himſelfe for ſorrow.

Peter Martyr.

Judg. 20.
Aug. de Civit: l: 2, c: 25.

V. 27. Then Joab anſwered, As the Lord liveth, if thou hadſt not ſpoken, the people had returned turned in the morning each one from purſuing his brother, the Vulgar Latin, if thou Lyra. hadſt ſpoken in the morning, the people had returned,&c. that is, ſaith Lyra, if thou hadſt ſpoken thus ſooner, even when the fight began in the morning, after that 12 and 12 had ſlaine one another in proofe of their valour, there had beene no more bloud ſhed, the Hebr. Vnleſſe thou hadſt ſpoken, even from the morning, the people had returned, &c. that is, unleſſe by bidding, that the young men ſhould riſe and play before us, thou hadſt given occaſion to this fight, we had Junius. returned againe without battle, ſo Junius and Martyr, and the Hebrew expoſitors.

P. Martyr. Now Joſephus ſaith, that Abner did not onely ſpeake ſo unto Joab, as
V. 28. was before ſaid, but alſo excuſed to him the killing of Aſabel, his brother, then Joab cauſed a retreat to bee ſounded, and their men being muſtered on both ſides, it was found, that onely 20 of Davids men were loſt, but of Iſhboſheths Note. 360. Thus he that bearing himſelfe upon his great numbers, provoked firſt unto the fight, was humbled, and forced to ſeeke for peace, and to yeild the victory to Joab, and ſo often times have others done, through the juſt judgement of God, as Joaſh 2 Chr.25.17. and Joſiah 2 Chr.35.32. Wherefore let none be ſo forward to warre, but decline it, and ſeeke peace, wherewith God is beſt pleaſed, unleſſe when he calleth to warre, as the Iſraelites againſt the Amorites and Amalekites. What warres be lawfull, ſee upon Deut.20.

V.30,31. This warre being ended, Abner haſteth to his King Iſhboſheth at Mahanaim, beyond Jordan, and Joab having buried his dead brother Aſabel in Bethlehem, to his King David in Hebron, going all night, till he came thither with his men, which is not to be underſtood of the ſame night, that Abner fled to Mahanaim, Ioſephus. for Joſephus ſaith, that Joab kept his ſtation that night, where the battle was ended, and next day having buried Aſabel, ceaſed not to travaile all the night Lyra. P. Martyr. following, till he came to David to Hebron. Yet Lyra and Martyr alſo thinke, that Aſabels buriall was deferred, till they had returned to Hebron, although it be mentioned before, but of this their opinion, I ſee no reaſon, but of the contrary, becauſe both the buriall precedeth in order, and it is not probable that they would carry a dead body about to Hebron, and then to Bethlehem, to be buried, and it agreeth not with the victorer to flee from the field in the night, but to the vanquiſhed, the victorer ſtaying to view the number of thoſe that were ſlaine. But Hebron, ſaith Martyr, was now in the poſſeſſion of the Philiſtims and therefore it may ſeeme ſtrange, that they ſhould permit them to come and bury Aſabel there, or that they tooke not the opportunity of this diviſion to proſecute their victory againſt Iſrael, but in this the ſingular providence of God over his people is to be admired, who, when wicked Saul was puniſhed by them, overruled them ſo, that they ſtirred no more, till that David had obtained the whole kingdome, and ſo was of greater ſtrength to deale with them.

The myſtery. Rabanus. Myſtically by Davids going to Hebron, which ſignifieth marriage with his two wives, may be underſtood Chriſts entring into marriage with two ſorts of peoples, Jewes and Gentiles. The men of Judah ſignifying praiſe, that came hither to anoint him King, ſet forth the elect, that aſcribe unto Chriſt the kingdome and glory, when as the reprobate and proud contemne him.
Iſhboſheth ſignifying the ſonne of confuſion, that reigned over the other Tribes, ſetteth forth the errour of confuſion, that raigneth in all others except thoſe that by faith cleave unto Chriſt.

CHAP. III.

V.1. HAVING hitherto ſet forth one battle betweene Davids men and Iſhboſheths, now it is ſhewed, that there was long warre betwixt them, that is, moſt probably all the time that Iſhboſheth lived, except ſome few dayes, wherein Abner, his Captaine fell from him and inclined to Davids part, and in the time of theſe warres, Sauls houſe waxed weaker and weaker, and Davids ſtronger and ſtronger, which is further here declared, 1. Becauſe he had many

V. 3,4.

Peter Martyr.

R. Solomon.

Deut 21.11, 12,13.

Note.

Lyra.

Iudg. 14.

Peter Martyr.

2 Sam. 6.23.

children, Verſ. 2,3,4,5. 2. Becauſe Abner fell from Iſhboſheth unto him, Verſ. 6,7.&c. His eldeſt ſonne was Amon, the ſecond Cheliab, ſignifying like the father, happily ſo called, as Martyr hath it, becauſe hee came of Abigail, the wife of Nabal, leſt hee might bee thought to have been his ſonne, hee is alſo called Daniel, 1 Chron.3.1. and this ſaith R. Solomon was his name at the firſt, but then there being ſome ſcoffers, that ſayd hee was Nabals ſonne, his face was changed ſo as that hee looked moſt like unto David, whereupon hee was called Cheliab, but this ſmelleth of the Rabbinicall forge: the third Abſolom, who is ſaid to have come of Maacah, the daughter of Talmai, the King of Geſhur; ſhee is thought by Martyr to have beene one taken captive by David, when dwelling in Ziklag hee roved into divers parts about and tooke the ſpoyles of the enemy, for then it is ſaid, that hee invaded the Geſhurites, 1 Sam. 27. 8. but then hee ſaved neither man nor woman alive, Verſ. 11. wherefore it muſt bee at ſome other time, that hee either tooke her and ſo made her his wife, or after that invaſion the King of Geſhur might give him to her to wife, that hee might not warre upon his countrey any more. If it bee doubted how hee could marry with a woman of another Nation, ſeeing marriages were forbidden with the Canaanites for their idolatry? it is anſwered, although the people of other nations were Idolatrous alſo, yet marrying with ſuch was not altogether forbidden, for in caſe of taking a faire woman of theirs captive, after ſhee had ſhaved her head, pared her nailes and changed her garments, and bewayled her father a moneth, he that had taken her, might marry her. But if David tooke Maacah to wife, whilſt hee dwelt in Ziklag, hee carried not two wives onely with him, as was ſaid before, when hee went to Hebron, but three. Anſw. Although hee had her in his poſſeſſion, yet it is moſt probable, that hee married her not, till a moneth after, following the order of the foreſaid Law, and ſo not till his comming to Hebron. Howſoever, hee had cauſe afterwards to repent him of this marriage, when the ſonne of this woman, Abſolom uſurped his kingdome, and by his other children, Amon and Adonijah hee had much affliction, to ſhew that when a man abounds with children, it is no happineſſe, unleſſe they bee ſanctified, that all parents may alwayes pray inſtantly for this. The fourth ſon was Adonijah, the fifth Shephatiah, the ſixth Ithream by Eglah Davids wife. Here becauſe this woman onely is called Davids wife, a queſtion ariſeth, why it is ſo ſaid of her ſingularly? Lyra anſwereth, that ſhee was his firſt wife, the daughter of Saul, otherwiſe called Michal, and therefore deareſt unto him, and ſhee was called Eglah, an heifer, according to the phraſe uſed by Samſon, if yee had not ploughed with my heifer; all the reſt were his wives alſo, but the firſt ſpecially. Peter Martyr ſaith, that ſome by Eglah underſtand one of meane parentage, who having no alliance to grace her was hereby graced, by being called Davids wife: others, that ſhee was more excellent then any of the other, and ſo preferred, as if ſhee had beene his onely wife, to bee materfamilias: others againe, that ſhee had beene Sauls wife, ſeeking to approve this by the ſaying of Nathan, 2 Sam.12. God gave thee thy maſters wives, but that this cannot bee underſtood that they were given to bee his wives, appeareth becauſe he was Sauls ſonne in law, and ſo it was unlawfull for him to marry his mother in law: it is onely meant then in that place, that they were given into his power. And that Eglah cannot bee Michal, hee proveth, becauſe ſhee was barren to the day of her death, unleſſe it ſhall bee thought there to have been ſpoken of the time to come, that ſhee had no child after that time, but there is another thing that maketh againſt her being Michal, viz. that ſhee was not reſtored to David after that Saul had given her to another, till after this, Verſ. 14. and therefore hee could have no child by her in Hebron borne there as all theſe are ſaid to have been. Ithream the ſixth ſonne of David is by Ioſephus called Nathan, but hee is ſpoken of, as borne afterwards, Chap. 5.14. For Eglah I thinke, that ſhee was one moſt beloved of David of all his wives, and therefore ſingularly ſo called, and Rachel ſometime is by Iacob ſingularly called his wife.

Hitherto the ſtrengthning of David by having many children borne unto him hath been ſpoken of, now followeth that of Abners revolt unto him, Verſ.6,7,8,&c.

V.6,7. There was a concubine of Sauls nation Rizpah, for going in unto whom hee Lyra. was reproved to make David King of all Iſrael. Some, ſaith Lyra, think that Abner went into Rizpah, as having taken her to wife, that thus he might withall take the Kingdom, as Adonijah asking Abiſhag Davids Concubine to wife is cenſured by Solomon as in effect ambitiouſly ſeeking the kingdome: ſome that he onely committed fornication with her, and this is moſt agreeable to the text. And therefore hee was worthy to bee reproved, although God ſecretly wrought by his providence to turne this into an occaſion of fulfilling his promiſe to David touching the kingdome of Iſrael, when Abner being exaſperated by this reproofe revolted unto David, ſo doth God make all things to ſerve for the Note. effecting of his will for the good of his faithfull ſervants. Abner is inraged at Iſhboſheths reproofe, and ſaith, am I a dogs head, &c. that is, either vile and abominable as a dog in the account of Judah, or for barking as it were, againſt David and Judah, and oppoſing them to keepe the kingdome to thee;
or as Comeſtor, am I the head and Prince of dogs, as it were to lead them in barking againſt the Lords anointed? Thus they fall out, who a little before Note. joyned together to ſtop the proceedings of the Lord; and ſo ſhall all they doe, that combine in wickedneſſe, the league betwixt them ſhall not laſt alwayes.
Abner ſaith, that hee would doe to David, as the Lord had promiſed him, whereby is diſcovered, that hee was not ignorant of Davids right all this time, and ſo did againſt his conſcience in all that hee did for Iſhboſheth hitherto, Note. and thus doe many more, impugning the truth, which their conſcience telleth them, that they ſhould receive, but let them beware of Gods judgements at the laſt to cut them off by this example. This great boldneſſe in Abner thus to threaten the King to his face, ſhewed, that hee was puſillanimous and ſlothfull, and ſo unworthy to reigne, and to this inconvenience doe ſlothfull Princes bring themſelves often-times, that they are awed by their ſervants. And it is to bee noted, that Abner would fulfill the promiſe of God Note. to David in ſpleene againſt Iſhboſheth, and ſo ſome doe good with an evill mind, for which they ſhall have no thanke at Gods hand, for reſpect unto whom they are not moved unto it, but for their owne ends.

Then Abner ſent meſſengers to David, ſaying, Whoſe is the Land, &c. that is, hath V 12. not God promiſed thee that thou ſhouldſt bee King thereof, ſo that of right it belongeth to thee, and hee ſpake thus by meſſengers, that having Davids anſwer a way might bee made for him, before that hee went to David himſelfe; make covenant with me, the Covenant which hee would have him to make is Ioſephus. not here expreſſed, but Joſephus ſaith, that it was that Abner ſhould bee in the ſame place of honour with David, that hee had been in with Saul, *v.*13. David V.13. agreed to this motion, but firſt hee would have Michal his wife reſtored, when Abner came unto him, and for this cauſe ſending meſſengers to Iſhboſheth, becauſe
Abner could not reſtore her without him, hee by the perſwaſion of Abner
V.14,15,16 took her from her husband Phaltiel, and ſent her away, her husband following her weeping, but this ſay the Rabbins, was for joy, that hee had kept her as a ſiſter, and not lien with her being another mans wife, or for ſorrow, as R. Solomon hath it, that ſhee was taken from him, who was the exerciſe of perfection to him, in that hee having ſo faire a Lady in his power, yet refrained from touching her. But it is eaſie to feigne any thing, it is moſt probable, that becauſe ſhee was nobly deſcended and faire, it grieved him much to part with her.

V.17,18. The place to which hee followed her weeping was Bahurim, and then Abner ſent him back, this was in the Tribe of Benjamin, Chap. 19. 16. And yet Peter Martyr. wee read not, that Abner went himſelfe with her to David, but firſt going amongſt the Elders of the people hee dealt with them to make David King of all Iſrael, and afterwards hee went in perſon unto David. In dealing with them hee ſaith, that in times paſt they deſired to have David for their King, which moſt probably was when Saul was dead, for they were generally well affected

affected to David long before, and many men of valour of divers Tribes being Davids ſubjects at the firſt did doubtleſſe ſollicite thoſe of their owne Tribes for David, whereby hee had many friends and well-willers, but hitherto Abner had reſiſted them by preferring Iſhboſheth, now hee profeſſeth not to hinder them any longer from David, but to joyne with them in ſetting him up. And hee addeth, that the Lord had ſaid, by David I will deliver Iſrael from the Philiſtims, &c. This wee no where read of, but Joſephus ſaith, that Samuel ſpake thus of David, and now it was commonly knowne, and by theſe words it ſeemeth, that they were eaſily perſwaded, but becauſe it ſeemed more hard to bring Sauls owne Tribe to David, viz. Benjamin, hee further dealeth with the V. 19. men of that Tribe in particular, and then going to David relateth to him, how V. 20, 21. forward they all were to make him King. David having received him and his good newes made him a feaſt, which uſed commonly to bee done of old in making of leagues, and ſo Abner departeth to gather all Iſrael unto David, ſo powerfull was hee by reaſon that hee was Generall of the Army, that hee could eaſily incline the people to what ſide hee pleaſed. But when hee was thus ſent V. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27. away by David in peace, Joab and his men comming home with great booties heard of it, and hee firſt expoſtulated with David for letting Abner ſo to goe away, and then immediatly ſent after him, and when hee was returned back, hee ſpake peaceably to him, but by and by hee ſlew him unawares for the blood Lyra. of Aſahel his brother. The place from whence Abner was brought back was the Well Syria, ſo called ſaith Lyra, becauſe it was in the way, that leadeth to Syria; Junius rendreth it the Ciſterne of Siſera, the Vulgar Latine, the Ciſterne Syra. It is likely that Joab ſent in the Kings name, as if hee had ſomething more to ſay to Abner, for otherwiſe hee would have been ſuſpitious. Joſephus ſaith, that Joab ſpake ſo to David againſt Abner to make him to change his mind, and to ſend to have him brought back againe, that hee might kill him, and when hee could not prevaile, hee ſent meſſengers, as from David after him. And indeed Abner having a covenant from David, how could he now be ſuſpitious that hee or any about him would attempt to doe him miſchiefe? But Joab called him to ſpeake with him in ſecret, as about the Kings buſineſſe, and then hee ſuſpecting nothing was ſlaine. And whereas hee gave it out, that hee did it for the blood of his brother Aſahel, that could bee no reaſon, ſeeing Aſahel was ſlaine altogether through his owne default, but the true reaſon, as moſt conjecture, was for feare leſt Abner ſhould by David bee promoted above him to bee next unto the King. For this was plainely the reaſon why hee af- 1 Sam. 19. 13. Peter Martyr. terwards killed Amaſa, Chap. 20. David had promiſed to make him Captaine in Joabs ſtead. From this wicked and treacherous fact of Joab, ſaith Martyr came three good things. 1. Hee was deſervedly puniſhed for his wickedneſſe, although Joab did it altogether out of envie. 2. David came a fairer way to the Kingdome then hee ſhould have done, if Abner had lived ſtill. 3. The danger that might have been in Abners too much greatneſſe was prevented, whereby David might otherwiſe have been put to further trouble, hee being ſo gracious and bearing ſo much ſway with the people: yet hee ſaith, that Joab who ſlew Abner, was as bad or worſe then hee, and therefore was at the laſt by Solomon cut off alſo: for he both dealt treacherouſly with Abner, as Abner with Iſhboſheth, conſpired with Adonijah, as Abner with Iſhboſheth, and conſented to the murther of Vriah and others unjuſtly to pleaſe David, as Abner had unjuſtly perſecuted David. And he might have added further, that he brought diſcredit upon the King by his treachery, and ſhed the blood of Amaſa in the time of peace.

Note. Wee may by this example ſee, ſaith Joſephus, what great danger there is in envie, when one great perſon cannot endure another to bee preferred before him, great trouble and danger commeth to the State hereby.

V. 28. And when David heard it, hee ſaid, I and my kingdome are cleare from the blood of Abner, let it reſt on the head of Joab, and of all his fathers houſe, and let there not faile a man that hath an iſſue in the houſe of Joab, or that is a Leaper, or that Ioſephus. leaneth on a ſtaffe, or that falleth on the Sword, or that wanteth bread; Joſephus ſaith, that David ſtretching out his hands to heaven profeſſed thus his owne innocency, cency, that all men might know him to bee guiltleſſe of this blood, and it concerned him much to cleare himſelfe, leſt the people of Iſrael hearing of it ſhould have their hearts alienated from him, and thinke him for ſo foule a treachery unworthy to reigne over them, wherefore hee imprecateth him, Hugo Cardin. that committed this murther, and his poſteritie, which imprecation ſaith Hugo was made by way of propheſying. Now amongſt the evills foretold to come upon his family, that which in our tranſlation is rendred, leaning upon Lyra, Schol. Hiſtor. a ſtaffe, is by the vulgar Latine, fuſum tenens, and this Lyra and Comeſtor expound holding a ſpindle, as a woman that is effeminate, Hugo either ſo, or holding a white ſtick, as the leprous were appointed to doe, to ſhew, that they were uncleane by Leproſie, that others might take heed of them. And if it bee thus underſtood, here are but foure things, wherein the curſe of Joabs houſe ſtood, whereas Lyra and the ordinary gloſſe, and our tranſlation make them five. But as Martyr noteth the word פלך here uſed ſignifieth P. Martyr. both a ſtaffe and a ſpindle, for ſo it is uſed, Prov. 31. 19. and if wee take it for a ſtaffe, which is the moſt proper ſignification of the word, then the meaning is, that there ſhould be ſome gouty, or paralyticall, or otherwiſe infirme and not able to goe without the helpe of a ſtaffe. And touching every of theſe particulars he ſheweth them all to be moſt grievous judgements, for the iſſue made the body to pine away, and the Leproſie loathſome, and both uncleane, ſo as that hee might not come into the Congregation, the Gout or Palſie made a living man as if hee were dead, to fall by the ſword of the enemy is a lamentable judgement, and to bee ſterved to death through want of food much more. The Rabbins ſay that David was too much carried by paſſion in thus imprecating not onely Joab, but all his fathers houſe, and therefore all theſe evills fell upon ſome of his owne poſteritie. Rehoboam had an iſſue, Uzziah was a Leper, Aſa was pained in his feet, Joſiah fell by the ſword, and Joachim wanted bread. But becauſe the ſame David in divers of the Pſalmes doth likewiſe imprecate the wicked, wherein hee was certainly moved by the Spirit of God, it is not to bee thought, that hee was moved by humane paſſion at this time, but by the ſame ſpirit of propheſie. And touching Joabs fathers whole houſe here imprecated, it is ſo ſpoken, becauſe not onely hee, but Abiſhai his brother alſo had an hand in Abners murther, as is intimated, Verſ. 30. where it is ſaid, ſo Joab and Abiſhai his brother ſlew Abner, which Joſephus ſaith was done thus, whilſt Abner was held in talke by Joab, Abiſhai ſlew him, but I rather thinke that Abiſhai did helpe in this murther by going with ſome of Joabs men for Abner to fetch him back, that Joab might ſlay him, which hee knew well that hee would doe. Now becauſe in theſe two was the whole family of their father for ought wee read, ſeeing Aſahel was dead before, and there were no more, but theſe three, David imprecateth all Joabs fathers houſe, meaning theſe two onely and their poſteritie, as the iſſue of Note. ſhamefull murtherers. That which is recorded here, or elſewhere touching Davids curſing, is not to bee imitated by us, who are commanded to bleſſe and not to curſe, but onely in caſe that God directeth ſo to doe.

V. 31. Then David ſaid to Joab and to all the people, Rent your clothes and mourn for Abner, and gird you with ſackcloth, &c. It is ſtrange, ſaith Munſter, that hee ſhould bid Joab alſo to doe thus, would hee have him diſſemble ſorrow for that which hee was glad of? hee anſwereth, the cauſe why David bade Joab to come and mourne alſo was to honour the funerall of Abner, not onely with the preſence of other Captaines and Tribunes, but alſo of Joab, who was the chiefe of all, and if Joab had any grace in him, hee might by this meanes have been brought to repentance, which no doubt was the meaning of David, becauſe hee being compelled to bee amongſt ſo many mourners that wept and ſorrowed, hee might hereby bee affected with ſorrow and ſhame, who was the actour of ſo great a miſchiefe bewailed by ſo many, and by the King himſelfe. And King David followed the Beer to honour Abner the more, a thing never uſed by Kings, for whoſoever is carried forth to the buriall, the King never goeth after him in any Country; this then ſhewed, how greatly David was affected with Abners death, in that forgetting his kingly dignity, he vouchſafed to doe him this honour.

V. 32. Then Abner was buried in Hebron, an honourable place for the buriall of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, ſo that even in the place of his buriall Abner was honoured alſo, which was counted no ſmall matter in thoſe dayes not onely amongſt the Jewes, but amongſt people of other Nations, as the Romans, with whom ſepulchers were marked with theſe three letters D. M. S. that is, Divorum Manium Sacra, the Temples of holy Ghoſts, wherefore Cicero calleth the body of Clodius, infælix cadaver, that was caſt out unburied: and it was a puniſhment appointed for him, that ſlew father or mother, his corps might not bee buryed. And David wept at the grave, which weeping of his, doubtleſſe was from unfaigned ſorrow, becauſe he might now be hindered from attaining to the kingdome over all Iſrael, in a faire way to which he was by Abners meanes, if he had ſtill lived; and becauſe ſo indigne a thing was done to ſo great a Prince by a Subject of his, with whom he had but even now entered into a league, to his great diſcredit.

V. 33. AndDavid lamented for Abner, ſaying Dyed Abner, as a foole dieth? for thy hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters, &c. that is, like a coward, who ſeeing danger, yeildeth himſelfe to his enemy to be bound and carried away to be dealt withall as he pleaſeth. It was not ſo with Abner, for he fell by treachery of the wicked, as the beſt and moſt valiant might doe: and all the people wept againe over him, that is, in repeating the words of David and anſwering him with the like. Thus David ſeemeth to juſtifie Abner, as if he were none of the wicked, when as indeed, if Joab dealt treacherouſly with him, he was payed but in his owne kinde, who was ſo treacherous to his owne King, So Martyr.

V. 35. And when all the People came to cauſe David to eate meat whileſt it was day, &c. David was ſo much affected with ſorrow, that the funerall being ended at what time they were wont to eate and drinke, ſome feaſt being made for that purpoſe, he refuſed to doe as the reſt did, and vowed not to eate ought till ſun ſettting. The Sept: have it περιδειπνῆσαι to make David ſup, but it may rather be underſtood as amongſt the Greeks anciently, of a dinner, being ſo called, quaſi μεθ' ὃ δεῖ πονεῖν, after which a man muſt labour, becauſe if it had beene ſupper time, David would not have replyed as he did, that he would eate nothing, till the ſun ſetting. And thus David had his end, all the people underſtood that he
V. 37. was innocent and had no hand in Abners murther, and he further cleared himſelfe
V. 38. by ſaying, know yee not, that a great Prince is fallen this day in Iſrael, ſhewing hereby, how much he eſteemed of him, ſo as that he was farre from conſenting to his deſtruction; And if any man ſhould have objected, why then doſt thou V. 39. not puniſh the murtherers, he addeth, and I am this day weake, and theſe men, the ſonnes of Zerviah are too hard for mee. I am in my kingdome like a tender plant eaſily pluckt up, if I ſhall provoke the ſonnes of Zerviah, as Iſhboſheth did Abner, they may ſoone draw all the people from me as Abner did from him. But this was a great infirmity in David to be ſo timerous in executing juſtice, eſpecially having a promiſe from God of the Kingdome, that he might depend upon againſt all conſpiratours whatſoever. But there are divers things alledged by ſome to excuſe David, as 1. that he did onely deferre Joabs puniſhment, taking order afterwards with Solomon, that he ſhould be put to death, and God himſelfe deferreth often to puniſh the wicked. 2. To puniſh him preſently, might have beene a great weakening to the Commonwealth, which a prudent King ought to provide againſt: for when Honorius the Emperour had cut off Stillico his Generall, it is ſaid, that hee cut off his owne hands, and indeed hee never did any worthy act after. 3. The law of putting murtherers to death being affirmative, bindeth not to all times, but to take the fitteſt. 4. David was a figure of Chriſt, who was gentle towards the fouleſt ſinners. 5. He might in this delaying to puniſh Joab be guided by the ſpirit of God, as in many other things. But to the laſt, firſt it is anſwered this being againſt the revealed wil of God, to forbeare to cut off a murtherer, it cannot be, that the ſpirit of God ſhould be the author of this unto him, neither doth he plead it, but the ſonnes of Zerviah be too hard for me. To the 4, Chriſt uſed gentleneſſe in adminiſtring his ſpirituall kingdome, but this was noe warrant to him, that adminiſters a politicke kingdome. To the 3 and 1, it was too long a delay to put it off to his death; and to the 2, he had God with him, whoſe power was above all, therefore he ſhould not have feared the weakening of his kingdome, yea the doing of execution upon Joab would have given content to more in Iſrael, with whom Abner was gracious, then the ſparing of him. Beſides this lenity, what encouragement might it give to other men of might, to commit the like horrible murthers, ſeeing the law was likely now to lay hold onely upon the inferiour ſort? yea wee ſee two wicked men, Rechab and Baanab preſently animated hereby to goe and kill Iſhboſheth, and Joab afterwards to kill Amaſa. A judge muſt be a man of courage, not reſpecting the perſons of the rich or poore.

CHAP. IV.

V.1. I*SHBOSHETH* hearing of the death of A*bner* was troubled,and ſo was
2. all Iſrael. But there were two Captaines of Bands Recbab and Banaab belonging
3. to Iſhboſheth, who were of Beroth in Benjamin, but lived hitherto, as V.5,6. Exiles in Gittim, to which place they had fled. They now came into Iſhboſheths houſe when he was ſleeping in the heate of the day, and ſlew him, and V.4. cutting off his head carryed it to David. And by the way here is inſerted ſomething touching Mephiboſheth, how he being 5 yeares old, when Saul and Jonathan his father were ſlaine, his nurſe fled with him, and in fleeing fell with him, whereby he became lame. What the cauſe of Recbabs and Baanabs fleeing R. Solomon. to Gittim was, or when they fled, is not ſaid, but R. Solomon ſaith, that they tooke part with Mephiboſheth, the ſonne of J*onathan*, as being the ſonne of the elder brother, and ſo one, that had more right to the kingdome, then Iſhboſheth Sauls yongeſt ſonne, and when they ſaw that I*ſhboſheth* was ſet up by Abner to be King, they fled, wherefore mention is made together of Mephiboſheth, with whom they had taken part. But this ſeemeth not to be ſo, becauſe they are ſaid to bee I*ſhboſheths* men, which they were not, ſeeing according to this relation they never came in unto him, but rather were Meph.boſheths men.
Others therefore hold, that they were Captaines of Theeves and Robbers, and when I*ſhboſheth* would have puniſhed them therefore, they fled, and continued in Gittim untill this time, and this ſeemeth moſt probable, and the Hebr. will beare this reading, Captaines of Robbers, as the Vulgar Latin hath it, ſeeing the word גדודם Gedudim here uſed ſignifyeh both Armies and Robbers. But why is mention made with all of Mephiboſheth, if they were no partakers with him? Some ſay, that now Abner being dead they came and ſolicited Mephiboſheth to take the kingdome upon him, but he being a good man refuſed it, and ſignified it to I*ſhboſheth*, whereupon they fled for the preſent, but ere long returned and ſlew I*ſhboſheth* being aſleepe. But this agreeth not with the Text, which ſaith, that they were ſojourners in Gittim, till this day, that is, till the newes came of A*bners* death, ſo that they did not after this flee thither, but had continued there ſometime before, and Mephiboſheth was but yet a childe of Lyra. 12 yeares old. Lyra therefore better ſaith, that mention is made of Mephiboſheth in this place, he being about to tell of the death of Iſhboſheth, to ſhew that now there was none of Sauls houſe left to be made King againſt D*avid*, ſeeing Mephiboſheth alone was left alive, and he was lame of both his feet, and ſo unfit for that high dignity. Gittim, to which Baanab and Recbab fled, was a City of their owne Tribe, Benjamin, Nehem: 11.33. where they lurked, till this time. But now it is ſaid, that they came to Iſhboſheths houſe as if they would fetch wheat, that is, diſguiſing themſelves, as if they had beene Merchants, and came to buy wheat, that they might not bee ſuſpected, for the King happily had a great revenue of wheat, which he ſold unto Merchants. The Vulgar Schol. Hiſtor. Latin hath it, bringing eares of wheat, that is, ſay Lyra, Comeſtor, and Hugo, Hugo Cardin. as if they brought ſome firſt fruites unto the King to honour him, but Lyra confeſſeth, that Hebr. it is, they came as though they would fetch or buy wheat, which is the beſt, becauſe firſt fruits were not brought unto the King, but to the Prieſts. Comming thus into the houſe they found Iſhboſheth aſleep, and ſlew him, and then the manner how hee lay more particularly being deſcribed, V. 7. v: 7. he lay in the bed-chamber, for in hot countries, when the ſun is at the higheſt, men commonly went into their chambers after dinner to ſleepe a while: and having ſlain him they cut off his head, and tooke it away with them in token of the murther committed. Peter Martyr. Iſhboſheth, ſaith Martyr, was worthy thus to be cut off, and by a more grievous death, becauſe he fought as it were againſt God, after the manner of the Titans, in ſeeking to hinder David from the kingdome, which God had aſſigned unto him. And well he was ſlaine in his ſleepe, who had beene ſluggiſh, and done nothing like a King all his time, but all by Abner: Note. and by his death in his ſleepe in his owne houſe, wee may ſee, to what dangers we are ſubject, when wee may ſeeme to be moſt ſafe, that we bee never ſecure, and lying downe to ſleepe, remember, that we know not, whether ever wee ſhall riſe up againe or no. Plutarch. Plutarch in the life of Lucullus ſaith, that hee was ſaved by ſleeping in the heat of the day: for Ortacus ſent by Mithridates treacherouſly to kill him under a pretence of friendſhip, when hee could not bee admitted to ſpeake with him, becauſe hee was aſleepe, fearing leſt by delaying his treaſon ſhould bee diſcovered, he returned againe without ſlaying to doe that bloudy act. Now although Iſhboſheth was worthy to dye and God ſecretly wrought by his providence to take him out of the way, that David might no longer be hindered from the kingdome, yet this excuſeth not the wickedneſſe of theſe two men who ſlew him treacherouſly, partly to be revenged upon him, whom they feared and hated, and partly hoping to receive a great reward at the hands of David. And therefore he dealt with them according to their deſerts, when he put them to death therefore. V. 8. Yet they come unto David with a moſt plauſible oration, the Lord hath avenged my Lord the King this day of Saul and of his ſeed, thus making God a party in their murther, when as this was not the end that they aimed at, to fulfill Gods will herein, or to doe any good to David, but at other ends of their owne, as was ſaid before. In the like caſe ſuch as have beene led onely by the light of nature, have delivered the treacherous to be put to death, although they pretended their good in thus conſpiring againſt the life of their owne Lords, as Fabritius, who ſignified to Pyrrhus the treachery of his Phyſitian, who would have poiſoned him being his King to gratifie Fabritius, and the Romans ſent the ſchoolemaſter of the Faliſcii, that would have betrayed their City unto them, backe to be puniſhed, and Cæſar lamented the death of Pompey his enemy, and put to death the murtherer.

V. 9. 10. David cleane contrary to the expectation of theſe two men, told them moſt ſeriouſly, how he had put to death one, that brought tidings to him to Ziklag of Sauls death, thinking to be well rewarded for his labour, and therefore giveth ſentence againſt them, that they were much more worthy to dye, and ſo he commanded them to be ſlaine. But whereas in ſpeaking of their fault he ſaith, they had ſlaine a righteous man in his owne houſe, it is to be underſtood, that he doth not meane one ſimply righteous, for ſo Iſhboſheth was not, but comparatively, for he was more righteous then they, and ſo Judah is ſaid to have juſtified Samaria in her wickedneſſe, becauſe ſhee was more wicked. By this ſeverity towards theſe men, Davids innocency was manifeſted to the winning of mens hearts unto him. And as they had cut off the head of Iſhboſheth, ſo he cauſed their hands, which committed that murther, to be cut off, and their feet, that carryed them to it, and hanged them up over the poole in Hebron, to be a ſpectacle to all men, that others might feare to commit the like wickedneſſe. If it ſhall ſeeme not juſtifyable to adde this to their puniſhment, it is anſwered, the Magiſtrate, as he ſeeth cauſe, may adde to the puniſhments preſcribed in the law of God, but diminiſh them he may not, ſo the Rabbins, and thus David afterwards, when Nathan had told how a rich man tooke the Lambe of a poore man, vowed, that he ſhould dye and reſtore it fourfold, whereas by the law reſtitution only was appointed. 2 Sam. 12. 5. And the head of Iſhboſheth hee cauſed to be buried in Abners Sepulcher, ſo in all things he ſought ſtill to honour the houſe of Saul, and to ſhew his affection towards him, who was his utter enemy, that we might learne to doe likewiſe.

Hugo Card. The Morall. Morally Hugo ſaith, by theſe two, that ſlew Iſhboſheth, wounding him under the fifth ribbe, wee may underſtand gluttony and drunkenneſſe ſlaying the ſoule by deſtroying all grace in the heart, whilſt a man ſleepeth ſecurely herein.

CHAP. V.

V. 1, 2, 3. THEN all the Tribes of Iſrael came to David to Hebron, and anointed him King over all, and he made a league with them, that is, with their Elders who led the reſt, and therefore of the Elders it is ſaid, that they anointed him, 1 Chron: 12. 23 1 Chr: 12. 23. they of every Tribe, that came to Hebron to make David King, are particularly numbered, of the Tribe of Judah 6800, for of them needed no greater number ſeeing they had already received him for their King, of the Tribe of Levi 4000, of Simeon 7100, &c. And by all the Tribes that came to D*avid* here theſe are meant, who came for all. The league, that they made with D*avid*, the Rabbins ſay, was, that hee ſhould not puniſh any of Peter Martyr. them, for taking part with Iſhboſheth againſt him, but Peter Martyr, that hee ſhould rule according to juſtice and equity over them, and that they would bee loyall and true obedient Subjects unto him: for thus all Kings, when they come to their royall dignity, doe commonly ſweare to rule according to the lawes of the land, and not as they luſt. And this league is ſaid to bee made before the Lord, both becauſe they ſweare by the Lord, and happily before an altar that was there, being of old built by Abraham. For that they uſed ſtill to offer ſacrifice here to this day it appeareth, by Abſaloms deſire to have leave to to goe and pay his vow in Hebron, ch: 15. 7. Touching all the Tribes comming to David to make him King, ſee alſo 1 Chr: 11. 1, 2, 3.

The Myſtery. In this voluntary comming of the Tribes unto David, Chriſt was notably figured out, who ſubdued not Peoples and Nations unto him by force of arms, but raigneth over them, that willingly ſubmit themſelves unto him, with whom hee entereth into a firme Covenant of Grace and Mercy for ever, and they are, as the Tribes here ſay to David, fleſh of his fleſh, and bone of his bone, Eph: 5. This being the difference betwixt him and other Monarchs of the world, not onely the Aſſyrians, Perſians, Greekes, and Romans, but alſo the Truke and Pope, who by ſtrong hand have ſought to bring all under their obedience, hereby ſhewing, that their kingdomes are not divine, but humane, tyrannicall, and devilliſh, and ſo ſhall periſh againe. Now beſides all thoſe that came to David, it is ſaid, all the reſt, who came not, were of one heart to 1 Chron. 12. V. 38. make David King, 1 Chr: 12. 38. ſo that their ſubjecting of themſelves to Iſhboſheth all this time, was in a manner enforced by Abner, for their owne conſciences told them, that they did not well herein, as it is not to be doubted, but that inforceth with many, of the Church of Rome at this day. By this Note. time then David ſaw how conſtant God was in his word, to performe ſo fully and freely all that he had promiſed him, although by the way he met with many things that might make him doubtfull, and ſo it ſhall be done at the laſt to all Gods faithfull people, wherefore let us alwayes patiently wait upon him, and not waver through unbeleiſe in the moſt evill day. Laſtly it is ſhew- 1 Chron. 12. 39 ed, that all thoſe, who came unto David, continued with him three dayes eating and drinking, and leſt any man ſhould doubt how proviſion could bee made for ſo great a multitude in one City, for they were betweene 300000 and 400000, it is ſaid, that their brethren, that dwelt nigh, of Zabulon, Iſſachar, and Nephtali, brought in proviſion aboundantly, both of bread, fleſh, and figges, &c. ſuch a univerſall joy there was at this inauguration of King David: ſo amongſt thoſe that conſented together to ſet up Chriſt for their King, there was great joy, Act: 2. and aboundant bringing in of worldly things for the reliefe of the multitude, Act: 4.

V. 4,5.

Lyra.

Gloſ: Ord.

David was 30 yeares old, when he began to raigne, at the very age, that Chriſt began his miniſtry, and he raigned 7 yeares and 6 months in Hebron over Judah, and 33 in Hieruſalem, &c. But the whole time comming to bee ſummed up, it is ſaid to be 40 yeares together, whereas indeed it is 40 yeares 6 months. The reaſon, ſaith R: Solomon, why the 6 months are left out, is either becauſe he fled 6 months by reaſon of Abſalom, who uſurped the kingdome ſo long, or becauſe he was 6 months ſicke in Hebron, which is not therefore put into this ſumme. But I thinke rather, that it is ſo put, becauſe hee raigned onely 40 yeares compleat, and the ſacred hiſtory doth not uſe to reckon upon months, ſee 1 Kings 2. 11. Ch: 11.42. Ch: 13. 22. &c. He was firſt made King over Judah, ſaith the Gloſſe, and then over Iſrael, to figure out Chriſt received by two peoples, the Gentiles and Jewes at ſeverall times, and he raigned 40 yeares, which is foure times ten, ſignifying perfection, to ſhew, that Chriſts raigne ſhould bee a perfect time even for ever and ever.

V. 6.

Schol. Hiſtor.

Lyra.

Exod; 32.

Ioſh: 15.63.

And the King went with his men to Jeruſalem to the Jebuſites, who inhabited that land, and they ſaid unto David, except thou takeſt away the blinde and the lame, thou ſhalt not come in hither, thinking David cannot come in. The inferiour part of Jeruſalem, ſaith Comeſtor, was delivered to David by Ornan the Jebuſite, but the upper was held ſtill by the reſt of the Jebuſites, and there a Tower was ſo ſtrong that it was thought impregnable, thus he; but all the reſt of the City ſtanding upon Mount Moriah, Mount Acra, and Mount Bezetha was in the Iſraelites hands before, and onely Mount Zion, which was higheſt, held by the Jebuſites, Joſh: 15. 63. By the blinde and the lame, ſome thinke, that ſuch were meant, as were ſet to defend this Tower, and this impotent crew was ſet to defend it in deriſion, becauſe they thought, that with the weakeſt defence, that might be, it was ſafe enough againſt all his power: ſome by the blinde and lame thinke, that they meant Images ſet up there, which have eyes and ſee not, and feet and walke not, for even thoſe Images, which were able to doe nothing, were in their judgement a ſufficient defence againſt him. Laſtly ſome, that they meant themſelves, becauſe the Jewes accounted the blinde and lame uncleane, and ſo the Jebuſites being an uncleane people, were held by them to be as the blinde and the lame, touching whom, becauſe the keepers of the Temple would not ſuffer ſuch to come in, ſaying that the blinde and the lame ſhould not enter, it grew into a proverb, the blinde and the lame ſhall not enter, when they meant any uncleane perſons: that the blinde and the lame might not enter into the Tabernacle, ſee Levit: 21. Or they called themſelves the blinde and the lame, becauſe David thought them as unable to defend themſelves againſt his power, as blinde and lame perſons. Thus alſo Hugo, but Lyra following R: Solomon, after the firſt opinion commemorated, ſaith, that two Images, the one blinde and the other lame, repreſenting Iſaac and Jacob, were placed upon the wall, in remembrance of the Covenant made of old by Abraham with Abimelech the King of the Philiſtims, whoſe poſterity theſe Jebuſites were, there being engraven upon them the oath taken by Abraham to Abimelech, and in ſaying, that he ſhould not come in, except hee tooke away the blinde and the lame, they meant, except he would bee perjured by breaking that oath; and whereas the blinde and lame are put in the plurall number, hee ſaith although there was but one blinde and one lame, it might bee ſo ſaid, for of the golden Calfe which was but one it is ſaid, theſe bee thy Gods. Now for David, that hee might, notwithſtanding the foreſaid league lawfully invade the Jebuſites, which Joſhua in his time could not doe, whereby it came to paſſe, that although this City were given to the Tribe of Judah and Benjamin, yet it could not be gained wholly from the Jebuſites till this time, it is proved, becauſe the time, that the league was to laſt, was now expired, the poſterity of Abimelech being all dead. This is by Martyr ſuſpected as a fable and confuted, and the like ſee before upon Joſh. 15,63. the Chald Par. except thou takeſt away ſinners, thou ſhalt not come in. That the Jebuſites themſelves cannot all be underſtood by the lame and the blinde, according to the ſecond opinion is plaine, becauſe it is ſaid, who ſo ſmiteth the Jebuſites and the lame and the blinde, by which words the lame and blind are diſtinguiſhed from the Jebuſites, neither can it bee underſtood of their Idols, for they would never bee ſo unreverent towards them to call them by ſo vile a name, no not according to the opinion of others, and it agreeth not to Idols to bee ſmitten but to bee broken downe, wherefore the words are literally to bee taken; and yet I doe not thinke, that lame and blind perſons were ſet in deriſion to defend the walls, as Joſephus and Theodoret will have it, as Theod. alſo ſaith, that the Tyrians ſometime ſet Pygmees in ſcorne to defend their Citie againſt the enemy; but that ſuch poore people were confined to ſome place neare the entrance of the Fort, and not ſuffered to dwell amongſt others, and of theſe the Jebuſites ſpake in ſcorne to David, except hee cut them off, who were leaſt able to reſiſt him, which they thought hee could not poſſibly doe for the great ſtrength of the place hindering any power from comming at them, hee ſhould never bee able to deale with them, or to hurt them, who had both their ſight and their limbes, and ſo were better able a great deale to keepe them out. But notwithſtanding this brag, David tooke the ſtrong hold of Zion, and called it the Citie of D*avid*, for it was a ſpacious place, viz. 2000. Cubits long, and 2000. Cubits broad, ſo that it might well beare the name of a Citie. Junius differing from all others rendreth it thus: Thou ſhalt not come hither alive, but when ſome one hath taken thee away, the very blind and the lame ſaying, David ſhall not come hither, and the Hebrew may well beare this reading, for it is כי אמחסרך but thou being removed, that is, by death, whereby was meant that if hee attempted to enter, hee ſhould die for it, and the very blind and lame inſulted over him, whereby hee was ſo much exaſperated againſt them, as followeth. Then hee ſaid, Who ſo getteth up to the gutter and ſmiteth the lame and the blind hated of Davids ſoule, hee ſhall bee Captaine, but theſe laſt words, hee ſhall be Captaine, or chiefe are not in the Hebrew, but are left out to bee underſtood, being ſupplyed, 1 Chron. 11. 6. where it is alſo ſaid, that Joab ſmote them, and for theſe words, hated of Davids ſoule, Hebr. it is, Davids ſoule hating him or them, but in the Margin, hating Davids ſoule, and ſo the vulgar Latine readeth it: if it bee taken this laſt way, it is to bee underſtood, that hee meant, they were his greateſt enemies, and haters, becauſe they ſo petulantly upbraided him, and did him ſuch a deſpight; if the former, that hee had them in greateſt abomination therefore. For theſe words who ſo getteth up to the gutter, Junius hath quiſquis pertingens ad illud emiſſarium; Martyr expoundeth the getting up to the gutter or water-pipes of the breaking of them off. Joſephus ſaith, that the neather Citie being taken, but the tower holding out ſtill, David promiſed to him that could firſt get up into the Tower by the valley under it, that hee ſhould bee Captaine; it ſeemeth that there was ſome ſecret way, by which a man might with great difficultie aſcend to this high Fort, viz. a gutter whereby the water uſed to run downe, and by this way J*oab* firſt got up thither, wherefore they ſaid, the blind and the lame ſhall not come into the houſe, the Vulgar Latine, it became a proverb, the blind and the lame ſhall not goe into the Temple, theſe words, they ſaid, being as much as it became a proverb. But the Temple is ill put for the houſe, as if now firſt the blind and lame were kept from comming to ſerve there according to Levit. 21. 18. for this cannot bee, ſeeing it was ſo ordained long before, but in remembrance of this affront given unto David, and this notable victory here obtained, hee made a decree, that none either blind or lame ſhould come into his houſe in Sion, and hereupon the proverb aroſe, as a monument of ſo noble a victory to continue throughout all ages. In other Kings Courts of the Nations, ſuch as were deformed any way were kept from comming into the ſight of the King for good lucks ſake, but from Davids onely the blind and lame, and not thus ſuperſtitiouſly, but onely for a remembrance tending to thankfulneſſe: So Junius. But Martyr thinketh rather, that this proverb was uſed in caſe of that happening to one, which hee expected ſhould have befalne another. I ſubſcribe rather to J*unius*, for it was a moſt memorable thing, and worthy of ſome monument, that the ſtrongeſt

Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 7. c. 2.

Junius.

Peter Martyr.

place in all the Land of Canaan, and the chiefeſt and moſt holy, deſtined to bee the peculiar place of Gods worſhip, being hitherto invincible, and therefore in all the time of Sauls reigne not once attempted, ſhould bee at the firſt taken and ſubdued by David, and in this was David a type of Chriſt, before whom none could take and poſſeſſe the Kingdome of heaven, typified by mount Sion, and bring in his people thither: And as David went from his inauguration to Sion to expell the Iebuſites, ſo Chriſt from riding on an Aſſe, when to inaugurate him they cryed Hoſanna, went immediatly to the Temple and expelled the buyers and ſellers. For this great exploit now done by David, hee tooke the opportunitie of having ſuch great Forces together ready armed to enure them to warlike affaires at the firſt, and to make them have the greater hopes of ſubduing other places, this moſt ſtrong place being once gotten, and to terrifie the enemy the more. Now for the order of the hiſtory, although it bee firſt ſaid, that David tooke that ſtrong hold, and then that hee propounded the reward to him, that could firſt get up to ſmite the blind and the lame, yet it is to bee held, that this propoſition was firſt made, and therefore Iunius rendreth it well, David had ſaid, by the preterpluperfect tenſe, for which and the preterperfect the Hebrews have onely one and the ſame word. The ordinary Gloſſe ſaith, that the Citie Jeruſalem was firſt built by Melchiſedeck, or Melchiſalem, and called Salem, then by the Iebuſites inhabiting there, Iebus, which two words being put together, one letter being changed make Jeruſalem, and in Solomons time, an addition being made from his name it was called Ieruſolyma. And for the Myſtery, ſaith Rabanus, in David expelling the Iebuſites out of Sion, Chriſt was figured out, who expelled the contrary powers out of mens hearts that are faithfull, for hee did not onely get himſelfe a Trophee of glory by deſtroying all the power of the Devill by his Croſſe, but alſo gave power to his faithfull over all ſuch power, for which cauſe hee ſaith, behold I give you power over Scorpions and Serpents; and by his dwelling in Sion, and calling it Davids Citie, when hee had caſt out the blind and lame, Chriſt dwelling in the heart by faith was ſet forth, all blindneſſe of mind, and vice which is as lameneſſe to the ſoule being expelled, for hereof it is ſaid, leſt that which is halting bee turned out of the way. His taking of the high Tower of Sion ſignifyed Chriſts taking of the primacy of the Church, the Scribes and Phariſees who were as the blind and lame, being firſt caſt out. Thus the Gloſſe, ſaying alſo, that they are ſpoken of as hating his ſoule, becauſe through hatred they ſought to have him crucified: but if vices bee underſtood by the blind and lame, Chriſts ſoule truly hateth them, and all ſuch as live and trade therein.

Gloſſa Ordin.

Rabainus. The myſtery.

Heb 12.

And David built round about from Millo, and inward; Millo, ſaith Lyra, was a certaine vorage or deepe pit before the Tower of Sion, betwixt which yet and that Tower there was a ſpace of ground to build upon, and thus alſo Hugo, who addeth, that his building was of a wall round about the Tower within the gulfe, and another without, ſo as that it was compaſſed with a double wall, but Lyra is for the building of a Citie in this place, which hee ſaith, was afterwards called by the name of Millo, but the Gloſſe expoundeth it alſo of a double wall. Peter Martyr ſaith, that ſome will have Millo indeed to bee a great deepe gulfe, but filled up in Solomons time, and hence called Millo by anticipation, for Millo ſignifieth filling. David Kimbi ſaith, that Millo was a ſpacious place before the Tower, to which the people aſſembled, when any ſpeech was publiquely to bee made unto them, and becauſe it uſed to bee filled with people at ſuch times, it was called Millo. Ben. Gerſon ſaith, that it was a place alwayes full of water, and therefore thus called, 1 Chron. 11. 8. David is ſaid not onely to build the munition about, but alſo the Citie, and Ioab the reſt of the Citie, which hee built not; next here is a capitulation made of Davids worthies, 1 Chron. 11. 10. which followeth in this book, Chap. 23. 8.

Lyra.

Hugo Cardin.

Peter Martyr.

Then Hiram King of Tyrus ſent meſſengers unto David, and Cedar Trees, and Carpenters, &c. David being ſetled in his Kingdome at Jeruſalem, now prepareth

V. 11.

reth to build him an Houſe fit for a King; and becauſe in the Kingdome of Tyrus was the greateſt plenty of the beſt timber, viz. of Cedars, which never rotteth, and ſo the beſt workmen for building; hee had ſuch timber and workmen ſent him from thence by Hiram the King, with whom hee was in amity.
Peter Martyr. Tyrus was a City in an Iſland inhabited by the Phænicians, who dwelt before by the Red-ſea, but being driven from thence by earth-quakes, they built and inhabited here; the City was but meane at the firſt for Fiſhermen to dwell in, but afterwards it grew great and ſumptuous, and from thence ſprung divers others, as Carthage, Leptis, Utica, &c. and in this Countrey were both cedars and ſtones, and moſt expert workmen, which were wanting in the land of Iſrael.
So that it was not of ſmall availe for David to be in league with a King ſo mighty and uſefull for him to ſupply him with neceſſaries.

Gloſ. Ord. The Ordin. Gloſſe applyeth this myſtically to Chriſt, for whom Doctors
The Myſtery. amongſt the Gentiles, as workmen doe build an houſe, that is, the Church.

And David knew that God had eſtabliſht him for King; that is, partly by the V.12. ſucceſſe which hee had, and partly by the inward certioration of his ſpirit, as Lyra. Lyra. Then hee tooke him more concubines and wives of Jeruſalem, &c. and hee had V.13. more ſonnes and daughters borne unto him. It being before ſhewed, how David ſtrengthened himſelfe by the friendſhip of a foraine King; now it is ſhewed, how hee ſtrengthened himſelfe by contracting affinity with the Princes and Lords of that part of his Kingdome which hee laſt obtained, which hee did not through any diſtruſt in God, but becauſe hee would uſe the meanes of confirmation.
His concubines were his wives alſo, but called by another name, to intimate that they were ſecundary wives, and not the principall, ſee 1 Chron. 14.
Cloſ. Ord. 3. And it was then tolerated to take wives and concubines for a myſticall ſignification, as Davids wives ſignified more Churches of Jewes and Gentiles joyned by faith unto Chriſt, when hee commeth to reigne over all; and his concubines ſects of Heretiques in theſe Churches; and more children borne unto him, more now converted to the Faith: and their names agree, Samua, boldneſſe; Sobab, turning; Jabaar, hee hath choſen, &c. ſo the Gloſſe: but
P. Martyr. now to have more wives is not tolerable. Peter Martyr maketh a queſtion whether it were tolerable for David to take ſo many, for beſides eight wives, wee ſee afterwards that his concubines were ten; where it is noted, that Abſalom Deut: 17. 17. went in unto them, becauſe the King is forbidden by the Law of God to multiply wives, and that which hee did now ſwallow downe with ſo great pleaſure, hee was made to vomit up againe, when Abſalom having gone in to his concubines, hee ſhut them up, and would never company with them any more; neither could this great company of wives and concubines ſatisfie him, but hee committed adultery with the wife of Uriah alſo. For the word concubine, hebr. פלגש in Latin pellex, yet it is rendred concubina, becauſe ſuch were wives alſo, but of an inferiour rank, and ſervants to the wives, neither did Juriſperiti. their children inherit. Between pellex and concubina, ſome make this difference, amongſt humane Writers, that pellex was of a marryed man, concubina of a ſingle.
Yet Suetonius contrary to this, ſaith, that Veſpaſian after the death of his wiſe, when he was now not marryed, took unto himſelf, multas pellices. For the names of his children, two more be, 1 Chron. 14.4,5. viz. Noga, and Elpalet, and Beliada, for Eliada, but thoſe two happily were borne unto him afterwards, and one might bee called either Eliada, or Beliada. Kimhi thinketh, that here the children of his wives are reckoned, but there, of his concubines, but why then are no concubines there ſpoken of, but wives onely?

V. 17. Then the Philiſtims hearing that David was anointed King, they came to ſeeke him, and hee went downe to the Hold. The cauſe of their comming against Hugo Card. David, ſaith Hugo, was for that they feared now, hee being King, that they ſhould loſe their Tribute in Iſrael, which is not improbable, becauſe when they fought againſt Saul, and overcame him, the Iſraelites were made ſubject Peter Martyr. unto them. Peter Martyr ſaith, that having been quiet all the time that there were warres between Davids houſe and Sauls, for they thought then that they would not meddle with them, but ſuffer them to conſume one another, which if they ſhould have ſtirred againſt them, they would not have done, but rather being forced hereunto, joyned together againſt the common enemy. But now ſeeing them to agree together to make David King over all the Land, they thought it high time to renew their warres againſt them, leſt they ſhould grow too mighty. And herein the providence of God wrought ſingularly in bringing them out, that they might reape the juſt reward of their former inſolencies, when they had gotten the victory, in that they vaunted ſo much of it, and aſcribed it to their Idols, who were alſo now taken by David, and burnt, as followeth, v. 21. There was alſo a Providence, that David made not warre firſt upon them, leſt hee ſhould have ſeemed ungratefull for his entertainment in times paſt amongſt them. Touching the Hold that hee went unto, when hee heard of their comming, it was either the Tower of Sion, or ſome other, whither hee went, not for feare, but to ſtay till hee had direction from the Lord in ſo weighty a buſineſſe, thus Martyr: but it cannot bee the Tower of Sion, to which David now went, ſeeing it is ſaid, hee deſcended; and by the deſcription of an adventure made by three of Davids mighty men; 1 Chron. 11. 15. it may bee gathered particularly, that this Hold was the cave of Adullam, not farre from Jeruſalem, neare unto which was the valley of Rephaim, becauſe it is ſaid there, that the Philiſtims were then in the valley of Rephaim, and David in this Hold, thirſting for ſome water at Bethlehem. Junius ſaith, hee deſcended out of the ſtrong Hold of Sion, to the foot thereof, and ſtayed there till hee had inquired, and the words will beare this reading, Hee deſcended out of the Hold, for the particle אל here uſed, doth not onely ſignifie ad, but ſometimes de; but I preferre the former. Here David inquiring of the Lord, received anſwer, that hee ſhould goe againſt the Philiſtims, and they ſhould bee delivered into his hands; and then going to Baal-Perazim, hee ſmote them there, but this name is given to that place by anticipation; for it was before called the valley of Rephaim, being about 3 miles from Ieruſalem, and in the way to Bethlehem; it was thus firſt called by David in remembrance of this victory, that the name might bee a monument of his continuall thankfulneſſe, Baal-Perazim ſignifieth the Plaine or field of diviſions, becauſe the enemies were there forced to flee divers wayes when they were overcome, as before in comming to the warre, they had been united in one body. And David in giving this name, ſaith, That God had divided them as waters, to ſhew, with what facility this was done, even as waters are eaſily divided.

Junius.

V. 19, 20.

Lyra.
Peter Martyr.

And there they left their Images, and David and his men burnt them. 1 Chron. 14. 12. they are called their Gods; and it is ſaid, that David gave a commandement that they ſhould be burnt there. They brought them with them to the battall, ſaith Lyra, hoping by their help to get the victory. The Vulg. Latine hath it onely, David and his men tooke them, but Lyra confeſſeth theſe words, they burnt them, to bee in the Hebrew, and therefore in expounding it, ſupplyeth them. Hugo will have this place Baal-perazim ſo called from thoſe Idols, becauſe Baal is the name of Heathen gods, from which they were now divided. But becauſe David himſelfe who gave this name, rendreth the former reaſon, it is to bee preferred. David in burning theſe Idols did according to the Law, Deut. 7. which commanded it, and that no uſe ſhould be made of the gold and ſilver of them, and ſo Moſes burnt the golden Calfe.

V. 21.
1 Chron. 14. 12

Lyra.

Hugo Cardin.

Exod. 32. 10.

V. 22.

And the Philiſtims came again to the valley of Rephaim, &c. having gathered new forces, and ſtrengthened themſelves more, they now made account of better ſucceſſe; but David againe inquiring of the Lord, was bidden to fetch a compaſſe, and to hide himſelfe and his men behinde them, behind the Mulberry trees that grew there, and when hee heard a ſound upon the tops of the Mulberry trees to come upon them, for hereby hee might know that God was gone out before him to deſtroy them, that is, ſaith Lyra, by his Angels. Some ſay, that the ſound was of winds raiſed up to terrifie the Philiſtims: Ben Gerſon, that a noiſe was thus made, that Davids comming upon them with his Army might not bee heard; but it is plainely ſaid, that it was the ſigne of the Lords going out before him, for it was the ſound of one going upon the trees, ſo

that

H.B. Patriarks travailes.
1 Chr. 14. 15, 16.
Gloſſa Ordin.
Lyra.

that the Angel of the Lord went and ſmote the Philiſtims, and ſo they fell from Geba even to Gazar, the firſt of theſe places being neare to Kireathjearim, the other 18 miles off. Junius ſaith, that Geba was Gibeon in Benjamin, and thus it is called, 1 Chron: 14. 15. and it is further added, that David now grew famous in all lands, and they were afraid of him v: 16. The Vulgar Latin, for Mulberries, hath Peare-trees, pyrorum, vel flentium, as Gloſſt Ordin: and that it was called the place of men weeping, becauſe they had left their Idols there, which Idols doe give to ſuch as ſerve them nothing, but occaſion of ſorrowing and weeping, when as expecting helpe from them they finde none, and they bring them to everlaſting weeping in Hell. This double overthrow of the Philiſtims by David, ſaith Lyra, doth morally ſignifie the double overthrow of the Jewes by Chriſtians, firſt in their owne, then in other Countries.

CHAP. VI.

V. 1, 2.
1 Chron: 13. 1.

D*AVID* having aſſembled together 30000 choſen men of Iſrael goeth with them to fetch the Arke of God from Kireathjearim, to the City of David, &c. The hiſtory is ſet forth 1 Chr: 13. before his two victories over the Philiſtims, for they follow ch. 14. and it is there more full, he conſulted firſt with the Captaines of thouſands and hundreths, and with every leader, and then ſpake to all the Congregation, about the bringing of the Arke from Baalah, which is Kireathjearim in Judah, but here it is ſaid onely, that they went to bring it from Baal of Judah, and v: 4. they brought it from the houſe of Abinadab in Gibeah, which was another name of the ſame place, or may be taken appellatively, as it is by Junius, rendering it the hill, and there alſo David is brought in ſaying, that they enquired not at the Arke in the dayes of Saul, which is here omitted. But betwixt that relation and this there may ſeeme to bee a maniſeſt difference, becauſe here onely 30000, who were all the choſen men of Iſrael were aſſembled to conduct the Arke with honour, there all Iſrael from Sihor of Ægypt even to the entring in of Hamath, v: 5. that is, from the uttermoſt part of the land from the South to the North. But this is eaſily reconciled: for at the firſt 30000 onely were aſſembled of the chiefe, then all the reſt, to call whom together meſſengers were ſent out into all parts. And for the difference in the time, happily ſo ſoone as the Jebuſites were expelled out of the ſtrong fort of Sion, he entered into conſultation with his Commanders about this bringing of the Arke up thither, and it being agreed upon, that after preparation made for it, viz: a Tabernacle built to place it in, of which ſee, v: 17. thoſe warres with the Philiſtims might happen in the meane ſeaſon, and ſo ſoone as they were ended, according to this hiſtory, theſe things were done, but conſulted about before, according to 1 Chr: 13. for which cauſe, that conſultation being mentioned, that which followed is alſo there related together by anticipation.

Peter Martyr.
Note.

By this care, which David had about the Arke, ſo ſoone as he had gotten the place, which he knew by the Spirit, that the Lord would chooſe to ſet it in, his great piety appeared, farre beyond that of Saul, who ſet his minde upon no ſuch matter, that all Kings might learne by his example, and in that hee would not doe this without the adviſe of his Lords, he ſet downe a right way of proceeding in matters of Religion, viz: the councell of all the States of the Land being herein uſed, contrary to which is the manner of the proceeding of the Church of Rome, which excludeth Emperours and Kings and Princes from being of the Councell, or being ſuch, as that their conſent is neceſſary to the conſtitutions made therein.

V. 2.

In ſpeaking of the Arke he calleth it the Arke of God, whoſe name is called by the name of the Lord of hoaſts, that dwelleth betweene the Cherubims, 1 Chron. 13. 6. the Arke of God the Lord, who dwelleth betweene the Cherubims, whoſe name is called on it, thus our new tranſlation: But the Vulgar Latin more agreeably to the Hebrew, upon which the name of the Lord of Hoaſts, who ſitteth betweene

the

he Cherubims, is called. For thus the Hebrew, upon which the name, the name of the Lord, &c. and thus there is no difference from that, 1 Chr: 13.6. and the meaning is, according to Martyr, that the Arke was called by the name of the Lord, becauſe it was an holy ſacrament or ſigne repreſenting the Lord, ſee the like ſaying, Joſh: 3. 11. the Arke of the Covenant, the Lord of the whole earth, ſo likewiſe ſaith he, the Altar ſet up Gen: 17. is called by the name of God, and Gideons Altar, and Hieru*ſalem*, Ezek: 18. Auguſt: ad Bonifacium Epiſtola, ſaith, that ſacraments doe commonly beare the name of the thing repreſented hereby. Cyprian Serm: de cœna Domini, the ſame name is common to the ſignes and to the thing ſignifyed. Cyril:lib:4. in Johan: cap: 10. the fathers did eate Chriſt when they eate Manna, which was ſo called, and Theodoret and other Fathers ſpeake to the ſame effect, which maketh againſt them, that will have no trope in theſe words, this is my body.

Peter Martyr.

V.3. And they ſet the Arke of God upon a new cart, &c. Thus the Philiſtims had ſent the Arke home before, 1 Sam: 6. wherefore it diſpleaſed God, that his people ſhould doe after the manner of thoſe heathens, and not carry it upon mens ſhoulders, as was appointed by his law, and therefore he ſmote Vzzah that he dyed, when the Arke being ſhaken he put forth his hand to touch it. For the Hebrewes doe generally hold, that not his touching of the Arke was the cauſe of this judgement, but the manner of carrying it. Whereas it may ſeeme otherwiſe, becauſe he was not ſmitten, till he touched it, it is anſwered, that then firſt the errour appeared in ſetting it upon a cart to bee drawne, when it was ſhaken, which had not happened, if it had beene carryed upon mens ſhoulders. If it be further objected, then Abio one of the guides of the cart ſhould have beene ſmitten as well as his brother Vzzah. Anſw: Vzzah was the principall that would have it thus carryed, and therefore he onely was made an example, thus Lyra. Jerom in tradit: in Paralip: ſaith, that Abinadab bade Vzzah carry the Arke, but hee deſpiſing his command ſet it upon a cart. Comeſtor ſaith, that the Hebrewes affirme, that he lay with his wiſe the night before. Joſephus, that he was ſmitten becauſe he touched the Arke being no Prieſt: but Comeſtor, that when hee touched the Arke, his arme withered, wherewith hee ſhould have carried it, and ſo hee dyed. Peter Martyr alſo ſpeaketh of this, as the cauſe, why Vzzah was ſmitten, and hee applyeth it allegorically to the Church, which the Biſhops ſhould beare, as it were, upon their owne ſhoulders, whereas they contrariwiſe cauſe it to be carryed by ſubſtitutes, who are many of them, as ſtupid and ignorant, and ſenſuall, as brute beaſts, they themſelves in the meane ſeaſon living in idleneſſe and pleaſure, but God will ſurely judge them alſo therefore, and not onely them, but all others that eate the fat of the flocke by getting the beſt benefices, but expoſe the Arke of Chriſts Church to danger, by committing it to weake and vicious curates. Hugo indeed, becauſe he was a Biſhop, applyeth it otherwiſe, by the Arke underſtanding a Biſhop, being as that, all golden within, which is when hee is without all ſcruple of conſcience, and without, when hee is without ſcandall of life: againe the Biſhop ſhould have within him, as the Arke, the Tables of the law, and Deuteronomy, which is, when hee hath the knowledge of the old and new Teſtament, the rodde of Aaron, by modeſt, diſcreet and profitable diſcipline, and the pot of manna, that is, conſolation. This Arke is drawne in a cart, when the Biſhop is provoked to wrath by the murmurings of his ſubjects, and Vzzah ſtretcheth out his hand unto it, when any of the Biſhops ſubjects proudly reproveth him, who is not, as Gregory ſaith, to be ſmitten with the ſword of the mouth, no not when he doth things worthy of reproofe; but this ſavours of the pride of Rome. Et ſi Papa innumeras animas ſecum in gehennam trahat, nemo audeat dicere, Domine Papa cur ita facis? Lyra recounteth alſo another opinion of ſome, that Vzzah was ſmitten, becauſe hee touched the bare Arke with his hand, but this he ſheweth is improbable, ſeeing the Arke was never wont to bee carryed, but being firſt wrapped about with cloathes by the Prieſts. I reſt in the firſt, which is the more confirmed becauſe v. 13. it is the next time carryed by men, 1 Chr. 15.15. And here I cannot o-

Numb: 4. 15. 7. 9.
Lyra.
Schol.Hiſtor.
P.Martyr.
An allegory.
Hugo Card.
Lyra.

mit

Gloſ: Ord.
The Allegory of Abinadab.

mit another allegory of the Ord: Gloſſ: holding, that the Arke was a figure of the Church, the abiding thereof in private in Abinadabs houſe a long time ſetteth forth the true faith and Church being long within the family of Abraham, and this was the ſame faith of the Church, which is now preached, being then embraced by the followers of Abraham; and it was in an hill, becauſe of the high example of vertue given by thoſe beleevers. But when David, that is, Chriſt, came to raigne under the Goſpel, it was brought forth with great joy by 30000 choſen, ſetting forth the elect amongſt the Jewes, but afterwards they ſhall all come to the Arke of faith, and ſo all Iſrael accompanieth it, to ſet forth which alſo, the Arke had two bringings out, 1. to the houſe of ObedEdom, 2. ſometime being interpoſed to the City of David. The muſicke with divers ſorts of inſtruments made before the Arke, when it was carryed out upon a new cart, figured out the divers graces of the Spirit given to divers when the faith was firſt publiſhed, a new right of baptizing being inſtituted, filling them with wonderfull joy: the comming of it to the threſhing floore of Nabor, that is, prepared, where the Oxen ſhaking it, Uzzah put forth his hand, &c. the Churches going forward by increaſing, untill it came to the Gentiles, who were as a floore purged, according to that, hee ſhall throughly purge his floore, at what time the preachers of the Goſpell ſhaked the arke by ſpeaking freely againſt the rites of the Law, as Circumciſion, Sabbaths keeping &c. expounding all myſtically and ſpiritually, whereat the Jewes being offended, ſought ſo eagerly to uphold them, that they fell into the judgement of infidelity to their owne deſtruction.

Gregory.

Gregory from the three examples of David humbling himſelfe to play and dance before the Arke, Michal deſpiſing him proudly for ſo doing, and Uzzah raſhly putting forth his hand to the Arke, ſaith, that morally humility is commended, becauſe humble David had ſoone after a promiſe of the perpetuity of his kingdom in Chriſt, that ſhould come of him; pride is condemned, becauſe Michal was puniſhed with barrenneſſe; and raſhneſſe in putting forth the hand to receive the Lords body by the unworthy judged, and ſuch are they, that preſume to come unprepared, becauſe Uzzah was ſmitten with death for raſhly touching the Arke, and the ſame is affirmed of unworthy receivers 1 Cor: 11. 30. Againe he applieth the fact and fall of Uzzah to ſuch, as not underſtanding the actions and ſpeeches of the learned, preſume raſhly to judge them, ſaying, oft times the doings and ſayings of the better diſpleaſe the worſer, but they are not raſhly to be reproved of them, which they cannot underſtand. For this is with Uzzah raſhly to reach out the hand to the Arke, ſeeming to him ready to fall, and ſo as he, thinking to helpe, loſt his life, the infirme reprove the doings of the ſtrong, and are cut off from the land of the living, for what is the minde of the juſt, but the Arke of the Teſtimony, ſeeing it is therein conteined? And thus onely doth Gregory ſpeake againſt a mans preſuming to reprove the Biſhop, when hee ſeemeth to him to erre, but indeed doth not. Upon this carrying of the Arke from place to place in ſtate, the Papiſts ground their pompeous carrying about of the Hoaſt: for when the Pope, ſaith Martyr, goeth out of Rome, it is carryed in a pixe upon a moſt white horſe, and on either ſide are men appointed with wax candles and bels, and the horſe is ſo inſtructed, as that when hee is led to the Temple, he goeth up to the High Altar, and there kneeleth downe upon his knees, untill the Hoaſt bee taken off againe and there placed, intolerable idolatrous madneſſe. For the Arke was by Gods commandement to be carryed in ſtate, but the bread in the Sacrament onely to be received and eaten, and not to be carryed about. Much honour indeed may ſeeme by this circumgeſtation, to bee given unto it, but it is beſides the ordinance of our Lord, and therefore to bee condemned as well as this new device of Uzzah, to carry the Arke upon a new cart, which the Lord never appointed.

Hic intuendum eſt, quantum delinquit, qui ad corpus domini reus accedit, ſi ille morte mulctatur, qui arcam, corporis Domini figuram, minore, quam debuit veneratione corripuit.

Levites adjuvans manum extendit ſed delinquens vitam perdidit, quia dum infirmi fortium facta corripiunt, ab ipſa viventium ſorte reprobantur.

Peter Martyr.

Junius.
Lyra.
Peter Martyr.

And when they came to the threſhing floore of Nachon, 1 Chron. 13.9. the threſhing floore of Chidon, another name ſaith Junius and Lyra of the ſame thing: Martyr thinketh, that it was ſo called becauſe there Joſhua had lifted up his ſpeare, and Nachon, becauſe there the Levites were prepared of God, and endued with new ſtrength to carry the Arke, but theſe hee paſſes over as not worthy the ſtanding upon, here the Oxen were diſordered in their going, it being Gods will that it ſhould bee ſo, to teach men their errours by the brute beaſts, as Balaam was taught by his Aſſe. And hee ſaith, ſome of the Hebrewes thinke, that Vzzab was ſmitten, becauſe hee beleeved not that God was able to uphold his owne Arke from falling without his helpe, but hee reſteth upon theſe two cauſes, touching which an expreſſe charge is given, Numb. 4. 15. 1 For that they did not carry it upon their ſhoulders. 2 Becauſe hee touched it, which was forbidden upon paine of death. And to carry it upon mens ſhoulders was commanded, leſt if it were carried otherwiſe, it ſhould ſometime fall, and ſo a conceit come into the peoples mindes of impotency in God. How Vzzab was ſmitten, it is not ſaid, ſome thinke with a Thunder-bolt, ſome as Jerom following Joſephus, ſo as that his arme and ſhoulder withered. Auguſt. his breath being ſuddenly ſtopped, as by an Apoplexy. It is not to bee thought yet but that Vzzab was a good man, although he erred at this time, for even the holy fathers of the Church have had their errors, that wee may take heed of following any man in every thing. The Pope applyed this once againſt the Emperour ſeeking by his edicts to reforme ſome things that were amiſſe in the Church, threatning him with deſtruction, as it befell Vzzab; but herein hee groſſly erred, ſeeing Hezekiah, Joſiah, Theodoſius, Arcadius and Honorius, godly Kings and Emperours, did the like and were commended. Thus the Donatiſts, as Auguſt. ſheweth tooke it ill, that their controverſies ſhould come to the knowledge of the civill Magiſtrate, but hee upon Pſal. 2. Bee wiſe yee Kings, ſerve the Lord, &c. ſheweth, that they cannot ſerve him better, or more, then by helping and reſtoring the Church of God.

Note.

Aug. Contra, Donatiſtas.

V. 8.
Peter Martyr.

Then David was angry, becauſe God had made a breach in Vzzab, &c. Hee was not angry ſaith Martyr with God, who puniſhed, but becauſe the Levites had erred from the preſcript rule of Gods Law, whereby hee was provoked to this ſeveritie, and happily at his owne ſinne, who had ſuffered the Arke ſo to bee carried, and that others might for ever after bee warned by this example to goe in every thing about holy matters according to rule, and feare to follow their owne phantaſies, hee gave the place a new name, Perez Vzzab, that is, the breach in Vzzab. And David feared the Lord in that day, &c. that is, he was afraid that this judgement might proceed further, even to him alſo, and to his Citie in Zion, if the Arke were carried thither, as ſometime the men in Bethſhemeſh were deſtroyed for the Arkes ſake. And hee feared and was troubled the more without doubt, becauſe the people might now begin to thinke, that hee was not in ſo good grace with God, in that at the very firſt he was ſo croſſed in that, wherein hee thought to have gotten him the greateſt credit, viz. in ſhewing to have a care of Religion and to further that, and to honour the Arke of God all that hee could. Lyra alſo ſaith, that David was not angry with God, but for the errour of theſe men, but this is aſſigned for the cauſe of his anger, becauſe God had made a breach, and not becauſe the Levites, under whoſe charge the Arke was, did ſo raſhly, wherefore I thinke rather, that David ſinned here of infirmitie, as any holy man might doe, and that great diſcontent wrought a while with him to make him deſiſt from his enterpriſe of carrying the Arke into his Citie, and to place it by the way in the houſe of Obed-Edom the Gittite. Thus alſo Peter Martyr, who ſaith, that either David knew certainly from God, that the Arke was to bee removed to his Citie at that time, and if ſo, hee could not bee free from fault, in that he proceeded not, or elſe hee attempted this of his owne head without any warrant from God, and then he ſinned, becauſe hee did it without faith. Now for his cauſing of the Arke to turne aſide into the houſe of Obed-Edom; hee alſo inquireth whether it bee juſtifiable in him, to expoſe him by meanes of the

V. 9.

Lyra.

Peter Martyr.

Arke to the hazzard, which hee himſelfe declined, and anſwereth, that this man moſt probably being a good man and full of faith, deſired that it might bee brought to him, nothing fearing any ſuch danger, but accounting it an happineſſe to receive ſo holy a thing into his houſe. This Obed-Edom was a Levite, as appeareth 1 *Chron.*16.5. but whether Abinadab, in whoſe houſe it was before, were a Levite or no, is uncertaine, but it is to bee held rather, that hee was, and ſo it hath been held by all antiquitie; yet when I conſider 1 *Chron.*15. where David calleth the Levites to carry the Arke, acknowledging an errour to have been committed before about it, I cannot but thinke it juſtly a queſtion. Lyra. And a Gittite hee is ſaid to bee becauſe as Lyra hath it, hee lived a baniſht man in Gath of the Philiſtims countrey, as being one, that fled thither to David. Peter Martyr. Peter Martyr ſaith, hee might bee called ſo either becauſe hee was borne there, when the Philiſtims ruled over Iſrael, or hee might by them at that time bee ſent for and placed there for the execution of ſome office, quod vix credo.

V.11. Schol. Hiſtor. Here the Arke continued three moneths, and God bleſſed Obed-Edom,&c. The Hebrews, ſaith Comeſtor, will have this bleſſing to bee in prolification, his wives and concubines all conceiving, and his cattell bringing forth Twinnes, but this is uncertaine, onely it is certaine, that hee began ſuddenly to encreaſe Note. extraordinarily in worldly things, ſo that his neighbours perceived it, and told David of it: ſo Laban was bleſſed, when hee had Jacob in his houſe, and Potiphar, when hee had Joſeph; God will not bee an unprofitable gueſt to ſuch as entertaine him, the widow that entertained Elijah, his ſervant, was hereby preſerved in Famin, and the Shunamite that entertained Eliſhah was bleſſed with a ſonne; to give entertainement to ſuch is to give harbour, as it were, to the Arke of God as Obed-Edom, and ſo to bee in the way of receiving a rich bleſſing.

V.12. David hearing how greatly Obed-Edom was bleſſed by reaſon of the Arke, after that it had aboad there three moneths, hee fetcheth it with joy to his Peter Martyr. owne Citie. In theſe three moneths ſpace, Martyr thinketh that David had thoſe other ſignes of Gods favour, which are related betwixt his firſt attempt to remove the Arke unto him, and this, 1 Chron. 14. viz. Hirams ſending unto him Cedars and workmen, and the two great victories over the Philiſtims, whereby hee being more confirmed put away all feare and brought the Arke home unto him. And whereas theſe things are in this booke ſaid to have been done before any mention made of the Arkes remove, hee thinketh, that order is not herein kept. But it ſeemeth rather to mee, that order is kept in this booke, but not, 1 *Chron.*13.14. becauſe it is not likely, that David immediatly after the great feare and trouble of mind, into which hee was caſt upon the death of Vzzah, would reſolve, that God had now eſtabliſhed the kingdome unto him, and multiply his wives, as is ſaid 1 Chron. 14.2. and neither in this booke nor in Chronicles is it ſaid, that his great victories were any motive in part to bring the Arke unto him, but onely Gods bleſſing upon the houſe where it was. How that in Chron. may bee reconciled with this for order, ſee before upon Verſ. 1. 1 Chron.15.1. And 1 Chron. 15. 1. that which is briefly here ſpoken, that David tooke the Arke out of the houſe of Obed-Edom and brought it into his owne Citie, is more fully ſet forth thus. A place being prepared for the Arke of God, and a Tabernacle made, hee ſaid, none ſhall bring the Arke but Levites,&c. and here it is to bee underſtood, that hee did not now firſt make a Schol.hiſtor. Tabernable, but this was done before his firſt attempting to bring the Arke home unto him. Wherefore Comeſtor ſpeaketh of this before the Arkes firſt remove, ſaying, that David made a Tabernacle for the Arke neare his owne houſe, and tooke for it ſome of the old Curtaines, and reſerved the former Tables, Pillars, and Baſes, although the making of this Tabernacle bee not here ſpoken of, till Verſ. 17. where it is mentioned notwithſtanding, as made before, for they are ſaid, to have put the Arke in the Tabernacle, which David Lyra. had made. This, as Lyra admoniſheth, was not the ſame, which Moſes had made, but another, for that ſtood ſtill at Gabaah, being a long time disjoyned from the Arke, and happily being now too old to bee removed David made another

1 Chion.15.3.
V.12.
P.Martyr.
Lyra.
Sallianus.

another for the Arke. Then hee aſſembled all the Iſraelites againe to Jeruſalem,&c. and the ſonnes of Aaron and theſe Levites, of the ſonnes of Kohath, Vzziel and his family 120.&c. then David ſaid unto the chiefe, Sanctifie your ſelves to carry the Arke, for becauſe wee did not ſo at the firſt, the Lord brake in upon us,&c. And the Levites bare the Arke upon their ſhoulders, that is, ſaith Theodor. not ſome going before and ſome behind, for ſo the backes of thoſe that went before ſhould have beene towards the Arke, but going with their ſides one againſt another and the Arke in the middeſt. This gathering together of ſo great a multitude was both to carry the Arke to his place with the greater honour, and alſo as Martyr noteth, that all being preſent before the Arke might bee quickned the more to devotion, and by their preſence ſhew, that they would bee obedient in their ſeverall rankes and orders to God, a ſigne of whoſe preſence the Arke was, both Levites, ſouldiers and other people, as at the inauguration of Kings a great multitude of their ſubjects from all parts muſt come and attend in token of their ſubjection, yet the way was not farre, that the Arke was now carried, for Obed-Edoms houſe was, as Lyra ſaith, in the ſuburbs of Jeruſalem, for which cauſe the people were gathered thither together, and are not ſaid to have gone to any other place for it, whereas the Levites are ſaid to beare the Arke, Verſ. 15. Sallianus contendeth, that theſe Levites were Prieſts, herein following Joſephus: for when the Arke at any time was carried with greateſt honour, it was done by Prieſts, as over Jordan, about Jericho, and into Solomons Temple, neither doth it make againſt it here, that the children of Levi were ſaid to carry it, becauſe the Prieſts alſo were the children of Levi, and whereas it was committed to the Levites, that came of Cohath to bee carried, Numb. 4.7. hee ſaith, this was meant commonly in the Wilderneſſe from ſtation to ſtation, but when it was to bee carried in more ſtate, the Prieſts were the men, that muſt carry it, as Deut. 31.9. they are ſpoken of, the Prieſts that beare the Arke of the Lord. Whereas in bidding them to ſanctifie themſelves and their brethren, of the Prieſts onely Zadok and Abiathar being named, but of the Levites many, it is to bee underſtood that there were notwithſtanding many Prieſts more, but theſe two were the chiefe, for 1 Chro. 24. they are diſtinguiſhed into 24. orders.

1 Chron. 15. 26.
2 Sam.6.13:
Lyra.
Toſtatus.
Pellican.
Sallianus.

And when God helped the Levites that bare the Arke, they offered ſeven Bullocks and ſeven Rammes: When they that bare the Arke had gone ſix paces, hee ſacrificed Oxen and Fatlings; the vulgar Latine, they ſacrificed an Oxe, and a Sheepe, and a Ram, and this helping of the Levites who carried the Arke Lyra underſtandeth according to ſome Rabbins in making it to feele ſo light, that they which carried it ſeemed to themſelves as carrying nothing. But this is rejected by Toſtatus, and ſome others, holding that God helped them by giving them alacritie in this worke extraordinary, even when they firſt began to take the Arke upon their ſhoulders. Pellican ſaith that God helped them, when hee ſhewed them mercy and ſmote none of them, as hee had done Vzzah before, and ſome Rabbins, that Vzzah had beene ſmitten, when hee had gone but ſix paces, therefore they now being all ſafe at the ſixth pace make a ſtand and offer ſacrifice. But to let this paſſe as a conjecture, it is to bee thought, that by Gods helping the Levites at this time is not onely meant his ſparing of them, or giving them alacritie, but extraordinarily ſtrengthning them in this worke, ſo as that by reaſon of their great ſtrength, or becauſe a divine power inviſibly ſupported the Arke together with them, it ſeemed light unto them. At which ſigne of Gods ſpeciall preſence thus giving approbation to this enterpriſe, they were ſo moved, that they ſtood ſtill, till ſacrifices were offered unto God in way of thankſgiving. But whereas they are ſaid to have ſacrificed ſeven Bullocks and ſeven Rams, but according to the vulgar Latine, 2 Sam. 6.13. a Bullock and a Ram; Sallianus the Jeſuite ſaith, that this difference may bee reconciled thus, there was a Bullock and a Ram ſacrificed in every company of the Levites, which were ſeven; of the ſacrificing of one of which companies onely it is taken, 2 Sam. 6.13. but of all, 1 Chron. 15. and this hee groundeth upon the vulgar Latine alſo, wherein it is ſaid immediatly before, there were with David

ſeven companies and the ſacrifice of a Calſe, but this, as Lyra well noteth, is not in the Hebrew, but hath beene by ſome ignorantly inſerted, although hee bee therefore taxed by Sallianus for greater raſhneſſe in putting it out, then the inſerters for ignorance in putting it in. But cleaving to the Hebrew, wee ſhall not need any ſuch device to reconcile the hiſtories, ſeeing in that tongue there is no difference. And truly this is but a poore one; for if ſeven ſacrifices were at one time offered in ſeven companies, there muſt needs bee ſeven Altars, whereas certainly there was but one altar of the Lord before the Arke.

V. 14. And David danced before the Lord with all his might, being girded with a linnen
1 Chron.15.27 Ephod, David was cloathed with a robe of fine linnen, and all the Levites which bare the Arke: His Kingly robes being put off, hee arrayed himſelfe now like one of the Levites out of his great humilitie. Now although there were ſome Ephods of linnen for the Prieſts which were holy, and therefore not to bee worne by any but Prieſts, yet it was free for any man elſe to make him ſuch an upper garment of linnen, and to weare it, and it was commendable in miniſtring about the Arke ſo to doe. For even the Levites voluntarily in immitation of the Prieſts did weare Ephods, and not by vertue of any precept of the Law; Theod. in wherefore Theodoret ſaith, there were Prieſtly ſuper-induments and there were 1 Chron. common, and without doubt David being a godly King would not dare to put on the Prieſtly but the common.

V. 17. And they brought the Arke and ſet it in his place in the middeſt of the Tabernacle that David had pitched for it: what Tabernacle David had made for the Arke is not ſaid before, but that hee built himſelfe an houſe, Chap. 11.12. it muſt therefore bee underſtood, that it was within his owne palace, yet in ſuch a place there, as that the people might from all parts freely reſort unto it. For that it was within the limits of his owne habitation appeareth, becauſe hee had before ſaid, how ſhall I bring the Arke to me, Chap.6.9. Toſtatus thinketh, that this place was a great Palace with a large Hall, and Porch before it, and lodgings about it for the Prieſts, Singers and Porters that ſerved there.
But why did hee make a Tabernacle or Tent for the Arke and not an houſe?
Peter Martyr. Peter Martyr anſwereth, that hee knew that the Arke muſt bee removed againe, and hee had it then in his mind to build a Temple, wherefore in the meane ſeaſon hee thought it beſt to place it in a Tent, as Moſes at the firſt had done.

V. 19. And David bleſſed the people, and dealt to every one, both men and women, a cake of bread, a piece of fleſh, and a flagon of wine; this bleſſing was by praying for them, as Solomon afterwards did, and this munificence was more, then wee read of to have been done at his inauguration to the Kingdome, ſhewing, that he was more joyfull for the Arke of God brought home unto him, then for his Kingdom; and this bounty tended greatly to the reconciling of all his ſubjects minds unto him, who had been before divided, and therefore hee did Sallianus. moſt wiſely herein. Some ſay that his bleſſing of the people, was not onely a praying for them, but alſo a praiſing of them for their chearfull attendance about this ſervice in tranſporting the Arke, as wee are ſaid to bleſſe God when wee praiſe him. Now before the diſmiſſe of the people mentioned at the end 1 Chron.16.4, of v. 19. it is further ſhewed at the ſame time, 1 Chron. 16.4. that David appointed Levites and Prieſts by name to miniſter before the Arke by ſinging and muſick, and blowing of Trumpets, delivering to Aſaph the Pſalme to bee ſung continually in praiſing God, verſe 7, 8, 9, &c. and the Prieſts and Levites that ſhould ſerve at the Tabernacle in the High-place at Gibeon, ver. 39,40, &c. But V. 39.40. when or how the Tabernacle was brought to Gibeon, is not recorded. It was ſet up in Shiloh by Ioſhua, and there it abode till Elies death, from thence wee Ioſh. 18. read of no more remove made thereof, but doe gather that it was removed after that the Arke was taken by the Philiſtims, from 1 Sam. 21. where the High-priest and the Shewbread are ſpoken of, as being at Nob, and therefore the Tabernacle. And happily before that it was carryed to Mizpeh, for thither the people by Samuels direction aſſembled to ſeek the Lord, and to make Saul

King, and from Mizpeh to Gilgal, where they met to renew the Kingdome, and many ſacrifices were offered, and from thence to Nob where it is next found, and from Nob to Gibeon, as here appeareth; and in this place what Prieſts and Levites ſhould attend to ſacrifice, and to doe other ſervice required by the Law, David now directeth, and what at the place newly erected for the Arke to praiſe God daily there. So that from henceforth to the building of Solomons Temple, it ſeemeth, that there were two places for publique adoration, but the ſacrifices were offered at the Tabernacle, for which cauſe Solomon is ſaid there to have offered a thouſand burnt-offerings. And this might well bee, whilſt the Arke and Tabernacle were disjoyned, becauſe either of them was made to bee an holy ſigne of Gods preſence, and the Law againſt ſacrificing in divers places, was not hereby tranſgreſſed, ſith the meaning was to avoid the worſhipping of falſe Gods, of which there could hereby bee no danger, whether ſacrifices were offered at the Tabernacle, as they were daily, or before the Arke, as they were alſo ſometimes, 1 Chron. 16. 1. Touching the Pſalme of praiſe henceforth to bee ſung continually before the Arke, the firſt part taken out of Pſal. 105. unto theſe words, Touch not mine anointed, ſay the Hebrews in Seder Olam, were ſung in the morning; and the other part beginning with theſe words, Sing unto the Lord all the earth, taken out of Pſal. 96. in the evening. Theſe things being thus ordered, thr people departed, and David returned to bleſſe his owne houſe, that is, to pray for a bleſſing upon them of his owne houſe in particular, as hee had done for all in generall, and with them to praiſe God and to feaſt, and make them good chear, for ſo Abigail, when ſhe brought ſome good refreſhing to David, prayed him to take that bleſſing.

1 Sam: 7.
1 Sam: 10. 17.
1 Sam: 11. 15.
1 King 3. 4.
Sider Olam.
1 Chron: 16. 43.
1 Sam: 25.
2 Sam: 6. 20

Then Michal came out to meet David, and ſaid, How glorious was the King of Iſrael to day, who uncovered himſelfe, &c. It was ſaid before, that ſhee ſaw him leaping and dancing before the Arke, and deſpiſed him in her heart, v. 16. David to expreſſe his joy in the Lord, would needs bee one amongſt the Levites, that ſhould play upon an Inſtrument and dance as the Arke paſſed on, thus ſhewing his great humility. But Michal his wife moſt bitterly upbraided him by it, as not becomming a King. Indeed amongſt the Romans, Nero and Caligula Emperours, are both blamed for dancing publiquely, and it was counted a curſed thing to be a dancer amongſt them, and a certain Noble woman is accuſed by Cicero, becauſe ſhee could ſing and dance elegantly. Yet Livy ſaith, that Salii were the Prieſts of Mars, who indeed were Senators, and by the inſtitution of Numa, they went through the City carrying heavenly armes, ſinging and dancing, and herein chiefly ſtood their ſolemnities, when they ſacrificed. But howſoever it was amongſt the Heathen, David being rapt with heavenly joy, made theſe expreſſions unblamably before any; but Michal ſwelling with pride, and mad by reaſon of her Royall blood, as Gregory ſpeaketh. Yet ſhee hath found ſome to joyne with her in blaming David, as Toſtatus, who ſaith, that David was worthy to bee blamed for two things: 1 Becauſe hee leaped and danced, which was a point of childiſh levity, and not of grave manners. 2. Becauſe hee put off his Kingly apparell and put on an Ephod, and therefore Michal was in a manner juſtly angry with him; and Cajetan expoundeth his making of himſelfe naked by his being uncovered his armes, his legs, and his ſides, which was undecent, for the Ephod covered not theſe parts. And Theodoret and Procopius ſay, that Michal was a good woman, neither was her barrenneſſe laid upon her for this, but becauſe if ſhee had had a childe by David, it is moſt likely that the people would have ſtood for him to bee King, who did ſhine on both ſides with the glory of his ſtock, whereas the Lord would have none to reigne any more of the ſeed of Saul. But all other Expoſitors, although they acknowledge Michal otherwiſe a good woman, and a good and moſt loving wife to David, for ſhee adventured her owne life to ſave him from Saul, preferring rather her love to him, then to her father, yet they do herein altogether juſtifie David, as committing no indecorum, and blame her for thus bitterly deriding him. Shee thought indeed that it did not become his royall Majeſty to conſort thus with the common ſort, but that hee ſhould

Suetonius,
Cicer: pro Mar.
Livius l. 1.
Gregor. Mor. li 27. c. 27.
Toſtatus.
Cajetan.
Theodoret. qu. 21 2 Reg. Neque enim propter hoc manſit ſterilis, ſed ut nullus regnaret ex eo ſemine, eſt enim veriſimile populum prælaturum eum, qui utrinque generis claritate fulgeret.

have gone in his Royall ornaments in ſtate at this ſolemnity, and that to doe otherwiſe was a great diſhonour to him. And this made her to deſpiſe him in her heart, and to haſten to meet him returning home, that ſhee might upbraid him by it; and ſhee ſaid, hee uncovered himſelfe in the eyes of the handmaids of his ſervants, as a vaine fellow. Lyra. Lyra thinketh, that by theſe handmaids, ſhee meant his Concubines, and whereas hee anſwereth, that amongſt them hee ſhould bee had in more honour, hee underſtandeth it, becauſe they ſhould bear him children, which would make for the honour of his houſe, whereas ſhee ſhould never more bear him any. But becauſe ſhee ſpeaketh of the handmaids of his ſervants, it cannot bee ſo underſtood, but of women of a ſervile condition; and of women ſhee ſpeaketh rather then of men, becauſe, as it is more ſhamefull for a woman to doe any thing ridiculous and undecent before men, ſo it is for a man to doe thus before women. Davids anſwer to her was, as ſhee well deſerved, moſt bitter, for that hee remembred to her, Gods rejecting of her fathers houſe. V. 23. Touching her going without a childe to the day of her death; it is ridiculous which the Rabbins deliver, that ſhee had a childe, but dyed the ſame day that ſhee brought forth: neither is it of more credit that others ſay, that ſhee had children before by her other husband, or by David, but after this none; for it is plaine here that ſhee never had any, and yet the words of the text doe not imply, that for this mocking of David ſhee was puniſht with barrenneſſe, for although it bee in our tranſlation, therefore to Michal was no childe borne; the Hebrew may as well bee rendred, and to Michal, &c. ſhee was barren before, and happily for the reaſon brought by Theodoret, and the continuance of her barrenneſſe is here commemorated, as comming for this ſin againſt her husband.

CHAP. VII.

V. 1, 2. WHen David had reſt from all his enemies round about, hee ſaid to Nathan, I dwell in an houſe of Cedars, but the Ark of God within Curtaines. By theſe words hee intimated, that hee was deſirous to build an houſe for the Arke of God, not for any precept which the Lord had given to build one, for hee had onely ſpoken of a place which hee would chooſe, whereby Deut. 12. Lyra. yet Lyra gathereth, that David underſtood an houſe to bee meant, and that not without cauſe, for v. 10, 11. it is ſaid when they ſhould have reſt from all their enemies, God would chooſe him a place, and this time he thought was now come; but Davids motive was the indecorum that ſeemed to bee in it, that hee ſhould dwell in a ſtately Palace, and the Arke in a Tent, a like ſpeech unto which is afterwards uſed, Haggai 1. 4. And it was great piety in David, that hee purpoſed thus to doe out of thankfulneſſe to God, who had ſo highly promoted him. Toſtatus. Torniellus. 2 Sam. 8. For the time, it is generally thought to have been ſoone after the bringing of the Arke into this City, if it bee ſaid, hee had warres after this with the Philiſtims, Moabites, Syrians, and Edomites: Toſtatus anſwereth well, that when it is ſaid, hee had reſt from all his enemies, it is not meant, that hee had no warres with any enemies more, but after the double overthrow given to the Philiſtims which was before mentioned, all his enemies did ſo feare him, that none durſt fight againſt him any more, but hee went and fought againſt them, and ſubdued them, and inlarged his Kingdome more then all that Hieronym. in tradit. Hebr. went before him could doe. Touching the Prophet Nathan, with whom hee conſulted, ſome thinke that hee was Jonathan the ſonne of Semmaah the brother of David, one of Davids worthies, being otherwiſe called Nathan, but it agreeth not to a military man to bee a Prophet; wee read no more of him, but that hee was a Prophet, and very familiar with David, but of what kindred hee came, as Gad alſo, is uncertaine.

V. 3. Nathan ſaid to David, Doe all that is in thine heart, for the Lord is with thee: thus hee ſaid at the firſt by humane conjecture, and not by inſpiration, as a Prophet, and therefore hee was ſent againe the next day to reverſe it. Whence Martyr noteth, that even a Prophet may erre, if hee ſpeaketh any thing of himſelfe, Peter Martyr.

and not by the direction of Gods Word. So Samuel erred, when hee thought Eliab the eldeſt ſonne of Iſhai to bee the Lords anointed, but the true Prophet is ſoone made to ſee into his errour, and to recant. So Nathan the V.4. ſame night was better informed, the Lord deferred not to let him underſtand his will herein; becauſe David was ſo earneſtly ſet upon this worke, that it was not likely that hee would long deferre the going about it; unleſſe hee were ſoone warned to the contrary, eſpecially upon Nathans encouragement, making a vow without delay to provide a reſting place for the Arke, as Pſal. 132.
ſo Martyr. But according to Junius it is rather to bee held, that hee made that Junius.
Pſalme when hee brought the Arke into the Tabernacle, which hee had prepared in Zion, and therefore hee ſpeaketh not of an houſe, but of a Tabernacle,
v. 5. and of bringing the Arke from Kireath-jearim, v. 6. yet, as Lyra ſaith, Lyra.
the Lord knowing David to bee very forward, made haſte to reſtrain him from building a Temple, becauſe the time of building it ſet by God; was not yet come; and ſomething there is in that Pſalme intimating it to have been made now, as v. 12. where the promiſe of God concerning Davids ſonne is recited, which was not made till this time. The reaſons againſt his building now V. 5, 6. were: 1 Becauſe the Lord never ſpake word to any of the Judges of Iſrael about building him an houſe, nor yet to David, but was content to walke in a Tabernacle; and till ſuch time as the Lord giveth order for the building of a Temple, no man ought to attempt it. 2 Which is not mentioned here, but 1 Chron. 22. 11. Becauſe David had fought many battailes, and ſhed much blood, in the ſpeech of David to Solomon, and in the ſpeech of Solomon to King Hiram, 1 Kings 5. 3. becauſe hee made many warres againſt his enemies round about; which two places being compared together doe ſhew, as Toſtatus gathereth, Toſtatus.
that Davids many diſtractions by reaſon of his continuall warres, were the cauſe why hee could not build this houſe, eſpecially becauſe as is added, 1 Chron. 22. 9. Thou ſhalt have a ſonne who ſhall live in peace, whoſe name ſhall therefore bee Solomon, hee ſhall build mee an houſe; ſo that meerly his ſhedding of blood in battaile was not the cauſe hindring him from this worke, for God himſelfe directed him to fight theſe battailes, and fought for him, and ſhed this V.9.
blood, but becauſe a moſt peaceable time was neceſſary to goe about it. If it bee ſaid, God could have given David certain yeares of peace if it had pleaſed him wherein hee might have built: It is true, but it ſeemed good rather to him to reſpit the building of his houſe, till the reigne of one, all whoſe time ſhould be peaceable, to intimate the univerſall peace which ſhould be in the world when Chriſt ſhould come, who was figured out by the Temple, and the peace of conſcience coming by him. And accordingly it fel out, for he was born in the dayes of Auguſtus Cæſar, in whoſe time there was peace 40 yeares, and being juſtified by faith in him, wee have peace with God, who is therefore called the Prince of Peace. For the omitting of this reaſon here, it was left out to bee afterwards ſupplyed, and therefore all the words now ſpoaken by Nathan to David are not here ſet downe. Now in prohibiting David to build him an houſe, leſt he ſhould bee diſcouraged, as thinking himſelfe therefore not ſo much favoured by God, he addeth further a moſt gtacious meſſage to him, telling him, how much he had done for him, in raiſing him from a ſhepheard V. 8, 9.
to be a King, deſtroying his enemies, and giving him a name acccording to the names of the great ones upon earth, that is, not of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, as ſome thinke, but of great Kings raigning farre and wide, and bringing under their obedience many peoples: for ſo David came to have a name by ſubjecting his enemies. And this the Lord ſpake not by way of upbraiding David by his benefits, but to enflame his heart the more with his love. And to ſhew this, he promiſeth in the next words to appoint a place for his people to reſort unto for divine worſhip, and that they ſhould be ſettled in their V.10.
country, and not be afflicted againe, as in former times, and in the dayes of the Iudges, which, as Martyr hath it, is to bee underſtood partly, that for a Peter Martyr.
long time, viz. during the raigne of David and Solomon his ſonne, they ſhould bee

bee free from their enemies tyranny, ſo as they never had beene before in the time of al their judges, and partly upon condition of being obedient unto him, for if they had continued to walke in his law alwayes, they ſhould never have beene removed, as for their diſobedience they were in the Babyloniſh Captivity, &c. And that David might not thinke this motion of building God an houſe diſpleaſing unto him, although hee was not permitted ſo to do, it is ſaid 1 King: 8. 18. Whereas it was in thy minde to build me an houſe, thou didſt well, which is here omitted, the Lord approved it expreſly as a pious intention in David. And laſtly becauſe he bent his minde to the building of an houſe for God, the Lord promiſeth to requite him with the like, and to build him
V. 11. an houſe, as it is ſaid he did for the Midwives of Ægypt, he built them houſes, Exod: 1. 21. and v. 16, that his houſe ſhould ſtand for ever, and that his kingdome ſhould bee everlaſting, the laſt words ſerving to explaine the former, for by his houſe is meant his kingdome, that ſhould continue in him and his poſterity throughout all ages, the accompliſhment of which was in Chriſt, who came of David.
Vatal l.u. But whereas it is ſaid, thy kingdome ſhall bee eſtabliſhed for ever before thee, Cajetan Vatab'm underſtands it, thou living and ſeeing it, Caietan, for thee, Sa, thou Sa. ſeeing it, when thou art dead, becauſe the ſoules of the faithfull ſee after death thoſe things, that concerne their ſtate; The Vulgar Latin, to take away all doubt hath it, before my face, but Hebr. it is plainly, before thy face, and the meaning is, this ſhall bee begun to bee done, thou living and ſeeing it, for David himſelfe raigned after this 30 yeares, even as long as naturall ſtrength permitted him to live, and ſaw his ſonne Solomon made King in his ſtead, and ſo his houſe and kingdome was made ſure before his face. For the meanes how Davids
V. 12. houſe ſhould bee made firme, hee ſaith v: 12. *When thou ſhalt ſleepe with thy
V. 13. fathers, I will ſet up thy ſeed after thee, &c. and he ſhall build me an houſe.* 1 Chron:
22. 9. hee ſhall live in reſt and his name ſhall bee called Solomon. More particularly deſcribing that ſonne of his, which ſhould raigne after him in a moſt glorious manner. But it is doubted by ſome, that Solomon was not meant in this place, becauſe one is ſpoken of, that ſhould bee ſet up after Davids death, Ambroſ. l: 3. in luc. whereas Solomon was made King, David yet living, 1 King: 1. Thus Ambroſe, this could not be ſpoken of Solomon, for it muſt be one that was borne and made King after Davids death, and the Lord ſpeaketh of a faithfull houſe, which hee would make him, as hee did not to Solomon, for hee himſelfe erred groſly by idolatry, and hee erred, that wee might not erre in thinking Solomon to bee here meant, but know that all this was ſpoken myſtically of Chriſt.
Aug: l: 18. de Civit: c. 10. Thus alſo Auguſt: who ſaith, that he began to raigne, his father yet living, that wee might know that hee was not meant, and the Jewes themſelves doe yet expect the accompliſhment, of this in their Meſſiah to come. But as Peter Peter Martyr. Martyr ſaith, it is made ſo plaine 1 Chr: 22. 9. that this was ſpoken literally of Solomon, as that it cannot bee denyed, and hee was borne after this propheſie, and did not raigne any time to ſpeake of, till after Davids death, although he were anointed King before, for the ſettling of the State, and indeed David was in a manner dead, when he was made King. All this then was in part fulfilled in Solomon, and perfectly in Chriſt, who was typified by him: for he truely is King over all Countries and Nations, and Solomon onely over all the Nations about him, and hee and his poſterity raigned a long time, which in Lyra. Hebrew is commonly ſet forth by theſe words לעולם for ever, but Chriſt for ever and ever world without end. Lyra diſtinguiſheth the things that are ſpoken of Solomon thus, ſome that hee did, were not figurative, as his Idolatry, ſome meerely figurative, as that his kingdome ſhould extend to the ends of the world, and bee for ever, for this is ſpoken onely figuratively of Solomon, and ſome both figurative and really agreeing to his perſon, as the building of the Lords houſe, his admired wiſdome and glory.

V. 14. And thus that muſt bee peculiar to Solomon, which is ſaid, Verſ. 14. If hee commit iniquitie, I will chaſten him with the rod of men, but my mercy will I not take from him. For Chriſt was without all ſpot of ſinne. By the rod of men Theodoret Theodoret. underſtandeth ſuch evills, as are wont to be laid upon the bodies of men

here

Hierom. in tradit Hebr.

here. Joſephus, unfruitfulneſſe of the earth, and ſickneſſes. Hierom, the ſword of the enemy. But experience ſheweth, that it was trouble by warres ſent upon Solomon in his age. By his mercy, that hee would not take from him, underſtand the mercy of preſerving him from everlaſting deſtruction, whence it may bee gathered, that Solomon repented and was ſaved, although ſome underſtand the mercy of being eſtabliſht in his kingdome and not put downe, as Saul was, who is therefore by and by mentioned, and it is promiſed that hee ſhould not bee dealt withall as Saul was. And all this Nathan is ſaid to have ſpoken to David to ſhew that hee was not aſhamed to recant his former errour, whoſe example wee muſt follow, and not in ſtead of recanting ſeeke to maintaine any errour that wee have falne into: So Martyr.

V. 18.

Lyra.
Gloſ. Ord.
Pellican.
Peter Martyr.

Then went King David in and ſate before the Lord, &c. that is, ſaith Lyra, into the place of prayer neare the Tabernacle, hee is ſaid to ſit according to the Gloſſe by humilitie, when he quietly diſpoſed himſelfe thus to pray & to give God thankes, ſaith Pellican. Some ſaith Martyr hold, that hee ſate to figure out Chriſts ſitting at Gods right hand, ſome, that all things have their being from him, and ſome to ſhew the quietneſſe of his mind, but for as much as the geſture in praying is not preſcribed, wee ſhall not need to queſtion it, whether hee did well or no in ſitting. Thus alſo Auguſtine: Let not this move thee, that hee is ſaid to have ſitten praying, for Elias did the like when hee prayed for raine, by which examples wee are admoniſhed, that it is not preſcribed, in what geſture of body wee pray, ſo that the mind bee preſent doing the true intent unto God. Vatablus ſaith that none might ſit before the Lord, but the King. But Toſtatus and Dionyſius expound ſitting by abiding long and quiet; Cajetan, hee ſat more in mind then body. Junius ſaith, it is a catachreſis. Joſephus, hee went unto the Arke, and falling downe upon his face hee worſhipped; and I thinke, that his ſitting is not properly to bee underſtood, becauſe other holy men are ſaid expreſſely to have kneeled, as Solomon, and Paul, and Chriſt himſelfe, whoſe example muſt bee our imitation; and to kneele wee are invited in that ſaying, Come, let us worſhip and fall downe and kneele, &c. And for Elijah, hee is not ſaid to ſit, but to caſt himſelfe downe, and to put his face betweene his knees by an extraordinary propheticall geſture, as the Spirit moved him. Yet it is not abſolutely neceſſary alwayes to kneele in prayer, for betwixt Eaſter and Whitſuntide of old it was forbidden to kneele and commanded to ſtand praying in token of Chriſts reſurrection: and a man may pray walking, lying in bed, and riding, for hee muſt pray continually, but at the ſet times of doing our devotion publiquely or privately wee ought to preferre kneeling, as the moſt humble geſture before the higheſt majeſty. Who am I (O Lord) and what is my houſe, that thou haſt brought mee hitherto? The greater Gods gifts were towards David, the more hee humbleth himſelfe before him, as contrariwiſe the more the wicked are lifted up, the prouder they are; that thou haſt brought me hitherto, that is, to bee a King who was before ſo meane.

Auguſt. l. 1. ad Simplician. Non eſſe præſcriptum, quomodo corpus ad orandum conſtituatur, modo animus Deo præſens peragat intentionem ſuam.
Toſtatus.
Cajetan.
Junius.
Joſephus.

Peter Martyr.

V. 19.

But this was a ſmall thing in thy ſight (O God) for thou haſt ſpoken of thy ſervants houſe for a great while to come, and is this the manner of man O Lord God? theſe laſt words ſaith Martyr are by ſome read affirmatively, making this the ſenſe, this is the ſtate and condition of the moſt excellent and greateſt men in the world to enjoy kingly honour themſelves and to leave it to their poſteritie generation after generation. R. Kimhi alledgeth, 1 Chron. 17. 17. to prove this to bee the meaning, thou haſt regarded mee according to the ſtate of a man of high degree, this is thy manner of dealing with men of greateſt dignitie, whereby thou dealeſt with me: R. Solomon reading it as wee doe, interrogatively, will have this to bee the ſenſe; Is this thy manner of dealing towards man to imbrace him with ſo much love? that is, ſaith Martyr, that Chriſt the ſonne of God ſhould come of my ſtock. And for the former ſenſe, hee ſaith, it may bee referred to Chriſt alſo, thou reſpecteſt me for that excellent mans ſake Chriſt Jeſus, and not for my owne merits. Lyra, this is the manner of man, that every one is ſollicitous for the good of his poſteritie. Hugo hath both this and another, that hee ſhould give thee thankes for thy great benefits, and a third, that hee

R. Kimhi.

R. Solomon.

Lyra.

ſhould

Sallianus. Junius.

ſhould ſerve thee in ſimplicitie and puritie of heart, and thou ſhouldeſt deale with him in mercy: Sallianus following the vulgar Latine, hæc eſt lex Adami, ſaith that the meaning is, herein thou dealeſt with mee, as with Adam, upon whom thou conferredſt happineſſe not for himſelfe onely, but for his poſteritie throughout all ages, conditioning yet with mine, as his, if they ſinne, to puniſh them, but yet not to take thy mercy from them for ever, as thou didſt not from the poſteritie of Adam, for only the Angels ſinning fel from mercy for ever, man ſinning was reparable again by grace. Junius ſaith, he meant, that he dealt familiarly with him, as one man with another. For my part, ſeeing 1 *Chro.*17.17. maketh it plain which is here delivered obſcurely, I following the author of that book, as the beſt expoſitors do reſolve, that the meaning is nothing elſe, but that Gods dealing towards him, was as towards the greateſt, the word Adam, man, being put here for a moſt eminent man, and תורת ſignifying a command, or law, for the manner or condition. And the rather, becauſe the Lord had ſent by Nathan to tell him, that hee had given him a name like the great ones upon earth, now David in theſe words anſwers to that in his thankſgiving by acknowledging the ſtate and condition of the greateſt and happieſt man upon earth by Gods goodneſſe to be his condition.

V 20. Lyra. And what can David ſay more unto thee? that is, by way of petitioning, for thou haſt done more already for mee then I could have preſumed to aske: ſo Lyra. But was it ſo great a matter to reigne temporally, that David found ſuch a full complacency herein, that hee could not tell how to aske any thing greater? Anſw. He meaneth onely for temporall things, hee could not deſire greater happineſſe, and this being beſtowed upon him in mercy did certifie him of the future happineſſe, eſpecially Chriſt the eternall King being propheſied of in the premiſes to come of him, in whom all nations are bleſſed, for thou Lord knoweſt thy ſervant, that is, by doing for mee and promiſing mee ſo great things ſheweſt, that thou takeſt notice and care of mee, then which what greater happineſſe can I attaine unto?

V. 21. For thy word ſake and according to thy owne heart haſt thou done all theſe great things to make thy ſervant know them; that is, not for any merits of mine, but becauſe thou didſt promiſe them, and that freely being moved by the goodneſſe of thy owne will onely, and hence it came, that ſo great favour hath beene ſhewed unto mee, as to make mee know all this, as of old the Lord would not hide, but ſhew unto Abraham, what he meant to do for that great familiaritie with himſelfe, into which hee had received him. Lyra. Peter Martyr. Lyra, and Martyr ſomewhat more expreſſing the word, ſay according to thy promiſe made unto mee by Samuel and Nathan, and Martyr, by his making knowne theſe things unto him underſtandeth his giving him to conſider them, as many doe not when they receive great benefits from God, 1 Chron. 17. for theſe words, for thy words ſake, is, for thy ſervants ſake, that is, for thy love unto him moving thee to promiſe.

V. 22. Lyra. Peter Martyr. Wherefore thou art great (O Lord God) Lyra, Wherefore thou art magnified, according to the vulgar Latine, that is, art magnificent, for this the greatneſſe of thy gifts doe argue being given to the unworthy, Verſ. 23, 24. Gods goodneſſe is further amplified by recounting what hee did for his people Iſrael both in bringing them out of Egypt, and expelling the inhabitants of that Land before them, as is explained, 1 Chron. 17.21. 22. The reſt of this Chapter from Verſ. 25. is ſpent in praying, that God would doe for him and his houſe as hee had ſpoken, the veritie of Gods word being inſiſted upon againe and againe, as the ground of his confident asking this. There are two cauſes ſaith Lyra, why David prayed thus earneſtly for that which was promiſed him. 1 Becauſe all good which the Lord hath promiſed is to bee attained by prayer; 2 Becauſe all men are ſubject to ſinne, and Gods promiſes of good are conditionall, that ſuch as to whom his promiſes are made may bee contained in obedience, or having ſinned repent, and ſo bee made capable of theſe promiſes. For any revelation made now unto David touching the place and the forme of the Temple, which his ſonne ſhould build, nothing is here ſaid, yet 1 *Chron.*28.11, 12.19. David giveth Solomon a patterne of all things, and gold and ſilver to make each thing, ſaying, that hee had them delineated to him from the Lord. And this moſt probably was done now for his greater comfort, as Toſtatus thinketh, although Theodoret and Lyra, not till after his numbring of the people, and the threſhing floore of Araunah the Jebuſite pointing out unto him for ſacrifice.

V. 25.

Toſtatus.
Lyra.
Theodoret.

Of Solomon.

Touching Davids ſonne Solomon, of whom ſomewhat hath beene already ſaid, that moſt probably notwithſtanding his great ſinning, hee was finally penitent and ſaved; It is objected that it is improbable, becauſe for his wickedneſſe, it is threatned that the kingdome ſhould in the greateſt part bee rent from his ſonne, which was not reverſed, as it ſhould have been, if he had been penitent, as the ſentence againſt Nineveh. I anſwer, David after his great ſinnes of murther and adultery was penitent, yet hee and his houſe ſuffered temporally notwithſtanding, wherefore this is no argument of Solomons finall impenitency, to make us the more fearefull of offending, God doth ſeverely puniſh even the penitent here, whoſe ſoules hee ſaveth hereafter.

CHAP. VIII.

V. 1.

After this David ſmote the Philiſtims and ſubdued them, &c.* The cauſe of this warre is not here ſet downe, ſome thinke that the taking of Methegammah here ſpoken of out of their hands was the cauſe, expounding it the bridle of tribute or the bridle of a river. But this cannot bee, becauſe it followed after their ſubduing, neither is it to bee thought, that there was any particular cauſe, but the Philiſtims having twice before come againſt David, hee now to breake their great power, by which they were from time to time moſt infeſt to the people of Iſrael, that hee might leave a quiet kingdome to his ſonne after him, as God had ſaid, that hee ſhould live in peace, went againſt them to make a full conqueſt over them, and to bring them under his obedience. And for the ſame cauſe it is moſt probable, that hee fought againſt other peoples alſo, and that with their ſpoyles hee might provide gold and ſilver and other things neceſſary for the building of the Temple. For although hee was reſtrayned from building himſelfe, yet hee was both acquainted with the matter, forme and ornaments about it, and accordingly prepared for it, as afterwards appeareth, 1 Chron. 22. 14, 15. 1 Chron. 28. 19. Whereas David is ſaid here to have taken out of the hands of the Philiſtims Methegammah, 1 Chron. 18. 1. It is ſaid, Gath and her townes, ſo that Gath was this Methegammah, the bridle of tribute, it was one of the chiefe Cities of the Philiſtims, by the power whereof eſpecially the Iſraelites had been in times paſt held under tribute, but now being taken the Philiſtims became tributaries to David. Hieronym ſaith, that all the five Cities of the Philiſtims are meant by the bridle of tribute, but ſeeing Gath alone with her townes is ſet forth to bee this Metheg, wee muſt reſt rather in this. Verſ. 2. Hee ſmote alſo the Moabites, meaſuring them with a line to caſt them to the ground, hee meaſured with two lines thoſe that hee would put to death, and with a full line thoſe that hee would ſave alive, the vulgar Latine, hee meaſured them with a line equalling them to the ground, and hee meaſured two lines, one to kill and the other to keepe alive, that is, ſaith Lyra, caſting downe their ſtrong holds, and laying them levell with the ground, that they might not bee able to rebell any more, and hee ordained two wayes of proceeding againſt them, one againſt the more blamable killing them by way of juſtice, the other towards the leſſe blamable to ſave them alive by way of mercy: yet hee ſaith, the Hebrew hath it: Hee meaſured two lines to put to death, and fulfilled a line to ſave alive, which the Hebrewes expound, hee ſlew two parts of them, and ſaved the third part alive. The cauſe of which ſeverity was for that the King of Moab had ſlaine his father and mother being left with him, when David returned into Judah out of his Countrey, to which hee had fled, when Saul perſecuted him, as 1 Sam. 22. Junius likewiſe, hee divided the people of the countrey into three parts, and hereof hee ſlew two, and

Lyra.
Ioſephus.
Hieronym. in tradit. Hebr.

V. 2.

Lyra.

Junius.

ſaved

Scholaſt. hiſtor. P. Martyr.

Peter Martyr. Deut. 2.9.

Toſtatus.

Beda.

Sallianus.

ſaved one alive. But this, ſaith Lyra, is to bee underſtood of the ſouldiers, for the reſt of the people are ſaid to have beene put to tribute, or made tributaries unto him. Comeſtor by his meaſuring of them with the line, and equalling them to the ground underſtandeth his bringing of them very low, ſo that to whom hee would he gave poſſeſſions there, and his meaſuring with two lines, &c. of his ſlaying whom hee would, and ſaving the reſt. Thus alſo Peter Martyr, who enquireth into the reaſon of Davids going againſt the Moabites, ſeeing the Iſraelites had been forbidden before to goe againſt them, and anſwereth, that this was to be underſtood unleſſe they came againſt Iſrael, but this they did, Judg. 3. and oppreſſed them, and were continually their enemies; wherefore David might wel make warre upon them. Toſtatus inquiring into the reaſon, why ſuch ſeveritie was now uſed againſt them, ſaith, that moſt probably the particular reaſon was, for that they invaded and did much miſchiefe in ſome parts of the Land, thus provoking David to goe againſt them, and to ſlay ſo many of them. But for ſo much as the Philiſtims had damnified and been infeſt to the Iſraelites much more, and the Moabites not long agoe deſerved well of David, when hee and his father and mother were harboured amongſt them from the fury of Saul, there muſt needs be ſome other more ſpeciall reaſon, ſome extraordinary foule fact committed againſt David by them, & this I cannot but incline to think was the murthering of his father & mother, whom he left with the King of Moab, 1 Sam. 22. unleſſe it ſhall be thought that David raged thus againſt them, becauſe being allyed to Iſrael they unnaturally turned ſuch great enemies; although many reject it, as a fiction of the Rabbins. And for Davids meaſuring them with a line, Toſtat. ſaith, that hereby is meant his abaſing of them after the manner of beaſts, which are taken with ſnares and nets. And Beda, he meaſured them with a line to make them equall to the ground, that is, by an hyperbole, hee abaſed them, and troad them under foot as the ground, as being without all ſtrength to reſiſt, ſo mightily did hee bring them under. Or becauſe a line is uſed to meaſure Land withall, it is meant, that hee having gotten Moab into his poſſeſſion gave portions thereof by meaſure, to whom hee pleaſed, ſaving thoſe alive who ſubmitted themſelves unto him for this purpoſe, and ſlaying the contumacious. The Reader may follow which of theſe expoſitions hee pleaſeth; But I preferre that of Lyra, hee determined with himſelfe, as if hee had meaſured with a line, how farre to proceed in demoliſhing their ſtrong holds, and for the people, how many to preſerve and how many to kill, viz. to kill two for one. Thus, as one noteth, David extended his kingdome eaſtward on the other ſide of the river Jordan where Moab ſtood, as by conquering the Philiſtims Weſtward, and afterwards he went North and South alſo in his conqueſts.

V.3.

Lyra. Peter Martyr.

David alſo ſmote Hadadezer King of Zobah as he went to recover his borders at the River Euphrates, 1 Chron. 18. 3. hee is called Hadarezer, and hee is ſaid to have been ſmitten unto Hamath, when hee went to eſtabliſh his dominion by Euphrates. Lyra ſaith, that hee was King of one part of Syria. Peter Martyr of the part called Saphena betweene both the Armenians, and hee ſaith, that hee now paſſed over Euphrates to inlarge his kingdome by getting the Land of the Iſraelites, whoſe borders extended even to Euphrates, and happily hee pretended a title to it, becauſe Abraham was a Syrian, and the Iſraelites were once under Cuſhan-riſhathaim in the dayes of the Judges, and hee was King of Meſopotamia in Syria. But David went againſt him, and overcame him and tooke 1000. Chariots, and 700. horſemen, and 20000. footmen, the vulg. Latin hath it 1700. horſemen, & ſo it is Hebr. no mention being made here of Chariots, but becauſe, 1 Chron. 18. 4. it is 1000. Chariots, and 7000. horſemen, our tranſlators from thence ſupplyed the word Chirriots. But it is better leaving it out here to read it, 1700. horſemen. And whereas, 1 Chron. 18. 4 it is 700, horſemen it is to be underſtood, that even at this day three horſemen are given to every Cataphract, which being the principall horſeman is onely here numbred, and thoſe three omitted, but all numbred together, 1 Chron. 18.4. which is the cauſe of this diverſitie in the numbers, every one being foure, and ſo 1000. 4000. and 700. 2800.

2800. which together come not much ſhort of 7000. Thus Martyr; and Toſtatus, and Kimhi not much differing ſay, that theſe 1700. were the chiefe, who had Armes adorned with gold, and commanded the reſt. Lyra, that both are true, 1700. horſemen at the leaſt were taken, thus ſaith one, but the other caſting up the count more exactly ſaith 7000. or which reſolves it beſt of all, Sam. reckoneth up onely the horſemen beſides thoſe, that rode in Chariots, Chron. having ſpoken of the taking of Chariots, which Sam. doth not, numbreth together with other horſemen thoſe that rode upon Chariots alſo, becauſe they were not footmen, and ſo not unaptly to be counted amongſt the horſemen. Here is no mention made of any ſlaine, but onely taken in this warre, but Joſephus ſaith, there were 20000. footmen ſlaine and 5000. horſemen, neither is it unlikely, that very many were ſlain, but he ſaith nothing of thoſe that were taken, nor of Davids houghing the horſes, wherein he might ſeeme to have done unwiſely, ſeeing he might have otherwiſe made a great benefit of theſe horſes. But herein he followed the charge given before to Joſhua, only whereas he houghed all the enemies horſes, and burnt their Chariots; David reſerved 100 Chariots. This houghing of the horſes ſaith Peter Martyr, was to make them unſerviceable for warre, but not for husbandry buſineſſe, it being the Lords will, that the People of Iſrael ſhould not fight on horſ-backe, to prevent truſting in horſes, that they might truſt in him onely. Whereas it is here ſaid, David ſmote Hadadezer, as hee went to recover his border at the river Euphrates; This going to recover his border hath beene before expounded of Hadadezer, and ſo it is taken by Vatablus and others commonly, yet becauſe the word hee may as well have reference to David, as to Hadadezer, Cajetan, Dionyſius, Freculphus, and ſome others underſtand it of David, as hee went to eſtabliſh the border of Iſrael at Euphrates: for thus farre it was promiſed, that their land ſhould extend, Joſh: 1. 3, 4. and therefore the time being now come, David might juſtly ſeeke to enlarge it thither. But I aſſent rather to the former expoſition, becauſe David had other enemies nearer to him, as the Ammonites, and Edomites, and Syrians of Damaſcus, before the ſubduing of whom, there had beene no policy to goe againſt enemies ſo farre off. It is therefore to be conceived, that Hadadezer being a mighty King and ambitious of a larger Dominion, was the firſt, that ſtirred in this warre, but to his owne overthrow.

Toſtatus.
Lyranus.
Joſeph.antiq. lib.7.c.5.
Joſh.11.6.
Peter Martyr.
Vatablus.
Cajetan.
Dionyſius.
Freculphus.

V.5. And when the Syrians of Damaſcus came to helpe Hadadezer, he ſmote of them 22000. This King, ſaith Joſephus, was named Adad, from whom all his ſucceſſors had the ſame name, the third from him was Benhadad, of whoſe warring againſt Iſrael, it is ſpoken afterwards. Damaſcus was the chiefe City of Syria, wherefore Eſay ſaith, the head of Syria is Damaſcus. Thus Martyr out of Joſephus, and an old writer Nicolaus followed by him, who alſo ſaith, that this Adads kingdome, continued to the 10 generation. But neither was Benhadad the third from him, but rather the fourth, for hee lived 150 yeares after, and Hazael his ſervant, not his ſonne got his Kingdome after him.

Peter Martyr.

V.6. 7,8. The Syrians being overcome by David, hee to keepe them in ſubjection, placed Garriſons in that Country, and made them Tributaries unto him. And the ſhields of gold, which Hadadezers ſervants bare, tooke David, and much braſſe from Berah and Berothai. But 1 Chron. 18. 8. from Tibbath and Chun, Cities of Hadarezer, wherewith Solomon made the Braſen ſea, &c. happily they were other names of the ſame Cities: all theſe riches did David dedicate unto God for the uſe of his ſanctuary, as by whoſe helpe he obtained theſe victories.

1 Chron.18.8.
Pellican.

V.9. 10. 11. 12. 13. Toy the King of Hamath hearing of Davids victory againſt Hadadezer ſent to congratulate it. There were two parts of Syria, ſaith Pellican, Sobab, of which Hadadezer was King, and Hamath the kingdome of Toy, who becauſe Hadadezer was his enemy ſent thus unto David, and by his ſon whom he ſent golden and ſilver and braſen veſſels unto him, all which he dedicated to God, together with all the ſpoiles of the enemies, whom he ſubdued, Syrians, Ammonites, Moabites, Philiſtims, Amalekites, and Hadadezer, 1 Chron. 18. 11. Edom alſo is numbred amongſt the Nations ſubdued by him. And whereas here it is ſaid, David got him a name, when hee returned from ſmitting the Aſſyrians in the valley of Salt being 18000, there it is, Abiſhai the ſonne of Zerviah ſlew of the E- 1Chron.18.12 domites in the valley of Salt 18000 men, Pſ:60. mention is made of Joab returning after his ſtriſe with Aram Naharaim, and Aram Zobah, and ſlaying in the valley of Salt of the Edomites 12000. To reconcile theſe differences, it is to be underſtood that Samuel ſaith not expreſly, hee ſlew of the Aramites or Syrians 18000, but when hee returned from his ſmiting Aram in the valley of Salt 18000 men, it being left to be underſtood by ſmiting and then burying 18000 he got him a name, but of what country they were it is not ſaid in Samuel, but 1 Chr.

18. it is further declared, that they were Edomites. And by that, which followeth here, v: 14. he put Garriſons in Edom, &c. it is plaine, that the Edomites were the 180000 ſaid here to bee ſlaine, whereas Abiſhai the ſonne of Zerviah is ſaid to have ſlaine them, but here David Abiſhai the ſonne of Zerviah was a great Captaine under David, and ſo his victory is referred here Peter Martyr. to David. Touching Joab the chieſe Captaine, to whom the ſlaughter of 12000 is aſcribed Pſ: 60. that was happily at another time, or as Peter Martyr will have it, hee ſlew 12000 of theſe, and Abiſhai 6000, and if ſo, it muſt bee held, that the whole number is aſcribed to Abiſhai, 1 Chr:.18. 13. becauſe hee began the ſlaughter in one wing of the battle, and by the helpe of his brother Joab comming on, ſo many thouſands fell, as being exactly divided, amounted to 6000 for Abiſhai, 12000 for Joab. But it is better to hold with Cajetan, that the ſlaying of 12000 by Joab, was at another time, when the Edomites had cut off the Garriſons left there, to revenge which Joab was ſent, as may be gathered 1 King:11.15. & Pſ.60. Of the ſlaughter made by Joab in Edom read more 1 King: 11. 15, 16. where hee is ſaid to have buried them, and for this Hieronym. in pious act towards an enemy, ſaith R: Solomon, David grew famous, of which 2.Reg. Toſtatus. it is here ſaid, he got him a name, others, that he ſet up a trophee of his victories.
But his name getting at this time is doubtleſſe to be referred to all his foreſaid victories, for hereby he was made famous, and eſpecially for that in him, the Propheſie touching Jacob the younger brother, that the elder ſhould ſerve him, was now fulfilled and never before. For his cauſing the Edomites to be buried, that was not in the valley of Salt, but in Edom, and there be ſome, that thinke, and that probably, that theſe dead whom Joab buryed, were not Edomites, but his Lyra. owne Country men, left in Garriſon in Edom, whom the Edomites had ſlaine; and a trophee of his victory, to get glory to himſelfe, hee would not cerainely erect, for that had beene vaine glory. Of the valley of Salt, ſee before Gen: 14.
V.15. And David raigned over all Iſrael and executed judgement and juſtice to all the People. Having ſhewed, how David ſubdued and raigned over all his enemies round about, he now ſheweth, how well he ordered the Common-wealth of Iſrael under him. As hee had no enemies unſubdued abroad, ſo there were none in all the kingdome of Iſrael, but lived in obedience to him, and the Joſh. 1. 3, 4. bounds of this kingdome were now extended alſo to the uttermoſt, as they Peter Martyr. were ſet before, and he did well provide for the upholding of his kingdome in peace, in that hee executed judgement and juſtice to every one, hee did not, after his great conqueſts, as Alexander after his great victory over Darius, give himſelfe to riot and intemperance, or as ſome other Kings, to all manner of pleaſure, but hee applyed his minde to the righteous and well governing of the whole kingdome, as a good King ought to doe, and to this end heo had others
V. 16. in ſeverall offices under him, as Joab over the Hoaſt, Jehoſhaphat recorder, Za-
17. dok and Abimelech Prieſts, and Serviah ſcribe, Benaiah the ſonne of Jehoiada, 18. the Cherethites and Pelethites, and Davids ſonnes Princes. For the executing of judgement and juſtice, the firſt is by dictating, the ſecond by executing, and doing according to that which was dictated, ſo Martyr; but ſome he ſaith, by judgement underſtand that which was according to the written law of God, by juſtice that which was done in other caſes according to equity and right.
Touching Jehoſhaphat the recorder, hee ſaith, that his office was the ſame with our Maſter of the Requeſts, to keepe a Regiſter of mens petitions to the King, and to remember him thereof, ſo likewiſe Toſtatus. The two Prieſts here named, were not High-prieſts, for there was but one, named Abiathar, and theſe two were the chiefe next unto him, being, as ſome thinke, the Kings Chaplaines, and they were of two chiefe families, Eleazars and Ithamars, being thus made equall in honour, that the one might not envy the other. And Seraiah the ſcribe, he ſaith, either wrote downe the accounts of the Kings revenues, or the acts of judgement done from time to time. And the Cherethites and Pelethites were a band of men about the Kings perſon, but both they and the Kings ſonnes are ſaid to be Princes, Hebr: כהנים by the the Vulgar Latin, rendred Prieſts, but the word ſignifieth not only Prieſts, but Princes, and Prieſts Davids ſons could not be, becauſe they were of the Tribe of Judah, of which Tribe not any might ſerve at the Altar as a Prieſt, but of Levi onely. Yet the ſame name being given to Princes argueth the Lawes to be ſacred, to ſee to the execution whereof they are ſet. What the Cherethites and Pelethites were, divers conjecture diverſly. The Chald: Paraph: ſaith, that they were caſters with ſlings and archers, ſome, that they were names of families, ſome, the Sanedrim or great Councell of Judges, ſome, that they were ſuch, as David had made a league withall, and illuſtrious men, as Chereth and Pela ſignifie; ſome, that they were men of neighbouring Nations, whom David had choſen to bee the keepers of his body, as Achiſh had ſometimes ſaid, that he ſhould alwayes bee to him, and as ſome Kings now adayes uſe the Scots and Helvetians. But P. Burgenſis, to whom Martyr agreeth, that they were ſet, the Cherethites to cut off, and the Pelethites to deliver, according to the ſignification of the word Chereth, to cut off, and Peleth to deliver. And all this out of Peter Martyr. But to returne to the two Prieſts againe, and then to come to the Cherethites and Pelethites, about whom it is moſt doubted, Joſephus and after him Toſtatus ſay, that they were two High-prieſts, Zadock made by Saul, and Abiathar by David, and 1 Chron: 15. 11. Zadock and Abiathar are ſaid to bee the Prieſts; whereas Abimelech the ſonne of Abiathar is named here, it is to be underſtood that both the father and the ſonne had both theſe names, as hath beene ſhewed upon 1 Sam. 21. 1. There were not then two principall prieſts under Abiathar the chiefe prieſt, as ſome affirme, for that Abiathar, otherwiſe called Abimelech, was ſlaine by Sauls command long before this, and his ſonne Abimelech, otherwiſe called Abiathar alſo, who eſcaped from that maſſacre to David, was one of the prieſts here ſpoken of. And hee and Zadock ſeeme to me to have beene both High-prieſts at this time, for the extraordinary occaſion that then was of two chiefe, the one to ſerve at the Tabernacle in Gibeon, and the other before the Arke in Zion, as is appointed 1 Chr: 16. howſoever ordinarily before that time there was but one. And Solomon within a few yeares after putting downe Abiathar, reduced the chiefty to one againe. Touching the Cherethites and Pelethites, that they were great men, and of great valour, who alwayes were about the King, as a guard, is plaine, becauſe they are noted to have beene with him, when he fled from Abſalom, and went with their Captaine Benaiah to anoint Solomon King, when others followed Adonijah, and they did execution upon Adonijah and Joab, who were the greateſt in all the kingdome. But that they were no Iſraelites, but men of ſome other Nations, I deny, as Peter Martyr doth, becauſe David would not certainely thus preferre ſtrangers above his brethren, the Iſraelites, it being againſt piety ſo to doe, for ſo much as the Iſraelites were peculiarly choſen above all other Nations. Neither doth it make for this conceit, that the Cherethites are ſpoken of 1 Sam: 30. 18. for even thoſe Cherethites might be one family in Iſrael, and the Pelethites another, as Vatab. hath it.

1 King. 2. 17.

2 Sam. 15. 18.
1 King. 1. 44.
1 King. 2.

CHAP. IX.

D*avid* now beginneth to remember his Covenant with Janathan the ſon of Saul, and therefore enquireth whether any of his poſterity were yet living, that hee might ſhew him kindneſſe for his fathers ſake, and then he is certified of Mephiboſheth, one lame of his feet, that dwelt with Machir in Lodebar. It was not through any neglect of his friend, that David thought not upon ſhewing kindneſſe to Jonathans ſonne hitherto, but becauſe he was taken up with other weighty affaires of the Common-wealth. But now having a time of freedome he enquired after ſome of Sauls race, yet intending particularly J*onathans*, for the poſterity of J*onathan* was Sauls. Wherefore J*oſeph*. going according to the meaning, ſaith, that hee asked after ſome of J*onathans* poſterity. There was an oath indeed taken by David to Saul, as well as to J*onathan*, but that was forced, this free, that not to root out Sauls poſterity, this to doe good to J*onathans*, yet in doing good to J*onathans* ſonne hee did it unto Sauls. How Mepiboſheth came to bee lame, ſee before 1 Sam: 4. 4. This Lodebar where Mephiboſheth lived was a City, as ſaith Adrichom. in Gilead in the Tribe of Gad on the other ſide of J*ordan*, where Iſhboſheth his uncle had raigned, wherefore he was firſt brought to this place for his greater ſafety, and Machir ſeemeth to have beene a man of note of Manaſſeh, to whoſe protection hee had committed himſelfe. This Mephiboſheth is called Meribbaal 1 Chr: 8. 34. but as Martyr ſaith, his name was happily turned to Mephiboſheth for ſome deformity that happened to his face. Zibah Sauls ſervant, of whom David enquired for him, ſeemeth to have beene no Iſraelite, but a ſtranger, becauſe hee was a perpetuall ſervant to him, and his, otherwiſe David could not juſtly have appointed him to ſerve Mephibiſheth. The kindneſſe ſhewed by David to Mephiboſheth was in reſtoring Sauls land unto him, which fell unto David by the Rebellion of Iſhboſheth againſt him, and ſetting him at his owne Table as one of his owne ſonnes continually. Hee feared that he was ſent for to bee put to death, as the childe of Saul Davids enemy, wherefore hee bade him not to feare and made him theſe gracious promiſes for his fathers ſake. Thus good fathers provide better, that it may goe well with their children after them by their goodneſſe, then they that leave them great riches.

V. 1. 2.

Joſephus.

1 Sam. 24 21.
Sam: 23.18.

Peter Martyr.

Note.

V.8. Mephiboſheth hearing Davids offer of ſo great kindneſſe, humbleth himſelfe as moſt unworthy, and ſaying, that he was a dead dogge. But how could hee juſtly, ſaith Martyr, ſpeake thus of himſelfe, ſeeing hee was a man, and that an Hebrew, and of a Kingly ſtocke? and Anſw: that hee meant in compariſon of David with whom hee heard hee ſhould ſit at Table, and of the benefits beſtowed now upon him by David. For he came both of a rejected ſtocke, and was lame. Yet hee ſaith, that ſome in detracting from themſelves unreaſonably doe ſinne through pride, their end being, that they may by others bee praiſed. The ſame phraſe was uſed before by David unto S*aul*, 1 Sam: 24. 14 ſee alſo, 2 S*am*: 3. 8. 2 S*am*: 16. 9. Hereby was meant a man moſt execrable, for a dogge was an uncleane creature, and being dead was good for nothing, therefore when the Jewes would ſet forth a prophane and execrable perſon, they uſed to doe it by this phraſe, Mat: 7. 6.

V. 9, 10. Then David told Z*ibah*, that hee had given his maſters ſonne all that had beene S*auls*, wherefore hee commanded him to till the Land for him, and to bring him the fruits, that hee might have food to eate, and yet hee ſaith, that hee ſhould eate at his Table continually, as one of his owne ſonnes. Wherein there may ſeeme to bee a contradiction: for if hee did eate alwayes at the Kings Table, what need was there to bring him the fruits, that hee might have food? Anſw: Some ſay, that by his maſters ſonne here ſpoken of, Michah the ſonne of Mephiboſheth was meant, for Mephibiſheth afterwards calleth Ziba his ſervant. David then, ſay they, would have him nouriſhed with theſe fruits, and Mephiboſheth to live with him. But it is plaine, that Mephiboſheth was meant by his maſters ſonne, for hee was not yet his maſter, till D*avid* had made him ſo, and appointed him to ſerve him, as hee had before ſerved S*aul*, his Grandfather. And wherefore hee ſpeaketh of his having food, the meaning was, that hee ſhould have the revenue ariſing of the Land for the maintenance of his wife and children and family, and for his other occaſions, ſo J*oſephus* and Comeſtor. Thus Z*iba* and all his houſe conſiſting of 15 ſonnes and 20 ſervants

Toſtatus.
Lyra, Dionyſ.
Cajetan.
2 Sam: 19. 26.

Joſeph. Comeſtor
Scholaſt. hiſtor.

ſerved

V. 13. Sa.

ſerved Mephiboſheth, and hee did eate continually at the Kings Table. Touching Ziba who being a ſervant had ſervants, it was a thing, ſaith Martyr, not unuſuall for ſome ſervants to have ſervants, viz: for thoſe, that were called ordinarii, but the mediaſtini had none. Some have held, that hee eate bread at Zibas table, meate being brought from the Kings table thither, and that out of a miſtaking of the laſt words, v: 11. holding them to bee the words of Ziba, becauſe it is not expreſſed, that the King ſpake them. To avoid which the Vulgar Latin rendereth it, at thy table. And Ziba ſaid, According to all that my Lord the King hath commanded his ſervant, ſo ſhall thy ſervant doe. And Mephiboſheth ſhall eate at thy table as one of the Kings ſonnes. But both Hebrew, Chald: and Sept: have it, at my table. It is an ecclipt: ſpeech, theſe words being left to bee underſtood, then ſaid the King. So Lyra, and Vatablus, and Joſephus, and Theodoret conclude, that he lived with the King.

Lyra.
Vatablus.
Ioſephus.
Theodoret.
The Myſtery.

Myſtically by Mephiboſheth underſtand the contemptible in this world, and unable to manage ſecular affaires: for ſuch Chriſt typified by David vouchſafeth to ſhew grace unto, and to ſet them at his heavenly table, being the ſons of grace, as hee was of Jonathan, ſignifying grace, or the gift of a Dove, the embleme of grace.

CHAP. X.

V. 1, 2.

N*Abaſh* the King of the Ammonites being dead David ſendeth an Ambaſſage to his ſonne Hanun to comfort him for the kindneſſe, which hee had formely received from his father, and as Joſephus hath it, to ſignifie, that hee would continue in amity with him, and helpe him, if any enemy now at the beginning of his raigne ſhould moleſt him. What kindneſſe the old King had ſhewed to David, is not ſaid. The Rabbines ſay, that when he left his father and mother and ſome other friends with the King of Moab, that King ſlew his father and mother, and then the King of Ammon did courteouſly receive the reſt, that fled unto him. Jerom, that David himſelfe fled unto him, before hee came to the cave of Odullam, and was kindely entertained. Comeſtor, that David went to him, when hee fled from Achiſh, and was kindely entertained. And David living now in peace ſet his minde upon requiting old kindneſſes, which he had received at the hands of any, and therefore having done ſomewhat for Mephiboſheth within the land, hee now ſendeth out to requite another kindneſſe. Whereas it is forbidden, to ſeeke the peace of the Ammonites for ever, againſt which David might ſeeme now to tranſgreſſe, the Rabbines ſay, that hee did, and was therefore puniſhed with diſgrace done to his Ambaſſadours; but Toſtatus, Martyr and others, that hee did herein nothing unlawfull. Hee was prevented with kindneſſe before by the King of Ammon, it was therefore a point of gratitude in him, to ſeeke to requite it, hee onely ſhewed himſelfe willing to continue in amity with this King, but not to make any league with him, which onely was unlawfull. Whereas ch: 8. 12. mention is made of ſpoiles taken from the children of Ammon, implying warres made before this againſt Ammon, and if ſo, how doth this ambaſſage rightly follow? Anſw: That was ſpoken by anticipation, for the warre with Ammon was not made till afterwards upon the occaſion here declared. For the kindneſſe ſhewed by Nabaſh unto David, it is moſt probable that hee did it, becauſe Saul, who perſecuted David, was his deadly enemy, and his hatred was great againſt him ever ſince the overthrow, which hee had given him at Jabeſh Gilead, therefore Saul being a common enemy to them both hee thought it fit to joyne in friendſhip with David againſt him.

Hieronym. in lib. Reg.
Deut. 23. 6.
Toſtatus.
Peter Martyr.

V. 3.

This kindneſſe of David being miſconſtrued by Hanuns ſervants, who ſuſpected that hee ſent to ſpy out the Citie, and to overthrow it, hee being very credulous, as if it had been ſo indeed, tooke Davids ſervants, and ſhaved off halfe their beards, and cut off their garments by the buttocks, and ſent them away greatly aſhamed. 1 Chron. 19. 4. it is ſaid, hee ſhaved them, which may be underſtood, as a further indignity here omitted. Of the ſhaving halfe their beards the ground might bee, that amongſt the Egyptians this was wont to bee done in deriſion, as may bee ſeene in Euterpe Herodoti, and amongſt the Greeks in Ageſilao Plutarchi. A long beard, as alſo long garments, were counted an honour, therefore to ſhave off any part of the beard was counted a great diſgrace, and likewiſe to curtaile their garments, eſpecially ſo as that their ſhamefull parts might appeare, and their circumciſion to bee derided. That long garments were counted an honour, appeareth, becauſe in all Nations though farre disjoyned, learned men, and preſidents, Senatours and Counſellers have uſed Gownes. More particularly for ſhaving it was a cuſtome amongſt the Ammonites in mourning for the dead to ſhave themſelves, as wee may gather from that which is expreſſed by the Prophet Eſay touching their brethren the Moabites, who ſpeaking of their mourning, when many ſhould bee ſlaine, ſaith; Moab ſhall houle, upon all heads ſhall bee baldneſſe, and all beards ſhall bee ſhaven, and likewiſe, Jer. 48.37. and herein the Iſraelites were forbidden to doe like the heathen, when they mourned for the dead. Now becauſe theſe ſervants of David pretended ſorrow for the death of Nahaſh, Hanun in ſcorne ſhaved them, and cut off halfe their beards, from which hee knew they much abhorred by reaſon of their Law. Peter Martyr thinketh, that they cut their garments, becauſe the Leprous amongſt the Iſraelites rent their garments, and inquiring into the reaſon why Hanun ſuſpected David, hee ſaith, 1. that the Ammonites being a wicked people were alwayes of moſt infeſt mindes againſt Iſrael, as wee may ſee in the ſpeech of Nahaſh to the men of Jabeſh Gilead. 2. Hee knew that the Iſraelites were forbidden by their Law to ſeeke the peace of the Ammonites for ever. 3. They being wicked had guilty conſciences, which alwayes ſuſpect the worſt, as is intimated Ecclеſ. 7.

Eſa. 15.2.
Deut. 14.1.
Peter Martyr.
1 Sam. 11.

V. 5. David hearing of it ſent to meet them, and to bid them ſtay at Jericho, till their beards were growne. The Iſraelites, ſaith Pellican, did never ſhave their beards, it being a thing to them forbidden by Gods Law, and therefore one part being cut off, they abhorred from cutting off the other, and to come home with halfe a beard they were aſhamed, wherefore they are willed to come no further into their owne countrey then Jericho, where happily they then were, it being about the confines of their Land, till the part cut off were growne againe: Peter Martyr ſaith, it is noted by Otho to bee a ſigne of an effeminate man to ſhave his beard, and yet Dion writeth, that Adrian was the firſt of the Roman Emperours, that nouriſhed his beard. But Auguſt. ſaith, that the beard is a ſigne of ſtrength and fortitude: Yet Concil. 4. Carthag. decreed, that Clerkes ſhould not nouriſh their haire or beard. Newes of this indignitie offered to his ſervants it is likely came to Davids eares by meſſengers whom they ſent before unto him, being aſhamed to come themſelves. Jericho, ſaith Joſeph. was 150. forlongs from Jeruſalem, and 60. from Jordan in the way to the Ammonites countrey, and at that time had few inhabitants in it, ſo that they might well bee there without being ſeene of many.

Levit 19.27.
Pellican.
Peter Martyr.
Dion in Trajani vita.
Aug. lib. 2. contra Pel.
Juſephus.

V. 6. And when the children of Ammon ſaw that they ſtanke before David, they ſent and hired of Syrians of Beth-Rehob, and of Zoba, 20000. men, and of King Maacah, 1000, &c. 1 Chron. 19.6. when they ſaw that they had made themſelves odious to David, Hanun and the Children of Ammon ſent 1000. talents of ſilver to hire Chariots and horſemen out of Meſopotamia, Syria, Maachah and Zobah. So they hired 32000. Chariots, and the King of Maacah, who came and pitched before Medeba, &c. the vulgar Latine, when they ſaw, that they had injured David; Peter Martyr, that they had done a foule thing to David, but the beſt expreſſion is that, 1 Chron. 19. 6. By the indignitie offered to Davids Embaſſadours they gathered, that hee was highly offended with them, and therefore expecting now ſome revenge they prepared to defend themſelves, happily firſt hearing, as Joſephus hath it, that David prepared to come againſt them. But Toſtatus thinketh that David meant to have paſſed it over, till that hee heard of their preparations of this warre. The words, they ſaw that they had made themſelves odious to David, doe rather imply the threatnings of David, as Joſephus ſaith, to bee revenged, com-

1 Chron. 19.6.
Toſtatus.

ming firſt unto their eares. For the divers peoples hired by the Ammonites, for the firſt of Beth Rehob, Chron. hath Meſopotamia, happily that Rehob was the chiefe City of Meſopotamia, ſome thinke it the name of the father of Hadadezer the King of that countrey, becauſe hee is called the ſonne of Rehob, but hee is ſaid to bee the King of Zoba, which is here diſtinguiſhed from Rehob, as another Province. Theſe were then two parts of Syria in Meſopotamia. Touching Maacah, hee was alſo another King in Syria, and happily his province was called after his owne name. For Iſtob the laſt in Sam. Chron. hath Syria, but that part of Syria under King Tob is meant, of which Tob ſee in the hiſtory of Jephthah, ſo Vatablus. The name of Iſtob, ſay the Hebrewes, commeth of Iſh a man, and Tob, the man or Prince of Tob. The Syrians had been before brought under by David, wherefore Hanun thought ſurely, that they would moſt readily take this opportunitie to bee revenged upon him, and this moved him to hire them. As there bee foure names here, ſo the Greekes, ſaith Martyr, diſtinguiſh Syria into foure parts, which they call, Comagena, Damaſcena, Calosyria and Phœnicia. For the numbers hired Sam. ſaith 20000. footmen and 12000. men, which together make up 32000. but Chron. 32000. Chariots. To reconcile this, Lyra ſaith, 32000. men fighting in Chariots are meant. Vatablus likewiſe, the continent being put for the content, when 32000. Chariots are ſpoken of; Toſtatus 32000. men comming with Chariots, the number of which is not expreſſed. Junius to avoyd difference hath it 32000. footmen, Chariots, and the King of Maachah. But it is plainly ſaid 32000. Chariots, and 1000. talents were ſent to hire Chariots and horſemen, which is ſuch an huge maſſe of money, that therewith might well bee hired ſo many Chariots. For a common Talent was 3000. common Shekels, every Shekel 15. d. ſo that one Talent was 187.l. 10.s. and 1000. Talents 187500.l. that is 6.l. for the hire of each Chariot or thereabouts. For the ſolution brought by Lyra, and Vatablus, it agreeth not, becauſe Sam. ſaith 20000. footmen which were certainly no Chariot men. I thinke therefore, that Chron. omitting what was related in Sam. ſheweth what great forces more were hired, which Sam. ſpake not of, ſo that beſides the footmen 20000. and 1000. and 12000. ſo many Chariots were hired alſo and men to manage them called horſemen. And this wonderfull great preparation tendeth to the magnifying of the victory the more, which God gave unto David, and to ſhew how deare Hanun paid for the ignominy done to Davids men, that all may take heed how they render evill for good, and upon meere ſuſpition deale as if the thing were certaine, 1 Chron. 19.7. all theſe forces are ſaid to have pitched before Medeba, that is, the chiefe Citie of the Ammonites, whither the comming of Davids Army was expected.

2 Sam.8.3.

Vatablus, Iudg.11.3.

Peter Martyr.

Lyra.
Vatablus.
Toſtatus.
Junius.

Note.

V. 7. David hearing of theſe preparations was nothing diſmayed, but ſent Joab with his men againſt them, being, as may be conjectured, no great Army, becauſe no gathering together of men is ſpoken of; as afterwards. He ſent then ſuch, as he had in a readineſſe, and when they came to the enemies Country, the Ammonites ſet themſelves in battaile array before the gates of their City, & the Syrians were in the field, ſo that the Ammonites were before them and they behinde with their multitudes ready to incloſe this ſmall Army, as Pellican thinketh, being laid in ambuſh. The Ammonites came not farre from the City to fight, that if neede were, they might ſoone retire. Joab perceiving how the enemies were divided into two parts, divideth his Army alſo into two, leading one part of the moſt valiant againſt the Syrians, in whom, as being moſt mighty, and ſo wonderfully prepared with men and chariots, the Ammonites placed their greateſt confidence, and committing the other to his brother Abiſhai, to fight with the Ammonites.

Pellican.

V. 13. This being done, and an exhortation made to bee valiant, hee preſently put the Syrians to flight, and the Ammonites ſeeing that, fled before Abiſhai. V. 14. How many were ſlaine is not ſaid, neither is it likely that there were very many: for the enemies would not ſtay to fight, and flee they could in their chariots faſter then the Iſraelites could purſue them on foot. Moreover Ioabs Army being but ſmall,hee was content with the victory,and returned. Medeba to which he went to this battail,ſaith one, was 60 miles from Ieruſalem.

H.Bunting Patriar.travailes.

V.15,16. The Syrians being thus put to flight, gathered themſelves together againe,and more Syrians brought from beyond the River, that is, Euphrates, by Hadarezer were joyned unto them, and ſo a greater Army being made, they came to Helam, which is thought to bee a City in the Syrians Countrey, one ſaith, that it was but 20 miles from Ieruſalem, ſo farre were the Syrians come to incounter with David.

H.Bunting Patriarchs travails.

V. 18. Then hee gathered together greater forces alſo, even all the valiant men of Iſrael, and came in perſon to Elam to fight againſt them, and ſlew the men of 700 chariots, and 4000 horſemen,&c. 1 *Chron.*19.18. he ſlew 7000 men in chariots, Hebr. it is here, 700 chariots, the continent being put for the content, the chariots for the men in them, and if 10 men be allowed to each chariot, their number was 7000, as Chron. hath it, or becauſe that number may ſeeme too great for 700 chariots, it may bee ſaid, that all the men that fought in 700 chariots were ſlaine, and ſo many more in other chariots, wherein ſome eſcaped, as made up 7000. Moreover 1 *Chron.*19.18. hath it 40000 footmen, but here it is 40000 horſemen: But as Lyra and Toſtatus ſay, herein is no contradiction, onely that which was wanting touching the number of footmen in Sam. where none are ſpoken of, is ſupplyed in Chron. and becauſe the horſemen were numbred in Sam. they are omitted in Chron.

1Chron.19.18

Lyra.
Toſtatus.

V.19. The Syrian petty Kings that fought under Hadarezers Captaine,as being Tributaries happily to him, ſeeing the victory to fall to David,who had alſo ſlaine Shobach their Captaine with his owne hands, ſaith Ioſephus, they fled, ſaith the Vulg. Latine, 58000. and came and made peace: but Hebr. no fleeing or number that fled, is ſpoken of. Being ſo often overcome, they now yeeld to bee Tributaries to David, and covenant not to help the Ammonites any more,wherby it may bee gathered that they came to battaile this ſecond time, being againe ſollicited by them.

CHAP. XI.

V. 1.

Lyra.
Peter Martyr.
1 Chron. 20.

AFter the Syrians ſubdued, David ſendeth Joab againſt the Ammonites,and he is ſaid ſo to have done at the time of the yeare, that Kings uſe to go forth to warre, that is, ſaith Lyra, and Martyr, in the Spring time, when there is graſſe for horſes, although in theſe dayes, ſaith Martyr, any time is taken: Pope Iulius went againſt Mirandula in a deep ſnow: Callis was taken in January, and Francis the French King in February. But the Spring time is the apteſt for the ſouldiers to lye abroad in the fields, the aire being more temperate, and the dayes growing long, and the time of the yeare continuing fitteſt for action five or ſix moneths together. This yeare is generally thought to have beene the 49. of Davids age, the 19. of his reigne, 1 *Chron.*21.1. hee had not yet taken revenge upon the Ammonites, and the former yeare was ſo farre ſpent in warring againſt the Syrians that hee wanted time then, wherefore in the riſing of the yeare hee ſetteth forth againſt them, and having waſted the reſt of the Countrey they came to the chiefe Citie Rabbah. V.2. He ſtaying at home,when his men went to battell, by chance ſaw faire Bethſhebah waſhing herſelfe from the Battlements of his houſe, where hee walked in the evening, and burning in luſt towards her hee ſent for her and lay with her,&c. Pellican. Hee ſhould as Pellican ſaith, have gone forth himſelfe with his men, and not have reſted idlely at home: for it is the part of Kings, not to live in pleaſure and idleneſſe, but in warlike labours to goe before their ſubjects, and to encourage them, and becauſe David now, and at ſome other times of late intermitted to doe ſo, hee is aſſaulted and ſhamefully overcome at home, that had alwayes beene ſo victorious abroad. Peter Martyr. And Peter Martyr aggravateth his fault further, in that hee gave himſelfe to ſleeping in the day time in the midſt of thoſe troubles,when the Commonwealth that hee ſhould have watched over, was in hazzard, taking occaſion hereupon to ſhew the evill that commeth of idleneſſe. Hence

Ovid ſheweth, that Ægiſtus became an adulterer, quia deſidioſus erat; and Otia ſi tollas, periere Cupidinis arcus; Ambroſe ſaith, as the Oyſter lying open againſt the Sunne quietly to bee refreſhed therewith, the Crab commeth and caſteth a little ſtone between, hindering it from cloſing againe, and ſo devoureth it: ſo when a man lyeth idlely, his ſoule is expoſed to the devouring of the Devill, who caſteth in filthy thoughts; and idleneſſe was the ſinne of Sodom, Ezek. 16. The woman whom David ſaw waſhing herſelfe, dwelt as muſt needs bee gathered next unto the Kings Palace in Zion, wherein might well bee many other dwelling houſes beſides Davids, being in compaſſe, according to Willalpandus, ten furlongs, and ſo ſaith Adrichomius. Shee waſhed herſelfe moſt probably by reaſon of her legall uncleanneſſe in her garden, as Suſanna is ſaid afterwards to have done. The time of the day was in the afternoone, when David after dinner having ſlept, according to the manner of thoſe hot countries roſe up and went and walked upon the Battlements of his houſe, and the place muſt needs bee neare, or elſe hee could not have diſcerned her beautie. Having ſeene her hee ſent, ſaith Lyra, to know whether ſhee were a maide or a wife, thinking, if ſhee had beene a maid, to take her to wife, but although hee heard the contrary, luſt being let in by the windowes of his eyes could not bee quenched, but burnt the more in him, as the ſaying is, per vetitum neſas ruimus Cupimuſque negata.

Willalpandus. Adrichom.

Lyra.

V 3. Hierom.

Shee is ſaid to bee the daughter of Eliam, and the wife of Vriah the Hittite, 1 Chron. 3.5. ſhe is ſaid to bee the daughter of Amiel, but, as Jerom hath it, here is no difference, but onely a tranſpoſition of the Letters, both the names being of the ſame ſignification, for Eliam ſignifyeth my God the people, Amiel, the people my God. This Amiel or Eliam was the ſonne of Abitophel, 2 Sam. 23. 34. and was one of Davids worthies, as alſo Vriah was, Verſ. 39. ſo that Bethſhebah was of an honorable houſe and honorably married. The Hittite Vriah is called, ſaith Theodoret, and after him Procopius, becauſe hee came of the children of Heth, but was a Proſelyte, for hee ſaith, that Vriah a ſtranger being wronged, God who is gracious to all, tooke his part againſt an Iſraelite and puniſht him therefore: But Toſtatus ſaith, that hee was not of the Hittites of Canaan, who were appointed to bee deſtroyed, and with whom the Iſraelites might make no marriages, but that hee had the name Hethite or Hittite either from ſome exploit that hee did againſt the Hethites, or from his dwelling in a place ſo named And. Adrichomius ſaith, that there was a place in Judah, in Hebron, neare Abrahams Sepulcher called Heth, and becauſe Vriah was borne there, hee was called an Hethite or Hittite, ſo likewiſe Jerom: thus Iſhai from his Towne, was called the Bethlehemite, Achitophel the Gilonite, &c. Vatablus is indifferent for either, I rather ſubſcribe to Theodoret, becauſe the name doth ſo agree to thoſe ſtrangers, the Hittites. Whereas his marrying with an Iſraelite is objected, it was not unlawfull, ſeeing hee was a Proſelyte and ſo a Jew in Religion, no more then for Salmon to marry Rahab, and Boaz Ruth. For the reaſon of interdicting ſuch marriages, viz. leſt they ſhould bee inſnared with Idolatry, ceaſed in him, and therefore hee might marry an Iſraelite. The woman being ſent for commeth, and reſiſteth not Davids unchaſt motion, that wee read of, no not in word, as if ſhee thought that a King might doe what he would. Shee was not moved by the Covenant made with her valiant husband, nor with the odiouſneſſe of the ſinne of adultery, or the puniſhment thereof, which by the Law of God was death, and Nebuchadnezzar hearing that one Achab and Hezekiah Jewes had defiled other mens wives, cauſed them therefore to bee broyled to death upon a Grid-yron.

Theod. qu. 15. in 2. Reg.

Toſtatus.

Adrichom.

Hieronym.

V. 4.

Rupert. in Mat. 1.

David having lyen with her, ſhee is ſaid to have been purged from her uncleanneſſe, according to the common expoſition, becauſe ſhee now conceiving with child, her monethly flowers ſtraight way ceaſed, which uſed to make a woman uncleane. Rupertus ſaith, that her barrenneſſe was her uncleanneſſe, which now was done away. But this is no where ſo called. I rather thinke, that a Legall purging or ſanctifying, as the vulgar Latine hath it, is here meant, according to Levit. 15.18. where it is ſaid, when a man lieth with a woman, they ſhall both bee uncleane untill even and waſh themſelves with water. For according to this it is ſaid, that ſhee ſanctified herſelfe Hebr. and ſo Martyr rendreth it. Junius renders it, ſhee purged herſelfe, and noteth upon it, that ſhee was the more apt to conceive, as if this purging had been, before ſhe came to the King. But it was after, as the order ſheweth, and if the ceaſing of her uncleanneſſe by monethly flowers had been meant, it would not have beene ſaid, ſhee ſanctified herſelfe, for this implyeth ſome act of ſanctification done by her, and it is a very unfitting phraſe to expreſſe this by the word ſanctifying: for then Davids adulterous lying with her muſt bee granted to have availed to her ſanctification, which is abſurd.

V.5,6,7. The woman then conceived and ſignified it unto David, fearing doubtleſſe Pellican. the danger of the Law, if it were not prevented. Hereupon David ſendeth for Uriah to come home, &c. Hee added, as Pellican ſaith, one wickedneſſe to another, for hee attempted the ſubſtituting of a Baſtard to his faithfull ſervant Uriah to bee his heire. But hee by a ſingular providence of God ruling herein, that this foule ſinne might not goe undiſcovered, refuſed to goe and lie at his owne houſe, but kept watch with the Kings other ſervants about the Court. David ſeeing that this would not take effect, preſently fleeth to another more pernicious, for hee wrote to Joab to ſet Uriah ſo in the battell, as that hee might bee ſlaine, yea and to the end that hee might bee ſlaine, hee would have ſome others of his moſt valiant men, whoſe lives hee ſhould chiefly have tendered, expoſed to the danger of death alſo, becauſe in making an aſſault hee could not bee ſlaine alone. Joſephus ſaith, that ſhee went to Joſephus. the King and told him, that ſhee had conceived, deſiring him to provide ſome way, that ſhee might bee preſerved from the danger of death, which would Chryſoſt. follow, if it were diſcovered. And Chryſoſt. ſaith, that ſhee would not commit this ſecret to any other, but went herſelfe unto the King, and ſaid, O King, I am undone, I am with childe, the fruit of my ſinne buddeth, I carry an ac-cuſer within mee, my betrayer is in my wombe, if my husband come and ſee mee, what ſhall I ſay, what excuſe ſhall I pretend? Then he ſending for Uriah to come home, and ſeeing, that the firſt night he would not go to his wife, yea, V.11. Ver.11. hearing him ſweare, as thy ſoule liveth, I will not do this thing, when as the Arke, and Iſrael and Judah abide in Tents, and Ioab and the Kings ſervants lie in the open fields, I will not goe to my houſe to eate and drinke and lie with my wife, hee bad him ſtay another night, and then hee would ſhew more kindneſſe unto V.12,13. him, for hee feaſted him at his owne Table, and profered him in ſhew of extraordinary kindneſſe ſo much wine, that hee made him drunken, thinking, that when hee was in that caſe hee would goe home to his wife, whatſoever he had ſworne to the contrary. Thus to cover his owne foule ſinne, he increaſed it more & more by making Uriah to ſin by drunkenneſſe and ſeeking to make him forſworne. Touching Uriah, it was ſtrange, that he having been now long from home, and having a faire young woman to his wife, could refraine himſelf from going in unto her, eſpecially being alſo heat with wine and good cheare, of wch the ſaying is, ſine Cerere & Baccho friget Venus, & ſeeing both ſhe and her friends might think, that he bare no love unto her for this great neglect whereby they might bee exaſperated againſt him. But this muſt bee imputed to an higher power reſtraining him, that ſo great a ſinne might not be ſmothered, unleſſe that ſecretly by ſome man hee underſtood, what had paſſed, or ſome private diſ-cord had reigned before betwixt him and his wife for her ſeeming levitie. As for Uriah, it may bee conjectured, that hee was godly, and a true lover of his Countrey, becauſe hee mentioned the Arke, and Iſrael, &c. vowing to ſympa-thize with them, as Daniel and his fellows, when they might have fared daintily, refuſed it, and would live upon pulſe, becauſe their countrey-men being Captives lived generally in great miſery. In that hee ſpeaketh of the Arkes Lyra. being in Tents; Lyra gathereth, that it was carried out to the Army for their 1 Sam.4. incouragement, and ſo hee gathereth, that it was in Sauls time, 1 Sam.14. as it had been done in the time of Eli. They carryed the Arke into the field, ſaith

Martyr,

Peter Martyr.

Martyr for two cauſes. 1. That the ſouldiers might have a certaine ſymbole of Gods preſence. 2. That the Captaine might have the oracle neare unto him to conſult with, when need required. By Iſrael and Judah, hee meaneth the whole Army, and hee calleth Joab his Lord, becauſe, as Joſephus ſaith, hee was his armour-bearer. For his oath, as thy ſoule liveth, it was much like unto that of Joſeph, by the life of Pharaoh, Gen: 42. 15. of which ſee upon that place.

V. 14. Then David wrote a letter to Joab and ſent it by Vriah, to this effect, Set Vriah in the forefront of the hotteſt battle and retire from him, that hee may bee ſmitten and die: and Joab did accordingly, and ſo Vriah was ſlaine, and ſome others of Davids men alſo. David ſeeing that hee could not colour over his wickedneſſe, found himſelfe to bee in a great ſtraight; for Bathſheba, whom hee had abuſed, was in danger to bee ſtoned to death, and hee to bee made publickely ignominious and odious amongſt the people for bringing her to ſuch a miſerable end. Wherefore hee now breaketh out into murther, and that not of one valiant and faithfull ſubject alone, but of others alſo with him. A ſtrange alteration, hee that in times paſt had ſpared his enemy, Saul, and ruſticall Nabal, by whom hee had beene ſo provoked, was now ſo degenerated, as that his priſtine virtue ſeemed altogether to bee loſt, hee ſpared not treacherouſly to deſtroy the innocent, that had well deſerved of him. Thus hee that openeth a gap to ſinne, hath a troope of ſinnes breaking in upon him, and differeth not from one mancipated to ſinne and Satan. For his letter to Joab, Joſephus ſaith, that hee wrote, that Vriah had deſerved to dye, and therefore hee ſhould provide that hee might bee ſlaine, yet ſo, as that it might not ſeeme to bee the Kings act, but by accident. Joab hereby might gather, that hee had ſome way offended David, for which hee was worthy to die, although hee knew not in particular what his offence was. Vriah in carrying this letter, carried the letters of Bellerophon, and put a ſword, as it were, into Joabs hand to cut his owne throat, as Theod. hath it, abiit ferens gladium ſuæ cædis. So Lyſander carryed letters from Pharnabazus to the Ephori of Lacedemonia againſt himſelfe.

Note.

Ioſephus.

Theodoret.

V. 18. Ioſeph.

Then Joab ſent a meſſenger to certifie David of his proceedings, and that Vriah was ſlaine, &c. Joſephus ſaith, that Joab to execute the Kings command and to bring Vriah to his end, ſaid unto him, that there was a piece of ſervice to be done againſt Rabbah by the moſt valiant, amongſt whom David counted him one, wherefore he exhorted him with all alacrity to goe about it, for the credit, wherein hee was with the King, and when hee and others of the moſt valiant had made a breach in the wall, he promiſed to come on with the whole Army to ſecond them, but ſecretly hee ſpake to ſuch as were to joyne with him, to retire in the time of danger, ſome few onely excepted, to whom hee ſpake not. Then Vriah proceeded with courage, and ſo was ſlaine with the reſt, which knew nothing of the policy, and therefore ſtucke to him in fighting againſt the Ammonites and ſlaying many of them before their death.

V. 25. David hearing this, diſſembleth his joy for the death of Vriah, and ſendeth a comfortable anſwer to Joab, whom, the meſſenger might conceive, that the King would thinke greatly troubled, becauſe Vriah a man ſo much beloved, as it might ſeeme, by the King, and one of his worthies, was ſlaine by his overſight.

V. 26. The wife of Vriah hearing that her husband was dead, mourned for him, and when the time of mourning was paſt, David ſent and tooke her to wife, &c. It is generally thought, that Bathſheba her mourning and putting on mourning apparell was faigned, for ſhee was doubtleſſe glad to heare of his death, as being now out of the danger of death for her adultery, ſeeing, as R: Solomon ſaith, her husband had returned from the warre about the time of her conception and ſhee was in hope now to bee made a Queene. For the time of her mourning, Lyra ſaith, it is uncertaine, Peter Martyr conjectureth, that amongſt Hebrewes it was but one month, this being grounded upon the time appointed in the law, for a captive woman to mourne, before that an Hebrew

R. Solomon.

Lyra.
Peter Martyr.
Deut. 21. 13.

Cajetan.
Toſtatus.
Ioſephus.
Theodoret.
Illud quidem erat vehementis cupiditatis, quæ rationi torporem induxerat, hoc autem etiam rationis aſſenſum habuit.

married her; neither could it bee much longer, becauſe ſo the Adultery could not have been covered. Amongſt the Romans a woman might not marry againe after her husbands deceaſe till after ten monethis, and Theodoſius increaſed this time to a yeare, before the expiration whereof if any married againe, he ſaith, that ſhee ſhould be probroſis inuſta notis, & nobilioris ac honeſtioris decore & jure privetur. Cajetan thinketh, that ſhee mourned long, after the manner of noble matrons, but Toſtatus onely ſeven dayes, according to the time ſet, *Eccleſ.*22. 11,12. Joſephus ſaith, ſhee mourned many dayes, that is, as was ſaid before, happily 30. dayes, according to the time, that they mourned for Jacob being dead, and for Moſes. And this is moſt probable, becauſe David would make haſte, and might thinke to marry to advance her houſe ſo greatly, although ſooner then ordinary, would bee no diſhonour unto her. And Theodoret ſaith, there was little time given to mourning: and whereas Verſ. 27. it is ſaid, the thing that David did diſpleaſed the Lord, both hee and Procopius ſay, that this diſpleaſure was chiefly againſt this marriage, for God was more offended at this then at the adultery, becauſe that came from a moſt vehement luſt, which ſtupified reaſon, but this had the aſſent of reaſon. But all are here put together, his adultery, murther and marriage, as one thing; yet that this marriage was more hainous then the adultery ſeemeth probable, Ch. 12.9. where the marriage is ſpoken of, but the adultery not.

CHAP. XII.

Sallianus.
Ioſephus.

V. 1. B*Ut the Lord ſent Nathan to David, who ſaid, There were two men in one Citie, one rich, and the other poore,&c.* The vulgar Latine before the propoſition of the parable hath it, Reſponde mihi judicium, but theſe words are neither in the Hebrew, Septuagint, nor Chaldee Paraphraſe, and they are left out, ſaith Sallianus, in the amended Latine Copies. Joſephus ſaith, that whilſt the King was overjoyed with his new marriage and iſſue, the Lord appeared to Nathan in a viſion by night, who comming to David next day concealed for a time the ſharpe meſſage that hee had to doe unto him, firſt, inſinuating into him by relating ſomewhat touching another man, that in another the King might condemne himſelfe, and ſo bee the more convinced of the fouleneſſe of his fact. The time was not immediatly after the thing done, but after the birth of the child, which was, *Chap.*11, 27. that is, after ten moneths. The reaſon why God let David to goe unreproved ſo long, might bee partly to ſhew, how out of meaſure ſinfull even the beſt man is, if hee bee left unto himſelfe, and partly how efficacious propheſying is, and how little all other meanes doe availe without this to bring to repentance. For David before this went on in adding ſinne to ſinne, and ſlept ſecurely without being moved with any contrition, and yet it is not unlikely, but that hee prayed and read, and heard the Word read in this time. One muſt bee ſent by God to reprove and convince men of their wickedneſſes, as the Preacher is, for how can they preach except they bee ſent? For the parable, whereby Nathan ſought to make him condemne himſelfe taken from a rich man, and a poore dwelling neare unto him, the one having many ſheepe and oxen,&c. the other but one Lamb onely, and when a ſtranger came to the rich mans houſe, hee would not take one of his owne ſheepe, but the poore mans Lamb to entertaine him: it is to be thought that this was ſpoken to him in private, ſo Martyr, although Chryſoſt. as hee ſaith, thinketh that it was ſpoken when his Nobles ſtood about him; and the Prophet began thus, becauſe, as Theod. ſaith, wee behold our owne ſinnes one way and another mans ſinnes another way, for we give juſt ſentence againſt others, yea we oft-times over-judge them, but when wee ſinne, wee either caſt away the ſenſe of the mind altogether, or eaſily pardon our ſelves when wee ſee our ſinne. And generally ſpeaking by parables or ſimilitudes is moſt moving, and therefore the woman of Tekoah dealt with David by parable alſo in the caſe of Abſolom, and Jotham, the youngeſt ſonne of Gideon, *Judg.*9.7. and

Note.
Rom. 10.

Theodoret.

Note.
2 Sam.14.

and the Prophets and Chriſt himſelf. By the rich man was meant David, by the poor, Uriah, who was poor in compariſon of him even in wives, his Lamb, wch he ſo much tendered, was his wiſe, the ſtranger wch came to David, was ſtrange luſt after another mans wiſe, wch is called a ſtranger, ſaith Chryſoſt, becauſe David had not uſed formerly to commit the like ſin: others ſay the devill is meant becauſe he was caſt out of heaven, and ever ſince remained as a ſtranger to that bleſſednes.

Chryſoſt.

V. 5, 6.
Exod. 22. 1.
Peter Martyr.
Deut. 4. 2. 12. 32.

Then Davids wrath was kindled, and hee ſware that the man which did this, ſhould die, and reſtore the Lambe fourefold. This may ſeeme to be unjuſt, becauſe the puniſhment of theſe ought not to be death, but fourfold reſtitution. To this Martyr anſwereth, that ſome think, it was left to the Judge to aggravate the puniſhment, as he ſhould ſee cauſe, but for ſo much as this were an adding to the word of God, which is forbidden, he anſwereth, that ſome theft, viz. that which was with violence might be puniſht with death, Exod. 22. 2. and this taking of the poor mans Lamb, which hee ſo much loved, could not be conceived to be done without violence. Some think, that David in his rage ſpake hyperbolically, to aggravate the ſin, & to ſhew, what he deſerved, not intending to inflict the puniſhment of death upon him, as if a Judge in deteſtation of a moſt foule ſin ſhould ſay, he that did this is worthy of a thouſand deaths, therefore Hebr it is not, he ſhall die, but is the ſonne of death: ſo Toſtatus, and Cajetan, and this is the beſt, for although a thiefe taken breaking into an houſe might bee ſlaine at the inſtant, yet power was not hereby given to the Judge to ſlay him. Whereas Prov. 6. 31. ſevenfold reſtitution is ſpoken of, which alſo exceedeth the Law, it is anſwered, that by ſevenfold, a perfect reſtitution is meant, the number of ſeven being oft uſed to ſet forth perfection. For fourfold, Hebr. is the duall number, and therefore rendred by Martyr twice fourefold, but the Hebrews render it fourefold, and Junius juſtifieth it from a like uſe of this word, Eſa. 30. 26.

Toſtatus.
Cajetan.

Peter Martyr.

Junius.

V. 7.

And Nathan ſaid unto David, Thou art the man: and when David had given ſentence in another mans caſe againſt himſelfe, Nathan hearing him ſay as much as hee deſired, ſo that hee could not but acknowledge himſelf much more worthy of death, for what is robbing to adultery and murther? hee was bold plainely to charge him with the ſinne which hee had committed. God had beſtowed upon him great riches, ſo that hee every way abounded, as it followeth, Thus ſaith the Lord, I anointed thee King over Iſrael, and delivered thee out of the hand of Saul, and I have given thee the houſe of thy Lord, and the wives of thy Lord into thy boſome, &c. Here Martyr moveth two doubts; 1. How the Prophet could upbraid David by Gods benefits, ſeeing it is ſaid, God giveth liberally to all, and upbraideth no man: and anſwereth, that hee upbraideth no man for his often ſeeking to him, but ſuch as ungratefully abuſe his benefits hee upbraideth, to bring them to repentance, as hee did David. Ob. 2. How it is ſaid, that hee had given his maſters wives into his boſome, ſeeing Saul was his father in Law, and ſo it was unlawfull for him to marry any of his wives: and anſwereth, that it is meant onely, that hee gave David power over them to doe with them what hee would; or that by his Lords wives may bee underſtood thoſe women that Saul had power over, as Michol his daughter, and others of his kindred: but ſome, hee ſaith, by his Lord will have God meant, whoſe all his wives were. The firſt is moſt commonly received. Hugo thinketh, that hee took ſome of them, although it bee not recorded. I ſubſcribe rather to this, that they were in his power to bee taken, becauſe there was no man that could hold them from him; and for the Law, Levit. 18. it forbiddeth onely the fathers wiſe, within the compaſſe of which that wife of Saul, who was Michols mother, might happily bee brought, but not the reſt: but that hee actually took any of them, I cannot thinke, becauſe they were too old.

V. 8.

Peter Martyr.
Obj. 1.
James 1. 5.

Obj. 2.

Hugo Card.

V. 9.
Note.

Whereſore haſt thou deſpiſed the word of the Lord to doe evill in ſight, &c. a grievous charge, but hereby appeareth, that who ſo tranſgreſſeth the Law of God is counted a deſpiſer of it: for it is out of a contempt or ſlighting of the Law of God that any man ſinneth. Thou haſt killed Uriah with the ſword, and taken his wife, Hee killed Uriah, becauſe hee appointed it to bee done by the ſword of the Ammonites, as is here further expreſſed, and by ſaying ſo hee made it appeare to David, that the Lord knew of his foule adultery, and letters written to Joab, to ſtrike him the more, as indeed it did, witneſſe that confeſſion, Pſal: 51. 4. againſt thee onely have I ſinned, and done this evill in thy ſight. For his objecting this to him, that hee had taken the wife of Uriah to be his wife, it ſeemeth hereby, that to do ſo was unlawfull, becauſe hee is indicted for this as well as for murther, and if ſo, why was hee not required to put her away againe? Qu. Anſw. There is no law of God, whereby an adulterer is forbidden to marry an adultereſſe, the reaſon might be, becauſe adultery by his law is death, which being executed, there could bee no marrying of ſuch, and ſo there was no need of any law againſt it. If adultery then were ſecretly committed and ſo the offenders eſcaped, as in the preſent caſe, and marryed together, this very marrying was a ſin, becauſe it was an abuſing of Gods Ordinance to colour over adultery, but the perſons ſo marryed were true man and wife, and ought not to bee ſeparated. But ſince, the puniſhment of adultery not being death, conſidering that many women have plotted the deſtruction of their husbands, that they might come to new marriages with the adulterers much more deſired, and adulterers likewiſe have murthered thoſe womens husbands, with whom they have committed this wickedneſſe, it hath ſeemed good unto the Church altogether to forbid ſuch marriages, and to pronounce them nullities, if any ſuch bee made, as Concil: Triburienſi cap: 40. Concil: Tribur. If a man in the life time of his wife commits adultery with another woman, & afterwards marryeth her, this Matrimony ſhall not bee of force. And Auguſt: diſalloweth marriages betweene the adulterous. Auguſt de Nuptiis & Concup. l: 1. c. 10.

V. 10. Therefore the ſword ſhall never depart from thy houſe. The puniſhments threatened for this his great wickedneſſe were four, 1. As hee had ſlaine with the ſword, ſo his houſe ſhould bee waſted with the ſword, and that, not for a time, but alwayes, that is, as is commonly expounded, generation after generation, a very long time, as the word לעו לם rendred for ever, is often taken, and this was verified, when Amnon was ſlaine by Abſalom, and Abſalom by Joab, and in Solomons time, Adonijah by Solomon, and in the raigne of other Kings of his line afterwards, there being many warres between the kingdom of Iſrael and Judah. 2. As hee had taken another mans wife, ſo many of his wifes ſhould bee taken by another. 3. This ſhould bee done openly to his greater confuſion, as was fulfilled, when Abſalom went openly in to his ten Concubines. 4. The death of the childe, that was now borne unto him.

V. 13. And David ſaid to Nathan, I have ſinned. Saul ſaid as much as David, 1 Sam: 15. 24. and yet could obtaine no pardon, although his fault was leſſe, but David, was pardoned, the reaſons ſee there. And Martyr ſaith, that Cain alſo, and Judas, and Simon Magus confeſſed likewiſe, Peter Martyr. Note. ſo that not every one that confeſſeth is pardoned, but hee that confeſſeth and forſaketh ſinne, Prov: 28. 13. and as hee ſaith, having faith to make him flee to God and to cleave unto him. And this turning to God is by his gift, 2 Tim: 2. 25. and the will and deſire, Phil: 2. 13. This confeſſion firſt made to Nathan alone David afterwards publiſhed, and ſo confeſſed openly, Pſ. 51. to put himſelfe to more ſhame, and that it might appeare, that he was truly penitent.

Lyra. V. 14. Nathan told him that God had done away his ſin, that is, ſaith Lyra, in reſpect of the guilt, and of the proper puniſhment, viz. death, thou ſhalt not die. But becauſe hee cauſed the enemies of God to blaſpheme, hee ſaith, that the childe ſhould die, that is to ſay, that God had rejected Saul, and ſet up one to bee King more wicked then hee, and therefore he regarded not, what wickedneſſes men committed, for to ſay this is to blaſpheme. Note. Hereby wee may ſee, that ſinne ſhall not goe unpuniſhed even in the moſt penitent, but they ſhall beare the ſmart of it in this life. The guilt is remitted, and the eternall puniſhments, but not the temporall, ſo Moſes and Aaron were without doubt forgiven, but they were puniſhed for their diſobedience at the waters of Meribah by being cut off before their entrance into Canaan. 1 Cor. 11. 32. And when we are judged, ſaith the Apoſtle, wee are chaſtened of the Lord, that wee might not periſh, ſpeaking of ſome amongſt the Corinthians, that were ſmitten with death. Puniſhments then here abide the beſt if they ſin ne, but theſe through the mercy of God are turned into chaſtiſements for their greater good.

V. 15. Lyra. The Lord then ſtrooke the childe which Uriahs wiſe bare to David, that it was ſicke, the Vulgar Latin, for theſe words, was very ſicke, hath it, hee deſpaired, which is by Lyra expounded thus, hee ſeeing the childe ſmitten ſo, as that it was incurable by any naturall meanes, deſpaired of helping it ſo, and therefore ſought unto God for it by faſting and prayer, becauſe hee knew not yet, whether the ſentence of death againſt the childe were definitive, or ſuch as upon repentance might bee revoked, as afterwards the ſentence againſt Nineveh. The word אנש may bee taken either way, he was weake, or deſpaired, but it is beſt rendered very weake or ſicke.

V. 16. David therefore beſought God for the childe, and faſted, Hebr: faſted a faſt, and went in, and lay all night upon the ground. Hee having obtained by his former humiliation, pardon for his owne life, was not out of hope at the hands of the ſame mercifull God to obtaine pardon for the innocent childe alſo, hee prayed, and faſted long, viz: all day and all night, Joſephus ſaith ſeven dayes, but although the childe died not till the ſeventh day, it is not likely that hee eate nothing all that time, neither is it ſaid ſo here, but that hee would not eate with them. Hee did not onely afflict himſelfe in his faſting by forſaking his bed and lying upon the ground to take his neceſſary reſt all this time, but hee debarred himſelfe from all pleaſure of company, when hee did eate any thing. Peter Martyr, Neither is the ſeventh day wherein the childe died, ſaith Martyr, according to all Hebrew expoſitours to bee under ſtood of Davids faſting, but from the birth of the childe, whereupon it is gathered, that hee died without circumciſion, and yet this troubled not David, as fearing, that becauſe hee dyed without this ſacrament, hee was damned. Circumciſion was then an holy ſacrament indeed, and ſo neceſſary, that it was threatned, that the perſon uncircumciſed ſhould bee cut off, as baptiſme now is alſo to bee eſteemed of, and therefore is by all, that would bee ſaved, moſt earneſtly to bee deſired. Gen: 17. Joſh: 3.5. Yet if any bee prevented by death, before they can bee baptized, wee ought not therefore to deſpaire of their ſalvation, for God can otherwiſe ſave ſuch as hee hath appointed unto life, although this bee the onely ordinary way, which wee are bound to goe.

In the time of this faſting and praying it is thought, that David uttered the words of Pſ: 51. which hee afterwards publiſhed, and another penitentiall Pſalme, viz. the 32. and being ſtricken with a grievous ſickneſſe ſoone after, two penitentiall Pſalmes more, viz: the 6. and 38. V. 18. This humiliation of David notwithſtanding, the Lord executed his ſentence given by the Prophet in ſtriking the childe with death, and herein, ſaith Theodoret, hee provided for the honour of David, becauſe, if hee had lived, hee would have beene a continuall argument of his wickedneſſe, therefore it was hereby provided, that David ſhould not all his life be expoſed to opprobry and confuſion. Theod. qu. 16. in 2. Reg. And another ſaith, that it was moſt convenient that fruit gotten furtivo concubitu, by a theeviſh copulation, ſhould not by him bee enjoyed, but taken from the theefe againe and reſtored to the Lord, that he might not have any comfort of the fruit of his wickedneſſe. The puniſhment then was not the childes, but Davids, ſeeing when God ſtriketh with death, hee doth but take away what hee hath given to be taken againe when he pleaſeth.

V. 20. The Childe being dead, David aroſe from the ground, and waſhed and anointed himſelfe, and changed his apparell, and went to the houſe of the Lord and worſhiped, &c. Hee mourned no more for him being dead, neither prayed for him, as the Papiſts doe for their dead. Ob: Hee mourned for Saul and Jonathan, for Abner and Abſalom, who were men, although he mourned not for a childe, who went not to Purgatory, but to limbus infantum. Sol: He mourned indeed, but prayed not for them, and his mourning was for the loſſe which the Commonwealth had by their deaths, and the triumph that the enemies made. Peter Martyr. As for the place which they call limbus infantum, Peter Martyr ſaith, that Pelagius was the firſt inventer of it, becauſe he would not, that children dying without

Numb. 19.14.

Note.

baptiſme, or of old without circumciſion went either to heaven or to hell. For his going to the houſe of the Lord, that is, the Tabernacle made for the Arke, which was neare to his owne houſe, hee did not in this contrary to the law, which pronounceth them uncleane that bee in the tent, where a dead body is ſeven dayes: for he came not into the roome, where the dead childe was, but having heard by his ſervants that it was dead, went to the houſe of the Lord. This ſhewed the great piety of David, in that he ceaſed not to worſhip and put his truſt in God, although hee ſeemed to neglect him, and would not grant his deſire for the life of the childe, as Job ſaid, that hee would truſt in God, although hee ſhould kill him, and ſo ought every faithfull perſon to doe. His worſhipping here ſtood in three things, 1. praiſing of God for his goodneſſe towards him in pardoning his great ſinnes, and ſparing his life; 2. confeſſing his owne wickedneſſe; 3. praying that the croſſes further to come upon him might bee lightened, or that he might bee enabled to beare them, and to profit thereby, thus Martyr.

V. 22, 23.

2 King. 4.
1 King. 17.

Sallianus.

After this hee returned to his owne houſe and did eate, which when his ſervants wondred at, he anſwered, that whilſt the childe lived, hee was not without hope of his reſtitution to health, but now hee could not bring him backe againe, I, ſaith hee, ſhall goe to him, but hee ſhall not come to mee, whereby he ſhewed his hope of the reſurrection of the body, and of the life to come, yet afterwards ſome that dyed, were called backe to life againe, as the Shunamites childe by Eliſha, and the widowes of Sarepta by Elijah, but none, the recovery of whoſe health the ſame holy men had prayed for before and could not prevaile. Whereas wee from Davids ceaſing to faſt and pray, when the childe was dead, bring an argument againſt praying for the dead, the Jeſuite ſeeketh to avoid it, by ſaying, that David ceaſed not to pray but onely for life to bee reſtored againe in this world, whereas it is not ſaid ſo, but ſeeing this could bee the onely end of praying and faſting now, there was no reaſon why he ſhould continue ſo to doe, ſith there was no hope of this. It came not then ſurely into his minde, that any other good could come to a ſoule departed by his praying for it, neither did any of the faithfull thinke upon any ſuch matter then, but this was in an invention broached many yeares after.

V. 24. And David comforted Bathſheba and went in unto her and lay with her, &c. The Hebrewes to make this paſſage to agree the better, ſaith that Bathſheba was ſo troubled at the death of her childe, that ſhe feared, if ſhe ſhould have any more children by David, that they would all bee ſoone ſtricken with death alſo, wherefore ſhee refuſed to lie with him any more, but hee underſtanding by revelation, that hee ſhould have a ſonne by her, who ſhould bee the happieſt and wiſeſt upon earth, and that the Meſſiah ſhould come of him, told her of it, and ſware unto her, that hee ſhould raigne after him, and this was his comforting of her here ſpoken of, for which cauſe ſhe alleadgeth the oath, that he made unto her, 1 King: 1. 17. This, as Martyr ſaith, wee cannot tell, whether it were ſo or not, and yet it is not to bee doubted, but ſhee was touched with the conſcience of her ſinne, and afflicted with ſorrow, for which ſhee had need of comfort by being told, what the Prophet had ſaid unto David, that hee ſhould not dye, and that God had done away his ſinne, and if his, then hers alſo. And it is not improbable, but that hee might then ſweare unto her for her greater comfort, that if God would give him another ſonne by her, hee ſhould ſucceed him in the kingdome, and this hee could not well doe without particular direction from God, ſeeing hee had ſonnes already, to the eldeſt of which the kingdome of right belonged after him. And that the ſonne who ſhould have the kingdome, was not yet borne, ſeemeth to bee intimated ch: 12. in the ſpeech of Nathan unto him, and more plainely 1 Chron: 22. 9. where Solomon is named, and ſo here the ſonne borne is called Solomon, and it is ſaid, the Lord loved him, Now this going in of David to his wife Bathſheba is not to bee thought to have beene but ſome good time comming betweene, becauſe her purification was not ended, till the 40 day after puerpery. The Lord, ſaith Lyra, is ſaid to love the childe for the great grace which he gave unto him in his youth, al-

Lyra ſaith, then it was revealed unto him that this ſonne ſhould reigne after him.
Lyra.

though hee erred in his old age, or for the excellent parts both of body and minde, which he beſtowed upon him; And hee ſent by the hand of Nathan and called him Jedidiah, that by him, hee might bee holily brought up and taught and ſo made the more fit for the kingdome, thus Lyra. But Martyr who although hee agreeth with him as touching the Lords loving of him, this is ſpoken for the great gifts and graces beſtowed upon him, and for that hee was made King before his elder brethren, and lived in peace and all worldly glory, yet comming to ſpeake of Nathans being ſent to call him Iedidiah, hee ſaith, that this is added, as a reaſon of the former ſpeech, the Lord loved him, this ſhewed that hee loved him, becauſe hee ſent by his Prophet to call him Iedidiah, that is, the beloved of God, as the ſame was alſo further declared afterwards by the ſingular favours done unto him. Hereby, as alſo by the example of Jacob it appeareth, how freely and without any precedent merit of his God loveth man, becauſe hee loved Solomon, before that hee had done either good or evill. This ſpeaking of Solomon, as of Jacob, that the Lord loved him, ſaith Hugo, is taken for an argument of his election, but even reprobates, ſaith hee, are beloved of God for a time, but how this may bee proved I thinke no man can tell; to bee beloved of God, and in token thereof to have a name given him of God, and that in the infancy, is ſo rare, as that I dare not but take it for an argument of Solomons election, as alſo becauſe hee was a figure of his beloved ſonne, and a penman of holy ſcripture. It may ſeeme ſtrange, that conſidering in what an infamous manner David and Bathſheba came together, the iſſue of this marriage ſhould bee ſo graced; but this was not done to encourage others to doe the like, but to ſhew the infinite mercy of God towards penitent ſinners, and to confirme the marriage, which otherwiſe might have beene ſuſpected, whether allowable before God or not, that when Solomon ſhould come afterwards to raigne, hee might without all doubting bee by the people received for King. And it is to bee noted, that not any other, but the ſame Prophet, who was ſent to taxe David before, was now againe ſent to confirme him touching Gods favour reconciled to him upon his penitency, that there might bee the more aſſurance, whereas otherwiſe one might have ſeemed to ſpeake againſt another. And it is thought by expoſitors that Nathan had the education of Solomon committed unto him.

V. 25.
Peter Martyr.

Hugo Cardin.

And Joab fought againſt Rabbah of the children of Ammon and tooke the royall City, &c. Hee had lien long at the ſiege of this City contrary to Davids accuſtomed manner, viz: about a yeare, for the childe begotten after this warre begun was borne and dead, and David repented and was to God reconciled, and comforted his wife Bathſheba. Whilſt hee lay in his ſinne at home, his Army could not proſper abroad, as of old; till the ſinne of Achan was expiated, Iſrael could not prevaile againſt Ai. But now his Captaine Joab prevaileth and taketh Rabbah, and ſendeth word to David, that hee had taken the City of waters, willing him to haſten thither, that hee might take the City. If Joab had already taken it, how could David come and take it? Some anſwer, that of this City there were two parts, which were as two Cities, one the City of waters, which is alſo called the royall City, becauſe the King commonly kept his Court there, as being the moſt pleaſant, this was now taken, but not the other, which by taking of this yet was made eaſie to be taken, becauſe happily water was conveyed from hence into the other, without whicit could not long ſubſiſt, and becauſe the ſtrength of all lay in the waters, which made it the more inacceſſible, being in that part defended by the river Jabbor as Adrichomius ſaith; Others expound the word tooke it, thus, he was now ready to take it, or he had in a manner taken it, and then ſent to David, becauſe the next words in the Vulgar Latin are, capienda eſt urbs aquarum, the City of waters is now about to bee taken. I ſubſcribe to the ſecond, becauſe David, when hee had taken the City, tooke the Kings Crowne from his head, therefore hee tooke the royall City, and not Joab before his comming, ſeeing that muſt needes bee the royall City, where the King lived. Moreover the Verbe rendered I have taken, may as well bee rendered, I take, for the Hebrewes have but one tenſe for both the preſent and preterfect tenſe. When Joab ſaw

V. 26.

Note.

Peter Martyr.
Cajetan.

Toſtatus.
Hugo Card.
Lyra.
Joſephus.

Joſephus.

that the Ammonites could hold out no longer, he ſent word to David, I doe even now take or am taking the the Citie, in which worke I muſt goe on without delay, unleſſe thou commeſt ſpeedily and takeſt it; this is plainly his meaning, and if it bee thus underſtood, wee ſhould not need to goe upon conjectures of two parts of the Citie, both called by the name of Cities; which is uncertaine; and if one of theſe two had been taken already, how ſhould the calling of that at the leaſt after Joabs name bee avoided? to avoid which, and ſo the envy that hereupon might follow in David againſt him, hee ſent ſo haſtily to David to come away. For hee had ſeene before in the example of David envied by Saul for the praiſe given unto him, what a dangerous thing it was for a Captaine to have more aſcribed unto him, then the King. And he would have David to come with new forces, when as thoſe that were there already were ſufficient to take the Citie, that it might ſeeme the more probable, that hee with his new forces had done it, and ſo he might have all the glory of this great victory. Joſephus deſcribing the ſtate of the Citie, before that David was ſent for, ſaith that their waters were all cut off, wherewith they uſed to bee ſupplyed from the River Jabbok, and now they had but one little ſpring left, which yeelded them water ſo ſparingly, that it was delivered out by meaſure, and they were alſo oppreſſed with famine, ſo as that Joab conceived now, that it would bee an eaſie matter to take the Citie, and of this hee by Letters certified David. And by this wee may gather the reaſon, why Rabbah was called the Citie of waters.

V. 29.

Hieron. Lyra, Hugo, Schol. Hiſt. Toſtatus in 1 Paral. 20.

Deut. 7. 25. Peter Martyr. Cajetan, Arias, Pagninus, Vatablus, Toſtatus in 2 Reg. 12. Joſephus.

Numb. 31.

Toſtatus.

David then gathered all the people together, and came and fought againſt Rabbah, &c. By all the people here underſtand all that remained about Jeruſalem who were fit for warre, for neither was it neceſſary to ſend further to gather them, neither would the haſte required permit him ſo to doe. And with theſe hee tooke the Citie, and tooke the Crowne from their Kings head, which weighed a Talent of Gold. 1 Chron. 20. 1. it is ſaid, that Joab ſmote Rabbah and deſtroyed it, ſo that when the King had for his honours ſake taken it, Joab proſecuted the victory with ſlaughter and deſtruction. Touching their Kings Crowne, there is a difference amongſt expoſitours, ſome following Jeroms tranſlation, and interpretation according to the traditions of the Hebrews, ſaying, that their Idoll is here called Melchom their King, ſay that this Crown was taken off the head of their Idoll Moloch or Melchom, for ſo was the Idoll of the Ammonites called, 1 King. 11. 5. And they reaſon from the great weight of it being 25. pound, and ſo too heavy for any man to weare, and from this that it was taken off his head, whereas their King certainly aboad not now with his Crowne upon his head, but fled to hide himſelfe as lightly as hee could: others rejecting this, becauſe if it had been the ornament of an Idoll, it had not beene lawfull for David to take it, but it ſhould have beene burnt with fire, according to Law: and P. Martyr ſaith, that the word here uſed is Malchom, not Milchom, as the Idol was called, wherefore it was the Crowne of their King, in the taking away of which, hee noteth, that hee was puniſhed becauſe he had ſo groſly abuſed Davids meſſengers, now he payd deare for his deriſion. I ſubſcribe to this, becauſe the Crowne was taken off this Kings head, and ſet upon Davids head, which if it had beene the Crowne of an abominable Idoll, ſhould not certainly have been done: Moreover if Milchom had been meant, ſomething ſhould have beene further added for expreſſion, as their God, or their Idoll. For the other argument, from the unlawfulneſſe of taking the golden ornament of an Idoll, is anſwered by Kimbi, and by Lyra, that it is to bee underſtood of Idols of the ſeven Nations, who were to bee deſtroyed, and not of other heathens, wherefore much gold and ſilver was brought by the Iſraelites from the Midianites, who were not of theſe nations, and yet it was to be bee purged by the fire, to intimate, that otherwiſe it had beene uncleane by reaſon of their Idols, to whom happily a great deale of it had belonged. Toſtatus rejecteth this, holding, that onely that was commanded to bee burnt, wherein there was danger of drawing them to Idolatry, which was not in the Ornaments of Idols, or in the Gold or ſilver of them, their forme being altered

red. But this is plainly againſt the Text, Deut. 7.25. Thou ſhalt not covet their gold nor their ſilver, but burne them with fire, ſo that the object of coveting was to bee burnt, and not onely that, which might draw to Idolatry. Some Hebrewes anſwer that argument moſt ridiculouſly, that they might not poſſeſſe any thing belonging to Idols, which themſelves had taken, but if it had been taken by another and given to them they might, and this Crowne was taken by Ittai the Gittite, and given to David. For the objections brought againſt our tenet, that it was two heavy for a man to weare, that cannot bee, becauſe how then did David weare it afterwards upon his head? 2. That their King had no time now to weare his Crowne being in ſuch danger, for if ſo, how did Saul weare his in his laſt battell againſt the Philiſtims? hee might now have it on, either to die in his royall ornament, or to animate his men the more to the laſt.

2 Sam. 1. 10.

V. 31. And hee brought forth the people and put them under Sawes and Harrowes of Iron, the vulgar Latine hath it, hee ſawed them, and drew Iron Harrowes over them, and divided them with Knives, and put them into the Furnace of Bricke. Our tranſlation, under Axes of Iron, and made them to paſſe through the Brickkilne, and thus hee did to all the Cities of the children of Ammon. Hereby is meant, that hee put them divers wayes to tormenting deaths, but it is not, ſaith Lyra, to bee underſtood, that hee did ſo to all, but to ſuch as were of that councell, which would have Davids meſſengers abuſed. Pellican ſaith, to the chiefe of every Citie both for this and other great wickedneſſes committed by them, whereof hee had beene certified by Joab, who thought not himſelf therefore ſufficient to puniſh them, but would have David to come and take order for this, they had burnt their children to Moloch, and therefore it was juſt to make them to paſſe through the fire, and happily they had blaſphemed the God of Iſrael and his people, for which it was juſt otherwiſe by extraordinary tortures to put them to death, for all things that were done are not recorded. They had cut their garments off by the middle, therefore they were ſawne inſunder by the middle, and as they had carried them about upon Sleads drawne from place to place in deriſion, ſo they had Harrowes drawne over them, and as they had with Razours ſhaved off the haire of half their heads and beards, ſo they had their heads and faces halfe cut off with ſharpe knives or Swords. If this ſhall bee thought to bee too great crueltie, Theodoret ſaith, it ought to bee remembred, that once they would have put out the right eyes of all the men of Jabeſh Gilead, and therefore they were now puniſhed in their kind. But it is not likely, ſaith Toſtatus, that this was now done in revenge of that, both becauſe it was long before in the beginning of Sauls reigne, neither was there then ſuch a thing done, but offered to bee done, neither was it done meerely to revenge the indignities offered to Davids meſſengers, becauſe puniſhments ought to hold ſome proportion with the offences committed, otherwiſe it is crueltie: but partly for that, partly for requiting Davids good will with evill, that others might feare to abuſe Ambaſſadours of ſo mightie Kings, and laſtly becauſe they had ſtirred up the Syrians and other nations againſt David, whereby they had put him to a warre of long continuance to the expence of great ſummes of money, and the loſſe of many of his ſubjects lives, and if in this time any of them fell into their hands, they did doubtleſſe uſe all barbarous crueltie towards them. Thus alſo Martyr, who ſaith, that crueltie hath the name a cruore, from blood, and it is when the blood of any man is ſhed without juſt cauſe, a delight being taken herein, or the meaſure being exceeded, for that ſaith Seneca, is cruelty, whereby the meaſure of the offence is exceeded in the puniſhment. But David did not exceed for the reaſons before going, as neither Gideon, when hee toare the men of Succoth to death with Briars and Thornes, becauſe it is Gods will that this ſeveritie ſhould ſometime bee exerciſed againſt the wicked, as a præludium of the torments to come for ever upon them at the laſt day without all mercy.

Lyra.
Pellican.
Theod. in 2 Reg. qu. 20.
1 Sam. 11.
Toſtatus.
Peter Martyr.
Seneca lib. 2. de Clementia.

That all in every Citie of the Ammonites were not now deſtroyed, as was before ſaid, appeareth, becauſe one ſonne of Nabaſh lived ſtill in Rabbah, 2 Sam. 17.

17. 27. and ſuccoured David, happily being by him made King in his mothers ſtead.

The Morall. Morally as Joab would that David ſhould have all the honour of the victory, which hee indeed had gotten, but warring under David, ſo muſt wee aſcribe all the glory of our prevailing againſt ſinne unto Chriſt, who, and not wee, taketh the City: and the Crowne taken off the Kings head and ſet upon Davids head, figured out the glory that redounds to Chriſt by his Saints overcomming the Devill, for all the honour hereof is his alone.

CHAP. XIII.

AFter the ſinnes of David and puniſhments threatned therefore, and ſecretly executed by the death of his child, now follow his open puniſhments, Lyra. ſaith Lyra, and firſt in the deflowring of his daughter Thamar, as hee had deflowred Vriahs wife, and then in the murther of his ſonne Amnon, as hee had murthered Vriah. Amnon burnt in luſt towards Thamar, Abſoloms ſiſter, V. 1,2. for by the ſame woman that David had Abſolom hee had Thamar alſo, and 3,4. therefore ſhee was called Abſoloms ſiſter, but how to doe any thing to her hee
5,6. knew not, that is, for the ſatisfying of his filthy luſt, because the Kings daughters Ioſeph. which were Virgins were kept cloſe, ſo as that no man could come to them, and ſo were other Virgins alſo, to prevent all danger; a Virgin was 7,8. therefore called עלמה from hiding; and this made him to pine away, for the paſſions of the mind if they bee exceſſive, as of love, hatred or feare; doe macerate 9,10. the body. Jonadab his friend, and coſin german, a ſubtle man to doe 11,12. evill, ſeeing this and underſtanding the cauſe, giveth him wicked counſell, to faine himſelfe ſick, that under the colour of that hee might obteine her company 13,14. alone to make ſomething for him, which hee ſhould feigne that he longed to have her to doe. This counſell hee deferred not to follow, and ſo gat an opportunitie to force her, ſhee reſiſting all that ſhee could, and diſſwading him from this vile attempt, and willing him if his love were ſo great, to ſpeake to the King that hee might have her, who ſhee ſaid, certainly would not Levit. 18.9. deny her to him. But of this it is doubted, ſeeing a brother might not marry with the daughter of his father or of his mother. The Hebrews anſwer, that Maacah the mother of Thamar was taken in warre, and David having married her according to the Law, ſhee brought forth this daughter being begotten by a former husband, and if ſo, there was no neareneſſe of blood to hinder this marriage. But this ſeemeth to bee a fiction of the Rabbins, who are bould to fgeine any thing; rather it is likely, that Thamar ſpake thus, as willing to ſay any thing to keepe him from this foule ſinne, as Joſephus hath it, for ſhee could not bee ignorant of the Law not onely forbidding, but curſing ſuch a marriage, Deut. 27.22. Amnon certainly knew it, and becauſe ſhee was his ſiſter, hee had no hope of obtaining her. This was a grievous puniſhment 2 Sam: 3. to David, for Amnon was his eldeſt ſonne, and ſo by his birthright ſhould have ſucceeded him in the kingdome, but God foreſeeing this, and the miſerable end, that hee ſhould come unto, diſpoſed otherwiſe of it, and it was ſo much the more grievous, becauſe by the ſubtletie of Jonadab, he himſelfe was made an inſtrument, though ignorantly, to helpe to the committing of this ſinne, in that hee ſent Thamar to Amnons houſe: ſhee being come, and having prepared for him to eate, hee firſt refuſed, as if hee had been very ſicke, and ſo bad all to goe out, then hee called for her againe, and having her alone forced P. Martyr. her. To put away this unlawfull luſt, ſaith Martyr, Amnon ſhould have prayed unto God and taken him a lawfull wife, but not doing thus hee continued ſubject unto it. The heathen preſcribe three remedies, λιμὸν, that is, faſting;
2. χρόνον, time, to deferre and not ſuddenly to ſeeke to have it ſatisfied;
2 Sam: 3. 3. βρόχον, that is, an halter. And hee ſaith, that both Davids adultery was now puniſhed, and his marrying of a daughter of the uncircumciſed, for ſuch was Maacah, the mother of Thamar, viz. the daughter of the King of Geſhur.

Then

V. 15.

Then Amnon hated her exceedingly, this may ſeeme ſtrange, and contrary to the common manner, that having injoyed her, whom hee ſo much deſired, hee ſhould now have his moſt ardent love turned into extreame hatred, for Shechem having defloured Dinah had his ſoule made hereby to cleave unto her, and it falleth out to many others likewiſe; yet Phædra, as the Poets faine, did likewiſe hate Hippolytus, and Nero his mother, after that hee had lien with her. The Rabbins yeeld this a reaſon, that in forcing her hee had hurt himſelfe, and becauſe ſhee ſpake moſt vilely to him; Cajetan, that his deſire being ſatisfied, there was a turning of the humours, and ſo of the affection: but then it would bee ſo commonly. Peter Martyr better, that hee was pricked in conſcience and aſhamed for his horrible ſinne, and ſo grew into an hatred of her, with whom hee committed it; and through the judgement of God againſt David it came thus to paſſe, that it might bee knowne to Davids griefe, and to make way to further calamity unto him, when hee ſhould heare of Amnon being ſlaine for this, whereas if Amnon had not turned to this hatred, it might have been concealed.

Gen. 34.

Cajetan.

Peter Martyr.

V. 16.

Thamar ſeeing his love to bee turned into ſo great hatred, in that hee commanded her to bee put out of the Chamber forthwith, and the doore to bee bolted after her, expoſtulated with him, ſaying, that this was a greater evill then the former. But hereby ſhee meant not, that the inceſt and this putting of her away in hatred being compared together, it was greater, but both being done to one perſon, the evill was aggravated, for hee ſhould rather now have comforted her and ſpoken kindly to her, and ſuffered her to ſtay till night, that then ſhee might ſecretly have departed, and ſo her credit being preſerved, ſhee might afterwards have notwithſtanding this wrong, injoyed ſome good marriage, whereas by ſending her away preſently, the crime was made notorious by reaſon of many about the houſe, which beheld her as ſhee went away. Happily ſhee thought, if his love had ſtill continued towards her, the King her father might in ſuch a caſe have diſpenſed with the Law, and married her unto him, or otherwiſe have provided for her honour, ſith it was at his command, that ſhee went unto him, and hee might ſome way have beene excuſed, as being mad in a manner through love, and ſo doing hee knew not what, thus Martyr.

Peter Martyr.

V. 19.

Then Thamar cried and put aſhes on her head, and rent her garment of divers colours. Shee cryed not out before, although Joſephus affirmeth it, for if ſhee had, there was company neare that might have broken in to reſcue her, but now like one growne deſperate, as not caring what became of her, ſhee made known by her crying, what a ſhamefull thing had been done, and ſhee goeth not to her father, but to her brother Abſolom, as if ſhee thought him her beſt friend, and were in her mind exaſperated againſt her father for ſending her to Amnons houſe, where ſhee had been ſo groſly abuſed. Touching her party-coloured garment it is ſaid, that with ſuch the Kings daughters, who were virgins, uſed to bee apparelled; but not other Virgins, who were of an inferiour ranke, for it is fit, that diverſe degrees ſhould bee diſtinguiſhed by diverſitie of apparell, thus Jacob ſometime apparelled his ſonne Joſeph. Lyra ſaith, that it is not to bee underſtood, that Thamar at her firſt going out from Amnon put aſhes upon her head &c. but after that ſhee was come into Abſolams houſe, leſt by doing ſo publikely ſhee ſhould manifeſt her ſhame; ſo likewiſe Toſtatus, but Joſephus, that ſhee went crying out in the middeſt of the Citie, and Chryſoſtome, through the ſtreet, which is moſt probable, and that exclaiming againſt Amnon and ſaying, that hee had raviſht her, leſt ſhee ſhould bee thought to have beene put away as an whore. Thus Amnon through the juſt judgement of God by putting away Thamar in hatred bewrayed his owne wickedneſſe to the indangering of his life. Abſolom comforteth his ſiſter, bidding her to hold her peace, and telling her, that it was her brother, whereby hee meant not, that in this reſpect hee might doe this unto her, but that the leſſe blame could bee laid upon her for being alone with him, whom ſhee could not ſuſpect that hee would offer her this wrong, and by holding her peace ſhee might the better provide

Lyra.

Toſtatus.
Joſephus.
Chryſoſt.

V. 20.

for the credit of their family, to all which ſo foule a fault, was a great blot being once divulged and not to Amnon alone.

V. 21. And when David heard of all theſe things, hee was very wroth, the vulgar Latine addeth, and hee would not grieve the ſpirit of Amnon, becauſe hee greatly loved him and hee was his firſt borne: thus alſo the Septuag. and Joſephus, but the Hebrew hath it not. But it ſeemeth, that it ſhould bee underſtood, ſeeing it is not ſaid, that David puniſhed Amnon for it, or reproved him, wherefore it ſeemed good to the LXX. Interpreters to adde it, that the reaſon, why hee was onely wroth but did nothing, might appeare. There was a great reaſon why David ſhould bee much affected at hearing this, becauſe they were both his children, and ſo it redounded greatly to his diſhonour, that ſuch wickedneſſe ſhould bee committed amongſt them, he alſo being in a manner the occaſion of it in ſending Thamar. But whether ought hee not to have done more then bee angry or grieved for his foule fault? Some ſay, hee ſhould have judged Amnon according to the Law, for ſo much as hee was the ſupreme Judge upon earth, to judge and to ſee execution done for offences committed againſt the Lawes of God, according to which Lawes Amnon ſhould have beene put to death, both becauſe hee was inceſtuous, and becauſe hee lay with her by force: For this laſt, ſaith Cajetan, they ſhould both have died, if any had proſecuted the Law againſt them, hee for the rape, ſhee becauſe being in an houſe ſhee cryed not out. And therefore David is by ſome condemned, as ſinning againe herein. But for the Law touching rapes, Cajetan is much miſtaken, ſeeing death is not appointed, but in caſe of being betroathed to an husband, as Lyra well noteth. As for inceſt in Amnon, hee denyeth it, but againſt the conſent of all other expoſitors, that hee might cleare David. Hugo cleareth him, becauſe Amnon was greatly grieved already and penitent, but this is againſt all probabilitie. It was his over-indulgent affection to his ſonne Amnon, ſeeing him looke ſo thinne and wanne, that hee was unwilling to grieve him more by ſpeaking or doing any thing againſt him, thus for the preſent, but as Lyra hath it, hee did doubtleſſe afterwards, as a father, reprove him in ſecret. Pellican, becauſe thoſe words touching his love to Amnon are not in the Hebrew, rejecteth them, but juſtifieth David in his doing no execution, becauſe he conſidered his owne ſin, and this as a puniſhment laid upon him therefore. Wherefore hee could do nothing more adviſedly, then anxiouſly to expect the hand of God hanging over him, and humbly imbrace it, and pacifie Gods clemency by prayers; to which, as the beſt, I ſubſcribe. And ſo we ſhall not need to argue either as Lyra doth, that there being no accuſer, nor witneſſe produced, but Thamar herſelfe being ſilent, after ſhee came to Abſolom, David could doe no execution, nor with Peter Martyr in ſeeking to take this away, that the King hearing of ſo foule a crime ſhould have ſearched it out, and puniſhed it; for conſidering what had gone before, and was threatned againſt him, hee might well think himſelfe unfit to ſtirre in this matter.

Qu.
Toſtatus.
Peter Martyr.
Levitic. 17.
Cajetan.
Deut: 22.
Lyra.
Hugo Card.
Pellican.

Quomodo filium acerbe, ut meruerat, punire poſſit, qui ſeipſum cognovit majori ſuo crimine admiſſionem hujus in filio ſuo commeruiſſe: Et non tam peccatum eſſe in filio judicavit, quam pœnā peccati in ſe patre commiſſi. Nihil ergo conſultius fieri potuit, quam impendentem Domini manum anxie expectare, & humiliter amplecti, &c.

V. 22. Abſolom the brother of Thamar in the meane ſeaſon conceived great hatred againſt Amnon, but hee ſpake nothing either good or bad unto him, that is, as is generally held, touching the injury offered to his ſiſter, but by his ſilence paſſed it over, as if hee had not ſeemed to regard it: For if hee had ſpoken unto him nothing at all by way of communication, hee could never have had ſuch an opportunitie to bee revenged upon him, becauſe hee might well have knowne his hatred againſt him. In not ſpeaking then hee diſſembled it, and made Amnon to thinke, that his brotherly affection was never the leſſe towards him, till the time came, wherein hee meant to bee revenged. And hee was prickt on the more, ſaith Martyr, to take this revenge upon him, becauſe he was his elder brother, and if hee were taken out of the way, hee ſhould bee in the more hope of attaining the kingdome, V. 23. Verſ. 23. At the end of two yeares, when Amnon ſuſpected

Peter Martyr.
Cajetan.
Dionyſius.
Toſtatus.

ſuſpected nothing, Abſalom made a feaſt at his ſheepſhearing in Baalhaſor neare unto Ephraim, to which hee invited Amnon, and all the Kings ſonnes, &c. For his feaſting, it was a thing commonly uſed amongſt the Hebrewes at their ſheepſhearing, becauſe their forefathers were ſhepherds, as wee may ſee before in Nabals example and that of Judah, for the place it is ſaid to bee neare Ephraim; Joſeph: and Adrichom: and Toſtatus ſay, in the Tribe of Ephraim, others in the borders of Benjamin, next unto that Tribe, but that conjecture is rather to bee approved, that by Ephraim here is not meant a Tribe, but a City called Ephrem, or Ephraim, as Jerome ſaith, of which City mention is made Joh: 11. 54. and this ſtood in the Tribe of Judah, where Abſaloms poſſeſſions muſt lie, ſeeing hee was of that Tribe; H:B: ſaith, it lay 8 miles from Jeruſalem in the way to Jericho neare to mount Ephraim. At this place was his ſheepſhearing, and hither hee deſired both the King to come and all his ſons, that there might be no ſuſpition of his ill meaning towards Amnon. But it was a very bold enterpriſe, to thinke to kill him even in the Kings preſence. But David refuſed to goe, leſt hee and his company ſhould bee overchargeable to him, and hee was hardly entreated to let Amnon goe, whom hee ſpecially deſired to be there, pretending doubtleſſe the greater grace to bee herein done unto him, becauſe hee was the eldeſt and repreſented the King, but ſecretly intending to murther him.

1 Sam: 25.
Gen: 38.;

Hieron: de locis Hebr.
H. Bunting Patriar. travailes.

V. 28.

Abſalom having prevailed, and the King promiſing to ſend all his ſonnes, he gave a charge to his ſervants, when Amnon ſhould bee merry with wine, at his bidding inſtantly to ſmite and kill him, which they did acccordingly, and then all the Kings ſonnes fled each one upon his Mule. Hee was ſo cowardly and effeminate, ſaith Pellican, that hee durſt not doe it himſelfe, but propounding to his ſervants that if Amnon were taken out of the way, hee ſhould bee heire to the Crowne, hee promiſed to ſave them harmeleſſe and well to reward them, and to take the fact upon himſelfe, having a purpoſe then alſo in his minde without doubt afterward to murther his father. Some conjecture and that not improbably, that theſe ſervants of Abſalom were Geſhurites of his mothers country, and ſo were the leſſe afraid, becauſe they had nothing there to loſe, if they ſhould forthwith flee away with their maſter to Geſhur, as v:37. The reſt of the Kings ſonnes ſtayed not to revenge their brothers death, for if they had ſo done, they might all have beene indangered, but they fled upon their Mules, which is a mungrell kinde of beaſt comming of an Horſe and an Aſſe, ſuch as it was unlawfull for the Iſraelites to breed, ſaith Martyr, but Ariſtotle ſaith, that in Syria there were Mules of another kinde more ſwift in travaile then theſe; howſoever, although the Iſraelites were forbidden to breed the firſt ſort, yet they were not forbidden to uſe them.

Pellican.

Lyranus.
Toſtatus.
Dionyſius.

Peter Martyr.
Levit: 19. 19.
Ariſtot: l: 8. *de nat animal:c:*24.

V. 30.

Newes then was brought to David, that Abſalom had ſlaine all his ſonnes, which ſtrucke ſuch ſorrow into him, that hee rent his garments and lay upon the earth, &c. and indeed how could hee doe otherwiſe, conſidering his great love to his children, the author of the murther, the treacherous manner, his cauſing of them to goe, and the hand of God herein againſt him for his ſinne in murthering Uriah, hee had heard of that with pleaſure, now hee heareth of the murther of his ſonnes to his extreame ſorrow. Thus great griefe is ſometime cauſed by children, that a man may wiſh with Auguſtus Cæſar, that either hee had lived alwayes a ſingle life, or beene without children. But fame in this, as commonly it doth, exceeded the truth, Amnon onely was ſlaine, as Jonadab the ſonne of Shimeah Davids brother told him, ſeeking hereby ſomewhat to mitigate his ſorrow; This hee ſpake not out of a certain knowledge, but conjecturally, as hee was witty and privy to the occaſion of Abſaloms hatred againſt Amnon, as being the man that had counſelled Amnon to that wickedneſſe, for which hee was now ſlaine, and happily as Martyr hath it, Abſalom although hee bare his malice againſt Amnon in ſecret, yet to Jonadab hee might at ſome time diſcover it. It is falſe then, which the Hebrewes faigne, that hee was Nathan the Prophet, having two names, and ſo knew by the Spirit what was done, for ſo holy a man would never have given ſo wicked counſell, as he did to Amnon before v. 5.

V. 32.
Lyra.

As

V. 34, 35. 36. As J*onadab* foretold, ſo David by and by ſeeth it verified, for all his other ſonnes returned, and wept, and then David wept alſo and his ſervants; they for the loſſe of their brother, and that hee was ſlaine by their brother, thinking alſo upon the ignominy of their ſiſter Thamar; the King for his ſon periſhing in his drunkenneſſe to the hazzard of his ſoule alſo, who was moſt deare unto him, and for his owne ſinne, the cauſe of all this; and the ſervants out of compaſſion, ſeeing ſo flouriſhing a family of their Lord and Maſter ſo ſuddenly brought to ſuch miſery.

V. 37. As for Abſalom, hee thinking it not ſafe for him to abide in the kingdome after this fact, fled to Geſhur to Talmai the King, to whom hee was nearely allyed by his mother, as ch: 3. 3. for Maacah his mother was daughter to Talmai, where Geſhur lay, ſee 1 Sam: 27. 8. Hee thought happily by his mediation, that Davids wrath might bee pacified towards him, or keeping a farre off for a time hee might more eaſily bee afterwards reconciled. Wherefore he tarryed in Geſhur 3 yeares.

V. 39. Lyra. In the mean ſeaſon David having mourned his fill for Amnon began to long to ſee his ſonne Abſalom againe Lyra ſaith, hee by this time conſidered in his minde, that Amnon periſhed juſtly for his wickedneſſe, and ſo hee ceaſed to mourne any more for him. But it is rather to bee thought, that hee ceaſed mourning, becauſe hee could not by mourning bring him backe from death againe, which is intimated alſo in the laſt worde, hee was comforted touching Amnon, ſeeing hee was dead. But what is meant by the former words, his heart longed to goe forth to ſee Abſalom? the Vulgar Latin, Sept. Vatab. Mont. David ceaſed to perſecute A*bſalom*, and there is nothing ſignifying his ſoule or heart, and if hee would faigne have ſeene him, Joab ſhould not ſo hardly have obtained leave for him to returne, neither ſhould hee after this have beene kept fom his ſight two yeares. The vulg: therfore is here to be preferred, David at the firſt was much enraged and would have ſlaine A*bſalom*, but in this long time his anger was ſo appeaſed, that hee perſecuted him no more, onely he meant that hee ſhould live in perpetuall baniſhment, and never come in his ſight more, but hee ſhould indeed have continued ſtill in his firſt reſolution to execute the law upon him, the word חכל alſo ſignifieth, hee made an end, Junius, cum conſummarat deſiderium exeundi.

The Morall. Morally wee may learne by A*mnon* to take heed of ſinfull pleaſures, the end whereof is ſo bitter, for although wee hate our ſinne, as A*mnon* did Thamar, whereby wee may bee in the way of forgiveneſſe, yet if wee fall into another great ſinne, as A*mnon* into drunkenneſſe, wee ſhall not eſcape deſerved puniſhments.

CHAP. XIIII.

V. 1, 2, 3. H. Bunting Patriarchs travails. Amos I. I*Oab* perceiving how David ſtood affected towards A*bſalom*, ſent for a ſubtle woman of Tekoah, which was a City in the Tribe of Judah, 8 miles from Jeruſalem, it ſignifieth the ſounding of a Trumpet, and was ſo called for the victory obtained by J*ehoſhaphat* by ſounding the holy Trumpets, for this was in the Wilderneſſe of Tekoah, 2 Chron: 20. 20. of this City was alſo the Prophet A*mos*. By a ſubtle woman is meant one that could ſpeake well and wiſely. For this woman therefore hee ſent, and having given her inſtructions what to ſay, ſhee came in to the King in the habit and countenance of one, that had long mourned for the dead.

V. 4. Then ſhee fell downe before him to the ground, and ſaid, Helpe O King: and hee asking what the matter was, ſhe ſaid that ſhee was a widow, that had two ſons, but they falling out and fighting in the field, the one ſlew the other, and now the whole family requireth him that liveth to bee put to death. Her meaning was, ſaith Lyra, that thus they ſaid, who ſought to have him ſlaine, and therefore ſhee ſpake not, as confeſſing it to bee true, for it could not bee proved either by witneſſe, or by her ſonnes confeſſion, neither was hee convicted of this

Lyra.

murther in judgment, but they ſought his life, that the inheritance might fall V.8. to them, not out of the love of juſtice, or zeale thereunto. The King hearing this, ſaid unto her, Goe to thy houſe and I will give charge concerning thee. But ſhee V.9. not ſatiſfied herewith replyed, (My Lord O King) the iniquity bee on mee and on my fathers houſe, but the King and his Throne bee guiltleſſe, that is, thou haſt many buſineſſes, through which it may come to paſſe, that I may eaſily bee forgotten by thee, no order through forgetfulneſſe being taken for my ſonnes ſafety, and if ſo, hee ſhall ſtill bee in danger, which if it befalls him, I and my fathers houſe muſt beare this iniquity, as being the onely perſons in fault for not dealing more effectually for his preſervation, but thou, becauſe it was of forgetfulneſſe, ſhalt bee cleare, wherefore I pray thee give better ſecurity to mee and my ſonne.

V.10. Then the King bade her to bring forth him that purſued her ſonne, and he would take order with him, that her ſon might bee ſafe, which, the caſe being as was before related, the King might juſtly doe.

V. 11. The woman replyed, I pray thee let the King remember the Lord thy God, &c. which is, as if ſhee had ſaid, the revengers of bloud are many, and therefore if I ſhould bring one or two unto thee, my ſonne might ſtill bee indangered by others, wherefore I pray thee ſweare unto me, and ſo cauſe it to bee publiſhed immediately, that none may dare to doe him any hurt: Then the King ſware unto her, As the Lord liveth, there ſhall not one haire of thy ſonne fall to the ground, that is, hee ſhall not onely bee ſafe from the danger of death, but from any the leaſt hurt.

V.12.13. Then ſhee ſaid, having firſt asked leave to ſpeake, wherefore haſt thou thought ſuch a thing againſt the people of God? for the King ſpeaketh this thing as one which is faulty in that he doth not fetch home againe his baniſhed. Now ſhee beginneth to ſhew, that ſhee ſpake all this parabolically, by her ſelfe meaning the King, by her two ſonnes, his two, Abſalom and Amnon; by the kindred riſing up to ſeeke her ſonnes life, Amnons friends, which would have Abſalom put to death. And as the King had given ſentence for her pretended ſonne being in danger, ſo Abſaloms caſe being the like, ſhe ſeeketh to move him to take the ſame order for his ſafety. 1. Becauſe hee was now for feare of danger conſtrained together with his men to live in an idolatrous country, to the hazarding of their ſoules, if by being there they ſhould bee inclined to idolatry alſo, in theſe words, wherefore haſt thou thought ſuch a thing againſt the people of God? that is, Abſalom and his followers, who were Iſraelites.

V. 14. 2. Becauſe Amnon being dead could not bee reſtored to life againe, whatſoever ſhould bee done againſt Abſalom, that ſlew him; in the next words, wee muſt needes dye and are as water ſpilt upon the ground, which cannot bee gathered up againe. 3. Becauſe God the great judge of all, whom earthly judges ought to imitate, is not implacable towards theſe that ſinne againſt him, but is ready upon their repentance to receive them to mercy, in theſe words, neither doth God reſpect any perſon, yet hee doth deviſe meanes, that his baniſhed bee not expelled from him. She calleth ſinners his baniſhed, becauſe they are carried away captive by the Devill, as it were, and kept in his kingdome.

V. 15. Now therefore that I am come to ſpeake of this thing to my Lord the King, it is, becauſe the people made mee afraid, &c. The Vulgar Latin for theſe laſt words, hath theſe, the people being preſent, which Lyra expoundeth thus, that the ſentence to bee publiſhed touching mee and my ſonne may bee publiſhed before all the people touching thy ſonne.

V. 16. For the King will heare to deliver, &c. v. 17. then thy handmaid ſaid, The word of my Lord the King ſhall be comfortable, The Vulgar Latin, let thy handmaid ſay, that the word of my Lord the King bee as a ſacrifice, that is, doe ſo, as that I may truely ſay thy word is as pleaſing as a ſacrifice to God. Hitherto Lyra, who alſo in concluding this dialogue, objecteth, that this parable agreed not to Amnons caſe, for Abſalom ſlew him openly, and anſwereth out of R: Solomon, that although it were before many, yet they were ſo neare to Amnon, that they were not competent witneſſes, or out of others, although the murther bee evident, yet if the neareſt of kin bee content to grant peace to the offender, the King, who is the common father of all, may grant it without offence to the Law, and ſuch was her caſe, ſhee was neareſt to her ſlaine ſonne, and David to Amnon, ſo that Peter Martyr. if hee were willing, he might ſave Abſalom without offence. Peter Martyr contrariwiſe is ſo farre from defending the congruence of the parable as that hee ſheweth it to differ in very many things, which the King might eaſily have perceived, if hee had beene willing. 1. Becauſe ſhee had but two ſonnes, the King many. 2. Her husband was dead, but Davids wives were living. 3. One brother killed another, as they ſtrave together, not premeditating his death, Abſalom bare malice to Amnon two yeares together, neither did Abſalom fight for his life. 4. That was done in ſecret in the fields, none being preſent, this openly before many. 5. Abſalom fled not to any Citie of refuge, but into another countrey, hereby condemning himſelfe of wilfull murther. Wherefore the King ſhould by no meanes have been drawne to ſpare him, for if ſuch wickedneſſes be ſpared, God himſelfe will execute judgement, as hee did afterwards upon this murtherer, and that by the hands of Joab, who now interceded for him, and upon Joab himſelfe in the reigne of Solomon. Oreſtes amongſt the heathen, who had ſlaine his mother, but eſcaped puniſhment, was purſued by the Furies Nero, after that hee had done the like, was ſtricken after a ſort with madneſſe. Antoninus Caracalla having ſlaine his brother Geta, would have it defended by Papinianus, a Lawyer, hee freely anſwered, parricides are more eaſily committed then defended, and it is not the part of a good patron to defend V. 9. them. For theſe words, Verſ. 9. upon mee bee the iniquitie, &c. hee alſo bringeth two other expoſitions. 1. If there ſhould be any iniquity in ſparing of my ſonne, I will take it upon me, and the King ſhall bee free. 2. If thou doſt not defend mee and my ſonne, ſome great puniſhment of ſo foule a fault muſt needs come, but I pray, that this may be upon me, and not upon the King.

V. 11. For theſe words, Let the King remember the Lord, having expounded them, as Lyra, hee addeth, that ſome underſtand them of remembring the Law made in Numbers, that ſuch as did ſlay others unawares ſhould flee and bee ſaved in ſome
City of refuge, but it is plaine, that David underſtood her, as deſiring his oath, because hee preſently ſware unto her.

V. 14. Wee muſt needs die, &c. This hee alſo expoundeth of Abſalom, and not as Lyra, it will not bee long before Abſalom dieth, and death is not a thing to be haſtned, but which we ſhould labour to keepe away: Or thou, O King art mortall, and if thou dieſt, not having firſt beene reconciled to Abſalom, hee may happily make warre. Neither doth God reſpect any perſon, that is, to exempt him from the ſtroake of death, of what degree or condition ſoever hee bee. Yet doth he deviſe meanes, that is, by appointing Cities of refuge to ſave mens lives, Verſ. 15. the people made mee afraid, that is, they told mee, when I was comming, that I ſhould but loſe my labour in ſpeaking to thee, thou wouldſt not regard ſuch a poore woman as I am, and hereby, as by another argument ſhee ſought to move him, that hee might be the better thought of amongſt the people, and compareth him with an Angel of God, to inſinuate the more into him.

Note. Note how diligent and carefull Joab and this woman were in patronizing a bad cauſe, that wee may learne much more to endeavour to defend a good cauſe. And Kings may learne of David here to bee eaſie for their ſubjects to have acceſſe unto them, and patiently to heare them.

Touching Joabs imploying of this woman, and not ſpeaking himſelfe for Abſalom, although hee perceived that Davids affection was now againe towards him, becauſe hee ſpake no more of Amnon, in way of lamentation, but was more chearfull and ceaſed to ſpeake againſt Abſalom, hee did it, leſt, if he himſelfe ſhould ſpeake and have a repulſe, it might turne to his diſgrace, [illegible] being a ſigne of little favour, wherein hee was with the King, which would have been a thing very grievous to ſo great a man, and becauſe women are more apt by their flattering ſpeeches to inſinuate into men. And hee imployed not this woman, becauſe there was none in Jeruſalem to bee found fit for this purpoſe for their wit, but becauſe it was neceſſary, that a ſtranger and one unknowne knowne to David ſhould come in this manner unto him. And hee would have him ſpeake by way of parable, that the King not thinking his owne caſe to bee propounded, might the more readily give ſentence, from which hee might afterwards bee aſhamed to goe backe, when the end of it ſhould bee explained; and thus Nathan had dealt with him and prevailed before. Touching the ſenſe of the words, as much almoſt hath been ſaid already out of Lyra and Martyr, as any other expoſitours ſay. Whereas ſhee prayeth, that the iniquitie might bee upon her, &c. Pellican will have the meaning to bee, if her living ſonne had committed any iniquitie worthy of puniſhment, ſhee would beare it. And whereas ſhee deſireth him by and by to remember the Lord, ſhee meant to ſtand to, and not to goe from his word, ſeeing God is ready to take vengeance upon thoſe that falſifie their ſerious premiſes. For theſe words, why haſt thou thought ſuch a thing againſt the people of God, he alſo bringeth this as the ſenſe, how ſhall the people, over whom thou art ſet, bee perſwaded, that thou haſt decreed ſuch a thing touching my ſonne, when as thou wilt not doe the like by thine owne? Junius upon theſe words upon mee bee the iniquitie, ſaith, ſhee meant, that ſhee held her living ſonne ſo innocent, as that if there were this iniquity in him, ſhee would willingly beare it. And theſe, why haſt thou thought ſuch a thing againſt the people of God, that is, the people of Iſrael, whoſe hearts are towards Abſalom, as thy eldeſt ſonne now living, and thy ſucceſſour in thy Kingdome, deſiring to have him called home againe? And theſe, wee muſt all die, wee are all about to die, that Abſalom being abſent, wee count our life no better then death, and all the kingdome is out of courſe, like water ſpilt upon the ground: For Chileab the next ſonne to Amnon was dead, and ſo Abſalom the eldeſt. And for Gods deviſing meanes, &c. hee expoundeth it of his preſerving him alive hitherto, and ſtirring up this longing deſire in the people after him.

Pellican.

Junius.

And theſe, the people made mee afraid, hee expounds of her feare, leſt ſome hurt ſhould come to them, if the King did not call home Abſalom. It is too long a worke to compare theſe expoſitions together, and to approve ſome and reject others, and without much erring wee may follow any, wherefore I leave it to the judicious Reader to chooſe that which ſeemeth to him moſt probable.

V.18,19. The King having heard the woman hitherto, now chargeth her to tell him, whether Joab did not direct her in this buſineſſe; ſhee confeſſeth it, and applaudeth the wiſedome of the King in diſcerning this, ſaying, that it was as the wiſedome of an Angell. Hee conceived that Joab was her inſtructer, partly for the great love, which hee perceived to bee in Joab towards Abſalom, and partly becauſe hee knew him to bee witty, and apt to invent, and happily hee brought her in to the King, and laſtly hee knew, as Pellican hath it, that Joab was forward to put himſelfe into ſuch actions all wayes, as whereby hee might curry favour with the King and with Abſalom, who was the next heire to the kingdome. For the womans ready diſcloſing the authour of this counſell, hee taxeth her therefore, although it ſucceeded well, and generally the levity of women, that men may beware how they commit their ſecrets to them. But ſhee ſeemeth rather according to others, to have done nothing herein worthy taxation, becauſe happily ſhee knew that Joab was willing, if ſhee ſhould ſee the King tractable, that ſhee ſhould diſcloſe it, and by his countenance and manner of ſpeech ſhee perceived his readineſſe to yeeld. Moreover if being asked ſhee had denied it, and afterwards it ſhould have beene knowne to come from Joab, ſhee might feare to bee taxed for a lyer.

Pellican

Peter Martyr.

V.21. 22,23,24. Then David called for Joab, and told him, that hee had granted his requeſt, for which hee gave the King great thankes, and went and fetcht Abſalom to Jeruſalem, but the King would not have him brought into his preſence, but turne to his owne houſe, leſt, as Lyra ſaith, by ſeeing him his griefe ſhould bee renued for the death of his firſt borne Amnon. Martyr addeth three other reaſons. 1. That David might not ſeeme to have remitted ſo foule a ſinne, but puniſhing it with baniſhment from the Court, it might appeare how greatly hee ſtill diſtaſted it. 2. Leſt the Kinſmen of Amnon by the mother being moved by the ſight of Abſalom ſhould bee provoked to revenge his blood. 3. To ſtirre up Abſalom to a ſight and ſenſe of his ſinne, that hee might bee moved to repent.

Lyra.

Peter Martyr.

V. 25. Lyra. Peter Martyr. Plutarch. Joſephus. Pellican.

Now that it might appeare, what power David did ſhew himſelfe to have over his affections in refreining from the ſight of Abſalom, his beautie is deſcribed, being ſufficient to draw any eye unto it, hee excelled all in the whole kingdome in beautie, &c. and touching the haire of his head, it is ſaid, that hee did ſheare it once in the yeare, Hebr. ſaith Lyra, it is, at a ſet time in the yeare, for it may bee that hee cut his haire oftner, as Lyra, ſo ſome Hebrewes ſay, that hee polled his head oftner, viz. once a moneth. But Hebr. it is מקץ ימים at the end of dayes, that is, of the yeare, and it is abſurd to hold, that his haire could in a ſhorter time grow to ſo great abundance; it weighed 200. ſhekels of the Kings weight, which is added, becauſe to have no baldneſſe in the head, but to have an head full of haire, is a great part of comelines. But why did hee weigh it? Some Hebrews ſay, becauſe hee ſold it by weight to ſuch women as would adorne their heads with it: but to this Lyra excepteth, becauſe hee was the Kings ſonne, and therefore would not bee ſo baſe as to ſell his haire, and becauſe it could not bee growne long enough in a yeare for ſuch an uſe: Martyr thinketh, that Abſaloms beautie is ſpoken of, as a prældium to his inſurrection, which followeth in this hiſtory not long after, hereby hee was puffed up, & came into great grace amongſt the people, who thought him being ſo goodly a man moſt worthy of the kingdome, and his pride cauſed by his beauty made him aſpire unto it. Thus foully do ſome abuſe this gift of God to their owne deſtruction, ſo that it had beene farre better for them to have wanted it, as his ſiſter Thamar alſo, and Dinah, Jacobs daughter; it brought great trouble upon Joſeph and Sarah and Rebecca; and Plutarch ſaith, that a certaine beautifull Bride, when ſhee was led away by her Bridegroome, another lover came and laid hold upon her to pluck her from him with ſuch violence, that her husband alſo ſtriving on the other ſide to hold her, ſhee was miſerably rent in peeces. They that are beautifull, ſaith Iſocrates, but voyd of vertue, have a good Ship without a governour, and ſo are in contiuuall danger of ſhipwrack. Chryſoſt. calleth them whited Sepulchers, like unto poyſon tempered with Sugar to fooles, as the goodly Oake, which beareth no fruit, but for Swine, ſo they afford pleaſure to impure perſons, but the weake and deformed Vine yeeldeth ſweet and pleaſant grapes. For his haire, the ſame Martyr alſo ſaith, that ſome Hebrewes thinke him to have been a Nazarite, and therefore hee thus nouriſhed his haire, and whereas it was againſt the Law of Nazaritiſme to cut it, they ſay, this was an exception in caſe it ſhould grow too heavy; but Kimhi better, hee delighted in his haire, and therefore thus nouriſhed it, which indeed was a ſhame, 1 Cor. 11. and amongſt the Romans they abhorred from it. But the Lacedemonians, as Plutarch ſaith, nouriſhed their haire, and Licurgus made a Law for it, becauſe to ſuch as were beautifull it added a greater grace, and the blacke were made hereby more terrible to their enemies. Ariſtotle ſaith, that long haire was a ſigne of libertie, becauſe they that labour as ſervants are troubled with long haire. Joſephus yeelds another reaſon, why Abſaloms beautie is here ſpoken of, viz. becauſe hee had lived long in baniſhment, to ſhew, that his beautie was no whit impaired hereby, and hee ſaith, that 200. Shekels, which was the weight of his haire, was 5. pounds, and therefore it is ſpoken of, as being a quantitie ſo extraordinary. Pellican ſaith, that being about to ſpeake of his wickedneſſe, his great pride is firſt intimated by deſcribing his extraordinary beautie.

V. 27. Peter Martyr. Theodoret. Toſtatus. 2 Sam. 18.18.

Hee had alſo three ſonnes, and one faire daughter Thamar, who the Hebrewes ſay, was afterwards wife to Rehoboam. His children are ſpoken of moſt probably, as another cauſe of his pride and ambition, but they all dyed inglorious, as became the children of ſuch a father. And this may bee gathered according to Theodoret and Toſtatus, becauſe hee ſet up a pillar to continue his name, for ſo much as hee had no children to continue it, and yet he lived not above two yeares after this, which argueth, that theſe children of his died Toſtatus.

ſoone after his returne from Geſhur. Yet Joſephus ſaith, that hee ſet up a Pillar to continue his name, becauſe his children were mortall, and ſo could not long continue it. But wee muſt rather beleeve the Scripture, which ſaith, that hee had then no children, and no leſſe doth Joſephus erre about Thamar Abſaloms daughter, who hee ſaith, was wiſe to Rehoboam, and mother to Abiam: but although there may ſeeme to be ſome colour for this in Scripture, becauſe, 1 King.
15.2. the mother of Abijam is ſaid to be Maachah Abſaloms daughter, yet the ſame man who was father to this Maachah, is called Uriel of Gibeah, 2 Chron.
13.2. and ſhee Michaiah, to ſhew, that hee was another man, and not Abſaloms Davids ſonne borne in Hebron of Judah. But more groſly hee erreth in writing about Abſaloms polling of his haire, ſaying, that it was ſo much that it could not bee done in leſſe then eight dayes. For the weight of his haire, Toſtatus Toſtatus.
alledgeth and rejecteth one opinion, that it is not meant, that his haire weighed five pound, but was accounted ſo much worth: but becauſe it may ſeeme incredible, that one mans haire ſhould weigh ſo much, there bee others that approve of this expoſition, & indeed it ſeemeth moſt probable, for things are eſtimated according to the price, that vaine perſons who have money enough, ſet them at; and for the ſelling of it, that might bee done by his ſervant that polled him for his own benefit; and hee weighed or eſtimated, may be taken for, it was eſtimated, as well as theſe words, hee polled his head, for it was polled. When Abſalom had lived two yeares in Jeruſalem, and was not admitted into the Kings V. 29,30.
ſight, hee ſent for Joab twice, but hee refuſing to come, hee cauſed his Barley field nigh unto him to bee ſet on fire; at the hearing of which hee came with ſpeed unto him, &c. It ſeemeth, ſaith Pellican, that Joab being a grave man and Pellican.
wiſe, and a great warrier, diſliked the pride and effeminateneſſe of Abſalom, and therefore had rather, that hee ſhould keepe away from the Court then come unto it, and this made, that hee was ſo hardly drawne to come unto him about this buſineſſe: Or, as Martyr ſaith, becauſe hee thought that the Peter Martyr.
ſight of him would bee diſpleaſing to the King, whom hee was unwilling to offend. Abſalom ſeeing that Joab would not come unto him waxed angry, as thinking himſelfe contemned, and burnt the Corne in his field, hereby ſhewing, what a wicked mind hee ſtill bare: here the vulg. Latine, and Sept. adde, Joabs ſervants ſeeing this came with their garments rent and told Joab, but this is left out in the Hebrew to bee underſtood. Joab commeth and expoſtulates with Abſalom about this wrong, touching ſatisfying him, for which wee here find nothing ſayd, yet it is probable, that hee by faire promiſes of ſatisfaction ſought to reconcile his favour towards him, that hee might the more willingly deale with his father for him. That which is expreſſed, Abſalom ſaid unto V. 32.
Joab, Behold, I ſent unto thee, ſaying, come hither, that I may ſend thee to my father, and ſay, Wherefore am I come from Geſhur? it had beene good for mee to have beene there ſtill, now therefore let me ſee the Kings face, and if there bee any iniquitie in me, let him kill mee, the vulg. Latine, but if hee bee mindfull of mine iniquitie, let him kill mee? having reſpect rather to the ſenſe then to the words, for his meaning was, if hee would not pardon, but ſtill keepe in his mind his iniquitie, as it ſeemed that hee did by baniſhing him from his preſence, let him ſlay mee. Ah deepe diſſimulation! in this long time of his living idly at home hee had meditated upon miſchiefe againſt his father, as the ſequele doth declare, but now hee feigneth, as if his love and deſire to live in his fathers preſence were ſuch, as that to want it were more grievous then death unto him. Hee counted it no benefit, but worſe for him that hee came from Geſhur, if hee were ſtill thus debarred from comming to the King, for in that hee would not endure the ſight of him, it was conceived by the ſubjects that his father had him in abomination, and therefore they all muſt needs contemne him and vilifie him alſo. In Geſhur hee Peter Martyr.
was had in honour, and was not ſo ſenſible of his fathers indignation, ſaith Martyr, because hee was afarre off, but now hee was neare, and that which was granted to the meaneſt ſubject, viz. if they had any cauſe, to come before the King, was denied unto him, as if hee were the worſt of all men, whereas hee

V. 33. thought himſelfe to bee without fault, it was becauſe hee held the killing of Amnon upon ſuch an occaſion to bee none. Then Ioab went to the King, he is brought before him, proſtrateth himſelfe, and his father kiſſeth him in token of reconciliation. But for ſo much as this was to an impenitent perſon, and contrary to Gods Law, ſee Chap. 15. what troubles followed unto David. Note. The ſparing of a malefactor that deſerveth to die, is but an hardening of him to more villany.

CHAP. XV.

V. 1, 2. Abſalom being now at the Kings Court beginneth to lay a foundation to his intended uſurpation of the kingdome, hee prepared him Chariots and horſes, and 50. men to run before him, and by his affabilitie to every man, and curteſie hee wonne the hearts of the people. Ioſephus. This, ſaith Joſephus, was done in the fourth yeare after his returne to Ieruſalem, for having lived privately two yeares, and after his comming into his fathers preſence, a yeare in feigned dutie and obedience, in the fourth hee made this preparation. Toſtatus. Theodoret. Hieron. de tradit. Hebr. Toſtatus, in the fourth yeare after his perfect reconciliation to his father, and likewiſe Theodoret, Ierom, in the ſixth yeare after his fleeing to Geſhur. But becauſe the time is not expreſſed in Scripture, it is uncertaine, onely it is probable that hee ſtayed a yeare at the leaſt before hee tooke this pompe upon him, for it had been too great audacity to have done ſo at the firſt, neither could the peoples hearts in a ſhorter time be ſo generally wonne unto him. Peter Martyr. The cauſes, ſaith Martyr, of this his aſpiring to the Crowne might be, 1. His feare, that if hee ſtayed till his fathers death, another ſhould bee made King, viz. Solomon, of whom happily hee had heard ſomewhat, that David promiſed to make him his ſucceſſour, and Bathſheba his mother was moſt beloved, and his owne mother was a ſtranger, but in the Law it was provided, that the eldeſt, although the ſonne of a wife not ſo greatly beloved, ſhould bee heire to his father. 2. His long baniſhment and indignitie then offered unto him might ſtill ſtick in his mind and exaſperate him to revenge. 3. His mother alſo being a Kings daughter might happily put him on, and his extraordinary beauty apt to draw mens affections towards him, and to puffe him up with pride. His preparation of Chariots and footmen ſerved to raviſh the mindes of the people, not being wonted to ſuch things, for men are apt to bee taken with novelties, and David indeed ſhould not have permitted this, as being contrary to their Law, which forbad them horſes and Chariots. Sallianus. But ſome thinke, that Abſalom provided him not theſe Chariots, till afterwards, ſeeing otherwiſe his rebellion would at the firſt have appeared: but I reſt in the former, his glorious going forth was one of the engines which hee uſed to make himſelfe glorious, and to bee thought by the people worthy of the kingdome, and becauſe he was the Kings eldeſt ſonne, hee through his indulgence towards him, permitted it without controule, ſo alſo Pellican. Pellican. Amongſt other meanes which he uſed to alienate the hearts of the people from his father, and to winne them to himſelfe, hee lyingly ſaid to ſuters that came to the Court, your cauſe is good, but none are appointed by the King to heare you; for that this was falſe, appeareth, 2 Sam. 8. 28. David reigned over all Iſrael, and executed juſtice and judgement to all the people. Wherefore Pellican putting all his vices together ſaith, hee was moſt wicked, for hee was ungratefull, ambitious, arrogant, an hypocrite, a lyer, a contemner and perſecuter of his father, a ſubverter of the people, a deflowrer of his mothers, being made a ſacrifice to the devill in his haires, an example and monument of rebellious ſonnes, and of all that perſecute Gods ſervants. Joſephus. Ioſephus ſaith, that hee uſed this ſpeech to ſuch, as againſt whom the judgement went, meaning that the Judges deputed by the King were corrupt, for which hee ſeemed to bee much grieved, wiſhing, that the burthen might bee laid upon him for the good of the people, whom the King ſo neglected, and would heare none of their cauſes himſelfe.

At the end of 40 yeares Abſalom ſayed to his father, Let mee goe I pray thee, that I may pay my vow in Hebron. Here becauſe it can hardly bee determined, what 40 yeares bee meant, the Vulgar Latin hath it 4 yeares, following Joſephus, but this is againſt both the Hebr: Sept: Chald: and Jeroms tranſlation, followed by Lyra, in all which it is 40 yeares, and Jerom giveth warning againſt that reading, wherein it is 4 yeares, ſaying, it is a corrupt copy. But what 40 yeares are meant, is not without cauſe much doubted. Some thinke from the peoples firſt asking of a King. Some from the deſtruction of the Prieſts made by Saul, whereof David was the cauſe in that hee deceived Abimilech, and was now puniſht for it. Some from the beginning of Davids raigne, which Pellican laboureth beſt to make it agree, ſaying, it is meant, when hee had raigned about 40 yeares, for the ſcripture ſtandeth not preciſely upon a yeare or two, ſo that although David lived 2 or 3 yeares after, yet it might bee ſaid, at or about the end of his 40 yeares raigne. Hebr: at the end of 40 yeares, ſo that if wee take 40 yeares here together for the whole ſumme of his time, it is as if it had beene ſaid, when the time of his 40 yeares raigne was now almoſt determining. And with this expoſition the time agreeth well, if we count it by Solomons age, when hee began to raigne, who was then very young, for David called him at that time a childe and tender. Hee was borne before the defiling of Thamar by Amnon, after which Abſalom paſſed 2 yeares in ſilence, then 3 in Geſhur, 2 after his returne before hee came into his fathers preſence, and 2 or more before his rebellion, altogether 9 yeares, ſo that hee might now bee 10 or 11, and by the account of all expoſitours hee was, as ſome ſay, but 12, ſome 13, when hee was crowned King, at what time an end was put to the raigne of David.

Hieron. de tradit: Hebr.
Vatablus.

Hieronym. de tradit. Hebr.
Peter Martyr.
Junius.
Pellican

2 Chr. 29. 1.

Therefore this was not long before, as alſo the following part of this hiſtory intimateth, wherein nothing is recorded to have beene done till Solomons crowning, but what might well bee done in two or three yeares. Some by theſe 40 yeares underſtand the age of Abſalom at that time, and ſome reckon from Samuels firſt anointing of David to the Kingdome, which they ſay was at 20 yeares of age. But as Martyr ſaith, that time is concealed in Scripture, and therefore not probable that any reckoning is made therefrom; and as for Abſaloms age hee could not be 40 when David dyed, becauſe hee was his third ſonne borne in Hebron, after that he began his raigne, 2 Sam: 3. 2. And touching the two former opinions, the firſt alſo falleth by the ſame reaſon, for it is not recorded in what yeare they asked a King, and the time doth not agree, if Saul, as is commonly held, raigned 18 yeares, for Davids raigne muſt needes bee now above 30 yeares, ſeeing Abſalom his third ſonne was a man growne and had a family 9 yeares at the leaſt before this. And for the ſecond there is no colour of reaſon, ſeeing this affliction befell David not for the Prieſts, from whoſe bloud hee was free, but for his murther and adultery, as Nathan foretold. It was then about the end of Davids raigne when hee was aged about 67, or 68. ſo that it was thought that hee could not live much longer, being now very crazy through the great troubles and turmoiles of warre, which hee continually endured, therefore A*bſalom* ambitious of the kingdome, thought it neceſſary, to take this time, leſt if hee ſtayed a while longer, hee ſhould bee prevented by another, who might bee made King. Hee asked leave therefore under a colour of piety to goe to Hebron, to pay his vow, which hee had made in Geſhur for his ſafe returne to Jeruſalem. Hebron was the chiefe City in the Tribe of Judah, where David was anointed King and A*bſalom* was borne, and there was an high place, whereupon they might lawfully yet ſacrifice, till the Temple was built, as alſo in other high places, becauſe no certaine place was yet choſen for the Arke to abide in. And this place was famous for the Sepulchers of A*braham*, Iſaac and Jacob there. Yet it is not rightly gathered from hence by the Jeſuite Sallianus, that they went in pilgrimage to the reliques of Saints departed, under their patronage, as it were to offer their devotions: for then it might have beene ſo done ſtill after the building of the Temple; and this was not the thing, whereby the people were then moved to reſort thither, but becauſe there was an high place there. It was, ſaith Martyr, diſtant

Toſtatus.
Sallianus.

V. 8.

Peter Martyr.

from Jeruſalem 15 or 16 miles. By this pretext of devotion the King was eaſily moved to give him leave, for what godly father would hinder his ſonne De officio Præſidis. from performing his vow? In Pigeſtis, a preſident of a province is required not to goe out of the bounds of his province, yet to performe his vow hee is permitted.

V. 10. Thus Abſalom pretended devotion, but hee intended rebellion, for hee ſent ſecretly throughout all the parts of Iſrael to ſignify, that when they ſhould heare the trumpets ſound, they ſhould ſay, Abſalom reigneth in Hebron, that is, in every place proclaim him King.

V. 11. And there went with Abſalom from Jeruſalem 200. men in the ſimplicity of their hearts, being invited &c. At the times of ſacrificing they were wont to make feaſts, at which great men uſed to have many friends with them, ſaith Martyr, and ſo did Abſalom at this time, hee tooke with him 200. friends, telling them of nothing, but the ſacrifice feaſt, ſo that they knew no more of his intended rebellion, then David himſelfe, and therefore were at the firſt guiltleſſe of it, unleſſe they took part with him afterwards. Comeſtor. Toſtatus. Lyra. Theſe, it is likely, were of the principal men of the City Jeruſalem, by the policy of Abitophel, as it is thought, taken with him, that other Cities thinking, that Jeruſalem was for Abſalom, might be drawne to follow their example, and to follow him alſo. V. 12. But that ſubtle foxe ſtayed at home in his owne City, till hee was ſent for, that if things ſucceeded not, hee being not amongſt them might ſeme to bee guiltleſſe. Now though theſe 200. only are ſpoken of as going with Abſalom to Hebron, yet it is not to be thought, but he had many more with him of his ordinary retinue that were of his counſell.

V. 13. 14. The news was brought to David of this conſpiracy who fled hereupon afoote, leaving 10 concubines to keepe the houſe, but all his ſervants went with him, and the Cherethites, and Peletbites, and Gittites, thoſe 600. men, that came with him from Gath, theſe were then 600. and ſo continued ſtill, but it is moſt likely, as any dyed, others were put into their roomes, they were called Gittites from Gath, becauſe they had lived with David there. Although his owne ſonne conſpired againſt him, yet his ſervants remained faithfull to him. Who the Cherethites and Pelethites were, ſee before ch. 8. 18. the Gittites were thoſe, that had in times paſt fled unto him, and lived with him in Gath, and Ittai, the V. 19. Peter Martyr. Kimhi. Comeſtor. Dionyſius. Hugo Card. Gittite, who is next ſpoken of v. 19. is thought by ſome, ſaith Martyr, to have bin the King of Gaths ſonne, who was now become a Proſelyte and lived in Jeruſalem for Religions ſake. He left his 10. Concubines or inferior wives, to keepe the houſe, not againſt the enemy, for that they were not able to doe, but happily, it being an office, that belonged unto them, ſuppoſing that Abſalom would not doe any hurt to weake women. But God had an hand in this, as the ſequele proved, when Abſalom went in unto them, that the threatning of God by Nathan might be fulfilled. What he did with his other wives, is not ſaid, but moſt probably he ſent them to other places, where they might bee kept in more ſafety. In Davids fleeing thus out of the City that the people might not bee ſmitten with the ſword, appeared his great care of the good of his ſubjects, yea greater then of his owne honour, for hee had many valiant men with him, by whom the City might have beene a long time defended a- Lyra. gainſt Abſalom, and to flee in this caſe, before the approach of the enemy, might ſeeme ignominious unto him: but he did doubtleſſe looke at the hand of God, whereby this judgement was brought upon him for his ſinnes, and ſo quietly ſubmitted himſelfe to beare it, whoſe power hee knew, that if his forces had beene farre greater, hee could by no meanes have withſtood; and his quiet ſubmiſſion further appeareth in that he uſeth no reproachfull Theodoret. termes againſt Abſalom, but called him the King, as Theod. noteth, and in that hee went barefooted, when hee fled, v. 30. Neither did he for all this caſt away his hope and faith in God, but truſted in him againſt all his enemies, as appeareth Pſal. 3. which was made upon this occaſion, as the title ſheweth.

Peter Martyr. Theodoret. Touching Ittai the Gittite, hee is thought by ſome to have beene the Captaine of the 600 Gittites, who came but lately to David, being drawne by his piety

Toſtatus.

piety and vertue, and now in his neceſſity did ſticke unto him, when his owne ſubjects rebelled with Abſalom againſt him. But the 600 Gittites are ſaid to have come with David from Gath, and to have now gone before him, but Ittai with his men came lately to him, and went not before him, till that after ſome parle hee bade them goe before. And how many there were of them is uncertaine, but the whole company that went with David, conſiſted partly of Gittites, that went before him, then of Ittai with his men, and laſtly of Davids other ſervants, and the Cherethites and Pelethites, who went as a gard to the King about his perſon. And they abode in a place a farre off, that is, farre from all houſes, that they might bee ſeene, that Davids friends might thither reſort unto him, and that they might ſee what was done by the enemy, and yet bee out of his danger. And here when hee would have diſmiſſed Ittai and the men with him, being ſtrangers, who came in love to dwell under David with their families, drawne as it ſeemeth by his vertue, of which there had beene former great experience in Gath, but hee refuſed, reſolving moſt lovingly and courageouſly, with David to live and dye, hee cauſed him to paſſe over the brooke Kedron before him, thinking to flee into the Wilderneſſe, where in times paſt hee had lived, when he fled from Saul, as being a place well knowne unto him, ſince that time. The brooke Kedron, was without the City Jeruſalem in a valley, ſaith Martyr, and the Wilderneſſe to which hee directed his courſe, is thought to bee the Wilderneſſe of Jericho.

Peter Martyr.

V.23.

Then the whole land wept, that is, all that wiſhed well to David, ſeeing his ſudden miſery ſo unworthily brought upon him by his owne ſonne, were ſo ſtricken with ſorrow, that they lamented exceedingly, thoſe that were with Abſalom in the meane ſeaſon rejoyceing and triumphing. Whereas David cauſed all to paſſe over the brooke Kedron before him, Lyra noteth it to have beene done, that hee himſelfe might bee in the greateſt danger if Abſalom ſhould purſue him, hereby acknowledging that all this came to paſſe for his ſinnes. And whereas Ittai a ſtranger and his friends with him, cleaved ſo conſtantly to David in this time of his danger, Pellican noteth the ſingular providence of God herein, in that when his owne rebelled againſt him, ſtrangers were ſtirred up to this fidelity towards him to his great comfort.

Lyra.

Pellican.

V.24.

Zadok alſo and the Levites came after him out of the City with the Arke, and Abiathar &c. Zadok and Abiathar are ſaid before ch: 8. 18. to bee the Prieſts, where enough hath beene ſaid of two High-prieſts together. The Arke is brought after David that hereby hee might conſult with God and have direction, what place to goe unto, ſaith Lyra, and becauſe the Prieſt to ſhew his fidelity to the King, would partake with him in his baniſhment, and the Arke might not bee left without the Prieſt, hee brought that alſo with him. But David biddeth him to carry it backe againe, and both Zadok and Abiathar to abide in the City, that from them hee might have intelligence. Hereupon it is inquired, why David did thus, ſeeing the comfort of the Arke being preſent might bee more unto him, then the endeavours of any friends in Jeruſalem, as being a ſymbole of Gods preſence, whereby the Iſraelites had beene ſo long guided and protected in the Wilderneſſe, and great miracles had beene wrought. Some Hebrewes and Jerom after them ſay, that Abiathar conſulted with God by the Arke for David, and had no anſwer, and therefore hee diſmiſſed it; but this is onely a conjecture, and not probable, becauſe in the next words he ſpeaketh of his hope to bee brought backe againe to the Arke, and by that which the Hebrewes themſelves further deliver it is confuted. For whereas David ſpeaketh to Zadok and not to Abiathar, ſaying, thou art a ſeer, they ſay, that when Abiathar had conſulted without anſwer, Zadok conſulting had anſwer, and ſo hee was thenceforth preferred as appearing to bee more gracious with God, then hee. For if the Lord gave anſwer by the Arke to Zadok, the not anſwering by Abiathar could not bee the cauſe of his ſending it backe, yet this is followed by Lyra, Hugo, Comeſtor, Toſtatus, &c. Others ſay, that hee ſent it backe, as diſallowing the removing of it out of the place where he had ſet it in Sion, where it ſhould ſettledly abide; but againſt this maketh the removing

of

2 Sam. 11. 11.

Theodoret.

of it before to the ſiege of Rabbah, and afterwards to the Temple in mount Moriah, after which indeed it might no more bee removed, but yet it might. Others therefore ſay, that hee did it to prevent the danger which might happen to the Prieſts, if Abſalom ſhould prevaile, as before for his ſake in the daies of Saul it had happened. But Theodoret giveth the beſt reaſon next to that in the Text, David ſent the Arke backe, becauſe hee knew it would not profit the wicked, and ſuch as God was offended withall, but rather hurt them, as in the dayes of Eli 70 yeares before, and ſuch hee acknowledged himſelfe yet to bee, as perceiving by Gods judgments againſt him, that hee was not yet pacified, but offended with him for his ſinnes. Touching Zadok to whom David ſpeaketh, and who is firſt mentioned, and then Abiathar, it is not neceſſary, as the Hebrewes doe, to gather from hence, that A*biathar* now began to bee in diſgrace, for before this, ch: 8. 17. hee is named after Zadok, and 1 Chron: 16. 39. 40. where Zadok is appointed to attend upon the Tabernacle, hee is not mentioned at all, and at this time happily hee came to David after Zadok, who moſt probably holpe to bring the Arke, and Abiathar with the reſt of the people followed. It is certaine that Abiathar was High-prieſt before Zadok, and therefore his ſuperiour, but hee being ſet to ſerve, as chiefe at the Tabernacle, whilſt A*biathar* attended upon the Arke, hee was made in a manner equall to him, and ſo for a time there were two High-prieſts as I have ſhewed before. And either becauſe hee was a Prophet, as Dionyſius thinketh, from the words following, where David calleth him a ſeer, or becauſe David knew that A*biathar*, as being of the family of Eli, ſhould be put downe by Gods juſt judgment, and Zadok ſet up, hee graced him moſt, and likewiſe the holy Scriptures when hee is named at other times before A*biathar*.

1 Chr. 16. 39.

Dionyſius.

V. 27.

Vatablus.

Cajetan.

Gloſ: Ord.

Peter Martyr.

Pellican.

Iunius.

And the King ſaid to Zadok, Art thou a ſeer? This is underſtood by Vatablus, as if he meant, that hee was a wiſeman and a man of counſell, and ſo might doe him more good being in the City with A*bſalom*, then abiding with him, likewiſe Cajetan, hee might ſee there for Davids good, and advertiſe him. The Ord: Gloſſ: becauſe hee propheſied when hee had conſulted with God, and Dionyſ: as hath beene ſhewed. Or becauſe hee was over thoſe, that propheſied in ſinging praiſes to God. Peter Martyr and Pellican ſay, that hee meant, hee was both godly and wiſe, and as a prophet knew the will of God, and therefore hee would have him judge of it, whether it were not beſt for him to goe backe to the City, and that ſo hee might doe him moſt good. Junius, thou art a ſeer, that is, a man, that ſhould not follow mee privately fleeing, but returne and ſee for the publike good. I thinke, becauſe a Prophet is called a ſeer, 1 Sam: 9. David meant that hee was a Prophet, who might conſult with God for him, and pray for him as well in the City, as if hee were with him in the Campe, for it was not unuſuall for an High-prieſt to propheſie, as wee may gather from that paſſage touching Caiaphas, Joh: 11. 51. hee being High-prieſt that yeare propheſied, wherefore it being not neceſſary for him to goe with David, ſeeing hee might doe him as good ſervice abſent as preſent, hee would have him returne, and if either by revelation from God he knew any thing tending to his good, or by obſerving A*bſaloms* proceedings, to certifie him thereof by his owne ſonne or by A*biathars*.

V. 30.

1 Cor. 11.

Peter Martyr.

Then David went up the Mount of Olives weeping, and his head covered, &c. His head was covered, ſay ſome, becauſe it was the manner of thoſe that mourned thus to ſhew their ſubjection to God afflicting them; and the woman muſt have her head covered in token of her ſubjection to the man. But Martyr ſaith, it was that their eyes being thus kept from any other objects, they might have their minds the more ſettledly fixed upon the thing for which they ſorrowed, and that their teares might not bee ſeene by others, but by God onely.

Pellican.

David did not weep and goe thus, as one ſaith, out of effeminate cowardlineſſe, for hee was moſt valiant, but for his ſinnes, whereby hee had brought upon himſelfe this miſery, and therefore hee added unto it and puniſht himſelfe with going barefooted, and great contrition of heart. The People wept together with him, their heads being covered out of a ſympathy towards their King being in miſery.

V. 31. And one told David, ſaying, The band of Achitophel is with Abſalom, then David prayed, O Lord infatuate the counſell of Achitophel. By Achitophel taking part with Abſalom, Davids danger was much increaſed, becauſe wiſe counſell, ſuch as Achitophels was, is of more force, then all other warlike preparations without it, according to that ſaying, parvi ſunt arma foris, niſi ſit conſilium domi. But David in praying to God to infatuate his counſell tooke a right courſe to have it fruſtrated as fooliſh, as it was indeed, when it was not followed, although it were very wiſe. Hee acknowledged God to have all mens hearts in his hands to turne them, as it pleaſeth him, as hee hath indeed, and accordingly directed his prayer, and had this comfort, even when hee was under the rod, that God heard him. For Achitophels being with Abſalom, and againſt David, it is thought to have beene cauſed through an hatred, which hee bare againſt David ever ſince his adultery with Bathſheba his Grandchild, and the murthering of Uriah her husband.

V. 32. Peter Martyr. Then David went up to the top of the Mount and prayed there, &c. Hee went to the top to pray, ſaith Mart. that from thence he might looke towards the Arke, when hee prayed, which hee could not have done in the valley or upon the ſide, for one place was then conſecrated for prayer, before which a man might bee ſooner heard, then elſewhere; this Mount was famous ſince, for Chriſts praying there, of whom David was a type. What he prayed for is not ſaid, but moſt probably it was for deliverance from Abſaloms conſpiracy, for the pardon of his ſinnes and the confounding of Achitophels counſell, thus Martyr; but the third Pſalme ſheweth plainely what his prayer now was, and againſt both Abſalom and Achitophel and all his partakers, Pſal: 55. And here ſee the effect of his prayer, Huſhai the Archite came unto him, an honourable man, as it ſeemeth, and one of Davids counſell, by whom God confounded the counſell of Achitophel, as is afterwards ſhewed. He is thought to bee called the Archite from the City Arach, in the Tribe of Joſeph, Joſh. 16. 2. ſo Junius, ſome from Arachis in the land of Sennaar or Coeloſyria, holding him to have beene a Syrian, but a proſelyte in religion, wonne unto it by Davids vertue. 1 Chr. 27. 33. Lyranus. Toſtatus. Iunius. Adrichom. Sallianus.

Whereas it is ſaid, that Huſhai met with David, it may bee doubted how this could bee, if hee came out of the City after him. It is anſwered, either hee was in ſome other part before, from which hee haſtning to David towards Jeruſalem met him here, or if hee came out after him, when David turned himſelfe upon the top of the Mount to pray towards the Arke, hee came up againſt his face, and ſo met him, and this is the moſt probable, becauſe v: 34. hee willeth him to returne into the City, whereby is implyed, that hee came out from thence to follow David. Huſhai is called Davids friend, v: 37. and ſo 1 Chron. 27. 33. and he repoſed truſt in him, as in a moſt true friend, ſending him backe to Jeruſalem, that hee feigning himſelfe to bee alſo for Abſalom might through his wiſedome confound the counſell of Achitophel. But whether David may be juſtified in willing him thus to doe, or Huſhai in ſo diſſembling is doubted. Martyr, after the queſtion generally determined touching officious lying, bringing many arguments to prove it a ſinne, concludeth, that if by this meanes God would have the counſell of Achitophel fruſtrated, it was warrantable, becauſe God can diſpenſe with his owne lawes, otherwiſe it was a ſinne. Others excuſe it, becauſe Huſhai in thus keeping Abſalom from the moſt heinous ſinne of parricide did him the beſt ſervice. But there needes no ſuch excuſe in this caſe. It was a thing commonly practiced by David before in caſe of neceſſity, when hee fled to Achiſh, he faigned himſelfe mad, afterwards comming to Gath againe with his men, hee told the King that hee had gone againſt the ſouth of Judah to make him the more confident, that hee was quite falne from the Jewes, when hee had gone againſt their enemies, and when hee was ready to goe to war with him againſt Saul, and to Abimelech, and not only he, but divers others of Gods holy ſervants have diſſembled to ſave themſelves or others, of which ſee before upon Joſh: 2. 3. Whereas David in ſending him Peter. Martyr.

backe

V. 33. back ſaith, if thou goeſt with mee, thou ſhalt bee a burthen unto mee. It was meant in reſpect of the trouble, that would bee to him for the danger to which he ſhould bee expoſed, becauſe David was not at this time more ſollicitous for Lyra. himſelfe, then for his friends, ſo Martyr, but Lyra; becauſe hee was no warriour; ſo likewiſe Hugo Card. Huſhai therefore returned to Jeruſalem, and Abſalom came to Ieruſalem.

CHAP. XVI.

V. 1,2,3. WHen David was a little paſt the top of the mountaine, Ziba Mephibo-ſheths ſervant met him with two Aſſes laden with 200. loaves, &c. Hee tooke this opportunitie to ſhew kindneſſe to David for his owne benefit, and not out of love unto him, thinking that David would finally prevaile, and then reward him bountifully. Being asked for his maſter Mephiboſheth, hee most treacherouſly belied him to David, ſaying, that now hee hoped the Kingdome would bee reſtored unto him, whereupon David gave him all that was Mephiboſheths.
A moſt raſh and injuſt ſentence to condemne a man unheard, upon an accuſation ſo improbable. For the ſtirring of the people now was not to advance the houſe of Saul, but to make Abſalom King, and Mephiboſheth could not in reaſon bee thought to have any ſuch imagination in his mind, being a man ſo impotent and unfit for government, yet Davids credulitie was ſuch, that hee beleeved it, either becauſe through his preſent troubles his judgment was confounded, or being overcome with Zibah his kindneſſe in this time of his miſery, wherefore in this fact hee is thought generally to have erred greatly, in condemning ſo raſhly the ſonne of his deare friend Ionathan, contrary to his oath, being alſo innocent; neither did hee afterwards, when hee knew the truth, reverſe the judgement, as hee ſhould have done. Hence wee may ſee, Note. what the power of gifts is, that all Judges may take heed of them; and againe, Pellican. that even the beſt are ſubject to erre groſly, that wee may not imitate them in all things.

Then David went on to Bahurim, and Shimei, a man of the houſe of Saul
V. 5. came out and curſed him, &c. Bahurim was a Citie of the Tribe of Benjamin, Adrichom. ſomewhat more then a mile from Ieruſalem, of it mention was alſo made before,
Chap. 3.16, and hee is ſaid to bee the ſonne of Gera, who came of Benjamin, 1 Chron. 8.3. which doth further confirme, that his Citie was in Benjamin, and in that hee was of Sauls houſe, and a ſonne of Jemini, Verſ. 11. Whereas Chap. 19.20. hee ſpeaketh, as if hee were of the houſe of Ioſeph, for hee ſaith, Peter Martyr. I came the firſt of all the houſe of Ioſeph, Martyr anſwereth, that hereby hee meant that hee came the firſt of all Iſrael, as Iſrael was commonly counted by it ſelfe, and diſtinguiſhed from Iudah, and was a ſeverall kingdome under Iſboſheth the ſonne of Saul, the head tribe whereof was Ephraim, one of Ioſephs Tribes. Hee ſeeing the King now in great miſery, and fleeing before Abſalom thought, that his Kingdome was at an end, and therefore was bold thus to vent
V. 6. his malice againſt him. And hee did not onely curſe, but caſt ſtones at him, not that hee could hereby hurt him, but the more to ſhew his hatred and contempt.
V. 7. And in curſing hee called him a man of blood, becauſe Iſhboſheth and Abner had been ſlaine by thoſe, that were on his ſide, but hee laid this to his charge unjuſtly, as is manifeſt by their hiſtories before going. Hee called him alſo a man of Belial that is, moſt wicked, happily becauſe of his adultery, and murthering of Uriah: but although theſe his ſinnes were moſt hainous, yet his ſtudy generally was to live according to Gods holy Lawes, and therefore hee could not rightly for them bee called a man that hath caſt off Gods yoake, as Belial ſignifieth. And hee added, the Lord hath rendred unto thee all the blood
V. 8. of the houſe of Saul, in whoſe ſtead thou haſt reigned, hee taxed him as uſurping the kingdome, and now juſtly puniſht therefore, when as the Lord had taken it from Sauls houſe, and given it unto him, and for this hee ſaith, that God had againe taken the kingdome from him, and given it to his ſonne Abſalom when as he attained it by uſurpation. And all this, hee ſaith, hee ſuffered for his owne wickedneſſe, ſo that his humiliation would not profit him, wherein hee ſaid true indeed, but not in the ſenſe wherein hee ſpake it, for David ſuffered not for any ſin againſt Saul or his houſe, but againſt God in the matter of Bathſhibah, for which hee now ſuffered, and came to this miſery.

Abiſhai hearing him ſpeake thus was ſo moved through love to David, whoſe V. 9. kinſman hee was, as Shimei of Saul, that hee would have gone to cut off his head, calling him a dead dog according to the phraſe familiarly uſed by the Hebrewes, when they would debaſe themſelves, or others, 1 Sam. 24. 15. 2 Sam.
3. 8. 2 Sam. 9. 8. But David would not ſuffer him, ſaying, What have I to doe V. 10.
with you, yee ſonnes of Zeruiah? whereby hee meant both him and his brother Joab, both valiant Captaines, and as it ſeemeth conſenting to goe and take this revenge upon Shimei, although Abiſhai onely bee named; ſo Martyr:
or elſe remembring the bloody fact of Joab before againſt Abner hee ſpake in the plurall number, ſeeing Abiſhai offering to kill one in love to him alſo, as Pellican, who ſaith, that hee ſpake thus, becauſe Joab was the author of that Pellican.
bloodſhed of Abner, wherewith hee was charged by Shimei. Hee hath curſed because God hath bidden him to curſe David, &c. Hee looked at an higher hand, which brought Shimei thus forth againſt him, as by his ſinnes hee had deſerved, wherefore hee patiently ſubmitted himſelfe to beare it, and would have no revenge for the preſent taken upon him therefore, but afterwards hee appointed Solomon according to his wiſedome to judge him, as hee did, 1 King.
2. 46. But if God bade him curſe, hee ſeemeth not to have ſinned, and ſo hee Lyra.
ought never to have been puniſht for thus doing. Lyra anſwereth, here were two things conſiderable, 1. The ſpirit and boldneſſe of Shimei, thus to come forth alone againſt the King, being guarded with ſo many valiant men, who would doubtleſſe bee ready to take revenge upon him; and to doe this, the power came from God. 2. The malice of his mind out of which hee ſo railed upon him, and this came from himſelfe, and ſo hee ſinned: even as hee that hath a lame legge, in that hee goeth with it, this comes from God, but his limping is from his owne imperfection. It was then Shimei his malicious heart against David, that put him upon this deſperate adventure, but God by his virulent and ſlanderous tongue juſtly puniſht David for his former ſinnes, as hee well conceived, and now gave him occaſion to exerciſe the vertue of patience:
wherefore Shimei for his ſinne was worthy of puniſhment, although hee did not utter theſe curſes without God, who wrought herein juſtly for Davids further humiliation; thus likewiſe Hugo and Toſtatus, God did not infuſe this corruption of malice into Shimei, but being in him inclined it towards David for his puniſhment, and Theod. wee muſt know, that neither the inceſt of Amnon, nor parricide of Abſalom, nor curſing of Shimei, as hee might have added, were of the working of God, but David not being protected by the divine providence againſt theſe evills, his houſe was like to a ſhip without a governour, and aſſaulted by vehement warres of mad devills. Hee is ſaid to bid V. 11.
him curſe becauſe hee laid open a way unto him, as another ſaith; God worketh in ſinfull actions, ſee Peter Martyr at large upon this place. And if this were the cauſe why David would not have Shimei ſlaine, then Joſephus erred, Joſephus.
who ſaith, that hee forbad it leſt by his death occaſion ſhould bee given of new ſtirres and troubles: And here is to bee noted, how rightly David was Note.
puniſhed by Shimei his railing tongue for his hearkening ſo readily to the wicked flattery of Zibah; as hee had hereupon ſpoiled Mephiboſheth unjuſtly of his goods, ſo hee was now ſpoyled unjuſtly of his honours; and as hee had hearkened to a ſervant riſing againſt his maſter, ſo hee was now forced to heare his ſubject riſing up againſt him; and laſtly as hee had heard a ſlanderous tale of Mephiboſheths aſpiring to his kingdome, ſo hee now heareth a ſlander laid upon him of uſurping the kingdome of another: and ſo God will puniſh all his ſervants in their kind, if they ſinne in this world, that they may bee ſaved in the world to come. But to this end wee muſt beare his judgments patiently, as David did, whoſe patience was moſt admirable, hee being herein a very type of Chriſt, who when hee was reviled, reviled not againe, although it was not ſecretly, but openly before all his ſervants, and the calumnies were moſt intolerable, and that when hee had power immediatly to take revenge upon him; unto his railing words, the throwing of ſtones and duſt alſo againſt him being added, and that not once, but Shimei going along over againſt him and continuing ſo to doe, to provoke him the more, Verſ. 13.

V. 11. And hee uſed beſides this, that God bade him curſe, two Arguments more as grounds of patiently bearing it; 1. Becauſe his owne ſonne was riſen up againſt him, whoſe rebellion hee did beare, and therefore much more, the railing and indignities offered to him by this ſonne of Iemini, who was nothing allyed unto him, nor of his Tribe, and the kinſman of Saul, in zeale to whoſe houſe, being as hee tooke it, unjuſtly put downe by David, hee offered this indignitie to him out of a naturall affection which hee bare to his owne family. 2. Becauſe happily God would doe good unto him for this his V. 12. unjuſt malediction, hee committing the matter wholly to him, and not revenging himſelfe: which hee ſpake not, as if hee thought that his patient bearing Peter Martyr. ring of this iujury were meritorious ſaith, Martyr, but becauſe this is the order, whereby God in his mercy is wont to proceed, after affliction to ſend comfort, and it may bee added truely, that hee rewardeth afflictions patiently ſuffered with future good, yet not for the merit thereof, but out of his mercy.
Some, becauſe the ſeventh Pſalme agreeth ſo fitly to Davids caſe at this time, Arnobius. doe thinke, that it was penned upon this occaſion, although in the title it is Brugenſis. ſaid to have been made upon the words of Cuſhi, the Benjamite, for Cuſh ſignifieth an Ethiopian, who is blacke, and happily Shimei for his black and evill conditions might bee ſo called: but Iunius applyeth it to ſome man not before named in Sauls time, but intimated in Davids ſpeech to Saul, 1 Sam. 24.
And ſome apply to this occaſion alſo, Pſal. 37. Whereas David may ſeeme to ſpeake doubtfully, ſaying, Peradventure God will looke upon this mine affliction, it was not becauſe hee doubted of good from God in the world to come, but of his reſtitution to his kingdome, which hee knew not whether it would pleaſe God to doe or not.

Then David and all the people with him being weary came and reſted there, V. 14. that is, in Bahurim, which was before ſpoken of, although Ioſephus ſaith, that Joſephus. contemning Shimei he went right on to Iordan and reſted there, but that was too farre a journey in one day, for it was from Ieruſalem to Iordan 15. miles, the time being ſo much delayed, as it was, in diſmiſſing the Arke, and Huſhai, and ſpeaking to Ittai, and Zibab, and touching Shimei, and going barefoot, and worſhipping upon mount Olivet by the way, neither doth it agree to the propoſition made before unto Zadok, that hee ſhould ſend unto him into the Wilderneſſe neare by, yet it ſeemes by that which followeth that his ſtay was but ſhort in Bahurim, for when the meſſengers came thither from Huſhai, hee was gone, and the ſame night when they had done their meſſage to him hee went V. 15, 16. over Iordan with all his traine. Huſhai Davids friend in the meane ſeaſon commeth to Abſalom, and offereth his ſervice to him upon this ground, he when the Lord ſhall choose and all Iſrael, with him will I bee, and I will ſerve his ſonne now, whoſe father I have ſerved. In all which hee diſſembled for the good of David, as the preſent neceſſity required. But whether is his argument good or not? and when one King is unjuſtly put downe and another ſet up, whether the Peter Martyr. ſubjects ought to ſerve that King, is a queſtion? Martyr anſwereth, if the ſtate generally accepteth him for King, hee is to bee ſerved, the other King being dead, becauſe a commonwealth cannot ſtand without a ſupreame Magiſtrate, ſo the Romans obeyed Iulius Cæſar, and the whole Empire Phocas, after that hee had murthered Mauritius, but the caſe of David was not ſuch, for hee was living, neither did all Iſrael, but the rebellious in Iſrael follow Abſalom, and therefore the argument were fallacious. Nay, ſaith Huſhai, meaning that hee would not continue his friendſhip with David any longer, and hee ſpake thus to deceive Abſalom, as hee had before deceived his father, that hee beleeving him indeed to approve his proceedings, as hee ſeemed by his words to doe, might the more confidently follow his counſell to the benefit of David, and his owne deſerved ruine.

V. 20. Then Abſalom ſaid to Achitophel, Give yee counſell, what we ſhall doe, for though hee onely be named Huſhai was meant alſo, who when Achitophel gave that deviliſh counſell was enforced to diſſemble and to give way unto it, leſt if hee had oppoſed him at the firſt, hee ſhould have beene ſuſpected touching his fidelity to Abſalom, and ſo have beene prevented of doing good in ſome other counſell of greater conſequence.

V. 21. Theodoret. Lyra. Pellican. Achitophel counſelled him to goe in to his fathers concubines openly, that all Iſrael hearing it, their hands might be ſtrengthened with him, that is, ſaith Theodoret, and others after him, by this conceiving, that the difference between the father and the ſonne would thus be made irreconciliable, whereas before they might feare a future reconciliation, and ſo be alwayes fluctuating and wavering in their mindes about their following of Abſalom, betwixt whom and his father, if a reconciliation ſhould happen to be made, they ſhould be in danger many of them, of paying deare for this their rebelling with him. This counſell was moſt wicked, yet hereby was that fulfilled, which before was threatned, as a puniſhment to come upon David for his ſinnes. 2 Sam: 12. 11.

V. 23. Now the counſell of Achitophel was like the oracle of God, this is added, to ſhew, in what great danger David was, ſeeing he had ſo politicke a man againſt him, and that the working of God for David, as he prayed, might be the more remarkeable, when Achitophels counſell, which was alwayes wont to be followed in Davids time, and in Abſaloms, as moſt certaine, ſhould be forſaken, and another mans counſell bee preferred. But how could his counſell bee like Gods oracle, for ſo much as he was a man, and ſo might erre, and ſometime his counſell was moſt wicked, as at this time? Peter Martyr. Martyr anſwereth, that it is ſpoken hyperbolically, or hereby no equality is meant, but ſome ſimilitude for certainty, or it is ſhewed, how naturall men eſteemed of his counſell in all things. But it is ſaid to have beene ſo accounted in Davids time, and therefore even by David, who was no naturall man, therefore it is meant only for certainty to bring any thing to effect, he had an inſight into the way beyond all others, as if he had a divine ſpirit within him.

CHAP. XVII.

V. 1, 2. AFter his firſt devilliſh counſell, Achitophel giveth voluntarily another moſt dangerous to David, I will, ſaith he, take 12000 men and purſue David this night, now that he and his company are weary, &c. which Abſalom and all the elders of Iſrael well approved. But forſomuch as God had ſaid to David, thou ſhalt not dye, but otherwiſe limited his puniſhments, it was vaine, ſeeing there is no counſell againſt God. Yet this was the way according to humane reaſon to worke his deſtruction, ſeeing by celerity the victory is often obtained, and delaying loſeth it, as Cæſar writeth of Pompey. And Achitophel ſeemeth alſo to have beene valiant, in that hee offered to goe againſt David to effect what hee had counſelled, which other counſellors ſeldome doe.

V. 5. This counſell of Achitophel, although it were approved by all Abſaloms friends, yet he did not follow it, or reſt in it, but would heare the counſell of Huſhai alſo, then he boldly againſt all others ſpake againſt it, ſaying, that it was not good at this time. Wherein his fidelity towards David, and courage did wonderfully appeare, that hee durſt for the good of David oppoſe ſo great a counſellour and that after the hearing of his counſell approved by Abſalom and all. For hee might have feared, that this would have beene taken as a ſigne of an hollow heart towards Abſalom, to the endangering of his life, yet hee, all feare being laid aſide, adventured himſelfe. But hee uſed great art, 1. By implicitly approving the wiſedome of Achitophel, in that he ſaid onely, that his counſell was not good at this time, hereby intimating, that it was good at all other times, and excellent, but now onely he failed, as the wiſeſt may V. 8. ſometime doe, according to that, aliquando etiam ipſe dormitat Homerus. 2. By ſhewing divers probable reaſons againſt it, as 1. That David and his men were moſt valiant and now ſo provoked, that they would be like a Beare robbed of her whelpes moſt fierce, and ſo not likely to be overcome by ſuch an army, as Achitophel ſpake of, he having ſo many worthies with him, and one of them able to deale with one, two or three hundreth enemies, ch: 23. 18. 2. That David being a man exerciſed in warre from his youth, was not without warlike policy for his owne better ſafegard, happily lying not with the army, but apart in ſome ſecret place in the night, where they could not finde him, becauſe Achitophel had propounded the comming upon David in the night and ſlaying of him onely. 3. That through the valour of David and his men, if it were otherwiſe, Abſaloms men were likely at the firſt many of them to be ſlaine, which if it happened, all Iſrael would be diſmaid, becauſe the report happily would preſently goe, that Abſaloms army was overthrowne, and ſo for feare they would be in danger of turning againe and reconciling themſelves to David.

The third way, whereby Cuſhai ſhewed his art, was by perſwading Abſalom to V. 11. gather all Iſrael together, and ſo to goe againſt David in his owne perſon, that the victory being obtained it might not bee aſcribed to a Deputy, but to himſelfe, of which glory hee was ambitious enough. And ſo, ſaith he, we will come upon him with a multitude as the dew in the morning, overwhelming his little company ſo, that none ſhall eſcape; and hee ſpake in the firſt perſon, as if hee would make one, that ſhould lead forth ſuch an army, that hee might bee thought no leſſe to bee againſt David, then Achitophel, becauſe hee had offered himſelfe, if his counſell had beene followed, to goe with that army. And
V. 13. he addeth againſt that which might bee objected, whilſt this great army is in gathering, it may bee, that David will get into ſome City of ſtrength, out of which hee cannot bee ſoone expelled againe, if hee bee gotten into any City, all Iſrael ſhall bring ropes and pull it downe and draw it into the river, till that a ſtone thereof is not left, but this is hyperbolically ſpoken. The word חבל Peter Martyr. Lyra. rendred ropes, as Martyr noteth, ſignifieth alſo a troope, according to Lyra, a ſociety, and if it be ſo taken, the meaning is, that they ſhould all joine together as one to demoliſh that City: but the former reading doth better ſet forth the facility of doing this, which was the thing that he aimed at. This counſell being heard was preferred before Achitophels, but it is ſaid, that it came of V. 14. the Lord to overthrow the good counſell of Achitophel, where by good underſtand profitable to attaine to that end, which Abſalom aimed at, for otherwiſe it was not good, but evill and wicked, and therefore the Vulgar Latin for bonum hath utile. But how was Huſhai his counſell beneficiall to David? Anſ.
Becauſe whilſt Abſalom delayed to gather ſo great an army to come againſt him, hee had time to paſſe over Jordan and to prepare the greater forces to fight againſt him, and to take a place of greateſt advantage to fight in, as is afterwards ſhewed that he did.

V. 15. Then Huſhai certified Zadok and Abiathar of all theſe proceedings in councell, that by their care David might be certified, and not ſtay neare to Jeruſalem, leſt if Achitophels counſell ſhould be followed, there might be danger to him of periſhing by the ſword.

V. 17. The Prieſts then by a maid ſend to Jonathan and Ahimaaz their ſons, who were placed for the purpoſe neare to Enrogel, or the well in Rogel, a well ſomewhat out Peter Martyr. of the way, ſaith Martyr, and therefore a fit place to lurke in, it was the boundary of the Tribe of Judah, nigh to Jeruſalem, Joſh: 15. 7. This Well Pellican will have Pellican. to be the ſame, wherein they hid themſelves, when the woman ſpread a cloath over it and layed ground corne thereon, v: 18. But this is both contrary to the Schol. Hiſtor. course of the hiſtory, and to all others, who ſay, that being gone from this Well, Toſtatus. they came to that in Bahurim. They could not come into Jeruſalem to take their Lyra. intelligence immediately, becauſe they were known to be Abſaloms profeſſed enemies, and to take part with David. This maid moſt probably went out to this

Well, as if ſhee had gone to fetch water, or to waſh ſome cloathes there, and ſo went unſuſpected, but a boy ſaw them, and came and told it to Abſalom, who by the ſame expoſitours is held to have beene her ſonne, and thought by this meanes to come into great favour with Abſalom: but the ſcripture leaveth it uncertaine who he was. They then perceiving, that they were ſought for, for V. 18.
Abſalom ſent ſome immediately to apprehend them, went to a Well in a mans yeard in Bahurim, and were hidden there by the care of a woman. How they perceived the danger comming is not ſaid, but happily they had ſome inkling given them hereof, by ſome friend that perceived it. Sallianus ſaith, that Abſaloms Sallianus.
meſſengers purſuing them on horsback might be heard by them afar off, who feared the worſt upon any ſound made, and therefore hid themſelves, but how they being footmen could do this ſo ſuddenly, and the Well be covered, and that device uſed by the woman to lay on a covering and ground corne upon it, I cannot ſee. Abſaloms meſſengers comming thither, happily upon notice given, that they went into that mans yard, the woman, as another Rahab, to ſave them from danger, ſaid, that they were gone in haſte, having drunke a little water, and ſo they ceaſed to purſue them, ſo the Vulg: Lat: but the Hebrew they are gone over the river of water, that is, over Jordan: A wonderfull providence of God over David and his friends thus to move the hearts of ſome to Note.
worke for their good, and to worke ſuch remiſneſſe in theſe purſuers, that they ſought no further after them; ſo well doth hee provide even beyond their expectation, for the good and ſafety of thoſe that goe in a right way.

Then theſe two men haſtened to David, and hee with his company after this V. 21.
intelligence had with all ſpeed went over Jordan the ſame night, which could not but bee a wonderfull great trouble unto him, after his weary journey in the day to have no time to refreſh him in the night, but yet hee had one comfort, not one of his company forſooke him in this danger, or miſcarryed in paſſing over the river in the night, for it is ſaid, that there was not one, but was come over by the appearing of the next morning unto the other ſide.

Then Achitophel ſeeing that his counſell was not followed, hanged himſelfe, V. 23.
viz: becauſe he foreſaw certaine deſtruction to come upon Abſalom, and that the victory would fall to David, which if it did, he was in danger of being put to a ſhamefull death: A juſt reward for ſo wicked a man, who being indued with ſuch excellent wiſdome imployed it ſo ill, whereas hee ſhould rather Lyra.
have deviſed how to make Abſalom humble, and reconcile himſelfe againe to his father, ſo Lyra, and others. And Joſephus ſaith, that hee ſpake to this ef- Joſephus.
fect to thoſe of his houſe, that David would reobtaine the kingdome, and hee ſhould bee hanged, wherefore it was better for him to prevent it, and manfully to dye with his owne hands. It is likely alſo, that diſcontent wrought with him, forſomuch as his counſell, which had hitherto beene held as an oracle, was now ſo ſleighted. But hee was puniſht in his kinde, hee that would have lifted up his hands againſt his Lord David, lifteth up his hand againſt himſelfe, and is by a juſt judgement given over to a ſinne ſo much greater then common murther, by how much his owne life was nearer unto him then another mans.
And in this, as in other things, hee is rightly held by ſome to have beene a type of Judas, who alſo gave counſell againſt his maſter Chriſt, and ſo came to the like ſhamefull end.

Then David came to Mahanaim, that is, ſaith one, a City in the land of Gi- V. 24.
lead, of the Tribe of Gad, 44 miles from Jeruſalem, this place had this name H. Bunting Pa- given it from Jacob, Gen: 31. becauſe here Tents of Angels were ſeene about triar. travailes.
him to guard him when hee was in danger by Eſau his comming againſt him.
This ſaith Joſephus, was a moſt faire and well fenced City, to this Iſhboſheth Joſephus.
betooke himſelfe alſo, when hee tooke the kingdome upon him, ch. 2. 8. Da- vid had not long reſted here, but hee was purſued by Abſalom, who brought his army over Jordan after him. And hee made Amaſa Captaine of his army, who V. 25.
was the ſonne of Ithra by Abigail the daughter of Naas, the ſiſter of Zerviah, Joabs mother, ſo that hee and Joab were ſiſters children, and both Nephewes to David, for ſo much as Naas was otherwiſe called Iſhai, the father of David, wherefore many greeke Copies, for Naas have Jeſſe, and both Joſephus and Jerom affirme him to be the ſame, which alſo is confirmed, becauſe Zerviah her ſiſter was Iſhai his daughter. But Amaſais father is called an Iſraelite, and 1 Chro. 2.17. an Iſhmaelite, this by Iunius is reconciled thus, he was an Iſhmaelite by birth, but an Iſmalite by profeſſion, becauſe he imbraced the true Religion. The vul. Lat. hath it a Jezraelite, as if hee had been borne in Jezreel, and an Iſhmaelite, ſaith Jerom, hee is called, becauſe hee was ſuch in condition in his ſonne Amaſa, who fought againſt David, as the Iſhmaelites againſt the people of God; R. Kimbi ſaith, that hee lived among the Iſhmaelites, and therefore was ſo called, but an Iſraelite, becauſe he was ſo borne; ſome Hebrews, that the title of an Iſraelite is added to him, becauſe that although hee rebelled againſt David, yet this his fault was expiated by his death, when Joab ſlew him, after his returning to David, I ſubſcribe to that of Kimbi as moſt probable.

Junius.

Hieron. de tradit: Hebr.
R. Kimbi.

V. 27. And when David was come to Mahanaim, Sobi, the ſonne of Nahaſh of Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and Barzillai the Gileadite, and Machir of Lodebar brought beds and other proviſion, &c. This Sobi is thought to have beene conſtituted King of the Ammonites in the roome of his brother Hanun, by David, after that hee had ſubdued him. His father had beene kind to David whilſt he lived, in the time of his exile by Saul, and now his ſonne ſheweth him kindneſſe likewiſe in his great diſtreſſe. R. Kimbi thinketh, that this Sobi was an Iſraelite of the foreſaid Rabbah. R. Solomon, that hee was Hanun himſelfe, whom David ſubdued, called alſo Sobi, who turned to the true Religion, and dwelt now in Iſrael. But the firſt is beſt and followed by Jerom, and moſt generally. Machir of Lodebar was hee, with whom Mephiboſheth had been brought up, and Barzillai was the chiefe man of his Citie. Theſe men by a ſingular providence are ſtirred up to furniſh David and his men with all neceſſaries after their weary travaile, which could not but bee a great comfort unto him. But by the things bought unto him wee may ſee in what great want hee was of all things, not onely food, but houſhold ſtuffe and beds; Thus ſoone may even a great and glorious King bee brought to extreame povertie, and to bee glad of reliefe by the almes and charitie of loving friends, ſuch as theſe ſhewed themſelves indeed to bee, and herein was David a type of Chriſt, who being Lord of all, had not whereupon to reſt his head.

2 Sam. 12.

2 Sam 9.4.

Note.

CHAP. XVIII.

V. 1. D*Avid* hearing of Abſaloms comming towards him with a great Army ſtayeth not in Mahanaim to expect his approach thither, but muſtered his men, and placing Captaines over them ſent them forth to encounter with Abſalom. For it agreed not with his courage and the courage of the men that were with him, to ſhut up themſelves in a Citie and to bee beſieged by the inſolent enemy, and hereby they might have been much diſheartened. Wherefore dividing his Army into three parts, hee ſet Abiſhai over one, Joab over another, and Ittai the Gittite over the third. And although the number of men that were now for David bee not here ſet downe, yet becauſe Verſ. 4. it is ſaid, that they went forth by thouſands and by hundreths, it appeareth, that hee was greatly increaſed in his number, ſince his comming to Mahanaim, the men of thoſe two Tribes and an halfe beyond the river, flocking to him from all parts, as being more faithfull to their King then the Tribes which dwelt neare about him. Joſephus ſaith, they were 4000. Comeſtor 7000. but happily they were many more, according to others, for where the Scripture is ſilent, nothing can certainly bee determined. It ſeemeth, that they were a ſufficient Army, becauſe David ſpake to the Captaines as nothing doubtfull of the victory, to entreat Abſolom kindly for his ſake. Yea Toſtatus ſaith, that hee knew he ſhould have the victory, becauſe Achitophels counſell was brought to nought already, as hee had prayed, and therefore hee gathered certainly, that Gods fa-

Ioſephus.
Scholaſt. hiſt.

Toſtatus.

your

vour was now againe towards him, and that hee had accepted of his humiliation and patience towards railing Shimei, and would doe him good therefore.

V. 2. To this warre David offered alſo to goe himſelfe in perſon, although hee was now aged, becauſe hee would not ſeeme to expoſe his men to danger, and feare comming into it himſelfe, as cowardly and voluptuous Emperours have done, as Nero, Commodus and Galienus, and David himſelfe formerly. V. 3. But his men would not ſuffer him to goe. 1. Becauſe the enemies would ayme altogether at his deſtruction, who if hee ſhould periſh, their cauſe muſt fall, and they all ſhould bee undone, whereas if many of them were deſtroyed, the King being ſafe, there might yet bee hope. Therefore they adde, 2. that hee abiding in the Citie might bee a defence unto them, that is, both becauſe if they ſhould flee at this time, they might returne unto him, and the Army being repaired ſet upon the enemy againe with better ſucceſſe afterwards; and alſo becauſe when the enemies ſhould ſee, that hee was not amongſt them, they would have no heart to fight ſo earneſtly againſt them, and they would ſtill feare that David would bee ready to come forth with a freſh Army upon them, when they ſhould bee weary with fighting, for they would verily thinke, that the King was not left behind alone, but with a ſtrong guard of men about him. And Theodoret, and after him Martyr addeth, that they feared, if David were in the battell hee would bee too favourable towards his ſonne Abſalom to their great diſadvantage.

Theodoret.
Peter Martyr.

V. 5. David meekely ſubmitteth himſelfe to the will of his men, but as they went forth hee ſtood in the gate, and willed them to intreat Abſalom kindly, that is, as the vulg. Latine hath it, to ſave him alive, leſt, as Lyra ſaith, if hee ſhould die in battell againſt his father, hee ſhould die in a mortall ſinne unrepented of, and ſo bee damned everlaſtingly, and as Pellican, becauſe David conſidered his ſonne ſtirred up by the judgement of God againſt him for his ſinnes, wherefore hee was the rather ſollicitous for the good of his ſoule, to have him reſerved to bee judicially proceeded againſt, that thus, time being given him, hee might bee brought to repentance. Thus alſo Ben.Gerſon, but Martyr, that hee was carried with a naturall affection towards him, which wrought ſo, that he was unwilling to have him ſlaine, although his attempts againſt him were intolerable. It was out of his great love and lenitie even towards his enemies, as Shimei, Abner and Saul, which generally is commendable in private perſons, but if hee would have him ſpared, and not put him to death at all, it was a ſinne in him being King and Judge. Joſephus layeth a greater aſperſion upon David, in that hee ſaith, that hee threatned, if they ſlew Abſalom, to lay violent hands upon himſelf: wherein he did doubtleſſe greatly wrong him, becauſe if it had beene ſo, it ſhould not have beene paſſed over in ſilence in the holy Scripture, and it is improbable, that ſo holy a King ſhould have ſo wicked a thought. For as Auguſtine ſaith, if I ſhould kill my ſelfe, I ſhould not kill one innocent, becauſe this very purpoſe maketh mee guilty in mind, before that I kill my body.

Lyra.
Pellican.
Peter Martyr.
Joſephus.

Auguſt. lib. 3. de Doct. Chriſt. c. 11. ideo, ſi vinceretur eum occidi prohibuerit, ut edomito ſervaretur pænitendi locus. Et quia non potuit, non orbitatem in ejus interitu doluit, ſed quia noverit in quas pænas tam impie adultera, & parricidialis anima raperetur.

Aug. lib. 1. contr. Gaudent. c. 13. Cum me occido non innocentem occido, quia ipſa voluntate, qua me occidere ſtatuo reus efficior animo priuſquam corpus occidero.

Then the battell was made in the wood of Ephraim, and Iſrael was ſmitten by Davids men unto 20000, &c. Both the Armies being beyond Jordan, and the Tribe of Ephraim ſituated in the Land of Canaan, it may bee doubted, how any wood here could bee called the wood of Ephraim. Lyra ſaith, it was ſo called, becauſe it was over againſt the Tribe of Ephraim, the River onely running betweene, but in the topography of Adrichomius it is placed right over againſt Iſſachar. Vatablus, that the Ephraimites did bring over their Cattell hither to paſture. Cajetan taketh the word Ephraim appellatively for increaſe. Toſtatus, that it was called the wood of Ephraim, becauſe Oreb and Zeeb were ſlaine there by Gideon, the glory of which victory hee aſcribed to the Ephraimites

Lyra.
Vatablus.
Cajetan.
Toſtatus.

Pellican. Peter Martyr. Judg. 11. Iunius.

mites to pacifie them. Pellican agreeth with Vatablus and Lyra, ſaying, that it was indeed in the Tribe of Gad. Peter Martyr, that it had the name from Ephraim, becauſe there they fighting againſt Iephtah were ſlaine unto 40000. ſo likewiſe Junius, who placeth it in Manaſſeh, and this is more probable, then that of Toſtatus, or any other, unleſſe Adrichomius erred, and it was an wood over againſt Ephraim.

V. 8. Chald. Paraph. Pellican. Note.

And the wood devoured more that day then the Sword, that is, ſay Junius and Martyr, by their falling into pits and ditches which were there, and by running againſt the trees, ſo likewiſe Lyra, who ſaith, that there were many great pits, the Chald. by wild beaſts, which kept in that wood; but this is not ſo probable, becauſe beaſts, although moſt fierce, would not ſet upon men armed in troupes as they were. It is to bee held then, that they fleeing away in haſt fell ſome into pits, being thus bruiſed and maimed, and not able to get out againe, and ſome into thickets of trees and buſhes, whereby they were torne, and held ſo faſt, as that they ſtrove in vaine, till their ſtrength failed them to goe away, as Abſalom was hanged in a tree, and could not get looſe againe, thus alſo Pellican. And that there were great pits there appeareth, becauſe Abſalom was caſt into a pit and a great heape of ſtones brought and laid upon him, Verſ. 17. Thus all things wrought againſt them, that rebelled againſt their King to deſtroy them, that all other ſubjects hearing might feare to doe the like.

V. 9. Lyra. Pellican Peter Martyr. Note. Theodoret. Chryſoſt. Note.

And Abſalom met the ſervants of David, riding upon a Mule, and his head was caught in the thick boughs of a great Oake, &c. that is, being in the wood where hee knew not when hee went towards his enemies, and when hee fled from them, when hee thought that hee had fled from them, hee unawares came upon them, and here ſeeking to eſcape them through an unbeaten way, whilſt hee haſtned, hee was caught in this Oake by the haire of his head, which ſuperabounded, as was before noted, and he was not a little proud of it, and therefore it was now juſtly made the meanes of his deſtruction, that at once hee might pay for his pride, murther of his brother, and treaſon againſt his father, as Pellican in part, and in part Lyra, who ſaith, that hee might haſten his flight the more, hee had put off his head peece, and ſo was caught by his haire. Martyr proſecuting this further ſaith, that hee had taken great pride in his haire, now hee was hanged by the haire of the head, that whereby a man ſinneth, by it hee ſhall bee puniſhed; hee was curſed for his wickedneſſe, and therefore hee had his reward accordingly by being hanged upon a tree; as hee ſought to deſtroy the Lords anointed, upon whoſe head was the holy oyle, ſo his head now was apprehended; and laſtly as hee ambitiouſly ſought to bee on high, hee was lifted up betweene heaven and earth. Joſephus alſo ſaith, that hee was hanged by the haire of his head, but Theodoret and Chryſoſt. ſpeake of his hanging in the Oake, as if his head were caught betweene the boughs cloſing ſo about his neck, as that hee could not get out, neither doth the Scripture make any mention of his haire in this place. A marvailous thing, ſaith Chryſoſt. that hee did neither hold his Mule from going under this tree, and when hee was intangled, that hee was ſo ſtupified, as that hee took his hands from the reine, to helpe his head out, thus ſuffering the beaſt in the meane ſeaſon to goe from under him. Thus God infatuateth them that are hatefull to him for their ſinnes, that they may come to their deſerved deſtruction. A wicked rebell, whom his father through his indulgence would have ſpared, although hee had ſo greatly wronged him, and was the author of ſinne and death to ſo many of his ſubjects, yet the vengeance of God would not ſuffer him to live. V. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. Then Joab was certified of it by a young man, whom hee blamed for not killing him, and hee went himſelf and thruſt him through the heart with three darts, and ten men that bare his armour compaſſed him about and ſlew him. The man that told Joab, feared to kill Abſalom becauſe of the charge given by the King to the contrary, but Joab ſeeing that Abſalom was incorrigible, having twice before reconciled him to his father, had rather incurre the Kings diſpleaſure, then to ſuffer ſuch a peſt of the Commonwealth to live any longer. For there needed no judiciall proceeding againſt him, hee was in armes

againſt

Pellican. againſt the King, his crime was manifeſt before all Iſrael, many thouſands were by him brought to deſtruction, and God had now apprehended him, and offered him to bee ſlaine. Wherefore he as a true lover of the Commonwealth haſtned to doe execution upon him to prevent further bloodſhed in Iſrael, and thruſt him into the breaſt with three darts becauſe hee had deceived him, the King and the Sanedrim, the 200. Elders of Jeruſalem that went with him to Hebron, and then ten ſervants beat him, untill all the life which remained in him quite departed, becauſe hee had defiled the ten Concubines of David, thus Pellican. Peter Martyr. But Martyr and others cenſure Joab as ſinning grievouſly in this doing, becauſe hee was a ſubject, and ſo was bound to obey his King, and not to take upon him a Judge to doe this execution. Neither will it excuſe him, that hee feared there would bee more civill warres if hee were ſpared: for neither muſt evill bee done that good may come of it, and by taking him captive and bringing him to his father, the further feared warre might have beene prevented. Moreover, hee knew not what the Kings end was to have him ſpared, happily, as hath been ſaid, that his judgement being reſpited, hee might bee brought to repentance. T. Manlius Torquatus having commanded his ſonne not to fight, but onely to goe forth, to eſpy, becauſe hee did not onely ſo, but fought, contrary to his command, cut off his head. And David dying took order, that execution ſhould be done by Salomon upon Joab for this, as Toſtatus thinketh, although it bee not mentioned, it being implyed in theſe words, thou knoweſt what Joab, ſonne of Zerviah did to mee. Toſtatus. 1 King. 2.5. V. 16. Abſalom being thus ſlaine, Joab ſounded a retreat, that no more blood might bee ſhed, and Abſaloms body was caſt into a great pit there, and covered with a great heape of ſtones, and thus it is noted in Tradit. Hebr. and by Lyra to have been done according to the Law, Deut. 2. 18. V. 17. Joab would have him thus caſt out and overwhelmed with ſtones, as unworthy of a buriall, and that his father might not bee grieved with the ſight of his dead body.

V. 18. Peter Martyr. But Abſalom had ſet him up a pillar in his life time in the Kings dale, &c. The vulg. Latine, for (pillar) hath title, and it was called Abſaloms hand. Whereupon the Hebrews feigne that hee being taken downe from the Oake craved reſpite before hee died, that hee might make him a title for a remembrance, becauſe hee had no ſonne worthy to reigne after him, and this being granted, hee made the figure of his hand in this title. But to leave this, as a fooliſh fiction and contrary to the ſacred hiſtory, ſeeing hee was pierced to the heart, whilſt hee hung in the Oake, the Hebrew word indeed whereby that is called which Abſalom ſet up is מעבת a title or ſtatua, a pillar with an Image upon it, hee alſo gave it the name of יד-אבשלום the hand of Abſalom properly, and metaphorically the place of Abſalom, or as Martyr, the worke of Abſalom; who alſo ſaith, that Joſephus affirmeth it to have been a Pillar, others, a Pyramis of great coſt, ſuch as the Egyptian Kings built to continue their remembrance. Pellican. Note. This Abſalom had built in his life time, not now at his death, but here mention is made of it, that wee might note, how God croſſed him in his pride, when hee out of the haughtineſſe of his mind thought happily within this building to bee buried, and to leave a glorious remembrance behind him, he was through the juſt judgement of God laid in a baſe deſolate place, as a dead beaſt caſt out of the way, and another monument of a moſt rebellious ſonne, a great heape of ſtones laid upon him, that who ſo ſhould afterwards come by that way and ſee it, might have him in deteſtation, and all proud perſons and diſobedient perſons, learne by his example, to what confuſion they are tending, thus alſo Pellican. Whereas Abſalom is ſaid here to have had no ſonne, but Chap. 14. 27. hee had three ſonnes, this is there reſolved, they all died, after his returne from Geſhur. God would not have him to live in his children, who had ſo wicked an heart towards his father. The Kings dale, where Abſalom had ſet up his Pillar, was according to Joſephus, two furlongs from Jeruſalem, a place where the Kings uſed to recreate themſelves, and to ſee paſtimes, therefore publike, and ſuch, as wherein Abſalom thought that his monument ſhould bee continually in view.

Then

V.19. 20,21, Then Abimaax, the ſonne of Zadok deſired of Joab, that hee might run and tell the King of the victory obtained, but he would not ſuffer him at the firſt, becauſe the Kings ſonne was dead, but ſent Cuſhi, &c. Joab would not have Abimaaz, a good man, and one whom hee greatly loved, the meſſenger of ſuch newes, as might bee diſpleaſing to the King, but when hee had any thing onely pleaſing to tell, hee ſaid, that hee ſhould carry the newes: yet hee urged him to let him run, becauſe hee thought it could not but bee welcome newes to David to heare of the debellation of his enemies, and the victory by his men obtained: but Ioab, who was better acquainted with the Kings diſpoſition, and remembring the charge given to ſave A*bſalom*, knew, that it would be a great grief unto him to heare of his death. He therefore ſent Cuſhi, who was not Cuſhi the Archite, Toſtatus. ſpoken of Chap. 15. although Toſtatus thinketh ſo, for he was with A*bſalom*, and if not, as hee thinketh, but fled from him in the way to D*avids* part, yet hee was too great a man to bee imployed in this ſervice. This Cuſhi was then another man of an inferiour ranke, but one of D*avids* ſervants, a Blackamore Iunius. as Junius rendreth it, yet in Religion a Proſelyte, whoſe acceptance before the King Ioab did not ſo much regard. But hee glad of the imployment poſteth away, nothing doubtfull but that hee ſhould have thankes from the King for ſo good tidings. Then A*bimaaz* was inſtant with Joab againe, and ran, and did outrun Cuſhi; but in his newes hee diſſembled A*bſaloms* death, leſt the King ſhould bee offended, leaving that to bee told by Cuſhi. Then hee commeth and telleth it, but not plainely, onely hee ſpake ſo, as that D*avid* eaſily underſtood that hee was dead, whereupon hee was ſo ſtricken with griefe, that hee went apart and mourned, never asking how hee came to his end, whether being ſlaine amongſt others or willingly by any man, or as Saul deſperately killing himſelfe. If it ſhall ſeeme ſtrange that hee ſhould bee thus greatly grieved, when hee heard that A*bſalom* was dead, but hearing before of the death Auguſt.l.3. de Doct. Chriſt. of the child begotten in adultery, hee ceaſed mourning. Auguſt. anſwereth, it was becauſe hee knew that A*bſalom* periſhed eternally both in ſoule and body, but when the Infant died there was no ſuſpition of eternall damnation. And for this cauſe hee ſaith in another place, A*bſalom* afflicted D*avid* more dying, then living and riſing againſt him, becauſe then there was hope of repentance and remiſſion, but now all hope was paſt. And it grieved him the more, ſaith Peter Martyr. Martyr, becauſe hee conſidered his owne ſinnes as the cauſe of all this miſery. V. 33. In lamenting A*bſaloms* death, hee named him divers times, the Hebrewes note eight times, by ſeven of them bringing him out of the priſon of hell, and by the eighth rayſing him up to paradiſe, but this is one of their putid fables. In lamenting hee wiſhed that hee had dyed for him, but whether this bee juſtifyable or not, is a queſtion; it may bee ſaid, that hee being in the ſtate of grace beleeved, that God would receive him dying into his heavenly kingdome, and if A*bſalom* had lived ſtill, hee might have repented and beene received to mercy alſo, wherefore this wiſh of his was pious, as that of Paul, to bee Anathema for his kinſmen, the Jewes, and by the like piety hee was afterwards moved, 2 Sam. 24. when hee deſired rather, that Gods hand might bee againſt him then againſt the people periſhing by the Plague. But it is objected, that if pietie moved him, it would have moved him alſo to lament the 20000. people, that periſhed with A*bſalom* in the ſame rebellion. Sol. His ſonne was deareſt to him, and therefore his death affected him moſt, and although no mention bee made of the reſt; yet it is not unlikely, but that he grieved for them alſo. Ob. When Nabal died in ſinne, and it was told to D*avid*, hee grieved not for the loſſe of his ſoule, but rejoyced and gave God thankes for avenging him of his enemy. Sol. Hee was a ſtranger to him, and therefore there was not the like reaſon, neither did hee ſo certainly periſh everlaſtingly. Ob. If D*avid* had had his wiſh and A*bſalom* had lived and hee had been ſlaine, the caſe of the Commonwealth had been miſerable, and of all D*avids* faithfulleſt friends and ſervants, therefore it was an ill wiſh. Sol. The periſhing of one ſoule is more then the miſery of a Commonwealth, and D*avid* in wiſhing that A*bſalom* had lived and hee had died, meant, to repentance and amendment. Thus Peter

Martyr, who yet doth not excuſe him finally from all blame, becauſe his ſorrow was exceſſive and intempeſtive now to the indangering of all his people, who it might be feared, would hereupon have forſaken him and ſet up a new Captaine over them. But if the eternall perdition of Abſalom was the thing, that ſo much affected David, I ſee not, but that hee may well be juſtified, becauſe in the caſe of Gods glory diſparaged, or mens ſoules indangered, true piety and zeale knoweth no meaſure in grieving, and hath no eyes to looke at any thing elſe for that time.

The Myſtery. Myſtically by Ab*ſalom* riding upon a Mule, wee may underſtand the Phariſees inſiſting upon the carnall ſenſe of the law, perſecuting and ſtirring up the people againſt their owne Meſſiah, but they loſt both their kingdome and lives, being ignominiouſly expoſed and covered with an heape of ſtones by hardneſſe of heart. David mourning ſo much for A*bſalom* figured out Chriſt weeping for Jeruſalem, foreſeeing their miſeries to come.

The Morall. Lyra. Morally David ſetteth forth a vertuous man fighting againſt ſinne, his army being divided into three parts, the firſt conſiſting of interiour meditations, the ſecond, of acts of charity, both corporall and ſpirituall, the third of modeſty in geſtures and ſpeeches; the King of vices is pride, as A*bſalom* ſo exceedingly proud, of theſe enemies againſt whom David fought. The Mule, upon which A*bſalom* did ride, is worldly glory, which paſſeth away, as the Mule, and pride is left hanging in Hell, as A*bſalom* in an Oake, where he is pierced with three arrowes or darts, the fire, the worme, and the loſſe of the ſight of God for ever, as A*bſalom* was pierced with three darts by J*oab*.

CHAP. XIX.

V. 1. THE mourning of David for his ſonne was told to J*oab*, as he returned joyfully with his army, and then all their joy was turned into mourning, happily J*oab* was certified hereof by the meſſengers, A*himaaz* and Cuſhi, and ſo the newes going amongſt the Souldiers, they all were as men confounded and afraid to come into the City where the King was, as ſuppoſing him to bee angry with them, although not for ſlaying A*bſalom*, yet for caſting ſtones ſo contemptuouſly upon him; wherefore they came into the City not as men
V. 3. that had gotten the victory with the voice of joy and triumph, but as men overcome, by ſtealth and in great ſilence. And indeed if there had beene no cauſe in the Kings ſorrow and offence, yet they ſhould have had little cauſe to triumph for this victory, wherein ſo many of their brethren periſhed: for even amongſt the Romans they never triumphed for any victory obtained in a civill warre. The Vulgar Latin hath it, the people declined that day to enter the City, even as a people fleeing before their enemies, Hebr: ſtole themſelves away in entring, and therefore it ſeemeth beſt rendred by the Vulgar Latin, they came not into the City by ſtealth, but ſhunned thus to doe, withdrawing themſelves through griefe and diſcontent to other places. And this is further confirmed by J*oabs* ſpeech to David, v: 7. Goe out and ſpeake comfortably to thy ſervants, for if thou doſt not, there will not one tarry with thee this night. Whereby it is intimated, that they came not in, but were going away: and alſo by that which followeth, v: 8. when he went out and ſate in the gate, they came before him, that is, in entring into the City. Thus alſo Toſtat. rendring the words thus, the people ſtole away, that they might not enter the City. They would not enter to mourn, when they rather expected joy in the King, they refrained from entering that day, becauſe they thought the King would be changed by the next morning and then they would come in.

V. 5. Then J*oab* went in to the King and very boldly upbraided him, for this his behaviour, whereby hee ſhewed ſo great diſcontent for A*bſaloms* death, with the whole Army, when as they by adventuring their lives for him, had deſerved better, charging him that one A*bſalom* was more to him then all his faithfulleſt ſervants, and requiring him to come out and ſpake comfortably to them, &c.

Joſephus· Joſephus addeth, 'that hee asked him if hee were not aſhamed to bee thus affected with ſorrow for a ſonne, that had beene of ſo hoſtile a minde againſt him, and bade him come forth and ſpeake kindly to the people, and give them thanks, threatning that if hee did not, he would deliver the army and kingdome to another. 'But this is more then in the holy Scripture. Hee dealt thus boldly, Firſt, being puft up with the preſent victory. Secondly, becauſe of that eſtimation that hee was in amongſt the people. Thirdly, becauſe of his neare alliance to David. Fourthly,' becauſe it was for Davids good that hee ſpake, and hee knew, that hee had beene alwayes faithfull to him, and by his great experience knew what was beſt to bee done. Sixthly, above all, becauſe hee had Toſt ſlaine Abſalom and ſo was the cauſe of all this trouble, wherefore hee would have the King come forth and by a cheerfull countenance ſhew, that hee accepted well of all that was done, becauſe that by doing contrarywiſe hee diſparaged him before the people, ſeeing they all knew, that it was Joabs act, which dejected the King with ſo much ſorrow. Thus the meek King ſuffered himſelfe to bee reproved and commanded by his ſubject, and hereupon made a ſhew in his face to the People of being well pleaſed, when the griefe of his heart was rather augmented then lenified by this ill uſage. But now it was no time to Note. caſtigate the petulancy of Joab, hee deferred that therefore, and referred it to his ſonne Solomon, that no Subject might be animated by Joabs example to ſuch audacity towards his Soveraigne in what extreamity ſoever.

V. 9, 10. The people of Iſrael, who had beene for Abſalom, ſeeing, that hee was now dead, conſult about bringing backe David to Jeruſalem againe, recounting his former benefits towards them. They were now aſhamed of following Abſalom, and of their infidelity towards David ſo well deſerving, and are angry with themſelves that they made no more haſte to go and ſubmit themſelves unto him againe. Thus all the other Tribes of Iſrael, and this being told unto David he ſent to Zadok and Abiathar to ſpeake to Judah, as v. 11. for more expreſſion of which, the Vulgar Latin addeth to the Text, and the counſell of all V. 11. Iſrael came to the King, and whereas v: 11. it is ſaid, ſeeing the ſpeech of all Iſrael is come to the King even to his houſe, the Vulgar Latin, but the ſpeech of all Iſrael came to the King to bring him backe to his houſe, becauſe the King had ſaid, Thus ye ſhall ſpeak to the people, &c. reſpecting more the plaine making of the ſenſe, then the rendring of the words verbatim. For ſo it is to be underſtood, when David heard of the conſultation of the men of Iſrael hee ſent to Zadok to ſpeake to Judah, and theſe words, yee are my brethren, my bones and my fleſh, v: 12. are the words which David willed Zadok to uſe unto them. Moreover becauſe Amaſa, Davids ſiſters ſon, was of greateſt power amongſt them, hee willeth him and Abiathar to deale with him in particular, who might well feare, that the King was irreconcileably offended with him, as being the chiefe againſt him. And hee ſought to draw him, 1. By the ſame argument which he uſed to the men of Judah, thou art of my fleſh, &c. for both they and he were neare unto him in the fleſh. 2. By ſwearing to make him Captaine in Joabs ſtead. And in thus ſeeking to his Subjects, who ſhould rather have ſought unto him, David was an example of wonderfull clemency, in that hee proſecuted not his victory againſt ſuch rebellious ſubjects to the deſtruction of many more of them, but as unwilling to have more bloud ſhed, reconciled himſelfe gently unto them. And herein hee was a true type of Chriſt, who ſeeketh to his rebellious Subjects in all places for reconciliation by his miniſters, 2 Cor: 5 20. But whether was it juſt in David to offer this dignity to Amaſa and to take it from Joab, ſeeing Joab had alwayes beene faithfull to him, but Amaſa rebellious? And Joab by adventuring himſelfe againſt the Jebuſites, 1 Chr: 11. 6. obtained this honour? Hee was indeed over bold in ſpeaking to David, and raſh to doe that, which hee forbade, in ſlaying Abſalom, but it was for Davids owne good. Some ſay, that David would have made Amaſa Captaine onely under Joab, as Lyra, and ſome, Joab being now old, that hee might reſt from the toyle of warres in favour to him. But the ſequel ſheweth the contrary, and it is improbable that Amaſa would bee drawne by the offer of an inferiour place being as neare to David in bloud as Joab. It is therefore rather to be held, that David had in his minde adjudged Joab to death for tranſgreſſing ſo manifeſtly againſt his command and charge, and after this comming in ſo malapertly unto him and vexing him more, when hee was mourning, and for his murthering of Abner long before, and being determined to cut him off, hee wiſely ſought to draw Amaſa unto him, who was of great power withall Iſrael, and offered to make him his chiefe Captaine, which being once effected, hee might the more eaſily doe execution upon Joab, which otherwiſe hee could not doe ſafely for the great power, that Joab was of, having all the army at his command. For be it that Joab merited and ſo by promiſe came to that dignity of Generall, yet tranſgreſſing ſo greatly, the King might juſtly deprive him of this dignity againe, and his life alſo. For the Magiſtrate beareth not the ſword in vaine, and every ſoule is ſubject to the higher powers to bee puniſhed for doing evill. Rom.13. If there were any errour then in David in this matter, it was in that he offered this dignity to a wicked man and a rebell, whereas hee ſhould rather have put a godly man into Joabs place. And through the juſt judgement of God Amaſa was prevented, being ſlaine by Joab, ſo as that hee never attained it, and Joab met with his deſerved puniſhment in Gods due time afterwards.

V.14. But Amaſa in the mean ſeaſon inclined all mens hearts to David, and they ſent him word accordingly, willing him to returne. But yet an higher hand, viz: of God, is herein to be looked at, who brought it about about, that Davids enemies thus ſoone became his friends and willing to ſubject themſelves againe unto him, Prov: 16.7.

V. 15. Then the King returned to Jordan, and the Tribe of Judah came to Gilgal to meet the King and to conduct him. This Gilgal was neare to Jordan, where Joſhua had in times paſt circumciſed the Children of Iſrael. Hither they came, ſaith Joſephus, but not ſtaying here they went to Jordan and made a bridge over it, for the King and his company to paſſe over, that is, ſaith Martyr, of boates, others as Lyra hath it, ſay, that they did ride on horſebacke before him to finde out where the waters were ſhalloweſt, I hold rather with Martyr, becauſe the King with his company was on foot. Joſephus. Peter Martyr. Lyra. To Gilgal the Tribe of Judah came firſt, as a place at which they agreed to meet from all parts, and ſo together to goe to the King. Now here is no mention made of the other Tribes, whereby it ſeemeth, that the King neglected them, although they ought rather to have beene firſt certified of the time of the Kings returne, becauſe they ſent firſt unto him, and the Tribe of Judah not till after that the King had ſollicited them by Zadok and Abiathar. Wherefore hee is blamed by Toſtatus, as over partiall to his owne Tribe, which gave occaſion to the contention following betweene the men of Iſrael and theſe of Judah, v:40.41. where yet it is ſaid, that halfe the men of Iſrael were with the King alſo, when hee paſſed over Jordan. Toſtatus. And hereupon followed the inſurrection of Sheba, chap: 20. which cauſed a new trouble.

V.16. Then Shimei came and 1000 men of Benjamin with him, together with the men of Judah, and Ziba with his 15 ſonnes, and 20 ſervants. The men of Judah comming through the Tribe of Benjamin, Shimei had a fit opportunity to goe with them and to offer his ſervice to the King, and therefore hee went in hope that the King would hereby be moved out of his lenity to pardon him. Whether theſe thouſand men of Benjamin were any way under him as their captaine, is not ſaid, but it may ſeeme probable, becauſe he was of the houſe of Saul, and ſo happily a great man in his tribe. And what did they to ſhew their officiouſneſſe to the King? It is ſaid, they paſſed over Iordan before him, that is, as ſome thinke, on horſbacke to finde out the ſafeſt way, and then the boate followed, which was prepared to carry over the King and his houſhold.

V. 18. Touching Zibah, hee came to ſhew his thankefulneſſe for the benefit lately received from the King, and he came with the Benjamites as belonging to that Tribe alſo. Then Shimei, who was the foreman and chiefe of this company, fell down before the King craving pardon of his former miſdemeanure towards him, and pleading that he came unto him the firſt of all the houſe of Ioſeph, touching whom Abiſhai againe ſpake, that hee might be put to death, but David ſware that he ſhould not dye, checking the ſonnes of Zerviah as he had done before ch: 16.10. In what ſenſe he ſpake of the houſe of Joſeph, ſeeing he was of Benjamin, ſee before upon Ch. 16.5. Peter Martyr. and it may further bee added according to Martyr, that Benjamin, and Ephraim, and Manaſſeh dwelt neare together, being thus made, as it were, one people, and Numb. 2. 18. 24. this Tribe in marching is reckoned under Ephraim, which was of Joſeph, and laſtly Joſeph had two Tribes, wherein hee excelled all others, wherefore the reſt of Iſrael were named by Ephraim, as their head afterward. And as Pellican further addeth, becauſe Joſeph and Benjamin came of one mother and had beene alwayes brought up together, it may be ſaid, that Ruben being put from his birthright, it was conferred upon Judah and Joſeph, and ſo all Iſrael were called by them two, one part by Judah and the other by Joſeph. Now Shimei his oration to David was very effectuall to move him to pardon him, when hee pleaded, that hee came to ſubmit himſelfe the firſt of all the houſe of Joſeph, as if hee had ſaid, I have given example to others in Iſrael to doe likewiſe, and if thou ſhalt pardon mee, they will be the forwarder to come in alſo, and ſubmit themſelves, but if otherwiſe, ſuch as bee not yet come, fearing thee to bee implacable, ſeeing all rebelled againſt thee, will keepe away, and thoſe that are comming, out of the ſame feare will bee ready to withdraw themſelves againe. V. 22. And in this reſpect it was that David ſaid to the ſonnes of Zerviah, yee are adverſaries to mee. As for Ziba it ſtood him in hand alſo to come, becauſe his fraud was likely to be diſcovered. Toſtatus. Touching theſe words v. 18. Shimei fell downe before the King as hee was come over Iordan: they are underſtood by Toſtatus and ſome others, as if it were meant, that after the Kings comming over hee did thus. But this doth not ſtand with reaſon, but rather this word hee is to bee referred to Shimei, hee paſſing over Iordan did thus humble himſelfe, and deferred not, till the King was come over, becauſe that had beene too much remiſneſſe in him, and v. 39. the Kings paſſing over with all his family followed after this and his communication had with Barzillai.

V. 23. For Davids ſwearing to Shimei, that hee ſhould not dye, it may ſeeme, that he kept not his oath, becauſe he tooke order afterwards ſo, as that Solomon put him to death. Here wee may not ſay with ſome, that hee meant onely, that hee ſhould not dye at that time, or with others, for his rebellion, but he meant not that he ſhould not dye for his curſing of the King; or with others, that he would not put him to death, not meaning yet, that no other judge afterwards ſhould. For any of theſe wayes hee had deluded him and taken the Lords name in vaine. For hee deſired pardon not onely for that time, but for ever, and not of his rebellion ſo much with others, as of his peculiar ſinne in curſed ſpeaking, and that hee might not bee committed to any other judge to bee put to death therefore, and David muſt bee underſtood to have ſworne according to his meaning. It is therefore to bee held, that he meant verily, that hee ſhould not dye for that offence onely, but he ſecured him not in reſpect of other lighter puniſhments, as impriſoning by Solomon in Ieruſalem, which was by confining him to that City, and if herein hee ſhould tranſgreſſe, for this hee might juſtly, notwithſtanding this oath, be put to death. Pellican. Hee meant, ſaith Pellican, that hee ſhould take heede, that hee did not afterwards tranſgreſſe againſt any edict of the King.

V. 24. Mephiboſheth alſo, the ſonne of Saul came to meete the King, &c. This hiſtory ſeemeth to bee miſplaced by an Hyſteron-proteron: for hee did not meete V. 25. the King, till his comming to Ieruſalem v. 25. where our tranſlation hath it, when he was come to Jeruſalem to meet the King, the Vulg: Lat: without any mention of Ieruſalem, when he had met the King; Junius, he met the King, when he returned to Ieruſalem; in the the Hebr. Ieruſalem is mentioned, but nothing affixed to ſignifie, to, wherefore it may beſt be rendred, when Ieruſalem went to meete the King, that is, all the inhabitants of the City, as it is likely they did at his approach unto it, Mephiboſheth comming amongſt them, becauſe hee was able to goe no further, for his lameneſſe, the King challenged him, as is here ſaid. That of Barzillai then was in time done before this, although it bee placed after, becauſe Ziba his going out, when Shimei went to meet David at Jordan was before ſpoken of, that the hiſtory concerning him might bee fully ſet forth before the relation of other things. For to this end Mephiboſheths comming and Davids dealing with them both, after that hee had heard him, muſt needes bee here ſet downe. Some following the Vulgar Latin, thinke, that forſomuch as his accuſer went to Jordan, hee might uſe meanes to goe thither alſo to meet the King, that there before his face hee might cleare himſelfe from his calumniations, but this is againſt the originall verity, where expreſſe mention is made of Jeruſalem. Touching the manner of Mephiboſheths comming, it is ſaid, that hee had not waſhed his feet, nor trimmed his beard, &c. ſince the King went away till his returne in peace. Here becauſe Hebr. it is, hee made not his feet, the Rabbines faigne, that his wooden legs are meant, wherewith hee uſed to goe, as Jerom hath it in Tradit: Hebr: but this is counted ridiculous by all men, for if by the word עשה to make, bee implyed the making of feet, the ſame word being uſed, when his beard is ſpoken of, that muſt alſo bee taken according to the ſound of the word, hee made not his beard, but if this bee abſurd, then wee muſt underſtand, that it is meant, hee did not to his feet or beard, as men commonly uſed to doe, hee waſhed not the one, nor kembed the other, or cut off the exorbitant haires, but continued a moſt ſorrowfull man for the exile of his great friend the King all the time of his abſence. And this is here inſerted, that his words following might the rather bee beleeved, and Ziba his falſe dealing with him bee the more manifeſtly diſcovered.

Sallianus.

V. 25.

Him being come forth of the City with the inhabitants thereof, the King firſt ſpeaketh unto, and challengeth for not going with him, hee excuſed himſelfe by his lameneſſe, and told the King how Zibah deceived him, when hee would have prepared to goe with him upon his Aſſe: all which Zibah hearing could not contradict, yet by his flattery hee ſo prevailed with the King, and by the preſent, which hee had brought him before, that inſtead of puniſhing him, as a moſt perfidious ſervant, as hee ought to have done, hee gave him halfe Mephiboſheths land. For which the Hebrewes ſay, that God afterwards puniſht him in his poſterity, by dividing part of the kingdome away to Jeroboam a ſervant, but this is plainely a fiction of their owne, and that a voice was heard from Heaven, Rehoboam and Jeroboam divide the kingdome. For that diviſion happened not for Davids ſinnes, but for the ſinnes of Solomon as is expreſly ſaid. In the Pandects, ſetting forth the Imperiall lawes, a ſervant may not bee heard againſt his Maſter, but onely in caſe that hee pleadeth for his liberty, or in things concerning the Common-wealth. But David both heard Ziba againſt his maſter, and was ſo ſwayed by him, that when hee knew his fraudulent dealing, hee yet to the injury of his maſter rewarded him. Wherefore hee is herein condemned by all men, as dealing moſt unjuſtly, ſo that even the holieſt of Gods ſervants have their errours and are not by us to bee followed in all things. It ſeemeth that David was ſo prepoſſeſſed by Ziba his tale, that hee would not beleeve Mephiboſheth, and therefore cutteth him off ſo ſhort, ſaying, ſpeake no more of this matter, that is, I cannot but thinke there was ſome fault in thee, but I will ſift it out no further, if I ſhould, happily it would bee worſe for thee, therefore take halfe the land, that I may bee ſhort, and bee thankfull, and let Ziba have the other halfe. Thus Martyr, who alſo ſaith, that ſome excuſe David, underſtanding him, as if hee had ſaid, ſpeake no more to mee, hee ſhall have halfe the land and I will otherwiſe provide for thee. But no ſuch thing is intimated in the text, but rather as hath beene ſaid before, that David ſpake to him in anger. Comeſtor thus, I gave it all firſt to thee, and then I gave all to Ziba, but yee cannot both have all, therefore I decree now, that yee divide.

Note.

Peter Martyr.

Toſtatus;
Dionyſius;

Toſtatus and Dionyſius note that David ſinned greatly, and that many wayes. 1. In raſhly giving away all his lands. 2. In that when he knew his innocency hee reſtored unto him but a moity againe. 3. In that he puniſhed not his falſe accuſer, but made his falſe accuſation gainefull to him, as merchandizing, to nouriſh boldneſſe in the wicked to doe the like. 4. In that he went not by the rule of any Laws, but meerly of his owne will.

V.30.32. The buſineſſe of Mephiboſheth and Ziba being thus related, the Hiſtoriographer returneth to the ſetting forth of other paſſages, and firſt touching Barzillai the Gileadite, who was one of the three men, who had brought proviſion to David, Chap. 17. 27,28. for his uſe and his peoples. The other two, it ſeemeth, were either ſick or dead, or otherwiſe hindred, that they could not accompany the King in his returne, and therefore are no more ſpoken of; ſome ſuſpect, that David neglected them, and onely affected Barzillai, becauſe afterwards alſo hee commended his poſteritie onely to Solomon, 1 King.2.7. and ſaid nothing of them, but hee might bee beneficent to them alſo, although it bee not related, ſeeing all things that paſſed, are not ſet downe; but Barzillai, although very aged, viz. 80 left not the King, till hee had brought him over Jordan, but then he craved leave of David to returne home, who offered to take him with him to Jeruſalem and there to requite his kindneſſe. This hee refuſed becauſe hee was ſo aged, that hee had not long to live, and his ſenſes now began to faile him, wherefore hee deſired leave to returne to his ownr, that he might quietly ſpend the reſt of his time there, and bee buried in the Sepulchers of his fathers, which would bee moſt contenting unto him. But hee commended Chimham his ſonne to the King to goe with him, and hee was accordingly accepted of. In thus ſeeking to requite Barzillai his kindneſſe in ſupplying his wants in the time of his neceſſitie, David was a type of Chriſt, ſaith Martyr, who will recompence any kindneſſe ſhewed to him in his members being poore and in want. Peter Martyr. And Barzillai may bee an example to aged perſons now eſpecially to mind their death and by ſequeſtring themſelves from the delights of the world, and ſerving God to prepare for it, and to provide for the good of their children. Plutarch relateth a ſtory of Craſſus, who going againſt the Parthians, met with King Dejotarus an old man, who was building of a new Citie, and asked him, why hee in the 12. houre of his age gave himſelfe to building, hee anſwering ſaid, And why doſt thou (O Emperour) not being very young goe againſt the Parthians to warre? thus taxing each other from ſeeking troubles to themſelves in their old age.

V.40. In the next place the Kings paſſing on to Gilgal is declared, and it is ſaid, that hee was conducted by all the men of Judah and halfe the men of Iſrael, who hearing of the Kings returne haſtned unto him, and as it ſeemeth, received him on this ſide Jordan, when hee was come over, and ſoone after, hee being come V.42. to Gilgal, all the reſt of the men of Iſrael came to him alſo, that is, all they, that in the name of all the other tribes were ſent out to doe this ſervice to the King. They ſeeing that the King was already brought almoſt home by the men of Judah, before that they could come to him, were greatly offended, that they ſtayed not for them, but ambitiouſly ſought all the honour to themſelves of reſtoring the King unto his kingdome, and therefore expoſtulated with the King, ſaying, why have our brethren, the men of Judah ſtolne thee away, &c. the men of Judah ſtayed not to heare the Kings anſwer, but anſwered themſelves, that they were nearer of kinne to the King, &c. Then the men of Iſrael replyed, that they had ten parts in David to their one, and therefore their advice ought to have beene had in bringing the King back, whereby they meant, that in caſe a King were to bee elected, they ſhould beare ten times as much ſway as Judah, being more then ſo many voyces to one. Comeſtor addeth, and wee are the firſt borne, wherein hee followeth the Septuagint, but this is not in the Hebrew, it is meant in reſpect of Reuben who was one of them.

V.43. And the words of the men of Judah were fiercer then the words of the men of Iſrael, what they ſaid more is not related, the Rabbins conjecture, that they told the men of Iſrael, that they lied, and that they came not in love to bring the King home againe: but Toſtatus more probably, and more ad appoſitum, that they had no part in David, for from hence it ſeemeth, that the Rebell Sheba replyed, Toſtatus.

wee have no part in David, Chap. 20. Lyra ſaith, that the men of Iſrael thought themſelves contemned and ſleighted, becauſe they were not called to helpe and conduct the King, eſpecially having dealt firſt about his reſtitution. And whereas they ſay, that they were greater by ten parts then Iudah, and that David belonged more to them, for ſo the vulg. Latine hath it, hee underſtandeth it in reſpect of ſuccour and helpe againſt his enemies, or any ſupport of which hee had more by farre from them, then from Iudah being but one Tribe. For their fiercer words he ſaith nothing, but onely that being of the Kings blood they were prouder, and ſo ſpake more diſdainfully, as ſcorning to bee thus challenged by them. Whereas the King ſaid nothing, ſome blame him, as Toſtatus for want of deſcretion; ſome thinke, that the contention was ſo great and tumultuous, that hee feared to interpoſe himſelfe; or refrained, becauſe hee leaned too much to his owne Tribe: and ſome, that he ſpake, but could not bee heard.

Lyra.

Peter Martyr.

CHAP. XX.

V. 1,2. Upon the contention before ſpoken of, the men of Iſrael being diſcontented ſeparated and withdrew themſelves from the King, leaving him to the men of Judah onely to bee conducted home. This one Shebah of the Tribe of Benjamin ſeeing and thinking it a fit opportunitie to bring back the Kingdome to that Tribe againe, blew a Trumpet, and as Ierom hath it, when all were ſilent at the hearing of it, he ſpake unto them, ſaying, What part have wee in David, &c. to your tents (O Iſrael:) upon which they all followed him. Hee is ſaid to bee a man of Belial, that is, wicked, and one that ſhak't off the yoake, and moſt probably was a Prince of the Tribe of Benjamin, and ſo a man of great authoritie, otherwiſe the people would not ſo readily have followed him. By his ſpeech which hee uſed to them hee meant, that they ſhould provide themſelves of another King, ſeeing they were ſo ſleighted by David. Martyr and others thinke this Sheba to have beene of the kindred of Saul, and that hee was never well affected to David, wherefore now having an opportunitie hee declareth himſelfe, happily thinking, that hee might bee made King over Iſrael, as Iſhboſheth had been. But the hand of God was alſo herein to puniſh David yet ſomewhat more with the troubles of ſedition, as hee had conſpired againſt Uriah, and it may be, that this came upon him for his unjuſt dealing with Mephiboſheth. But God who turneth evill into good to his faithfull ſervants permitted this alſo for Davids good. 1. That the ſeditious and falſehearted might bee rooted out of the Land. 2. That ſeeing the inſtabilitie of men hee might not truſt unto them, but to God onely. 3. That hee might aſcribe the reeſtabliſhing of him in his kingdome not to men but to God and give him all the praiſe.

Hieronym.

Peter Martyr.

V. 3. Then David comming to his houſe put thoſe ten Concubines, which hee left to keepe the houſe inward and fed them, but went not in unto them, and they continued in Widowhood to the day of their death; which is ſpoken, not becauſe their husband was dead, but as it were dead unto them, becauſe hee never went in to any of them after this. The reaſon why hee did thus unto them was becauſe Abſalom had defiled them by inceſt, neither is it ſaid, that they did ſtrive againſt that unlawfull attempt, but rather, as may bee conjectured, they conſented being drawne by his great beauty and preſent kingly dignitie. And if they committed this foule ſinne willingly, they were worthy to be put to death, but for ſo much as this was uncertaine, David would not uſe ſo great rigour, but onely puniſht them by impriſonment, and reſtraining them from the libertie of marriage, which other women divorced have. Theodoret ſaith, that David would not ſuffer them to marry to any other man, leſt it ſhould turne to an occaſion or pretext of aſpiring to the Kingdome, as was judged of Adonijah afterwards, when hee asked Abiſhag to wife, 1 King.3. And as Martyr ſaith, hee ſuffered them not to goe abroad, leſt by being ſeene the memory of Theodoret.

Peter Martyr.

of Abſaloms foule act ſhould bee renewed to his diſgrace. If it be demanded, what if they could not live ſingle, might they juſtly be debarred from marrying again? Martyr anſwereth, happily it was done by their conſent, becauſe they had once been unlawfully known by a man, they were willing henceforth to perſiſt in holy chaſtitie to the end of their lives, & being ſeparated from the company of men to ſerve God continually. Lyra. Lyra ſaith, that they were ſeparated à thoro, that is, from the bed, but not à vinculo, that is, the matrimoniall band, and this was done, as neceſſitie required, becauſe Davids ſon had lien with them, whereby they became, as it were, one fleſh with him, and conſequently his daughters-in-law, and by the Law of God a man may not go in to his daughter-in-law. And foraſmuch as they were a Kings wives, (as appeareth by this, that they are ſaid to live in widowhood) they were of two great dignitie for any ſubjects to marry them, although by a Bill of divorce the matrimoniall bands had been diſſolved. Pellican. Pellican ſaith, that hee ſhut them up that they might bewaile their foule ſinne paſt all the reſidue of their lives, for they ſhould rather have died, then yeelded to Abſalom in ſo great wickedneſſe, which was aggravated by the impudency in committing it ſo publikely.

V.4, 5. 6, 7. Then David commanded Amaſa to aſſemble all the men of Judah unto him within three dayes, and when hee ſtayed longer, David bade Abiſhai to goe with his Lords men after Sheba immediatly, ſaying, that otherwiſe the danger might bee greater, then that by Abſalom. Wherefore hee went forth with Joabs men, &c. Lyra. Lyra for the clearing of this place ſaith, that Davids whole Army conſiſted of three parts. 1. Of the men of Judah, who alwayes cleaved unto him, and over them Amaſa was Captaine, as there was a particular Captaine over the men of every other Tribe. 2. Of Davids ſervants, and ſuch ſtipendiary ſouldiers, as alwayes were kept about him, as a guard, and over theſe was Abiſhai. 3. Of other valiant men of all the other Tribes of Iſrael, who cleaved conſtantly to David from the very dayes of Saul, as is ſhewed, 1 Chron. 12. and over theſe as the greateſt Army was Joab. Amaſa therefore was imployed to gather the men of Judah, and Abiſhai, when hee deferred his comming, was appointed without delay to goe forth with the Kings men, Joab being in the meane ſeaſon buſied in gathering together his Army out of all the other Tribes to joyne with Abiſhai, as appeareth, Verſ. 8. where Amaſa is ſaid to have met with them, that is, Joab and Abiſhai, and Verſ. 7. Joabs men went out with him. Peter Martyr. Pellican Martyr and Pellican contrariwiſe ſay, that the King having promiſed Amaſa that he ſhould be Captaine in the room of Joab now began to put him into this office, meaning that Joab ſhould not bee any further imployed, and this Martyr conjectureth to bee the reaſon, why Amaſa ſtayed longer in gathering the men of Judah together then the time ſet him, becauſe they were affected to Ioab, and therefore would not willingly ſubmit themſelves to a new Captaine. And when Amaſa ſtayed, the King being yet unwilling to imploy Ioab, ſendeth out Abiſhai, but Ioab voluntarily with ſuch men as hee had went with him, and having ſlaine Amaſa reſumeth his chiefe captainſhip againe, not expecting to bee called unto it by the King. And this ſeemeth to agree beſt, ſeeing no mention is made of Ioabs going out to gather up men, and therefore that of Lyra is rejected both by Dionyſius and Toſtatus, as founded upon a falſe ground, viz. that Amaſa was made Captaine under Ioab. Joſephus. Ioſephus erroneouſly ſaith, that it was ſpoken to Joab, which is here ſaid to bee ſpoken to Abiſhai, that he ſhould goe out with the Kings men. But why the King feared more danger by Amaſa his delay and Sheba his rebellion, then by Abſalom, all agree, that it was becauſe hee began now to ſuſpect Amaſa, as not being true hearted towards him, and when Abſalom rebelled, they went with the ſonne againſt the father, many of them doubtleſſe unwillingly, but now being exaſperated, if they ſhould make his profeſſed enemy King over them, they would fight more deſperately and reſolutely againſt him.

V.8, 9. Abiſhai and his brother Ioab being gone as farre as the great ſtone in Gibeon to purſue Sheba, Amaſa came unto them, this was ſaith Ioſephus 60 furlongs from Ieruſalem, and here Ioab pretending to ſalute Amaſa in love ſlew him, with the right hand taking him by the beard, as if hee would kiſſe him, and in the meane ſeaſon taking up his ſword with his left hand, which when hee bowed himſelfe fell to the ground, that Amaſa perceived not, he ſmote him under the fifth rib, as hee before had done Abner, that hee preſently fell downe dead. This murther was committed by Ioab, that hee might not loſe his chiefe Captainſhip, to which David now began to advance Amaſa, but his pretence might bee, that hee had not dealt well with the King, in ſtaying longer, then he had appointed him, and becauſe hee tooke part before with Abſalom. For this indeed Amaſa was worthy to be cut off, and although the King intended him honour, yet the vengeance of God would not ſuffer him to live to enjoy it, yet Joab was worthy alſo for this to die as a murtherer, as hee did under Salomon. But in the meane ſeaſon hee went unpuniſhed and returned to his former dignitie, taking upon him the leading of the Army, as in times paſt, whereby hee was ſo ſtrengthned, as that David could not indeed doe execution upon him, as he deſerved.

Amaſa lying there dead, one of Joabs men was left to make Proclamation to V. 11.
the Forces, which followed him, ſaying, he that favoureth Ioab, and he that is for Da- vid, let him go after Joab. The vul. Latin too obſcurely, Ecce qui eſſe voluit pro Joab Joſephus.
comes David. Joſephus more fully; Joab leaving one by the dead carkaſs bade him proclaim to the Army, that Amaſa was worthily ſlain, but who ſo favoured Da- vids part ſhould follow Joab & Abiſhai, as their Captains. This was done, leſt the men brought by Amaſa, when they ſaw him dead, ſhould returne to the King to have further directions touching a new Captain. But they which follow the vul.
Latin give another different ſenſe, as if ſome of Ioabs followers had ſtayed by the dead man to mock at him, and to ſay, behold the man, that would bee in Joabs place, the chiefe Captaine and Davids companion, that would have Joab to bee in no reckoning in compariſon of himſelfe, ſee how hee Lyra.
hath payd for his ambition. But the Hebrew agreeth better to the former Pellican.
ſenſe, and therefore it is rather to bee followed. Verſ. 12. Thus the men of the Hugo Card.
Army were excited to follow Joab, and ſo it is likely, that the man left by Joab to ſpeake unto them went away with ſome of them, but when others, who were behind came at the dead corps, ſeeing it lie in the blood, they ſtood ſtill, V. 12.
till that another man perceiving it, who moſt probably was one of Joabs friends alſo, removed it out of the way into the field and there covered it with a garment, or cloth, and then all without ſtaying went on after Joab. Of his buriall, or any lamentation made by David for him wee read nothing, as for Abner, although it is not to bee doubted, but that hee was affected with ſorrow for him alſo being ſo neare of kinne unto him, but in that murther there might bee ſome ſuſpition of Davids integritie, which troubled him, in this none, becauſe no man could thinke that hee would give the leaſt conſent to one kinſ-man, and manifeſtly out of favour to ſlay another newly reconciled unto him, and preferred by him.

And hee went through all the tribes of Iſrael unto Abel and Bethmaachah, and all the V. 14.
Berites, &c. That is, as is generally underſtood, Sheba went through all theſe parts to gather up men, and was now in Abel in the Tribe of Nephtali, which lay fartheſt of all the Tribes from Judah, but Joſephus ſaith, that Joab purſued Ioſephus.
Sheba through all thoſe parts, till hee came at Abel Machea, making that one Citie, which by the Hebrew Text ſeemeth to bee two. Jerom thinketh rather, Hieron: in locis that they were two, in the one of which hee was, and part of his forces in the Hebr.
other. It is to bee thought, that Sheba going through all theſe parts Joab purſued after him by that way, which hee underſtood that hee had gone, till that being certified, that hee was in Abel, hee haſtened thither. And thus, hee went, is to bee underſtood, Sheba went and Joab after him. Junius rendreth it Abel, Junius.
viz. of Maachah ſpoken of, 1 Chron. 7.16. holding with Joſephus, that it was all one Citie, ſo called to diſtinguiſh it from other Abels, of which Jerom ſaith, there were three. And this ſeemeth to bee beſt, ſeeing no mention is made of any of his forces being in Bethmaachah, but in Abel onely, where Joab beſieged V. 15.
him, yea Verſ. 15. it is Abel of Bethmaachah. Beerith was a Citie belonging to Joſh. 18.25.
Benjamin,

Benjamin, Sheba his tribe amongſt whom Sheba had therefore gone to bee ſtrengthned by the inhabitants thereof called Beerites. Joab being come to Abel preſently ſeeketh to throw downe the walls thereof, but a wiſe woman called unto him out of the Citie, and perſwaded ſo with the Citizens, that Sheba his V. 16,17. head was cut off and throwne over the wall to Joab, who hereupon departed immediatly and came to the King to Jeruſalem. This wiſe woman, ſay the Hebrewes, was Sarah the daughter of Aſher, who came downe with Jacob into Egypt, and had the ſpirit of propheſie, whereby ſhee foretold Jacob, when he mourned for Joſeph, that hee was alive and he ſhould ſee him againe. But this is Lyra. confuted by Lyra, as a fiction, becauſe from that time till this was about 700.
years, to which age none lived in thoſe dayes. Wherefore hee ſaith, that ſhee is called a wiſe woman, not becauſe ſhe was a Propheteſſe, but for her naturall wit, as the woman of Tekoah was called before. When this woman had obtained
V. 18. audience of Joab, ſhee ſaid, it was a proverbe of old, They ſhall ſurely aske counſell in Abel, and ſo they ended the matter, with this preface ſhee began, that ſhee might winne attention, but what the ground of this ſaying was is uncertaine.
Peter Martyr. Martyr thinketh, that in ſaying thus ſhee had reſpect unto Deut. 20. where they are directed, when they made warre, firſt to offer conditions of peace, whereby is implyed, that Joab, before hee had attempted the overthrow of this Citie Abel, ſhould have asked, whether the Citizens would take part with Sheba againſt the King; or unto Deut. 13. where before the deſtruction of any Citie for Idolatry, inquiry was commanded to be made, whether ſuch a ſinne had indeed been committed or no, which hee ſaith, this woman might apply to the preſent caſe.
Lyra. For that of Deut. 20. ſtandeth Lyra, expounding the clauſe of this proeme, ſo the Ordinance and Law of God was fulfilled. Thus alſo Pellican and Junius, Pellican. and others: My Citizens expected in the beginning that thou ſhouldeſt according to the Law have asked by Legats or Heralds ſent unto them, whether they meant for Sheba his ſake to maintaine any warre againſt David, this if thou Theodoret. hadſt done, all might have been quietly ended. To this effect alſo Theodoret, Sallianus. but Sallianus becauſe the word proverbe is uſed in Jeroms tranſlation, will have it indeed a proverbe intimating the wiſedome and counſell, that was noted of old to be in Abel, for which cauſe Joab might be willing to hearken to one appointed by the Citizens to ſpeak unto him in the Cities behalf, although a woman.
For ſo he thinketh, that the counſell of the City ſent her up unto the wall to ſpeake thus unto him, as being a thing which a woman might more ſafely doe then a man; and a buſineſſe wherein ſhee might more eaſily prevaile being wiſe, and apter by reaſon of her ſex to get attention, as to a thing unuſuall.
For if, of her own head ſhee ſhould have made ſuch an offer, as ſhee did, of the head of Sheba, ſhee might have been in danger of reaping nothing but ſhame and deriſion, if ſhee could not have effected it; thus hee. But it is more probable, according to Martyr, that out of her love to her Countrey of her owne minde ſhee thus adventured both her ſelf and credit, becauſe v. 22. it is ſaid, ſhe went to the Citizens in her wiſdom, and by her wiſe perſwaſions they were moved to cut off Sheba his head. But for the ſaying touching counſell in Abel; I incline rather to think, that as the people of ſome place are notorious for folly, ſo they of ſome other place might be notable for wiſdome, and this might have been the caſe of the people of Abel a long time; and if ſo, it was a good ground for this woman to goe upon to perſwade Joab to hearken unto her, ſpeaking to him in the name of them all, becauſe they of this City were found by experience of old to be ſuch as could give good and wholeſome counſell.

V. 19. I am one of them that are peaceable and faithfull in Iſrael, thou ſeekeſt to deſtroy a City, and a mother in Iſrael, &c. This ſhee ſpake in the name of the City, according Lyra. to Lyra and others, for that City had alwayes hitherto been faithfull, and never rebellious againſt the King, wherefore ſhee chargeth Joab with injuſtice in going about to deſtroy it, which ſhee calleth a mother in Iſrael, becauſe an ancient and metropoliticall City, to which many more belonged. And in going about to deſtroy it, ſhee ſaith, hee went about to devour the Lords inheritance, becauſe it was a part of the land of Canaan, of which the Lord had taken

ken poſſeſſion by his people, as of his owne peculiar inheritance. Joab having heard the woman anſwereth, that it was farre from him to deſtroy, onely a V. 20.
man of mount Ephraim was riſen up againſt the King, if hee were delivered, the 21.
Citie ſhould preſently bee left in peace; then ſhee promiſed that his head ſhould 22.
be throwne over the wall unto him, and this being by her perſwaſion done, Joab departed and came to David to Ieruſalem. Sheba is ſaid before to have been a Benjamite, how then is hee ſaid here to bee of Mount Ephraim? Mount Ephraim was neare to Benjamin, as the boundary thereof, and ſo hee dwelling upon the foot of that hill might happily bee ſaid to bee of Mount Ephraim; or although hee were of one Tribe, hee might upon ſome occaſion dwell in another, and be called therefrom, as Elkanah was called an Ephratite, Obed-Edom a Gittite, and Uriah an Hittite: ſo Martyr. What words the wiſe woman uſed Peter Martyr.
to perſwade to the cutting off of his head, is not ſaid, but Ioſephus ſaith, that ſhe Ioſephus.
put them in mind of the great benefits, which they had received by David, by whoſe army their whole Citie was now indangered, wherefore ſhee perſwaded them not to hazzard themſelves any further, and all that they had for one man, a ſtranger. His head then was cut off and throwne over the wall, for they thought this the ſafeſt way, and not to open their gates for feare of the Souldiers violence, that might thus thruſt in upon them, and make a prey of their goods. So the traytour had his deſerved puniſhment to the terrour of all rebells, that ſhould hereafter attempt the like. As for Joab, hee having obtained Note.
this victory thus without bloodſhed returned joyfully to Jeruſalem, neither did the King once ſay any thing unto him for murthering Amaſa, or after this put him from his Captaineſhip, becauſe hee feared certainly ſo to do, leſt new troubles hereupon ſhould ariſe by Joabs meanes, hee bearing ſo great a ſway in that Commonwealth, as hee did. For to ſhew, that Joab was not put from his place it is added, Verſ. 23. And Joab was over all the hoaſt of Iſrael, Benajah over the Cherethites and Pelethites, &c. as Chap. 8.16,17. but onely for Seraiah the V. 23.
Scribe there, here is, Seva was Scribe, as Martyr thinketh, the ſame man by Peter Martyr.
another name, but hee might bee dead or removed by this time, as others conjecture and another in his place. Adorum was over the tribute, there was no ſuch office then, but now many nations being ſubdued by David and made tributaries, it was neceſſary. Laſtly for Davids ſonnes, Princes there, it is here ſaid, Ira the Iairite was a chiefe ruler about David, Hebr. כחולרבר Prieſt to David, and ſo the vulg. Latine rendreth it, but Chap. 8. Davids ſonnes are alſo called כהנים, which words, as I have there ſhewed, ſignifyeth not onely Prieſts, but Princes. Martyr conjectureth, that hee was his counſellour taken Peter Martyr.
into the roome of Achitophel, but I ſee no reaſon for that; rather, becauſe Davids ſonnes Amnon and Abſalom, who ruled under him before, were now dead, and hee would not adventure to commit any rule to Adonijah for feare of the like ambition, that had beene in Abſalom, he put this Ira into this Office. R. Solomon ſaith, that David made him a Prince and Judge in Iſrael. The Chal. Paraphraſe calleth him a Prince, Kimhi, the Prince of Davids councell, Chap. 23.
26. he is called Ira a Thecboite, here a Jairite Kimhi ſaith, that the Citie Thecbua, of which hee was, abounded with oyle, which giveth a ſhining light, and from hence hee had the name of a Jairite, for Jair ſignifyeth to ſhine. Some think that hee was the Kings Chaplaine, and ſome his Almoner, but I paſſe theſe over as conjectures without ground.

By Sheba myſtically underſtand the author of Hereſie, which draweth The Myſtery.
many from Chriſt figured out by David, the wiſe woman, by whoſe meanes Rabanus.
his head was cut off, ſets forth true doctrine, whereby hereſie being confuted, all returne to Chriſt againe.

CHAP. XXI.

And there was a famin in the dayes David of three yeares, then David enquired of V. 1.
the Lord & he anſwered, that it was for Saul and for all his bloudy houſe, becauſe he ſlew

Peter Martyr.
Pellican.
Lyra. Toſtatus.
P.Martyr. Pellican.

ſlew the Gibeonites. Whether this happened after Sheba his conſpiracy according to the order here followed is doubted, becauſe David was old, when hee fell into thoſe troubles, and lived not long after, and this famin continued three yeares. Some, ſaith Martyr, thinke that it began ſooner and that this was the laſt yeare of the three after Sheba ſubdued, but hee leaveth it, as uncertaine. I ſee no reaſon, but that it may bee thought to have happened in the order, wherein it is ſet downe: for although David were old, yet he was not ſo old, but that hee might live out theſe yeares after Sheba, and ſometime after them. Pellican therefore thinketh, that the famin of theſe three yeares together was ſent after three Rebellions, made by the Iſraelites againſt David: 1. under Iſhboſheth, 2. under Abſalom, 3. under Sheba, anſwerable to which were theſe three yeares puniſhments upon Iſrael. But this famin is ſaid to have beene ſent for Sauls ſinne in ſlaying the Gibeonites contrary to the oath made unto them. But why was it ſent in Davids time, who had offended nothing herein? Lyra and Toſtatus anſwer, that it was now ſent to puniſh Davids neglect, for hee being King ought to have relieved the Gibeonites being ſo oppreſſed, and to have puniſhed their oppreſſors, Sauls poſterity, this becauſe hee had not hitherto done, God ſent this famin to force him to doe it. This indeed may ſeeme to bee a reaſon, but conſidering that the Gibeonites never complained to David, and the law of God is, that the children ſhall not dye for the ſinne of their father, David could no way bee guilty in this reſpect, unleſſe that after anſwer received from God hee ſhould have neglected to right the Gibeonites wrongs. Others therefore anſwer better, that it ſeemed good to God now to ſend this famin, that hereupon occaſion might bee taken by his direction to roote out ſuch as remained of Sauls poſterity, that might any way hereafter diſturbe the peaceable raigne of Davids ſonne, that ſhould ſucceed him in the kingdome. The Lord had hitherto grievouſly puniſhed David for his ſinnes in the matter of Uriah, and therefore would not have him put to any further trouble, now here is ſhewed how hee tooke order for the preventing of like troubles afterwards in great mercy towards David, and juſtly in reſpect of the houſe of Saul.

Qu.

Note.

But how could he juſtly lay ſo ſoare a puniſhment upon all Iſrael, for the ſin of one Saul, and he being ſlaine long before for his offence, cut off his poſterity? eſpecially this being contrary to his owne law, and to his proteſtation Ezek: 18. Anſ: The people of Iſrael might make themſelves guilty by rejoicing at the cutting off of theſe ſtrangers, that their houſes and lands might come amongſt them, and eſpecially Sauls poſterity, who happily were much inriched hereby, ſeeing their City Gibeon was the City of Saul, otherwiſe called Gibeah, and if ſo, this judgement was brought juſtly upon them, and theſe children of Saul were juſtly cut off. And here wee ought to take notice, that wee may bee in danger of judgements for the ſinnes of others, if either wee bee well pleaſed therewith, or ſorrow not therefore, or ſtay not the courſe of ſinne in others as much as wee can. Moreover touching a mans children, God hath limited mortall judges by his law, as R: Solomon hath it, but not himſelfe, hee may juſtly puniſh the father in the children, though not guilty in that particular, becauſe all are ſinners before him, that the judgement againſt a wicked father may thus bee aggravated, and others ſeeing it the more terrified.

Qu.

But why did God puniſh for the Gibeonites and not for the Prieſts much more? Sol. Saul and his ſonnes for that maſſacre periſhed together in his laſt battle againſt the Philiſtims, and it is likely that the Iſraelites were all moved with compaſſion, when they heard thereof.

Qu.

But whereby was Saul moved to ſlay the Gibeonites? Anſw. Some thinke, becauſe they ſerved the Prieſts, whom hee ſlew, and tooke their deſtruction heinouſly; ſome, that hee might bee the more enriched by their lands and goods, and enrich his Tribe, wherein they dwelt. But the reaſon is expreſſed, for his zeale not to God, but to Judah and Iſrael, to whom hee thought it would bee well pleaſing to root theſe ſtrangers out of the land, the plaine zeale of Hypocrites to ſeeke praiſe amongſt men; and yet hee might alſo bee moved to this by covetouſneſſe and malice againſt all that any way appertained to the Prieſts, howſoever hee pretended zeale.

